Gee chastises Lantern

By Robert Hanseman

In a meeting with the staff of the Lantern Monday, OSU President E. Gordon Gee criticized the paper's decision to run an article by Bradley Smith which questions the commonly accepted historical account of the Holocaust.

Gee spoke to 35 journalism students, professors and staff at the offices of the Lantern and assured them that although he did not believe the story should have appeared, he was defending the Lantem's right to publish Smith's article.

The article was rejected as an advertisement by the Lantern Publication Committee, but appeared on \it{thc} Lantern's editorial pages Friday.

"It was dumb to the extreme," said Gee of the decision. "You harmed the credibility of the Lantern.'

Gee retracted the word "dumb" when Krissy Harris, city editor, ob-decision to publish the article because of its nature, which he deribed as "drivel."

"If there were a Board (of Trustees) meeting today, they'd shut (the Lantern) down," Gee said.

Editor Samantha Haney questioned Gee about what he had done to understand the Lantem's position. Gee said that he had not done enough to ensure adequate communication but added this problem existed on both sides of the controversy.

Photo editor Michael Alwood told Gee that the article should have run because it had become news. evidenced by the presence of the national CBS news crew from "48

He spoke at length about the reac-Court eases access to campus police files

By Neal Havener Lantern staff writer

Although the OSU Police Department is charging $4 per copy for re-ports legally available to the public under Ohio open records law, campus police records nationwide should become more accessible to both the public and the student press as the result of a recent U.S. District Court ruling.
Last February, the U.S. Depart. the bitter end" ment of Education warned universities that federal funding might be withheld if they provided public actess to university law enforcement records. As a result, the Student Press Law Center and three college newspaper editors filed suit against the department Oct. 10, 1991.

A federal law, the Family Educa-tional Rights and Privacy Act, also known as the Buckley Amendment, provided the mandate for the Department of Education's actions, according to Jim Bradshaw, a department spokesman. That law, enacted in 1974, was designed in part to protect the privacy of students in conjunction with the release of education re-cords, which, according to the De-partment of Education, are con-nected to campus law enforcement

"The Department of Education's interpretation was that when a stu-dent was arrested, it's the same as an academic record of failing a class. It's an embarrasing fact that the universities should shield their students from," said Sam Cristy, editor of the Daily Beacon at the University of Ten-nessee and one of the plaintiffs in the law center's suit against the Department of Education.

"A lot of people think it's scandal that we want to make examples out of criminal suspects, and that's not the case," Cristy said. "It's just as much a cess. protection for the suspect to have public knowledge of their apprehension – of them being apprehended – as for the public's knowledge. By content of the Student Press Law dent press, the District Court granted a preliminary injunction rested, friends and acquaintances who'd know that was an improper arrest can testify. . . . And also, police are not allowed to simply sweep people off the streets without cause and hold them in a jail cell where no one nows about it.

The Beacon had been seeking access to campus police reports since 1988, when a case involving a stabbing at a fraternity was "bungled by improper oversight of the campus police force," Cristy said. "Even the parents couldn't get the police files on the investigation into their own son's death, and that raised public furor.

Arrest records are routinely available by law or official policy in 48 states, according to the Student Press Law Center's lawsuit. As far as college press access to campus police records, "there was so much inconsistency," Cristy said. "In one part of the country you had complete access to everything, such as campuses like Lyn Schrotbergers's (editor of Color-ado State University's Rocky Mountain Collegian and another plaintiff in the case), and then you had other campuses, like the University of Ten-nessee, where you had hardly any ac-temporarily banning the Department of Education from withdrawing, or threatening to withdraw, federal funds from colleges that give the public and the student press access to campus police reports.

"The right to receive information and ideas 'is an inherent corollary of the rights of free speech and press that are explicitly guaranteed by the Constitution,'" said U.S. District Judge Stanley Harris in his Nov. 21 decision. "The (interest) of the public in greater access to information . . . is at its highest in matters that bear on personal safety and the prevention of

The lawsuit was filed after the Student Press Law Center conducted a phone survey of college newspapers last January and February to deter-mine which had access to campus police reports, Goodman said. The survey was conducted for two primary reasons, he added.

First, Goodman said the center had been receiving "literally hundreds of complaints" from college journalists having difficulty gaining access to police reports. Also, he was testifying in a case involving Traci Bauer, editor of the Southwest Missouri State University student paper, who filed suit against the university because she was denied reports on campus crime, was deflied reports on campus crime, Goodman said.

"We were trying to make the point that other schools were releasing this information and had suffered no conequences as a result," he said. Missouri State's lawyers "immediately" sent the results of the survey to the Department of Education, which then threatened to withdraw federal funding from schools surveyed if they continued to provide public access to crime information, according to the Student Press Law Center.

schools cited in the law center's survey. When the university received the Department of Education's warning letter and faced the loss of federal funding, it unwillingly stopped allowing access to campus police reports, said Brian Snow, legal counsel for the university.

It was accurate to interpret a sec-ion of the Buckley Amendment as prohibiting university law enforcement units from releasing records, though it is a "very convoluted section of the act," Snow said. "That year (1974) there was a lot of concern about campus records and just federal records in general.
"There was a lot of suspicion about governmental agencies and others looking into student records," Snow said. "The police were viewed with some degree of concern in those days as a possible mechanism for filtering out information, following some tough days in the '60s with the FBI and the CIA and so forth."

Last July, Secretary of Education
Lamar Alexander proposed a change in the Buckley Amendment to make it easier for colleges to report campus crimes and still keep education re-cords private, Bradshaw said. "The Buckley Amendment... has made it difficult, sometimes impossible, for a college to report campus crime," Alexander said. "That makes no sense. The federal government shouldn't keep colleges from making campus crime information available to students and their families.

Goodman said the department has not changed its stand and is still pursuing the case.

"They are doing everything they can to fight this until the bitter end," Goodman said. "We keep thinking that they're going to see that, you know, the writing is on the wall. They're losing this battle. They're making themselves look foolish every day they pursue it, but I guess it's wishful thinking on our part to expect that the federal government is going to behave logically.

Bradshaw said, "It was Congress that passed the law. We implement the law."

Both the House and Senate have passed bills containing amendments clarifying the application of the Buckley Amendment.

"We're working towards the same goal (as the Student Press Law Center) of changing the law, and we have the same interests in mind, to permit the disclosure of crime records to the press and to the public," Bradshaw

"This decision could have a lot of impact," Goodman said. "But unfortunately, the Department of Education... is prolonging the time when this decision and the impact of it can actually have a clear and straightforward effect. 'cause some schools are ward effect, 'cause some schools are still saying that until the Department of Education says they are not going to appeal any further, we are going to refuse access to our campus police reports."

The Pitt News (University of Pittsburgh), The Sage Brush (University of Nevada in Reno), The Fourth Estate (Harrisburg-area Community College in Harrisburg, Pa.) and The Log (Salem State College, Salem, Mass.) are among those student newspapers still having difficulty accessing camis crime reports, Goodman said.

The Freedom of Information Cener, located at the University of Missouri in Columbia, has files of information regarding media access to police records, said Diana Rasmussen, a library clerk there.

While making clear that the publications the center receives focus mainly on the lack of access to records, she doesn't think access is getting much better.

"Maybe when this case becomes fully realized all over, and maybe after a few suits or something, things will turn around a little bit," Rasmussen said. "But it's my impression that (campus police) are going to continue to try to withhold records, and for what reason. I don't know.

Lantern resignations

Lantern staff members have not resigned in the aftermath of controversy surrounding the newspaper's decision to print an article claiming the Holocaust was a hoax.

Jewish community members and students Friday called for the resignations of Lantern Editor Samantha Haney, Faculty Adviser Mary Carran Webster and Business Manager Ray Catalino.

About 150 upset students and representatives of the Jewish community held a "teach-in" in the lobby of the Journalism Building to protest the Lantern's publication of Bradley Smith's controversial article, "The Holocaust Controversy: The Case for Open Debate.'

"The Lantern has to be responsible. Hate is wrong; prejudice is wrong; the Lantern is wrong," said Michael Landy, executive director of the B'Nai B'Rith Hillel Foundation.

The Lantern received calls about newspapers being burned in front of Steeb Hall on Friday, and several High Street merchants reported that bundles of Lanterns had been removed from newspapers racks and thrown into trash cans and Dumpsters.

Non-Jewish students at the sit-in also spoke out about Smith's article.

Jury still out in Exline trial

The 12-member jury did not reach a verdict after six-and-a-half hours of deliberation on Monday in the case concerning the first Columbus police officer to be indicted for using excessive force.

ACCESS provides support

By Becky Brooks Lantern staff writer

Jennifer Weaver finds the struggle of being a full-time student, full-time mother and part-time employee well worth it. Weaver, 21, was the first person in her family to graduate from high school, and now she is a sophomore majoring in education at Ohio State.

A typical school day for Weaver begins at 5:30 a.m. "I wake my kids up, get them ready and drop them off at day care by 8 a.m.," she said. She spends her day taking education classes and doing clerical work for a university office until 5 p.m.

"After I fix dinner, I like to spend family time with my kids," she said.

Weaver tries to have her kids in bed by 8 p.m., so she can spend the rest of her evening studying.

"Lots of people said I could never do it, and those are the people I send my grades to every quarter," Weaver said.

Weaver is a participant in the ACCESS Program at Ohio State.
"The ACCESS Program is a social support program for minority, single parents," Jacqueline Wade, director of Academic Skills Enrichment Programments and Academic Skills Enrichment Programments. ram, which encompasses the AC-CESS Program, said.

The program is open to African-American, Latin-American, Asian-American and Native-American, single parents who have custodial responsibilities for their children and who have not completed an undergra-

The ACCESS Program was instituted in the spring of 1990. There are currently 24 women participating in TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — The state opened an office Monday to develop and coordinate programs to help clean up Lake Erie.

"It's a real exciting day for Lake Erie," Jeff Busch, executive director of the Lake Erie Office, said at a news conference. "This puts into place a framework within the state ... to more effectively protect Ohio's most precious natural resource — Lake

The office has three employees and a $250,000 annual budget.
Ohio Environmental Protection Agency Director Donald Schregardus said the key responsibilities of the office will be to: - Coordinate activities of six state agencies that deal with Lake Erie -Manage the spending of the Great Lakes Protection Fund. Represent Ohio on key national.

regional and international organizations dealing with Lake Erie and Great Lake issues.

The Ohio agencies involved with Lake Erie issues are the EPA and de-partments of Natural Resources, Agriculture, Health, Development and Transportation.

"The primary staff work will be carried out by the state agencies themselves," Schregardus said. "But we need to speak with one voice. Governor Voinovich has insisted that the agencies work together to solve issues dealing with Lake Erie. The Lake Erie Office will help us accomplish those goals."

Busch worked for the Toledo-Lu-cas County Port Authority before becoming director of the new agency. He helped the port authority put together a plan to clean up the Mau-mee River, a Lake Erie tributary.

He said the state has worked hard to clean up Lake Erie.

"Although the state, federal and local governments have made substantial progress in cleaning up Lake Erie, the work has only begun. It's an ongoing process," Busch said. "But I think the future looks cheery. We'll have a dramatic impact on improving water quality."

One of the office's main goals will be to manage Ohio's share of the Great Lakes Protection Fund, which will provide $100 million to finance clean-water projects. The office will administer grants for environmental research and educational programs.

Mayor John McHugh hailed Voino vich for opening the agency in Toledo. "He could have placed it in Colum-is ... but chose Toledo," McHugh

He said he expects the agency to hire more staff. "It may only be a few jobs today, but we're looking forward to maybe having more jobs from state govern-ment in the months ahead," he said.

Dance concert depicts 1960s

Choreographer Pedro Alejandro presented three dance pieces Friday and Saturday nights at the Third Av enue Performance Space (T.A.P.S.), as partial completion of his Master of Fine Arts Degree. Alejandro said the concert was ab-out the relationship of mass culture and the concert stage.

Although the dance was modern, many ideas and meanings seemed to stem from the '60s. For example, some of the clothing and the pictures that were shown during the performance represented that time period.
Political overtones were apparent in all of the dances. In some of the pieces, there were television sets showing political scenes to convey certain ideas.

The pieces Alejandro choreo-graphed were titled "It's a Vessel and a Thing," which was an operetta in episodes; "Waiting For That New Laurie Gnepper DANCE REVIEW

Christian's music unfit for church

By Rich Maple

'When the snarling, defecating beast stares you down" is part of the opening line for one of Christian's songs. Despite its name, this Columbus-based band doesn't play anything resembling church music.

"We want it so that right off the bat people know that this is no religion thing," lead singer Stefon Caldwell

Christian had the crowd rockin' last Thursday at the Newport Music Hall with its original sound.

This versatile band combines reggae, punk and dance music in all of its songs to produce a very different

"It's rock 'n' roll with a gothic tinge that lends itself to dance and thought," Caldwell said.

Caldwell got the crowd worked up with his powerful voice when he broke into "Chosen One." His energetic performance was fluid, and that made it easy for the audience to get into the music. Caldwell's voice blended well with guitarist Michael Christian's fast-paced jams, the steady play of bass player Diego Rivera and the hard beats provided by drummer Myke Flournoy.

"Our music is a kind of Billy Idol gothic thing, but then it keeps rockin' because of the way Michael Christian and Myke Flournoy play," Caldwell

There's one thing that the band is, and that's original.

Duke still remains No. 1 in Associated Press poll

(AP) — Certain things just aren't changing about the AP's college basketball poll th's season.

Duke, the defending national champion, was still No. 1 today and the Blue Devils were a unanimous selection for the fourth time this season. UCLA and Oklahoma State, the other two unbeaten Division I teams, held spots 2 and 3 for the fifth consecutive week. And, in what may be the most telling trait of all, the members of the Top 25 continued to lose games with 11 teams losing 14 games this week.

That's an improvement over the ways of the ranked teams the last two weeks when 16 teams lost 18 games and then 13 teams lost 16 games for a total of 48 losses by ranked teams in three weeks.

Two schools which lost two games each last week fell from the poll — St. John's, which had been 22nd, and Stanford, formerly 24th. The Redmen (10-6) had been ranked every week since the preseason poll of 1990-91 and started this season 10th. The Cardinal (11-3) joined the poll last week, but two home losses relegated them to one-week wonder status, a standing also held this season by Pittsburgh, Massachusetts and Iowa State.

Iowa State.

Joining the poll this week were F'orida State, which came in at 23rd in the Seminoles' first appearance in the rankings since the final poll of 1988-89, and Southern Cal, which was 25th and back in after being in two weeks and then out for another

Duke (14-0) is on a 20-game winning streak and the Blue Devils received all 64 first-place votes from the nationwide panel of sportwriters and broadcasters. UCLA (14-0) and Oklahoma State (18-0) held their spots from last week as did Indiana (14-2) and Kansas (14-1). Connecticut moved up one spot to sixth and was followed in the Top Ten by Arkansas, Missouri, Arizona and Ohio State.

North Carolina led the Second Ten and was followed by Syracuse, Michigan State, Kentucky, Michigan, Tulane, North Carolina-Charlotte, Oklahoma, Texas-El Paso and Georgia Tech, the team in the Top 25 with the most losses, five.

most losses, five.

The final five were UNLV, Alabama, Florida State, Louisville and Southern Cal.

Ohio State fell from sixth to 10th following Sunday's loss to Seton Hall, while Kentucky dropped from eighth to 14th following consecutive losses to Tennessee and Arkansas, the latter at home. Alabama took the week's biggest fall — 15th to 22nd — after ending a three-game losing streak with a road win over Georgia.

Florida State (12-4) entered the Florida State (12-4) entered the poll in its first year in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a league mark of 5-2 with four of the victories coming on the road including three ranked teams at the time — North Carolina, Wake Forest and Georgia

Southern Cal (13-3) fell from the rankings after losses to Notre Dame and Arizona, but the Trojans have returned following road wins over Stanford and California last week. They meet UCLA on Wednesday night with first place in the Pac-10 on the line

St. John's has lost four of six — all four in Big East road games. The two last week which caused the Redmen to get the boot were to Seton Hall and Stanford had just one loss before this weekend's Pac-10 homestand, in which the Cardinal fell to Southern Cal and UCLA.

The Atlantic Coast Conference, Big Eight and Big Ten each have four teams in the poll, while the Big East is down to two — Connecticut and Syracuse — after having five teams in the rankings for two separate weeks earlier in the season. Six of the 10 teams in the Big East have been ranked at some point in the season.

By Kyle Pendleton

A pair of weekend meets had the OSU women's swimming and diving team rallying to victory against the University of Wisconsin and falling to defeat against defending Big Tenchampion University of Michigan.

defeat against defending Big Ten champion University of Michigan.
Friday, the Buckeyes posted a 148-132 victory against Wisconsin by winning 12 of 14 events.

Sophomore Holly Humphrey from Crawfordsville, Ind. was a four-event winner and set a new pool record in the 100-yard freestyle with a time of 51.73.

Her other firsts were in the 50-yard freestyle, the 400-yard medley relay and the 400-yard freestyle relay.

The first place 400-yard medley relay team consisted of Humphrey, junior Sunny Lambson, freshman Katie Hedman and senior Stacia Goff.

Hedman, in addition to the 400yard medley relay victory, placed first in the 100-yard breaststroke, 200yard breaststroke and the 200-yard individual medley.

Humphrey and Goff were joined by junior Erika Cottrell and freshman Jennifer Berger in the 400-yard freestyle relay to enter a first place time of 3:31.81.

Goff also placed first in the 200-yard butterfly with a time of 2:04.54 to make her a three-event winner.

Cottrell, also a three-event winner, had winning times in the 200-yard freestyle and the 500-yard freestyle with times of 1:58.93 and 5:01.97 respectively

Lambson placed first in the 200yard backstroke with a time of 2:09.54 to become a two-event win-

Ohio State's other first was by junior Joyce Lightfoot with a winning time of 17:14.78 in the 1650-yard freestyle. Berger came in second with 17.31.80.

"Everyone really seemed to rally together and swim their bests," Humphrey said. "All of us were racing fast and we passed the test that Wisconsin gave us."

Saturday, the swimmers fell short in a quest to defeat rival Michigan by winning five of 14 events in a 144-114 loss

"Michigan really tried to intimidate us with their size and reputation," Hedman said. "Even though they were three times bigger than us, we kept getting up time after time for the races and gave it our best. In fact, we kind of intimidated them because they saw all of us consistently swimming well three and four races each, compared to their members (Michigan's) who swam only one or two races each."

Hedman had a first in the 100-meter breaststroke with a time of

An additional first came from Goff with a time of 2:22.18 in the 200-meter butterfly ter butterfly.

Humphrey placed first in the 100meter freestyle and second in the 50meter freestyle with times of 1:00.54 and 27.99 respectively.

Others placing first were Goff in the 100-meter butterfly with a time of 1:06.52 and Hedman in the 400-meter individual medley with a time of 5:19.87.

Ohio State's next meet will be against Miami University on Saturday at 2 p.m. in Larkins Hall's varsity

"Outlooks are really positive," Humphrey said. "We have begun our taper, which means we gradually train less so that we're rested for major competition. All we can hope to do is swim our best this weekend and then at Big Tens."
