Wikipedia formed by former Buckeye

By Lindsay Betz Lantern staff writer

On the evening of Jan. 2, 2001, Larry Sanger's friend told him about something called a wiki. Thirteen days later Wikipedia was launched.

According to dictionary.com, a wiki is "a collaborative Web site whose content can be edited by anyone who has access to it."

Sanger, who received his master's and doctorate degrees from Ohio State and taught in the department of philosophy until 2005, had previously been editor-in-chief of a project called

Sanger said Nupedia was essentially a peer-reviewed online encyclopedia written by

"The problem with Nupedia ... was that it was not growing as quickly as we thought a free encyclopedia project could grow," Sanger said.

He said when he heard about the wiki concept, he knew it could "supplement the Nupedia project (because) it would create content more quickly and would be more open to the general

-He said the Nupedia community did not support the project, so he came up with the name Wikipedia and it was launched under its own domain name.

"The whole idea of an encyclopedia that anyone could edit struck the Nupedia community as a bad idea," Sanger said. "It was easy for anyone to get involved instantly without even signing up and that was a pretty unusual concept."

As Wikipedia's success grew, Sanger said, so did its problems.

He said he always thought Wikipedia would be developed together with another more 'mature" encyclopedia, such as Nupedia, that would edit the Wikipedia content and release accurate versions of the entries.

"As it turned out, Jimmy Wales, who pays the bills, decided he liked Wikipedia and didn't like Nupedia so he let Nupedia die," Sanger said.

He said he stopped working for Wikipedia at the beginning of 2002 when the company told him they could not pay his salary anymore. They did invite him to stay on as a volunteer, but he

"I had come to the conclusion that I didn't want to have anything to do with Wikipedia

Anri Sala

Location: Wexner Center Time: 11 a.m.

Description: Throughout the past ten years, Anri Sala has gained international acclaim for videos that exist somewhere between fiction and documentary, often using simple images as metaphors for social and political realities. Sala filmed a journey by boat through a mangrove swamp in the delta between Senegal and Gambia.

Syndromes and a Century

Location: 180 Hagerty Hall Time: 8 p.m.

Description: Young Thai director Apichatpong Weerasethakul (a past Wexner Center residency award recipient and visiting filmmaker) has received his most rapturous reviews yet for Syndromes and a Century, his latest essential film. Set in two times and places — a historical country hospital and a modern urban one — it tells the story of two reticent romances (or is it one romance told twice?). Weerasethakul is regarded as one of the most unusual and visionary directors to emerge in the 21st century, and this film is again filled with delightful mysteries and delicate moods.

as it was being allowed to develop," he said. "The problem was that there was no credible way whereby articles would become approved. We had talked about an approval process for a long time but no action was ever taken on it."

Sanger said Wikipedia still does not have an approval process and anyone who has an account can edit entries.

Although Sanger admits the reason Wikipedia has grown so quickly is because it is a "radically open project," he said the accuracy of entries is an issue because there is little to no input by experts.

Sanger is currently working on a project called Citizendium, which opened to the public two months ago at citizendium.org. He said it is similar to what he originally envisioned Wikipedia would

Citizendium is a wiki in the sense that anyone can become a member and edit entries, but it also has many expert editors who correct and approve

"We want a different kind of Internet community," Sanger said. "We don't want another MySpace that's basically uncontrolled. We want a project that uses real names and where people take responsibility for what they do.'

Sanger said Citizendium is growing at a rate comparable to the rate Wikipedia grew in its early days, and he hopes the growth will accelerate.

He said Wikipedia can be a good place to start looking for information online, but should never be used when writing

"I think that Wikipedians themselves ... say that you shouldn't cite any encyclopedia in papers for college work ... I would say that middle schoolers should not (even) cite Wikipedia articles," Sanger said.

OSU student to study terrorism abroad

Ohio State junior James Lee has been selected by the Foundation for the Defense of Democracies to participate in an undergraduate fellowship program that informs students about terrorist threats in the United States and around the

Lee, a Wadsworth High School graduate, was one of 40. students from the country selected to participate in the year-long fellowship.

The FDD is an institute based in Washington, D.C., that researches issues related to terrorism and works to spread its ideas "in the media, on college campuses and in the policy community," according to the organization's Web site.

The fellowship begins with a trip to Israel from July 28 through Aug. 12, during which students will be stationed at Tel Aviv University. Lee said he is excited about the opportunity to travel overseas and visit Israel.

"I thought it would be cool to leave the country and see Israel," he said. "I would never be able to afford it.'

In Tel Aviv, the students will be presented with lectures and demonstrations from political officials and academic experts in the terrorism field to understanding how democratic states fight

Lee said the threat of terrorism can be a confusing concept.

"I think terrorism is a very complex issue that people try to make simple," he said. "There is a lot of confusion on both sides Mark Silverman can be reached at about what we are doing and silverman.86@osu.edu. what we should be doing."

OSU student Zach Wilson will join Lee in the fellowship program, which moves to Washington, D.C., in early January for a seminar on the leadership role America plays in the war on

For the majority of the program, Lee and the students will be coordinating five events that highlight anti-terrorism and pro-democracy on their respective campuses. To conclude the program, each student will conduct a Sept. 11 memorial

Clifford May, president of FDD, described the program as 'an opportunity for an elite group of students to become educated on the historical, cultural, philosophical and ideological factors that drive terrorism, and how best to eradicate

Lee is studying international studies and premedicine and serves as a marketing director for the Ohio Union Activities Board and as president of the Navigators Campus Ministry. The ability to excel in academics and campus leadership were two of the primary qualifications to be eligible for the program.

Lee said he has taken numerous courses at OSU about terrorism, but to compare those with the upcoming fellowship program is like comparing apples and oranges.

You can learn about terrorism taking a class at OSU, but you can only learn so much from listening to a professor," he said. "(The program) cannot be created in a classroom."

Greenhouse gases

Bush stand just in time for G8

Less than a week before the G8 Summit in Germany, President Bush pledged his support for reducing greenhouse gas emissions and called on the 15-largest countries that produce greenhouse gases to meet this fall to brainstorm ideas about cutting these temperature-altering gases.

The president's announcement comes on the heels of his rejection of Germany's proposal for "deep, long-term cuts in greenhouse gas emissions," The New York Times reported

The Lantern supports the president's call to form a conference aimed at curbing global emissions, but severely questions his motivations. The proposal is itself a good idea, but the president must follow through on what he says about his seriousness of reducing greenhouse gas emissions. He must work to disprove his track record of industry first, environment second.

According to The New York Times, during the first year of his administration, President Bush rejected the Kyoto Protocol, a global agreement signed by a score of other countries designed to reduce greenhouse gasses.

We hope the president's newfound interest in reducing global emissions is sincere, and Bush is not saying this to merely save face in front of other world leaders next week.

The United States has faced increasing criticism from the global community for its aversion to accept a protocol that reduces global emissions. The Lantern believes this is a step in the right direction for the president and the country.

The president received a mixed reaction after his request for a fall conference. British Prime Minister Tony Blair said Bush took a "big step forward," the Associated Press reported. But The New York Times reported that environmental groups such as Friends of the Earth said it was, "an attempt to make the Bush administration look like it takes global warming seriously without actually doing anything to curb emissions."

The Lantern hopes meaningful resolutions will come from the president's proposed fall conference and at the G8 Summit next week. Reducing greenhouse gases is a top priority and must be dealt with immediately.

The president and his conservative administration took a bold step forward and The Lantern applauds him for it. Let's just hope he is sincere.

Abstinence plus New bill includes sex in sex-ed

A new legislation introduced in the Ohio House of Representatives and the Senate could do more to reduce abortions in the state than all the pictures of body parts and Holocaust victims the anti-abortion movement can

The bill, the Ohio Prevention First Act, would mandate sex-education classes on abstinence and contraception, provide additional funds for family-planning services, make sure insurance companies cover birth control and increase the availability of emergency and over-the-counter contraception, according to The Columbus Dispatch.

Sen. Sue Morano, D-Lorain, a sponsor of the bill, told The Dispatch Ohio ranks 44th in the country in funding for contraceptive services.

Only one of the bill's sponsors is opposed to abortion rights - Rep. Gerald Stebelton, R-Lancaster - and Rep. Tom Brinkman Jr., R-Cincinnati, told the paper the bill has no chance because increased distribution of contraception will result in more abortions.

The Lantern hopes Brinkman is wrong, and urges the General Assembly to pass the bill. We have come out in this space before in favor of "abstinence plus" education where students are taught abstinence is the only way to eliminate the possibility of unwanted pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections, but time is also given to the proper use of contraceptive devices and students are shown how to reduce the risks of sex. A study released earlier this year showed teenagers in abstinence programs have sex at the same rate as teenagers in other programs.

This bill seems like a win-win scenario. Abortion is a tragic reality, and even if we preserve the woman's right to choose, there are still things we can do to reduce the number of women who have to face that reality. Pharmacists and doctors should never deny contraception to a woman who needs it. Teenagers should learn the best ways to reduce the risks of their behavior - some will choose abstinence, but many will not. In the January issue of Public Health Reports, it was revealed that by age 20, 75 percent of individuals had engaged in premarital sex.

Reducing the need for abortions in this country is a universal goal, but many abortion opponents seem to be closed off to solutions they feel encourage immoral behavior. If they can come up with a reasonable plan to keep everyone from having sex, we would be happy to hear it. Until then, it is disingenuous to oppose a bill that provides practical, bipartisan solutions to the problem. If the members of the General Assembly truly care about reducing the number of abortions, they will pass this bill.

Star-spangled banner waves without lighting

To the Editor:

Although this may not be much of a story, I believe it is worth mentioning and perhaps bringing to people's attention.

As one approaches the RPAC from any direction, along the sidewalks approaching the building there are many trees. These trees, at night, have lights that shine up from the ground to illuminate them. Approaching from the parking garage, there are even trios of colored lights illuminating the polished aluminum siding of the aquatic center. Question: What is the one thing in the same area that stands taller than the trees and almost as tall as the aquatic center, but for some reason doesn't have a light illuminating it from the Answer: The American flag. Why is that? Seems it is the one thing that should be illuminated at night - more now than ever.

Reflection on patriotism

What is patriotism? hardly imagine it. But The Merriam-Webster online dictionary most importantly, I just defines it simply: the love for or devotion to can't understand it. one's country. Wikipedia states that patriotism is closely related to nationalism, implying that a person should place the interests of the nation above their personal or group interests. A Google search for patriotism reveals a wide range of results on the subject: everything from simple definitions to poems and songs to blogs, photos and videos. So what do all those

I was born in Russia, in a cold and tuckedaway corner of Siberia, a place full of people that rarely question their position in life; few people ever move to Siberia, and even fewer ever leave. Ever since I can remember, all my parents talked about was how miserable life was there, and how much better life will be once we moved to the United States. When we eventually made our 7,784 mile trek to New York in 1995, I remember being asked for the first time by a kid in my class why I moved. I had a simple answer that had been ingrained in my head over the years: because Russia sucked. Did I really believe that at the ripe old age of 10? No. But I said that without thinking

Fast forward to today, and I have spent approximately half of my life in each country. In two weeks I will be a college graduate, and if you meet me, you would be hard-pressed to believe that I was born anywhere outside of the Cleveland metropolitan area. Overall, I have become 100 percent American, but when the conversation turns to patriotism, I feel like a foreigner again. When people talk of American pride overseas, I just shrug. When my ROTC roommate talks, with pride, of fighting and possibly dying for our country, my mind once had, some of its zing. But what does a

America Is Now More Vulnerable Than At Any Time In Its History

America is losing control of its economy and is now quietly being taken over by foreign countries through their purchase and control of our strategic industries (TV manufacturing is now 100% foreign owned, sound recording industry 97%, movie industry 75%, metal ore industry 65%, book publishing 63%, cement industry 81% and many of our other major industries are now foreign owned).

The American economy is no longer competitive. We can't compete with Chinese wage rates nor Japanese technology. Any business that can't be competitive will soon go out of business. Many of our major businesses are now non-competitive and are forced to outsource their manufacturing, close up or sell out. We have sold almost 14,000 of our major companies

We have become uncompetitive through the effects of ill-conceived policies, disastrous trade agreements (W.T.O., Nafta and Cafta), escalating trade deficits, crumbling industrial infrastructure, and the sale of our most valuable companies.

We now no longer produce enough for ourselves and are increasingly compelled to live on imports, borrowed money, and the income from the sale of our best companies.

Balance of Trade Deficits (The means through which foreign countries accumulate our money to buy us out)

2001 - $363 billion = $690,000 per minute

2002 - $421 billion = $801,000 per minute 2003 - $495 billion = $942,000 per minute

2004 - $611 billion = $1,200,000 per minute

2005 - $711 billion = $1,400,000 per minute 2006 - $765 billion = $1,450,000 per minute

These are funds accumulating in foreign hands by selling us more than we can sell them. Foreign companies and governments use this money to buy any US company they like (most of our companies are for sale on the open stock market). With the sale of these companies go our future production, profit, technologies, taxes and the means through which we became a super power. As more of these companies fall into foreign ownership and control we have fewer American owned companies remaining that can produce products to sell, so our balance of trade deficits are destined to increase yearly with no hope of stopping or reversing this trend until we have no companies left to sell.

We will then have developed the profile of a third world country. Our lifestyle will revert back to conditions similar to those when we were subjected to live under colonial rule when England controlled America.

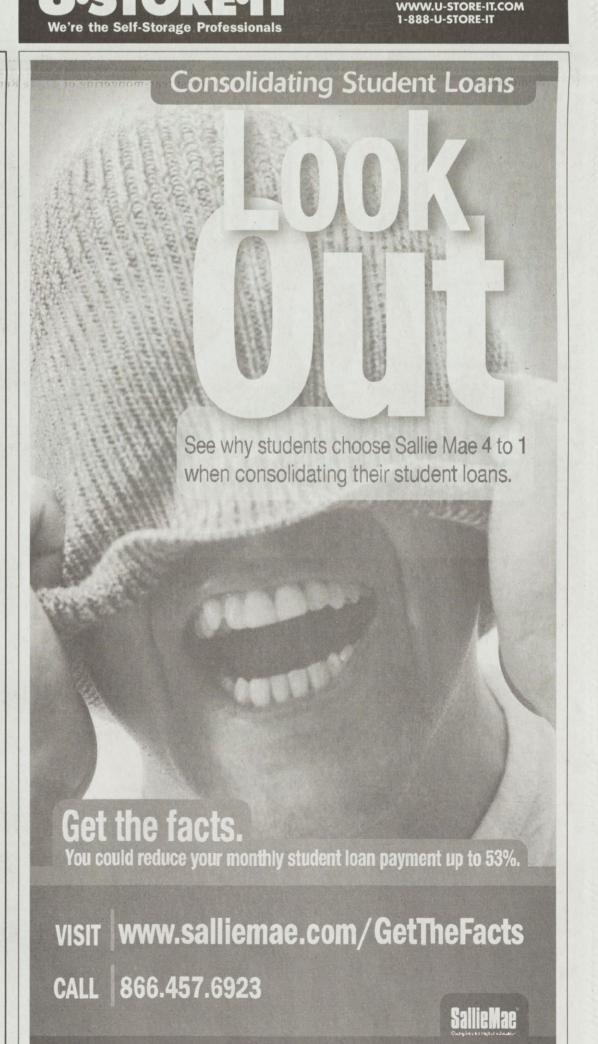

Through their foreign trade surpluses, countries like Japan and China each now have accumulated $1 trillion of currency reserves. General Motors has a stock market value of $20 billion, Japan or China could theoretically buy GM for only 2% of its present amount of our money they have in the bank. These funds are economic bullets poised to strike and take out most of our companies listed on our stock exchanges.

Many countries, particularly Japan and China manage the political and economic matters of their country like they were conducting a war - to destroy competitors. America has just lost the all important economics war. We lost it because we didn't even know we were in it, so we planned no defenses like tariffs to protect our industries. We had no offense to create conditions that would allow our manufacturers to profit in America without outsourcing its manufacturing.

We have been totally misled and blinded to reality. We are now being controlled by our competitor bankers (Japan, China, UK and others) from whom we have borrowed and now owe trillions of dollars.

Poison used to kill Russian agent

Associated Press

MOSCOW — After months of saying very little, the former KGB agent accused of poisoning Alexander Litvinenko said in a lengthy statement Thursday that Britain's secret services may have had a hand in the murder.

Andrei Lugovoi's sensational claim, which was certain to further damage relations between Moscow and London, was part of an elaborate tale that included a secret codebook and a supposed British plot to smear Russian President Vladimir Putin.

But he offered no evidence to back his claims, and for some his explanation created more confusion than clarity.

Litvinenko, a renegade member of the Russian secret services hated by many former colleagues, died in a London hospital last November after ingesting radioactive polonium-210. He accused Putin on his deathbed of being behind his killing - charges the Kremlin has angrily denied.

Half of DVR viewers may be skipping commercials

By David Bauder Associated Press

NEW YORK — More than half of digital video recorder users fast-forwarded through commercials while watching prime-time network fare, according to the first study of how many DVR users actually watch

This month, Nielsen Media Research began measuring how habits have changed in the estimated 17 percent of American homes that own DVRs. On Thursday, the company released a small portion of the data it has gathered from its study of 1,750 DVR homes, taken from the first week of May.

Week of May.

The study indicated that DVRs are used frequently among people ages 18 to 49 and 42 percent of prime-time TV was time-shifted instead of watched

Among DVR households, viewership of the typical primetime show increases by 73 percent when people who have watched it within three days on DVR are included. Yet the number of people watching the commercials goes up only 32 percent — meaning more than half the DVR viewers avoided

Nielsen would not release an exact estimate of ad-skippers, or which type of show is most vulnerable. About 17 percent of the nation's estimated 111.4 million TV households have

"There is perhaps less commercial avoidance than we in the industry seem to think there might be," said Pat McDonough, Nielsen's senior vice president for planning, policy and analysis.

Nielsen may be reluctant to provide full disclosure because the study has multi-billion dollar implications. Worried that advertising revenue will tumble because less people are watching their ads, TV networks want data from Nielsen showing that the messages are getting through. Advertisers, on the other hand, think they shouldn't pay as much if they're not getting as many viewers as promised.

The data released Thursday was not particularly surprising, said Shari Anne Brill, top researcher for the Madison Avenue agency Carat USA. She also questioned how precise Nielsen's figures are because the company is not measuring individual commercials.

"It gets us closer" to a more accurate view of who is watching commercials, she said. Brill complained that Nielsen has also long counted VCR watchers as live viewers, assuming people who tape shows watch all the commercials, when that's not likely the case

Alan Wurtzel, chief researcher at NBC Universal, said Nielsen's first set of numbers confirm the networks' position that there is still a considerable amount of commercial viewing, even in homes with DVRs.

"All this technology, in the case of the DVR, is tremendously changing the way people watch television," he said.

When DVR viewers are figured in, more people watch the commercials on NBC's "The Office" than watch the actual program live, Nielsen said. It's the same with some other shows popular with DVR owners, such as Fox's "Family Guy," ABC's "Grey's Anatomy" and CBS' "Numb3rs."

Use caution with new Used album

But now, as I look back, I you. They don't know you

I know there is more to it than just having similar tastes in music or movies, but it's just underage and sneaking into that they are meeting you and getting to know you for the person you are, not the person you were. It is something special

I am a rather socially awkward guy, so I never really got fully immersed in OSU until I was a senior. This is one of the few regrets I have about college. Not to say the friends I hung out with before were not great people — nothing could be further from the truth. When we would hang out, we would make jokes, laugh at dumb stuff people did and talk about music. Nothing really has changed. But when you come to college, you should make moves outside of your comfort zone. It can be a little scary at first but it is usually worth it. I have met seemed to be fitting me quite These are friends who have no some of the most genuine and preconceived notions about amazing people taking steps away from what I know and what is familiar.

I urge every one of you to make the most of this time and try to live your life a different way or at least the way you want to. Not to say you have to abandon the people you know now, but it is hard to look back on things if you don't first move forward.

The Lantern will not publish illegal advertising or the advertising of illegal products or services. The Lantern reserves the right to reject advertising that denigrates individuals, groups or organizations based on race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, religion, mental or physical capacity, veteran's status, age or sexual orientation. The Lantern Business Manager will refer questionable advertising to the Publications Committee of the School of Journalism and Communication. The committee will recommend a decision on whether to publish the advertising to the Director of the school.

- Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required
- Copy must be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for special publications whose
- An advertisement is required to occupy at least as many inches in height as columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered a "full column" (21 inches) advertisement and charged accordingly
- Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager with
- in 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility. Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.
- A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
- No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than seven column inches.

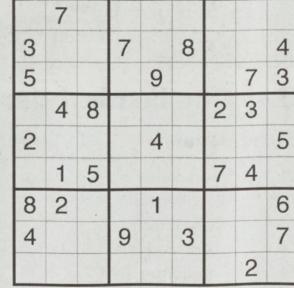

If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the adver-

- tising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee. The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check or
- money order is required for out-of-town advertisers. 10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for
- use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad 11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are
- available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication. 12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including 9 reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise-
- 13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University
- 14. A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication. 15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such
  - materials 60 days after their first publication.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING

CO-EMPLOYEES OF THE MONTH - MAY, 2007.

Lee Wallingford

Lee is a senior from Cincinnati, Ohio who is majoring in Finance and Marketing. He has been working for the Lantern Display Advertising Department for the past two years as a Student Account Executive and has learned how to become a hard worker and a dedicated team member. He has shown a great desire to succeed and his work habits are exceptional. He has a great attitude and is not afraid to go the extra mile. Lee is graduating this quarter and has accepted a job with State Street as a Structured Product Analyst, in Boston, Massachusetts. Lee is a valuable asset and will be missed at the office.

Morris Whitner

Morris is a senior from Washington, D.C. who is majoring in International Studies and minoring in French. He has been working for the Lantern Display Advertising Dept. since April 2005 as a Student Account Executive. He is engaged to be married in August 2007 to Roberta Stewart, a 2006 OSU Alumni. In addition to being a full-time student, a dedicated father to his 2 year-old son Elijah, and working at the Lantern, Morris also has been working at J.P. Morgan Chase for 3 1/2 years as a Risk Operations Analyst. Morris has shown great leadership and exceptional work habits. Morris is graduating this quarter and has been accepted to grad school at Michigan State University.

The Lantern Business Office would like to congratulate Lee Wallingford and Morris "Moe" Whitner on a job well done. We wish you the best of luck!
