College Girls Want Homes, Burkhart Tells Audience

By JEAN STORY

"College girls, almost without exception, want to get married and have a home rather than have a career," Dr. Roy A. Burkhart, pastor of the First Community Church, told the audiences which overflowed University Hall Chapel at two assemblies on Monday night to hear the second in his series of lectures on dating, courtship and marriage.

Dr. Burkhart based this conclusion on his observations in talking with college groups all over the country.

Three Functions of Family

Dr. Burkhart's subject was the family, which he discussed in the light of its past, present and future relation to our culture. He maintained, "It has three functions which no other institution can fill. These are: to provide a relation by which a fundamental love-companionship can be made permanent, growing and real, and within which a new life can be born and which it may be guided on through a course of personality development."

Dr. Burkhart advised young couples facing marriage to look at it together in the light of how their personalities fit each other. They can determine this fairly well by themselves, but objective tests and

Steering Committee Approves New Constitution Based On Model Legislation

Richard E. Curl, A-4, was elected president of the Congress on Social Problems at a meeting of the steering committee of that group at 4 p. m. Monday in the Ohio Union.

A new constitution, providing for forum discussions based on a model legislature plan, was approved. Resolutions will be presented to the Congress after majority and minority committee reports have been made.

The constitution provides for representation on a basis of one delegate and one alternate for each 50 residents of fraternities, sororities, dormitories, the IMA and IWA, and other organizations.

A committee was also appointed to do any necessary additional work on the constitution. Members are Philip J. Hermann, A-4, Elmer Swack, A-4, and Miss Cooper.

counseling are also a help, he said. Family background, particularly in its economic aspects, is another important consideration as is a medical examination to determine physical fitness for marriage, because "homes of flesh and blood," he said, "should be constructed with the same standards for the building as homes of sticks and stones."

"Am I in Love?"

During the question period which followed the lecture, the query, "Will I know definitely when I'm in love?" came up. "Well, I hope so," sighed Dr. Burkhart, and then went on: "If you can enjoy doing things together on a non-sexual basis, even after knowing each other six months or a year—enjoy it so much that when you're together, the most awful part is to be separated, and when you're separated the most wonderful part is to be together, then I'd say you should know definitely!"

Dr. Burkhart promised to discuss dating in great detail at his third lecture on Monday, April 24, at 7:15 and 8:30 p. m., and also to hold a group interview Monday from 5 to 6 p. m. in the Ohio Union, to which he invited those who have trouble dating to come and meet each other and maybe get "fixed up" there and then.

Odds Against War 3 to 1, H. V. Kaltenborn Declares

By JUDITH SMILACK

Hans V. Kaltenborn, dean of radio commentators, is no gambler—not in the literal sense anyway—but he wagers that the odds against war in Europe now are three to one.

Former traveling salesman, reporter, tutor, dramatic editor and newspaper editor, Mr. Kaltenborn has been analyzing the news via air waves since 1922.

He arrived in Columbus at 1:30 Monday afternoon to speak under the sponsorship of the alumnae of Delta Gamma sorority, but was not in evidence until a few minutes before 5:30 p. m., when he was due to participate in an informal interview over radio station WBNS.

Visits Castles

Where had he spent the intervening hours? In his own words—"I knew if I stayed in my room I'd be answering the telephone all afternoon, so I went to a show . . . Vernon Castle . . . wonderful dancing."

Interpreting the latest news bulletins, he explained Hitler's act of calling together the Reichstag to hear him deliver his answer to President Roosevelt's appeal for peace.

"Hitler needs the emotional stimulus of an audience that agrees with him," averred Mr. Kaltenborn. "He has to have the cheers at the end of every sentence." And in an aside—"I rather like it myself . . . it gives me time to translate the preceding sentence."

FDR Plea Success

The President's plea, he characterized as a tactical and diplomatic success. "President Roosevelt put those dictators on the spot," was the way he put it.

Speaking of the way in which the totalitarian states exercised their power over the democracies, Mr. Kaltenborn said that the dictators used the "threat of force" to wreck the nervous energy of democracies and then proceeded to postpone or direct action to some other point.

The anticipated plan whereby Russia and Turkey would join with France and England in an air pact, the commentator called "a tremendous step toward collective security in Europe directed against the aggressor powers—Germany and Italy."

Surprisingly tall, with broad shoulders a little bent, Mr. Kaltenborn has a swinging gait and a ruddy complexion, evincing a vigorous constitution. He talks in crisp sentences and with superb diction.

Traditions (?) Weak

One month from today the student body will be in a feverish whirl of collegiate activity and social celebration which will have been carefully concocted by its wiser and more thoughtful members in the next few weeks. The reference, of course, is to May Week, formerly called Traditions Week, that period of physical exhilaration and intellectual deceleration which is one of the most misunderstood and yet one of the most useful activities repeated on this campus.

Why so? May Week, as it has been designed, serves only as a wastebasket for a disconnected series of accumulated activities which might be observed more conveniently at some other time. Of the whole series of events neatly combined for this program probably there are not half a dozen that are really worthy of being labeled traditions of the University; and one of the most deeply significant of all traditions—"taps"—probably is observed most poorly of all.

The success of May Week, which has led one columnist to remark that "it gets better every year" has been due to a judicious distribution of social events and others which grandpa might have called carnal, many of which have plenty of nothing to relate them to genuine University traditions of the type that ought to be maintained.

The traditions that ought to be maintained are those with real meaning to the University and whose significance will be remembered in years to come. It has been suggested that "taps" is one, and on this basis there is no reason why the traditional spring activity around Mirror Lake ought not to have a place in our traditions along with elections into honoraries and such important institutions as square dancing, mixed swims, and tug-of-wars which haven't tugged for the past two years.

Of course, there is no sense in being puritanical. Social events have their place, and an important one, in such a week dedicated to observance of traditions. But the foolish part of it all is that the perpetrators (and perpetrators) of May Week have taken a whole week out of the school year and have dedicated it to perpetuation of "traditions" which could not meet the test of a true tradition—to have meaning and the ability to survive by itself.

To observe "traditions" only in a program such as this is as rational as to say that one respects, loves and obeys his parents only on Mother's Day and Father's Day, or that he likes his dog only during National Dog Week.

When the sanctimonious feelings of observing "traditions" must be high-pressured into anyone by a flag-waving, horn-blowing process it is high time to investigate the validity of what is observed. The system of life in Germany which has become traditional now has been maintained by similar flag-waving and it should be a reminder to do a little redefinition and revaluation at home.

It is no question here as to how long May Week should continue, because real, meaningful traditions should be maintained. But some attempts should be made to insure proper observance of events that truly are deserving of inclusion as genuine traditions.

Desirable traditions are like modern steel—able to survive by themselves—and not like pickles or beets that have to be preserved in cans.

Traditions should not blockade progress but certainly they must be able to survive by themselves where they live longest—in the minds of the people—and not simply as a date on the calendar.

Not much can be said in defense of our collegiate goldfish guilds, but those west coast boys who tried to set a record for the number of osculations in 30 minutes REALLY have something.

No Axes to Grind

By ROBERT W. FERGUSON

With no deference to "Back Stage Chatter," this column is today going to indulge in some out-in-out propaganda for Scarlet Mask Society. Revived last April after an enforced sleep of eight years, the Mask goes to the Chapel on April 28 and 29 and for the first time since its banishment is to present a book show.

"Cheer As You Go" is no follies or skit production. Its music, songs and plot came from the members of the society and the results are going to be as good as long planning and an inadequate treasury will possibly permit.

Not long ago a gossip columnist in the Ohio State Magazine slyly and cutely stated that Ohio State, great University that it is, had nothing in the musical comedy field which could compare to Harvard's Hasty Pudding, Pennsylvania's Mask & Wig or Princeton's famed Triangle. He then proceeded to blame Scarlet Mask for this failure. Blandly, he wants to know why, after a whole year of existence, the society cannot go on the road and have big shows like the Mask & Wig.

Such statements are stupid and the critic should be reminded that a Pennsylvania show is a $20,000 business while here it is one-fortieth of that. Then, too, such productions are social events in each city where they play and the financial success is assured long before any curtain goes up.

Gossip columnist Ohio Stater should transfer to one of the Eastern schools and then he, too, could dance with the Junior League. If he must stay here, and is sincere about wanting a men's musical comedy organization, let him hold his tongue. He should realize that criticizing a new activity will do no good while helping it will aid its future and development to the well-established class.

Best evidence that the members of Scarlet Mask believe in it and hope for it is shown by the fact that when the curtain rises on April 28 they will have been practicing three to four hours a day, six days a week, for a straight month. Work on the show proper and its music have been going on since last October.

The play's producer, Al Ankrom, is doing an excellent job despite numerous set-backs in getting the cast rehearsed and has done much to raise morale and spirit. All in all, about 60 men students will have contributed to the finished production.

These remarks are not attempts to apologize for Scarlet Mask but rather they are attempts to make the student body realize that here is a chance for them to back a legitimate activity for which there is a definite place in a university the size of Ohio State. If this year's production is a success financially and the Council on Student Affairs sees fit in June to make recognition permanent, then by careful nursing it should, in time, evolve into a prestige group.

Campus support on the two show nights will indicate whether Scarlet Mask goes on or whether this time it is irrevocably cancelled.

Backstage Chatter

... by Paul E. Jacobs

Wednesday night the campus plays host to the Pitt Players who bring that George Abbott riot of the Virginia Military Institute "Brother Rat."

This column makes no predictions nor does it even attempt to climb the tree much less get out on the limb in regard to the performance. We know neither the caliber of the Pitt Players acting nor the type of direction under which they have been working. Our judgment will have to be drawn on the basis of Strollers' and Hillel's past work.

We know the vein of George Abbott shows. Hillel gave us a sample of that last autumn quarter when it produced "Room Service." It literally rocked University Hall Chapel. It had a mile-a-minute pace with laugh piling on laugh hard and furious.

"Brother Rat" in this respect is very similar. It leaves the Broadway, so familiar in Abbott plays, and travels south to the sunshine and hospitality of Old Virginia. It is as gay and refreshing as any mint julep that came over a bar.

It embodies no great plot and the story has been told many times. The thing that makes the play what it is is how the story is told. We have seen it repeated several times in almost every picture that had West Point as its setting. We have seen it ride the waves with the fleet, but we have never seen it told in as buoyant and jolly a manner as it is in "Brother Rat."

This writer has seen both the screen and the legitimate version and we'll take the stage presentation any time. There was something that the play has that was definitely lacking in the cinema attempt. Perhaps seeing it again will renew and refresh our memory.

We sincerely wish the Pitt Players a grand performance and hope that their visit will become a yearly institution.

We have finally gotten around to seeing the screen version of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn." This reviewer is now more certain than ever in the statements he made in one of his recent columns in regard to the quality of Negro acting.

Rex Ingram, as the slave Jim, nearly stole the show away from that talented sprite, Mickey Rooney. Mickey, however, is a tough little trouncer to stop.

Ingram's is a performance that is rich, warm and real. The very simplicity of his style, the beauty and sonority of his voice, the depth of feeling for the part has imbued the character of Jim to make it one of the finest, most likeable and living people that has ever moved across the screen.

It is a vivid impression of reality, of truth and beauty, of great acting that is borne away from the theater.

An actor whose name escapes this writer's mind, but who also helped strengthen his convictions in the same regard, is the one who played the man-servant in "Jesse James." Here again we find simplicity and a naturalness that some of our brighter lights in Cinema Capital might emulate.

Whoa!

"Is your boy friend a hit-and-run driver?"
"I should say not! When he makes a hit, he parks!"

BY THE WAY

THE CHRONICLE AND COMMENT

A Great Low-Brow

In a list of Victorian novels offered in first editions by Pickering and Chatto, of London, novels chiefly which sold hugely in their day, I find several of Marie Corelli's enormously popular tales, many of which survive in the reading of more or less uncultivated book-lovers in England and in this country alike. Miss Corelli was of course always treated with contempt or indifference by the high-brow critics, a fact which naturally irritated her, in view of her knowledge that she was more widely read than any writer of her time; and in the end she grew very independent, and probably took some pride in flouting the critics whose hostility to her seemed more marked with each of her overwhelming successes. Many of those who scorn her have not read her novels at all,—it has long been the fashion to treat her and them as though they counted for nothing and had no virtues whatever. The Cambridge History of English Literature does not even mention her name, a state of affairs which seems to me ridiculous, unless a history of writing is to take no account whatever of books that interest the largest part of the reading public of any country, even though for a generation only. How shall you know what effect the art of writing and the construction of fiction especially have had on not merely literary folk, but people generally, if the most popular writers are treated as though they had never existed? One wants to understand people, sometimes, through a revelation of their literary habits,—the masses of people, I mean, not literary coteries or their followers. If Marie Corelli's books are not literature in the text-book sense, they certainly reached and influenced hundreds of thousands of literate people, and a student of social history as well as of literary history would like to know what that means.

Of course books like "Barabbas" and "The Sorrows of Satan" are lush, over-gorgeous in phraseology, exaggerated in feeling; but amid their melodrama one will find marvelous scene-painting, fervent religious feeling, plenty of purple patches in style, and a sweep and rush of movement that was irresistible to readers in the nineties. For a dozen years Marie Corelli dominated the novel sales of England and America,—"Vendetta," "Thelma," "Wormwood," "The Soul of Lilith,"—these and more were seized upon by thousands of readers eager for the appearance of any new Corelli book. I am not urging that the Corelli novels should be put into the required reading lists of college students; but I think there is some significance in the fact that they would never have had to be required reading for anybody. If there is anything like "significant popularity," Marie Corelli had it; and at least a few paragraphs might be given to the phenomenon by even a high-brow critic, unless he is of the opinion that there is no meaning at all in the choice of books save by people brought up on college standards, let us say. Is literature a social indicator, or not? And what does it indicate, in both directions, not just in one? There is social meaning in the popularity in the last century not merely of the novelists who rank high in the critical judgments, but of people as well like Disraeli, Bulwer-Lytton, G. P. R. James, Rhoda Broughton and Edna Lyall even, "Ouida," Mrs. Henry Wood, Sir Hall Caine, Harrison Ainsworth, Mrs. Braddon, Wilkie Collins, and William Black.

Ohio's State Parks

There is a movement under way now to promote through advertising the interest Ohio people may have in the more beautiful sections of the state, especially those regions which have been made into state parks, places like Ash and Old Man's Cave, Fort Ancient, and many more. Even now these spots are visited annually by many thousands of visitors,—the caretaker at Ash Cave told me that on a fine Sunday, between six o'clock and dark,—for people begin to come early in the day,—as many as four thousand people have driven in. The promoters of the movement, however, feel that much more can be done in the way of attracting Ohio people to the picturesque regions of their own state. Let us hope that the beauty spots may not be mobbed,—there is such a thing as destroying the beauty of a place by making it accessible to everybody.

Years ago I used to know of these Hocking and Perry county sections chiefly through the talk of more or less adventurous Ohio State people who had explored regions then difficult to enter. Laurelville seemed very remote indeed from Columbus; and I listened with interest to the stories of Mr. Drake and Mr. Ed

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, LANTERN:

The Socialist Club wishes to announce that it refuses to support the program of the Peace Mobilization Committee in its demonstration scheduled for next Thursday.

The platform of the "Peace Mobilization" is in essence a declaration of support for the foreign policy of the Roosevelt administration. We are convinced that this policy is calculated to involve the people of the United States in a war which Senator Borah has aptly characterized as a war of rival imperialism.

Believing that the fight against war is as much a fight against "democratic" imperialism as it is a fight against fascist imperialism, the Socialist Club proposes a united front against impending war along the following lines:

1. Refusal to support the American government in any imperialist war.
2. Transfer of war appropriations to an expanded public works and relief program.
3. For a constitutional amendment calling for a war referendum.
4. Material support to struggle against both democratic and fascist imperialism in such countries as Mexico, China, India, Puerto Rico, etc.

The Socialist Club supports the demonstration for peace, but opposes the program of the Committee. We earnestly invite all interested individuals or groups to attend next Wednesday evening's meeting of the Socialist Club in room 104, Derby Hall, to protest against Thursday's "preparedness" demonstration.

The Socialist Club,
Bernard Green, Engr-4.

Editor, LANTERN:

Considerable comment has followed the letter published in the LANTERN April 17, 1939, written by a member of the Stadium Club, which criticized the "River Ducking" activities of a fraternity group.

There seems to be a mistaken identification of the opinion of one person with the Stadium Club as a whole. Any remarks that are made by the individual members of the club, no matter how expressed, should not be interpreted as receiving the endorsement of the Stadium Club or any of its officers.

Richard E. Curl, A-3,
President, Stadium Club.

Thomas and others who roamed those hills and sought out the caverns. Professor Chris Sherman, too, used to take his civil engineers down into those hills, I think, camping with them for days on the hillsides or in the rock shelters while they made their surveys. But I never got into that country myself until, ten or fifteen years ago, I was guided thither by two former students, Mr. and Mrs. Will Ferguson, who were at the time teaching in Logan. One day I went down to Logan by train, and then the three of us in Mr. Ferguson's primitive Ford, set out over narrow, rough hill roads, where two cars could not pass a good deal of the time, and pushed the car far into those wild places, where yet farmers had built and tilled the hill-sides and the little valleys, but where visitors seldom came. Eventually we got to the top of the great gorge below which is Ash Cave, now easily reached from below over Route 56, along a perfect road. Old Man's Cave, Cantwell Cliffs, Rock House, Conkle's Hollow,—all these and many more are now pleasure spots for picnickers at every week end, easy to come to and provided with good shelters, fireplaces, wells, seats and tables. But coming and brushing them has made them a bit different from what they were in days when to get to them was a real adventure, and when finding one of them was an achievement to be talked about.

I should like to be at the upper end of Ash Cave gorge, today, this gray Saturday after two days rain. Over the lip of the cliff just now there must be pouring a torrent that leaps with a shout into the chasm below, fifty feet down or more; and all the great walls of ancient rock must be drenched with the rain, dark there in the sunless gorge. It is a place of mystery on such days, empty, forbidding, a region where dragons might dwell in the solitude, where perils might lurk in the gloom and the shadowy recesses. Yet nothing is there save the movement of the birds with wet wings flitting from tree to tree, or a squirrel, maybe, scampering along the ground. I like to think, too, that in a lull in the roar of the water-fall one might hear the magical voice of a wood-thrush, hidden away in the green branches of the beeches whose silver bark is streaked with the dark the rain makes.

The Idler.

Sees Golfers as Only Brave Athletes
As They Brave Rains to Play Their Match with the Wolverines Monday

Lantern Sports Editor

Some people may laugh at golf because it is supposedly an old man's game, but they will have to hand it to Ohio State's team together with the visiting Michigan golfers who braved the everlasting rains Monday to play off their scheduled dual match. It was pouring as usual Monday at 10 a. m., but the boys set out to play regardless and they were rewarded in the afternoon when old Jupe Pluvius decided to turn off the faucet for a few hours to let the sun get a little exercise.

This weather situation is really getting the Ohio State coaching staff down and we can't blame it one bit. Take Fritz Mackey for instance. Poor Fritz has had practically no chance to get his boys out for a good workout since they returned from their spring trip. They played one game with Ohio U., but it was so cold that no one could have baseball on his mind.

Fritz just had two games with Michigan State cancelled over the week end because of rain. The scheduled opening Big Ten series with Michigan here Friday and Saturday might be called off also if this rain keeps up.

Herman Wirthwein and his tennis team are also getting it in the neck too because of the weather. He had one match called last week because of rain, and it doesn't look as if the match with Oberlin today will be played. Lack of practice for his squad is not comforting Wirthwein either.

100 Years of Baseball . . .

Back in 1839, Abner Doubleday, a cadet at West Point, founded the game of baseball which is known as the national pastime for the United States. In 100 years of baseball, the game has progressed to a point where it is played by almost every sports-loving fan in our country and is witnessed by many others who are unable to participate in the game.

Mackey is in charge of the centennial celebration for the campus here and he is planning a program for the week of April 30 which will be climaxed by the two-game series with Northwestern on May 5 and 6. Among the things planned for the celebration will be the showing of a baseball film featuring the major league stars of the game.

Baseball is heading for its biggest year with the major leagues already in action and Mackey is hoping to make it the Bucks' biggest season also, not only from the standpoint of a winning team, but also in the interest of bringing out more fans to watch the local games. Our youthful and talented diamond mentor has shown a lot of enthusiasm at the helm of the nine and you can look for a real spirit among the players in addition to seeing some talented ball players in action.

Short Bits from Here and There . . .

This month's issue of the Athletic Journal carries an interesting article on the athletic setup at Ohio State and is written by Major John L. Griffith—czar of Western Conference athletics. This article is one of a series written for this periodical by Griffiths and has included stories about Southern California, Michigan and Minnesota . . . Look for a big comeback by the Buckeye gridders this fall . . . Though Schmidty will be dealing from the "iffy" deck . . . he has many promising freshmen who make the situation look very bright . . . When and if Johnny Rabb is in top shape next fall, the Bucks will have two of the greatest backs in the country ready to shoot against opponents in Rabb and Jim Langhurst.

Bright Season Forecast For Buck Tennis Captain

George Mechir, captain of Ohio State's tennis team, is considered a real fellow by his teammates. He is to the tennis team what Jimmy Hull was to the basketball squad, and what Steve Andrako hopes to be for the football team. He instills that indefinable something called "spirit" into his mates, giving them the urge to win against the strongest odds.

George, or "Dottie," as he is called by his intimates, took up tennis in his freshman year at Cathedral Latin High School in Cleveland. He made the team in his sophomore year after only one season of practice. He captained the team as a senior and played in the number one position.

Until he passed the age limit, while still in high school, Mechir was rated one of the best junior netters in the state.

Holds Many Titles . . .

The titles Mechir holds in Cleveland tennis circles are too numerous to mention. He won several tournaments last year and is one of the ranking players in the city.

Mechir's game and strokes are practically perfect. He hits the ball with almost no top spin thus imparting terrific "pace." This, plus his determined spirit to win when behind, makes him a difficult adversary to overcome.

All that was needed to add a finishing touch to George's game last spring was a trifle more competitive experience. This was acquired last summer when he engaged in various tournaments throughout the country.

Serious Contender . . .

Mechir is going to be a serious contender, this season, for top honors in the Big Ten. Last spring at Chicago he was eliminated in the semifinals in his division, but with added competitive experience under his belt, it is unpredictable how far he may go.

Mechir's modesty, ready smile and excellent personality make him one of the best liked men on the Ohio State campus.

Swing music takes up most of George's time outside of his studies and tennis. He has one of the most extensive collections of swing records ever assembled under one phonograph. "If I could swing a tennis racket like Benny Goodman can swing a clarinet," says George, "I'd be in the groove."

Star High Jumper At Drake Relays

URBANA.—Captain Bob Diefenthaler, who will lead a University of Illinois track squad to the Drake relays April 28 and 29 will have two strong incentives to spur him in the high jump.

One is to retain the championship in the event which he won last year and the other to shoot at the Drake record of 6 feet 6 inches, made by another Illinois jumper, the famous Harold Osborn, in 1922.

Osborn's Drake mark is also the Illinois outdoor record. Diefenthaler has already established a new Illinois indoor record of 6 feet 6 1/2 inches. He will encounter strong competition at Des Moines but has won the jump in the Illinois relay carnival, the Big Ten indoor meet and the Butler and Chicago relays. Michigan's track team, Big Ten champions, will open the outdoor season here Saturday. The meet will be followed by a baseball game against Iowa.

Rollins College annually "Edits" an animated magazine which features articles delivered in person by famous United States leaders.

Injuries, Ineligibility Hit Hard as Thinlies Prepare for Hoosiers

By DON SMITH

With the first track meet of the outdoor season scheduled for Saturday at Indiana, Track Coach Larry Snyder and his cinder squad are beginning to take inventory of a team that has had its power seriously depleted by injuries and ineligibility.

Although the Bucks boast of an indoor victory over the Hoosiers, they will have to perform above par to repeat the win Saturday.

Gone are the valuable hurdle points that Art Pagel could always be counted upon to score. The lanky junior failed to hurdle the scholastic requirements, and with him missing Coach Snyder can figure on 8 to 10 points less per meet.

To make matters worse, the Bucks may also have to go without the services of Don Smith, No. 2 hurdler. Smith performed most of the indoor season with an injured arch and subsequent workouts have only served to increase the seriousness of the hurt.

Lone Performer . . .

Ineligible for the indoor campaign, Ove Brandt will be the lone performer in the stick events for the Bucks.

The absence of Pagel may mean the difference between victory and defeat against Billy Hayes' outfit, for against the Hoosiers indoors, Pagel won the high hurdles and was barely edged out by Indiana's Roy Allen in the low hurdles.

The burden will fall upon the shoulders of the middle-distance, distance and dash men as has been the custom for many past years. Now that he is outdoors, Co-Captain Bob Lewis looks more at home. The shorter indoor distances never allowed Lewis to get up full steam. Lewis should take both dash events for the Bucks.

"440" Safe . . .

Although he is fully recovered from his sinus operation, Co-Captain Harley Howells has only been working out regularly for a week and may have a little trouble in winning the 440-yard dash. However, with Jack Sulzman in this event Coach Snyder need not worry too much about the Buckeyes receiving their share of points.

The Scarlet mile relay team should take the Hoosiers with Lewis, Cooper, Sulzman and Howells comprising the quartet.

Les Eisenhart is being counted upon to ring up a first place in the half-mile run and the hard working sophomore will probably be used in the mile run which he is capable of running in 4 minutes 20 seconds.

If the Bucks lose it will be because of their inferiority in the field events. Forrest Fordham, shot-putter, has been lost through ineligibility as has Charley Maag. The latter holds the state discus record and would have been invaluable to the Bucks in this event.

Board Awards

Nine Varsity O's

Nine athletes at Ohio State who participated in winter sports have been awarded Varsity letters by the Board of Athletic Control.

Those receiving the awards were: Robert Martin, Richard Varney, Donald MacIntyre, Tony Montanaro, Glenn Griffith, Rudolph Meyer, Jean Peltier and George Downes, all members of the wrestling team.

Lester Eisenhart was awarded a letter for his work on the indoor track team.

Frosh Cagers' Grades Refute Axiom Which Holds Athletes Shirk Studies

Refuting the general impression that an athletic squad slides through its classroom work with the lowest possible grades, the Ohio State freshman basketball squad compiled a point average during the recent winter quarter that might well be the envy of any other group on the campus.

The 33 boys composing the freshman squad finished their classroom work with a composite average of 2.46 points out of a possible 4. University officials say it would be difficult to pick another group of boys on the campus that would finish a

Sports Personalities . . . Cupid Calls Inventor of Basketball

LAWRENCE, Kans., April 18—(UP)—For years Dr. James Naismith has made almost daily visits to the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity house on the University of Kansas campus.

The boys appreciated his interest in their activities. As the inventor of basketball—back at the Springfield, Mass., YMCA in 1891—he was among the fraternity's most prominent alumni.

Today they knew that his love for them was shared by another. She was their housemother, Mrs. Florence M. Kincaid.

Mrs. Kincaid announced her engagement to Dr. Naismith Monday night at a chapter meeting of the fraternity while the 77-year-old professor of physical education waited upstairs for the ensuing congratulations. They will be married late this spring.

Dr. Naismith's first wife died two years ago. Mrs. Kincaid's husband, a Beloit, Kans., dentist, died four years ago.

Sutherland In New Job

HARRISBURG, April 18—(UP)—Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland, former University of Pittsburgh football coach, returned to his "first love" today when he started his new duties as Dental Health Division Director in the State Health Department.

In accepting the $4200-a-year post at a conference with Health Secretary John J. Shaw late Monday, Sutherland finally put to rest many rumors concerning his future plans since his resignation as Pitt coach last March 6.

In accepting his new job, Sutherland said:

"I had no intention of coaching this fall. I did not leave Pitt to take another coaching job."

Cornell Gridders Pump Bicycles

Coach Carl Snavely has put his football squad candidates on bicycles and sent them pedaling over Cornell University's broad 1000-acre campus to build up their leg and back muscles for the fall campaign.

When spring practice gets under way, regular week-end bicycle trips with side excursions over the track oval will be scheduled, said Snavely, putting a ban on automobiles. In addition, the grid hopefuls will have to add up plenty of miles on wheels during the summer vacation.

"American youth is softening up because of riding in automobiles instead of walking and running as our generation did," said Snavely. "The result has been a general physical decline and weakening of back and leg muscles."

CO-ED SPORTS

By

MARDELLE KLEINMAN

Game called because of rain! And if it isn't rain, it's wet grounds, so they seem to have postponed much of last week's activity to this week.

Archery Club's tryouts were rained out all three days last week, so they'll take place within the next few days. Similarly, Boat and Saddle Club will stage tryouts Wednesday afternoon at 4 because it rained Sunday morning.

Women's doubles in the table tennis tournament will begin Thursday. Eight teams have signed up, and it will be an elimination match. Results from last week's singles games leave the following winners: J. Cook, D. Fornia, E. Klein, M. Eaton, H. Freyhof, F. Savage, J. Anding, E. Fitzgerald, R. Liborsky, J. Korn, C. Powell and V. Wirtz. The second round will be played this week.

In the badminton activity, the club will meet tonight, as usual, and the tournament will be continued Wednesday night. Mixed bowling tournament will begin tonight and the total score of the partners will determine the winner of the match.

WRA will meet at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday in 307 of Pomerene Hall. And at 5 p. m. the same day the Outing Club committee for the camp week end will make plans in the lecture room. In case it rains that week end, there will be an outing day around the campus instead.

The last news we have is of the swimming activity. Swan Club will meet tonight, and we thought you might like to be reminded of the mixed swims every Wednesday night in the men's Natatorium. The hours are from 7:30 to 9 p. m.

Diamond Squad Practices Indoors

The Ohio State University baseball team, stymied in several early games due to weather conditions, will open its home season Friday afternoon when the Michigan State club invades the Stadium diamond. The same clubs will meet in a second game Saturday afternoon.

Coach Fritz Mackey has been working his boys indoors since their return from the Southland but reports that a great deal of progress has been made. Mackey is undecided on his moundmen for the Michigan State meeting, but probably will send his ace pitcher, John Dagenhard, to the hill on Friday with Jimmy Sexton of football fame, doing the twirling duties on Saturday. Wulforth and Morgan will divide the catching assignment.

Annual Job School Committee Meets

The executive committee of the third Annual Job Hunters School met at 4 p. m. today in room 2 of the Ohio Union to plan the future program of the school.

Dates, speakers and places of meetings will be decided at that time. Elmer J. Shapiro, Com-4, president, said today. Besides appointing committees the executive committee will discuss ways in which the school can be improved and enlarged.

Job Hunters School is a project of the Council of Fraternity Presidents to acquaint graduating seniors and other interested persons with desirable methods of getting and holding jobs.

Ace in Sleeve New Grid Trick

Murray State Teachers College's quarterback next fall is going to have to be a good "dealer" as well as signal caller.

Coach Roy Stewart revealed recently he would equip his field generals with 2- by 4-inch waterproof cards containing diagrams of intricate plays and defense formations. The quarterbacks are to carry the cards in zipper pockets.

As Stewart plans it, should the team become confused as to what to do on a certain play, the quarterback is to pass a card diagraming the play to each member of the team in a huddle.

Swan Club Lists Swimming Meet

Six Ohio college teams will compete with Ohio State co-eds in a swimming meet to be held on the campus on Saturday, April 29. Swan Club is sponsoring the meet and there will also be a water pageant at the same time in the men's Natatorium.

Colleges competing will be Lake Erie, University of Toledo, Capital University, Wilmington, Ohio Wesleyan, Antioch and Ohio State. Rachel Gillespie and Virginia Wirtz are in charge of arrangements.

All events are open to the public and the meet is scheduled for 1 p. m. Following the meet there will be a tea for Swan Club members and their guests. Emma Lou Adams is in charge of the tea.

* The meet was divided into three morning and two afternoon rounds of play. At the end of the morning's play Michigan led 8 1/2 to 1/2.

The results of the morning matches were: singles, Lynn Riess (M), defeated Don Houser (O), 4 up, collecting three points for Michigan to none for Ohio; doubles, Bob Palmer and Tom Tussing (M), defeated Frank Bellino and Charlie Carl (O), 3-2, to give Michigan another three points to none for Ohio; Jack Emory and Jim Loar (M), beat Chick Evans and Sam Bartschy (O), 3-2, adding 2 1/2 points to Michigan's total to 1/2 for Ohio.

Afternoon Disastrous . . .

The afternoon rounds were again disastrous for the Buckeyes. Michigan added 11 1/2 points to its total, while the Bucks could only register 3 1/2 tallies.

Results of the afternoon matches, all of which were singles, were: Jack Emory (M), defeated Charlie Carl (O), 1 up, adding two points to Michigan's total to one tally for Ohio; Lohm (M), defeated Chick Evans (O), 5-4, giving Michigan three more points to none for Ohio; Frank Bellino (O), defeated Tom Tussing (M), 2-1, marking up two points for Ohio to one for Michigan; Bob Palmer (M), defeated Sam Bartschy (O), 1 up, scoring two tallies for Michigan to 1/2 point for the Bucks; Lynn Riess (M), defeated Tony Montanaro (O), 3-2, to give Michigan two more points to one for Ohio.

Matches Close . . .

The matches were all close, but the superiority of the Michigan putters on the green was the deciding factor of play.

Coach Bob Kepler blamed the Buckeye defeat on the lack of competition and opening match jitters. Michigan had played five matches previous to this meet, while the Scarlet has been idle.

The Bucks will now prepare for the Alumni match scheduled for this Saturday.

Minnesota Features Indoor Golf Gym

One of the features of the University of Minnesota's golf plan is an indoor golf gym measuring 130 feet in length and approximately 40 feet wide. During the winter the university's professional offers brief instruction to students who visit the place.

Each year outdoors, Minnesota stages a number of exhibition matches. One of the most popular is a match in which the university professional and a professional from one of the other Minneapolis courses plays against the Gophers' best two student golfers. Occasionally the match is delayed long enough for the professionals to explain to the spectators why one club is used in preference to another.

University of Kansas students are voting for a new type of queen—they'll elect an intelligence queen.

Nevada and Wyoming have only one institution of higher learning each.

Agricultural Circle Holds April Meeting

University Dames to Gather Tonight; Women's Club Groups Busy with Meetings

By MARTHA ANN HINKLE
Society Editor

Today, it seems, is a popular day for meetings. For instance—the April meeting of the Agricultural Circle met at 2:30 this afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. I. Falconer, Mr. Bryce C. Browning, secretary of the Muskingum Watershed Conservancy District, discussed the purpose, procedure and future of the project and showed related films. The program was under the direction of Mrs. Donald Herrman and hostesses included Mrs. E. B. Tussing, Mrs. Frank Beach, Mrs. H. W. Harshfield, Mrs. L. H. Burgwald, Mrs. P. T. Gillie, Mrs. George Crane and Mrs. W. H. Palmer.

University Dames

The University Dames will entertain their husbands at 8 tonight in the grand lounge of Pomerene Hall. Mr. E. S. Thomas, outdoor editor of the Columbus Dispatch, will discuss "The Lure of the Sandstone Country." The lecture will be illustrated with lantern slides of Hocking County. Mr. Thomas is curator of natural history at the Museum.

Music

The music group of the University Women's Club met Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Norman Lattin. Mrs. Samuel Rasor spoke on "Poems and Legends Which Have Inspired Music."

Social Service

The social service group of the same organization will gather at the home of Mrs. Eugene Van Cleef at 12:30 p. m. Wednesday. Assisting hostesses will be Mrs. Lawrence Hill and Mrs. Galen Oman.

Drama

The evening drama group will be meeting at 8 Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. Edison L. Bowers. The program will be in charge of Mrs. S. M. Marco, with Mrs. Glen Howard, Mrs. Richard Buck and Mrs. G. A. Fry.

And that's all . . . but things are looking up!

School Musicians To Visit Campus

6000 Students Will Attend State Music Competitions Friday and Saturday

Six thousand Ohio high school students—and as many more parents, teachers and friends—are expected to attend the state secondary schools music competition finals, to be held on the campus Friday and Saturday.

These students will be members of the 32 girls' glee clubs, 11 boys' glee clubs, 29 mixed choruses and 34 orchestras which have survived district eliminations throughout the state.

Schedule
Vocal events will be held Friday and instrumental competition is scheduled for Saturday. Starting at 9:30 a. m. both days, and lasting until 6 p. m., there will be a "fouring" program under way simultaneously in the Armory, Rehearsal Hall and the two at the men's gymnasium.

This is the seventh annual event of its kind to be held at the University, and Professor Eugene J. Weigel, department of music and state festival chairman, predicts that it will be the largest yet.

Married Students Invited to Tell All

Dr. Perry P. Denune, department of sociology, will speak on "What the Family Does for its Members" at a meeting of the Institute for Social Living at 7:30 p. m. Thursday, in the blue lounge of Pomerene Hall.

Several married students and their wives have accepted an invitation to discuss their marriage experiences and problems at a future meeting of the Institute.

Other topics to be discussed by the Institute before the quarter closes are: "Psychological Problems of the Family," "Economic Problems of the Family," and "Problems of Young Child Care."

Capital University students stage an annual "Pay Your Debt Day" on which they settle their financial obligations.
