OSU: The birthplace of presidents

By Bridget Dinneen and Ben Finley
Lantern staff writers

Ohio State not only gives students the opportunity to "Do Something Big," it also trains its deans for more illustrious positions — at other universities. Because of OSU's reputation, many deans have been recruited from the university for more prominent positions such as university presidents, vice presidents, chancellors, creators of new academic programs, and even head of the American Red Cross.

Since the fall of 1997 at least half of OSU's 24 deans have left their positions at the university, according to a Summary of Position Turnover by the Office of Human Resources and the Office of Academic Affairs. Five of the former deans have become presidents of other universities, two became OSU vice presidents, and one was promoted to president of OSU's Newark Campus. Former Dean Bernadine Healy, who could not be reached for comment, went on to head the American Red Cross.

"Ohio State is a place where people go to look for candidates," said Dave Ferguson, former associate vice president of University Relations and current associate vice chancellor for Public Relations at the State University of New York. "It earned a reputation in the early '90s as the birthplace of presidents."

OSU is considered such a complicated and complex organization that if a dean can be successful here, then he or she can be successful at a lot of other places as well, Ferguson said.

A dean considers many factors when contemplating job offers from other institutions, said Joseph A. Alutto, dean of the College of Business since 1991. These factors include having the potential to accomplish personal and institutional goals, making a difference in the current position, having the opportunity to develop new skills and having fun.

"This is a good institution where deans have a lot of autonomy, and that's what keeps us here," Alutto said.

But the departure of deans takes its toll.

Briggs Cormier, president of the Council of Graduate Students, said a high turnover rate of deans has the potential to hurt the university because deans provide leadership, guidance and vision.

"When deans leave, the focus of the college is being disrupted," Cormier said.

Provost Ed Ray said there are major challenges in replacing deans who have left for other positions.

"A tremendous amount of effort by many individuals goes into recruiting a new dean for a college and that increases the risk that important matters are not going to be attended to in a timely manner," Ray said. "(Searches for deans) make substantial demands on the institution while they are in process."

In Pat Mielke's article "How the Changing Job Market is Changing the Face of Staff Recruitment," Mielke said hiring qualified staff in the academic profession and getting them to stay is becoming more and more difficult. Some universities have hired full-time professional recruiters to keep up with high turn-over rates.

Chuck Knapp, managing partner of the Higher Education Practice for the personnel recruiting firm Heidrick & Struggles, said the skills deans learn at OSU make them very employable, and also very hard to replace.

"People have great experience by the time they leave OSU, including a broad range of administrative responsibilities; successfully managing budgets, fund-raising, revising curriculum, increasing research efforts and managing promotion and tenure programs," Knapp said.

Deans at OSU, especially in the colleges of medicine, business and engineering, are almost like a CEO of a company, said former Engineering Dean David B. Ashley. Not all universities give deans that kind of respon-

Moods, weather affect investors' confidence in stock market

By Laura Flodin
Lantern staff writer

Investing in the stock market can be a risky experience. Sunshine, moods and stock returns have a statistically reliable relationship, according to new research done by David Hirshleifer, the Kurtz chair in finance at the Fisher College of Business.

"There is a lot of evidence from psychology that sunlight affects people's moods and also affects how people behave," Hirshleifer said. "If people are more optimistic when the sun shines, they may be more inclined to buy stocks on sunny days."

Papers have been written on how sunshine influences markets. In 1993 E.M.J. Saunders wrote in the "American Economic Review" that when it is cloudy in New York City, the New York Stock Exchange index returns tend to be negative.

Hirshleifer started his research in 1982 with Tyler Shumway, assistant professor of finance at the University of Michigan. They wrote a paper on their research called "Good Day Sunshine: Stock returns and the Weather."

Their research found that moods affect how people evaluate stocks. When people evaluate arguments in good moods they tend to be less critical and more receptive to the arguments, even weak ones, than when they are in bad moods.

Hirshleifer and Shumway gathered data from 26 cities around the world that had major national stock exchanges from 1982 to 1997. The weather data was collected from the International Surface Weather Observations (ISWO) sold by the National Climactic Data Center. The data contains detailed descriptions of the weather at 3,000 locations worldwide.

"What we did was from the daily level we looked at the statistical relation between stock returns in each country and the weather," Hirshleifer said.

According to the statistics, the research proved a highly reliable relationship between the two.

"When there's more cloud cover, stock returns are on average lower," he said.

When looking at all 26 countries in the U.S. stock market this proved to be true. They found on sunny days the average return would work out to 25 percent annually, but on cloudy days the return dropped to less than 9 percent.

In their evidence Hirshleifer and Shumway found people making bad investment decisions because they are influenced by their moods. The most important recommendation when trying to evaluate a stock or what the stock market is worth, is to take a step back and evaluate ones mood at the time.

"It's been found that when you point out to people the thing in their environment that's affecting their mood, then they are able to adjust for it," Hirshleifer said.

Hirshleifer advises people to be cautious if basing their investments on the weather. The research is still fairly new and critics say not just traders who live in one city influence stock prices, but investors all over the country make stock market trades.

Hirshleifer and Shumway said that they do not expect New York to be the only influence in stock prices. They did point out, however, that most of the major institutional investors and brokerages are located in New York and most of the important exchanges are made there.

Hirshleifer is working to extend this research and to understand whether seasonal variations and weather conditions might be related to seasonal moods in stock prices.

Bendapudi's love of learning creates passion for teaching

By Michelle Woodgeard
Lantern staff writer

Many college students, have had the opportunity to learn from at least one special teacher who has pushed them academically and displayed a contagious enthusiasm for the subject they teach.

For many students, assistant professor Neeli Bendapudi is that special teacher.

Bendapudi was one of the recipients of the Ohio State 2000-2001 Alumni Award for Distinguished Teaching. The recipients of this annual award are nominated by students and colleagues and then are chosen by a committee comprised of students, faculty, and alumni. More than 300 faculty have received this award since it was created in 1960.

Recipients of the Distinguished Teaching Award receive $3,000 donated from the Alumni Association and a $1,200 increase in their base salaries. They are also inducted into Ohio State's Academy of Teaching, which strives to improve teaching at the university.

Bendapudi said receiving the award was a complete surprise and she never expected the honor at this stage in her career.

"To be recognized across the university where there are so many talented professors is something beyond anything I have experienced, and it is definitely a big plus," Benapudi said. "It will always be among one of my most cherished memories, without a doubt."

Since Bendapudi's arrival at OSU in 1996, she has taught managerial marketing and promotional strategies at the undergraduate level. She has developed and taught a services marketing course at the MBA level that Business Week magazine mentioned as one of Fisher College's most recommended courses.

She received the Pace Setters Undergraduate Teaching Award in 1998 along with AMA Marketing Professor of the Year Award that same year.

Also in 1998, she was the faculty honoree at the SPHINX and Mortar Board Senior Faculty/Staff Recognition Reception.

In 2000, she received the MBA program's Outstanding Elective Professor Award from that year's class.

Bendapudi said teaching is a passion that grew out of a strong emphasis on education during her childhood in Vizag, India.

"I guess teaching is almost in my blood because both my parents are professors, and I grew up in a small university town, which I was very comfortable in that environment," Bendapudi said. "Also, the schooling I received had a heavy emphasis on education."

Bendapudi received her bachelor's and master's degrees from Andhra University in India where she took a consumer psychology course that sparked her interest in marketing.

"The professor that I had was a wonderful role model. She really encouraged me to pursue this," said Bendapudi.

Bendapudi traveled to the states to study marketing at the University of Kansas, where she earned her doctorate. She went on to teach at Texas A&M University for two years before she and her husband, Venkat were offered positions at OSU. Bendapudi said one of the reasons they accepted the positions at OSU was due to the engaging faculty and administrative members of Fisher College.

"In the marketing department, there is a core group of us that eat lunch together each day," Bendapudi said. "Having supportive colleagues makes a

Blood drive at Schott to aid Central Ohio

By Erika Quiroga
Lantern staff writer

Ohio State and the American Red Cross are teaming up for the third year with the "Give Someone a Schott at Life," blood drive on Wednesday, from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Schottenstein Center.

"OSU faculty and students have shown tremendous support in the past. We are hoping for another really good turn out," said Bethany Dohnal, spokeswoman for the American Red Cross.

The American Red Cross hopes to collect 200 units of blood at the Schottenstein Center, which would count for one-third of the region's daily collections.

"The blood that we collect is distributed after being tested in a Detroit laboratory, to 27 different counties and 54 hospitals in Central Ohio," Dohnal said.

Dohnal said between Memorial Day and Labor Day blood donations decrease while the demand increases.

"Donors are less likely to give blood due to vacations and fun in the sun. At the same time, there is an increase in traumas, including boating accidents and motor vehicle crashes, which often require blood," Dohnal said.

Dohnal explained that the blood supply is very fragile.

"There is no substitute for human blood and it is perishable. Blood is only good for 42 days. It just takes one hour to help save someone's life this summer," Dohnal said.

Donors will receive a free T-shirt, register for prize drawings, and have the satisfaction of helping to save lives. Central Ohio Diabetes is also offering optional free screenings from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Blood donors must be at least 17-years-old, weigh at least 110 pounds, and be in general good health and bring a photo identification.

Provost Ray to recommend new dentistry dean

By Todd LaPlace
Lantern staff writer

Jan Kronmiller has been recommended for appointment as the new dean of the Ohio State College of Dentistry by Vice President and Provost Ed Ray.

"In searching for a new dean of the College of Dentistry, we felt it was important to find someone with established credentials as an administrator, a person with good people and management skills, and who was established as an outstanding teacher and scholar," Ray said.

President William "Brit" Kirwan will submit Kronmiller's name to the Board of Trustees at the Aug. 29 meeting for approval.

Kronmiller serves as chair of the Department of Orthodontics at Oregon Health Sciences University's School of Dentistry. He has also served as a professor since 1993, teaching in the predoctoral and graduate programs at OHSU's dental school.

Kronmiller has received numerous honors, including being named a fellow by both the American College of Dentists and the International College of Dentists. He has also been awarded the National Institute of Health's National Research Service Award and Individual Physician Scientist Award.

Attending Ohio State in the 1970s, Kronmiller earned his bachelor's degree in chemistry and a doctorate of dental science. He also holds a doctorate in biomedical sciences from the University of Connecticut and is certified in pediatric dentistry and orthodontics.

Before joining OHSU, Kronmiller served as head of orthodontics at the University of Kentucky and as an assistant professor of pediatric dentistry at the University of Pittsburgh. He also worked in private practice for several years.

Kronmiller will replace Henry Fields, who has served as dean for the past 10 years. Ray said Fields indicated at the beginning of the 1999/2000 academic year that he did not wish to return as dean. The university spent almost a year conducting a national search for Fields' replacement.

Brain glue helps patients

By Alicia Code
Lantern staff writer

With the recent approval of a type of "brain glue," treatment of Brain Arteriovenous Malformations is becoming safer and more effective.

According to the Toronto Brain Vascular Malformations Study Group, AVM's are an abnormal tangle of blood vessels with weakened walls. These vessels become engorged with blood and then can hemorrhage and bleed, damaging surrounding brain tissue.

"AVM's occur because of genetic predisposition that doesn't manifest itself till years later," said Gregory A. Christoforidis, assistant professor of interventional and diagnostic neuroradiology.

There are three current treatments for AVM's; embolization, surgery, and radiation. Embolization is when the glue is used. The glue is similar to super glue. It is a liquid embolic agent called n-Butyl Cyanoacrylate and it is injected into the AVM in the brain through a catheter that is inserted in the groin.

"Usually if used in conjunction with something else, either surgery or radiation it makes it much more effective," Christoforidis said. "Studies that have been done in the past have shown that with good embolization of the AVM before surgery or radiosurgery, 10 to 40 percent of the time it will completely work to get rid of the AVM."

Before the approval of the glue other types of agents were used in the embolization process.

"People were injecting particles and coils but they don't always work and are not a permanent solution. The glue actually works and is a permanent occluding agent," Christoforidis said.

New program to reward Cold War defense workers

By Jennifer Rudzinski
Lantern staff writer

Sen George V. Voinovich recently announced a new program to compensate Cold War-era defense workers for illnesses they contracted from exposure to hazardous materials.

The program was launched on July 31 and the U.S. Department of Labor is evaluating applications and will begin to award funds to workers and their families.

"For decades people worked on the front line devoting their lives and they became very ill," said Scott Milburn, spokesperson for Sen. Voinovich. "The federal government pretended their illnesses didn't exist."

The law the federal compensation program is authorizing will make employees who were sickened by exposure to radiation, beryllium or silica in the workshop eligible for $150,000 in one lump-sum and lifetime benefits relating to exposure.

Surviving spouses and dependent children of deceased employees will also be eligible for compensation.

According to the U.S. Department of Energy, workers from 35 departments, along with atomic weapons facilities in Ohio, are eligible to participate in the program.

The labor department will administer compensation and health benefits, while theenergy department will assist workers in filing state workers' compensation claims.

Ohioans working for B & T Metals and the King Avenue and West Jefferson Battelle Laboratories during certain dates when the organizations did work on nuclear weapons systems are eligible to apply for benefits.

Anyone eligible for the compensation can get applications online at the Department of Energy Worker Advocacy Program Web site at www.eh.doe.gov/advocacy or at the Labor Department's site at www.dol.gov.

sibility and that experience makes them desirable to other universities.

"For four years I had a great position at OSU. I had no intention of leaving, but a one-time opportunity came up," Ashley said. Ashley is now the executive vice chancellor and provost of the University of California at Merced where he is leading the development of the University of California's newest campus.

"Given the complexity of (OSU) and the experience that a dean would acquire there, they often go on to positions at other institutions, not planned, just called upon," said Judith Koroscik, former dean of the college of the arts. "And in my case I can tell they are given really wonderful offers that they can't refuse," she said, referring to her new position as Dean of the College of the Arts at the University of Cincinnati.

Deans leaving for lateral positions at other universities would indicate a problem within OSU, but when a dean is approached to be president it is a compliment to the university, Knapp said.

"I have worked in central administration for 10 years and I have been genuinely impressed by the quality of the deans, vice provosts, directors and vice presidential colleagues that I have had the good fortune to work with here," Ray said. "The fact that some of the best of our best and brightest administrative colleagues get tapped for senior positions at the best institutions in the country is pretty clear evidence that, whatever our failings may be, we have a better team at the top than most administrations."

huge difference."

Bendapudi said, there are no specific characteristics or traits that allow her to excel in teaching.

"It probably is that my students know that I really enjoy being there with them and I truly want them to get excited about what I teach as I do," Bendapudi said.

Jeremy Williams, a senior in marketing, said that Bendapudi's teaching style is upbeat, energetic, and engaging.

"I have learned from this class to be excited and enthusiastic about what you do. It will make your life and your work so much more worthwhile," Williams said.

"Neeli is more interested in us than other teachers; she genuinely cares," said Carol Wojtkowski, a senior in marketing.

Aside from teaching, Bendapudi is active both inside and outside the university community. She serves both as an adviser and as a mentor, and she has led several committees. Outside the university, Bendapudi has worked extensively in marketing research and with organizations such as Children's Hospital.

"It is really important to be doing cutting-edge research because if you are not doing that then what you bring to your students is just what someone else wrote in a textbook, it's not life experience," Bendapudi said. "I can come in and say, ' Look I have worked with this company and that company and these are the skills you need to have and these are the problems that are important.'"

Bendapudi is a dedicated teacher who works extensively to improve the level of teaching at OSU, said Robert Burnkrant, chairman of the marketing department.

"She has made presentations on teaching, published articles on teaching, and she is very open to working with faculty and Ph.D. students on issues regarding teaching," said Burnkrant.

"She is sought out by her students probably a lot more than other faculty are for advice and she is very receptive and interested in talking to students wherever she runs into them," said Burnkrant.

Bendapudi attributes a large support system of family, colleagues, and friends to her success in balancing teaching and family life. Aside from being a wife, professor and professional she is also the mother of an adolescent daughter.

"My number one supporter is Venkat. Without him none of this would be possible," said Bendapudi.

QB controversy could heat up as weather cools down this fall

By Lucas Sullivan
Lantern sports writer

The last two years for Steve Bellisari have been less than ideal.

His ability to bring Ohio State football back to glory as the team's quarterback has been questioned since the beginning of last season.

This year, coach Jim Tressel said he expects big things from Bellisari because of his training regiment and preparation.

"There is nobody on our team that can keep up with Steve Bellisari when it comes to training," Tressel said.

Bellisari said this year is different because he is going to relax and try to help the team in any way he can.

"It's my last year," he said. "I don't have to worry about coming back, so I'm going to go out and put it all on the table."

The microscope that Bellisari is under has grown because of an able backup in sophomore Scott McMullen, who has not changed his mind about his position on the team.

"I want to be the starter," McMullen said. "I also want to help this team, but I would love to be the leader."

On Friday, Tressel increased speculation about replacing Bellisari by saying he would go with McMullen if Bellisari does not produce right away. He also indicated the possibility of going with a dual system, like former coach John Cooper employed with Stanley Jackson and Joe Germaine during the 1996 and 1997 seasons.

"As I said when we left spring, if we'd had a game the next day, Steve would start, but I think Scott McMullen would have played some," Tressel said. "Nothing has changed from that standpoint."

Tressel is referring to the Scarlet and Gray game in April when McMullen impressed coaches, completing 6 of 14 passes for 42 yards. Bellisari was 11 of 17 for 122 yards.

When told about what Tressel said just minutes before, McMullen's face lit up.

"That just gives me greater confidence," McMullen said. "I think I have proved that I can handle that position, but right now it is my job to try and get that spot."

It is also relevant to mention that Bellisari and McMullen will be roommates during the school year.

Both quarterbacks admit they loved the spring game because of the amount of passing that went on, even though it is unlikely the team will air it out 44 times in the fall.

"I liked it a lot," Bellisari said. "Too bad it won't be like that during the season."

One reason for the possible controversy is Bellisari's inconsistency throughout his career. Last year he completed just 50 percent of passes, threw 13 touchdowns and 13 interceptions, leading the Buckeyes to an 8-4 season.

Buckeyes look foward to start of season in newly remodeled 'Shoe

By Lucas Sullivan
Lantern sports writer

At picture day in Ohio Stadium on Friday, there was talk of team chemistry and bonds that have been established by future and present teammates.

Coach Jim Tressel remarked about the closeness of the group and how it has become a family-like atmosphere among players and coaches, while the players expressed excitement about spending Saturday afternoons this fall in the renovated stadium.

"It's so neat just to be in here (Ohio Stadium)," said Matt Wilhelm, a junior linebacker and returning starter on defense. "It never gets old coming here. I can hear the crowd now."

The talk of coaches and players centered on where the team is now and what it will take to finish atop the conference, as well as beat Michigan.

"I will know more about this team in the first 15 minutes (of the season) than I do now," Tressel said.

Tressel then recalled a talk he had with Bob Tucker, director of football operations, about the prospects of the team. Tucker talked about the 1979 team that went undefeated in the regular season under first-year coach Earle Bruce.

"He said, 'You know we weren't sure about our team through the first month of the season, but when every adversity came up they handled it.' And that's how you become a team," Tressel said.

Quarterback Steve Bellisari said the feeling this year is to just have fun and win.

"There is a lot of talk about this team," Bellisari said. "Right now we feel good about this team and just want to represent this school."

Though the Buckeyes have just started two-a-day practices, the players are already looking forward to playing Akron on Sept. 8.

"We are definitely looking forward to the opener," Wilhelm said. "It is hard to wait especially when you come here today."

Most of the players said they are not surprised with a Top 25 ranking in both the USA Today/ESPN and Associated Press polls or the pick to finish third in the Big Ten by the Big Ten coaches.

"We have a very strong team except for the quarterback situation right now," senior running back Jonathan Wells said. "We have a talented defense and a great coach, so no, I wasn't surprised."

"I was pleasantly surprised," Wilhelm said. "We should contend for a (Big Ten) title this year, definitely."

The estimated 8,000 fans who showed up for autographs were testament to the belief in Tressel's team. The first-year coach stayed well into the night to sign autographs for adoring fans.

Eloise Tressel, mother to both Jim Tressel and assistant director of football operations Dick Tressel, died Saturday night at the Arthur James Cancer Hospital. Eloise Tressel, 76, had been suffering from pancreatic and liver cancer.

Lewis: Family key to athletic success

By Gretchen W. Schneider
Lantern sports writer

More than ability and talent, ten-time Olympic medalist Carl Lewis said family involvement is the key factor for young athletes to be triumphant.

Lewis was in Columbus on Wednesday at the Columbus Athletic Club for the first annual Carl Lewis International Track and Field Festival that took place in the Jesse Owens Memorial Stadium on Saturday.

Lewis spoke about the importance of parental involvement in their children's interests, specifically through sports. He also discussed how sports helped bring him closer to his family and also helped with his education.

He began his speech talking about the hardships of growing up as the youngest and smallest in a famillt of three accomplished athletes. Because of his size, no one ever thought he would accomplish as much as his older siblings.

Lewis smiled and said his mother always gave him the encouragement he needed by telling him she knew he would be great one day.

"I always tell my mother, 'Gosh I don't know how to describe you. You were either the greatest motivator or the sweetest little white liar who lived,'" Lewis said.

Lewis then spoke of his parents' vision for their childrens' futures. Lewis said his parents, who lived in Montgomery, Ala. during the civil rights movement, were inspired by Rosa Parks.

"My parents used to say, 'Do what you think is right. Always do what you think is right. Follow the rules that are afforded to you 100 percent. Get your education,'" Lewis said.

"Our families stayed together. They were involved in sports, we were involved in sports. We used to travel together," Lewis said. "They were able to constantly instill values and report all the values that they thought were important to us and still are."

Lewis, whose parents were both teachers, spoke about his parents involvement with his academics. Unlike most kids in his neighborhood, Lewis was allowed to play after school instead of having to do his homework. His parents encouraged him to do his studying after dinner.

This schedule offered another opportunity for togetherness at the dinner table because he and his siblings would study while their parents would make their lesson plans.

As sports proved a way to keep the Lewis family close, it was also a catalyst for Lewis' interest in studying.

After his father told him about Jesse Owens, Lewis began to research his career. Owens' experience in the 1936 Olympics in Berlin, Germany sparked Lewis' interest in history.

Lewis also said that since his retirement in 1997, he has been searching for a way to give back to track and field.

"The values I thought were needed to keep the sport going were not being addressed," Lewis said. "In the last year, track and field has really gone through some difficult times and I feel it's a lack of support by youth and family."

Lewis said the festival was designed to bring adults and their children together by providing events for all age groups and other events, like the 5K run or walk, where everyone can participate together. He also said the festival was going to honor academics as well as athletics.

Lewis said he chose Columbus because of its historical value and the inauguration of the Jesse Owens Memorial Stadium.

Anthony Brown, athletic director at Linden McKinley High School in Columbus, was looking forward to the festival and to the opening of the new track.

"It was a shame and selfish on Ohio State's part to drop the stadium and eliminate the track that Jesse ran on," Brown said. "However, I can see, in some way, they made it up by building this track."

Brown said children love sports, but sometimes influences can interfere with parental involvement. He said things are getting better and hopes Lewis' message will encourage parents to become more involved with their children.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern cannot accept advertising that advocates sedition or other illegal actions, violates normal standards of morality and taste, or attacks an individual race, nationality, ethnic group, religion or sex. In cases of doubt, the proffered copy, illustrations and layout will be submitted by the Lantern Business Manager to the School of Journalism & Communication Publications Committee and judged by a majority vote of the members. Decisions of this committee are final.

Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.

a. Copy will be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for published special early deadlines.
b. All advertisements are required to occupy at least as many inches in height as they do columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered full column (21 inches) and charged accordingly.
c. The Lantern reserves the right to reject any advertisement that promotes illegal activity or activity detrimental or damaging to the university and its educational mission. It further reserves the right to revise any advertisement which is deemed objectionable for any reason.
d. Make-good/adjustments will be considered only for those advertisements where errors occur in the following: business/group name, address, or phone number; item price; date, time, or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement, and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered to the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify, otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
e. Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.
f. A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
g. No proof will be furnished on any advertisement received after deadline, or for ads smaller than seven (7) column inches.
h. If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and subject to a rebill fee.
i. Advertisers are encouraged to avoid making misleading claims or using art or words that impugn or degrade sex, race, age, national origin, creed or color.
j. The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until credit rating with the Lantern is established. CERTIFIED check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
k. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a rate-holder ad meeting contract minimums, for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
l. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser notifies the Lantern office prior to publication.
m. Advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees, and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of advertiser's advertisement.
n. Advertisers in the Ohio State Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.
o. All mail-order advertisers are required to submit sample/proof-of-product prior to publication.

Please note that advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

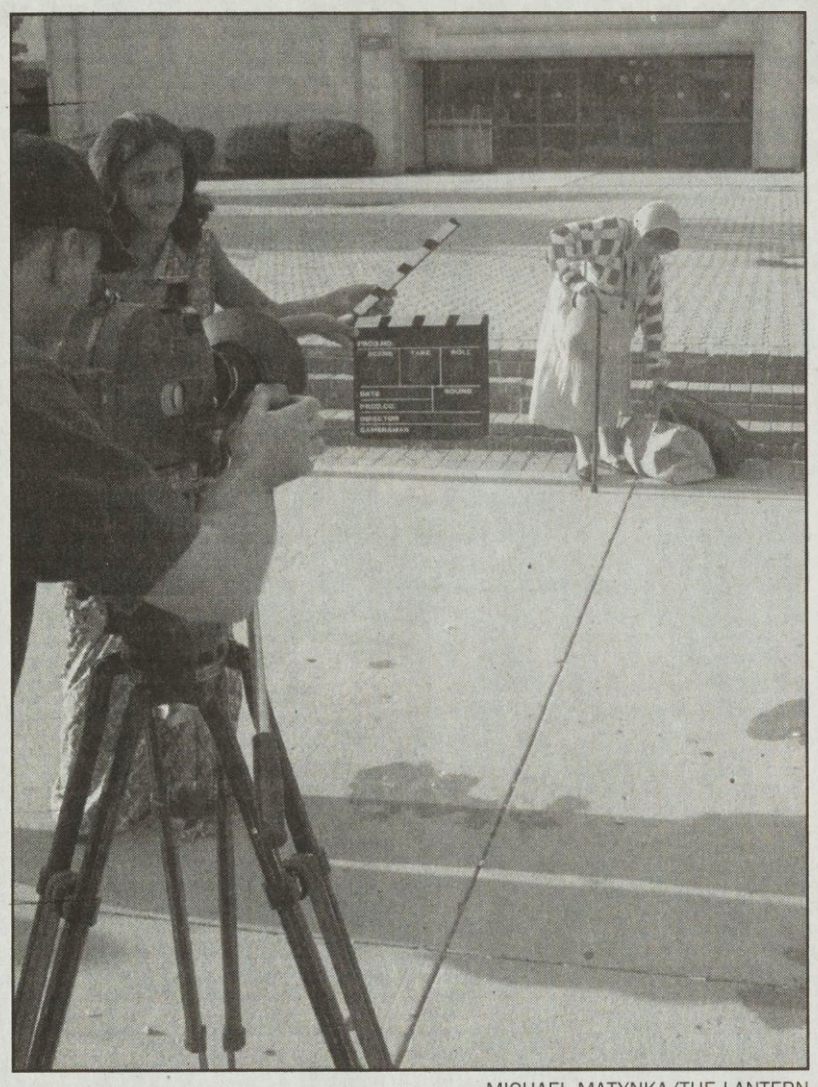
ARTS



MICHAEL MATYNKA/THE LANTERN
The cameras start rolling for the ceremonial first shot of Bala Rajasekharuni's "Green Card Fever."

Movie set to begin filming in Columbus

By Nick De Santis
Lantern arts writer

What do green cards, the city of Columbus and Mayor Michael Coleman all have in common?

Besides their bureaucratic functions, the city and Mayor Coleman, will all be featured in an independent film "Green Card Fever" which is set to begin filming throughout the city tomorrow.

"Green Card Fever" is a story of a young Indian man, and his experience of trying to get a Green Card in the United States, said Bala Rajasekharuni, the film's writer and director.

According to Rajasekharuni the film will deal with many topics including perseverance and morality.

Rajasekharuni, who will also star in the picture, made the decision to film in Columbus for more than financial reasons. He made ties to Columbus while working on his master's degree in theater and drama.

While Rajasekharuni spent most of his time studying at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, his wife, Ambika Gopalakrishnan, stayed in Columbus where she was working on her doctorate in education.

"Columbus is our home. Between my graduate work at Wisconsin, and my wife's at Ohio State, we have spent most of our time in the United States here in Ohio," Rajasekharuni said.

No stranger to show biz in India, Rajasekharuni's credits not only include two stints as an associate director but also as an actor, soap opera star and even talk show host.

In addition to a bit part played by Coleman, "Green Card Fever" will also feature many other Columbus natives within the cast and crew, including students from OSU.

Kamal Bunjabi, a senior in pharmacy, is excited to play a roll in the upcoming film even though he's not sure which part he will play.

"Bala is still thinking about with what part I am to play, but which ever one I get I am just excited to be here," Bunjabi said. "It's a good story that and I think when it's done will be a movie that everyone can relate to."

The filming of "Green Card Fever" will continue through September. The film is set to be completed within four weeks and is expected to be in theaters sometime next year.

'Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back' made for fans

By Christy Lemire
AP entertainment writer

Kevin Smith doesn't aim to entertain with "Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back" so much as reward his fans for their loyalty.

If you're one of them, you can sit smugly in the audience, knowing that you're laughing because you're in on the joke. You're a movie geek — you rule, dude.

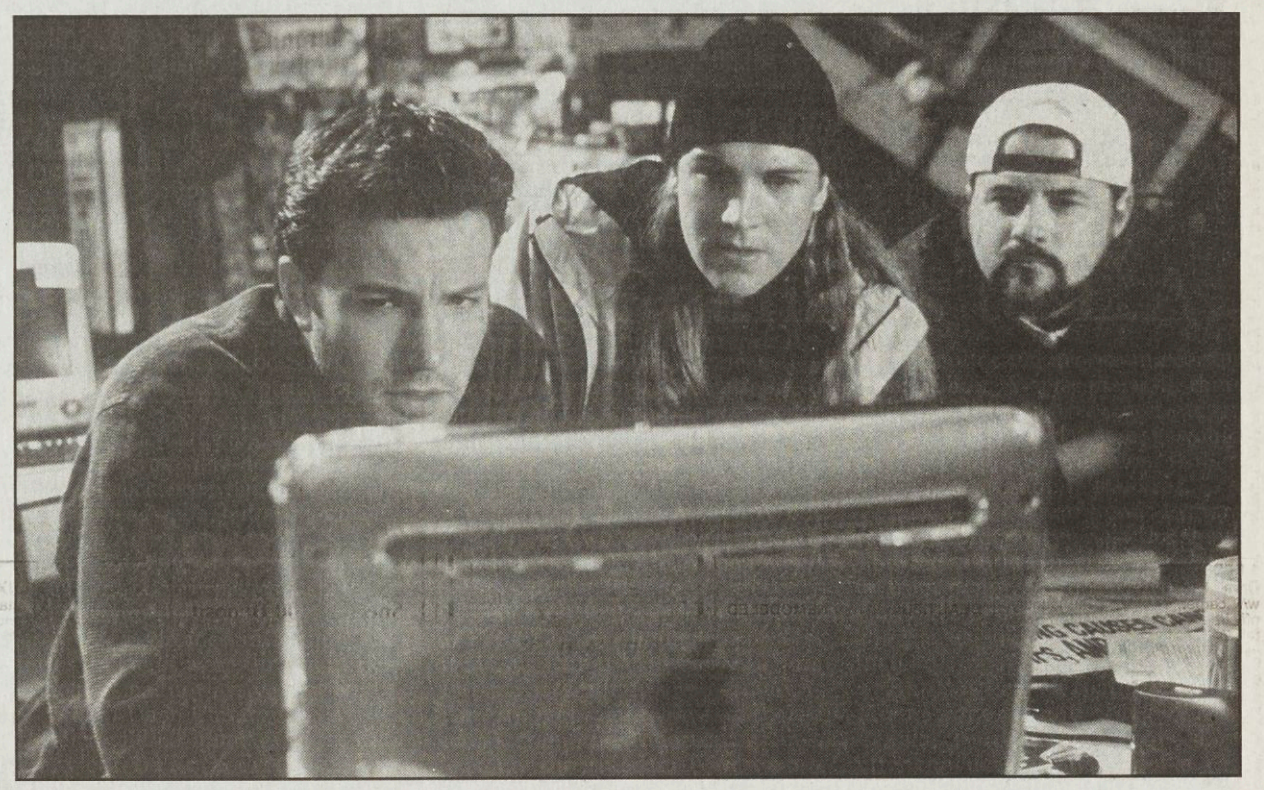
To achieve this cinematic nirvana, you need to have seen all of Smith's earlier movies — "Clerks," "Mallrats," "Chasing Amy" and "Dogma" — and know specific details about them. You also need to be familiar with — if not a devout fan of — the other movies and TV shows Smith deems important, including "American Pie," "Scream" and "Dawson's Creek."

Being a comic book geek isn't an absolute necessity, but it helps.

As writer, director and co-star, Smith offers a road movie that goes nowhere, a script that's merely a laundry list of pop-culture phenomena — not that the members of his cultlike following care. A few sporadic moments are good for a laugh, but you've got to slog through a sea of fart jokes and graphic descriptions of nasty sex acts to get to them.

But what else would you expect from Jay (Jason Mewes), a stoner who stands outside a New Jersey convenience store all day accosting customers, and Silent Bob (Smith), his mute "heterosexual life partner"? The characters Smith created, who had small parts in his earlier movies, must carry the whole thing here. Whoa.

Jay and Silent Bob find out that Miramax (which owns Dimension Films, which is releasing this movie) is making a movie about the comic book characters based on them named Bluntman and Chronic. They find a flurry of postings on online message boards from movie geeks, spouting off about how talentless Jay and Silent Bob are.



ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jay and Silent Bob become furious. Never mind that they're not getting a cent for the movie. They're being besmirched on the Internet — which they didn't even know existed. So they must trek to Hollywood, stop the movie from being made and salvage their good names. Besides, there are hot chicks in L.A.

On the way, they run into a group of bad girl diamond thieves, an orangutan, a clueless wildlife officer and Carrie Fisher in nun get-up. There's also a parade of cameos from everyone who's ever appeared in one of Smith's movies, including George Carlin, Joey Lauren Adams, Jason Lee, Chris Rock and Brian Christopher O'Halloran (convenience store czar Dante from "Clerks.") It's a gratuitous who's who of his buddies, nothing more.

One of the few truly funny scenes takes place toward the end, when Jay and Silent Bob finally make it to Hollywood and wander onto the set of "Good Will Hunting" sequel.

Matt Damon and Smith regular Ben Affleck play exaggerated versions of themselves, trading insults about each other's career choices. (Again, you need to have seen all of Damon's and Affleck's movies to get the joke.) But it's fun watching these longtime friends play off each other so effortlessly — and at the same time, sad to realize how many lousy movies they've made since their Oscar-winning "Good Will Hunting" four years ago.

Smith promises this is the big finale for Jay and Silent Bob.

"It's time to put 'em away," he says.

And it's long overdue. They were funny when "Clerks" came out in 1994, and only then in small doses.

'Paper work' not mundane for artists

By Annie Heck
Lantern arts writer

A celebration of paper and of art is on display at the Riffe Gallery downtown until Oct. 7. Paper Routes 2000, an art show organized by the Southern Ohio Museum in collaboration with the Ohio Arts Council, demonstrates usage of paper as a medium for a wide range of visual art disciplines as used by Ohio Arts Council Individual Artist Fellowship recipients.

This exhibit showcases the talent and creativity of 13 featured Ohio artists. Their work is diverse, challenging and nothing short of captivating, with forms ranging from a paper jacket and dress to computer generated images.

Sarah Johnson, curator for the Southern Ohio Museum, reviewed thousands of slides of artwork from Ohio artists for the show. The result of her work is a stunning assortment of works on paper that encompass several different disciplines, including collage, drawing, photography and printmaking.

George Mauersberger, a professor of drawing at Cleveland State University, has five of his works on display in the Paper Routes 2000 show.

"My works are derived from an image of me," Mauersberger said. "When I do a series of drawings, I have an idea I explore over the group of drawings."

His works, displayed in the Riffe Gallery, explore the concept of altered self-portraits. With paintings entitled "Curly," "Vis" and "Spot," Mauersberger's work clearly delves into the inner-self and the nature of human expression.

Experimenting with a completely different form of artwork on paper, Todd DeVriese creates collages centering around the shape of an obelisk.

"The obelisk is a culturally specific historical architectural form," DeVriese said. "It is about history lost and recovered."

DeVriese, an assistant professor of art at OSU, uses the resources of magazines, books and encyclopedias for the collage background of his works. These images explore the history of humankind from all different civilizations, shadowed behind the looming obelisk. His works are full of color and represent a celebration of history.

Hanging boldly in gigantic metal frames, the 3-dimentional works of George Kozmon do not fail to fascinate the viewer. These gigantic 4-by-7 foot paintings are a mixed reminder and foreshadowing of civilizations that have come and gone.

"Architecture is a metaphor for civilizations," Kozmon said. "It engages in an idea of realism and abstraction. These works are somewhat romantic and dark and remind us of the transient nature of civilizations and cultures."

An advocate for art as a medium of communication, Kozmon believes that his pieces may have for each viewer a different meaning, story and background.

More than 50 works are shown at the Paper Routes 2000 exhibit. With works ranging in shape, size and color, the viewer will easily find himself absorbed in this show. The artwork from these 13 Ohio artists is thought provoking and visually enticing. Each piece stands out as individually captivating, but together they blend smoothly into the theme of artwork on paper.

Admission to Paper Routes 2000 is free.

Safety concerns move Latin Grammys to L.A.

By Brendan Farrington
Associated Press writer

MIAMI — The Latin Grammy Awards will be moved from Miami to Los Angeles because of fears Cuban exile protesters will threaten the safety of performers and attendees.

"I can't guarantee the security of our people. We have people coming from all over the world," said Michael Greene, president and CEO of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences and the Latin Recording Academy. "Having to run that gauntlet is demeaning at best and dangerous at worst."

The ceremony will be Sept. 11 at the Great Western Forum in Los Angeles.

Miami city officials agreed Sunday to let protesters demonstrate in a three-block area near the AmericanAirlines Arena, but academy officials wanted protesters to be kept farther away.

Greene cited protests held in 1999 when the Cuban group Los Van Van performed in Miami. Batteries and eggs were thrown at ticket holders as they arrived, he said.

Miami-Dade County Mayor Alex Penelas offered Monday to create a half-block buffer between the protesters and a security zone established for performers and attendees arriving at the arena, but the offer was not enough.

Greene said academy officials considered moving the event north of the city to Broward County but Florida Highway Patrol and sheriff's deputies told them they could not guarantee attendees' safety.

About 60 exile groups opposed to Fidel Castro planned to protest against Cuban musicians and artists attending the ceremony. The groups would have gathered across from the AmericanAirlines Arena at the Freedom Tower, a former immigration processing center that Cuban Americans call their Statue of Liberty.

Penelas said the event would have brought $30 million to $35 million in revenue to the area.

Last year, Miami's civic leaders rejected a request to host the show. They cited a law barring the county from doing business with those who have dealings with Cuba. The show was held in Los Angeles instead.

But this year, a coalition led by Miami-Dade County Mayor Alex Penelas courted the awards show after the law was struck down.

HOROSCOPES by Linda Black

August 15, 2001August 20-26, 2001

Aries (March 21-April 20)Image: "In a warm, sunny sea, a pod of playful dolphins"Message: Connecting to spirit.Emotional wisdom, psychic impressions and a sharp rise in creativity can be expected early this week, Aries: remain open to flashes of insight or sudden intuitions. Some Aries natives may also encounter a strong desire to begin new educational projects, life goals or spiritual research. After Wednesday watch for intriguing discussions with friends or co-workers. Workplace politics, romantic misunderstandings or the motivations of mutual friends may be on the agenda.

Taurus (April 21-May 20)Image: "At the eye of a storm, small droplets of water"Message: Tempered wisdom.Early Tuesday, Taurus, a close friend may ask for your assistance planning a social event or group gathering. All this looks pleasing, Taurus, but may also be confusing and mildly irritating. Avoid acting as social instigator this week, if at all possible: planetary alignments suggest that one-to-one relationships will bring greater rewards. Respond openly to new invitations but don't be drained by group dynamics. A subtly demanding week, Taurus: don't probe for final answers.

Gemini (May 21-June 21)Image: "After 5 cups of coffee, an all-night janitor dances a jig"Message: Alert awareness.New inroads to career advancement may arrive early this week, Gem: watch for unusual proposals or revised information from authority figures. Over the next 12 days business partners, bosses and mentors will ask for added information in order to evaluate your potential. Comply quickly and allow others to appreciate your talents. After Thursday watch for a refreshing phase of romantic interest and social belonging. Enjoy yourself, Gem, stress has been high.

Cancer (June 22-July 22)Image: "In a crowded court room, a young lawyer making notes"Message: Exploring the truth.Deep thoughts and important romantic discussions will have a strong appeal early this week, Cancer. Beginning early Tuesday, and lasting over the next 3 days, watch for a unique window of opportunity to sort out misunderstandings and re-establish feelings of love, respect and shared honesty. Don't shy away from difficult questions, Cancer, and others will respond with respect or encouragement. After Friday concentrate on practical duties: minor errors will not go unnoticed.

Leo (July 23-August 22)Image: "A tiny mouse darting across an open field"Message: Courage revealed.This week, Leo, your business expertise may be put to the test. Watch for new snags in work projects or sudden miscalculations. Authority figures may be now evaluating your potential or reviewing your progress: stay alert to subtle changes or communications. After Tuesday a new friendship may become suddenly demanding or overly complex. Avoid dividing your loyalties or entering into unproductive gossip, Leo: outside influences and social politics will be strongly felt.

Virgo (August 23-September 22)Image: "A large crowd, a nervous politician and a throng of frantic reporters"Message: Testing your skills.A new partnership, educational program or financial proposal may arrive early this week, Virgo. Over the next 9 days many Virgos will discuss valuable income sources or new life directions with loved ones. Realize, however, that promising ideas will take time to be established: stay focused and perform added research. After mid-week focus on inner thoughts and social insights to improve your judgement: friendships or family relations may need attention.

Libra (September 23-October 23)Image: "At the center of moon, shifting slabs of rock"Message: Reacting to pressure.Working environments may now be mildly stressful or riddled with miscommunications. Wait out the complications and ask others for more clarity, Libra: tempers may be high. After mid-week business confusion and wrongful financial information will slowly fade. Remain cautious, however, and expect ongoing tensions over the next few days. Thursday through Sunday watch also for minor digestive ailments or skin irritations. Inner stress is changing, Libra: be patient.

Scorpio (October 24-November 22)Image: "In Oz, Dorothy's hot air balloon slowly lifting off the ground"Message: Going back.Early this week a potential lover or close friend may reveal a previously hidden attraction or offer an unusual romantic proposal. Emotions are extremely unstable at the moment, Scorp, before Thursday watch for dramatic statements from lovers or friends. Be diplomatic: others may be vulnerable to your actions and reactions. Late Saturday past memories will also be vivid: expect old ideas, lovers or emotional debts to now return. A demanding few days, Scorp: stay balanced.

Sagittarius (November 23-December 20)Image: "Behind a plow, churning dark rows of soil."Message: Breaking new ground.Parent/child relations or delicate home discussions may captivate much attention this week, Sage. Before Friday a clear statement of intentions may be necessary. Some Sagittarians may also be required to explain the emotional rules of an intense relationship. Remain balanced and as detached as possible: progress will be slow. After Saturday rest and discuss long-term career or financial plans with trusted friends. New ideas will be helpful, Sage: stay receptive.

Capricorn (December 21-January 20)Image: "In deep space, the Enterprise slowly drifting to a halt"Message: Answering all stop.Business communications will be unrealistic before mid-week: expect colleagues and potential partners to present over-inflated ideas or faulty goals. Although scattered and highly creative, underlying ideas are sound, Cap: remain open to ongoing changes and slow progress. After Wednesday offer assistance to a friend or relative that may feel isolated or misunderstood.
Recently ended relationships may be a prime concern: expect complex emotions and fast words.

Aquarius (January 21-February 19)Image: "At the bottom of a well, tangled roots and twigs"Message: Hidden snags.Remain sensitive to the moods of loved ones this week, Aquarius: at present, others may be confused or in need of empathetic support. Acknowledge difficult emotional triangles, but refuse to be drawn into negative thought patterns: over the next 9 days previously private social and romantic differences may rise dramatically to the surface. After Thursday introduce fresh ideas or suggest a new daily routine: loved ones will quickly follow your lead.

Pisces (February 20-March 20)Image: "In a ripe cherry tree, a gathering of fledgling birds"Message: Joyful acceptance.Early this week, Pisces, be on the lookout for a rare workplace opportunity or new contact in the areas of health services, management, publishing or advertising/promotions. Over the next 3 days, business luck, potential advancement or revised work routines will offer unusual rewards. After Friday spend extra time with new or energetic friends: an infusion of social energy will now help end several weeks of inward thought, restlessness and low self-confidence.

If your birthday is this week...new love affairs will be challenged by family and friends for the next few months. Key issues may involve age differences, location or sudden life changes. Watch for slow progress: before mid-November loved ones will feel unusually protective of your time, energy and emotional attention. Early next year a quick financial change may cause important decisions. Loan applications, payment schedules and financial agencies will take extra time settling claims or approving documents. After February 8th finances will steadily improve: stay focused on long-term goals and wait for written permissions.

Death row prisoner will not 'go quietly'

By Andrew Welsh-Huggins
Associated Press writer

COLUMBUS — An attorney pleaded for the life yesterday of a man who says he will choose electrocution if he is executed next month for stabbing a store clerk to death during a robbery.

John Byrd Jr., who says an accomplice committed the slaying, wants to make his execution as difficult as possible for state authorities, public defenders say.

"He's not going to go quietly into the night," David Bodiker, Ohio public defender, said yesterday.

Byrd, 37, is scheduled to be executed Sept. 12 in what would be the state's first electrocution in 38 years. In Ohio, inmates may choose between injection and the electric chair.

Byrd denies killing Monte Tewksbury, a suburban Cincinnati convenience store clerk, in 1983. His attorneys acknowledge he was an accomplice in the robbery.

Yesterday they asked the Ohio Parole Board to recommend that Gov. Bob Taft change Byrd's sentence to life in prison. Last week they asked a state appeals court to order a court hearing on Byrd's claim that one of two accomplices killed the clerk.

Richard Vickers, an assistant state public defender, told the parole board that he took a statement in 1989 in which the accomplice, John Brewer, admitted to the stabbing.

Vickers said he made a mistake in not releasing the statement years ago. He said he intended the document to be used during the clemency process, not for the ongoing appeals. It was a legal strategy he now regrets.

"I made a mistake, but it was not because I didn't think Brewer was credible," Vickers said. "It was a decision I made. It was wrong, but blame me, don't blame John Byrd."

Hamilton County Prosecutor Michael Allen called Brewer's testimony "absolutely and patently absurd."

Prosecutors have said Brewer changed his initial story of not being involved to save Byrd from execution.

Brewer was convicted as an accomplice and could not legally be tried again, prosecutors say. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Byrd's mother, Mary Ray, 53, and his sister, Kim Hamer, 33, asked the board to spare his life.

"I plead, I beg — my body, my mind, my soul — please don't let them execute my baby, please," Ray said.

Tewksbury's widow, Sharon Tewksbury, 57, called Byrd a coward and asked the board to allow the execution to proceed. Her husband, who was 40 when he died, had been moonlighting at the convenience store from his regular job at Procter & Gamble Co. to earn extra money for his daughter's education.

When Byrd murdered her husband, she said, "He invaded our world, our peaceful existence and began for us a nightmare that has not ended."

Tewksbury's daughter Kimberly, 37, said allowing the execution will give the family justice.

"John Byrd has had 18 years to beg for his pathetic life," she said. "My dad had maybe 18 minutes."

The board will make its recommendation to Taft on Friday. The governor can grant a pardon, reduce Byrd's sentence or allow the execution to proceed.

The clemency hearing was the first one open to the media since Ohio reinstated the death penalty in 1981.

Ohio prisons Director Reginald Wilkinson and Parole Board Chairwoman Margarette Ghee decided to open the hearing because of wide interest in the case.

Clemency hearings for Jay D. Scott, executed on June 14, and Wilford Berry, put to death in 1999, were closed to the media.

The board recommended against clemency in both cases.

Byrd came within hours of execution in 1994 before the U.S. Supreme Court stepped in to allow his appeals to proceed.

Wilkinson last month urged the state to retire the electric chair because malfunctions could be too stressful for prison staff members.

Ohio's 105-year-old electric chair hasn't been used since 1963. Wilkinson said the chair has been rewired and is expected to operate properly, but there is less potential for problems with lethal injections.

The Legislature does not return from recess until after Sept. 3, which reduces the chance that legislation to bar use of the electric chair could be completed before Byrd's scheduled execution date.

Toledo mayor intimidation case dropped, 'didn't have a chance'

By John Seewer
Associated Press writer

TOLEDO — A restaurant owner who accused the city's mayor of threats and intimidation dropped his criminal case as the trial was to begin yesterday.

John Skiadas, owner of Pepe's Mexican Restaurant & Cantina, said he had no confidence in the special prosecutor the city's law department appointed to handle the case.

"We feel we've been set up to lose this case," said Skiadas' wife, Georgette.

Carty Finkbeiner, a Democrat first elected as mayor in 1994, had been accused of threatening to take official action against Skiadas in July 2000 because of delays in opening the restaurant in the city-owned Erie Street Market, where vendors sell specialty foods and crafts.

"From day one, he didn't have a case," Finkbeiner said.

Finkbeiner was accused of grabbing and shaking Skiadas while yelling obscenities in his face. Skiadas said at the time he was traumatized by the confrontation and checked into a hospital with cardiac problems.

Charges of disorderly conduct and interfering with civil rights were dismissed earlier in the case.

Finkbeiner pleaded innocent to a charge of coercion, which carries a maximum sentence of 90 days in jail and a $750 fine.

The mayor said he used strong words in his meeting with Skiadas but didn't do anything wrong. Finkbeiner said he went to the restaurant because Skiadas was six weeks behind on rent, had thrown city inspectors out of the building and was late in its opening.

The city had given Skiadas $100,000 in loans and grants for the restaurant.

"He did get a lecture and he did deserve a lecture from me," Finkbeiner said Monday.

Skiadas said the prosecutor, former Ottawa County Prosecutor Lowell Peterson, had met with him only once and had not interviewed any witnesses.

Sam Kaplan, the mayor's attorney, said all indications were that Peterson was prepared for the trial.

Skiadas said he also has been in bad health and wasn't able to withstand the stress of a trial. He said he will continue with a civil lawsuit filed against the mayor.

Peterson, who announced that the charge was dropped, left Toledo Municipal Court without commenting.

Finkbeiner is blocked from running for re-election this year because of term limits.

The case is one of three in which the mayor was accused of hitting someone.

Police say one of the other accusations was a lie. In the second case, Carolyn Smithers, a former city employee who ran the Erie Street Market, accused Finkbeiner of striking her with a coffee mug.

She sued, and the city settled the case for $35,000. Finkbeiner admitted no wrongdoing in the settlement.

The mayor has said that allegations against him have been motivated by people seeking revenge, publicity and money. He said Smithers was upset because he fired her as manager of the market.

New York police officer apologizes

Gray: 'I'm not the mindless drunk portrayed on television'

By Donna De La Cruz
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The police officer charged with killing three family members while driving drunk apologized yesterday and declared he is "not the monster" portrayed in the media.

Officer Joseph Gray's news conference was disrupted by a community activist who bitterly denounced him and held up a sign saying: "Jail, No Bail for Drunk Killer Cop."

"I'm not the mindless drunk being portrayed on television," said Gray, who faces criminal and departmental charges, including manslaughter and vehicular manslaughter. He was freed on $250,000 bail earlier this month.

Gray was indicted in the Aug. 4 deaths of 24-year-old Maria Herrera, her 4-year-old son, Andy, and 16-year-old sister, Dilcia Pena. Herrera was eight months pregnant; her baby boy was delivered stillborn.

Because of the ongoing investigation, reporters were not allowed to ask Gray what happened that day and whether he has a drinking problem.

The officer said the idea to call the news conference was his.

Gray, who had previously apologized through his lawyer, expressed his regret to the victims' families. Gray looked downcast throughout the brief news conference. His wife, Diana, and his lawyer sat on either side of him.

"I think it's important that I express my sincerest condolences on behalf of myself and my family to the Pena and Herrera families," he said.

He also said, "I just want people to know that I'm not the monster that people think I am."

"I just think it's important that people see who I am," Gray said. "I'm home every day to take care of my children," he added, referring to his 5-, 11- and 16-year-old daughters. "I have a daughter who was in preschool up until June. I was home every day to take her to school, pick her up, take my wife to work."

Gray has been suspended without pay for 30 days, and is awaiting a departmental trial.

The news conference was disrupted toward the end by David Galarza, who described himself as a friend of the Herrera and Pena families.

"I came here out of justice. He should be in jail!" he shouted. "You're not a police officer, you're a murderer!"

After the outburst, Gray's attorney, Harold Levy, ended the news conference as Gray remained seated before a bank of microphones. His wife tried to comfort him as they left.

Gray had allegedly been drinking for up to 12 hours before the accident. A police investigation revealed that he and other officers drank beer in an NYPD parking lot, then moved on to a strip club declared off-limits to officers from Gray's 72nd Precinct in Brooklyn.

Seventeen officers were disciplined. Three who were on probation were fired; 14 others were either transferred, suspended without pay or placed on desk duty without their guns and badges.

Asked about substance abuse problems in the NYPD, Gray said, "I think it's bigger than the department wants to acknowledge."

Department officials had no immediate comment.

New Jersey rabbi faces death penalty

By Brendan Schurr
Associated Press Writer

CAMDEN, N.J. — Jury selection began yesterday in the case of a rabbi accused of plotting the 1994 slaying of his wife, who was found beaten to death on the couple's living-room floor.

Rabbi Fred J. Neulander sat in the courtroom as the first 100 potential jurors were called from an expected pool of 1,200. Jury selection was expected to take weeks.

If convicted of murder and conspiracy, Neulander, 60, could become the first New Jersey clergyman to receive a death sentence.

Authorities claim Neulander arranged to have his 52-year-old wife, Carol, killed so he could continue his affair with Elaine Soncini, a Philadelphia radio talk-show host.

Prosecutors said Neulander told Soncini that a divorce would threaten his position at Congregation M'Kor Shalom, the synagogue the Neulanders founded in Cherry Hill, a wealthy suburb of Philadelphia.

Leonard Jenoff, 54, a private investigator, has confessed to beating Carol Neulander to death. Jenoff said the rabbi promised to pay him $30,000 to do it — a claim Neulander denies.

Jenoff and his former roommate, Paul Daniels, 27, have pleaded guilty to aggravated manslaughter and are expected to testify at the trial.

Neulander resigned as senior rabbi in February 1995 amid reports that he had been unfaithful. His attorney, Jeffrey Zucker, said last week that his client is anxious to "get the matter behind him."

Twelve jurors and four alternates must be selected, but a large pool of potential jurors is being called because of publicity surrounding the case and to screen for potential bias.

The potential jurors must fill out a 174-item questionnaire asking if they've ever had a negative experience with a Jew and whether an adulterous man is more likely to commit a crime against his wife.

Opening statements are expected to begin Oct. 15.

Bush wants $39 billion for military, benefits for vets

By Christopher Newton
Associated Press writer

MILWAUKEE — President Bush said yesterday he will insist that Congress approve the additional money for the military that he has asked and he promised that the struggling health benefits system for veterans will soon be restructured.

"All I ask Congress to provide is an increased $39 billion for the military," Bush told cheering delegates to a convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. "This is the largest increase in military spending since Ronald Reagan was the commander in chief."

Bush also pledged that the system of benefits for veterans would be revised soon, accusing past administrations of letting veterans' claims linger for years.

"That is no way to treat America's veterans and that is going to change," Bush said.

Dozens of protesters whose causes ranged from abortion to the environment waited for Bush outside the Midwest Express Center. Inside, he was applauded several times by the thousands of veterans, although some were not totally satisfied with his speech.

"I wished he had talked more about Social Security," said Robert Wilkinson of Gulf Port, Mo., a veteran of the Korean and Vietnam wars. "He makes promises to the veterans and they're the same promises we've heard for the last 10 years.

After the speech, Bush visited a Harley-Davidson plant across town. His motorcade was greeted by seven orange-and-black Harley-Davidson 18-wheel transports circled like wagons around dozens of gleaming motorcycles.

He walked through the plant signing T-shirts, jeans, arms, old Texas Rangers tickets and a hat.

"The Harley-Davidson is uniquely American," Bush said. "Some people are bold enough to ride them. Some people aren't." Company executives gave him a leather jacket and a chrome helmet.

The company that makes the Harley-Davidson has been immune to the economic troubles dealt most other motor vehicle manufacturers. Harley stock prices have risen 23 percent this year.

Bush flew to Milwaukee from his sun-baked central Texas ranch, talking here yesterday and in Missouri today about his plans for pulling the economy out of a slump and redesigning Social Security.

"It's somewhat sly, but it looks like Bush is doing some early campaigning for 2004," said James Tyson-Shelding, a political analyst in Fort Worth, Texas. "He's heading to states that he probably feels he should have won or almost lost ... places where there is a substantial Republican population but his message didn't take root."

Bush's staff closely guarded what his specific messages will be, but the administration has been moving forward on plans for both Social Security and Medicare.

To help shore up funding for Social Security, the president has proposed letting younger workers invest some of their payroll taxes in the stock market. He recently created a commission to devise a plan, recommend how to pay for it and report to him in the fall.

The social program is expected to face shortfalls when the baby-boom generation starts retiring in the coming decade and fewer workers pay into the system.

Bush is also expected to talk about an expected budget surplus. On Wednesday, the White House Office of Budget Management is expected to release figures on how much money is left over.

Political analysts say Bush is clearly on the campaign trail.

"It's a two-birds-with-one-stone situation," said Patrick Delraj, a political science professor at the University of California. "He's laying groundwork to be in a stronger position next time around."
