CINCINNATI — A deal the city made with the U.S. Justice Department and black activists was intended to help prevent the kind of struggle that preceded the death of a 350-pound black man who was beaten by police trying to subdue him.

The agreement reached last year was part of a collaborative that ended a racial profiling lawsuit and a Justice Department investigation of police practices.

It called on police to institute nonaggressive measures to help prevent repeats of several cases in which black men died in custody or while being arrested.

They included the 1997 shooting of a mentally ill man who threatened to throw a brick at officers; the 2000 death of a man who suffocated after being handcuffed; specially trained Mental Health Response man who died after and the 2001 shooting of a man who ran from officers who tried to arrest him.

The latter case sparked three days of riots that ended only when a dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed.

Part of the agreement called for police to emphasize "de-escalation techniques," such as waiting out a subject, summoning reinforcements or calling in specialized MOSCOW — In what would be a mortal blow to the accord aimed at halting global warming, a top Kremlin official said yesterday that Russia won't ratify the Kyoto Protocol limiting greenhouse gas emissions because it will hurt the country's economy.

The United States rejected the accord for the same reason. Without Moscow, the protocol cannot come into effect even if approved by every other nation because only Russia's industrial emissions are large enough to tip the balance.

The pollution cuts required by the treaty would slow the economic growth that President Vladimir Putin has made a major priority, said top adviser Andrei Illarionov.

Earlier this fall, Putin cast deep doubts on Moscow's willingness to ratify the protocol, but he had not ruled it out entirely.

A Russian Economics Ministry spokesman, Konstantin Bogdanov, told Dow Jones News Wires on yesterday he was unaware of any change in Russia's official position, which has been that it is still considering the protocol.

However, Illarionov said it would be unfair for Russia to curb emissions and stymie its own growth while the United States and other nations, which account for the bulk of global emissions, refuse to join the pact.

Voters won't see slots proposal on ballot

By Ben Nanamaker Lantern staff writer

Attempts to get a slots-forscholarships proposal onto the March primary ballot for Ohioans to vote on appear to have gone bust.

Efforts by slots supporters to bypass the typical rules for working on legislation appear to have failed because of disagreements on how to spend the money. Democrats favored using proceeds to pay for scholarships and school improvements, while House Speaker Larry Householder, R-Glenford, preferred a plan that would help repeal the the sales tax, according to local media reports.

Supporters were trying to get Senate Joint Resolution 8 passed yesterday because the House and Senate might not be in session today to allow state legislators to attend a meeting of the National Black Caucus of State Legislators in Houston, according to a local media article.

Andy Spencer, legislative aid to the proposal's primary sponsor, Sen. Louis Blessing, R-Cincinnati, said the House Republican caucus decided not to push the proposal through.

Legislators in favor of the plan were trying to get the House to suspend the legislative rules that require bills to be assigned to committee before being voted on, so that they could vote on the proposal immediately, in order to get it passed in time to be placed on extra penny that's been added to the March 2 primary ballot. Suspending legislative rules requires two-thirds of the House to vote in favor of suspension.

New 'Life' plates await Senate vote

By Jennifer Bash Lantern staff writer

Ohio is one step closer to offering the controversial "Choose Life" license plates.

The Ohio House of Representatives passed H.B. 129, the "Choose Life" License Plate Bill, by a vote of 67-25 on Nov. 13.

"We are very pleased that H.B. 129 passed," said Mark Lally, legislative council for the Ohio Right to Life. "This is a bill that will send a positive message and contribute money to help women."

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Ron Young, R-Leroy, would permit the sale of specialty license plates with the message "Choose Life" on them. The extra fees collected from the specialty plates would benefit non-profit organizations that counsel and provide material assistance to pregnant women interested in placing their children up for adoption.

"I am grateful to the members who supported this legislation," Young said. "I believe these plates are important to Ohio. They will provide voluntary support for women in desperate need who have decided to give birth and put their children up for adoption.

Pro-choice groups are skeptical

"We feel that all women should have a full range of options and be able to make their own decision during this time in their lives," said Kellie Copeland, executive director of NARAL Pro-Choice Ohio. "The organizations that will be supported by the 'Choose Life' plates do not always provide these options to women.

Before voting on the bill, the House killed two amendments offered by state Rep. Dale Miller, D-Cleveland.

"The two amendments that I offered were designed to make a bad bill better," Miller said.

The first amendment would have eliminated a requirement that none of the funds from the sale of "Choose Life" plates could go to groups that provided, counseled for or referred adoption. This would have made abortion-practicing groups, such as Planned

The second amendment, offered by Miller, would have changed the message on the license plate from "Choose Life" to 'Consider Adoption." The House also voted to table the second amendment with a 62-28 vote.

"I am strongly opposed to the 'Choose Life' license plate proposal and voted against it," Miller said. 'The phrase 'Choose Life' is too politically charged to be appropriate for the license plate program. This could lead to all kinds of political advertising on license plates."

Copeland said the state should not be involved in such a politically controversial issue.

"The state should not be helping to raise money for these kinds of organizations," Copeland said. "These organizations scare women with issues about abortion, not council them with all their

Gov. Bob Taft's office was contacted, but refused to comment on whether the governor would sign the bill if it is passed.

Police Chief Thomas Streicher Jr. said yesterday the videotape showed that officers observed proper police procedures.

Men outnumbered while in class

(U-WIRE) FORT WORTH. and Texas Christian University doesn't know what to do about it.

Over the last 40 years, the percentage of men at TCU has stayed between 38 percent and 43 percent, said Dean of Admissions Ray Brown.

This is something that I figured last year would be easy to break and that was the one record we did not break," he said. "It was a huge disappointment to me."

TCU had an increase in all the majority were from women, Brown said.

According to the 2003 TCU Fact Book, 2,820 of the 6,933 were male. Last year, 2,850 of 6,851 students were male.

Karen Scott, director of international admission, said more women are in college nationwide and even more women are in private universities

Nationally, the amount of women in higher education passed men about five years ago, Brown said. The percentage is now about 53 percent, he said.

admission marketing, said, "We are always trying to encourage (U-WIRE) FORT WORTH, men to apply and to express an Texas—Guys love it, girls hate it interest in TCU. But because this is a national trend, it is hard to do."

Yvette Nevarez, a junior in English, said the imbalance in the genders is not fair to the women at TCU for social and academic

"It's great that more and more women want to better themselves but depressing that men don't," Nevarez said. "With each new class coming in, you see fewer and fewer men.

Scott said certain majors, such applications last school year and as nursing, education and fine arts, appeal to women more than other majors. These majors are predominant at TCU, she said.

'Not to be stereotypical, but undergraduate students this year some majors just appeal more to women then to men," Scott said. 'A university with a bigger engineering program would typically have more males."

Allison Liu, a sophomore in nursing, said mainly females are in her major and future profession. Therefore there are only two or three males in each of her classes, she said.

"I would be interested to see how my overall education would Ben Alexander, director of change if there were more males," she said.

Men are interested in majors that deal with science, technology and professions that make more money, Liu said.

Although there is a big gap between males and females, Scott said she rarely hears anyone complaining about it.

"I occasionally hear people joking about the gender gap,"

Brown said in the 1950s, when more men were at TCU than women, it was not a big deal, but now that more women are enrolled, it has become a big deal.

Recruiting more males to TCU is important to the females because women have a smaller chance of marrying a man with the same education, he said.

"One of the huge things that cause divorce is difference in education," Brown said.

Alexander said the admissions office is trying to recruit more students, especially men, by simplifying the application

"Every additional step makes the process more difficult," he said. "We want to make the process easier for everyone to get more students interested.

He also suggested in a local media article that there was the possibility of placing virtual casinosatoff-tracklocations in Cincinnati, Columbus and Cleveland.

Rep. Kenneth Carano, D-Youngstown, said that before states other than Nevada began to allow gambling, Ohio was the third largest gambling state, according to the FBI.

"The fact of the matter is, the state of Ohio is a gambling state," Carano said eventually a slots proposal will pass in Ohio.

This will happen. This is going to happen," he said. "Somewhere along the line we will have enough votes in both the House and the Senate to pass this."

The slots proposal follows in the footsteps of the last attempt to legalize a form of gambling in Ohio. In 1996, a ballot amendment to legalize casino gambling was defeated 62 percent to 38 percent, said Rob Wolgate, a staff member at Ohio Roundtable, a conservative research forum.

man-made carbon dioxide emissions, and its March 2001 decision angered environmentalists.

Russian officials initially suggested Russia would ratify it, but remarks by Putin and Illarionov at a climate-change conference in Moscow two months ago indicated the opposite.

Putin has called for the doubling of Russia's gross domestic product by 2010 — a goal officials fear might conflict with the Kyoto Protocol, which would require the Kremlin to overhaul Russian industries to cut emissions.

Cows not cruel

Canulation aids in research

Old McDonald may have had a farm and he may have had a cow, but Old McDonald never had a cow like the ones at Ohio State.

Cows with windows, also known as cannulated cows, are part of a study that OSU's Ruminant Nutrition Department is conducting on the nutrition of domestic animals. Cannulated cows are similar to any other cow with one exception — they are fitted with a canula, or a small window. The window allows researchers to study what goes on in the rumen, one of the cow's four stomachs.

While the procedure may sound like a form of cruel and unusual punishment, the process doesn't really hurt the cows. A canula is placed on a cow through a surgery done when it is two to three years old. The surgery lasts about an hour, and the cow is anesthetized, so it doesn't experience

Cannulating cows doesn't affect their ability to function as a normal cow. They are still able to produce milk and their digestive systems are not inhibited in any way. After the procedure, the cows can be used in a variety of different types of research most of which help improve the health of the species. For this reason, cannulating cows is an extremely effective method of research.

Cutting a hole in a cow in the name of research could be considered animal cruelty by some animal rights activists; however, keeping any animal in captivity is also considered cruel by the same groups of people. The People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals "believes that animals deserve the most basic rights — consideration of their own best interests regardless of whether they are useful to

For that reason they also believe animals should not be used for food, clothing, entertainment or experimentation. But if organizations like PETA really cared about the wellbeing of animals then they would support research, such as cannulation because it will improve the health of the cows.

While the usage of these cows may conflict with some people's beliefs, cannulated cows are actually a helpful addition to any herd. Some farmers even keep the cows on hand as rumen fluid donors. The fluid in the cows rumen contains thousands of microbes which are useful in fighting off harmful organisms. When another cow is sick the fluid in a cannulated cow can be extracted and used to cure illnesses. So essentially the cows with windows are healthier than other, non-cannulated cows.

Birth control ban

Law outranks church beliefs

The Roman Catholic Church is once again trying to affect public policy that doesn't follow the church's morality. Courts in New York and California are hearing cases that would exempt branches of the Catholic Church from state laws that include contraceptives in employee prescription-drug plans. Under church doctrine, contraception is a sin.

The case was sparked after the California law was passed in 2000. Catholic Charities of Sacramento unsuccessfully sought to bar contraceptives from the health care plan. A state appeals court also refused to hear the case, and the California Supreme Court heard the case vesterday.

Going by previous rulings by the U.S. Supreme Court, the state has every right to rule against the Catholic Charities of Sacramento. Religious organizations should not be exempt from state laws just because they don't believe in them. The court ruled in favor of a ban on polygamy, despite objections from Mormons, and it ruled against a group of American Indians who were denied unemployment after they were fired for using peyote during ceremonies. The other problem facing the Catholic Charities of Sacramento is not all of its employees are Catholic. With a $76 million budget last year, the charities provide social services to people of all religions, not just Catholics. Nor do they demand their workers be Catholic. If one of the non-Catholic employees needs to purchase contraceptives, it's wrong to exempt them from getting them paid for by their employee drug plan. While the most common use of oral contraceptives, such as ortho tri-cyclen, is birth control, a sin in the eyes of the church, that is not their sole use. Contraceptives can also be used to regulate the menstrual cycle and treat symptoms of menopause, like hot flashes, mood swings and osteoporosis. Doctors may also prescribe contraceptives to treat other conditions, like skin problems.

Arguments have been made that say some religious groups have been exempt from laws in the past. The U.S. military recognizes the religious views of conscientious objectors by keeping them off thfront lines. Traffic markings on the back of Amish horse carts have also been removed because they do not fit the Amish lifestyle, but these are extreme conditions that apply to religious groups as a whole. Because not all Catholics agree on the subject of contraceptives, it doesn't make sense to exempt all organizations from the state law.

While Ohio does not have a law on its books requiring contraceptives be part of prescription-drug plans, the state could easily join the growing number to adopt such laws. While the Catholic Church should be free to have its own beliefs, it should not be able to push those beliefs on the thousands of non-Catholic women who work for Catholic organizations.

Journalism needs new home will be graduating from this fine institution in less than two weeks. As a soon-to-be alumnus, I feel I have earned the right to make a serious suggestion to the administration at Ohio

About a month ago, it was announced that the School of Journalism and Communication was changing its name to simply the School of Communication — a move that angered those of us in the journalism program.

School Director Carroll Glynn does not want to "imply that we are a large School of Journalism when we do a wide variety of things.

Ohio State is the home of the third largest college newspaper in the country, and with its 125-year history many would beg to differ, but that is beside the point.

It is pointless now to debate about the name change. Glynn has made it clear that this is what she intends to do. Never mind that there was no interaction on the subject with students or alumni.

Instead of ranting about the name change of my precious school, I would like to offer a modest proposal to the academic decision-makers at this university

Journalism and mass communication are not related fields of study. Mass communication is an offshoot of sociology and psychology - an attempt to understand how and why people receive and interpret media messages. It has nothing to do with news writing.

Journalism is a practical field with the purpose of providing accurate reporting of the news. Not one thing taught in any mass communication class has anything to do with practical journalism.

Therefore, I would like to put forth the following:

The journalism program should abandon its ties with the School of Communication. There is no longer any reason to stay.

Because journalism is too small to be a department of its own, I suggest that the program hook up with the Department of English and have a joint English-

The most important journalistic skill is classes that provide training in writing. Read the course bulletin. Let me know if there is one mass communication class that focuses on writing, because I cannot find it.

I have much more faith in a writing instructor who has studied English than a communication professor who has spent his or her career doing surveys and compiling statistics.

Tor the last several months, illegal immigrants, who are part of the Immigrant Rights Freedom Ride Coalition, have been traveling throughout the nation in order to garner attention about their rights. They're hoping their grass-roots campaign will be reminiscent of the civil rights protests in the 1960s. The comparison, however, is fuzzy since they're demanding rights that are inclusive to legal residents.

The immigrants have several demands, including health care, college aid, legal status, the ability to bring their families to America and protecting their rights.

We must do something about the situation since there are more than 7 million immigrants who don't have the proper paperwork. We should provide them with more basic rights without giving them too much freedom.

If they're involved in an accident, they should get emergency care; it's cruel for a world leader to deny anyone health care even if they can't pay for it. The government should also work harder to ensure better work environments and make sure that workers are not abused.

These rights may seem like a lot especially for people who are technically not even supposed to be in the country, but our country is based on the principle that every human being deserves basic rights, and it's hypocritical for us to turn our back when some employers abuse their workers.

Companies take advantage of immigrants even though they're crucial to our economy. Immigrants are subject to sub par working conditions, grueling hours, and paltry salaries. They're willing, however, to endure such conditions because they realize the overwhelming opportunities that our country offers. Illegal immigrants will have more incentive than any other workers to work extremely hard because they're so eager to take advantage of these opportunities that are

It's admirable that workers are willing to go through hardships, but it doesn't mean that we should give them all the rights awarded to U.S. citizens. Illegal immigrants are fooling themselves if they think the country is willing to share the same rights with them. The United States has worked hard in the last hundred years to provide rights for residents and it's unreasonable for illegal aliens to think that they'll be able to get these rights just because they're protesting.

Politicians have realized that we must confront this issue with a different approach since we've allowed so many people into the country due to our relaxed border control. Ted Kennedy is supporting a bill that will offer temporary resident status to workers who can prove that they've worked in the country for 100 days in the last 18 months. John McCain is going even further by letting immigrants work toward citizenship status.

We will accomplish a lot more than just allowing them to have rights. By giving them temporary status or even allowing them to get on track on becoming citizens, we have a better chance of keeping track of people in the country. We can assure that they'll be making their fair share of contributions to our society by paying

Our country was based on the foundation that people of various backgrounds will be able to live together. With such a diverse culture, we'll be exposed to different trains of thought which will fuel innovation. For everyone's sake, however, we must regulate the infusion of people every year.

The government could easily stop the buses which have protesters and deport them but they realize that it's a not a viable option because it doesn't solve the longterm problem. Because it's not worth searching for everyone and kicking them out, we must offer the millions of illegal immigrants in our country an opportunity so that one day they'll be able to make meaningful contributions to America.

OTHER VIEWS

Death too harsh for Malvo

When the first reports of the D.C. sniper attacks hit the national airwaves, people were stunned. Everybody wanted to know who the snipers were and why they did what they did. Everybody wanted the culprits found and brought to justice.

In the heat of the moment, almost everybody agreed that the death penalty was an apt sentence for such a horrible crime. The trial would be swift, we thought, and the punishment just.

But now that the killers have been apprehended, the situation is different. One of the shooters, Lee Malvo, was only 17 years old at the time of the shooting. That's not child status by any stretch of the imagination, but Malvo's early years of abandonment by his mother and influence from John Allen Muhammad might have played a significant part in molding him into a killer.

And for these reasons, Malvo should not be given the death penalty.

Defense attorneys brought in witnesses who testified that Malvo had an unsteady upbringing, attending several different schools in the Caribbean. While his mother went to look for work, Malvo stayed with anybody who would take him in.

Malvo's father, Leslie Malvo, testified that his relationship with Malvo's mother, Una James, was a rocky one. He claimed that she beat him and abused him, often for no apparent reason.

When his mother left him under the care of John Allen Muhammad, Malvo finally found some guidance. Unfortunately, that guidance came from a man who was given the highest Army award for marksmanship and who faced disciplinary charges while in the Louisiana National Guard.

While under the care of Muhammad, Malvo traveled across the Caribbean and into the United States. Muhammad took Malvo to visit his family in late 2002, and a family member reported that Muhammad kept him on a strict diet, allowing him to eat only crackers, honey and nutritional supplements.

Judging from the evidence, it seems clear that Muhammad exerted a powerful influence over Malvo, and it leads us to question whether the death penalty is right in this instance.

Yes, Malvo is responsible for the deaths of several people in the Washington, D.C., area. Yes, he will go to jail for his crimes. But given the hardships he has already faced throughout his young life, the death penalty should be out of the question.

Police can ram doors of suspected drug dealers after 20 seconds

By Gina Holland Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a victory for law officers, the Supreme Court ruled unanimously yesterday that it was constitutional for police to wait 20 seconds before knocking down the door of a drug suspect.

LaShawn Banks was taking a shower when masked and heavily armed officers broke into his Las Vegas apartment in 1998 looking for drugs.

His case gave the court the opportunity to clarify how long police must wait before breaking into a home to serve a warrant. The court ruled 9-0 that a 20 second delay was ample, because any longer would give drug suspects time to flush evidence down the

The justices refused to spell out exactly how long is reasonable in executing warrants for drugs or other contraband.

Officers knocked and announced themselves at Banks' apartment, then waited 15 secbattering ram to break down the Justice David H. Souter, writing for the court, said that because police believed there were drugs inside, officers had more reason to

"Police seeking a stolen piano may be able to spend more time to make sure they really need the battering ram," Souter

He said while "this call is a close one, we think that after 15 or 20 seconds without a response, police could fairly suspect that cocaine would be gone if they were reticent any longer."

Smart drug dealers, he said, would keep their contraband near a commode or sink.

The Supreme Court has said that in most cases officers are required to knock and announce themselves, under the Constitution's Fourth Amendment ban on unreasonable searches.

In yesterday's ruling, Souter said that generally courts have considered whether police moved too hastily "case by case, largely avoiding categories and protocols for searches.

The North Las Vegas police and federal officers found 11 onds to 20 seconds before using a ounces of crack cocaine and three guns during the raid. Banks served four years of an 11-year prison sentence before his conviction was overturned.

"Police are going to read this as, 'Knock and announce and kick the door in."

Justices reversed the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling in Banks' favor.

Banks, 26, was at work yesterday and not immediately available for comment. His lawyer, Randall Roske, said the ruling opened the door to police

'We are going to have a race to the bottom," Roske said in Las Vegas. "Police are going to read this as, 'Knock and announce and kick the door in."

Beruit banker caught in money scandal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) -Never mind the headlines of violence in Iraq or the bickering of Lebanese politicians. What's grabbing readers in Beirut is the tale of the cocky woman bank worker and the more than $300 million missing from her bank.

That is Rana Koleilat — or simply Rana to an avid public who at 36 had risen from clerk to supervisor of accounts at the private Madina Bank.

The headlines tell her story: Millions missing. Rana jailed. Suit filed. Countersuit filed. Charges multiply. Amid all the coverage, it's hard to tell how much is fact, speculation or sim-

'Rana free on bail of only one Militia of Bodyguards."

Koleilat quickly became a celebrity, with the press chronicling ing a bad check for $3 million and her friendships and even dates.

Pictures showed her strutting confidently into the Justice Palace courthouse surrounded by bodyguards. "How do I look today?" she asked, flashing smiles at soldiers on guard, according to one newspaper.

It all started in July, when bank. After detecting a cash deficit of more than $300 million, the Central Bank stepped in and took control of Madina Ibrahim Abu Ayash, Madina's deputy chairman, is in jail awaiting trial on charges of fraud and issuing bad checks. Adnan Abu Ayash, Ibrahim's brother and the bank's majority shareholder, is believed to be in Saudi Arabia; he faces several arrest warrants.

But Koleilat, who has worked at the bank for about 12 years, quickly became the center of the case.

She was jailed on suspicion of embezzlement and illegally transferring funds, but has not been charged. Several depositors have filed suit against her and the Abu Ayash brothers. A suit by the brothers accused her of issu-

It is unclear how the one time clerk got the Abu Ayashes to give her a power of attorney allowing her access to their accounts. One newspaper, quoting a lawyer for the brothers, said she claimed to other news broke of a scandal at the employees that she and Adnan were secretly married.

Adnan now accuses Koleilat along with other irregularities, of "abusing the trust that was given to her in order to put her hand on my personal assets, estimated in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

> While Koleilat was freed from jail in mid-November, her story keeps bubbling along. Monday's edition of the French language Beirut daily L'Orient Le Jour carried a front-page interview under the headline: "I am not a thief."

The scandal is the worst at a Lebanese bank since the 1975-90 civil war. But the banking sector is reported to be solid, with deposits of about $40 billion in more than 70 private banks, money attracted by the country's banking secrecy laws and open market economy.

Bruce sets roster, training schedule

By Craig Sweeney Lantern sports writer

It could be called the calm before the storm, which will begin in February when the Columbus Destroyers begin play in the Arena Football League.

While the team is not yet practicing, it is using this time to get the roster in order and start making preparations for the season.

The Destroyers look to take 37 players to training camp this season to begin the evaluation process of what type of team they have assembled

'We're finalizing our roster," offensive coordinator Pete Costanza said. "The most important thing is to get players in place.

Coach Earle Bruce is looking forward to seeing what type of team the organization has put together. "I hope we picked well," Bruce said. "It's how they mesh together." The team will have a mini-camp Jan. 7-9, which will primarily be for rookies, quarterbacks and wide receivers, Bruce said.

The mini-camp is used to get players back into the football flow and help them get adjusted to the systems the team will run, Costan-

On Jan. 11 the Destroyers will report to training camp and begin to focus on the season and its opener on Feb. 7 in Indianapolis against the Indiana Firebirds.

Practice is a little more competitive," Costanza said. "(It takes)21/2 weeks to get into football-hitting shape.'

The roster the team will take into training camp is a mixture of veterans and young players. Of the 37 players, 11 were with the Destroyer franchise in Buffalo last year and the other 26 were picked up through free agency.

One of the players is wide receiver and linebacker Cornelius White who is entering his seventh year in the league and spent last year in Buffalo. White is looking forward to getting back into action and has aring for the s White also participates in flag football during the off-season as a way to keep his skills sharp. He is able to work on his hands and his cuts on the field and keep up his conditioning.

White is anxious to see how quickly the team will come together and how it will perform on the field.

"I hope (everything comes together) as fast as possible," White said. "We have some talent and we have some unproved talent. A lot of guys are going to have to step up." One position where someone

"We're expecting him to compete," Bruce said. "He knows the speed and tempo of arena football."

Ryan Vena and John Rayborn are the other two quarterbacks who will fight for playing time. Vena was named first-team, All-arenafootball2 last year while playing for the Albany Conquest. Rayborn has spent time in the AFL, af2 and the CFL

"Rayborn is penciled in as our No. 1 guy. It's his job to lose," Costanza said. "The (quarterback) position will be real competitive in training camp.'

To help make the job of the quarterback easier the Destroyers signed big-time receiver, Corey Hill. In 2002 Hill caught 161 passes, which set the professional football record (NFL, CFL, AFL, USFL and af2) for receptions in a season while with the Albany Conquest. In 2003 he tied his record by grabbing 161 more receptions.

"He's a really smart player, knows the game of arena football," Costanza said. "Not the biggest or fastest, but his hands are exceptional."

Also on the roster will be former Buckeyes Damon Moore and Chris Vance. Moore will be a defensive specialist while Vance will get a chance to play on both sides of the ball, Bruce said.

Other teams will be practicing and competing regularly. The men's and women's basketball teams will continue on their regular schedule, sans classes, as they look to improve their continuing seasons.

The women's volleyball team has been done with its season since its final game Saturday. The girls will not be allowed to practice during a dead period that will last until the end of break, when they will begin non-mandatory workouts until practice picks back up in The Buckeye football team early spring, according to their athletic contract.

Aussie swimmers ready for Olympics

By Robbie Zaremberg Lantern staff writer

The expectations for many Ohio State student athletes are to end their seasons at their respective NCAA championships. But two OSU women swimmers who are competing in foreign waters far from home will deal with the pressures of ending their seasons this year at the Olympic trials and the Olympic games.

"I think once you get to the Olympic trials, for me, it's like the ultimate swim meet," said junior swimmer Kylie Lancken. "It's the hardest one out there pretty much. It's often harder to qualify for your Olympic team than swim in the Olympics."

Even though the trials and games are not until this summer, Australian swimmers and OSU teammates Lancken and freshman swimmer Rebekah Rychvalsky have been getting in their training through the dual-meet season with OSU this fall.

Rychvalsky finished with first places in the 100- and 200yard breaststroke events in the dual meet against Michigan on Nov. 14, breaking a 9-year Larkins Hall/Peppe Aquatic Center record.

Rychvalsky, along with the other three international freshmen, is competing in the weekly dual meets for the first time and said the meets will benefit her.

"Back home I didn't get much every weekendhelpalot," she said. "Ineed a lot of race practice to work on my actual rhythm and flip turns and all the mechanics of my race."

This is Lancken's third year competing in the dual-meet season. She has won four individual events in the past three meets this season.

Lancken and Rychvalsky got to know each other from swimming carnivals in Australia. Lancken of Pymble and Rychvalsky of Sydney, lived 15 minutes away from each other at home in Australia. Lancken provided much assistance for Rychvalsky to come to OSU.

Fleck said her international swimmers benefit from the dual meets. She also said they come to swim at colleges in the United States because they do not get the weekly racing experience in their native countries. "They get to do all that while they keep their training up," Fleck said. "They're not used to racing this much, so it helps when you get into the Olympic trials because you're not scared to race." Swimmers need certain qualifying times in any long-course meet to beeligible for their country's trials. Lancken and Rychvalsky have

A senior reflects on OSU tradition

n my three-plus years at Ohio State, I have learned La few things, but one of the most rewarding of those is what it means to be a Buckeye.

I was lucky; I always knew what I wanted to do and where I wanted to go to school, and for me there was no other choice than OSU. As I write my last few articles for the paper, I want to reflect on a few of the great traditions at OSU and why I am proud to be a Buckeye.

Growing up like many people at OSU, I bled scarlet and gray and watched every OSU football game. It was my dream to someday play for OSU. As I became older, I realized I would never play for the Buckeyes, but I would still love to be a part of the experience. I have had the privilege to cover and broadcast games while at OSU the last few years, and I realized OSU has the best fans in the nation.

No matter the sport, when, or even where, there is always a contingent of Buckeye faithfuls ready to cheer on its teams or students. Football Saturdays in Columbus are incredible. The amount of people, students and alumni who come out to support OSU are phenomenal. From the tailgates to College GameDay, from skull session to Script Ohio, OSU is full of tradition.

To this day, I get goosebumps when the band comes out of the tunnel and marches down the field. To have more than 100,000 people standing and cheering is truly unbelievable. I still remember the first game I saw at the Shoe, where Eddie George plowed through defenders like rag dolls and the feeling of complete and utter awe of the performance.

In my freshman year, OSU was renovating the stadium, and it was often left open. I can remember late at night walking down on to the field and looking up trying to imagine what it must feel like to play in the 'Shoe. As hours passed my friends and I tossed around the pigskin and tried to kick field goals with minimal success, but it was the thought for those few hours that we had the chance to be Buckeye players.

Although I will never be on the field as a player in a game, I have the memory of what it must be like and that feeling of what it is to be a Buckeye. While many of us never set forth on the field, the court, the rink, the diamond, or whatever other playing surfaces OSU boasts, we can feel like part of the team, as we are Buckeyes at heart.

I have traveled from coast to coast and even to a few foreign countries, and wherever I am, I always have found some OSU faithful. As I prepare to graduate, this is one of the things that comforts me. I know that wherever I end up, Buckeyes will be around.

Whether it be late-night walks through the Oval, or an icy dip in Mirror Lake before the Michigan game, it is all part of the OSU experience.

In a few weeks, I am going to embark on the bowl game trip, and I hope many students and alumni do as well. Last year was amazing — the title game felt like a home game in the 'Shoe as the O-H-I-O chant went around Sun Devil stadium in Arizona. Even though the team is not playing for the title this year, it is playing for the pride of OSU

I am truly thankful for the friends I have made here and the education I have received, and to all of you seniors out there, I hope to see you on your crawls in the next week

Ted Williams is a senior in journalism, and even though seniors do not finish a week early anymore, he would like to remind them to join the festivities this week, and next. He can be reached at williams.1923@osu.edu.

Bishop Allen rocks out with charm

By Lindsey Nock Lantern arts writer

Independent music's finest hour is fast approaching when Studio 35 brings alternative-pop spectacle Bishop Allen to its stage Sunday night.

"The best show I've ever been to was the last show they played here (in August)," said Matt Chess, owner of Studio 35. "After you see them, you have no doubt they are going to be huge."

Chess and business partner Damon Dalrymple describe the sound of Bishop Allen as a mix between The Velvet Underground and The Violent Femmes.

The description is appropriate, as the band cited one of its biggest musical influences to be The Velvet Underground, along with Jonathan Richman—also a Velvet Underground devotee — and the now-defunct Scottish band, The

'We really don't sit around and listen to music all that often," said Christian Rudder, one of the band's multi-instrumentalists.

Bishop Allen is touring in support of its debut album, "Charm School," which the band members recorded, produced and distribute themselves.

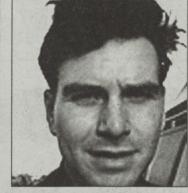

The album was released to rave reviews from the most respected names in mainstream entertainment media.

Rolling Stone gave it four stars, Newsweek gave it an "A" grade and All Music Guide said, "This is the Holiday season ripe with films for all tastes

By Becky Goldsmith Lantern arts writer

The chill in the air can only mean two things. It is getting close to the holidays, and there will be plenty of new movies to see.

Whether it is a big Hollywood hit or an independent film, this holiday season is full of great movies for everyone to enjoy.

Something's Gotta Give

Harry Sanborn (Jack Nicholson) is a man constantly in pursuit of women. His craving for the opposite sex proves to be a lot stronger than his age can allow.

Sanborn and his most recent object of infatuation, Marin (Amanda Peet), plan a romantic getaway at her mother's Hamptons beach house. Trouble ensues when Sanborn suddenly begins having chest pains and finds himself in the care of Marin's lessthan-pleased mother, Erica Barry (Diane Keaton).

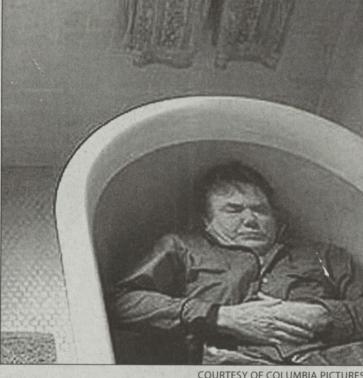

Sanborn begins falling for Barry, a successful New York playwright and a woman of his age. But he cannot seem to let his old habits go, and hesitates to jump at the situation. His younger doctor (Keanu Reeves) goes in full pursuit of Barry's affection.

With a cast led by Academy Award winners and the writer/director of "What Women Want" (Nancy Meyers), this romantic comedy is a great choice for the holiday season. The movie opens on Dec. 12.
