UT cop charged in woman's death

TOLEDO (AP) — A University of Toledo police officer was charged with aggravated murder Saturday in the shooting death on campus of a 19-year-old student.

Jeffrey T. Hodge, 22, of Toledo, was charged in the death of Melissa Ann Herstrum, 19, of Rocky River, said police Sgt. Art Marx.

Hodge was being held in the Lucas County Jail, Marx said. He will be arraigned at 9 a.m. Monday in Municipal Court.

Police were unsure whether Hodge and Ms. Herstrum were acquainted. Police said Hodge had responded to an auto accident on campus several hours before the disappearance of Ms. Herstrum, who had stopped to offer help at the scene.

Police Chief Marti Felker and police Capt. Tom Gulch said Hodge was one of the search team officers who found the student's body last Monday.

Police also said Hodge had promptly gone to the scene of an unsolved shooting incident on campus one week earlier. No one was wounded in that incident.

Police said wrist marks indicating the victim may have been handcuffed led them to consider whether a law enforcement officer had been involved in the slaying.

Felker also said telephone records showed a call about a phony taxicab robbery on the night of the slaying was placed from a campus phone, suggesting the killer may have wanted the victim discovered at that time and may have been part of the university community.

No motive has been determined in the slaying, Felker said.

Ms. Herstrum's body was found Monday lying face down in the snow on the university's Scott Park campus, about one mile south of the main campus. She had been shot 10 to 14 times in the head and back.

Her death came one week after someone fired five shots from a semi-automatic weapon into a dormitory. One bullet just missed a sleeping student.

Ms. Herstrum's roommate, Deborah Doritty, reported late Sunday that Ms. Herstrum was missing. Ms. Doritty told police that Ms. Herstrum left their apartment early Sunday after receiving a telephone call.

The Rev. David S. Bell, pastor of Rocky River United Methodist Church and spokesman for the Herstrum family, said the family felt better because an arrest had been made.

"The entire Herstrum family is relieved to know that some of the mystery surrounding Melissa's tragic death has been revealed," Bell said Saturday.

Bell said the family didn't believe Ms. Herstrum knew the suspect.

He said Ms. Herstrum's parents "do not want this isolated incident to be portrayed as a reflection on the entire (campus) police force."

Reputed terrorist treated in France

PARIS (AP) — George Habash, head of one of the most violent Palestinian terror factions, was allowed to leave France on Saturday despite requests here and abroad that he be held for terrorism investigations.

The Justice Ministry lifted a custody order on Habash, 65, who had been hospitalized in Paris since Wednesday after suffering an apparent stroke at his home in Tunisia.

Habash left Henry Dunant Hospital and flew from Orly airport to Tunis, where he lives. Several hours later, Palestine Liberation Organization officials said Chairman Yasser Arafat greeted Habash as he walked off the plane. He used a cane and was supported by two people.

France's top anti-terrorism investigator had wanted to question him and Israeli officials had suggested they might seek Habash's extradition for a murder probe. Neither Paris nor Washington officials had issued warrants for his arrest.

"Habash is not the object of any warrant, neither national nor international," the Interior Ministry said after his departure. "There no longer exists any legal reason to hold him on the national territory."

Anti-terrorism investigator Jean-Louis Bruguiere said Thursday he wanted to question Habash about arms and explosives found in the forest of Fontainebleau outside Paris in 1986. But doctors later told Bruguiere that Habash's condition made it virtually impossible to speak with him, according to the Agence France-Presse news agency.

The weapons were uncovered during bombings which terrorized the capital, killed 13 people and injured scores of others. Investigators linked the weapons to Habash's guerrilla faction.

Habash leads the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, which gained notoriety for promoting the Palestinian cause through terrorist attacks in the 1970s — including the hijacking of an Air France airliner to Entebbe, Uganda. His group was also responsible for the machine-gun slaughter of 27 people at Israel's Lod airport in May 1972.

The entry of the guerrilla leader had caused an uproar in France's Socialist government. Three senior aides in the Foreign and Interior Ministries were fired Thursday for allowing Habash into France without consulting Foreign Minister Roland Dumas or President Francois Mitterrand, both of whom were away. The head of the French Red Cross, who helped arrange Habash's visit, also lost her job as counselor to Mitterrand.

On Friday, opposition leaders called for the dismissal of Cabinet ministers whose aides had approved Habash's entry. Even the governing Socialist Party said it was "stupefied" to learn of the "inexcusable decision" to admit Habash.

Mitterrand met with Prime Minister Edith Cresson and Interior Minister Philippe Marchand on Saturday shortly after Habash's departure. Marchand told reporters he had asked for the resignation of Christian Rouyer, the diplomatic liaison between the Interior and Foreign Ministries.

Habash left France later Saturday for an undisclosed location, three days after arriving for medical treatment. His presence had sparked a domestic political controversy and an international outcry.

No fed funds for AIDS clinic

Closing is shock

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ohio is losing one of its three federally funded sites for AIDS clinical testing.

The research unit of the University of Cincinnati's AIDS Treatment Center lost its federal funding and will close March 31. The unit's clinical trials evaluated experimental drugs for treatment of HIV, the virus that leads to acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"This was completely out of the blue," center manager Ellen Vigdorth said of the National Institute of Allergies and Infectious Diseases' decision not to renew the unit's funding.

"We have always been evaluated as an excellent model site," Ms. Vigdorth said Friday. "We were one of the few that had a women's and children's section of clinical treatment."

Funding was renewed for the state's other AIDS clinical sites at Ohio State University in Columbus and Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

About 320 AIDS patients have volunteered to participate in the research at the Cincinnati clinic over the past four years. The 125 patients currently participating in research there will be allowed to complete the clinical trials in which they are involved, Ms. Vigdorth said.

The treatment center will remain open.

"It's tough," Ms. Vigdorth said. "Patient care will still be here for the patients. It will be tougher for them to get into clinical trials. They'll have to go to Columbus."

Over the past four years, the research unit has been funded by a $5 million federal grant from the National Institute of Allergies and Infectious Diseases of the National Institutes of Health.

National Institute of Allergies spokeswoman Jill Leonard could not say why the program lost its funding.

Funding was granted through a competitive process, she said.

Ms. Leonard said the agency renewed funding for 21 of 35 clinical sites in the county and gave first-time funding to seven sites. The agency received 47 applications for adult clinical research sites, she said.

Each existing site underwent a series of evaluations for its scientific and management abilities.

Injuries result from Tokyo quake

TOKYO (AP) — A strong earthquake shook the Tokyo area early Sunday, jolting buildings and waking residents before dawn. At least 30 people were injured.

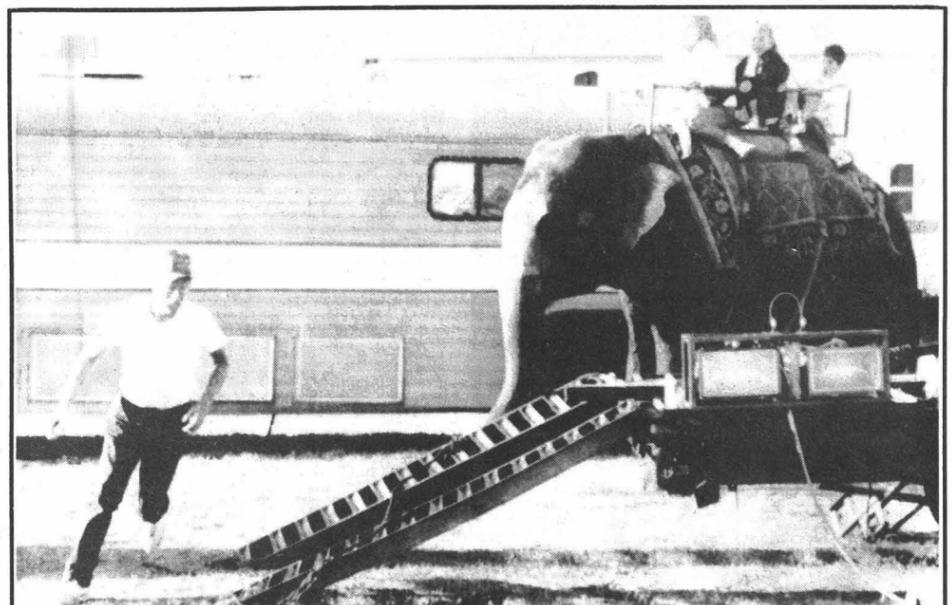

No deaths were immediately blamed on the quake, which struck at 4:04 a.m. (2:04 p.m. EST Saturday).

Japan's Central Meteorological Agency said the quake, which lasted about one minute, measured 5.7 on the Richter scale. An earthquake measuring 5 on the Richter scale can cause considerable damage, and one measuring 6 can cause severe damage.

Japan Railways said all trains were halted in the Tokyo area to inspect for damage. Most of the country's famous "bullet trains" resumed service within two hours.

Imposter targets women

By Jo Crawford
Lantern staff writer

A man posing as a psychology graduate student has been calling OSU women claiming to be conducting a survey on human sexuality. Women have reported a caller asking explicit sexual questions, said Beth Koruna, a clerical specialist in the psychology department. The questioning begins with general inquiries about sexuality, but then gets more graphic, Koruna said. "The caller is very interested in orgasms, and is fairly clinical in his questioning," she said. Since May, five women have called the psychology department asking about the legitimacy of the survey. Four of the calls received have been in the past two weeks, Koruna said. "This caller breaks the ethical rules of dealing with human beings," Koruna said. Detective Jean Holmes of the Columbus Police Department Sexual Abuse Squad said this type of case is new to her, and if the caller is caught, he would probably be charged with telephone harassment. Police said the suspect caller is using an assumed name. An OSU student, who received a call, said the man sounded like a professional because the kinds of questions he asked and the way he asked them. The woman said the survey seemed legitimate until the caller asked if he could send her a confidential packet. She told the caller not to send the packet. The woman said she found the packet a few days later lying outside her door. The packet contained pornographic materials and two vibrators, she said. The woman said the man called her a couple more times after she received the packet, and she hung up on him. After realizing the caller was not a psychology student, she called the police and filed a report. The last time the man called, she informed him she knew he was a fake, and she had called the police. The woman said she has not received any more calls. The psychology department received a call Friday reporting the same man had called three more people Thursday night, Koruna said. A student who was called Thursday said she heard about the fake survey from a friend who had also been called. When the man identified himself and said what he wanted, the student told him she had guests, and she hung up. There is no evidence that the man is part of the psychology department, Koruna said. "We want put the word out that this guy is not part of the psychology department," Koruna said. If people know about the man, then maybe something can be done, Koruna said. The man has probably called many more people than we have heard from, she said.

The sheriff's office called in Ohio State Patrol officers and several police units from around the area as backups. It took about one hour to break up the fights, the sheriff's office said. Scuffles continued to occur around the campus, where deputies patrolled until 4 a.m. Campus security officers from both schools hoped to have a detailed report ready by Monday, Wilson said.

Student jailed after brawl

WILBERFORCE (AP) — A Central State University student was jailed after a brawl on the Wilberforce University campus in which eight students from both schools were injured, authorities said. Greene County sheriff's deputies were dispatched to a gymnasium on the Wilberforce campus at 12:30 a.m. Saturday and reported an "out-of-control" fist fight involving at least 400 students, according to sheriff's department records.

The university campuses are across the street from each other in this southwest Ohio community. Wilberforce campus security chief Edsel Wilson said the melee apparently started when some Central State students crashed a party at the Wilberforce gym. Wilson said none of the injuries was serious. The injured students were treated at Greene Memorial Hospital. Their names weren't released.

Hearing to determine possible rate hike

By Stacy Goldheimer
Lantern staff writer

A hearing is being held today to determine whether Columbus Southern Power will be allowed to put a temporary 28.4 percent rate increase into effect.

A restraining order is now in effect pending a judge's decision about the rate hike.

Columbus Southern Power filed for the rate increase, which would add $16.21 to the average monthly bill, on March 1.

The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, the company which determines the rate of increase, had 275 days to review the rate increase application, said Tom Holliday, public affairs information manager for Columbus Southern Power.

But the PUCO did not review the application before the deadline on Jan. 2, Holliday said.

"PUCO delayed in addressing the rate case. That's the first time that's ever happened," he said.

Beth Vandawalker, spokeswoman for the PUCO said, "We were working on a total of five major rate cases at the same time. We needed to take time and make the best decision for everyone."

Holliday said state law permits a utility to put its filed rates into temporary effect pending a commission vote. If the rate hike is voted down, customers will get refunds credited on their next bill.

But the Ohio Consumers' Counsel's William Spratley and Columbus City Attorney Ronald O'Brien called this law unconstitutional and are suing Columbus Southern Power on behalf of consumers and a Columbus man who is moving out of state.

Because the law does not allow a utility to issue customers a refund check, customers who move are deprived of their refunds, said Ronald O'Brien.

If that provision in the law is declared unconstitutional by the judge, then the state legislature will decide the new law, O'Brien said.

"The judge granted it (a temporary restraining order) on Jan. 10, so we couldn't put our rates into effect," Holliday said.

He said the restraining order will remain in effect until Feb. 7.

Columbus Southern Power has not increased rates since 1983, but the company needs this increase to pay its share in the new Zimmer power plant, Holliday said.

Cincinnati Gas and Electric and Dayton Power and Light also own part of the Zimmer plant and filed for rate increases.

Beth Gianforaro, the Consumers'

Counsel's public information specialist, said if a company is in a financial emergency, the law states that it can file for an emergency rate increase.

"We don't believe that the company is in an emergency. They can wait until the PUCO decides in early spring," Gianforaro said.

The company has made a 15 percent profit for the last five years, she said.

The commission hears testimony in evidentiary hearings in which the companies and parties to the case provide expert witnesses to support why or why not there should be an increase, Vandawalker said.

The commission also hears local hearings in which concerned customers testify about the increase, she said.

The final decision on the amount of the increase will be made by the commission some time in the spring.

Groundhogs are nuisance to organic farm

DOTT, Pa. (AP) - While others fuss over a groundhog called Phil and Sunday's annual winter rite, the harried owners of a vegetable farm say "Bah humbug!" to the rodents.

Underneath the 60-acre organic Flickerville Mountain Farm and Groundhog Ranch in central Pennsylvania, a tiny groundhog-built subway hums with life. Above ground, a natural all-they-can-eat salad bar offers a groundhog paradise.

That's fine for the wildlife, not so fine for the humans who own the place.

"I wish people would stop doting on the little (expletive)," said one owner, Ward Sinclair. "They do massive damage here."

Groundhog Day as celebrated in Punxsutawney, 125 miles northwest of DOTT, marks the animal's emergence from hibernation. If the critter sees its shadow, tradition says that indicates six more weeks of winter.

"We've never seen a groundhog here on Groundhog Day and don't care to," Sinclair said.

The farm is thick with groundhogs. The property is punctured with entrances to their subterranean tunnels.

Cass Peterson, 42, like Sinclair a former reporter for The Washington Post and the farm's other owner, compares it to a city subway. "The subterranean tunnels must be like the Washington Metro system," Peterson said.

There's no subway map for these creatures, of course. But it's easy to imagine a Red Line that stops at tomatoes, radishes and beets. A Green Line connecting celery, beans and lettuce. And an Orange Line linking carrots to squash.

Sinclair, 58, tried to trace the tunnels last July 4 by dropping smoke bombs in the openings.

Efforts later to trap the animals yielded just 14 groundhogs in two months.

A MESSIANIC RESPONSE TO BRADLEY SMITH
As Messianic Jews, (Jewish believers in Jesus), we are appalled but not surprised at the anti-Jewish "revisionist history" being propagated by Bradley Smith and his cohorts. Throughout history, elements have continually risen up with the express desire of doing harm to the Jewish people.

We must never forget that an attack on the Jewish people is viewed in the Bible as an attack on God Himself, "...and he who touches you touches the pupil of His eye." However, our responsibility is not to seek revenge but rather to do as the Messiah did. We are to uncover the sins of the people, call for genuine repentance and to pray for our enemies.

'Execution expert' not engineer

By Mark Houser
Lantern staff writer

Fred A. Leuchter, Jr., the man Bradley Smith called "America's leading execution expert" in his controversial "Holocaust revisionist" advertisement, has admitted he is not a registered professional engineer.

Leuchter is the author of the "Leuchter Report," which Smith uses in his advertisement as evidence that no execution gas chambers existed in Auschwitz.

The Lantern's decision Jan. 23 to publish, as an editorial, an advertisement written by Smith, director of The Committee for Open Debate on the Holocaust, has resulted in widespread protest in the community. The advertisement claimed the Nazis had no plan to exterminate the Jews.

In a consent agreement signed June 11, 1991, by Leuchter and J. Harry Parker, chairman of the Massachusetts Board of Professional Engineers and Land Surveyors, Leuchter agreed to "... immediately cease and desist from representing myself to be an engineer. . . ."

The case was prosecuted by the Middlesex County, Mass., district attorney's office in response to Leuchter's practicing engineering without a license, according to Joelle Stein, legal counsel for the board.

Numerous attempts to reach Leuchter at his residence have been unsuccessful.

In Leuchter's defense, Smith said that Leuchter is under no legal obligation to register himself because his field of engineering is not in the construction industry. He also said that over 50,000 unregistered engineers are legally practicing in Massachusetts.

However, Stein denied Smith's claims and added that the board registers many engineers besides those in construction, including mechanical, chemical and geotechnical engineers.

"If you call yourself an engineer or are doing anything that looks like engineering (in Massachusetts), then you have to be registered," she said.

In the signed agreement, Leuchter also agreed to stop distributing any reports in which he gave engineering opinions, "... specifically but not limited to 'An Engineering Report on the Alleged Execution Gas Chambers at Auschwitz, Birkenau, and Majdanek,'" also known as the "Leuchter Report."

Smith says that this does not prohibit the Institute for Historical Review, a "Holocaust revisionist" organization with which Smith has been connected, from distributing the report. Only Leuchter himself is prohibited, he said.

Two editions of the "Leuchter Report" are available from the Institute of Historical Review, a revisionist group with anti-semitic themes, one for $10 and one for $20.

Smith said that Leuchter was a victim of a political attack and dismissed the Massachusetts case as "credentialism."

"There are probably holes in the (Leuchter) report, but I don't know what they are because no ("orthodox") scholars dare to expose them for fear that they will discover other claims to be accurate."

In an earlier interview, Smith had told the Lantern that he never claimed to be a scholar and that he did not consider it his responsibility to insure the accuracy of claims made in his advertisement. According to Smith, his sole job is to promote awareness of "Holocaust revisionist" literature and questions of validity should be handled by scholars.

In any case, Smith said, Leuchter intended to register with the board soon.

But Stein said that she personally had no recollection of Leuchter's registering with the board in the seven months since he signed the agreement.

The "Leuchter Report" was originally contracted by Ernst Zundel, a Canadian "Holocaust revisionist." It was used as part of Zundel's defense in a 1987 trial, brought before the Ontario Court of Appeals, in which he was accused of publishing "false news" about the Holocaust. Consequently, on May 13, 1988, Zundel was convicted and sentenced to a nine-month jail term.

Union will host 19th annual fair

By Tony Reynolds
Lantern staff writer

The recession may have hurt many job prospects, but at least one OSU administrator still believes that students searching for a job have a good chance of finding one.

The trick is to check out the Ballrooms of the Ohio Union Monday and Tuesday at the 19th annual Minority Job Fair, sponsored by the Office of Minority Affairs.

"I don't want to believe the prospects are as dismal as they are predicting," said Ruth Russell, director of recruitment and placement for the Office of Minority Affairs.

Seventy companies attending this year's job fair range from Airbourne Express to the Whirlpool Corporation. Each company will have representatives available to talk to and interview students.

The job fair's first session starts at 10 a.m. today and is open to all students until it closes at 4 p.m. The second session, on Tuesday, is only open for students who scheduled interviews in advance registration.

The job fair is not just open to minorities, Russell said. "I wish more students would take advantage of it."

Russell said the job fair brings prospective employers to the students in an environment that gives the student an advantage in the interviewing process. "Students should think of it in terms of the companies being on their turf," she said.

Victor Mora, director of minority graduate students development and Hispanic affairs, stressed that students need to be prepared to interview with potential employers at the job fair.

Hispanic students, like any other group, have a lot to contribute, Mora said. He added that hispanic students who are bilingual should market those skills to prospective employers.

"We're in a very competitive environment in the U.S., and the U.S. is in a very competitive environment globally," Mora said, explaining that bilingual skills are in demand by employers.

"Students need to have a resume that's clear in objectives outlining their skills and abilities," he said. "In terms of interviews, they must have a clear idea of their goals."

Russell echoed Mora's sentiments. "Students need to present themselves in a very professional manner," she said. "Be informed and study the companies you want to interview with."

There are employer profiles, resume information, job announcements, job newsletters and much more information in the Personal And Career Exploration office on the fourth floor of the Ohio Union, said Jenny Finnell, office librarian.

African American pilot's stamp wanted

OXFORD (AP) — During February, the month dedicated to celebrating the history of African Americans, a group of Miami University students is pressing its campaign for a commemorative stamp to honor a pioneer aviator.

For the past two years, a half dozen students have been researching the life of Bessie Coleman, who they say was the first black person in the world to become a licensed pilot.

"This story deserves to be told," said Anita Marbury, a senior at Miami. "So we plan to distribute packets of information to schools, museums, libraries and women's and pilots' associations."

Ms. Coleman was born in Texas in 1893. She left a job as a manicurist in Chicago in 1921 to learn to fly in France. She returned to the U.S. to lecture and barnstorm across the country until she died in a crash in Florida in 1926.

The students want Ms. Coleman to join the ranks of the 28 other black achievers who have been featured on a U.S. postage stamp. Booker T. Washington was the first, more than a half-century ago. Educator and civil rights activist W.E.B. DuBois became the 28th on Friday.

The book "I Have a Dream" contains a synopsis on all 28 stamps featuring African Americans and includes the 18 most recent stamps. It went on sale Saturday at most large post offices for $17.95.

It was April 7, 1940, that educator Booker T. Washington became the first black person featured on an American stamp.

Washington, the found of Tuskegee Institute, also is the only black person honored twice on a stamp. A 1956 issue marking the 100th anniversary of his birth, showed the log cabin where he was born. The 1940 stamp featured his portrait.

DuBois, who in 1895 became the first African American to earn a doctorate from Harvard University, was one of the founders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

As author of the book "The Souls of Black Folk" and editor of the NAACP's periodical, DuBois became one of the most influential spokesmen in the movement for full equality for blacks in the early 1900s.

He died in 1963 at age 95 after immigrating to Ghana and spending his last years advocating the spread of socialism.

Other black Americans honored on stamps include educator and agricultural pioneer George Washington Carver, civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., abolitionists Frederick Douglass and Harriet Tubman, entertainers W.C. Handy, Scott Joplin and Duke Ellington, and sports celebrities Jackie Robinson, Jesse Owens and Roberto Clemente.

Budget proposals reflect representatives' early plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ohio Rep. John Kasich has been unhappy with the federal budget for a long time. But this year he's all smiles.

Kasich, R-Columbus, was on the receiving end of many wisecracks after he put together his own federal budgets with cuts that his fellow Republicans called impossible and unrealistic.

But this year he and three GOP cronies put together a budget proposal that swayed the White House.

President Bush's budget director, Richard Darman, told the House Budget Committee last week that the spending requests sent to Congress were influenced by Kasich and Tom Delay, R-Tex.; John Miller, R-Wash.; and Rick Santorum, R-Pa.

"We moved the administration," Kasich said.

Bush proposes cutting defense costs by eliminating $50 billion in spending authority over five years. The four congressmen proposed targeting the same weapons programs for a $54 billion cut.

Various Democrats have called for cuts ranging from $100 billion to $210 billion over five to seven years, and Republican Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas has suggested slashing the defense budget by $74 billion over five years.

Kasich said he and the others pitched their figures to the White House in November when "there was no figure out there."

"There was no benchmark," he said.

Other suggestions from Kasich's earlybird budget also showed up in the administration document.

In the Medicare area, Bush proposed a "means test" to make couples earning more than $125,000 pay more for the optional Part B insurance. The earlybird budget made the same proposal but suggested a threshold of $100,000.

Kasich noted that the White House also used the exact language of the congressmen's plan to make it easier for states to set up workfare programs.

The president's budget proposals are just an opening bid in a months-long process.

Budgets are shaped by Congress, and committees dominated by Democrats write the spending bills.

Spark plug plant workers negotiate contract

TOLEDO (AP) — Employees at two Champion Spark Plug plants will continue working under a contract that expired over the weekend, the company announced Saturday.

Negotiations between the Toledo-based company and the United Auto Workers adjourned at 11:10 p.m. Friday, 50 minutes before the contract expired, the company said in a news release.

Talks were to resume Wednesday.

"The company agreed to allow employees to work under terms and conditions of the expired contract for a short period of time in order to attempt to resolve the current impasse in negotiations," said William Basedow, Champion's employee relations director.

A telephone at the United Auto Workers office in Toledo went unanswered Saturday night.

The union wouldn't accept a proposed health-care plan that would require workers to help pay for benefits, said Carl Plesnicher, vice president of employee relations for Cooper Industries, Champion's parent company.

The union also declined to negotiate separately for two plants. The talks involve 150 people at a plant in Cambridge, Ohio, and another 450 in Burlington, Iowa.

Champion's proposed medical plan includes a $150 annual deductible for each family member and requires families to pay 20 percent of most expenses above that, to a maximum of $1,500 per year for an individual or $3,000 for a family.

OSU men volleyballers win one, lose two others

By Holly O'Leary

Lantern sports writer

The OSU men's volleyball team recorded one win and two losses in weekend action.

Ohio State beat the Penn State Nittany Lions for the first time in seven years on Thursday night in St. John Arena, but then traveled to Ft. Wayne, Ind., only to lose to them and the University of Southern California in the IPFW Invitational on Friday and Saturday.

Thursday's two and a half hour, 15-13, 10-15, 6-15, 15-9, 15-9 win marked the first victory over Penn State for OSU Coach Pete Hanson, who took over the helm of the Buckeyes in 1985.

Hanson said he was very happy to have finally posted a win against the Nittany Lions but was disappointed with the level of intensity that his players showed.

"Instead of coming out in game two with the attitude of beating them in three, we came out flat," Hanson said. "We sat back on our heels and stopped playing."

After struggling in game three Hanson looked to his bench to make some changes on the court.

Freshman right-side hitter Steve Potter was the spark that ignited the Buckeyes offense and got the team back on track.

Potter came through for the Buckeyes during crucial points and led his team in the fifth game of rally scoring.

"This is one of the greatest wins I've ever had," Potter said.

Hanson said Potter did a nice job on the court. "Steve gives us a lot of production out of that position," Hanson said. "He is a solid person mentally and plays with his head in the game."

Mike Terpstra posted a game high 19 kills for the Buckeyes followed by Eliot Winer and Steve Potter who had 15 and 8 kills respectively.

Hanson said he hoped Thursday's win would give his team confidence as they headed into Friday's match against the University of Southern California.

The Trojans, ranked in the top five in the country, proved to be too much for the Buckeyes to handle. Ohio State was defeated in three games 15-11, 15-3, 15-13.

OSU Assistant Coach Tim Embaugh said lack of ball control and terrible serving led to the Buckeye loss.

"Our passing was bad," Embaugh said. "If we can't get the ball to the setter and give our middles some swings we won't be able to win the big games."

In the consolation round of the tournament on Saturday, the Buckeyes had to face the Nittany Lions for the third time in two weeks.

Again, it was another five-game battle, but this time the Nittany Lions prevailed 16-14, 8-15, 15-8, 12-15, 16-17.

The Buckeyes were led by Terpstra with 31 kills and an impressive .393 hitting percentage and Brandt Kleinschmidt with 11 kills.

The Buckeyes, with a 5-4 record on the season, will head to New Jersey to play in the Golden Dome Invitational on Friday and Saturday.

Buckeyes beat Michigan 68-58 Sunday

By Scott Kendrick

Lantern sports writer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. -- Everybody seemed as if they were ready for this big game. The 13,609 spectators in Crisler Arena were psyched up, the national television audience was ready and the 15th-ranked Michigan Wolverines were anxious to prove they were a Big Ten contender.

But the visitors were the most prepared when game time came around, as the 10th-ranked Ohio State Buckeyes defeated Michigan, 68-58, here Sunday afternoon.

The win put the Buckeyes back into a tie with Indiana, who lost 76-60 to Michigan State Saturday.

Jim Jackson led the Buckeyes (14-3, 6-1 in the Big Ten) with 22 points and 9 rebounds. Mark Baker added 16 points, Lawrence Funderburke 12, and Chris Jent 10.

Michigan's (12-5, 4-4) top four scorers were freshmen Jalen Rose, with 15 points, Juwan Howard, with 9, and Chris Webber and Jimmy King, who both finished with 8 points.

In an ugly, turnover-filled first half, the Buckeyes jumped out to an early 6-4 lead courtesy of three Michigan turnovers in the first two minutes.

After a TV timeout the Buckeyes went on a 8-2 run over a four and a half-minute span, that was finalized by a Jamaal Brown steal and breakaway slam dunk, that put the Buckeyes up 14-6 and effectively took the vocal-Michigan crowd out of the game.

The Buckeyes didn't stop there. They forced more Michigan turnovers and capitalized on missed shots to extend the lead to 24-9 with 2:57 to play in the first half.

The frustrated Wolverines put together a couple of baskets in the final minutes of the first half, but after missing a key opportunity at the very end of the half, Michigan's Rose could only kick the press table in disgust as the Wolverines trudged to the locker room trailing 28-13.

Michigan shot only 26 percent in the first half, while the Buckeyes were forcing 18 turnovers.

"We went out and tried to do things too quickly," said Michigan Head Coach Steve Fisher. "We tried to score 20 points in five minutes, ... and it doesn't work that way."

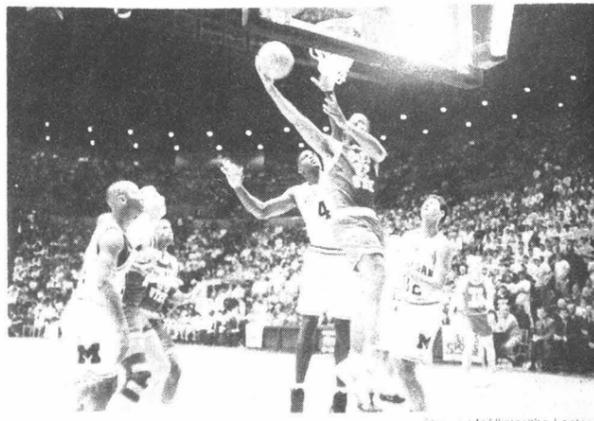

"Our inability to use good judgment on conversion opportunities led to a lot of those turnovers," Fisher said.

The Buckeye lead could have been much bigger, but Ohio State also shot poorly, making only 42 percent from the field.

Michigan started hitting its shots in the beginning of the second half. It was another Michigan guy with the last name of Howard who tried to key the Wolverine comeback. Juwan, not Heisman Trophy winner Desmond, started the Wolverines off by scoring Michigan's first seven points in the initial four minutes of the half.

The Buckeyes matched Howard

OSU junior forward Jim Jackson works his way around Michigan freshman forward Chris Webber en route to two of his team-high 22 points.

score for score and actually extended their lead to 36-20 after a 17-foot-jump shot by Mark Baker.

Ohio State kept pouring it on, going on a 12-6 run to go up 22 points with 12:48 to play in the game.

It was at that point that the Wolverines started making a move.

A layup by Webber cut the lead to 15 and helped Michigan's famed, freshman "Fab 5" to feed off of the crowd and start a 12-2 run that cut the lead to 57-52 with 2:43 to play.

Rose started the spurt with six quick points, senior Kirk Taylor hit a 3-pointer and freshman Ray Jackson added a layup and a free throw in the run.

The Wolverines looked confident, but the Buckeyes let the air out of their bubble on the next play.

After a second missed free throw by Funderburke with 2:18 to go, OSU's Jackson slipped by Webber and tipped the ball in.

"We've got cut-outs (film) showing him doing that against everybody," Fisher said. "It's plays like that that make a difference."

"We needed something, and Jackson made it happen for us," said OSU Head Coach Randy Ayers.

"It seemed like our All-American pulled us out of another one," Ayers said. "From that point we were able to regroup, we got our composure and were able to finish it out at the end."

Lady Bucks post sweep over 'Michigans'

By Tony Phillips

Lantern sports writer

Home sweet home.

That's what the OSU women's basketball team has to be saying to themselves after winning two games at home this weekend and snapping out of a five-game losing streak.

Ohio State (9-8, 3-4 in the Big Ten) returned to the friendly confines of St. John Arena and beat Michigan 73-56 on Friday night and Michigan State 68-60 on Sunday afternoon.

OSU guard Averill Roberts said the team knew it was important to get back on the winning track this weekend. "The coaches stressed that this weekend was important. They said it was up to us...it depended on if we wanted to turn things around or just continue losing," Roberts said.

In Friday's game, the Buckeyes' good pressure defense helped them coast to their win over the Wolverines.

Ohio State, who had failed to sustain defensive pressure for a full game during its losing streak, held Michigan to only 38.9 percent shooting from the field.

"We thought it was a good team win for us. Our pressure defense has returned for more than a 15 or 20 minute time period," OSU Coach Nancy Darsch said.

OSU forward Erica Floyd held Michigan's leading scorer Trish Andrew (19.7 points per game) to only 10 points on five of 13 shooting from the field.

Michigan Coach Bud VanDeWege was impressed with Ohio State's play. "Let's give credit where credit is due. They came out and played fabulous defense. They played very aggressive. This was the most aggressive Big Ten game we've had all year," VanDeWege said.

Offensively, the Buckeyes committed a season low 15 turnovers.

Darsch said she credits point guard Audrey Bury for that statistic. "She may have had her best game of her career," Darsch said.

Ohio State scored many of its points off of transition baskets.

Roberts, who led all scorers with 21 points, said the team had been practicing hard on its transition offense in practice and it helped them during the game.

Floyd scored 14 points for the Buckeyes, mostly from the inside.

Darsch said she was pleased that someone else besides Roberts and Nikki Keyton could pick up some of the scoring load. "It's nice to be able to have this kind of a win without one of our leading scorers being involved," Darsch said. Keyton, who came into the game averaging 14.1 points per game, only scored six points.

The Wolverines (5-11, 1-6) were led by Jen Nunn's 18 points.

On Sunday, the Buckeyes used a 22-4 first half run to turn an eight-point deficit into a 10-point lead. The Buckeyes never trailed after that and held off a late Michigan State rally to post the victory.

The Buckeyes used an aggressive, attacking offense to get the Spartans into foul trouble.

The Buckeyes took advantage of Michigan State foul trouble by forcing the ball inside and taking advantage of their opportunities at the free-throw line. The Buckeyes made 23 of 28 free throws compared with only 4 of 8 free throws for Michigan State.

Michigan State Coach Karen Langeland said her team's poor defense contributed to its foul trouble.

Darsch said two goals her coaching staff stressed before the game were holding Michigan State under 70 points and outrebounding them for the game. Both goals were accomplished as Michigan State only scored 60 points and was outrebounded 39-29.

Darsch said she was pleased with the team's overall effort even though Michigan State cut a 17-point lead down to six with 1:13 remaining.

"We knew how explosive Michigan State could be, but Averill and Alyshiah (Bond) hit some key free throws for us down the stretch," Darsch said.

The Buckeyes were led by Roberts' 21 points. Keyton had 14 points and Stacie Howard chipped in seven points and six rebounds.

Michigan State was paced by Marie Williams and Marline Ferguson who had 15 and 13 points, respectively.

Langeland praised the Buckeyes after the game. "It's a disappointing loss for us, but you have to give all the credit to Ohio State. They played well," Langeland said.

Win, tie puts OSU icers back into race

By Aaron Buckles
Lantern sports writer

With a win and a tie against the Bowling Green State University Falcons, the OSU ice hockey team skated back into the Central Collegiate Hockey Association playoff hunt.

By winning 5-4 in overtime Friday night at Bowling Green, and skating to a 5-5 tie with the Falcons Saturday at the OSU Ice Rink, the Buckeyes (7-15-4 overall, 4-15-4 in the CCHA) gained three points in the CCHA standings.

Each hockey team gets two points for a win, and one point for a tie. No points are awarded for a loss. The points determine the standings in the CCHA.

With the three points, the Buckeyes' total points in the CCHA increase to 12. Bowling Green (5-15-4, 4-14-4) also has 12 points, but the Falcons are technically still in eighth place by themselves because Ohio State has one more loss in the CCHA.

OSU Head Coach Jerry Welsh said the weekend series against Bowling Green had two positives.

"The points, and the feeling that if you back up from the emotion of the moment right now, we're getting better," Welsh said.

In Friday night's game, with the score tied 4-4 in overtime, OSU right wing Scott Walsh scored the game-winning goal at 1:03.

"I saw (OSU captain Rob) Schriener give me the pass the only place it could have been, and I just shot it," Walsh said.

The Buckeyes got on the scoreboard first when OSU left wing Ron White beat Falcon goalie Will Clarke at 8:41 in the first period. The Buckeyes are now 6-3-3 when they score first.

In the second period with the Falcons ahead 2-1, Walsh pulled back and blasted the puck from the left point into the net at 9:43 to tie the score.

Bowling Green came back with a power-play goal to go ahead again, but OSU right wing Mike Merriman tied the game when he skated into Bowling Green's zone, and knocked the puck in at 14:43.

"I had a clean lane to the net, so I skated to the net, and got lucky," Merriman said.

Bowling Green scored again at 17:18 in the second period, and Ohio State went into the third period down 4-3.

In the third period the Buckeyes came back to tie the game when OSU center David Smith knocked the puck out of the air, and into the net at 9:56.

"(OSU right wing Brian) Loney passed the puck, and it deflected in. I just swatted at it," Smith said.

In Saturday's game, the Buckeyes scored the first goal again when Smith beat Falcon goalie Angelo Libertucci at 10:30 in the first period. Over the weekend, Smith scored three goals, raising his total to 12 for the season.

In the third period with Bowling Green ahead 4-3, OSU right wing Sacha Guilbault scored his second goal of the night when he tied the game by flicking the puck in as the Falcon's goalie fell down.

"I waited until the goalie went down, and I put it up high," Guilbault said.

The Buckeyes took a 5-4 lead in the third period when Schriener smacked in OSU defenseman Greg Beaucauge's blocked shot at 9:14, for a power-play goal, but they couldn't hold on for the win.

With 56 seconds left in the game, Bowling Green co-captain Peter Holmes skated down, and scored.

In overtime neither team scored, and the game ended in a 5-5 tie.

"Three points is a good weekend in our league...." Welsh said. Right now we blew a lead and lost a chance to get two (points) in one night," he said.

"Sure we're disappointed considering we had the lead and all, but we're slowly moving in the right direction," Schriener said.

Over the weekend Welsh said Ohio State improved on its defense, and committed fewer easily converted mistakes.

"We're in ninth place, we could've just quit. We're not going to quit. We want to come back, and turn it all around," Smith said.

Penalties kill Columbus in home performance

By Mark Podolski
Lantern sports writer

The Columbus Chill finished a disappointing weekend with a dismal 5-2 loss to the Louisville Icehawks Sunday at the Ohio State Coliseum Fairgrounds.

Playing in front of 5,865 fans in a league-leading 14th sellout, the Chill was unable to get into a flow because of constant penalties. Columbus was whistled for 16 penalties during the game, including a stretch in which center Len Soccio was called for six in a row.

Chill Coach Terry Ruskowski said this was one of the worst games his team has played this season.

"We have to play with a little more enthusiasm than we did today," Ruskowski said. "Today was probably our worst performance in a long time."

"(This game) was ridiculous," Ruskowski said. "We didn't play smart at all. We just took unnecessary, stupid penalties."

From the getgo, the Chill (18-21-7) never posed a threat to Louisville (20-20-6).

Icehawk center Chris Smith opened the scoring 8:07 into the first period when he slapped one past Chill goalie Alain Harvey for a 1-0 lead.

Midway through the second period, Louisville increased its lead to 3-0. The Chill's own version of Wayne Gretzky, center Trent Kaese, then got Columbus on the board with a hard slap shot that bounced off Icehawk goalie Chris Clifford, went over his head and slid slowly into the net.

Kaese, who joined the team three weeks ago, has scored 25 points (16 goals and nine assists) in only 10 games. Kaese tied a professional hockey record with a hat trick in three straight games (on Jan. 15, 17 and 24). He also has an eight point game this year, the highest scoring game by a single player in the ECHL this season.

After Kaese's goal, Louisville did not let Columbus or the crowd back in the game. Goals by Icehawk right winger Sheldon Gorski and left winger Trevor Buchanan sealed the victory.

Ruskowski said Louisville's defense, which only let the Chill take 24 shots, was the difference in the game.

"Tight checking (by Louisville) is probably the big aspect of it," Ruskowski said. "I thought they checked very well tonight. They held our forwards up today and we couldn't do much out there. As a result of that, we got more frustrated as the game went on and we couldn't handle it."

•Friday night, the Chill traveled to Cincinnati to play the Cyclones and didn't fare much better, losing 7-2. Columbus continued their poor play on the road as their away record dropped to 4-14-1.

•The Chill then returned home Saturday to host Cincinnati, only to lose in an overtime shootout 6-5, despite outshooting the Cyclones 48-36. Columbus did, however, pick up a point in the standings with the overtime loss. Kaese continued his torrid scoring pace by netting four goals, three on the power play opportunity.

•Looking ahead, Columbus begins a critical five game road stretch this Wednesday as they play the Dayton Bombers at Hara Arena. The Chill has only two home contests remaining on their schedule (Feb. 20 vs. Raleigh and Feb. 22 vs. Cincinnati).

Women's swim and dive team defeats Miami

By Kyle Pendleton
Lantern sports writer

The OSU women's swimming and diving team showed Miami University of the Mid-American Conference that Big Ten swimming is a force to be reckoned with.

The meet, held Saturday at Larkins Hall, saw the Buckeyes sweep first place in every event on the way to a 137-115 win.

With three events remaining, Ohio State led 137-84, then swam the final three races for times only.

When the margin in a swim meet reaches the point that victory is certain, the winning team swims exhibition for the remaining events so as to not run up the points, assistant coach Bev Montrella said.

"We knew that the meet was not going to be as challenging as some of the previous weeks," Montrella said. "The team still gave it its all in attempts to better individual times going into the Big Ten Championships."

"The day was special because it was the last home meet for senior Stacia Goff, the leader and motivator of the team," Montrella said.

"It was really sad to be swimming my last races here at Ohio State," Goff said.

Goff, from Walnut Creek, Calif., had two first place finishes for the day in the 200-yard butterfly and 500 freestyle, swam on the winning 200 freestyle relay and was barely beaten by teammate Jennifer Berger, a freshman from Plymouth, Ind., in the 200 freestyle.

After the meet, Miami Coach Dave Jennings commented about how the 200 freestyle really stood out in his mind as the outstanding race of the afternoon.

"The two swimmers involved in that race (Berger and Goff) were real competitors and just showed outstanding form," Jennings said. "I was also impressed with their (Ohio State) breaststroke races."

Freshman Katie Hedman from Alamo, Calif., and freshman Jennifer Clarkson from Dumfries, Va., placed one and two in the 100 and 200 breaststrokes.

Hedman also had the winning time in the 200 individual medley and swam the breaststroke leg of the winning 200 medley relay team.

The 200 medley relay team consisted of Hedman, Clarkson, junior Erika Cottrell from Crawfordsville, Ind., and junior Sunny Lambson from Salt Lake City.

Lambson also had a first in the 200 backstroke and a second in the 100 backstroke behind sophomore Holly Humphrey from Crawfordsville, Ind.

Humphrey was a four-event winner for Ohio State with firsts in the 100 backstroke, 50 freestyle, 500 freestyle and 200 freestyle relay.

"Some of our swimmers had more in them than others," Montrella said. "But as a whole team, we are exactly where we want to be going into the Big Ten Championships."

Ohio State now has a week off to prepare for the Big Ten Championships, held March 13, 14 and 15 in Indianapolis.

Welcome to American Express

You've Just Been Cleared For Take Off.

You can get a lot more out of life when you set your sights a little higher. Which is what applying for the American Express® Card is all about. When you get the Card, it's easier to do the things you want to do. And with the student savings that come along with it, you can do even more.

Fly roundtrip on Continental for less than $100 each way.

Student Cardmembers receive four travel certificates. They can be used to fly anywhere Continental Airlines flies in the 48 contiguous United States. Two for the school year, and two for the summer.*

Depending on where you fly, each school year travel certificate is good for $129 or $189 roundtrip—and each summer travel certificate is good for $149 or $199 roundtrip.

Savings that upgrade your lifestyle.

As a student Cardmember you get more than great travel savings. You also save money on everything from clothing to long distance phone calls. All for a $55 annual fee.

Obviously, savings like these say a lot about the value of the Card. And having the Card will say a lot about you. For one thing it says you have a handle on what you spend, so you don't have to carry over a balance. It also says you're smart enough not to pay interest charges that can really add up.

So take a few minutes now to call (have your bank address and account number ready), and apply for the American Express Card.

With all that the Card offers you, not even the sky is the limit.

Plays to deal with controversy

By Teri McIntire
Lantern arts writer

"Trifles," a play written by Susan Glaspell, under the direction of Lori Abbatepaolo and "Statements After an Arrest Under the Immorality Act," a play written by Athol Fugard and under the direction of Allan Munro will be presented by the OSU Theatre Department Feb. 4-8 in Mount Hall.

"Trifles" is a 25-minute play about a woman who has killed her husband. "It has been called one of the finest one-act plays ever written," Abbatepaolo said.

"It is not just about the farmer and his wife, but about how they come to the conclusion of who committed the murder and why," Abbatepaolo said. Authorities come to investigate the murder, and two women are with them. The women attempt to figure out who committed the murder by examining certain "trifles" they find lying around the house.

"The play will spark debate because the history of women hasn't changed much," Abbatepaolo said. "The play explores the isolation women feel when disconnected from the public world and the laws governing that world," she said.

"Statements After an Arrest Under the Immorality Act" is set in apartheid South Africa. The governing white minority regime separates the races by creating a law which makes love across the color line illegal. "It brings legal issue into a love issue," Munro said.

The first part of the play deals with a white woman and a black man who fall in love "illegally." The tensions created between people in that type of a relationship are explored.

The second part of the play shows the political ramifications the two lovers must deal with.

"Statements" is a play that deals with people from two different cultural backgrounds, on stage," Munro said. "There is an African-American tradition and an American-European tradition."

Munro, originally from South Africa, is white. While directing this production, he worked closely with Mikell Pinkney, a director who works with African theater, to get different styles of acting dealing with African-American traditions.

Munro and Abbatepaolo are student directors studying for their doctorates. Their goal, "is not only academics, but to become scholars, teachers and professional theater people," Munro said.

"Trifles" and "Statements After an Arrest Under the Immorality Act" will be presented in Mount Hall Feb. 4, at 7:30, and Feb. 5-8 at 8 p.m. There will be a matinee performance Feb. 8 at 2 p.m. Tickets are available at the Ohio State Theatre Box Office in Drake Union for $5.25.

Auditions to begin for Spring plays

By Teri McIntire
Lantern arts writer

The Ohio State Theatre Department will be holding auditions for its Spring Quarter theater productions Tuesday through Saturday at Drake Union.

Auditions are open to all students, not just theater majors. If you are interested in the theater and how it works, but you don't want to be on stage, there are also backstage positions available.

Positions on the stage crew, costume crew, set construction and run crew are available, and class credit is given for work in these areas.

Plays and audition times are listed below.

Auditions for Aristophanes' "Lysistrata" are Thursday and Friday from 3-5 p.m. in room 2072. The audition requires a reading from the script.

Auditions for Heiner Muller's "Quartet" are Thursday from 3-5 p.m. and 7-9 p.m., and Friday 3-5 p.m. in room 2068. Auditioners should prepare a two-minute classical or modern/post-modern monologue and be familiar with the script.

The audition times for "The Actor's Nightmare" by Christopher Durang, "The Measures Taken" by Bertolt Brecht, "The Dumbwaiter" by Harold Pinter and "Pvt. Wars" by James McClure are Tuesday 1-3 p.m. at the Stadium II Theatre, and Wednesday 5-7 p.m. in room 101. Auditioners should prepare a one-minute monologue or be prepared to read from a script.

For more information contact the Theatre Department in Drake Union.

New Kids no Millis

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — New Kids on the Block is interrupting its tour Down Under to take on claims of lip-synching.

The group has requested a one-day delay of a Feb. 6 concert in Brisbane, publicist Dianna O'Neill said Saturday.

"This postponement will allow them to return to Los Angeles and tackle head-on the accusations concerning their vocal contributions to their albums and in their live performances," she said.

New Kids arrived in Melbourne on Friday amid allegations they only sang about 20 percent of the music on the 1988 album Hangin' Tough.

"It is so obvious that it's us singing on the record, that it's totally ridiculous," said New Kid Donnie Wahlberg. "We really shouldn't even have to defend that."

In November 1990, Milli Vanilli had to give up a Grammy after the pop duo were discovered to be lip-synching.

Country jamboree

VICTORVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Country stars Clint Black, Ronnie Milsap and Kathy Mattea helped Roy Rogers mark his 60th anniversary in show business.

They jammed Tuesday during taping of a special "Hot Country Nights" to air Sunday on NBC-TV.

"It was our first time singing it together, the three of us, on national television," Rogers' son said Friday.

from the Roy Rogers Museum 80 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

Rogers began singing in 1931. He made about 90 movies and 100 half-hour television shows.

On his hit album Tribute, released last year, Rogers was accompanied by Willie Nelson, Randy Travis, Ricky Van Shelton, the Oak Ridge Boys and Black.

"It's been a really neat year for him," his son said. "The album sold 300,000 copies, and he and Clint have been nominated for a country duet Grammy Award."

"He and Clint will sing it on the Grammy show in New York. There's not too many 80-year-old guys doing that kind of thing."

Yeltsin loves N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — While her husband made his debut at the United Nations, Naina Yeltsin took in Broadway, with house seats at the quintessential American musical "The Will Rogers Follies."

The Russian president's wife looked a bit bewildered at the start of the show Friday night. It features long-legged showgirls in bodysuits flecked with cow spots, a few bare breasts, a dog act and a lot of lariat.

Mrs. Yeltsin was accompanied by Margaret Rockefeller, the wife of philanthropist David Rockefeller, and the wives of three Russian dignitaries.

An interpreter sat behind her, translating every line, lyric and joke.

Keith Carradine, who stars in the Tony Award-winning show as "America's best-loved humorist," may or may not have endeared himself to Mrs. Yeltsin when he told a few jokes involving Russians.

"The Russians don't have income tax," he said. "Of course, until recently they didn't have any income either."

GOD'S WORD

Psalm 1 Blessed is the man who does not walk in the counsel of the wicked or stand in the way of sinners or sit in the seat of mockers. But his delight is in the law of the LORD, and on his law he meditates day and night. He is like a tree planted by streams of water, which yields its fruit in season and whose leaf does not wither. Whatever he does prospers. Not so the wicked! They are like chaff that the wind blows away. Therefore the wicked will not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the assembly of the righteous. For the LORD watches over the way of the righteous, but the way of the wicked will perish. (NIV)

Prov 2:1-6 My son, if you accept my words and store up my commands within you, turning your ear to wisdom and applying your heart to understanding, and if you call out for insight and cry aloud for understanding, and if you look for it as for silver and search for it as for hidden treasure, then you will understand the fear of the LORD and find the knowledge of God. For the LORD gives wisdom, and from his mouth come knowledge and understanding. (NIV)

Wexner Center show disappointing

The Stuart Pimsler Dance & Theatre group premiered "A Far Cry From Home" this weekend at the Wexner Center for the Visual Arts. It proved to be a far cry from fabulous. Seven performers danced, acted, and sang in this interpretive piece that explored the importance of home and family through the eyes of artistic director and performer Stuart Pimsler.

It was unfortunate and disappointing that this piece was inconsistent and unclear considering that the Wexner Center actually paid for this performance.

According to a press release, "A Far Cry From Home" presents the intimacy of individual diary excerpts from such characters as a real estate agent, a home-owner, a Russian immigrant, a distressed ballerina and a crazed housewife."

Unfortunately, this performance was so interpretive that these facts were not clearly understood, which caused unnecessary confusion and less enjoyment.

The performers portrayed fear, anger, sadness and love through the use of vocal and physical expression. Sparse humor gave the audience a break from the intensity of the piece and a much-needed common ground of understanding and interpretation.

The piece jumped from topic to topic, using a few previously performed scenarios written by Pimsler and company. One of the performers came closer to the audience explaining, in context, that plagiarism was not committed.

This evening-length work was created specifically for the Wexner Center Performance Space, in the basement of the Wexner Center.

The contemporary construction of the dance space allowed members of the audience to feel surrounded and involved in the performance.

The company creatively utilized the dance space in its entirety, including the catwalks above the heads of the audience.

DANCE REVIEW

The sparse scenery and simple costuming gave greater attention and emphasis to the dialogue and movement of the performers, which was often misdirected.

The performers did seem confident and cohesive as a group. Their talent was lost in a piece unworthy of their skill and experience.

Stuart Pimsler Dance & Theater was founded by Pimsler in 1978 in New York City, where it was based for the first five years until relocating to Columbus.

In those 13 years, the company has performed over 30 works throughout the United States, London, England and Switzerland.

Performer Suzanne Costello has been with the company since the beginning and has been its associate artistic director since 1981.

Other performers include Janet Slifka, Kimm Marks, Philip Whiteis, Brenda Divelbliss, Susannah Hewson and Katherine Burkman. Burkman is a professor of English at Ohio State, where she teaches drama.

Columbus Symphony Notes

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will perform a special program of favorite Valentine's Day music at the next Pops Series concert under the direction of Principal Pops Conductor, Peter Nero Feb. 7 and 8 at 8 p.m. in the Ohio Theatre.

"Music From the Heart" highlights include "My Funny Valentine", "Cheek to Cheek" and "MacArthur Park."

"All of the music will basically be romantic in nature," said Lisa Dush, public relations manager of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra.

Nero has recently produced two new albums; a Concord Jazz album exploring the music of Duke Ellington and a recording featuring his arrangements of current Broadway hits. Nero will conduct, as well as perform on the piano along with bassist Michael Barnett and drummer Steve Pemberton.

Single tickets to this event are $13-$30, not including a $1 per single-ticket theater-restoration charge.

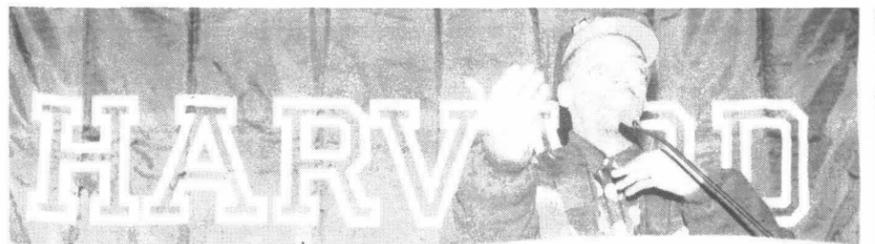

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra and the Columbus Symphony Orchestra Community Gospel Choir will present the fourth annual Gospel Music Concert Sunday, Feb. 9 at 7 p.m. in the Ohio Theatre.

Leslie B. Dunner, associate conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the performance.

The program includes a tribute to Billie Holiday and a medley of traditional gospel songs.

Dunner is the music director of the Dearborn Symphony Orchestra and the music advisor for the Harlem Festival Orchestra. He is also principal guest conductor of the renowned Dance Theatre of Harlem.

Tickets are $12 in advance and $14 the day of the concert. Compiled by Rich Maple.

Columbus band offers music diversity

By Sam Gedert
Lantern arts writer

Columbus has a wide range of bands to choose from. Whether your interests are alternative or hard rock music, you can usually find your preference at a bar near campus.

One type of music that is not covered much by local bands is dance rhythm and blues. One group trying to change this situation is L.O.T. in The Pocket. The "L.O.T." stands for "Living on Top."

Band members Andre "Dre" Guess (lead vocals) and Tony "Nasty" Pulliam (guitar and bass) have played together for about a year. The two got together when Pulliam answered a newspaper ad looking for new musicians, which was placed by Guess.

The band has been playing together since last February.

Kevin S. "K. Luv" Franks joined the band six months after its inception. "I give the band kind of a 90's feel with the rap," Franks said.

Pulliam said the band is still forming and they are always looking for new musicians. "We are looking for people with a dedication to music," he said. Guess said he was looking for someone who is not afraid to give more than themselves on stage.

While the band has written some original songs, the majority of songs it plays live are covers. The band uses three criteria when choosing a song to cover.

The first consideration is how much, as a group, they like a song. Second, the song must mesh well with the band's style. The final factor is how well the song is doing in the charts. Often the band takes a chance by playing a song before it becomes popular, Pulliam said. The band played Prince's "Get On," for example, before it was ever released, Guess said.

Band member Lisa "Lady G" Gentry said the group plans to play more originals in its next show on March 7, at Ruby Tuesday, 1978 Summit St. The band's current list of originals includes its title song, "L.O.T. in The Pocket," "If You Say Yes" and "Good Night."

Describing the band's upcoming show, Frank said "Watch out Columbus, watch out America: here comes the new sound called L.O.T. in The Pocket."

Floor mural

Politically correct decision reversed by area coordinator

A Taylor Tower fifth-floor mural depicting a mermaid was saved from the clutches of political correctness gone mad.

The residents of the floor voted Fall Quarter to have Ariel, the cartoon star of the Disney film "The Little Mermaid," represent them in a mural to be painted in the floor's elevator lobby.

For those who haven't seen the movie, the mermaid Ariel saves the life of, falls in love with and decides she wants to spend the rest of her life with a completely human prince. There are some other important points in the animated film, but, suffice it to say, she gets her way in the end.

Taylor Tower hall director Jeffrey Agnoli approved the mural when it was first brought to him then reversed his decision because of sexist and historically demeaning connotations of mermaids.

Mermaids, apparently, clashed with the Residence and Dining Hall guide lines because they were considered sexually subservient to sailors.

It must also be noted that mermaids were historically manatees. And sailors suffering from hallucinations just thought they were beautiful fish-tailed women.

Residents of the fifth-floor appealed the decision saying Ariel was not depicted in either fashion. They also pointed out the facts that the all-male floor below them was allowed to have a mural depicting Arnold Schwarzenegger, that the movie had been shown in the residence hall twice and that the same Ariel and some of her co-stars had been used in window paintings during Welcome Week.

Willie Young, north area coordinator for Residence and Dining Halls viewed the film with his son - most people say younger brother - and overruled the hall director's decision.

Political correctness, once used to defer the proper amount of respect and decency upon others, has now devolved into gargantuan list of nebulously defined, and viciously enforced, mandates for humanity.

The Law today

Where stands the balance between citizen and officer?

In Kentucky on Thursday a sheriff and one of his deputies were killed by a man they had intended to arrest. He later turned himself in to police in a nearby community.

In Toledo on Saturday a University of Toledo Police Officer was charged with the murder of a 19-year-old student who had been shot 10 to 14 times in the head and back. He had participated in a search for her when her roommate reported her missing last Sunday evening.

Two separate crimes one with an officer as perpetrator and the other with law enforcements officers as victims.

The two incidents identify two crucial societal problems in the United States today: the lack of respect for law enforcement officials and law enforcement officials who are unqualified to have the power of law vested in them.

The average citizen cannot possibly imagine what it is like to be an officer of the law. The risk to life and well-being - combined with an increasingly unappreciative public - makes being in law enforcement one of the more difficult jobs to perform in our society.

But when the very people who are supposed to uphold the law do things like the video-taped beating of Rodney King it is hard to understand why the police feel threatened.

And when a person is a police officer, or is on the inside of any situation, it is hard to understand how it feels to be in the extremely vulnerable position of citizen on the outside when the law doesn't seem to uphold position they are entrusted with.

But when the citizens asking for protection seem to tolerate the very presence of crime, the job of eradicating criminal activity becomes increasingly frustrating.

It should be obvious to any thinking human being that we cannot go on this way and that the old solutions are just not going to work.

Your favorite Buckeye blonde duo is back

Whew! Are we like, tired, or what? It's been a long siege at the Lantern, what with the television cameras and all, but at least it made us keep our roots touched up. That's why you had to go without us last week. That, and the fact that we were out shopping for mascara, blush, eye shadow, spandex, hygiene products...

But now that we've replenished our supplies, we've taken stock of some things besides make-up inventories. For those of you who have started to suffer from blonde withdrawal (is that a new form of birth control?), here are the latest kudos and caca:

Caca to President Bush for his concern with trying to fix other people's economies. Charity is supposed to begin at home. His half-assed attempt to look like the economic saviour is too little, too late -- does he actually think he can get re-elected or what? NOT!

Kudos to the astronauts aboard the space shuttle Discovery. Not every-one can travel 3.3 million miles, return to earth safely, but manage to accidentally eradicate an experiment of several hundred fruit flies with disinfectant. They could have saved the disinfectant and used hair spray. It works for us.

Caca to Warner for offering their cable subscribers "free" premium services to atone for the loss of cable during the Super Bowl. Did they think blondes were so stupid we wouldn't figure out that it was going to be a free preview weekend for Disney, Cinemax and HBO, anyway?

Kudos to Democrat Bill Clinton. He's managed to show good taste by picking two blondes, even if he won't claim one of them. Maybe he'd be interested in a couple of younger ones.

Caca to the company that is marketing condoms for women and charging two bucks each for them. If the FDA approves these as fast as they did silicone implants, we could be looking at safety hearings in a few years. We can see it now... women with plastic migrating through their fallopian tubes, causing the birth rate of future television anchors to skyrocket.

Kudos to the street crews here at Ohio State for their snow clearing. We're so glad to get the opportunity to go to class when the rest of the city is shut down. Our brains need the exercise and at least we don't sink into the snow in our spiked heels.

Caca to Jeffrey Dahmer. He's managed to give blondes a bad name. We can cook much better than he can. We don't make finger sandwiches and we'd rather break men's hearts than boil them.

Kudos to those delivery guys who manage to get past the guard booth on 18th Ave., find the newsroom and bring us food. We need to keep our strength up. After all, men (gentle and otherwise) do prefer blondes.

Caca to the rip-off artists that advertise breast enlargement through hypno-therapy. If it actually worked, the FDA wouldn't be holding these hearings about silicone implants and we'd both look like Morgana (but we'd kiss more selectively).

Kudos to the Democratic presidential candidates for finally bringing issues to the forefront of a campaign. But so far they're neglecting one major one. Discrimination against race, religion and (most of the time) even gender and health insurance are covered, but what about discrimination against hair color? After all, we're only blondes on the outside.

Practical ideas absent from anti-racism rally

Part one of a four-part series

I'm uncomfortable disagreeing with people who I sympathize with; people whose heartfelt, sincere beliefs point the same way as my own.

So it disturbed me that I was uneasy when I left Wednesday night's rally against racism. The idea was a good one: to show that people in the campus area are concerned about bigotry and intolerance. The diverse list of speakers included Jews, women, homosexuals and Greens, among others. But what I hoped to hear was left unsaid.

I'm a pragmatist; a practical person who shuns dogma in favor of workable solutions. As such, I've always been dubious of idealistic but vague answers to seemingly intractable problems. The rally had many of these, and little else. To be fair, encouragement to withstand prejudice was about all the rally could accomplish, and it did that well.

But in the lack of details, of programs, or of anything that suggested that the venting of emotion is not sufficient to kill bigotry, a scourge that has afflicted humanity for at least 5000 years, the rally was distressingly true to form.

To be successful, a political movement must have goals that are clearly defined, humanly attainable, and readily understood. Any group that does not have at least this credibility will fail, no matter how noble its motives.

"Political correctness" was vastly overblown by the media, but the storm did highlight two disturbing points: some anti-bigotry activists seem to expect strong, inflexible punishment for flexibly defined offenses; and some of the demands these activists make are unreasonable and counter-productive. Two examples might illustrate my point.

For lack of clarity, "date rape" stands out. I have never heard it consistently defined. There is no doubt that date rape happens -- some men do take advantage of women they have dated -- but what exactly does "taking advantage" mean? Obviously, if a man uses non-consensual force to have sex with a woman, that is rape. Beyond that, however, the description is murky. I have heard some even say that verbal seduction is a form of date rape.

And beyond that, the oft-spoken assertion that women never lie about rape is just not true. In October, 1989, a white OSU student claimed she had been raped by a black man on the Oval; she later retracted this. During Autumn quarter, 1990, an OSU resident adviser claimed she was attacked outside Stradley Hall; she also later retracted and resigned her position.

If women wonder why many men are wary of the subject of date rape, it's because some of us are afraid of its possible ramifications.

An example of lack of reason is the debate over the lack of black professors. Many black student groups, including "Just Us" at Ohio State in 1989, have demanded that universities hire more black professors until a certain percentage is reached. This would make sense if the shortage was caused by barriers against their hiring.

But that is not the case. To be a professor, a candidate must usually have a PhD. In most fields, blacks earn 1 percent to 4 percent of the PhDs awarded. It would be literally impossible for every college to hire a share of black professors proportionate to its percentage of black students, even if we assumed this was what they needed.

If our goal is the eradication of bigotry, then we must be clear and concise about what that means and what we intend to do. We must remember that when we ask people to look inside themselves, we are making a claim on their time and effort, and if we make this claim we must justify ourselves. We must also remember that if we don't ask people to examine themselves -- if we rely on the law and the courts -- then we will surely fail. The brilliance of Martin Luther King was that he understood this. We can best honor his memory by understanding it ourselves.

The Lantern is an independent, student-written laboratory newspaper published Monday through Friday during the school year, Monday and Thursday during summer quarter (except finals week, legal holidays and university vacations) by the OSU School of Journalism.

The university administration has no control over content; editorials reflect a majority opinion of the Lantern staff. Viewpoints expressed in columns, cartoons and letters are those of individuals and do not necessarily reflect those of the staff.

The newsroom is located in the Journalism Building room 271, 242 W. 18th Ave., Columbus, 43210. The business office, room 281, is open 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Geography neglected as key to understanding

The other day started out as usual. Get up. Go to class. Come home and look at the mail. Get something to... Wait a minute. I received something in the mail from the National Geographic Society (of which I'm a member). My curiosity aroused, I tore at the envelope much as Bart Simpson did when he received his long-awaited spy camera.

When the contents of the envelope fell onto the floor, I eagerly scrambled to pick them up and see what the Society had to say. My excitement (I do get excited when I get mail other than a bill) turned to disappointment as I was read that the United States lags far behind other countries in geographical knowledge. Not that I wasn't aware of this before, but I finally came to a point where I needed a forum to vent my frustration and espouse my views on this this embarrassing fact.

The phrase "Education starts at the home" has been repeated over and over again. Sadly enough, many American parents and children don't know the importance of this saying.

Jim Culver

Fortunately for myself, my parents were wonderful in exposing me to the world in which we live. I recall with fond memories the plethora of times my family would sit around the kitchen table and play educational games. I probably learned more about geography through these games than all my years of schooling added together.

I'm an exception, though. It's all too easy for a parent to put children in front of a T.V. to entertain them. As future parents must make it a point of educating our children in the home; not just in terms of geography, but in other important areas of academia.

O.K., so you didn't get exposure to geography at the home. Surely you'll learn about it in high school. Right? Wrong!

A great number of high schools (mine included) don't have geography requirements. This course of study is lumped together with all the other social sciences. High school students should be required to take a minimum of one geography class, and, upon graduation, should have to take a geography-proficiency exam. But sadly, many, if not most, students skate through high school with a poor understanding of this world.

The geographical-illiteracy problem doesn't remedy itself in college. I'm in my fourth year here at Ohio State and I'm continually amazed at how many college students I've come across who don't know the first thing about the world in which they live.

No, I don't make it a point of my day to go out on the Oval and ask students where Sri Lanka is. But in my casual conversations throughout my college years, I've realized that many, many college students (and the problem is not just here but nationwide) suffer from a lack of knowledge in this discipline.

Why is geography important, you might be asking. It's important because we live in a global society. It's important because, especially now, the earth is relatively peaceful and a better understanding of our world will help maintain this peace and cooperation. It's important because Ameri-centric attitudes hurt our standing in the world arena.

The United States is no longer the preeminent power in the world. We truly do live in a world where every nation matters. An understanding of this world is essential to future progress and success for America.

Listed below are nine geographical locations that have been in the news recently. Try your hand at locating these places on a map. See how geographically literate you are:

1. Iraq; 2. Russia; 3. El Salvador; 4. Kuwait; 5. India; 6. Germany; 7. France; 8. Lebanon; and 9. South Africa.

LETTERS

The Lantern welcomes letters from its readers. Letters may be delivered in person to the newsroom, Room 271 of the Journalism Building or mailed to Samantha G. Haney — Editor, the Lantern, 242 W. 18th Ave., Columbus, Ohio, 43210.

Letters must include the writer's full name, class rank and daytime telephone number.

We ask that letters be concise and legible. Letters of 300 words or less will receive preference. The Lantern reserves the right to edit for length and clarity. Because of space limitations, we cannot publish all letters received.

Basic principles

This letter is in response to Gary Rodger's article that appeared on page eight on Jan. 21, in the Lantern. I wish to state that I could not agree more with his opinion. It is with a deep sense of dread that I have viewed the events unfolding on campus. While I likewise find that the article that prompted this wave of hate is a distortion, at least, of the truth, I find that both sides seem to have forgotten some basic principles. The anti-Semites do have a right, like anyone, to be heard on their views no matter what they have to say. To deny them is to endorse censorship and a state of censorship is a precursor to an oppressive state, as was the case in pre-World War II Germany.

To sum, I find it personally offensive that someone should have the right to decide about what I can hear and learn, and intellectually insulting that I cannot recognize garbage from truth. For those who would seek to influence public policy through censorship, I would ask who gave you that right? Lastly, I find it frightening that someone would politically lobby to curtail free thought, as painful as it can be, it is one of our greatest strengths.

As for those who seem to abuse this right, such as the original author of the article, I think you should continue writing. Not only do you raise awareness through your actions, but you are your own worst enemy.

Dan Ferencz

Tainted images

After reading Jamie Rulli's opinion of Jan. 31, I have become angry enough to respond. Mr. Rulli, when are you going to stop writing your opinions based upon your tainted images that portray society as a group of idiots who can't make judgments for themselves?

You bitch about other people who control society; it seems you never entertain the thought that people control themselves and their own destiny. Maybe people who follow "mainstream society" want to do so. You whine about injustices in society, but did you ever think about what's out there to get for yourself instead of demanding it from someone who worked hard to get what they have? You write (and I use the term very loosely) about "the wonders of our system" and "the rumor (of) . . . the greatest democracy the world has ever known." If you don't like it here, go abroad and breed anti-Americanism and preach anti-democratic principles.

Mr. Rulli, I challenge you to use facts in your "writing," so that your opinions will stand up to criticism. Perhaps this "would widen the scope of political debate" more effectively. I ask you to write in a manner that challenges your readers, rather than telling them that "we can't change this entrenched system." The fact is that we can, although it may take some time. Case in point: Americans noticed that industries polluted and would continue to do so unless regulated, but rather than turning to their dogs and saying, "Yeah, right," they went through the democratic process to change the system. Telling your readers to just say, "Yeah, right," breeds contempt, which seems to go against your motives for writing in the first place.

Outraged answer

I was outraged by the letter written by Kevin Kosar (Jan. 17). I believe he missed the point of Public Enemy's video, "By The Time I Get To Arizona."

He pointed out the irony of the video's purpose. But he failed to point out how a man who preached non-violence, such as Dr. King, was shot in cold blood. Or, do you not consider this ironic act to be violent?

Public Enemy is ultimately saying that we as a community will not allow our black leaders to be killed in vain. Black Americans are going to unite in such a fashion, that if one of our leaders is killed, all of us will have to be killed. And, needless to say, we're not going without a fight.

Word to the wise, Mr. Kosar, and those of you who share his beliefs, you should sooner fear an African-American armed with knowledge over one armed with a gun. Because IGNORANCE, not INTELLIGENCE, incites VIOLENCE.

Elaxis DeGale

Dialogues exist

Tony Reynolds raises several interesting points in his column on Jan. 27. I would like to respond to just one of them. He says to rabbis, "It is hard for the black community to join you when you never invite us to commune with you." But just last month many members of St. Paul African Methodist Episcopal Church were invited to join with congregants at Tifereth Israel for a worship service. Rev. Michael Bean was invited to give the sermon, the choirs of the two congregations sang together and many from both congregations stayed afterward to eat together. Earlier this winter, members of Tifereth Israel were invited to speak, and, again, the choirs sang together. It's my impression that many Jews in this town are eager to dialogue with, work with and commune with African Americans.

Means questioned

I question the sincerity of the Lantern staff whose main goal was to promote an "Educational Arena" for the discussion of Holocaust revisionism. I have always believed that the press is the means to the truth, and that I can count on the press for an almost accurate picture of what is affecting my world. I believe that the most accurate way of presenting the truth about a controversial issue is to entertain a debate, or a forum, in which both parties express their point of view. In a debate, both parties have equal space and time for their opinions to be expressed. What I saw in the Lantern on Friday was at best the Anti-thesis of debate. I did see some type of criticism of Holocaust revisionism and their opinions, however I saw at least five times more space allotted to Brad Smith and his ideas.

I do not criticize the Lantern for printing anyone's opinion, as long as it has some relationship to the truth. However, Brad Smith's article is blatantly full of lies resembling nothing remotely close to the truth.

The damage has already been done. Responsible journalism is no longer the issue. The issue is now revealing Brad Smith for what he is, a modern-day Hitler. Jews, African-Americans, homosexuals, Hispanics, as well as all people who affiliate themselves with justice are Brad Smith's target. We must stop the lies before they are entrenched.

Where's fairness

Aren't journalists supposed to be fair? Aren't journalists supposed to be honest? Aren't journalists supposed to inform the public with as little personal bias as possible? They're supposed to, but at the Lantern, that is not always the case.

Case in point: In the Jan. 23 issue, two front page articles appeared on abortion. One headline contained the term "pro-choice." The other headline brought up the phrase "anti-abortion." If the Lantern calls one side "pro-choice," wouldn't it only be fair to call the other side "pro-life?" After all, pro-choicers want to be called pro-choice and pro-lifers want to be called pro-life, not anti-abortion. Yet, the Lantern permits one group to define their own name, while it imposes an arbitrary, negative name on the other. This is fair, NO! Those who call themselves pro-choice are in fact abortion-on-demand advocates (pro-abortion-on-demand). They prefer to be called pro-choice of course because it makes their opposition appear anti-choice. In the same way, those on the pro-life side like being called pro-life because it implies that the other side is anti-life.

The solution is to be consistent. Either call each group the name they choose to be called, pro-life or pro-choice. Or else define these groups by calling them, pro-abortion (on demand) and anti-abortion (on demand). That is the only fair and honest way to do it. Anything else is slanted and biased. A journalist should report the news as it is, not as he/she wants it to be.

Ghostwriters?

Kudos to the ads for Roz Roemer's Great Shape Fitness Studio, which appear frequently in the Lantern. Before the advent of these advertisements, the most alluring babe in the paper was the Stone Fox dancer who leans over the barstool. Many helpless Buckeye men were being suckered into such unproductive, self-destructive behaviors as sitting on their duffs, guzzling liquor and craning their necks to watch blondes dance in bikinis. Roz Roemer's riveting ads persuade us Buckeye men to leave the Stone Fox behind and do something much more productive with our bodies.

Caca to the more recent "Blondes leading the blind" columns by Samantha G. Haney and Terry Monnett. Your first columns were so endearing with their innocent, naive, air-headed humor. Why do you think guys like blondes, anyway? The more recent columns feature humor that is more knowing, sadder-but-wiser and sarcastic. This leads me to suspicion. Have you been dancing in bikinis while a couple of brunettes ghost write your columns?

Counterpoint

There should be no doubt that the intent of Mr. Smith in writing his piece was to provoke hate, not to foster debate about a tragic event that no reputable historian would deny took place. Perhaps the editors felt that a debate in an open forum would be healthy and promote awareness; in fact, such supremacists by suggesting that the issue is somehow unsettled. Think of this situation in another context: the Chinese government denied there was any massacre at Tiananmen Square. That denial is part of the news and should be reported; but it would be ludicrous for a responsible newspaper to publish "point-counterpoint" editorials in which a representative of the Chinese government repeats this lie. Now, forty-seven years after World War II, when there are survivors and witnesses to the Nazi genocide still living, revisionist "theories" are respectable. What will these practitioners of the "big lie" be able to get away with in another forty-seven years? The Lantern has only helped their cause, not the cause of academic freedom.

Eric Schramm
graduate student

Don't cross line

The recent publication of an editorial denying the occurrence of the Holocaust has divided the university and caused a great deal of harm to many of its students. It saddens me that by running an editorial by a person with a history of past associations with anti-Semitic organizations the existence and importance of the Holocaust has been diminished.

We as an academic community must ensure that this decision to publish will stand as an aberration to Lantern policy as opposed to setting an unfortunate precedent. If in the future a similarly nefarious editorial should be submitted denying the existence of slavery in the United States or the internment of Japanese-Americans during the Second World War we must demand that it be excluded from the Lantern. While the First Amendment protects many forms of unpopular speech and communication it does not mandate publication of outright false and hateful information.

Finally, I think that the Lantern's decision to publish was based on a well-intentioned, but unfortunately erroneous, understanding of the principle that universities are places where any proposition or fact can and should be "debated." There are and must always be boundaries between ideas that are the legitimate subject of debate and facts whose characterization as being "debatable" is done with other non — legitimate aims in mind. It is the responsibility of any newspaper, and especially one committed to the welfare of students at a university, to carefully safeguard against the erosion of this boundary.

Reality check

It's time for a reality check. Exactly what is the big fuss over the B. Smith ad/article? It seems as if the folks at the Hillel Foundation would rather we forget about the horrors of the Holocaust than talk about it, and I believe this would be a grave mistake. The article finally opens the door for discussion on this seemingly forbidden topic, and brings to light an opinion that needs to be addressed before any truth can be implied in it.

I applaud the editors decision to run this article because it did expose us to a view that runs contrary to what some may have been true. While this may have opened some old wounds, in the long run, hopefully, it will also help to prevent fresh ones. Dr. Gee and everyone at Hillel should realize this before tempers flare beyond rationality.

Simple Math.

You don't need to be a math wiz to figure out that it takes a lot of money to go to college. The fine folks at Jeep and Eagle would like to help subtract some of that financial burden by reimbursing a lucky student for a semester's worth of tuition.

If you can picture yourself as that lucky student, get over to your participating school bookstore and pick up the new Jeep and Eagle college folder while supplies last. It's free, and inside there's a contest called "Where in the World?" that will award up to $10,000 in tuition reimbursement. The official program rules are detailed in the folder.

So if you think you're smart (and we know you are), enter the Jeep and Eagle college folder contest. You never know—filling out the entry form could save you from filling out financial aid forms next term.

Advantage: Jeep and Eagle

Jeep is a registered trademark of Chrysler Corporation. Buckle up for safety

Arthur Ivanova, 10, rummages for bottles and jars near garbage dumpsters at the German Embassy complex in Moscow, Saturday. Arthur and his unemployed grandmother make their living by collecting reusable items in garbage dumpsters later reselling the items at local markets.

Russians surviving by picking trash

MOSCOW (AP) — While many Russians are complaining about soaring prices, Tamara Ivanova has found a way to beat the system: she scavenges garbage bins for foreign bottles and jars.

To the foreigners, the old bottles are trash. To Russians, they are treasures.

On a good day, Ivanova makes enough money from sales of the bottles to buy lunch for herself and her 10-year-old grandson Artur at a state-subsidized cafeteria.

Ivanova, 50, is one of a growing number of Russians so desperate to make enough money to cover price increases that they routinely root through big metal trash bins — particularly those attached to foreign embassy and housing complexes.

She frequents the grimy bins behind an apartment complex serving the German Embassy.

"I wouldn't call this a business, because the money that I make disappears the same day," said Ivanova. "A business is when your money grows. I make enough just to live for the next day or two."

She used to work at a television factory but had to give up the strenuous job because of health problems. She said she gets no government assistance because there's too much red tape.

In her new occupation, she earns 30 rubles a day, 30 cents at the tourist exchange rate. The average monthly salary in Russia is about 960 rubles per month.

On a less successful day, Ivanova may find a few bottles without lids, or perhaps a couple of plastic bags with foreign logos that Artur will rinse out and take with him to school. Although the quiet, dark-haired boy enjoys scavenging, he is too shy to sell the bottles, she said.

"If children are selling bottles, people feel sorry for them and they pay five rubles," Ivanova said. "I only get three."

Many Russians employed in diplomatic compounds supplement their salaries by selling cast-off items or recycled foreign garbage.

Most domestically produced products — from food to laundry detergent to toiletries — are packaged sparingly. Russians must bring their own plastic bags when they go shopping and supply their own bottles to buy cooking oil, dairy products and vodka. These people and private farmers are Ivanova's customers.

"If you go to Tishinsky Market, practically every item on sale is from the diplomatic compounds," Ivanova said. "There they sell magazines, clothes, books, everything!"

She said Sunday is the best time for scavenging because the maids in the foreign housing complexes usually have the weekends off — therefore missing out on those days' booty.

Candidate focuses on health care

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Bob Kerrey was cruising through his campaign health care pitch when a question came from the middle of the crowd, barely audible to the overflow audience.

So Kerrey repeated it. "How do I do the health care thing without raising taxes?" the Nebraska senator said. "I don't."

As the New Hampshire primary nears, Kerrey is urging voters to make the election a referendum on his plan to provide universal health care to all Americans, paid for with billions in payroll, alcohol, cigarette and other new taxes.

"If I win the primary on the 18th of February, there will be a message to the Congress that the people of New Hampshire want national health insurance," Kerrey says.

The other Democrats in the race say they, too, favor universal health care. But Kerrey is trying to distinguish himself with his detailed Senate legislation that would provide government-paid health insurance to all.

In the process, he's trying to turn the knocks on his plan — the new taxes and its lack of cosponsors in a Congress scrambling for a health care answer — into assets.

Kerrey says he is the only candidate willing to take his argument for taxes to the American people, and that he is the lone sponsor of the measure because his colleagues are too meek to take on the powerful insurance lobby.

It's a high-risk strategy, especially in tax-hating New Hampshire. But with primary day getting closer and Kerrey low on cash and lagging in the polls, he is counting on the issue to revitalize his campaign.

One potential snag: most New Hampshire voters say the primary is a referendum on the economy, and health care is a secondary issue.

Kerrey advisers insist the strategy will work as voters cement allegiances in the final days of the campaign. They say his health care stand will come across as part of Kerrey's umbrella theme — a broader question of leadership.

Too often, he says, lawmakers have been "led into great battles over the trivial and we've ignored the important stuff."

To Kerrey, the important stuff is health care. "Health care saved my life," he says, reminding listeners of the valor in Vietnam that cost him half a leg in a grenade explosion. "There are more lives at stake."

Voters identify Kerrey with health care, pollsters say. But some question whether he may have gone too far.

"Voters see him as a Johnny one-note," said Stanley Greenberg, pollster for Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton.

Wary of such a pitfall, Kerrey has been talking about other issues since December, when he brought in a new campaign team that has encouraged him to be more aggressive.

Since then, he's taken a tougher line on trade. "The Japanese deserve to hear very tough language," Kerrey told a recent gathering in Manchester. "They plunder our markets and preserve theirs."

By all accounts, he is now a smoother campaigner. Still, there are signs of inconsistency.

On an off day, he can appear detached or indifferent.

Asked about his education policy, Kerrey said: "Well, I support education programs that work."

Researchers link antibodies to stroke

PHOENIX (AP) — Renegade antibodies appear to be a major underlying cause of strokes, possibly triggering about 10 percent of the seizures in the United States, researchers said Saturday.

Doctors first noticed about 10 years ago that stroke victims often have antibodies in their blood that are directed against phospholipids, a key part of all cells in the body. But until now, no clear evidence existed that they played any role in causing strokes.

The new research, conducted at 16 hospitals, found that people with recent strokes were twice as likely as other folks to have these antibodies in their bloodstreams.

The findings indicate these antibodies could be as important a risk factor for stroke as diabetes, which has long been recognized as increasing the chances of stroke.

"This may be a risk factor of major public health importance," said Dr. Steven J. Kittner of the University of Maryland.

He presented the findings at a stroke conference sponsored by the American Heart Association.

Stroke is the nation's third leading cause of death after heart attacks and cancer. It kills 145,000 Americans annually.

The new research found that about 10 percent of stroke victims have the antibodies.

Dr. Steven R. Levine of Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit said an American suffers a stroke every minute, meaning that "once every 10 minutes, there is a stroke in this country associated with these antibodies."

The study was based on 255 people who had suffered a first stroke. They were compared to 257 people who were hospitalized for other reasons.

Ten percent of the stroke patients had the antibodies, and about 4 percent of the other patients carried them.

Dr. Robin L. Brey of the University of Texas in San Antonio said the work suggests that for at least some victims, stroke is an autoimmune disease, caused by a misguided attack of the body on itself.

Such attacks might occur when the body mistakes its own tissue for a virus or some other invader. Similar mix-ups are thought to account for multiple sclerosis, rheumatoid arthritis and other diseases.

The doctors said that understanding the antibodies may help researchers devise better ways to find people at risk of strokes and to ward off strokes.

For instance, it may turn out that blood-thinning drugs, such as warfarin or aspirin, may help ward off strokes in people with the antibodies.

People who have the antibodies appear to be at exceptionally high risk of suffering a second stroke.
