The goal of the coalition is to have indoor smoking

The matter, still in the discussion stage, has yet to be brought before Columbus City Council, where a vote could put a stop to smoking inside bars and restaurants within city limits. Individual municipalities surrounding Columbus would each have to pass their own smoking ban for it to be effective outside of the city.

"If the city council passes the proposal, it will be unfortunate. It will penalize the restaurants in the city," said Geoff Hetrick, spokesman for the Ohio Restaurant Association. "Our position is that in the United States and in Ohio, where free enterprise comes to play, let the customer choose.

"If a business owner feels that they are going to have to alter their situation to stay in business, then the owner will make the necessary changes. The customers will vote with their feet," Hetrick said.

A smoking ban would force smoking patrons to take their business outside of the city to the surrounding communities, said Gail Baker, spokeswoman for the Central Ohio Restaurant Association.

"The smoking ban creates an unleveled playing field for businesses," Baker said. "It's not fair to restaurants. Patrons can cross

The 2004 Alumni Awards for Distinguished Teaching have been presented to 10 faculty members by Ohio State President Karen A. Holbrook and Interim Provost Barbara Snyder.

Since 1960, these awards have honored faculty members for their exceptional teaching.

"A call for nominations is distributed widely during autumn quarter to dorms and through the mail," said Molly Davis, program manager for the Office of Academic Affairs.

'In addition, an e-mail was sent to all students and to all faculty members and an announcement was placed in the Alumni magazine, on the Web site of the Office of Academic Affairs and in OSUToday.

tum liquids are possible, under what circumstances they occur and the measurable properties of each.

"The work that won me the Nobel Prize is work that I actually did in 1972-1973, but I had been doing research related to that for about eight years," Leggett said.

Leggett's work is highly respected because scientists had worked for years, since the first model was developed, to find a better understanding of the quantum liquids. These liquids are difficult to grasp because, unlike most liquids, the particles cannot be stated to be in one specific place.

Lemberger said scientists can only define the probability of where those particles may be.

Leggett is always working to develop a better understanding of quantum mechanics. Some of his research topics include experiment oriented studies of basic conceptual issues in the foundations of quantum mechanics. Through this research, Leggett is testing and studying other possible alternative explanations of experiments in the literature of quantum mechanics.

In Leggett's speech at the Nobel Banquet on Dec. 10, he offered advice to those students hoping to embark on a career in the field of theoretical physics.

"If you find a problem interesting, don't worry too much about whether it has been solved in existing literature. You will have a lot more fun with it if you don't know, and you learn a lot even if what you come up with turns out not to be publishable," he said at the banquet.

In his speech this evening, Leggett hopes to give people a taste of what he has accomplished throughout his career.

"This will not be the standard Nobel speech that I gave in Stockholm when I received the prize, but I will be speaking about more general information about quantum liquids and the fascination about them," Leggett said.

Leggett's speech is part of the 42nd annual Smith Lecture, held at 8 p.m. today in room 131 of Hitchcock Hall.

According to Quantum mechanics, the theory used by physicists to describe nature at the atomic level, an electron or atom faced with two alternative paths of possibilities can in some sense realize both simultaneously. Things get really interesting when many such identical particles form a system. Dr. Leggett will introduce the idea of a "Quantum liquid" that is a system of many particles which shows the effects of quantum mechanics. He will focus on Bose-Einstein condensation and Cooper Pairing where a large collection of "condensed particles: are forces to behave in exactly the same way. Such systems lead to spectacular effects whose explanation was recognized by the 2003 Nobel Prize.

Reservists given aid by Congress

By Mary Dalrymple Associated Press

WASHINGTON -House of Representatives, taking what one lawmaker called "a baby step" of support for U.S. troops fighting in Iraq and Afghanistan, voted yesterday to allow financially strapped National Guard and Reserve troops to tap their retirement funds without penalty.

Supporters said the change helps long-deployed troops and their families pay the bills while serving their country. Reserve and National Guard troops sometimes take a pay cut when they are activated and leave their civilian jobs and salaries.

"It's the least we can do," said Rep. Clay Shaw, R-Fla. The House approved the bill unanimously, 415-0.

Many Democrats who voted for the bill said Congress should do much more to support troops who leave their families and jobs for months of service.

'Let's recognize it is a baby step when we should be taking a much larger one - I would say, a giant one," said Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich. "We should be doing more than this."

Employers are not required to make up lost pay for employ-ees activated to duty, nor do they have to continue providing benefits like health insurance.

Democrats said the bill should also encourage employers to do more by giving them a tax credit for making up the difference between military and civilian pay, as well as extend Defense Department health coverage to the families of reservists.

The bill passed by the House would waive the 10 percent early withdrawal penalty for those in an economic squeeze who withdraw money from their tax-advantaged retirement accounts and pensions before

The waiver would apply to National Guard and Reserve troops deployed for six months or longer and activated between Sept. 11, 2001, and Sept. 12, 2005.

Those military personnel would be given two years to replenish the accounts.

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., said National Guard and Reserve troops shouldn't be forced to undermine their own retirement security in order to pay their bills while serving their country.

Seattle schools bear down hard on minority students

At the district's Cedar Heights Junior High School in Covington, 38-year-old security officer Elmer Burst said he's used his handcuffs once since coming to work for the district in August 2003.

Burst, who is black, said he'll do what he can to prevent any

The threat of a lawsuit by two black parents who claimed their children were harassed by white students triggered the creation of the Kent district's original diversity council in 1995, former co-chair Barbara Phillips said.

That committee made dozens of recommendations, including nonviolent crisis intervention training for staff and improving discipline records to monitor for racial discrimination.

Phillips said she's disappointed in the response.

A curriculum audit released in 1999, the year Grohe took over as superintendent, found the district was slow to follow certain directives. Tasks such as analyzing discipline reports for possible discrimination patterns were more than a year overdue.

Foreign students, visitors down

By George Gedda Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Top Bush administration officials said yesterday that restrictions on the entry of foreigners have prompted many to shun travel to the United States since 2001. They recommended that the constraints be reviewed.

"This hurts us," Secretary of State Colin Powell said, citing a 30 percent decline in overseas visits to the United States over 2 and a half years. "It's not serving our interests, and so we really do have to work on it."

Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge said the security benefits derived from the post-Sept. 11 restrictions have had unwanted economic side effects.

Powell and Ridge made their comments in testimony to the House Judiciary Committee.

A supporter of Israeli nuclear whistleblower Mordechai Vanunu has an anti-nuclear message written on his hand outside Shikma Prison as he waits prior to Vanunu's release.

Israeli secret-revealer released

Associated Press

ASHKELON, Israel — A defiant Mordechai Vanunu walked out of prison yesterday after serving 18 years for spilling Israel's nuclear secrets, saying he was proud of his actions and complaining he was treated cruelly by his jailers.

Vanunu flashed victory signs and waved to hundreds of cheering supporters as he walked into the sun-splashed courtyard of Shikma Prison in the coastal town of Ashkelon. Dozens of counter-demonstrators booed and shouted epithets.

In the courtyard, Vanunu, 50, held an impromptu news conference, with his brother Meir by his side. Vanunu said he was given "very cruel and barbaric treatment" by Israel's security services.

'To all those who are calling me traitor, I am saying I am proud, I am proud and happy to do what I did," Vanunu said in accented and at times broken English. He Israel has imposed, including a ban on speaking to foreigners.

He left the prison in a gray Mazda van as police dispersed a security services tried to rob him large crowd. His first stop was of his sanity by keeping him in St. George, an Anglican church in Jerusalem's Old City. More than a dozen cars and motorcycles followed Vanunu's vehicle to Jerusalem, and a helicopter flew low overhead.

Israeli authorities have imposed a series of travel restrictions and other constraints on Vanunu, saying he still possesses state secrets. But Vanunu said he has no more secrets to reveal. "I am now ready to start my life," he said.

Upon his arrival in Jerusalem, he was mobbed by reporters as the Anglican Bishop of Jerusalem, Riah Abu El-Assal, escorted him into the church. Other clergy members embraced Vanunu, and a tearful Peter Hounam, the journalist who wrote the 1986 article that led to Vanunu's imprisonment, hugged him.

In 1986, Vanunu leaked details refused to answer questions in and pictures of Israel's alleged Hebrew because of restrictions nuclear weapons program to The Sunday Times of London. Based on his account, experts said at the Vanunu, who converted to time that Israel had the world's sixth-largest stockpile of nuclear

When asked if he was a hero, he said "all those who are standing behind me, supporting me ... all are heroes.

'I am a symbol of the will of freedom," he said. "You cannot break the human spirit."

Hundreds of supporters and opponents squared off in shouting matches outside the prison ahead of his release. Supporters chanted "Mordechai is free," while counterdemonstrators held signs calling him a traitor and shouted curses.

"He's hell-bent to do as much harm as he can," Justice Minister Tommy Lapid told The Associated Press. "We will keep an eye on him, we will watch him ... We want to know where he is and we want to know whom he may or may not divulge state secrets."

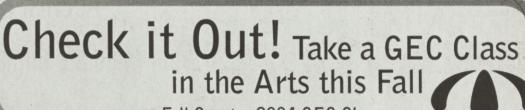

Vanunu will not be allowed to travel abroad for at least a year, speak with foreigners or approach Israeli ports or borders. He also is barred from discussing his work at Israel's nuclear reactor. Vanunu was given a map of Israel marking "I said, Israel don't need before the article was printed the areas off-limits to him, accordnuclear arms, especially now and subsequently convicted of ing to the Defense Ministry.

opportunity to see one of the finest contemporary theater companies in the world," said Charles Helm, director of performing arts at the Wexner Center. This is something that is happening here that's not happening at any other campus across the country.

Based on the death of his own wife, Johannes Von Saaz wrote "Death and the Ploughman" in 1401, and it has since been translated from German into English by playwright Michael West.

of it in London that was kind of a big hit a couple years ago, and she loved the text but didn't like the production so much," Helm said. "She found that nobody else in the States had licensed this particular translation, and she jumped at the opportunity

The play tells a story of a Ploughman, played by Will Bond, who loses his wife while she is in labor. Angry and in disbelief, he asks Death (Ellen Lauren and Stephen Webber) for answers to the complexities of life and the reasoning behind its demise.

'This play...is about a very primal, basic subject; a person loses a loved one and has to grieve, argue, and faceoff death basically, and say 'no, this is not how it goes. I do not accept this,"and argue the point and come to acceptance," Bond said.

conflicts in this play will always be timeless.

"You would never realize this was The American debut of "Death and written in 1401," Bond said. "What we've come to realize is that 603 years later, the same things are happening. In that sense, its incredibly

In addition, the script is written in heightened prose and in a series of speeches rather than back and forth. "I think this is a really remarkable dialogue. Audience members are advised to keep in mind that the text does indeed stand on its own.

"The language is really accessible,"

Bond has been acting for years, yet the part of the Ploughman was particularly difficult to play.

"It was incredibly hard to memorize," said Bond. "It's an epic."

The subject matter was also a difficult issue to face for the actors. Constantly dealing with the harsh reality Bogart saw a different production of death took an emotional toll on the cast. And although alleviating personal feelings is part of an actor's job, such was not always the case with "Death and the Ploughman.

"If you build a piece correctly, what happens is that you get to hear it like the audience, so I emotionally am impacted by what (Death) is saying," Bond said. "I really believe that it's not my job to emotionally guide the audience. My job is to actually be impacted by the piece also."

The basic premise of the story deals with serious issues. However, the play does have its humorous moments.

"It's very emotional, but there are certain moments that come along that make me laugh," Bond said.

'Death of the Ploughman" will be showcased at 8 p.m. today and tomorrow, at 3 and 8 p.m., and 3 p.m. Sun-Audience members are assured that day. Tickets are $10 for students, $16

'Twista' of a deal for Big Free Concert

After rampant rumor and months of thinly veiled secrecy, the lineup of the Big Free Concert has been announced. If you haven't heard, headlining the show will be a triad of bigtime hip-hop acts: Wyclef Jean, Ludacris and Twista.

While not especially diverse, these are three very big names.

Twista is certifiably (Guinness Book of World Records) the fastest rapper in the world - although his lyrical content leaves something to be desired: "I treat bitches like drinks.

Ludacris is an absolute hip-hop star who features a dirty-south style and creative rhymes, as well as interesting videos - a rarity in the rap world, which is dominated by derivative sex odysses and ubiquitous bling. His name is many ways eclipses Jean's, who is seemingly entering the twilight of his brilliant career.

Jean is easily the most accomplished — and connected — artist on the lineup, having collaborated with Carlos Santana, Mary J. Blige, Tom Jones, The Neville Brothers, Earth Wind and Fire, Canabis and many, many others.

He is a wizard MC, piecing together bits of every genre of music available through his ghetto Haitian filter, first finetuned during his time with the mold-breaking trio The Fugees.

As accomplished and interesting as these artists are, the big story behind the Big Free Concert lies not in its music or even the organizers avoidance of any big rock acts, possibly following last spring's tepid Vertical Horizon show. The real story of the Big Free Concert has to do with sponsorship.

Two years ago Ludacris was poised to become a PepsiCo spokesman when conservative pundit Bill O'Reilly of Fox News vocally criticized the company for its choice of a "thug rapper" to represent it, calling his lyrics "vulgar" and Pepsi "immoral" for considering the artist.

Pepsi dropped Ludacris. In the fall-out, rap mogul Russell Simons threatened a hip-hop boycott of Pepsi, and Pepsi hired Ozzy and Sharon Osbourne — notoriously raunchy and vulgar on their MTV show "The Osbournes" — to replace Ludacris.

About a year prior Jean was asked to be a Pepsi spokesman and recorded two ads for the company is 2001 (remember "The joy of Pepsi, Y'all?"). At the time of the ads, Pepsi and Coke were locked in a celebrity battle, with Coke running Christina Aguilara spots and Pepsi, Britney Spears. It was Wyclef's first endorsement, and also marked Pepsi's concerted attempt to break into the hip-hop market. In addition to monetary compensation, Pepsi also agreed to sponser Wyclef's summer 2001

The boycott was eventually stopped as Pepsi made conciliatory gestures and donated a large sum of money to Simons' Hip-Hop Summit Action Network and the Ludacris Foundation.

A Pepsi representative issued the following statement, according to the BBC

"It was our mistake, we learned a lot from it and we've moved on. We respect Russell's interest in bringing hiphop talent to a larger audience, and we have worked together to do just that."

Now, here at Ohio State, both former (Jean) and jilted (Ludacris) Pepsi spokemen come together for a large public concert sponsered by ... the Coca-Cola Company, demonstrating that perhaps not all hatchets have been buried.

Along with the Ohio Union Activities Board and Value City Arena, Coke is the only

In an age where most men drool over the prospect of owning a 42-inch plasmascreen television, surround sound, a progressive-scan DVD player and a Playstation 2, a Hilliard man has focused on the nostalgia of televisions from the 1930s, '40s and '50s.

Soon after selling his cable TV company, Steve McVoy, the president of the Early Television Foundation, started collecting old televisions and opened the Early Television Museum.

"I opened the museum with my own collection in 1999," McVoy said. "I never collected anything before that."

From the outside, the museum could be confused with an auto repair shop with its aluminum exterior but once inside the nostalgic looking paneling and carpet transports the visitors to the time when these televisions were new.

McVoy said they had to remodel the building to make the place look vintage.

The televisions range from 1928 to 1957, and the collection includes 50 of the 400 remaining televisions produced before World War II, McVoy said.

The museum also offers education about early television through framed advertisements, how-to articles, pictures and biographies of the people who pioneered the industry.

The museum is the only one in the United States dedicated to television equipment.

There are museums that deal with TV programming but none that deal with equipment," McVoy said. "There's one in Canada and a couple in England."

The museum averages about 100 visitors each month with half of them going through in

By Stacey Runion Lantern arts writer

Tuesday was opening night at the Ohio Theatre for "Starlight Express," part of the Fifth Third Bank's "Broadway in Columbus" 2003-2004 season.

This all-new production of Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Starlight Express" creates a modern approach to childhood, life lessons and the ability to dream big.

"Starlight Express" takes on a life of its own through roller skating, genres of music, style and new addition of 3-D film sequences.

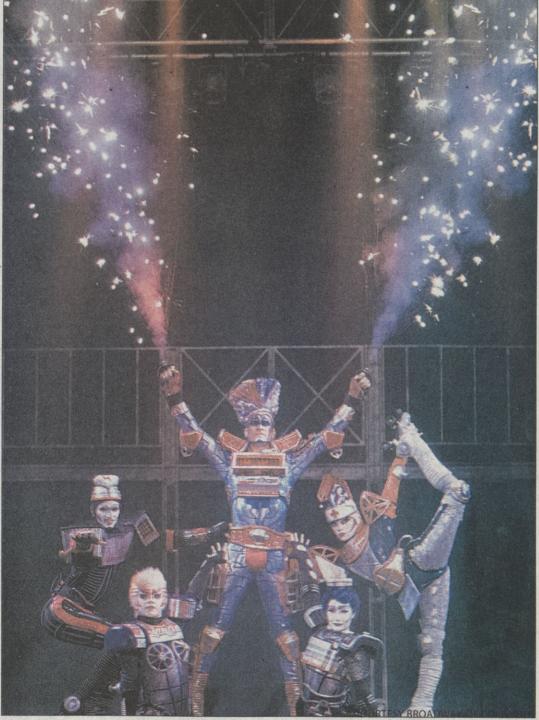

The story was originally designed to parallel the idea and purpose of "The Little Engine That Could." The musical was written by Webber for his son and daughter; he wanted to give life and personality to train engines and cars that race each other as well as teach lessons about success and self confidence.

With a nearly-full crowd, the cast and crew led everyone into the imagination of a nineyear-old boy. Action figures and dolls appeared on stage with their mighty power, strength and heroic fashion. The crowd got to imagine which character it wanted to

Some widely recognized masterpieces are now on display at The Columbus Museum

"The Columbus Museum of Art houses an internationally acclaimed collection of modern art," said Executive Director Nannette V. Maciejunes. "'Monet to Matise,' a reprise of the wonderful Sirak Collection, encapsulates this strength and captures the dramatic change in art that took place beginning with the advent of impressionism.

"Without the revolution propelled by Monet, we would not have a Jackson Pollock or a Rothko," Maciejunes said.

Columbus natives, Howard D. and Babette L. Sirak offered their 78-piece collection to the museum as a part of the museum's 125th anniversary celebration.

OSU softball splits Ky. doubleheader

The Buckeyes (27-18, 3-7 Big Ten) failed to let the wet and windy conditions rain on their parade in game one as they handed the Wildcats a 6-4 loss.

OSU quickly put away Kentucky with a four spot in the first, while senior Kristi DeVries (9-9) held the Wildcats in check.

The key moment of the game came in the first when sophomore Billie Jo Carder cranked her first home run of the season, a three-run homer to left center.

"It felt really great," Carder said. "I thought we came out early and the bats came out firing.'

Before Carder's blast, two of the first three Buckeyes reached base via the walk and freshman Jamee Juarez got OSU on the board with an RBI single to left.

Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in
- (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager with in 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
- Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion. A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
- No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than
- If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee.
- The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- 10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- 11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication.
- 12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise
- 13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed
- A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication.
- 15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

The Lantern will not publish illegal advertising or the advertising of illegal products or services. The Lantern reserves the right to reject advertising that denigrates individuals, groups or organizations based on race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, religion, mental or physical capacity, veteran's status, age or sexual orientation. The Lantern Business Manager will refer questionable advertising to the Publications Committee of the School of Journalism and Communication. The committee will recommend a decision on whether to publish the advertising to the Director of the school.

IMPORTANT - CHANGES / EXTENSIONS

We must be notified before 10:00A.M., the last day of publication, for any extensions, cancellations or changes to be made in an ad for the next day. Changes of one to three words will be permitted in an existing ad. A $3.00 fee will be assessed for each change. (The word count must remain the same).

REPORT ERRORS AT ONCE

Please notify us by 10:00A.M. the FIRST DAY your ad appears if there is an error. The Ohio State Lantern will not be responsible for typographical errors except to cancel charge for such portion of the advertisement as may have been rendered valueless by such typographical error. If you notify us by 10:00A.M. the first day of an error we will repeat the ad 1 insertion without charge.
