Heritage Fest gets a makeover

This year's festival organizers hope new changes rid campus of problems

> By Melanie Sonderman Lantern staff writer

This year's African American Heritage Festival was changed to reduce the possibility of campus disturbances, but other weekend events may still cause problems.

The biggest changes are that the festival is scheduled one month earlier than in previous years, and all the events will be held indoors.

"The student organizers have been very direct about their intentions to make this a week that will be celebrated on and by the Ohio State campus," said Belinda Higgs, interim coordinator for the Office of African American Student Services. "They moved the festival to April to reduce the number of students attending from area colleges who end their semesters in May."

The cruising that has become a traditional weekend occurrence during the Heritage Festival has caused major traffic problems in the past, said Sherry Mercurio, spokeswoman for the Columbus Division of Police.

"For us it's not an issue of the festival. We've never had a problem with the event itself," Mercurio said. "But because of cruising, the businesses on High Street suffer and traffic gets backed up all the way to downtown."

Police will try to keep traffic moving, and an alternate traffic plan will be put into effect if necessary.

Heritage Festival student chairwoman Angela Woody was concerned that attendees of the festival were not aware of its focus in the past few years. This is one reason why the festival's theme of "family" is so important.

"We want the OSU and Columbus community to really enjoy the festival this year and understand the true meaning of it," Woody said. "It's more than just the block party as many have come to know it."

Columbus police will have an increased presence on campus not only because of traffic concerns, but also because of OSU's annual spring football game and Chittfest - the unofficial, annual block party held on Chittenden Avenue.

A crowd of 45,000 is expected to attend the football game, which is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Saturday. Heritage Festival organizers do not anticipate the game to cause problems because it is so early in the day.

Lt. Col. Jack Gumbert credits patriotism and a quality staff among the numerous reasons for the growing number of applications to Ohio State's Army ROTC.

The program has seen about a 30 percent increase of applications over the last two years.

Gumbert, professor of military science for the ROTC, is proud of the students and cadre but remains focused on program goals, despite the dramatic increase of applications.

Parade of Homes gets students' help

By Amy McCullough Lantern staff writer

Working at the Parade of Homes is an opportunity few professional interior decorators experience in their careers. This year, six Ohio State students will get the chance to participate in the 2003 Parade of Homes before their careers technically begin.

The students were recruited by Schmitz Executive Homes to help with this year's Parade of Homes, which is slated to start June 6.

"Even though we are students, we have some new ideas and some knowledge, and we're confident that it's going to turn out well," said Lisa Savage, a senior in interior merchandising and a student selected to work on the house.

Builder Joe Schmitz is not afraid to take risks, she said.

"This was a big move on his part. He is taking an initiative that no one else has, so I give him a lot of credit for that," she said.

Savage said she and the other five seniors could not pass up the wonderful opportunity, and that she was surprised when she heard the good news.

This is the first Parade of Homes for Schmitz too, who turned to OSU looking for a different approach to design.

"We were just calling around looking for new, fresh ideas. A lot of times you go to the Parade of Homes and you see people that have been in the business for years and years," Schmitz said.

"It's good exposure for them and good exposure for us. Most people don't ever get to do a

World issues create minor

Globalization is focus of program in international studies department

By Alysia Baker Lantern staff writer

The constantly changing relations around the world create a daunting task for the international studies department.

According to Anthony Mughan, director of international studies, a new minor — Globalization Studies - is being established to help students understand the shrinking global community and to examine the integration of the United States in the world.

The large scope of globalization studies will require students to take an array of classes from various departments on campus, Mughan said.

Once implemented, the minor will require 25 credit hours of al economic relations to contemporary religious movements in global context.

The minor itself is made up of cultural dimensions and economic, environmental, and political dimensions. Students can choose 10 credits from both dimensions, but an introduction to globalization is required for the minor.

Mughan said the minor is diverse and will provide students with an opportunity to apply education to the current world news.

"The purpose of a university is to broaden horizons," Mughan said. "This is one of the ways we try quick response from universities across the nation. Alam Pavind, international studies administrator and professor, said Ohio State offered many educational opportunities.

Teach-ins about the Islam religion started being held monthly in the Ohio Union, as well as the development of new course offerings aimed at educating students about the Middle East and its people, Payind said.

Sept. 11 also created a need for an entirely new course of study.

One such course was International Studies 501, "Terror and Terrorism."

"It's a better teaching environment because you're teaching something the students want to learn about," said David Lewis, the class professor.

The goal of the class is to provide students with more in-depth analysis of current events, he said.

The April 13 fire on 17th Avenue left many students shocked and some homeless, and now they're trying to get back to normal.

Jessica Bohm, a senior in operations management and marketing, and Nichole Stevenson, a senior in sociology, lived on the top floor of the apartment building next door to the fire.

Bohm is staying at the Alpha Xi Delta house for the rest of the quarter and Stevenson is staying with her sister at the Sigma Alpha house.

Most students affected by the fire's damage received services and shelter from Student Advocacy, and are staying in The Blackwell Inn or with family and friends.

"Student Advocacy has been a ton of help. They have done everything and anything to help with what we have asked for and in like a second," Bohm said.

Bohm said it was hard to return to her apartment because everything had been torn apart.

The students said some of their belongings were salvageable. Almost everything in the bedrooms was saved, but the living room, kitchen and bathroom were dam-

Bohm said although it's hard to get back into the swing of things, her friends and family have been supportive, which has helped her cope with the tragedy.

"It's really, really hard, but we're just lucky to be alive," Bohm said. "There are so many more people going through so much more then we are.

"The university has been very supportive, especially with graduation so that I don't have to postpone my graduation date," Stevenson said.

Although Stevenson was worried about falling behind, she said she has been able to keep up with her school work and teachers have been understanding.

"The first day was a long day because I was so physically exhausted," Stevenson said. "But I got a couple days off to relax and get away.

Bohm, who was at the party the house's residents hosted earlier that evening, said she knows very little about the investigation but hopes that students come forward.

'I don't know who would do this or what kind of motive they could have, but I have a hard time

Stevenson was sleeping and had stayed home that night. She said she was shocked when the police chopped down the door to get the girls out. She said she hopes the police are able to find the person responsible for the fire.

"I wish there was something I could do to help," Stevenson said. "I would benefit from some closure in that aspect, if they caught the person."

Stevenson said she thinks this tragedy has affected the university and students' behavior. She said she's right in the heart of it and the tragedy will definitely force people to think about their actions when "I think it will effect some more than others," Stevenson said. "Everything just changes so quickly."

Chris Bolte, a senior in economics, lives on the corner of 17th Avenue and Pearl Alley. He said he was only an acquaintance of the victims, but his sister was friends with the victims.

"It's just a tragic situation, and hopefully they find out who did it," Bolte said. "It's obviously scary and forces people to value things a little more.

· Teach-ins at Marion touch on more than war

Students exchange ideas about religion, culture and politics across the Atlantic

By Sean O'Connor Lantern staff writer

Many students probably only know the basics about the war in Iraq, but that is not enough for some students at the Marion campus of Ohio State.

"Students of the Campus Democratic Forum realized that as war became more imminent, they wanted more information about the issues," said Vladimir Steffel, associate professor of history at the Marion campus.

To get the information they desired, students Shellie Shirk and Daniel McEnnis organized what has become known as "Teach-in on Iraq."

McEnnis and Shirk wanted to provide fellow students with a forum for their thoughts and questions about the situation in Iraq. With the assistance of several Marion faculty members, the teach-in was conceived and put into practice.

They initiated the concept and made the contacts," Steffel said.

The teach-ins consist of a short presentation by a faculty member or some other expert and then a 30-40 minute discussion between the students and the presenter.

The first teach-in was held last week and was attended by about 40 students, faculty and staff. Discussion dealt with the role of the United Nations in the war and the reconstruction efforts. A teach-in has been scheduled at noon on Wednesdays for the next several weeks, depending on the number of topics people want to discuss.

Steffel said the reaction from the students after the first teach-in was very positive. Students thought it was interesting and helpful, he said.

Topics for each session include geography, American perspectives, international perspectives, military issues, culture, religion, ethnicity and chemical weapons.

"It will provide them with a focused understanding of some of the issues about Iraq and the region, the cultures and warfare," Steffel said.

The goal of the teach-in is to provide an opportunity for students to ask questions, ultimately leading to a situation in which students will begin a dialogue about this and other world issues among themselves.

Economics will be the focus of a teach-in in the near future. Students from Marion will be joined by video conference to a group of students in the United Arab Emirates.

Hassan Aly, an associate professor of economics at Marion, is teaching a course in macroeconomics at Zaved University in the UAE this year and will give the presentation.

'We will lead students from both campuses, Zayed and Marion, in a discussion of the economic impact of the war on both the United States and the region," Aly said.

According to Aly, Zayed University is staffed 100 percent with westerners, representing 33 countries, and Americans make up about half. Aly said local residents he has talked to say they "love the United States, but hate the administration." He said that statement can summarize many people's reaction to the current situation

He said there have not been any negative incidents that have made the faculty or staff feel threatened enough to leave the area. However, said that anti-American sentiments are beginning to rise beneath the surface, but that the teach-in would be a valuable exchange between the two

"I am sure that the exchange of views and ideas between the two groups of students will be tremendously enlightening and will enhance the global awareness of the participants," he said.

Gordon discussed the need for young black people to create a balance in their lives and to accept that they do not have all the answers yet.

He also touched on the effect affirmative action had in his life.

"One of the reasons I'm a journalist is because of affirmative action, not because of a lack of merit on my part, but because of the lack of opportunity," Gordon said. "No black person wants an ignorant black person in a job because it reflects back on us."

The bulk of Gordon's speech was focused on the road to success, for which he offered some advice.

"Believe that you can succeed," Gordon said. "Everyone has greatness, so be the best at what you do, whatever that may be."

Don't just talk about doing something, conquer the fear that prevents us from being successful, he said.

Some other points of his speech were that young black people should prepare, have patience and not rest on their success.

'With each day comes a new chance to learn, and with each day comes a new chance to succeed. Please take that chance," he

"The builder does have a budget. The Parade of Homes has a limit of what you can spend, and we can't go over that. He just wants everything to be pretty upscale and high quality," said Nikki Trivisonno, a senior in interior merchandising.

The students are responsible for working with the builder to turn their ideas into reality.

The house is divided equally among the students. However, all the ideas are run by the group before they are implemented.

"We're all working together. There are two of us that work on each room, but we all get help from each other. It's really a group effort, but we run it by the other women so we can make sure we're all on the same wavelength," Savage said.

According to Savage, the students did not fight about which rooms they were going to work on.

"Everybody wanted to do separate rooms so there were no arguments. It all kind of flowed. I think we all got the rooms that we really wanted," she said.

OSU to get a taste of Ecuador

Campus to be site of art exhibit, popular music from South America

By Melanie Watkins Lantern sports writer

Art and music displays, performances and demonstrations will add a little South American flavor to Ohio State for the next two weeks as the Ecuadorian Cultural Ambassadors Project kicks off today in Bricker Hall.

Victor Mora, associate director of undergraduate admissions, headed the project as a part of the Silver Jubilee celebration of the Office of Hispanic Student Services.

He said he started the project after a trip to his home country, Ecuador. On that visit he saw a display of Bolivar Garcia's sculptured paintings and a performance by the music group Los Bocheritos. The project cost more than $20,000, which was donated by various organizations including the Office of Minority Affairs, Alpha Psi Lambda and the Office of Hispanic Student Services, Mora said.

Garcia's work can be seen on the second floor of Bricker Hall until May 2. He will also be showing demonstrations of how he produces his paintings.

A group of students at the University of Dayton held their annual Lowesfest last weekend despite a warning from university officials that the party would not be tolerated.

During the open-invitation event Friday night on Lowes Avenue, 18 people were arrested — seven by Ohio Liquor Control — and over 50 alcohol violations were issued. Several bottles were thrown at police officers, and now some students fsay they are being punished for the actions of a few

The event ended up costing UD $10,000 in public safety officers, Ohio Liquor Control officers, City of Dayton Police and cleanup. The bill for this will be handed to the students whom the university has decided were responsible for the planning the party despite warnings from the university.

Talk is going on about further punishment for these individuals, including suspension from May graduation for some seniors.

Many students on campus were very upset by the images, especially after just losing three of their own in a fire at Ohio State.

The group was being accused of doing this project because it was a holy week for most religions, and many people will not protest during their holy week.

Task force to ease sexual tensions

Bowling Green State University began the Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Issues Task Force, a student group trying to make the atmosphere on campus more accepting to other people's sexual preferences

The LGBT issues task force, begun last fall, is trying to help all students feel more comfortable on campus, such as straight women in sports or straight men in dance.

They believe the best way to ease tensions on campus is to decrease homophobia and create an environment in which students can feel free to talk openly.

Currently the group is conducting surveys with people of all sexual preferences and holding open forums to gather research. After the research is complete they will then make recommendations to the university on how to make the atmosphere a more accepting place.

They believe this research will also help teachers in the future deal with students who have parents of the same sex, as well as help to make students more comfortable in the classroom.

While attractiveness will be considered, the magazine is not looking

"The girl can be flat-chested for all we care," photographer David Rams said. "Some girls I'll see on the street and I'm like, 'Man, that girl's hot,' but I know she probably wouldn't photograph well. Then there's some girls that I see on the street that I wouldn't date, but then I look at them and I think, 'Man, that girl would photograph really well.

Rams is able to recognize talent when he sees it.

"Some girls can be very attractive, but then they get in front of a camera and they freeze up," he said.

Personality is an important factor in making the final decision. "Some of the girls might be very pretty but might be a big dud," Rams said. At the audition, the women decide their comfort level with nudity before the Polaroids are taken. Rofanos, who has appeared in Playboy, recommends auditioning with the same level of nudity they would pose with for the actual pictorial.

"I would suggest they go how ever they're comfortable," she said. "The thing is, if we have two girls in the same genre, and one girl is going to be okay with that and one girl is not, we're going to pick the other girl.

Most women end up posing fully nude, Rams said. Though it is up to the woman whether she will pose nude, her chances of getting in the magazine may depend on it. "If she says she won't take her clothes off, that will hurt her. We're Playboy magazine," Rams said. "Someone might say 'I saw someone with their clothes on,' yeah, but at one point they had their clothes off." Rams, with the help of Rofanos, will choose three to five women from each school. These women will pose for a pictorial and a group shot. The photographs go through several editing processes, then are sent to the Chicago office, where the editors make the final decision of which pictures will be used in the magazine.

Hugh Heffner, Playboy's owner, approves the final layout.

Not every woman that gets a pictorial will make it in Playboy.

"There's another, smaller magazine, which comes out in the spring, which is purely college girls. If they don't make it in (Playboy), then they'll probably get into that,"

Rams said. Casting officially ends today. The interview process has been slow, Rofanos said, but the casting crew will be in Columbus until Saturday. Interested women should call (312) 315-7342 for information.

Estimates indicate Obansanjo to rule Nigeria

Incumbent claims victory over former military colleague Muhammadu Buhari

By Glenn McKenzie Associated Press

LAGOS, Nigeria - President Olusegun Obasanjo took a commanding lead in early returns from voting that could bring Nigeria's first successful transition from one civilian government to another, but the main opposition party claimed the vote was rigged and a "huge joke."

With more than 20 million votes counted in 21 of Nigeria's 36 states and the federal capital territory, Obasanjo had 66 percent of the votes compared with 27 percent for Muhammadu Buhari, a former ally.

Buhari's campaign spokesman, Sam Nda-Isai, said his party rejected

"The entire so-called election is a huge joke," Nda-Isai said. "As far as we are concerned, democracy has failed.'

Buhari and other party leaders will meet in the next few days to decide a course of action, the spokesman said, declining to speculate whether that could involve massive protests as opposition officials earlier warned.

Obasanjo's campaign spokesman, meanwhile, called the results "a victory for the entire country."

"The people have spoken," Akin Osuntokun said, dismissing opposition threats as "the inability of losers to accept defeat gracefully."

Nigeria's election commission promised to cancel results in areas with proven cases of fraud. As far as we are concerned, (so far) there has been no rigging," Abel Guobadia, the election commission chairman, said Sunday. The election was a major test of whether democracy has taken root since Obasanjo was elected four years ago, ending 15 years of brutal military rule.

government successfully hand over power to another. Though it is one of the world's largest oil exporters, it is desperately poor and has a history of coups and unrest.

Obasanjo was once a military ruler, but he traded his uniform for traditional robes and ran for election in 1999. In Saturday's vote, he faced 19 challengers, including Buhari. The two former army men were once close colleagues, but their relationship soured after Obasanjo accused Buhari of mismanagement.

Nearly half of Nigeria's 126 million people registered for the ballot in 36 states and the capital. It was unclear how many voted, though officials said turnout was strong.

"Where there is substantial violence and boxes disappear, the results will not be accepted," stressed Hakeem Baba-Ahmed, commission secretary, who declared the ballot a "vast improvement" over previous elections.

At home in the southwest, the incumbent president smiled but declined to speak to reporters. A group of village women outside his Nigeria has never seen a civilian house cheered when he gave them a bundle of cash — a common custom in Nigerian politics. Obasan jo was preparing a speech to the nation to deliver today, his spokesman said.

Obasanjo's rule has brought some improvement in individual and press freedoms. Outbreaks of political, religious and ethnic violence have left more than 10,000 people dead since 1999. The leader's critics say he has done little to fight poverty and corruption.

Buhari gained notoriety by launching a 1983 coup that toppled civilian leader Shehu Shag ari after elections were widely regarded as flawed.

Neither candidate has articul ated a platform. Their campaigins have largely drawn upon Nigeria's religious and ethnic fault lines. Obasanjo is a Christian from the Yoruba ethnic group, with a strong support base in the southwest. Buhari is a Fulani and a Muslim from the north.

Buhari was once a trusted Cabinet minister in Obasanjo's military regime of the 1970s. Yet their friendship soured in 1999 when Obasanjo

Farmers find profit from heroin in Mexico

By Mark Stevenson Associated Press

TLAPA DE COMONFORT, Mexico — Marijuana has long been the main illegal crop on Mexico's Pacific coast, but now growers are switching to a more deadly and profitable product: high-grade opium poppies used to make heroin.

Mexican growers are using superproductive hybrid poppies from Colombia, and traffickers have also adopted some of the Colombians' more violent tactics — like shooting down police fumigation aircraft.

The rise in opium production, refining and smuggling is not only proving deadly for Mexican police; it also threatens to bring purer, more dangerous heroin to the United States.

In recent weeks, suspected drug growers shot down two government fumigation helicopters in the southern Guerrero state, killing all five crewmen aboard. While routine in Colombia, those were the first such deaths in Mexico.

Suspected drug gunmen also killed a forestry inspector who was looking into reports of illegal timber cutting in Guerrero's mountains, where drug growers have hacked thousands of small plots into federal forests.

In the cash-strapped rural communities of the mountains inland from Acapulco, farmers often look to illicit plants when prices drop for traditional crops like coffee, corn and coconuts.

Residents of Tlapa, a largely Indian town about 20 miles east of where the helicopters were shot down, said recruiters show up with opium seeds and offer local farmers large payments to grow the crops.

"Marijuana was always around, but prices for it are pretty low, so now opium is the new thing," said Miguel Guadalupe Guadalupe, a rural political activist.

In the town square, people said a farmer can get $1,300 for 2.2 pounds of raw opium gum, hundreds of times what they can earn for marijuana.

Local officials did not respond to requests for comment on the reports about opium growing.

Juan Navarro Solano, a schoolteacher and the son of a coffee farmer, said coffee isn't worth the effort anymore. "People basically have two choices: Either they leave - they emigrate — or they turn to illicit crops," he said.

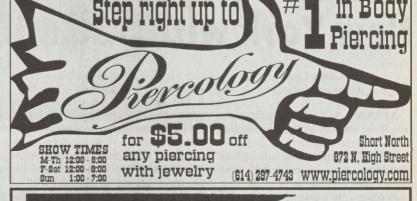

Mexican drugs gangs have long produced a poorly refined "black tar" heroin that is normally injected by addicts. It has traditionally accounted for about 30 percent of the heroin sold in the United States.

In the 1990s, Mexico also became a transit point for a pure, potent white Colombian heroin that can be sniffed. That type accounts for roughly 60 percent of the U.S. he roin supply, and it is the type Mexican gangs are beginning to produce.

A Drug Enforcement Administration report warned last year that the increasing purity of Mexican heroin, as well as ready supplies of high-purity white heroin, may result in geographic 'pockets of overdoses' in the United States."

The number of heroin addicts in the United States rose from 630,0(30 in 1992 to an estimated 977,000 in 12002, the DEA says. That increase was largely fueled by Colombian growers, who began elbowing Asian producers out of the U.S. market in the late 1980's.

U.S. soldiers prevented from combat in Phillippines

By Jim Gomez Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine government yesterday prohibited U.S. troops from joining soldiers on combat patrols during counterterrorism exercises planned for later this year on Jolo, a southern island where Muslim militants are active.

The ban marks a change from last year, when American soldiers joined Filipino army units on combat patrols during similar exercises on nearby Basilan island.

Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes said the new policy is meant to "emphasize that it will be the Filipino soldiers who should be doing the fighting."

Philippine officials fear U.S. troops could be drawn into skirmishes, violating a constitutional ban on foreigners fighting in the former U.S. colony.

When asked whether Washington would agree to Philippine restrictions on American soldiers, Reyes said, "This exercise is being held in Philippine territories so what the government says and what the president says is what will be done."

Unidentified Pentagon officials caused a political storm earlier this year when they said U.S. troops would engage in combat against the Abu Sayyaf, a Muslim extremist group loosely linked to al-Qaida and notorious for kidnappings and killings.

Philippine officials quickly issued denials, but the U.S. statements led to widespread public opposition to this year's exercises, especially on olo, where hundreds of Filipino Muslims died fighting American colonial forces in the early 1900s.

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo said the maneuvers on Jolo would focus on civic projects, intel-lig ence cooperation and training to evacuate Filipino soldiers wounded in combat.

The annual exercises, called Balikatan or "shoulder to shoulder," we're held on the main northern island of Luzon until last year, when the longtime allies decided to shift them to Basilan to help Filipino soldiers better fight the Abu Sayyaf.

Counterterrorism training and weapons provided by the U.S. military last year were credited with decimating the Abu Sayyaf's main faction on predominantly Muslim Bas ilan. But many rebels survived a U.S.-backed Philippine offensive and moved to Jolo.

Arroyo said this month Jolo would be the venue of this year's exercises. She said militants on Jolo have ties to terrorist cells in central Mindanao island, where a recent spate of bombings and ambushes has left hundreds of people dead and injured.

Outlaw berry could swing back to New York with $20 million in tow

By Alicia Chang Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. — The black currant, long known as the "forbidden fruit" for its suspected role in spreading a fungus that kills white pine trees, may soon be welcome again in New York.

Farmers in more than a halfdozen states are prohibited from growing the round, dark purple berry. But New York lawmakers have sent Gov. George Pataki a bill that would reverse a century-old state ban on growing most black currants, and many farmers hope they'll soon have another crop to plant.

This is the first viable crop to come along in a long time that can offer farmers a real alternative," said Greg Quinn, a farmer and fan of black currants. "This is going to be a real boon for New York farmers."

At a time when farmers are struggling, Quinn believes New York farms stand to profit by creating a niche and marketing the berry as the state's own once the ban is lifted.

"Idaho potatoes, Iowa pork, Florida oranges and Washington state apples have become familiar, marketable agricultural entities. Why not New York currants?" said Quinn, who grows disease-resistant black currants on his 135-acre farm in the Hudson Valley.

Under the bill, New York farmers could grow all species of black currants in designated districts. Currently, farmers can only grow disease-resistant currants, but many opt out of growing them altogether.

Black currants are commonly found in tea, yogurt, jams and vodka. In the late 1800s, New York led the nation in black currant production, but the state banned the fruit after scientists said it may help spread the blister rust fungus that destroys white pine trees.

Recent studies found the presence of black currant bushes does not necessarily lead to the spread of blister rust and that damage to white and heart disease.

pine trees from the disease is not as extensive as once thought.

Nevertheless, New York, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Caro lina, South Carolina and Virginia conti nue to ban black currant production. In Europe, where blister rust is under control, black currant is a billion-dollar industry. Black currant advo cates predict the berry could be a $20 million crop in New York and a $1 billion business nationwide.

This is a very real potential for the growth of the growing of currants; and the ability of farmers to make some money off this," said Assemblyman William Magee, a Mad ison County Democrat.

Besides their potential to make money for farmers, black currants contain important vitamins and minerals and have higher antioxidant properties than other dark berries like b lueberries, Quinn said. Antioxidant's are believed to help prevent degenerative diseases such as cancer

Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgendered Film Festival

The sixth annual Gay Lesbian Bisexual and Transgender Film Festival begins Thursday night at the Wexner Center for the Arts.

The Wexner Center has shown GLBT film and video since it opened in 1989 but did not start featuring such films in a festival until recently, said Dave Filipi, associate curator of film and video at the Wexner Center for the Arts.

A chance to gain freshman 15 all over again

By Nicholas Gill Lantern arts writer

This just in from Internet chat rooms: College students love chicken wings.

Wingslingers, 2167 N. High St. — at the corner of Lane and High — is one of several places to find the delicacies in the University District.

In-house service is quick, and pick-up orders typically take less than ten minutes. The inside of Wingslingers is small with just a few tables and clean, shiny, wood floors. Quirky paintings of circus freaks adorn the walls, enlivening the otherwise plain interior. It serves beer and is a fairly quiet place to catch the NHL playoffs if you lack cable or just want to get out of the house.

The wings are not very big. There's not a whole lot of meat on the bone, but the taste is respectable. And they're cheap30 cents apiece when dining from 5-9 p.m. Monday-Friday. Otherwise, they are $2.95 for 6, $4.95 for 12, and so on.

There are nine sauces to choose from. Barbecue comes in four levels: mild, honey, medium and hot. Medium only has a tinge of hotness, so if you're looking for hot, stick with the hot barbecue, 'really hot" or "sadistically hot." "Garlic hot" is a superb alternative for heat seekers who want a bit of zest with their tears. Non-hot flavors include honey mustard, sweet and sour, and teriyaki.

The other chicken option, the Breast Strips ($4.50/6, $8.50/12), are thick, crisp pieces of white meat and far more meatier than the wings.

The hoagie market on campus is vicious. There are even more places with hoagies than there are with wings. Wingslingers' NYC Grinders are hidden by the lure of fried poultry, and with good reason. They aren't awful, but not great. The toppings, including the meat, are mediocre at best. The grinders are served on toasted white baguettes and leafy green lettucee.

oned for sodomy and a young Khoe herder.

The Chicken Cordon Bleu ($3.75/6", $5.95/12") is one of eleven choices. The chicken comes in small chunks, and there are average amounts of ham, but definitely not an overload. You can taste bread more than anything else.

The Club ($3.75/6", $5.95/12") is disappointing. The bacon is paper-thin and even hard to taste. As with the Cordon Bleu, the ham and turkey are skimped upon. Yet, the tomatoes were fresh and the mayo just right.

Small popcorn-sized, heavily breaded, probably frozen-at-one-time shrimp make up the Shrimp Basket ($5.50). There is a large portion of the little critters, but again it's all breading and no substance. The wedge fries that accompany the shrimp on the other hand, have a great natural potato flavor, almost like fair or carnival fries with a better taste and thicker cut.

The Southern Fries ($3.95) might be one of the unhealthiest concoctions in Franklin County, but just thinking about the dish is gratifying. The waffle fries don't taste as good as the wedge fries, but they are loaded with cheese and shredded bacon and come with a side of ranch.

With so much unwholesome, greasy, fattening comfort food in the area, Wingslingers comes away at the top of the game. If you haven't gained your freshman 15 yet (even if you're a sophomore), here's your chance.

Wingslingers is open 11-2 a.m. Monday-Thursday, 11-3 a.m. Friday, noon-3 a.m. Saturday and noon-3 a.m. Sunday.

Memory outlasts Gateway

As the ground for the Gateway Project is finally broken, I have to say that I never thought it would happen.

Two years is a long, mad time to live amid empty lots and broken promises, as anger transforms to disbelief and then to apathy.

And for me, the dominance of Campus Partners meant the death of something very special, an end to the days of a very fascinating time in my life and the life of many others — thousands fresh out of high school, stacked in high rise apartments, thirsty for the first glimpses of a life that will come to define them in hindsight.

Granted, when I lived on West 11th Avenue in Siebert Hall for a year in 2000-2001, I knew I would only catch the last year or so of the glory of this section of campus, the tail-end of a defining cornerstone for droves of kids that had come before.

But though I only knew the last dying days of those blocks with such a long and crazy history, I knew it well. In fact, the feeling that the end was near seemed to make the whole situation that much crazier, the Mardi Gras carnival psychology of excess before absence.

Anyone living in those high rises along West 11th knew that area, one that had long transformed into college legend, before it came crashing down. The endless chaos — lines of happy revelers wrapped north along High Street, pinned between the brick wall of Panini's South and the thick metal cables police had strung between telephone poles to keep kids from spilling into traffic.

I can remember my friends' place on West 9th, hanging out on the porch of their barren shack of a house before stumbling in fits of laughter two blocks over to the Spot, to Not Al's Pub, to Panini's South — me singing Led Zeppelin hits in the street.

It's been a long time since I rock and rolled, indeed. Ha. Since last Thursday night, maybe, when we last stumbled over here to find people dancing and yelling and wearing halter tops in January and people smoking, drinking and getting wild.

True, it was wild in the classic, romantic sense of the phrase, when those things are still rewarding and innocent and without consequences, understanding that on most nights there would be something to get into - pre-parties, after parties, people hungry for something else and willing to sacrifice part of themselves to do it and unafraid how the action will be labeled in the future.

For me and a lot of others, an energy like that of south campus is a hard thing to live without once it becomes obvious that it is missing. The times were too entertaining, too over the top, that thinking back on them, they seem like a mirage.

Unfortunately, the same energy that made it such a unique place eventually ended up killing it, making it too wild, too evil in the eyes of everyone making the decisions and policies. Ironically, what made it such an explosive place to go, in the end, caused its own demise, imploding it back onto itself like an unwanted skyscraper.

And like a demolished building, south campus was demolished to make way for something new — for coffeeshops and graduate dorms and offices - construction for a new project that will never be able to rival the past.

The energy is gone, torn down with the buildings and the bars. Though what has really been lost is hard to say. I can remember sitting down early in 2000 to fill out my housing application, realizing that a place as big and bold as OSU requires a very special sense of what is right and wrong, what can be excused under the guise of experience and what I wanted to become and what I didn't.

South campus — even at the end — was the perfect place for making those kinds of distinctions, for straddling the fine and delicate line between those kinds of categories, for pushing the limits that I had previously been told were there.

Women's lacrosse falls in OT

By Mike Price Lantern sports writer

Even before Vanderbilt joined Ohio State in the American Lacrosse Conference last season, bad blood was already brewing between the two teams.

OSU's very first game in the program's seven-year history came against the Commodores in Nashville, Tenn., and the Buckeyes were welcomed to lacrosse with a 21-7 shellacking.

But, how times have changed. OSU has come a long way since their first meeting with Vanderbilt and has played tough games against the Commodores the past two seasons. The No. 9 Buckeyes (10-3, 3-1 ALC) looked to be the favorites entering Sunday's contest with the No. 17 Commodores (7-6, 4-2 ALC), ready to chip away at Vanderbilt's series lead, which stood at 6-1. Unfortunately, rankings mean nothing in grudge matches like this, as OSU couldn't hold onto a one-goal lead in the closing seconds of regulation. The Commodores made the most of their opportunities in both overtime and sudden death in winning a thriller 12-11 over the Buckeyes at Jesse Owens Memorial Stadium.

"Vanderbilt always gets up to play us, and we get up to play them," said defender Kimberly Lowe. "They know us pretty well and we know them pretty well."

OSU dominated the first half going on a five-goal run that made it 6-2 at half time. The second half was filled with Buckeye fouls and costly turnovers, which allowed Vanderbilt to tie the game in regulation.

OSU coach Sue Stimmel said her team could have built an even bigger lead in the first half.

"We had opportunities to put it away in the first half, and we didn't," she said. "We hit a couple of posts, got a little sloppy at the end. I don't know if we were kind of comfortable because we got up, but give Vanderbilt credit — they came out hard in the second half."

Vanderbilt began its comeback in the first 16 minutes of the second half, tallying four straight goals that knotted the game at 6-6.
"They had all the ball control in the second half, which is big for them," Lowe said. "Vanderbilt was able to capitalize off that a lot and kind of put us in a hole early."

The Commodores four-goal surge woke up the Buckeyes, as OSU answered with three consecutive goals in a one-minute, seven-second

OSU midfielder Regina Oliver began the scoring spurt when she made a quick move by her defender, getting a clear shot, and fired it past goalkeeper Ashley Bastinelli. Then midfielder Shannon Wilson notched back-to-back goals, increasing the Buckeyes lead at 9-6 midway through the second half. The first goal came when Wilson whipped an outside shot by Bastinelli, and the second came when she forced an opening in the Commodore's defense and scored with a low shot to the corner of the goal. Vanderbilt and OSU would trade goals before the Commodores went on a game-tying, three-goal tear that sent the game into overtime at 10-10.

Overtime rules in women's lacrosse consist of two three-minute periods, followed by a three-minute sudden death victory period if both teams are still tied up.

The Commodores scored with five seconds left in the first overtime period after the Buckeyes controlled possession but turned the ball over at the end. Vanderbilt attacker Jeannie Crawley scored by curling around OSU's defense and unleashed a line drive shot past Forquer with intense traffic in front of her.

In the second three-minute overtime period, Vanderbilt held onto the ball for almost the entire three minutes before OSU attacker Tracey Bounds broke free from her defender behind the goal and passed to an oncoming Wilson who netted the equalizer at 11-11.

"Shannon and Tracey play well together," Stimmel said. "The play was similar to a goal that we had up at Cornell that tied things up.

VU didn't take long to put away the game in sudden death as it scored 58 seconds into the period. After an OSU foul, Commodore attacker Michelle Allen charged toward the goal for a one-on-one with Forquer and converted to give VU a 12-11 victory.

Men's tennis sweeps weekend matches

By Melanie Watkins Lantern sports writer

The Ohio State men's tennis team secured a first-round bye in the Big Ten Championship this weekend as it finished off the regular season at home.

The Buckeyes faced off against Minnesota and Iowa, winning both matches. Vince Ng and Jeremy Wurtzman won matches both days, putting them each at a 10-match win streak and undefeated in the

No. 23 Ohio State started the weekend playing No. 11 Minnesota on Saturday. The doubles points went to the Buckeyes when the senior team of Ng and Phil Metz won 8-2 and the freshman team of Ross Wilson and Scott Green won a tiebreaker 9-8.

"It is nice to see freshman coming out here and getting wins that are big," OSU coach Ty Tucker said.

The doubles points were significant for the Buckeyes, as they went on to split the singles matches 3-3. Dennis Mertens, Ng and Wurtzman got the points in the singles.

Mertens had a close first set, losing 6-7 in a tough tie-break game. As he came into the second set he quickly pulled ahead 2-0. His opponent, Manuel Lievano, got frustrated at this point and began yelling at the judge.

'He was talking in Spanish to the ref, and I understand Spanish," Mertens said. "He was saying some bad things about the ref."

After arguing and throwing his racket, Lievano was disqualified from the match. This gave the Buckeyes their second point of the day.

"I am glad about this win," Mertens said. "I was glad to be part of the beating."

Ng won his first set 6-0, but fell behind in the beginning of the sec-

Things turned around when Wettengel conversed with the audience. According to college tennis rules, the judge awarded a point to Ng as a penalty against Minnesota.

Ng was able to come back for a 6win and secured the match. This put the Buckeyes on top of the Golden Gophers 3-0, with four matches still in contention.

"He got off to a good start (in the second set) and had a change of strategy," Ng said. "I was able to keep my focus and make him lose his.'

Wurtzman's win for OSU was not an easy one. Frustration hurt him as he fell behind in the first set 2-5. Wurtzman's set took a turn when he was able to break opponent Thomas Haug's serve. He won two games in a row and went on to win the match

This took pressure off the other Buckeyes still contending. It allowed Metz to retire from his match after falling behind in the third set 0-2.

"(He) called the match after we had secured the win because of some injuries," Tucker said.

The 4-3 win put OSU in second place in the Big Ten Conference, bumping Minnesota to third. It gave the team confidence to go into the match against Iowa on Sunday, shuting-out the Hawkeyes 7-0. This was the eighth shutout for OSU this season.

Ng and Metz helped the Buckeyes to three points for the day in their final appearance at the Stickney Tennis Center, as they both won their singles matches and played together to win their doubles match.

'Those guys have had great careers," Tucker said. "They have a couple hundred singles wins between the two of them.

SAE team builds car for competition

By Tom Symonds Lantern staff writer

Hopes are at an all-time high for the Ohio State Society of Automotive Engineering race team, as it approaches the Formula SAE competition held in May at the Pontiac Sil-

The OSU team established itself among the nation's elite, placing third at the competition in 2001. Regarded as one of the most competitive racing and design competition's in the world, the Formula SAE competition plays host to over 140 teams. This year OSU will try to make another push for the team title.

"The car is as far along as it has ever been in the past," said Craig Derian, team captain. "We have changed so many things, and we have improved many things such as weight and horsepower."

The Formula SAE competition is broken down into two parts, with 65 percent of the competition focusing on the ability of the car.

The other 35 percent of the competition is focused on the knowledge of the car. This forces the team to be organized and understand all facets of the vehicle, as well as have to answer any question asked by the design panel.

Records of every step taken to build the car are kept by team manager Lee Ann Schwope.

"It's hard being a graduating senior with the responsibility of the completion of this car your shoulders," Schwope said. "It's a lot of pressure." The year-long project starts in the fall and was completed March 29th when the team put the car on the track for testing. Since then, the team has tested the car on the Honda Test Track in Marysville, Ohio, Don Scott Airport and the Goodyear Test Track, going from 0 to 60 in 3.2 seconds.

Along with reducing weight and increasing speed, the team has continued to make tremendous steps in copper fiber — a slick material that aids in comfort and reduces weight. However, the most evident char-acterisitc among the 45-member team is its work ethic. This year's car was completed the earliest in OSU SAE history.

The car goes through a design, building and testing phase before competition begins in May. Overall, the car goes through over 1500 hours of work,

We pull late nights here. We've even slept here sometimes," said Casey Putsch, an industrial design major.

Volleyball season ends with playoff loss

By Mike White Lantern sports writer

The Ohio State men's volleyball team ended its season on Saturday, losing 3-2 in a heart-breaking match in the quarterfinals of the Midwest Intercollegiate Volleyball Association (MIVA) Tournament to Indiana-Purdue in St.

"We played well," OSU middle hitter Scott Spurlock said. "Just not well enough to beat them."

Both teams traded wins in the first two games (30-28, 22-30) with the Buckeyes then taking the third game (30-27).

In the fourth game, advancement looked inevitable as the Buckeyes led 15-9. However, the Mastodons climbed back, with much of the credit going to the MIVA Player of the Year, outside hitter Jeff Ptak.

"He's the best athlete on the floor," OSU coach Pete Hanson said. "Strategically we knew that they were going to do it — it wasn't rocket science. He played like the best guy in the conference."

The Buckeyes had no answer for Ptak, who almost single-handedly put his team even at 22. Both teams then traded points to a 28-all tie. Ptak then made one of his matchhigh 30 kills to give the Mastodons their first lead of the game. OSU found itself having to play a match-spike was blocked to the floor, giving Indiana-Purdue a 30-28 win. "In this situation, with rally scor-

deciding fifth game when an OSU

ing, it's one or two just borderline plays at critical times that keep you over the hump," Hanson said, "Basically, we just didn't put that team away when we had opportunities. We had a few pretty big leads in a couple of those games we lost. We didn't put them away. We didn't step on them."

In the final game of the match, OSU and Indiana-Purdue were tied at seven. Then, again spurred on by their star, the Mastadons won the next three points and never looked back, taking a 15-11 victory and ending the Buckeyes season.

"It's obviously a disappointing game," MIVA Freshman of the Year and OSU outside hitter Andy Cole said. "It's a tough loss."

"I though it was a great volleyall match." Hanson said. "Both teams played hard. Give some credit to those guys. They hung in there, and they kept fighting and made some plays and put pressure on us. The pressure just kind of got to us. We just didn't respond, and that has kind of happened all-year long."

Outside hitter Mike Wauligman led the Buckeyes with a career-high

The loss gave the Buckeyes' a 16-12 record on the season.
