New case brought in DeSantis' effort to obtain local bar

By Debra Baker
Lantern city reporter

A new case against the owners of Mean Mr. Mustards is the latest in efforts by Albert J. DeSantis to obtain ownership of the bar.

The case is one of two that DeSantis has brought against the bar owners in the last year-and-a-half.

The new case is a pending eviction action alleging that certain safety code regulations were not met, causing the defendants to violate their lease, said Craig A. Smith, attorney for owners Mark Gutentag, Brad Miller and the Wullum Corp., Inc.

Owner Mark Gutentag said the violations were corrected by Tuesday.

"The eviction notice came while we were working on the corrections," Gutentag said.

Gutentag also said none of the violations were life-threatening.

"They were things like running water in the urinals," he said.

The building at 1580 N. High St., in which Mean Mr. Mustards is located, is owned by Campus Properties Equity Fund IV Limited Partnership of which DeSantis, 46, 4040 W. Henderson Road, is part-owner.

The bar owners have a lease on the space of that building until 1996, but DeSantis wants the space now, Smith said.

The charges were filed Aug. 31, the day after a continuance was granted on an earlier case involving the same parties, Smith said.

"It is almost becoming a personal grudge match for DeSantis," he said. "Now that's just my personal opinion."

Grey W. Jones, attorney for DeSantis, declined comment.

"I don't want to try it now, I want to try it at the courthouse," Jones said.

The trial was scheduled in Judge Richard H. Ferrell's courtroom Sept. 20, but a counterclaim for $10,000 charging wrongful eviction was filed.

Because civil cases in Franklin County Municipal Court must be for less than $10,000, the case was transferred to the Court of Common Pleas. No trial date has been set.

An earlier case filed by DeSantis was scheduled to be tried on Aug. 30, but a continuance was granted to the defense because Gutentag's wife,

OSU students concerned about path of hurricane

By Tony W. Robinson
Lantern campus reporter

As South Carolina residents brace themselves for Hurricane Hugo, Ohio State students with relatives in the affected area are concerned about their families.

Jeff Rogers, an associate professor of geography, said Hugo will hit the east coast of the United States sometime this morning, but the exact location will not be known until just a few hours beforehand.

Kris M. Reddy, 20, a junior majoring in journalism from Charleston, S.C., said she has not heard from her parents since Sunday.

Reddy noted that phone lines into the area had been tied up and she was unable to contact her parents. She said they phoned a relative upon their departure from Charleston.

Reddy said her parents have evacuated to Columbia, about two hours inland, after taping windows, removing wall hangings and securing breakable items in their home.

According to Reddy's sister Lee-Anne, 21, a business management major also at Ohio State, this is the first hurricane the family has had to prepare for.

Despite her parents' evacuation inland, Lee-Anne said she still felt worried, particularly after reports on last night's news that the storm had increased in intensity throughout the day.

Lee-Anne said, "It seems like it's going to be pretty bad." She said the family home is only about half a mile from the beach on the Isle of Palms.

Hugo is expected to have wind speeds of 110 to 130 miles per hour.

George Joosten, resident manager of the Marriott Hotel in Charleston, said the hotel is still open, but preparations have been made for the storm's arrival.

"We're just prepared for all possible contingencies," Joosten said. He said, the major concerns were about windows shattering, flooding and fires

Campus cleanup crew recruits student groups

By Theresa Marvin
Lantern campus reporter

Nearly a year after junior Peter Eichler initiated a High Street cleanup program, a rekindling of the project is beginning.

Eichler, a communication major from Summit, N.J., began efforts in October last year to keep the campus area clean.

He said the problem with keeping Ohio State clean is due in part to students, merchants and the city blaming one another.

"I'm intervening and saying we need to stop pointing a finger and start solving the problem,"

Eichler said.

This year Eichler expects student participation to improve and is working with Brad Shimp, executive director of the University Community Business Association, to make the project a joint effort between the students and merchants.

Shimp said the association, which is responsible for High Street's capital improvements, has been asking merchants to donate $10 per month to fund a separate project called High Street Clean-Up.

This project pays hired employees to pick up

Northend Recycling to close to make improvements

By Muchun Yin

Northend Recycling Center will soon close its gates for several weeks so that improvements can be made, Rob Berger, director of the center, said.

The center, located on Preston Avenue, will close Oct. 19.

It will reopen four to five weeks later, depending on the weather, he said.

Improvements include gravel resurfacing, additional access gates and concrete pads for recycling containers.

The center needs these improvements so it can process more materials, said a Franklin County Office of Litter Prevention news release.

"When that site opened, we didn't anticipate the amount of business we're getting," Berger said.

About one-third to one-half of the center's material comes from the Ohio State campus, he said.

Glass from the OSU Chemistry Department and paper from OSU offices are among the items given to the center, Berger said.

"We get a good response from the campus," he said.

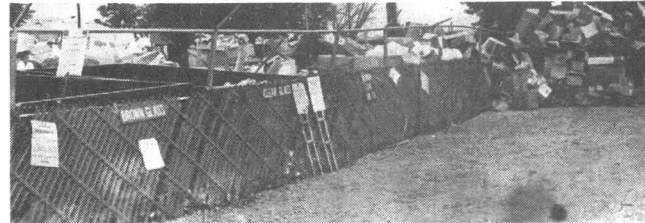

Between January and August of this year, Berger said, the center has processed:

- 230,000 pounds of newspapers, although the center stopped collecting newspapers Sept. 15.

- 120,000 pounds of glass.
- 30,000 pounds of corrugated cardboard.
- 1,000 pounds of soda-bottle and milk-jug plastic.

Northend Recycling Center is the only non-profit recycling depot in the county that has processing, said Irm Schubert, the director of the Franklin County Office of Litter Prevention.

Seven bands set to perform for pro-choice movement

By Jay Quilty
Lantern arts reporter

Various Columbus bands will take a stand on the abortion issue by performing a pro-choice benefit concert tonight.

The concert, called "Banding Together for Choice," will feature Local Color, the Campfire Girls, Sally Fingerett, Donna Mogavero, V-3, the Squids and the Evolution Control Committee.

The event will benefit the National Abortion Rights Action League of Ohio, an organization working for the continued legalization of abortion. The benefit will be held at Stache's, 2404 N. High St., starting at 8 p.m.

"All the people involved are donating their time," said Donna Mogavero, who will be master of ceremonies as well as performing with the Campfire Girls. "It's definitely an issue that is going to affect everybody."

Mogavero is not a member of the league but has always been a strong supporter of pro-choice.

"I played for a pro-choice march in May and I told National Abortion Rights Action League that if they ever needed me I would help," Mogavero said.

"Each of the groups will perform for about 40 minutes," she said. Mogavero is not worried about performing between some louder bands during the evening. "The volume will go down but the quality will go up."

Tom Clareson, a member of the league, helped organize the event. He said the organization had no trouble finding musicians willing to perform.

"We had more bands than needed, so we went for a mix of styles," said Clareson. "Donna, Sally and the Campfire Girls are more folk-oriented, and the rest are more rock-oriented. So we sort of cover the whole spectrum."

The league arranged the concert because the pro-choice people have not recently spoken out as resoundingly as the (anti-abortionists') side, Clareson said. "It's a cause that gets people to think and consider," Clareson said.

Despite the seriousness of the issue, Clareson said he does not intend for the concert to be a lot of talk.

"It's just the music. Donna Mogavero will talk some about the issue, and we will have a literature table set up," he said.

Janet Folger is the legislative director of Ohio Right to Life, a group seeking restrictions on abortions. Folger questions the content of the literature that will be handed out at the concert.

The fact that the information they are giving out is distorted is putting it mildly, said Folger. "It's a way to control the debate with inaccurate information."

NEWS BRIEFS

Leaders discuss summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush met with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze Thursday, opening three days of high-level talks likely to set a general time frame for a super-power summit and spur chemical and nuclear weapons cutbacks.

After nearly two hours of discussions, Shevardnadze said the two sides had not set a date for a summit between Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev but "we have concluded that a summit is necessary. There is no doubt about that."

The high-level meetings began with a White House session attended by Bush, Shevardnadze and Secretary of State James A. Baker III. The discussions will continue between Baker and Shevardnadze on Friday and Saturday at a wilderness lodge near Jackson Hole, Wyo.

Hurricane hits U.S.

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Hurricane Hugo advanced faster and with renewed fury Thursday on Georgia and South Carolina as a flood of coastal residents grabbed what they could carry and fled inland on jammed highways.

By late afternoon, Hugo was upgraded to category 4 on the Saffir-Simpson scale of hurricane strength, the second mightiest category, indicating it could cause extreme damage.

The coastal area could expect hurricane-force winds for 10 to 12 hours once the eye comes ashore, officials said.

The leading edge of Hugo was most likely to hit between Savannah, Ga., and Charleston any time after 8 p.m. EDT. A hurricane warning was in effect between Fernandina Beach, Fla., and Oregon Inlet, N.C.

At 6 p.m., Hugo was 180 miles south of Myrtle Beach, S.C., near latitude 31.2 degrees north and longitude 78.2 degrees west and moving northwest at 20 mph. It was expected to turn gradually to the north, the National Weather Service said.

Woman wins embryos

MARYVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A woman fighting for control of seven frozen embryos in an unprecedented divorce case was awarded temporary custody Thursday by a judge who ruled that life begins at conception and the woman should be allowed to carry them to term.

Blount County Circuit Judge W. Dale Young, ruling in favor of Mary Sue Davis over her estranged husband, Junior Lewis Davis, declared that their embryos were children not property.

"I'm thrilled. It's definitely what I wanted," Mrs. Davis told a news conference in Titusville, Fla., where she now lives.

Gioiosa out on bond

CINCINNATI (AP) — Convicted cocaine dealer Thomas Gioiosa, a former housemate of Pete Rose, was all smiles Thursday after a federal judge permitted his release from custody on a $20,000 bond.

"I thank God that I can leave," Gioiosa told reporters after leaving U.S. District Court.

He was released pending sentencing after his Sept. 12 conviction on drug and tax charges. A sentencing date has not been set.

Julie, a witness for the defense, gave birth Aug. 27 and could not be present at the trial, court documents state.

In that case, DeSantis charged that Gutentag and Miller breached a contract with him to sell Mean Mr. Mustards for $200,000, Franklin County Court records state. He is suing for $2 million plus damages.

In a counterclaim to that case, Gutentag, Miller and the Wullum Corp. charge that DeSantis forced them into signing the contract and caused economic duress and emotional distress, Smith said.

They are suing for $2 million plus damages, court documents state.

"Brad and Mark were obviously intimidated by DeSantis, and it is understandable," Smith said.

At the time there were no code violations, but DeSantis threatened to break their lease within five months if they didn't sign, Smith said.

Articles from the Lantern and the Columbus Dispatch may be admitted as defense exhibits, Smith said.

The articles from the Lantern show DeSantis as being a powerful businessman who tries to get what he wants one way or another. They also show his reputation for not being the best of landlords, he said.

"Basically that is our own feeling toward the case," Smith said. He doesn't know if the articles will be admissible in a court of law.

The trial has been scheduled for Nov. 21 in Judge Dana A. Deshler's court.

"I think it is going to go to trial based on the way settlements are going," Smith said.

"I'm not going to stand and preach," said Wyatt. "Music is common sense-oriented."

in the beachfront hotel.

Joosten said a huge steel structure built along side of the building for protection against just such a storm was a requirement in the hotel's construction.

Joosten said, "We've never been through a hurricane of this magnitude before." He said evacuation plans and a fire brigade are ready in the hotel along with 80 staff members who are staying over till morning to help as needed upon the hurricane's arrival.

Joosten said the hotel still had many scheduled arrivals, but the airport in Charleston has been closed so the hotel may become an emergency center if necessary.

Spokesperson's for both the Marriott and Hyatt hotels said their Hilton Head Island locations, several hundred miles south of Charleston, had been closed and evacuated.

Rogers said within six to seven hours after Hugo moves on land, it should weaken in intensity to a very severe thunderstorm.

Rogers said the hurricane draws its energy from the warm moist air available to it over the ocean. Once that supply is cut off, Rogers said, the storm will die down.

He said the majority of damage that hurricanes cause is the result of a surge of water under the center section of the storm. The surge is about about 10 to 15 feet above the surrounding ocean.

The area of land north of the eye of the storm should be hit the hardest, Rogers said. This is because the counter-clockwise spinning of the storm will pump a succession of high waves onto the land which will have the highest winds, he said.

South Carolina in particular has a great deal of low land and deforested agricultural area along the coastline, Rogers said. The result of the storm could be damage that spreads relatively far inland, he said.

"If it strikes anywhere near them, they'll be in big trouble," Rogers said.

litter. The problem with the project is not everyone is participating, Shimp said.

He thinks some of the businesses get discouraged when trash keeps piling up, and they eventually give up.

"Some feel their business stops at the door, and that's just bad business," Shimp said. "If the community looks bad, then the business looks bad."

One problem area Shimp cited is the area around 11th and High Streets.

"These businesses don't clean up and don't participate ... most of the garbage is in that area," he said.

Businesses such as McDonald's, Yogurt Oasis, and Ozz, which participate in the clean-up, are paying for other areas to be cleaned, Shimp said.

One business in this problem area is Apollo's, located at 1590 N. High St.

Louis Makkas, manager of Apollo's, said he cleans the front and back of his establishment every day, and would like to donate to the project.

"If all it takes is $10 a month, I'll do it," Makkas said.

Nick Petruzzella, manager of Zip's Services on 13th Avenue, said he does not currently donate, but plans to in the future.

Trash left in the alleys and streets washes into the drains and has caused a lot of water back up, Petruzzella said. This has led to flooding in Zip's basement.

"It looks terrible and it's hazardous," he said. "It's probably one of the reasons people from outside the area don't like to come here."

Meanwhile Shimp, Petruzzella and Makkas all agree that Eichler's cleanup efforts are great for the campus image.

"It's something that's important to him. I admire that," Shimp said.

"No one enjoys doing it, but it's certainly necessary," Eichler said. "It's important to our image in the community."

Eichler plans to resume his campus cleanup project in approximately three weeks. He will soon be sending letters to an estimated 120 student organizations to recruit volunteers.

"We want to make it a tradition," Eichler said. "People were really gung-ho about it and I want to keep that going."

School bus struck; 19 students killed

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALTON, Texas (AP) — A bus crowded with youngsters on their way to school Thursday plunged more than 40 feet into a water-filled pit after being struck by a delivery truck. Nineteen students were killed and 64 other people were sent to hospitals.

Dazed students scrambled out of the submerged bus and stood on it, screaming for help. Rescuers dove in 12 feet of water to pull out survivors and the dead trapped in the bus.

Passers-by pulled youngsters out of the bus, as notebooks and school papers floated on the water. Four boats, firefighters from six departments and about 10 divers helped in the rescue.

"I thought I was going to die," Alex De Leon, 18, said as he stood in front of Mission Hospital in muddy pants and hospital slippers, with cuts on his face and bruised hands. "It just filled up with water real quick."

"I opened up a window, took out my sister, took out a couple of friends and it was already full of water, and you could smell the diesel," he said.

"They were just trapped. We had to break the glass of the windows to get in," said Al Nye, a diver who pulled seven bodies from the bus.

The driver had picked up his last student en route to nearby Mission High School when the bus collided with a soft-drink truck about 7:40 a.m. at an intersection just east of Alton, just north of the U.S.-Mexico border.

Leon said the truck driver ran a stop sign and struck the bus, sending it careening off the road about 20 feet and into the gravel pit. The truck remained alongside the road.

Sgt. David Baker of the state Department of Public Safety said he believed the truck was traveling north and the bus west when they collided. Both drivers were being treated at hospitals. Their conditions were withheld.

Authorities used a crane to pull the 83-seat bus from the pit.

All the dead were 12 to 18 years old, said Mike Cox, a public safety spokesman in Austin. A temporary morgue was set up at a civic building in Mission.

Frantic parents rushed to the scene and swamped phone lines at the school and police station. One woman was carried away in an ambulance, hysterical after seeing the bodies of her two daughters pulled from the water, The Monitor in McAllen reported.

Another wept as she was told about the death of her child, the newspaper said. "How can she be dead? She had just gotten on the bus five minutes before," the woman said.

Students' families met with counselors and school officials at the city's community center. "It's very somber. The whole city's in shock right now," said fire Capt. Rene Lopez.

Mission school Superintendent Ralph Cantu canceled all extracurricular activities for the weekend "because we've had a tragedy. How can you be cheering at a football game when something like this has happened?"

A school bus which was hit from behind by a soft drink delivery truck Thursday is pulled from the quarry in which it landed in Alton, Texas. Nineteen students were killed and 64 injured in the accident. The truck was traveling north when it collided with the bus. Boats, firefighters and divers helped to search for and rescue victims.

Student aid office sees restructuring

By Trish Borne
Lantern campus reporter

While the high volume of students who need help from the financial aid department keep it busy year-round, the first weeks of fall are the worst, said Mary Haldane, director of student financial aid.

To help ease the strains of busy phone lines, slow assistance and unobtainable counselors, the financial aid department has been restructured.

The university's financial aid department consists of five divisions, which include counseling, loans, need analysis, scholarships and work-study, Haldane said. In the past, these divisions had separate offices and phone lines, she said.

With the restructuring, the individual offices, previously located on the fourth floor of Lincoln Tower, were moved into one office on the fifth floor.

In the past, students who came to the department for financial aid assistance complained of getting the run-around from the different offices, Haldane said.

"This new combination of the offices should alleviate a majority of the hassles students have experienced," she said.

The new structure gives students the convenience of obtaining the information they need without going from office to office, Haldane said.

One major change the department made this fall is with their phone systems.

Similar to the office setup, all of the divisions previously had their own phone lines, with only three operators taking incoming calls, said Haldane.

This would result in constant busy signals which made it impossible to get assistance, she said.

On Sept. 5, Ohio State's Unit Services piloted a new software program called Infolink in the financial aid department.

The program is designed as an on-line hold system, linking the individual departments into one line, Haldane said.

The new number is 292-0300.

Instead of callers receiving constant busy signals, the new program will take a person's call and give them a recorded voice message which tells them to hold on the line.

From there the voice will direct them to various pre-recorded messages on the system, which will answer questions concerning common problems, according to Haldane.

If the caller needs in-depth information or personal assistance the voice will tell them to remain on the line until an operator is free, said Haldane.

With additional funding the system has been able to increase the number of operators from three to six and has been able to provide data terminals for each operator, Haldane said.

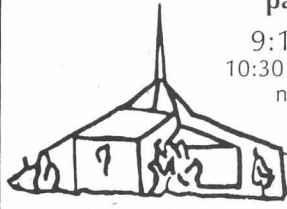

According to Brenda Stearns, associate director for student financial aid, there were 20,946 incoming calls to the system during the week of Sept. 11.

The number of hang-ups was 4,563, which means that 16,383 of the callers either used the pre-recorded messages or hung on to talk to an operator, she said.

The average hold time to talk with an operator last week was 10-15 minutes.

Drugs: We've had enough

Drugs — they're everywhere, but not just in neighborhoods, schools and inner cities.

Drugs are all over the newspapers and airwaves.

Drugs are on every talk show and in every magazine.

Drugs are spewing forth from our televisions.

Drugs are blaring from our radios.

Drugs are leaping from our newspaper pages.

We have been spoon-fed drugs whether we've gotten stoned or not.

And everyone and their brother has offered a program to fight The War. Some programs have even gone as far as to provide funding in The Fight.

Let us up; We've had enough.

It's easy for politicians to grind this issue into our heads because, at this time, Americans consider the drug problem to be our biggest worry.

But we don't have to be made sick of a worthy cause.

When all is said and very little is done, we will find another fashionable issue.

Drugs will go the way of South Africa, abortion, the flag and all the other trendy issues.

This isn't to say that the drug issue won't be back. It will.

Because, like abortion, the issue will come back until it is resolved.

But the big difference between drugs and other issues is that drugs, whether we realize it, affect everyone every day.

So it's time to stop calling press conferences looking for an easy way to get votes (every politician who says the drug problem is not a political issue is either naive or lying).

It is time to shut up and actually get to work and begin fighting the problem.

We can only hope that some workable solutions and programs are put into place before the American mind is forced to wander.

Because it will.

Bones: Bill returns remains

A small serving of justice is on the menu for Native Americans. It will arrive in the form of Bill 244.

After more than three centuries of suffering atrocities ranging from broken government policy promises to near genocide, Native Americans will no longer have to suffer desecration of their graves in the name of archaeological study.

In fact, Bill 244 will actually return the sacred remains to their rightful ancestors.

This is a definite first step in the right direction. But this is only the rightful beginning.

Perhaps America's number one shame is its treatment of its minorities.

From slavery until the 1860s to race riots in the 1920s, to detention camps for Japanese-Americans in the 1940s, and the civil unrest of the 1960s, at any given point in America's history the mistreatment of a chosen few has reared its ugly head.

And no minority has suffered greater than the original inhabitants of this land.

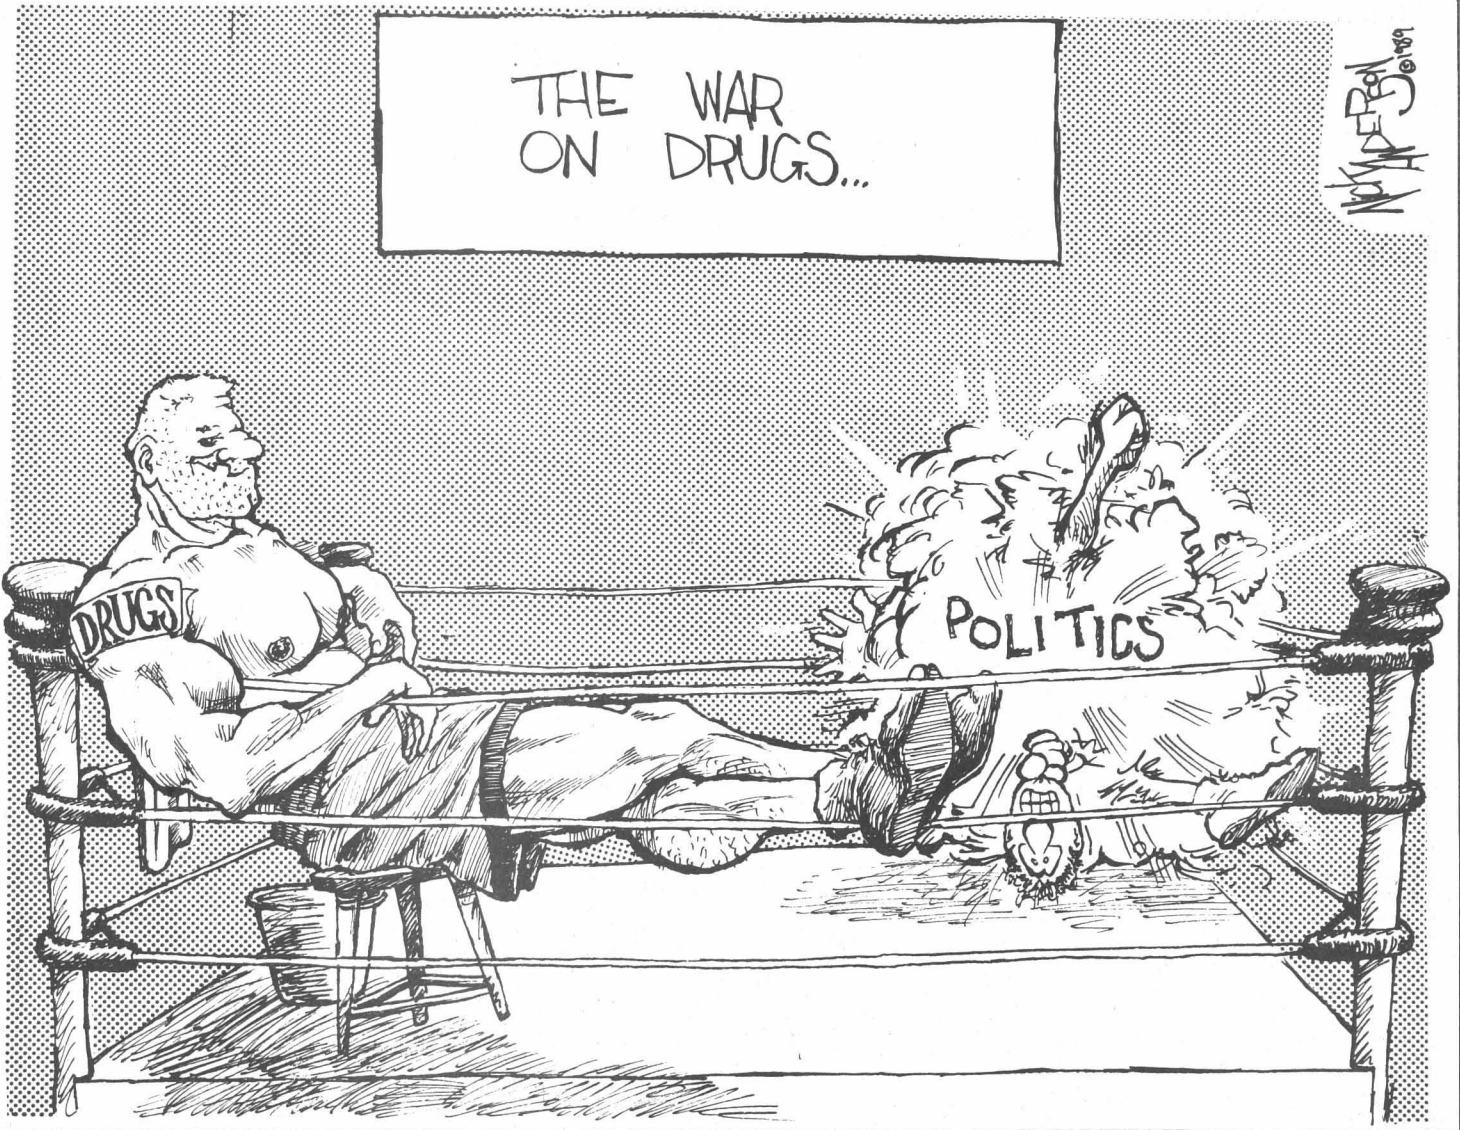

Some might say this aggressiveness made this country what it is today.

Bill 244 attempts to dispel thoughts such as this.

While the state and federal governments are being so big-hearted they might consider more moves of humanity toward Native Americans.

Consider the example of Manhattan. Perhaps we could return it to its ancestral owners for which we got it. It wouldn't be as big a problem as one might think. 363 years of interest on $24 would buy a lot of useless desert in the southwest United States.

In spite of the shortcomings that all countries the size of the United States are bound to have, it's government moves of good heart, like Bill 244, and not greedy profits at the expense of others that make us all feel a little better about ourselves and gives us a lot more pride in our country.

Drug legalization is only answer

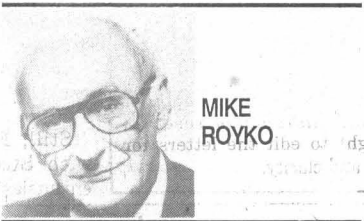

John is a white Chicago cop. He doesn't want his full name used because what he has to say might not please his superiors, although many probably agree with him.

"I'm a sergeant and I've worked on the West Side by choice most of my career. So I know something about the problem of drugs. I think I know more about it than some of the people who do a lot of talking about winning the drug war and make the laws and set our national policies, but have never been on the street where everything is happening.

"For years I've been advocating, mostly to my friends, the legalization of drugs and using the billions we'd save from trying to fight the import and sales to cure those who want to be cured.

"The way things go now, the courts will sentence drug offenders and people who steal to get drug money to rehabilitation as a condition of probation.

"But what happens when they want to go straight and can't get into a program for six months, which is very common? I'll tell you what. They go right back to their friends and habits. So instead of spending all those billions pretending you're doing something, some of the money could be used for rehab, some of it for ad campaigns not to use it, the way it's done with cigarettes and liquor.

MIKE ROYKO

"We'd still have laws against the sale to minors. You know, it pains me to see how rich drug laws have made punks and white collar opportunists. But once the profits aren't there, the punks and the others are out of business.

"ON THE West Side, kids used to complain that we stopped them because they were black and driving a new Cadillac. That was true. Most often the car was stolen and we had to chase them.

"But now that's changed. Now the cars belong to them and they've paid cash. And some of them aren't even old enough to drive.

"Those of us in law enforcement look like fools trying to fight a battle we can't win. And that just breeds contempt for law and order.

"You know, even if we were able to stop the coke from Colombia and Peru, it wouldn't change things. It would come in from somewhere else. And if we stopped that, it still wouldn't change because now they make this synthetic stuff right here. They're doing it already.

"The problem is the demand. And the only thing for sure is that where there is a demand, it will be satisfied. That's a basic market principle, and that's why all the arguments against legalizing and controlling drugs are nonsense.

"I'LL TELL you what the biggest change in the last four or five years has been. It's the drug dealers themselves.

"Now we have 13-year-old dealers who make more than me. They go out and sell, then they give some money to Mom, who maybe lives in the Chicago Housing Authority or some dump. She needs it to make ends meet.

"How can President Bush fault someone who lives in a drafty apartment and is wanting for food and has no chance for a decent education or a job for selling drugs?

"How are you going to convince the kids to get back to school so they can be a factory worker, or get a low-paying job in a fast-food place, or be unemployed, when they can sell drugs for big money?

"THEN THEY'RE going to have kids and they won't be able to steer them away from drugs or get them to go to school because they can't lead by example. If you're going to have values and morals, they have to come by example. And that's why we have all the casual violence out there, the disregard for life and death.

"The way we're going at this thing reminds me of Vietnam. A quagmire. Lives lost, then we pick up and leave.

"One of the reasons we study history is to learn from our own mistakes. Well, it looks like we didn't learn anything from Prohibition.

"I keep reading that every poll shows that most people are against any kind of legalization of drugs.

"You know what that tells me? It tells me that most of the people who get polled don't know what the hell is going on out here."

THAT'S ONE cop's opinion. But I suspect it is also the opinion of thousands of other cops in Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, and in most cities where the problems are the same.

Since they're the ones who are actually fighting this no-win war, I respect their opinions more than the word-warriors in Washington who have never been any closer to Chicago's West Side, or New York's Bronx, or Los Angeles' Watts than their TV sets can get them.

Senate bill for disabled overdue

I am not ashamed to say that at times I fear the disabled. I sometimes judge them on their appearance when it comes to handling a specific task. Whether the person is in a wheelchair, using crutches, or some other device which I am not dependent upon, I have difficulty distinguishing their capabilities from their incapacities.

Just two weeks ago, the U.S. Senate approved legislation that would prohibit discrimination against disabled Americans in employment, access to public accommodations, transportation and communication services. This category also includes victims of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, or AIDS.

THE BILL, if passed by the House and signed by the president, would prohibit employers, employment agencies and labor organizations from discriminating against any qualified person with a disability. It would also require employers to provide "reasonable accommodations" for the disabled in the workplace.

Reasonable accommodations could include features that allow access for the disabled, such as ramps, specially adapted restrooms, wide doorways and passages, and sidewalks designed to accommodate the disabled.

Private employers and public agencies might be required to install ramps and elevators, and to add items such as hearing devices on phone equip-

The reasons why I said this bill was approved just two weeks ago are, one, because this bill is a long time in coming; disabled Americans did not just appear on the scene yesterday. Two, for the longest time, individuals like me have, in some way or another, feared the disabled because of their specific handicap.

But before I proceed any further, let me state a few facts:

- Disabled, as defined by this bill, is a "physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of the major life activities of the individual."
- According to the poverty and wealth statistics branch of the U.S. Census, there are approximately, 13.4 million disabled Americans of working age, (16 to 64) to whom this bill is specifically targeted, but it is for the rights of all disabled Americans.
- According to the Ohio State Office of Disability services, in the 1988-89 school year, there were approximately 400 disabled students on campus. This figure includes the mobility, hearing and seeing impaired.

After reading about senate passage of this bill, I realized it would not only benefit the disabled, but it will also educate myself, and others as well.

And for some of its sponsors it hits close to home. Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who is the main sponsor, has a deaf brother and quadraplegic nephew; Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kansas, lost the use of his right arm in a World War II injury; and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., has a son who lost a leg to cancer, and has a sister who is retarded.

BUT THE ATTITUDES that I and some people have is probably borne out of ignorance. Afterall, tune in to the mass media and count the number of disabled people you see on a regular basis.

I can't remember any one disabled individual that sticks in my mind except for the "poster children" used to campaign for funds to support a cause. And thus, they are seen at certain times of the year.

So I can point a finger at the mass media and say, 'you're not doing your job when it comes to portraying a representative number of disabled Americans.'

However, that same finger can point back at me because I am one of many individuals who, at times, help breed these ideas.

Knowing people who are disabled, even here on campus, and having a chance at one point in my life to work closely with them, I have gradually been able to overcome the negative attitudes and the stereotypes people tend to associate with them.

THOUGH OHIO STATE and other places are somewhat accessible for the disabled, there's always room for improvement in the structure of the campus, as well as the attitudes of the students, staff and faculty.

With hearings on four committees this month, the bill is expected to pass the the House within a few weeks, and the requirements of this bill will take place within two years.

And to those concerned, this bill has enormous costs, more than likely into the millions. But I feel we owe it to disabled Americans in giving them the right to prove themselves despite their limitations.

This Senate bill will definitely change the various architectural structures in the world around us.

The question is, will it change the attitudes of many people who are unaware of the needs of the disabled?

Cults defamed

I am the person pictured in your Aug. 21 issue, in your article on cults. I am the one playing the drum.

Although you did quote some of the persons from some of the "cults" you were condemning, at the end of the article, the title, as well as the first third of the article, set such a non-intellectual and biased tone that a few quotes could hardly change the mood you had established. At first I thought your effort was not even worth a reply, since addressing genuine theological or philosophical issues with persons capable of producing such an article would certainly fall on deaf ears. Then I thought that in case you attempted another such penetrating expose in the future, it might be better if you had heard from the other side.

It seems the Cult Awareness Network (CAN) has some major influence on your campus and on your paper. I have been shown a book given to resident assistants at Ohio State preaching to them to warn their minions of the dangerous cults. Of course, this should be expected at a campus like Ohio State, but it is certainly undistinguished of you to cite such bigots as your main authority in the article.

So you should learn the art of making worthwhile articles. Ones that actually address an issue by citing reliable authority and pursuing it to some depth. For example, you could have interviewed even one of the many hundreds of students who have visited us. But then you may have feared that their report could have conflicted with the small-minded opinions of your mentors from CAN. In addition, the tiny bit of information we gave the girl from the Lantern who visited us was misquoted.

Anyway, you're not giving your reading audience much credit. However, if you are aiming your paper at persons who spend their extra time watching TV and getting intoxicated, and don't have the intelligence to investigate anything themselves, such an article is suitable, yet still not very much needed.

Hoping to see you rise to a bona fide level of college journalism.

Sir Real Review

I am appalled at R.D. Stansbury's review of "The Navigator." He apparently doesn't have the sophistication to appreciate a movie with a more complicated plot than something by Chuck Norris. I don't understand why you bother having a movie reviewer who cuts down a surrealistic film as being "unrealistic." Hasn't Mr. Stansbury ever heard of the term "fantasy?"

The reviewer made a lot of comments about the film which suggest he went into the theater with the attitude "Darn, I wish I didn't have to review this foreign movie. I'll bet there won't even be any car chases." Mr. Stansbury, let me explain some of the points you might have caught had you been paying attention:

1. The connection between modern Auckland and 14th century England is AIDS, the contemporary plague, which they happened to mention in the movie.
2. Everything was tied together in the end. Griffon had a vision that suggested Conner was going to die, but as the vision unfolded, Griffon realized that he himself was going to die. In reality, Conner caught the plague and survived, but Griffon caught it and died. See the parallel?
3. Yes, the bulk of the film was a dream or vision, but the beginning and end were "reality." Considering that the former was shot in color and the latter in black-and-white, I should have thought it would be obvious.

Finally, your comment about the lighting was way off base. The stark lighting in the black-and-white scenes greatly added to the feeling of what a harsh world the medieval characters lived in.

Many movie reviewers have a place in American newspapers, but I doubt if Mr. Stansbury even belongs in a movie theater.

Credit lost

I have lost credibility in the opinion of R.D. Stansbury, the Lantern's film reviewer. He summarizes the American film "Sex, lies, and videotape" as a film "hardly worth the price of the ticket." This is amazing, since the film won best film and best actor at the prestigious Cannes-Film Festival, in 1989. How can Mr. Stansbury fail to report this fact? His opinion ridicules the judgement of the international film community. Perhaps, when Mr. Stansbury does not understand a film, he should be humble enough to say so.

Bush and Foley 'Together'

WASHINGTON (AP) — It had the makings of a collector's item: a campaign-style button showing President Bush alongside the nation's top-ranking Democrat, House Speaker Tom Foley, bearing the inscription: "Together."

Ironically, it came at a time when Bush and the Democratic-controlled Congress are at odds on a variety of issues, including the environment, Bush's drug program, crime, taxes and education spending.

Actually, the button bearing side-by-side faces of Bush and Foley had nothing to do with politics, even though it made Bush and Foley look like running mates. It was a souvenir issued at a celebration on Tuesday in Spokane, Wash., Foley's hometown, to commemorate Washington state's 100th anniversary.

The button, given out to the several thousand who lined the banks of the Spokane River at the city's Riverfront Park on Tuesday to view the ceremony, proclaimed: "Together: Saluting Washington's Centennial."

Bush has been mixing tree-planting with politics on his trip out west to visit states celebrating their 100th anniversary.

Although Bush and Foley traded compliments — Foley saying Bush's visit was "a proud moment for the state of Washington" and Bush saluting the Democratic leader as "a man of integrity, decency, fair play" — there was underlying tension in the get-together.

Bush pushed for speedier congressional action on his proposed revision of the 1974 Clean Air Act. The environmental legislation is just one of many Bush initiatives now in congressional limbo.

So far, Bush has sent to Congress the bulk of his 1988 campaign agenda: proposals on child care, the environment, crime, drugs, ethics, adoption, aid to Poland and Hungary.

And yet, with only a week left before the start of the 1990 fiscal year, only a few of Bush's initiatives have been addressed by Congress.

Bush, as he has done on a budget blueprint and on the bill bailing out the savings and loan industry, has signaled his willingness to compromise with the Democratic leadership in Congress.

"I've been one who is chastised for too much compromise from time to time," Bush told a news conference in Helena, Mont., earlier this week.

Even on his drug strategy, Bush administration officials have made it clear that they're willing to deal on details of funding the war on drugs.

Thus, the Bush-Foley "Together" buttons may point to a period ahead of accommodation with Congress.

Still, Foley, who rode back to Washington with Bush on Air Force One, was less than enthusiastic about the prospects for cooperation.

NEWS ANALYSIS

"I think there'll be plenty of disagreements," Foley said. "This is a divided government, with Democratic leadership of the Congress and a Republican president. And I think we're going to cooperate on a great number of things, and we're also going to have our disagreements."

Michel discusses GOP House minority issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Minority Leader Robert Michel is cleaning out his desk and filing cabinets — but that doesn't mean he's giving up leadership of the apparently perpetual Republican minority.

"To the contrary, I hope to be creating even more documents," Michel said as he announced earlier this month he is turning over three decades worth of political papers, documents, pictures and memorabilia to the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Research Center at Pekin, Ill.

Michel used the occasion to talk about leadership in the House, about the congressional leaders he has known, and about the woes and challenges of leading the GOP minority as he has since 1980.

Republicans last held a House majority in 1954, two years before Michel first was elected to Congress from Illinois.

The minority leader opened with Dirksen, the Illinois Republican who served as Senate minority leader during the 1960s.

"There are those who say he wanted to be on the stage," Michel noted. "I think he was a better actor than the late Sir Laurence Olivier. Ev had flair. He had a sense of the dramatic, a feel for the shifting mood of an audience, an uncanny sense of timing."

"He had a carefully constructed political image, before the word 'image' became popular in politics. His hair, said to be combed each morning with an egg beater, was his trademark."

"He loved to put words together in a bill and votes together on the floor," said Michel.

As minority leader, Michel says he has come to believe that rivalry between Republicans and Democrats is not the most important division he has to face.

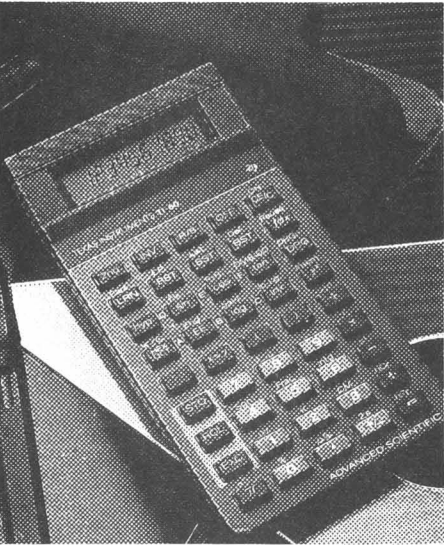

"More important at times are liberal-conservative differences, regional differences, differences among states, factions within parties, fights between communities over 'turf,' and, of course, the 435 different personalities, ambitions, dreams and character flaws."

"Each of these groups interacts with the others in a constantly shifting, volatile mixture of emotions and ambitions and ideals," Michel said and noted:

"A personal grudge, a secret ambition, a hidden motive, an unspoken agreement, can all mean more on a given issue than partisan differences. A House leader has to know these things."

Uncertainty surrounds OSU's next opponent

By Scott Campbell
Lantern staff writer

The jury is still out on the 12th-ranked University of Southern California football team as they prepare to host the Ohio State Buckeyes Saturday in the Los Angeles Coliseum.

The Trojans, ranked fourth nationally in preseason polls, were upset by the University of Illinois 14-13 in their home opener Sept. 2.

Last Saturday Southern Cal evened their record at 1-1 when they mauled Utah State 66-10. The Trojans racked up 654 yards in total offense including 491 yards on the ground (an average of 10 yards per carry).

So what is the verdict for the men of Troy?

"I think that's only an answer that we as a team can provide," USC Coach Larry Smith said. "I think that this week is going to be an opportunity to show what we really are because I think we've seen two extremes and now we're playing a very fine Ohio State team and it's an opportunity to prove something."

Southern Cal returns 18 starters (10 on defense, eight on offense) from last years 10-2 Rose Bowl team. Included in that group are three defensive All-Americans — tackle Tim Ryan, and safeties Cleveland Colter and Mark Carrier.

The Trojan offense is led by redshirt freshman quarterback Todd Marinovich who stepped into the starting QB spot when junior Pat O'Hara broke his leg in USC's last scrimmage of the preseason. Marinovich owns the national high school passing yardage record and was USA Today's Prep Offensive Player of the Year as a senior in 1987.

Smith, who is in his third year as Southern Cal's coach, hopes the victory over Utah State will serve as a springboard going into Saturday's game with the Buckeyes.

"It was a game I think we all needed," Smith said. "To get that first win under our belt. And then the fact that our team played pretty intense and pretty hard for the whole game."

Smith said he was impressed with the Buckeyes' 37-13 win over the Oklahoma State Cowboys last Saturday.

"Ohio State is a very, very fine Big Ten contender for the championship and started off very well in their first game against Oklahoma State," Smith said. "They have great balance on offense between the run and the pass. And a lot of big-play players on offense. On defense they keep coming at you in the typical rugged, physical Big Ten style of defense.

Buckeye Coach John Cooper was equally generous in his assessment of the Trojans.

"Last year they led the Pac-10 in three different defensive categories," Cooper said. "They led in rushing defense, scoring defense and total defense. In rushing defense they were second in the nation. They have great athletes."

Cooper said he remembers trying to recruit both Colter and Carrier when he was still coaching at Arizona State.

"Cleveland Colter is from Tempe, Arizona and was a great high school player," Cooper said. "We did a very poor job of recruiting him at Arizona State and now we have to play against him. Mark Carrier is the same way. A great, great free safety."

Cooper said the Trojan offense is a solid one

"They've got a stable full of running backs," he said. "(Tailback) Aaron Emanuel was certainly one of the most highly-recruited players four years ago. Leroy Holt is their fullback. A good football player. And their tight end, Scott Galbraith, is a good player."

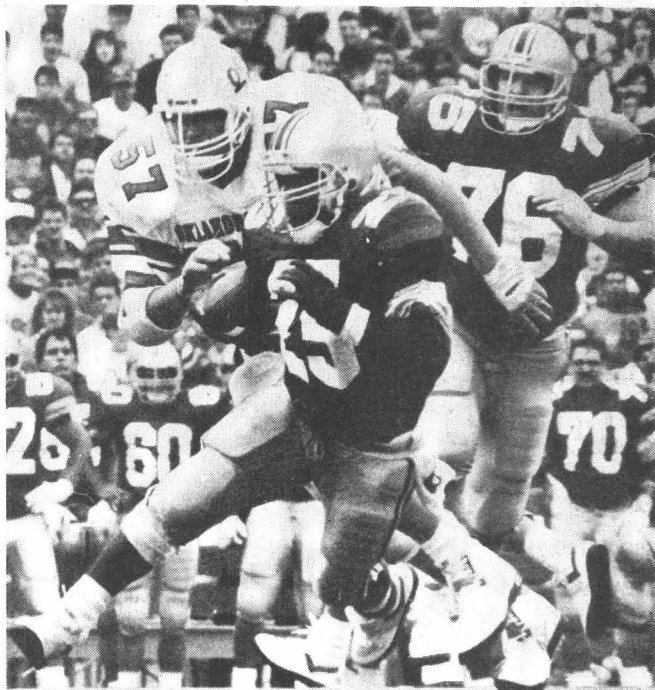

Cooper said he doubts his 25th-ranked Buckeyes, who are 10 point underdogs, will be able to sneak up on the Trojans.

"I think the fact that Illinois upset Southern Cal makes our job more difficult," he said. "You're not going to slip on Southern Cal now, I can tell you that. Not that we would have slipped up on them anyway. But the fact is they've been upset once already this season and I'm sure Larry (Smith) has got their attention now."

"They've had about three weeks to get ready for us. It will be a great, great challenge for our young football team to go out to the Coliseum and play USC. We're looking forward to it."

OSU receiver coach Gene Huey says he respects the Trojans' All-American defensive backfield but has no reservation about stacking up against them.

"I've never seen better athletes, particularly Carrier who supports so well on the run and can do well on the passes," Huey said. "But along with that we have some talented people and I think we'll certainly play well."

Richard Stelts/the Lantern

Ohio State's Carlos Snow (25) will be an important part of the Buckeyes' game plan at USC.

OHIO STATE AT USC

TIME, LOCATION: 3:30 p.m.
Saturday, Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

RECORDS AND RANKINGS:
Ohio State, 1-0, ranked 25th in AP Poll; USC, 1-1, ranked 12th.

LINE: USC by 9.

THE COACHES: Ohio State, John Cooper, second year at Ohio State (5-6-1), overall (87-46-3). USC, Larry Smith, third year at USC (19-7), overall (85-62-3).

SERIES RECORD: Series is tied at 9-9-1. USC has won the last three games, but by a combined five points.

TV-RADIO: The game will be broadcast live on WSYX-TV (Ch. 6) via the ABC Network and on WBNS Radio (1460 AM).

OHIO STATE STRENGTHS: The Buckeyes rolled up 437 yards total offense, 302 coming in the air. The passing game is led by junior QB Greg Frey (the nation's leader in passing efficiency after one game) and a corps of receivers.

OHIO STATE WEAKNESSES: Kickoff coverage was Ohio State's most glaring weakness last week, allowing the Cowboys returns of 70 and 47 yards. Injuries to RB Carlos Snow and his backup Jaymes Bryant, should they be aggravated, could bring the running game to a halt.

USC STRENGTHS: Where to begin? USC boasts one of the nation's top defensive units, led by three All-Americans (safeties Mark Carrier and Cleveland Colter and tackle Tim Ryan). The Trojans were second in the nation in rushing defense last year (76 yards per game) and have allowed just 59 yards rushing in their first two games this year. Offensively, USC is taking the heat off freshman QB Todd Marinovich by rushing for an average of 285 yards per game.

USC WEAKNESSES: Marino-vich has been thrown into the fire as a freshman due to injuries. He has responded, though, by completing 24 of 45 passes for 245 yards. If the running game falters, he will be asked to throw.

Griffith Joyner says she didn't buy drugs

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — Florence Griffith Joyner, accused by Darrell Robinson of buying growth hormones from him, on Thursday called the sprinter "a compulsive, crazy, lying, lunatic."

"I don't do drugs," Griffith Joyner said. "I never have taken any drugs. I don't believe in them. It's a false accusation."

Robinson detailed his dealings with the 1988 Olympic heroine and other track and field athletes and coaches, including Carl Lewis, in the West German magazine Stern. Robinson repeated the charges Thursday on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Griffith Joyner, accompanied by her husband Al Joyner, the 1984 Olympic triple jump champion, and business manager Gordon Baskin, flew from her California home to New York for the early morning show in hopes of meeting her accuser. Robinson failed to show up, but the two confronted each other via a hookup from his Toronto home, and the rhetoric was bitter.

"How can you have the nerve ... to tell a false lie?" Griffith Joyner said angrily.

"She says she didn't take them (drugs)," Robinson said. "It's my word against hers."

"You admitted taking drugs and why do you want to implicate other athletes?" Griffith Joyner said.

Robinson, who reportedly received at least $25,000 for the magazine story, published Thursday, and money for appearing on the TV show, insisted he was "not doing it just for the money."

"The money issue isn't an issue," he said. "I am sick and tired of hearing everyone saying they're clean."

Robinson, the 1986 national champion at 400 meters and the 1982 and 1985 runner-up, contended in the magazine story that Griffith Joyner asked him to get growth hormones for her last year, because "I have connections."

He said she paid him $2,000 in 20 $100 bills and the transaction took place in mid-March 1988 on Venice Boulevard in Los Angeles.

Robinson alleges that Griffith Joyner asked him to look into the cost of the hormones. He said that, when he told her it would cost "$2,000 for 10 cubic centimeters," she said, "That's crazy."

He quotes Griffith Joyner as saying, "If you want to make a million, you've got to invest a few thousand."

Robinson says that a few days later, Griffith Joyner gave him a "wad of 20 hundred-dollar bills."

"I never gave him a dime for anything," Griffith Joyner said. "Why meet him on Venice Boulevard? The only place I met him was on the track. I have never run into Darrell on the street."

"I don't know how he's going to back this up."

This was not the first time that drug accusations were made about Griffith Joyner, who rocketed into international fame in 1988 after being a world-class runner for years but never a star.

At last year's Seoul Olympics, where she won gold medals in the 100-and 200-meter dashes and the 400-meter relay, along with a silver in the 1,600-meter relay, the accuser was Brazilian Joaquim Cruz, the 1984 Olympic 800-meter champion.

Browns' coach gears up for Bengals

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bud Carson had a newcomer's curiosity this week about Ohio's professional football rivalry. A few minutes of film viewing satisfied it.

Carson, the first-year coach of the Cleveland Browns, dusted off some clips of the Browns' games last year against the Cincinnati Bengals. What he saw helped him understand why football fans at opposite ends of the state get worked up twice a year.

He saw hard hits. He saw gang tackling. He saw taunting.

He saw something special.

"I just looked at last year's film and I could tell both teams were playing an upbeat tempo," Carson said. "That's usually what happens when you're playing one of the biggest rivals on the schedule."

"I'm well aware this is a special game for the players, and it has been. They've both got good football teams."

Carson gets to see the rivalry first-hand Monday, when the Browns visit Riverfront Stadium for the first Monday night football game in Cincinnati in three years.

The Browns hold a 19-18 advantage in the AFC Central Division rivalry, which has heated up in the last few years with both teams contending for the playoffs. The Browns won the division three consecutive years before the Bengals edged them out last year and went on to the Super Bowl.

"It could very easily come down to who wins these games and by how much," Bengals coach Sam Wyche said. "This is a team that we very likely could be battling for a title at the end."

The Browns have won four of the last five games, but face a hostile environment Monday at Riverfront — nicknamed "The Jungle" last year, when the Bengals went 10-0 at home. They ran their home winning streak to 11 games with a 41-10 drubbing of Pittsburgh last Sunday, leaving them 1-1 overall.

"You really need to win at home because that's a tremendous edge in a game like this," Wyche said. "We'll get the edge this time, they'll get the edge next time."

The Browns have the edge in the standings.

Ickey Woods injured, may not return

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals fullback Ickey Woods could be out of action the rest of the season and face a challenging rehabilitation if his case is like those of several similarly injured teammates, the Bengals say.

In the short term, Woods' loss forces the Bengals to quickly reshuffle their offensive plans for Monday night's game against Cleveland. The team said it would place him on injured reserve, which automatically means he cannot return to play for at least six weeks.

But, team officials said the torn knee ligament Woods sustained from being tackled in Sunday's game against Pittsburgh could keep him out all season if it proves as bad as past injuries suffered by teammates Eric Kattus, Joe Walter and Kevin Walker.

A magnetic resonance scan examination performed Wednesday on Woods' left knee revealed evidence of a torn anterior cruciate ligament, said Mike Brown, Cincinnati's assistant general manager.

That is the same injury that sidelined Kattus, a tight end, and Walker, a linebacker, from early last season until 1989 training camp. Bengals offensive tackle Walter suffered the same injury last December and has not been cleared yet to return to practice. Walter hopes to return to game action in late October.

Woods will undergo surgery late this week or early next week, the Bengals said.

"We won't know the extent of the injury for sure until the surgery is performed, but the M-R scan is usually an accurate exam," Brown said.

"If the injury is what the examination evidenced, he will go through the same thing that Kevin Walker, Eric Kattus and Joe Walter have. He'll be out for the season and have a long rehabilitation road in front of him before next season," Brown said.

Backup running backs Stanford Jennings and Eric Ball, a rookie, will fill in for Woods. Brown said the Bengals are considering whether to obtain a proven runner from another team or simply promoting rookie Craig Taylor from Cincinnati's six-player developmental squad.

Ball, a UCLA star who was Cincinnati's top draft choice this year, may start Monday night against Cleveland, running backs coach Jim Anderson said.

Woods, who ran for 1,066 yards and 15 touchdowns in the 1988 regular season and added three touchdowns in the playoffs, said he is disappointed but determined to return. He was hurt when his leg bent as he was tackled Sunday by Pittsburgh safety Thomas Everett.

"It was a freak accident. But accidents happen, and you've got to live on," Woods said. "Whatever it takes to come back, that's what I'll have to do. I'll just try to get back as soon as I can."

Pacino's versatile acting drowns in 'Sea of Love'

Al Pacino is back after a four-year absence from acting.

He should have stayed off the screen longer and held out for a more desirable movie.

This time around he stars in "Sea of Love" as a good cop in a bad situation. This is a welcome change from his antagonistic roles in movies such as "Scarface" and "The Godfather." But "Sea of Love" doesn't have a quality script to compliment Pacino's versatile acting abilities.

Pacino plays detective Frank Keller, a 20-year veteran of the New York police force. He joins forces with another good-guy cop played by John Goodman, while investigating a series of murders.

The connection between the murder victims is that they all placed ads in the personal section of a popular New York magazine. The two cops place their own ad to try and catch the killer.

During the investigation, Keller becomes intimately involved with a prime suspect, Helen (Ellen Barkin).

Relying on a lack of evidence, Keller almost ignores the possibility that Helen may be the murderer, but for precaution, he conceals his true identity.

The characters become more tense and timid and seem to know odd things loom on the horizon.

FILM

R.D. STANSBURY

Unfortunately, it can be calculated what will happen for most of the film. But there are those occasional plot changes that can stun even the keenest viewer.

"Sea of Love" is thrilling near the end and not at all predictable. But this picture is not worth ranting over. Sure it has its good points, but it also has its bad points. Unfortunately for writer Richard Price, the bad outweighs the good.

The storyline is just another attempt by the film industry to play upon old and unimaginative scenarios and stereotypes.

Director Harold Becker handily merits a round of applause for making a blah film seem exciting and entertaining.

But the actors were not able to lend any valuable attributes to the motion picture.

Barkin was forced to rely on sexual suggestions and body language, but her role needed much more. The viewer needed real dialogue from Helen. It never came. There was no emotion or feeling from her character.

It was much the same for Goodman. He is known as Dan on the television program "Roseanne". However, he was unable to deliver that loveable person he portrays so well on the sitcom in a role that called for just that type of acting.

The most the viewer got was a singing session between Goodman and Pacino that was moderately funny and refreshing.

It's just that viewers deserve more than surface material from the characters, more than just making the story flow through its scenes. This film could not supply it all.

What about Pacino? The role of Detective Keller was a bad role. Pacino is a great actor. Blend the two together and audiences get a mediocre lead role.

Viewers get to know Keller, and Pacino makes you feel for him. He takes the audience into Keller's personal life and into his strange and scary professional life.

This simply is not enough. People should be tired of being subjected to the so-so. Producers should create something worthwhile that can bring the masses into the theater.

If the film industry can't do that, then it should put its "Sea of Love" type movies on videotape and maybe someone will rent them.

Stones' 'Evita' exhausts Streep

NEW YORK (AP) — The filming of "Evita" has been delayed indefinitely after an exhausted Meryl Streep dropped the project from her schedule, the film's director and producer said.

"I still very much want to see 'Evita' made," Director Oliver Stone, who directed "Platoon," said in a statement released Wednesday.

Streep withdrew because of exhaustion from her current schedule, producer Robert Stigwood said in the statement.

Calls to three different numbers for Streep's spokesman went unanswered Wednesday night. The Broadway musical "Evita" chronicled the life of Eva Peron, the second wife of Argentine strongman Juan Peron, who transformed herself from a minor actress of working class background to a folk heroine.

Pauley's future unsure at 'Today'

NEW YORK (AP) — Jane Pauley has discussed her future on the "Today" show with NBC executives, but the network won't comment on speculation she's unhappy with changes in the morning program.

"Conversations are taking place which we feel are appropriate, timely and private," NBC spokeswoman Peggy Hubble said Wednesday.

She said Pauley's talks with NBC News President Michael Gartner and NBC Sports President Dick Ebersol, who also is the news division's vice president for "Today," concerned her future with the program.

Pauley joined "Today" as a co-anchor in October 1976.

FDA investigates sleep aid

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says it is investigating an unusually high number of reports of unwanted side effects to the drug Halcion, the most widely prescribed sleep medication in the world.

An FDA advisory committee will review the drug at a meeting Friday to determine why the agency is receiving more reports of adverse reactions to Halcion than for other drugs in its class of hypnotics.

Halcion has been on the market since the beginning of 1983 and is The Upjohn Co.'s second largest sales item.

Spokeswomen for the company and the FDA said they did not know the nature of the reports about adverse reactions or the number of reports received. However, the FDA said that at the time the drug was approved it was aware of a variety of adverse effects reported in association with use of Halcion, including confusion, agitation, hallucinations, amnesia and bizarre behavior. All except bizarre behavior were included in label warnings, the FDA said.

Upjohn spokeswoman Florence Steinberg said the company will review epidemiological data at the meeting that "indicate that side effects with Halcion are not different in number or kind when compared with other medications in its class."

She said the higher number of reports of problems associated with the drug stem in part from "sensational allegations in the media about Halcion," including a case in which a Utah woman who was using the drug killed her mother. Murder charges against the woman were dismissed.

Steinberg said it was never established that Halcion caused the woman to act as she did and contends the woman was taking a number of medications at the time.

Analysts quoted in Wednesday editions of The Wall Street Journal said Upjohn has been seeing a slide in Halcion sales apparently because of reports of adverse reactions to the drug. The newspaper quoted analysts as estimating that Upjohn's worldwide sales of Halcion were expected to fall from about $260 million in 1988 to about $235 million this year.

Bills to protect Great Lakes

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sens. Carl Levin and Herbert Kohl proposed legislation Wednesday to curb oil and toxic chemical leaks in the Great Lakes, saying the world's largest inland freshwater system is getting dirtier and more vulnerable to a catastrophic spill.

"This is an economic and environmental disaster in the making," Kohl, D-Wis., said. "Our Great Lakes ... are slowly being poisoned and destroyed by human activities."

Meanwhile, an omnibus spending bill containing funds to beef up various Great Lakes programs was on the verge of enactment. No major opposition was expected, but Senate votes on it and other budget bills were delayed by partisan wrangling over funding of President Bush's anti-drug package.

The Levin-Kohl bill would boost the budget of Environmental Protection Agency's Great Lakes office from $16 million to $25 million. But its focus is on prodding what Levin and Kohl described as a lethargic federal bureaucracy to move ahead with programs already authorized.

"We have commitments ... but we have no deadlines, and so they're toothless and they're being ignored," Levin, D-Mich., said at a news conference. "I think there's been foot-dragging, a lack of focus ... and this is aimed at trying to restore some real strength" to cleanup efforts.

The bill has the support of Majority Leader George Mitchell and should pass with little trouble, Levin said.

Levin is chairman of the Senate

Subcommittee on Oversight of Government Management, which conducted several hearings on Great Lakes pollution. He said the hearings and an investigation by the subcommittee's staff showed the government — particularly the EPA — has shirked its duty to protect the lakes.

The bill would set a series of deadlines for pollution-control initiatives over the next four years, including completion of blueprints for cleaning 42 sites where toxic pollution is severe.

Other deadlines would be set for establishing water quality guidelines for the Great Lakes region, a promised lake management plan, sediment classification standards and demonstration projects for cleaning contaminated sediment, and an expanded network to compile and report data on air toxins.

Celeste questions plan

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is right to go after drug traffickers but hasn't offered enough help back home, where addicts are routinely turned away by treatment programs because of a lack of money, Gov. Richard Celeste told Congress Thursday.

"Why can't the president find more than nickels and dimes for truly diseased citizens and truly distressed communities?" Celeste asked the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

He suggested the federal government pay for 10 beds in treatment facilities for every new prison bed. He urged the lawmakers to put a special focus on minorities, women and young people because they seem to be the special targets of drug pushers.

"Drug traffickers have particularly targeted for the sales efforts ... women in the black community," Celeste said.

"I think there is a deliberate marketing strategy to erode the role of strength that women play in the black community," he said, citing reports from Ohio cities where crack cocaine has been promoted to pregnant women as a way to induce a miscarriage or ease the pain of delivery.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., told Celeste he's upset about the burdens placed on society by crack-addicted babies. Wilson said he favors a national policy giving top priority to "the rehabilitation of child-bearing women."

Celeste asked the senators to think about the impact of giving states $509 million for drug-fighting programs while taking away $604 million, including money for anti-poverty and juvenile justice programs.

"This strategy seems like unilateral disarmament of the states rather than a cooperative war on drugs," Celeste said.

Bush's proposal to increase drug education by $37 million works out to "about one dollar per pupil across the nation," he said. "That's like pledging one day's lunch money to this critical effort."

The committee's chairman, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said Thursday's hearing was intended to help lawmakers sort out approaches to the problem.

"One of our major questions must be: does the president's plan represent the right strategy? Has the right balance been struck among law enforcement, education and treatment?" Glenn said.

Florida Gov. Bob Martinez praised the president's formula and told the panel he felt it was important to reduce the flow of drugs by making sure they don't get into this country.

When the supply of drugs on the streets declines, local governments won't have to spend as much money looking for and locking up dealers and will have more money to spend in other areas, he said.

Martinez told the panel he supports "the use of military force, specifically the use of special forces-type personnel, in foreign nations that request military assistance."

"The world drug problems are severe and they call for strong measures," he said.

Undercover teens help cops nab clerks

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON Court House (AP) — Undercover teenage volunteers have helped local police bring charges against five people accused of selling alcohol to juveniles.

During the past weekend, police filed charges against eight sales clerks, and most of them entered guilty pleas in municipal court. They were fined between $150 and $300 each and received suspended jail sentences.

The latest sweep in an ongoing police scrutiny of alcohol sales to juveniles occurred Wednesday night and resulted in five arrests at as many businesses.

Sgt. Anthony Wilson said police recruited teen-age volunteers 16 to 19 years old who attempted liquor purchases while being observed by police.

"They see what's happening to their friends; they see them getting in trouble, and they want this situation cleaned up too," he said.

Wilson said there is no basis to reports that police altered the appearance of the teen-agers to make them look older.

"We have done absolutely nothing to alter their appearance. That is not true," he said.

Wilson said police have received numerous complaints about teen-agers buying alcohol in the city and frequently encounter alcohol-related juvenile crime. He said anyone selling or furnishing alcohol to minors should know that police expect to continue the campaign.

"We are going to continue this until we stop these places selling to minors. We are likely to be doing this any time of the day or night, weekdays or weekends," he said.

The sergeant also warned adults who might be asked to buy alcohol for juveniles or serve them alcohol, even in a private home.

"Anyone who sells, furnishes or otherwise makes alcohol available to juveniles is subject to arrest," he said.

Woman attacked while walking dog in park

An attempted rape occurred at 5:30 p.m. Sunday in Tuttle Park.

Columbus Division of Police reported the victim was walking her dog when the suspect approached her and asked for the time. When the victim checked her watch, the suspect put his hands inside her clothes, but was scared off by the victim's dog.

The suspect is described as a white male, 5'11" and 175 pounds. He is about 30 years old and has long straight hair.

Delivery vehicle overturned in lot

A delivery vehicle was turned over on its side on Monday between 8:10 p.m. and 8:45 p.m.

Columbus police said the delivery driver at the BW-3 Restaurant at 1608 N. High St. went out to the vehicle, a 1988 Toyota Tercel, and noticed it had been turned over onto its side.

The vehicle, which was parked in the rear of the business, sustained $600 worth of damages.

Oberlin to yield reports

ASSOCIATED PRESS

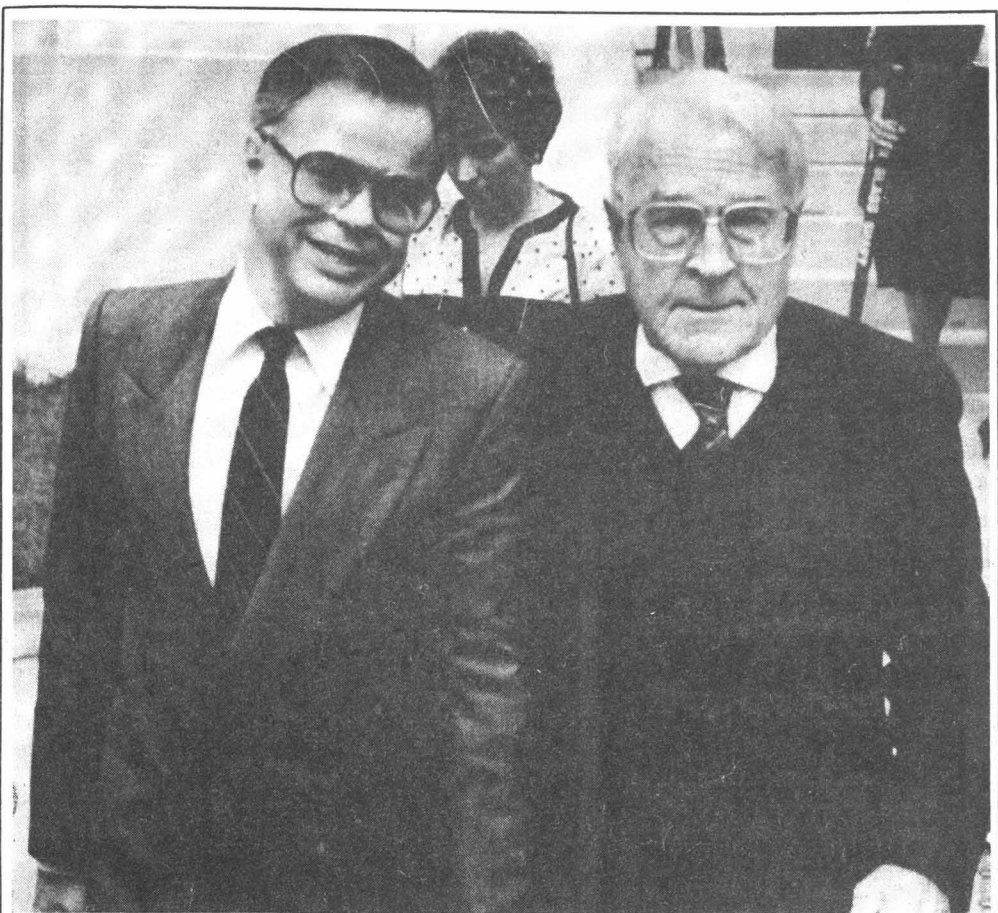

OBERLIN (AP) — Oberlin College has been asked to turn over reports on tuition, salaries and financial aid to the U.S. Justice Department in connection with its probe into alleged price-fixing, an official at the college confirmed Thursday.

The college will comply with the request, said college Secretary Robert Haslun, who confirmed that the request was related to the Justice Department probe.

Haslun said Oberlin College, a small, liberal arts college about 25 miles southwest of Cleveland, has not engaged in any collusion or price-fixing.

The Justice Department announced in August that it was investigating some private colleges for price-fixing in the areas of tuition and financial aid. Among the schools being looked at are Bryn Mawr in Bryn Mawr, Pa., and Wellesley in Wellesley, Mass., published reports said.

Tuition rates at some of the colleges have increased annually by as much as twice the inflation rate of about 4 percent, according to reports.

Faculty returns after one-day strike

ASSOCIATED PRESS

YOUNGSTOWN (AP) — Faculty members at Youngstown State University were expected at their classes Thursday, after a tentative contract agreement reached late Wednesday night meant the apparent end to a one-day strike.

Pickets walked campus sidewalks Wednesday, as 415 instructors went on strike over pay and workload issues at the state-run school with an enrollment of nearly 15,000.

Negotiators for both sides emerged from negotiations Wednesday night and said a tentative agreement was signed at 11:10 p.m.

"We now expect classes to be held (Thursday)," said union spokeswoman Jane Reid, vice president of the Youngstown State chapter of the Ohio Education Association.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed, pending a meeting of the faculty set for 7 a.m. Thursday. Reid said that the union's bargaining committee would recommend approval of the tentative agreement.

The first day of classes for the fall quarter were to start at 8 a.m. Thursday as scheduled, whether or not there was a strike, university spokesman Philip Snyder said.

University officials had said part-time and non-union faculty members would teach classes during the walkout.

The faculty members' took a strike vote Tuesday night. Their three-year contract expired on June 14.

The office of university President Neil D. Humphrey issued a statement Wednesday offering a 6.5 percent increase in salary each year for two years. The university previously offered a 6.2 percent raise.

Snyder said the faculty contract normally is for three years. But Reid has said a two-year contract was being discussed.

An independent fact-finder in June recommended the teachers get an 8 percent raise each year for three years. The union also complained that the teaching workload is the highest in the state, in terms of the average number of hours spent teaching.

On a third issue, the university president's office said a flap over health insurance was resolved. The administration withdrew a proposal for employees to help pay the premium if the premium rises more than 12 percent in 1990-91.

The university said it pays $4,257 per year for health insurance for each married employee, an increase of nearly 17 percent from last year.

U.S. farm machinery is cut down to size

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAFAYETTE (AP) — Ohio farmers are trading in their tractors for weed wackers as varying techniques and more labor on the land make heavy equipment on some farms unnecessary.

Representatives of various farm equipment makers said one reason for the increase in sales of smaller items — such as lawn mowers, utility tractors and chainsaws — may be because while farmers are working on larger farms, they're actually planting on less.

"Their practices have changed," said Craig Fendrick, manager of the Farm Science Review. The review, sponsored by Ohio State and the Ohio Cooperative Extension Agency is an exposition featuring $40 million of farm equipment at the 1,000-acre Molly Caren Agricultural Center in Madison County. "Heavy duty equipment isn't as necessary because of ridge planting," he said.

Review spokesman Stan Ernst said more smaller farms are popping up as weekend farmers take to the fields.

"They don't need all that heavy equipment for, say, 25 acres, but they still need to maintain it," he said.

About 75 percent of farm family income came from sources other than farming in 1988, when nearly half the farm operators in Ohio did some type of off-farm work, according to the Department of Agriculture and Rural Sociology.

Spokesmen for equipment giants such as John Deere Co. and Deutz-Allis Corp. acknowledged more unit sales of smaller-sized equipment, but also said larger machinery was selling better.

"The truth of the matter is they're buying smaller equipment because the prices have gotten so high. That forces you to buy less than what you wanted," said Charles Peiter, a salesman for Kasco Farm Manufacturing Inc. of Shelbyville, Ind. Kasco manufactures and distributes shortline farm equipment.

The industry giants understand that the agricultural economy has been tight, so they must market products toward a different audience, such as the gardener, or professional landscaper, Ernst said.

Fendrick said in the early 1980s farm children were making a beeline for the barnyard door because there was no future in farming then, but that's turned around.

The three-day exposition about 25 miles west of Columbus ran Tuesday through Thursday and was expected to attract more than 100,000 people.

State fair denies steer championship

ASSOCIATED PRESS

(AP) — A teen-ager will forfeit a $28,000 first-place prize she won at an Ohio State Fair livestock auction because a patch of hair on the steer she exhibited was dyed, officials announced Thursday.

The Ohio Expositions Commission, which operates the fair, approved 10-0 an agreement reached with the family of 17-year-old Susan Shealy, whose steer named Hank won the prize in August.

Jack Foust, general manager of the fair, said officials could not prove suspicions that Hank had also been shown under the name Carl at the Iroquois County Fair in Illinois in July — a violation of the rules.

He said Illinois officials did not have nose prints for identification of Carl to compare with those of Hank taken at the Ohio fair.

But investigators for the Ohio fair found that a white spot on Hank's belly had been dyed black, which is also against the rules.

Under the agreement, the family admits to no wrongdoing, but the girl will not get her prize money and must give up her first-place ribbon.

Hank, a 1,245-pound Angus-cross steer, was impounded at an Ohio State University barn while investigators waited for his hair to grow out. The Shealy family picked up Hank on Thursday.

The agreement was reached two weeks ago but was kept secret until it was presented to the expositions commission Thursday.

Shealy, of Tiro in north-central Ohio, and her immediate family also were barred from showing animals at the state fair for five years. Shealy, however, had only one year of eligibility remaining because of her age.

The $28,000 was the highest bid for Hank at the state fair's Sale of Champions on Aug. 14. Rod Link of Fremont-based Link Carnivals bid the money.

Link was on the road in Oklahoma and was not available for comment.

Hank's credentials came into question when fair officials received a tip from an Illinois extension agent on Aug. 19 that Hank might be Carl, named reserve champion at the Iroquois County Fair in Illinois on July 24.

Investigators said black dye had been used to cover a swirl of white hair on Hank's belly. A similar white patch can be seen in a photograph of Carl.

Fair rules prohibit misrepresentation of an animal's history or ownership and forbid any alterations in an animal's natural appearance. Under the rules of both fairs, an exhibitor also must have owned the animal since Jan. 1 of the year in which it is shown.

Foust said that, under state fair rules, there will be no grand champion this year.

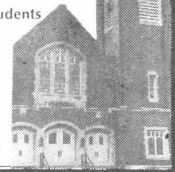

The family of 12-year-old Jeremy Simmons, who exhibited Carl at the Illinois fair, has denied any wrongdoing.

Simmons' stepfather, Donald Kopsell, has said he sold Hank to the Shealys last October and that Carl was destroyed and shipped to a Chicago packing house after he ate some tainted corn.

A USAir Boeing 737 jetliner headed for Charlotte, N.C., slid off the runway and landed in the East River while attempting to take off from New York's La Guardia airport.

Jet skids into East River; crash kills 2, injures 45

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — A USAir jet carrying 63 people aborted take off and skidded into the East River, killing two people. About 10 people were rescued clinging to driftwood, while others huddled on the wing.

"We just grabbed on to a big piece of wood and held on for dear life," said Tom Newberry, 27, of New York City.

The pilot of the 9-month-old Boeing 737-400 decided to abort take off from LaGuardia Airport late Wednesday for unknown reasons, authorities said.

"Something happened and he put on the brakes. The plane took a dip and the next thing I knew all hell broke loose," said passenger Larry Martin of New York City, who huddled in blankets with his wife, Valerie.

"People were on top of each other. People were screaming. There was the smell of gas. Everyone was saying 'Get out! Get out! Get out!'" he said. The Martins got out, and held fast to driftwood until a police boat pulled them from the water.

Officials said two passengers in the rear of the jet were killed. Forty-five people were taken to the hospital; two were reported in serious condition and a third was in stable condition after a heart attack.

The Coast Guard said overnight that up to six people were missing and divers were sent to look for them. But an airline spokeswoman, Susan Young, said all 57 passengers and six crew members were accounted for as of 8 a.m., Thursday.

Flight 5050, bound for Charlotte, N.C., originally scheduled for departure at 7:27 p.m., was delayed by heavy rain. Officials said weather was not a factor in the crash.

The plane split into three pieces, its nose perched on pylons about 10 feet above water. The other pieces were partly submerged in 25- to 40-foot-deep water.

"What held it up was a bridge," Mayor Ed Koch said of the front section. "The back section, God held that up."

Stephen Berger, executive director of the Port Authority, which operates the airport, said several people walked away from the crash, and at least one took a taxi home.

Some survivors crawled onto the wing to await rescue. Others — some shoeless — slid out exits into the water. At least one person was cut from the wreckage. "They were hanging from the pier, hanging on the wing, hanging from the front of the plane," said police Lt. Larry Johnston.

The plane was delivered new to USAir in January and had no history of mechanical problems, said Nancy Vaughan, another USAir spokeswoman.

Coast Guard Lt. Tom Blisard said most of the passengers were saved because the water was not cold, the plane went down close to the lighted runway and the impact was not harsh.

Debates start over penalty

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A committee appointed by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist called Thursday for streamlining death penalty appeals to assure swifter executions, but only after condemned murderers get more legal help.

The proposal promptly was denounced by civil liberties lawyers who accused Rehnquist of stacking the committee.

"They want to be able to kill more people faster," said Mary Broderick of the National Legal Aid and Defender Association.

Retired Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, who heads the committee, said, "The hard fact is that the (capital punishment) laws of 37 states are not being enforced by the courts."

"I respect those who argue for outright abolition of death punishment but it seems irrational to retain the penalty and frustrate its fair implementation," Powell said.

Ironically, Powell said he would vote to abolish capital punishment if he were a state legislator, contending, "It has not deterred murder."

The United States has the highest murder rate of any nation and is the only democracy that has the death penalty, he noted.

Powell said the aim of his committee's report is to reform a system that encourages endless legal maneuvering, years of delay and frenzied, last-minute moves to stave off execution.

The committee report was submitted to the U.S. Judicial Conference, the policy-making arm of the federal courts. The conference postponed any action on the report — and any recommendation to Congress — until its 28 judges reconvene in March.

The committee recommended states enact laws to limit death row inmates to two rounds of appeals in state and federal courts. One round would challenge a verdict directly; a second would be based on alleged violations of the condemned individual's rights.

U.S., Soviet astronauts head for Mars

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARS, Pa. (AP) — It's official. U.S. and Soviet spacemen are going to Mars, and the Martians can't wait to greet them.

That's Mars, Pa. 16046. U.S.A. Earth.

Soviet Cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev arrives in Mars on Monday, by jetliner and car, for an eight-day visit to this community of about 1,800, about 25 miles north of Pittsburgh.

Krikalev, 31, a flight engineer, spent five months on a Soviet-French Soyuz mission that ended in April. He will be joined Wednesday in Mars by Navy Lt. Cmdr. Mario Runco Jr., 37, a NASA astronaut who is awaiting assignment to a space shuttle flight.

The spacemen's mission is to teach Martian children about space and Soviet-American friendship at school lunches and assemblies.

Organizers say it's just like

Martians, as some residents call themselves, to do something "spacey" like this.

"It just seems natural when you live close to Mars. People here have a lot of pride that our town is named after a planet," said Bonnie Solino, mother of a 13-year-old boy and the first Martian to invite spacemen to this sector of the solar system.

"Frankly, I'm a little perplexed by all this, but then I'm originally from the New York City area," she admitted Thursday.
