Another recreational fee - the fate of which will be determined at the Ohio State Board of Trustees' meeting in June — could increase tuition by $36 or more in the following academic year.

The fee will be used to maintain the new recreation center that will replace Larkins Hall in spring 2005 and the activities center on west campus that will be completed in summer 2004. According to a university report presented to the board May 7, the recreation center was built with the understanding that it would be primarily funded by user fees, including a mandatory fee for all students taking more than three credit hours.

Faculty and staff can choose whether to purchase a membership, depending on whether they plan to use the new facilities, said Elizabeth Conlisk, spokeswoman for OSU.

After the west campus recreational facility opens, the university will offer faculty and staff a special promotion price of $6 per month beginning in September, according to the Office of Recreational Sports Web site. In March 2005 faculty and staff will have to pay $31.66 per

NYPD accused of Sept. 11 misconduct

NEW YORK — The former police and fire chiefs who were lionized after the World Trade Center attack came under harsh criticism yesterday from the Sept. 11 commission, with one member saying the departments' lack of cooperation was scandalous and "not worthy of the Boy Scouts.'

Commission members, in New York for an emotional two-day hearing, focused on how leaders of the two departments failed to share information effectively in the early frantic moments after two hijacked planes slammed into the World Trade

Former fire commissioner Thomas Von Essen and former police chief Bernard Kerik shot back with infuriated responses to commissioner John Lehman's questions, the strongest of a series of pointed statements from the panel.

"I couldn't disagree with you more strongly," Von Essen replied. "I think it's outrageous that you make a statement like

Families of Sept. 11 victims applauded the tough questioning and shook their heads sadly as the panel enumerated a litany of communication breakdowns between the departments. Family members sporadically mocked and booed Von Essen, Kerik and Richard Sheirer, former Office of Emergency Management commissioner, and they wept earlier in the day as they watched a videotape of the buildings collapsing.

Ohio State responded to a lawsuit yesterday regarding the constitutionality of its nondiscrimination policy.

The Christian Legal Society filed a lawsuit March 12, after an in-depth review of the OSU chapter threatened to remove its status as a recognized OSU organization. The CLS reportedly violated the university's nondiscrimination policy in its election process because only formal members are permitted to vote for and fill executive offices for the OSU chapter.

Formal members must sign a Statement of Faith, "indicating that (they hold) certain Christian viewpoints commonly regarded in both the Roman Catholic and Protestant evangelical traditions as orthodox," according to the CLS complaint.

All OSU faculty, staff and students, as well as any student organizations seeking affiliation with the university, are been deprived of its constitutional rights required to follow OSU's nondiscrimination policy, which the CLS said violates their rights and freedoms of expression guaranteed by the First and 14th Amendments of the U.S. Constitution.

OSU's Nondiscrimination/Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action Policy 1.10, effective October 1973, states, "Discrimination against any individual based upon protected status, which is defined as age, color, disability, gender identity or expression, national origin, race, religion, sex, sexual orientation or veteran status, is prohibited."

In its response, the university denies violating the CLS members' rights and freedoms, as indicated in the complaint.

(The university) admits certain aspects (of the complaint) and denies others," said Steve Aden, chief litigation throw out the lawsuit as utterly lackcounsel to the Center of Law and Religious Freedom of the Christian Legal Society. "And they denied that CLS has

Diversity lecturer continues battling

By Bret Liebendorfer Lantern staff writer

"Recruiting and Retaining Students, Faculty and Administrators of Color" was the topic for Tuesday afternoon's Diversity Lecture Series at the Drinko Law School Auditorium.

The lecture was the 16th and final of the yearlong Diversity Lecture Series and featured Jose Soto, vice president for Affirmative Action, Equi- and affirmative action is no longer ty and Diversity at Southeast Community College in Lincoln, Neb.

Introducing Soto was the series' organizer, Frank Hale Jr.

"Brown (v. Board of Education) was important 50 years ago, but many are another problem facing diversity areas are as heavily segregated as the pre-1954 levels," Hale said. "Diversity is important in all areas of society."

Soto said diversity is important because it is a valuable commodity, precious resource, moral and legal obligation, and the current and future reality.

Despite these various reasons for importance, diversity faces strong opposition, he said.

When we're talking about diversity, there will be high levels of emotions," Soto said. "We're dragging lots of historical baggage."

Soto said some people feel that continued dialogue about diversity demeans past gains. In response, opposition to affirmative action has been "well-orchestrated, well-funded and designed to dismantle a system that has just begun to have an impact," he said.

He said many feel that since gains have been made, "enough is enough" necessary.

Gandhi's refusal stuns party

By Beth Duff-Brown Associated Press

NEW DELHI — Sonia Gandhi said she would "humbly decline" to be the next prime minister of India, a decision that followed Hindu nationalist outrage over the prospect of a foreign-born woman at the helm of the nation.

Gandhi, an Italian native who became an Indian citizen 21 years ago, did not say whom she would nominate for the post; but the favorite appeared to be Manmohan Singh, the architect of India's economic liberalization program during the last Congress party-led government from 1991 to 1996. Gandhi will remain president of the party.

The post of prime minister has not been my aim," Gandhi said over the shouts of a crowd urging her to take the job. "I was always certain that if ever I found myself in the position I am in today I would follow my inner voice. I humbly decline the post."

Gandhi's Congress party and allies trounced the Hindunationalist party of caretaker Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee and his Democratic National Alliance in national elections that ended last week.

'I have listened to your views, your pain, your anguish at the decision I have taken," Gandhi said. "I (am) aware I am expected, leave with his approval the Congress party.

"It is my inner voice, my conscience," she said. "My responsibility at this critical time is to provide India with a secular government that is strong and stable."

After the announcement, a string of Congress lawmakers lined up to make speeches, pleading with Gandhi to reconsider.

Renuka Choudhury, who was close to tears, told Gandhi it was the party's desire "that you continue to lead us, because it is the need of the hour, not just for women, not just for children, but as a human being who has upheld the finest tradition of what it means to be an Indian."

House defends illegal residents' health care

By Jim Abrams Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House rejected legislation that could have led to hospital emergency rooms denying some services to illegal aliens while helping to get them kicked out of the country.

Hispanic legislators led opposition to the bill, joining medical groups in contending that it would turn hospitals into law enforcement agencies and prevent illegal residents from seeking life-saving medical treatment.

It was defeated 331-88. The legislation came to the House floor as a result of a promise that GOP leaders made to Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, R-Calif., in exchange for his vote on the Medicare prescription drug bill that narrowly passed in November.

Rohrabacher was ready to vote against the Medicare bill because it contained $1 billion over four years to reimburse hospitals for treating illegal immigrants. The Orange County conservative was told he could offer legislation to counter the effects of that provision.

Rohrabacher's bill would have required hospitals receiving money under the provision Hospitals, American Hospital to obtain information on the immigration status and employer of people seeking emergency treatment. That information would have been sent into a database set up jointly by the departments of Homeland Security and Health they need, when they need it." and Human Services.

In addition, employers of imbursed emergency room care, and hospitals would not have had to provide care for an illegal alien who could safely be sent back to his or her own country for treatment.

Rohrabacher said health care for illegal immigrants has extended to heart bypasses, transplants and cancer treatment costing hundreds of thousands of dollars. Those opposed to his bill, he said, 'are voting to spend our limited health care money to make America the HMO of the world. And then they act surprised when even more tens of millions of illegals flood into our country."

Hilda Solis, D-Calif., said the bill would turn hospitals into law enforcement and immigration agents, and would have lead to scenarios where women in labor would have to choose between going to a hospital and being deported. "What kind of fear does that place in a community?" she asked.

Rep. Robert Menendez of New Jersey, the House's no. 3 Democrat, envisioned being asked to prove his citizenship in an emergency room because of his name. "That's shameful. You wouldn't ask any other citizen that," he said.

The Federation of American Association and other medical groups wrote lawmakers urging opposition to the bill, saying it would virtually ensure that illegal immigrants will avoid getting the appropriate and timely lifesaving health care

Breaking tradition

Concert move may hurt attendance

Amid reports of thousands of unexpected attendees for the Big Free Concert, the Ohio Union Activities Board, in conjunction with Student Affairs, announced earlier this week the postponement of the show until Monday and change of location to the Schottenstein Center.

OUAB adviser Matt Couch said university modified the date and location because of safety concerns, space restraints and to ensure only Ohio State students - who pay the Student Activity Fee that funds the concert — will attend the show. The organization said it was worried it would not be able to accomodate the number of attendees on the South Oval. Also, it had heard rumors of chartered buses and other groups of non-students from across the Midwest planning trips to the OSU campus, which concerned OUAB because it wanted to present the show to the OSU students who paid for it through the activity fee.

Even though the location change to the Schottenstein Center addresses the safety and space concerns, it completely invalidates the students. OUAB will only be distributing 14,000 tickets, beginning tomorrow, despite the 38,000 undergraduates who foot the activity fee.

Granted, not every student will want to attend the concert, but every student who has funded the show should have the

Also, moving the show to an indoor venue ruins the tradition of the Big Free Concert. In the past, it has served as one of the major highlights of spring quarter, offering an entertaining, free event to break up the end-of-the-quarter blues

Furthermore, the success of the show remains questionable because of its scheduled date, both in relation to the time of the week and the time of the quarter. OUAB hosted a Big Free Concert during fall 2003, featuring 311 and Alien Ant Farm, and attendance was certainly less than expected. Many students blame the day of the week — Monday — and the week of the quarter — the fifth week — for the lack of attendance at the fall concert.

Although some may consider Ludacris, Twista and Wyclef Jean larger acts with broader audiences than those featured in the fall, the Monday performance during the ninth week of the quarter will undoubtedly present problems for some students.

Spring quarter is drawing to a close, and mid-quarter procrastination is beginning to take its toll; papers and any remaining exams will dominate week nine, leaving little time for leisure and concert-going.

For most, Monday is a day that begins a week full of deadlines and schedules to abide by, and thus, usually presents itself with loads of work — both academic- and employmentrelated.

Monday of week nine is not the most convenient day to host the Big Free Concert; it doesn't cater to students or Ohio

Swing state

Ohio likely to predict election

With Election Day a little less than four months away, Ohio will be a key player in determining the nation's next president. Considered a "crucial swing state," Ohio has voted the presidential winner since 1964. Yet, neither George Bush, nor John Kerry have set any real direction.

Traditionally labeled a conservative state, Ohio Republicans dominate the south and the suburbs, with Democratic support primarily in the north, where a majority of Ohio's industry is located. No Republican has ever won the election without securing the Buckeye State. But economic hard times and massive job loss could cause many conservative voters to quickly lean left, especially if the war in Iraq continues. Proof of conservative skepticism has already crept in from the last election, when Democratic candidate Al Gore barely lost the state with a 3.5 point margin.

But what Bush has that Kerry doesn't is a solid plan. Whether people agree with what the president is doing, they know what he wants and where he wants to go. He has established a group of volunteers running massive campaign offices to plug his platform and secure him the Ohio spot, while Kerry faces much decent even among his fellow democrats. An article in The Economist attributes Kerry's detached personality and insensitivity to issues specific to Ohio as his biggest weaknesses. But far worse is his lack of presence. Bush has visited Ohio three more times than Kerry. If the democrat hopes to secure the White House come November, he should at least be matching his opponent, especially in such volatile states as Ohio. The time for Kerry to act is now. The war in Iraq has proved to be a great distraction to the Bush campaign as he is busy defending himself against Iraqi prisoner abuse and his war actions in general. Much of the fate of his presidency and re-election rests on the outcome of Iraq and the June 30 deadline to pull out. But because Bush has a home-court advantage, Kerry needs to start executing his own plan of attack. Even the most patriotic Ohioians are feeling war-weary and ready for their troops to come home.

Winning Ohio takes a lot of money and resources. With the 2004 election anticipated to be the first $1 billion campaign, Kerry has the opportunity to step into the forefront and seize the make-or-break states. Unlike the previous Democratic candidate who stopped campaigning too early and handed the state to Bush, Kerry should see persistence wins and take advantage of the swinging doors. The conservatives are prepared to stake their claim. ¤

Media turns on America

ne of our problems in Iraq is our failure to see Arabs for what they Consider the media's treatment of the Abu Ghraib prison abuse scandal. First, by historical standards, the correct term for what happened there is abuse, not torture. Even so, the sexual humiliation and rough manhandling the prisoners endured was wrong and in every sense un-American.

But already the wheels of justice are turning, and we are assured the guilty will be punished. Sadly, that's not enough for partisan journalists and politicians, who shamelessly equivocate the actions of a handful of rogue U.S. prison guards with decades of systematic torture and murder by Saddam Hussein. But it seems their greater concern - besides political posturing — is not the abuse itself, but how revelations of the abuse will affect our country's image.

This is a valid concern. Some Arab media outlets are using the pictures, along with sensationalistic exaggerations to inflame anti-American sentiment. But in discussing this danger, elitist media types tend to treat Arabs as pre-programmed automatons ready to form angry mobs at a moment's notice. Arabs are considered incapable of understanding context or being discerning consumers of mass media, and their faulty memories unable to recall the genuine atrocities of Saddam. They see pictures, get mad and murder Americans.

Like all stereotypes, this one does not stand up to scrutiny. A recent Washington Times story quoted Musa Keilani, writing in the Jordan Times: "We in the Arab world did know what was going on in Abu Ghraib (prison) when Saddam was in power: summary executions, dismemberment and torture of the worst kind we ever heard of in modern times. It is true that few in the Arab world talked about it and scant attention was given to international organizations' criticism of the gross violations of human rights in Iraq while Saddam was in power." Such candid truth is refreshing. Even more enlightening was the New York Times interview of Hayder Sabbar Abd, an Iraqi victim at Abu Ghraib.

If anyone has the right to be outraged at the United States, Mr. Abd does.

"It was humiliating," he said, and he admits being very discouraged by his ordeal. But he harbors no grudge toward America. Before being transferred to Abu Ghraib, Abd was a prisoner in Um Qasr, where he described his treatment as "very good ... American guards were nice and good people ... Americans did not mistreat me in general." Most importantly, he has not lost focus on the big picture: "The Americans got rid of Saddam Hussein. They told us about democracy and freedom. We are happy about that.'

Unfortunately, not all Arabs share Abd's perspective. But those who resort to vioence—even the most barbaric types of violence — are given a free pass by the media. When civilian contractors in Fallujah were burned alive and their bodies mutilated, who got more blame: the men who murdered them, or the American government? Obviously, there is a double standard at work here.

Any misstep by Americans is discussed in terms of the outrage it will provoke in the Arab world. What about our outrage at Arab violence against Americans why does that never come up?

Part of the reason is simply anti-American media bias. But another reason is because so many people write off Arabs' ability to behave like civilized society. They are not held accountable for their actions by the media and world opinion, and at the same time, are not seen as capable of understanding sophisticated concepts like democracy and freedom. Religious autocrats blame their peoples' problems on imaginary Jewish conspiracies and get away with it, while Arabs working for much-needed reform receive little encouragement from the Western press.

Before the Arab world can change, prevailing attitudes — both theirs and ours must also change.

Bilinguism is essential is a senior in English. She can be reached for comment at choi.275@osu.edu.

s a high school student, I once stayed at a quaint little hotel on the Asouthern tip of Italy. It just so happened that during my stay, my hotel was packed with a group of Swedish high school students traveling with other members of their schools. I found these students particularly remarkable because they not only spoke fluent Swedish — but fluent English and impressive Italian as well. As a freshman in high school, I could not help but ask myself, "Why can they speak all these languages and I, as well as most of my friends, can't?"

Conversing with the students, I found out that in Sweden, foreign languages are introduced in their schools starting during early elementary school and continuously taught and reinforced up until their high school graduation. Considering I took my first language course in seventh grade which, by the way, was Latin, and for only one grading period to give me a "taste" of the language — I was impressed.

True, I am bilingual in English and Korean. But the only reason I know any Korean at all is because it is the language my parents have spoken to me since my arrival through the birth canal.

None of it was ever taught to me in a school setting. It was a language that was naturally picked up as a young child and, I like most other young children, am especially receptive and gifted at picking up new languages. These Swedes did not have that luxury — they learned it the hard way through books and effective studying.

Observations such as the former triggered an intense thought process and produced a single question: Why are Americans so monolingual when a vast number of the developed world is not?

There is, of course, the popular — but limited — argument that there simply is not a need for Americans to learn a second language. After all, it is not an uncommon mindset to believe that the English language is the most important in the world, therefore not needing any reason to learn another. But little do we realize how much ignorance is produced from such a mindset; how much we cheat ourselves out of potential interaction with others from different countries. Studies show that individuals who have the ability to speak a second language have a deeper understanding and grasp on their own identity, as well as the cultures of others.

Furthermore, a tremendous amount of research devoted to the effects of early foreign language acquisition have produced remarkable results in terms of the positive benefits reaped by those who have a second language ability while in school.

Results indicate that students who have foreign language abilities are more likely to have better overall academic performance, stronger problem-solving capabilities and score statistically higher on standardized tests than those who do not. The conclusive evidence speaks volumes on the benefits of speaking a second language.

With these thoughts in mind, I would like to make a proposition. Instead of introducing foreign languages in the K-12 levels at the beginning of middle school, why not earlier? Perhaps second grade?

Índividuals are most likely to master a language when exposed to it as early as possible. Often times, by seventh or eighth grade, when languages are most commonly introduced today, it is too late. The United States and its K-12 school system should make it a top priority to incorporate stronger and more comprehensive foreign language programs that start at a young age. It should not be considered an elective but an absolute priority.

We already know that the young benefit greatly from learning a foreign language. But beyond their youth, there are also far-reaching benefits that are just as important.

In today's increasingly global world, an individual with the knowledge of a second language will definitely have a competitive edge in terms of more job opportunities and career advancement. And the more speakers of a second language we have, the more likely our beloved country will remain strong globally, politically and economically.

YOUR VIEWS

Bush not friend of nature

Four years ago, environmentalists had cause to celebrate. Americans own roughly 180 million acres of national forest lands. Most Americans don't know it, but more than two-thirds of our national forest acreage has been ravaged by industrial logging. Taxpayers have paid to build 400,000 miles of logging roads — a network larger than the entire Interstate Highway System combined.

After a two-year process and over 600 public hearings, former President Bill Clinton adopted the Roadless Rule, granting protected status to the one-third of our national forest area that hasn't been mauled by roads and clearcuts. It was the single most important conservation achievement in 20 years. Clinton also designated several new national monuments, protecting such special places as the last wild stretch of the Missouri River, the Missouri Breaks, as well as the last freeflowing stretch of the Columbia.

During his first year in office, President Bush publicly proclaimed that he would support the popular Roadless Rule. Privately, he set out to gut forest protections as quickly as he could. Over one-quarter of all national forest roadless areas are located in Alaska's Tongass and Chugach National Forests. Bush is not only stripping them of their protected status, but Dec. 23, as reporters headed home for Christmas, he announced plans for 50 Tongass timber sales. Targeting the massive trees that grow near streams, the logging will destroy the biological heart of the

The Tongass includes the last uncut remnants of a primeval conifer forest that stretched from southeast Alaska to San Francisco just over a century ago. More grizzly bears live on a single island there than in all the entire lower 48 states combined. Selling off this last primeval forest is a theft from all humanity.

And the Tongass isn't all that
Bush is taking. The Wilderness Act of 1964 obligated Congress to make decisions about outstanding natural areas that might be protected through the wilderness preservation system. The Bush Administration invited private industry to file a trumped-up lawsuit, and then settled the case with an agreement that no more public lands could ever be designated as wilderness. With one peremptory act, Bush precluded wilderness protection for a staggering 220 million acres of public land, giving mining and timber interests the right to despoil an area the size of Oregon, Washington and Idaho combined.

The list goes on. Montana's spectacular Rocky Mountain Front includes some of the last of the unspoiled wild Rockies, and some of the most important wildlife habitat in the country. The administration proposes opening the Front to oil and mining development. They have the same plans for wilderness areas near Yellowstone National Park, where instead of protecting the bison, President Bush's National Park Service now shoots them, pandering to beef industry concerns about brucellosis. No one has the courage to tell ranchers to vaccinate or move their cattle, which graze on federal lands near the park boundary.

If our last primeval forest is cut, an irreplaceable American legacy will be lost forever. If we lose the last grizzly bear habitat, we'll lose the grizzly. This year we do have a choice, though. Senator John Kerry has one of the finest environmental records in the Congress. Kerry led the fight against Bush's plans to drill the Arctic Refuge. Kerry sponsored key environmental legislation such as the Marine Mammal Protection Act, and he has promised to put the Roadless Rule back in place to protect our last wild forests. For Americans who care about the environment, no election in history has offered a clearer alternative. That's why the Sierra Club has endorsed John Kerry for president.

Honor for schools, croquet

Last Thursday, a Southern friend of mine asked me a peculiar question: "Have you ever played croquet?" I looked at him skeptically — of course I hadn't.

Prior to my first game, I knew nothing about croquet beyond a vague notion that it was a blueblood sport played predominantly by a successful, mostly Southern,

For those of you who have never played, croquet is more than a game — it's cut-throat capitalism at its finest. Although the object of the game is to be the first one to get your ball through all the wickets, the catch is that if you hit someone else's ball, you have the ability to knock it as far as possible — off the playing field, past the parking lot, into the lake, if possible.

When my friend first pulled this maneuver, I thought he was cheating. But apparently it's just part of the game. As is often the case in the business world, there is only one winner and you need to take every measure to ensure that the winner is yourself.

It's no wonder that successful, wealthy people gravitate to a game like this. There is a definite of right and wrong, and while peo- on U-Wire.

Political fund-raisers receive 'platinum' perks

By Sharon Theimer Associated Press

WASHINGTON — There is a special reward for fund-raisers who collect at least $100,000 for the House Democratic committee: "exclusive access" to House leader Nancy Pelosi's skybox at the Democratic National Convention.

For political action committees that give and raise at least the same amount this election cycle, the House Republican committee offers a "platinum". convention package includes three hotel rooms, breakfast, convention credentials and tickets to hospitality suites and other events at the Republican National Convention.

The presidential nominating conventions — Democrats gather in Boston in late July, followed by the Republicans in New York City in August-September offer nearly a week's worth of opportunities for lobbyists and other well-heeled types to mingle with members of Congress, state and local lawmakers and other government officials.

The parties are making sure their top supporters know they will not get lost in the crowd.

"Your donors have a big interest in the national conventions," said Carl Forti, spokesman for the National Republican Congressional Committee. "It's the biggest event every four years."

The Republican Committee also offers reduced convention and reception access to those who give or raise at least $30,000. Political action committees at that level get two tickets to the hospitality suite for one night on a first-come, first-served basis, for example.

The Republican and Democratic national committees and Senate fund-raising committees are also providing VIP convention passes to top donors and fund-raisers.

Other perks for those who raise at least $100,000 for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee include a spot on its "National Finance Board," daily convention briefings, an invitation to an event with House Minority Leader Pelosi, D-Calif., at the Kennedy Presidential Library, VIP credentials and exclusive access to hospitality and viewing areas at Boston's Fleet Center.

prospect of daily bus rides to the Fleet Center from motels in the suburbs, the Democratic Committee's top fund-raisers are promised two rooms at a "premier DCCC hotel, located within walking distance" of the convention site.

The committee also rewards those who raise between $15,000 and $50,000, though the package does not include access to Pelosi's skybox.

Rep. Robert Matsui, a California Democrat and Democratic Committee chairman, promoted the convention packages — including a concierge service to help them plan tourist activities — in a letter to prospective fund-raisers.

You will enjoy political briefings, invitations to all of our exclusive events, and many opportunities to be with and speak to members of the Democratic leadership throughout the week," he wrote.

The party conventions are one aspect of election-year politics left largely untouched by a new campaign finance law.

Though corporate, union and unlimited donations to national party committees and presidential and congressional candidates are now banned, such contributors can still give unlimited amounts to local "host committees" that help with convention planning. They can also throw lavish champagne brunches and other receptions off convention grounds for convention attendees, including party leaders and candidates.

The party committees themselves can raise up to $25,000 a year from individuals and political action committees, which are financed by individual donors.

Paul Sanford, director of a watchdog program at the Center for Responsive Politics, said the law has led to some improvements, but convention perks show that things have not changed much.

Junior jumps to Big Ten championship

Lantern sports writer

Junior Rosalind Goodwin flew past the competition at last weekend's Big Ten Championship — literally.

The lanky Goodwin powered into the Ohio State track and field record books for the second time this year, winning a Big Ten championship in the triple jump with an OSU record-tying flight of 43 feet, 2.5 inches.

Goodwin accounted for 22 of the 86 points the fourth-place Buckeye women nois) had some kids that came through amassed in West Lafayette, Ind. She now finds herself in sole ownership of OSU's long jump record while holding a piece of the triple jump pie.

Goodwin's prestigious leap followed a second-place finish in the long jump. Her disappointing performance helped motivate her for the triple jump

"It was all mental. I told myself I couldn't go out with two silver medals. I was disappointed getting out of the sand, but they put the mark up and my dad was in the stands cheering," Goodwin said. "I looked at him, and I was like

It was not always like this for Goodwin. Last year she was lost in the fold, but because of a dedicated off-season workout regimen, Goodwin has become the most improved Buckeye.

'A year ago she was a non-factor as far as the championship in the Big Ten,"

"(Goodwin) stayed and lifted all summer championship momentum by so she was able to put in the work during scorching runner-up perforthe year because she had a good base."

The fourth-place finish did not match the expectations of the women. Going in, the Buckeyes were hoping to score 85 overall points and claim third. Although they eclipsed their goal by one point, the Illinois women upped the ante, and were the surprise of the weekend.

"We were hoping to be third and we gave it a great shot," Warner said. "(Illiwith some really big performances."

Also garnering championship trophies for the women were senior hurdler Molly Logan and junior thrower Keturah

Taylor claimed first in the shot put for the third consecutive year. He is the first since Jordan Gray to three-peat in an event. Gray dominated the Big Ten in the 110-meter hurdles in the early 90's.

Junior distance runner Brian Olinger finished first in the 5,000 meter, running OSU's gold total to seven.

The tournament was the last conference meet for the Buckeye seniors. It will be hard to replace the skill and leadership of participants like Taylor, Brown, Logan and distance runner Rob Myers, but the tools are in place.

money isn't everything

I have stood by my boy for several years now. Through thick and thin I have worn his jersey with pride, so it hurts me to write this:

Tim Couch, grow up. The embattled Cleveland Browns quarterback has reportedly spurned a deal with the Green Bay Packers that would give him a fresh start in a new

A new chance with a new team is exactly what Couch needs. Any Cleveland fan knows this. From the moment he was drafted with the first overall pick in the 1999 NFL Draft, the man has faced every possible situation a young quarterback in the league could possibly face.

Expansion team? Couch led the Browns as their starting quarterback starting in game 2 of their first season back. Quarterback controversy? Just look at last season with its ongoing Couch/Kelly Holcomb debacle. Injuries? When your team refuses to build an offensive line that can protect its quarterback, that QB will take a beating.

The list goes on and on. But through it all, Couch insisted his heart was in Cleveland — and that he wanted to lead the franchise to glory. It was this tenacity and devotion that made me adopt him as my favorite player, and proudly wear his jersey just like I did for Bernie Kosar while growing up.

But after a difficult season for both Couch and the entire Browns organization, it has become obvious his time has passed. Couch lost his starting spot to Holcomb during the preseason, then regained it when Holcomb was injured.

The biggest issue was, unfortunately, the money. Couch is under a contract with Cleveland, which will pay him $7.6 million this upcoming season and $8 million the following year. The Browns, apparently deciding to move forward, signed former San Francisco 49ers QB Jeff Garcia to take Couch's job.

The move came after Couch refused a major cut to his salary in Cleveland. Now, if he stays with the Browns, they will be paying a ton of money for a backup QB. Money that could better be used in any number of positions for the team.

Rather than sit as a lame-duck backup in Cleveland with no real starting prospects, Couch had an alternative option: Learn the system in Green Bay as Brett Favre's backup, then step into the starting role in a year or two when Favre retires.

I cannot think of a better chance for a quarterback seeking to prove he can win. Couch would go to a city that loves quarterbacks and a team that emphasizes its passing game. It's

In return for trading Couch, the Browns would have received a conditional draft pick depending on how much Couch plays as a Packer — as well as the relief of not having to pay his hefty contract.

But Couch vetoed the possible trade, just as he did a restructured contract with Cleveland, because the cut in his salary was too steep. According to the latest story in the Plain Dealer, Couch doesn't want to sit for two years under Favre — he wants one.

I hate to say this, but Tim Couch is not in a position to be making demands. I am convinced he can be a winner, but I am clearly in the minority. It is because of this lack of confidence that teams are not jumping at the chance to sign him.

Tim, shut up and make a move. Your pride is costing you much more than your career can afford right now. Learn what you can from Favre, who is one of the all-time greats in the NFL. And please, stop caring so much about the money.

"We would rather play a team we don't really know about so we can just go out there and give it our all without really thinking about it," said senior first baseman Beth McAbier.

This marks the second time in three years OSU has reached the NCAA tournament.

In 2002 under Kalafatis, the Buckeyes came one victory away from reaching the school's first Women's College World Series.

'I feel like this team is a lot similar to the team from two years ago," McAbier said. "I feel like we can surpass that barrier we tried to overcome my sophomore season. We have some unfinished business, and we would like to make it to the Women's College World Series this time."

Throughout the season, the team has received little attention for their play on the field, which means they will look to play the role of dark horse in the tournament.

"It's always nice to be the underdog. They don't expect you to come out and beat everyone," DeVries said. "So hopefully we'll come out and play our 'A' game and show them what we've got."

OSU freshman pitcher Jamee Juarez releases the ball with intensity during a game earlier this season.

The winners from each of the eight regions will gather on the final weekend of May in Oklahoma ity, Okla., to compete for the NCAA title.

"I think we've got to execute offensively and defensively," Kalafatis said. "We've got to be able to put the ball down in play and come through in key situations."

Hambrick thrives, quarterbacks sink in mixed talent pool

In an odd move to bolster a consistently weak ground game, the Oakland Raiders signed free agent running back Troy Hambrick on Monday, who will compete with Amos Zereoue for the starting job, according to The Associated Press. Hambrick ranked 19th in the league in rushing last year, accuring less than others — afford to pass up years of sta-1,000 yards and averaging just three and a h alf yards per carry. The Cowboys cut Hambrick and will depend heavily upon second-round pick Julius Jones to bring the Emmitt Smith-less Cowboys some ability in the backfield.

At the same time, veteran free agent quarterbacks Kurt Warner, Kerry Collins and Tim Couch are still unemployed — though Couch remains so not over matters of interest, but over contract disputes with the Green Bay Packers. Nonetheless, a mediocre (at best) running back was snatched up in mere days, whereas three proven quarter- lose out with Sharpe's departure, the backs remain unsigned.

Bono sends off U. of Penn seniors

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Bono was careful not to say anything off-color during his commencement speech at the University of Pennsylvania.

"The FCC has taught me a lesson," the 44-year-old rocker said Monday, referring to the Federal Communications Commission's declaration that an expletive he used on last year's Golden Globe Awards broadcast was indecent and profane.

Wearing blue-tinted sunglasses with a black cap and gown, the U2 frontman accepted an honorary doctorate's of law from Penn Presiating Penn students to live up to the ideals of America, of believing there is no problem that can't be fixed.

He also challenged them to take on Africa, with its poverty, epidemics, resentment over unfair trade rules and insurmountable debt. Bono recalled his experiences in famine-stricken Ethiopia in 1985, saying the trip made him "a rock star with a cause."

Ending Africa's extreme poverty is "cheaper than the Marshall Plan in Europe. It's cheaper than fighting wave after wave of terrorism's new recruits," he said. "We have the know-how. We have the cash. We have the lifesaving drugs. But do we have the will?'

In 2002, Bono co-founded Debt AIDS Trade Africa, which works with "enhances the entire project, and religious groups concerned with is a huge asset. Trump is the most global disease and hunger issues.

Brosnan has 51st south of border

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Pierce Brosnan celebrated his 51st Cash film setting birthday in Mexico City, raising a glass of tequila and cutting a cake with journalists covering his latest film, "The Matador."

Brosnan, who has portrayed naded with "Las Mananitas," the traditional Mexican birthday song, Sunday in the upscale Mexico City neighborhood Coyoacan.

He said his cake was especially delicious because it was the first he had ever received from reporters.

After filming "The Matador," the end of his game, Brosnan plans to vacation in Hawai'i. He will then return to the region to play a tourist who witnesses a murder in the film "Mexicali."

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) -Donald Trump, real estate mogul White Plains building boom. He's agreed to market, manage and surprise! — lend his name to a 35story luxury condominium tower.

The building will now be known as the Trump Tower at City Center, not to be confused with the Trump Tower in Manhattan. Trump will be a developed the $325 million City Center project in downtown White Plains.

The project includes rental as well as condominium housing, dent Judith Rodin. He urged gradu- stores such as Target and Circuit City, restaurants, a 15-screen movie theater and the White Plains Performing Arts Center.

The Trump building, where construction has reached the 16th floor, will have 212 luxury condominiums and is expected to be finished next year.

In a recent statement issued by Cappelli, Trump said the building will not only attract the highest level of Westchester purchasers, but will also attract purchasers looking for an alternative to living in Manhattan."

Trump already has one luxury housing project in Westchester the homes on his Trump National Golf Course in Briarcliff Manor, which sell for up to $10 million each. Cappelli said Trump's name prominent residential developer in Manhattan, as well as areas such as Palm Beach, Fla. He also has the highest-rated program on television with 'The Apprentice."

Producers seek

HERNANDO, Miss. (AP) — Producers have visited the Hernando area looking for possible locations for a superspy James Bond, was sere- movie based on the life of Johnny Cash and his wife, June Carter Cash.

"Walk the Line," now in preproduction, is expected to star Joaquin Phoenix as Cash and Reese Witherspoon as June Carter Cash.

Cash, the "Man in Black" of country music, was 71 when he died on Sept. 12, four months after the in which he plays a hit man at death of his wife, June Carter Cash, a member of a family legendary in Nashville, Tenn. She was 73.

Officials from the Memphis & Shelby County (Tenn.) Film and Television Commission visited the Hernando area last week, said Brian Goff, executive director of the Hernando/Main Street Chamber of Commerce.

"They are looking for houses and a hospital location," Goff said.

The Memphis film commission said producers hope to and recent TV star, jumped into the shoot most of the film in Memphis and the mid-South.

Ludacris to 'hustle' way into movies

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - Filming partner with Louis Cappelli, who is scheduled to begin July 10 on an inner-city rap movie produced by John Singleton and directed by filmmaker Craig Brewer.

"Hustle & Flow," starring Terrence Howard ("Big Momma's House"), Anthony Anderson ("Barbershop") and hip-hop artist Ludacris, will be shot over a four-week period.

Brewer has described the $2.8 million independent production as the story of a "pimp-hustler with a mid-life crisis who wants to rap."

His Memphis-based movie, "The Poor and Hungry," won the best digital feature award at the 2000 Hollywood Film Festival.

"Craig has a really unique Southern voice," Singleton said recently. "His filmic identity is linked with the city."

Singleton was nominated for a best-director Oscar for 1991's "Boyz N the Hood." His films also include "Poetic Justice" and 2000's "Shaft."

'Vice' star forced to sell Aspen home

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) --- Actor Don Johnson's 17-acre ranch is for sale for $21 million amid a bankruptcy filing and lawsuits that claim the former "Miami Vice" star or his company owes more than $948,000.

Johnson, who also starred in TV's "Nash Bridges" and appeared in the movie "Tin Cup," bought the ranch 16 years ago, said Joshua Saslove, the broker listing the property.

Los Angeles-based City National Bank sued Johnson in March, seeking to force an auction of the property to recoup $930,000 it claimed Johnson owed.

The ranch, in the Woody Creek area that is also home to writer Hunter S. Thompson, includes a house, guesthouse, office studio, outbuildings and 1,250-square-foot swimming pool, Saslove said.
