Street gangs rap Columbus

By Tomoko Kotaka
Lantern staff writer

More than 10 organized street gangs with an estimated 300 members have carved out their turf in the city, said Columbus Police Sgt. Kent Schaffer.

Schaffer spoke Wednesday at the 12th Annual Ohio Crime Prevention Association Conference about increased gang activity in Ohio.

Gang problems began to surface in Columbus around 1983, and most gang activity occurs in the short east area and the short north side of Columbus, Schaffer said.

He said a gang is a group of people who interact on a regular basis and engage in criminal behavior. A hierarchy is also established within the group. Unity is promoted by wearing certain colors, tattoos and identical clothing.

To help deal with gang-related problems, the Columbus police established a street crime task force in June 1986.

"Originally we were told six months," Schaffer said. "We're still here."

Dave Hall, an officer for the Cincinnati Police Department, said a lack of guidance and values taught in the home is one of the key reasons why many youths become involved in gangs.

Hall also said members of youth gangs are almost always the product of broken households.

"One thing all these groups have in common is the dysfunctional home," said Hall. "In many cases, they don't have the father-images, or in some cases the mother-images."

Although the majority of gang members are from much lower socioeconomic backgrounds, not all gang members are from poverty-level families, Hall said.

A majority of members in white supremacist gangs come from upper middle class families and incomes, Hall said.

Schaffer said there are a few white groups in Columbus, but they do not have the unity to be qualified as a gang. He said out of the 300 members in Columbus, all are low-income black males.

When gangs initially started in Columbus, Schaffer said many began as breakdancing groups.

"Now some of the groups we see are telling us they're rap

Benefits denied, Vietnam vets say

Local veterans
ask for review

By Tara Anne Powers
Lantern staff writer

Two judges listened to criticism Wednesday by local Vietnam veterans as part of a growing concern over the denial of emergency relief requests by the Veterans Service Commission.

The commission denied 391 claims for emergency financial assistance last year, which the central Ohio chapter members of Vietnam Veterans of America (VVA), said was done arbitrarily and without policy or procedural guidelines.

The commission awards emergency relief grants and helps applicants obtain aid from other agencies. The five members are veterans themselves and are appointed by the Franklin County Common Pleas Court.

Tommy L. Thompson, administrative judge of Franklin County Common Pleas Court, and Judge Dana Deschler, who will take over Thompson's position Jan. 1, heard arguments from the Veterans Service commission as well as Vietnam Veterans.

In response to many complaints, the commission cited a lack of space and staffing to develop the necessary guidelines to judge and investigate each case properly.

Dave Bradley, executive director of Ohio's Vietnam Veterans of America, told the judges his organization referred many people to the commission whose applications were denied without any review.

But, Arthur Sprankle, commission director and executive secretary, said "everything is an emergency" to the veterans who are applying.

The commission currently has eight full-time employees but only one case investigator.

However, the commission requested about $500,000 of a possible $4.4 million fund generated by Franklin County taxpayers. Just under half of the requested amount actually went to veterans, while the commission received nearly $16,000 more to manage their office. The remaining $3.9 million went back into the county general revenue fund.

"It is truly the best kept secret in Franklin County," said Don Ashline, director of central Ohio Vietnam Veterans Administration. "We have benefits and rights we didn't even know existed. Why didn't we know about them?"

Because of the number of complaints the VVA received, they began taping the case hearings in March of 1988.

John Flinn, office manager of the VVA, cited three cases to the judges which he said exemplified how the cases are being handled and financial need is determined.

According to one of the cited cases, an applicant was turned

Hispanic Awareness Week promises cultural awakening

By Nadine Collins
Lantern staff writer

Hispanic Awareness Week is not only a time for Hispanics to become aware of their culture, but for others to become aware of it also, said Gilda Lopez, a graduate student from Corpus Cristi, Texas majoring in english.

Hispanic Awareness Week, now in its eleventh year, will begin April 17.

The idea for Hispanic Awareness Week started with Carmen Alvarez-Breckenridge, director of Hispanic Student Services.

"I saw a need to enlighten the community and university as to the social, economical, political and cultural aspects of Hispanic culture," Breckenridge said.

She said the celebration is not just for the Hispanic-American students. "Hispanic Awareness Week educates everyone. We welcome everyone to attend our programs."

There are over 500 Hispanic-American students at Ohio State.

"Hispanic-Americans are people who are born in the U.S., but trace their origins back to Spain, or have become residents of the U.S., having been born in a country like Cuba, Puerto Rico, or Mexico," said Lopez.

Elsie Sanchez, a sophomore from Columbus majoring in fine arts said, "We are a lot of cultures." "Hispanic-Awareness Week is not only a time for Hispanics to participate, but it's also a time to teach others about what Hispanics have done in this country."

Hispanic-Awareness week speakers include: Toney Anaya, former governor of New Mexico, Alfredo Estrada, editor-in-chief of Hispanic magazine, Beverly Vigil Ellerman, president of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute, a non-profit educational research insti-

Money to help fusion

By Vera McCruter
Lantern staff writer

OSU researchers didn't get the results they hoped for in their cold fusion experiment, but with a grant for $2,500 they will try again.

Science researchers around the world are attempting to duplicate the results of an experiment at the University of Utah, which scientists claim produced nuclear fusion in a jar of water on March 23.

Richard Boyd, professor of physics and astronomy at Ohio State, said there are two different aspects to the Utah experiments scientists are trying to duplicate.

"One is the production of energy, which could be chemical or nuclear fusion," Boyd said. "But that just tells us there is more energy being put out than what is going in."

The other goal is to detect neutrons, a neutral particle that atoms give off when energy is produced.

Boyd said OSU researchers experimented with the nuclear process and tried to detect neutrons.

Bob Bailey, professor of mechanical engineering at Ohio State, said world scientists, who claim to have fused atoms without superheat and using only basic chemistry equipment, have been unable to detect whether neutrons are being given off.

"I can't believe that people would go out and make such public statements about a fusion device, without having measured some neutrons," he said.

Boyd said the OSU experiment was not a duplicate of the Utah experiment performed by Stanley Pons, chairman of the chemistry department at the university in Salt Lake City, and Martin Fleischmann of Southampton University in England.

Under a short deadline, OSU professors worked quickly on their experiment.

"Our researchers did an electrolysis of heavy water that separates water into hydrogen and oxygen," Boyd said.

Fusion was observed when an electrical current split the nuclei of deuterium atoms in a container of water. Deuterium is a type of heavy water used in nuclear

Explanation Weather

"This weather isn't funny," a concerned OSU faculty member said. "It's also reminiscent of a junior high tabloid."

"Well, gee ... everyone has their own definition of what funny is," the young journalist said. "Some may think George Burns is a real hoot while others may get off on Sam Kinison."

"It's inappropriate and it takes away from the credibility of the paper," the faculty member said.

"It is a college newspaper you know," the journalist continued. "We hate to be so stuffy and conservative all the time - why not do something a little bit different each day."

"No one wants to dig through four or five whole paragraphs to find the weather," the faculty member replied.

"Just how many people really read the paper just for the weather?," the journalist replied. "Anyway, to save anyone from the trauma of having to decipher it, the weather is contained in an easy to read paragraph in bold print like this:

IT WILL BE MOSTLY SUNNY ALL DAY WITH A HIGH NEAR 50. IT WILL BE MOSTLY CLEAR TONIGHT WITH LOWS NEAR 35. LIGHT WESTERLY WINDS ARE EXPECTED.

Bush calls for ethics, ban on PACs

Suggests changes in financing, elimination of special interests

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush urged a ban on campaign contributions by political action committees and said he opposed federal financing of congressional races when he unveiled proposals Wednesday to tighten ethical rules for Congress, judges and the executive branch.

"We've got to work together to reform a public code of conduct that, at times, appears to be in disarray," Bush said. "And it's not logical or fair — it's both too harsh and too lenient and it elevates detail over substance, precept over principle."

Bush announced his program in a speech to the annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors. Most of his proposals were embraced in a legislative proposal he sent to Congress or an executive order he signed during the day.

Suggesting a major change in the way congressional campaigns are financed, Bush called for a halt to campaign contributions from political action committees, which directly pumped nearly $156 million into congressional races last year.

"We have allowed our parties to become weakened and overshadowed by special interests, and we can best restore the role of the parties by limiting political action committees," Bush said.

"PACs weaken the parties, restrain competition and deaden the political debate," the president added.

Aside from the $156 million in direct contributions, PACs spent $6.8 million to help specific congressional candidates, but the money went for such expenses as television commercials and mailings with nothing going directly into the candidates' campaign treasuries, according to records at the Federal Election Commission.

Bush's presidential campaign received $862,950 in direct contributions from PACs last year and benefitted from millions of dollars the PACs spent independently on its behalf, FEC records show. One PAC alone, the National Security Political Action Committee, spent $8.1 million to help Bush.

Stopping short of offering a formal proposal, Bush said he would consult with Congress on PAC funds. Brushing aside a plan espoused chiefly by Democrats, Bush added, "I also oppose federal funding of congressional campaigns."

If adopted, the net result of Bush's recommendations would be for congressional races to be financed by private contributions.

Comics' futures discussed by top newspaper editors

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 100 newspaper editors sat down after breakfast Wednesday — about the time millions of their readers were turning to the comic pages — to discuss whether "Cathy" should be political or not, and what to do when the kids grow up in "For Better or Worse."

These are serious issues. Not a single outburst of laughter broke out when members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors attended a convention workshop on what funnies they print.

How serious? Well, the people who draw the comics are referred to as "artists." Among those who review their works for the syndicates that sell them to newspapers are lawyers, who have a field day with "Doonesbury," and editors, who sometimes must negotiate with an artist to tone down a character's off-color language.

And newspaper editors who decide that a strip has gone too far and yank it from the paper for a day or two had better brace — some readers are sure to hurl the ugly term "censor."

"Pulling a strip draws so much attention to it and to you as a censor, that you're reluctant to do it," reported Marty Claus, managing editor for features and business at the Detroit Free Press.

In any event, she said, readers are more worldly than editors might think; they often do not care to be protected.

"People will see that Toledo ran it and Detroit didn't and they'll say, 'Let me be the judge (of what's off base),' " Claus said.

Claus hopes for more blacks and other minorities in the comics, reporting that a month-long census of all the characters on her paper's funny pages revealed that fewer than 1 percent were non-white.

Lynn Johnston, who draws "For Better or Worse," the story of a family much like hers, said she worries about how far to go in injecting her opinion into her comic strip. She has strong opinions on abortion, for example, and might want to express them in her strip, but shies away and thinks, "Can I handle it?" She said she hates hate mail.

On the other hand, she said, "I don't want to be a marshmallow."

Another problem for Johnston was whether to let the kids in her strip grow old. She has decided to, because it's more natural, but frets, "I'm going to grow right out of a job."

She gets heart-warming mail from loyal readers who write, "We've been with you since Lizzie was a baby."

Ray Billingsley, the artist behind "Curtis," a comic strip with a black youth as its main character, said the comics should deal with social issues. He said he is itching to do a story line around crack, a cocaine derivative. He thinks, however, he should let Curtis, who was created last October, get better established first.

"Let these strips be bold," Billingsley advised the editors. "The public is more accepting than many editors think."

Editors' sensitivities are an old story to Lee Salem, editorial director of Universal Press Syndicate, who recalled what happened last fall when a character in "Cathy" endorsed Michael Dukakis.

NEWS BRIEFS

Police near arrest in teen shooting

CANTON (AP) — Police say they may be close to making an arrest in a weekend shooting and melee at a Jackson Township teen club. They also say the incidents may have been racially motivated.

Scott Ryan, owner of the Cracker Jack Lounge, said witnesses at Saturday's dance have told him that an unidentified black male shot a young white man, Charles Tuel, 19, of Columbiana County. In addition, police said they received several reports saying there were violent confrontations between blacks and whites at the lounge.

Jackson Township Police Chief Philip Paar said some witnesses say the fighting broke out between blacks and whites, while others claim altercations began during a lip-sync contest.

Tuel remained in guarded condition Tuesday in the intensive care unit at Timken Mercy Medical Center with a single gunshot wound to the abdomen.

Senate to discuss rise in gas prices

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, says a Senate panel will meet next week to discuss whether oil companies are using the Alaskan oil spill as an excuse for increasing gasoline prices.

Metzenbaum said Monday that the Senate subcommittee on energy regulation and conservation will meet this coming Monday in Washington to discuss the possibility that oil companies have made the March 24 spill in Alaska's Prince William Sound "a pretext for gouging prices."

"People are angry and they have a right to be," Metzenbaum said. "They believe they're being ripped off, and they should let the oil industry know they're angry."

Mexican drug king denies activities

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Drug czar Miguel Angel Felix Gallardo, believed to be the biggest cocaine dealer in Mexico, was charged Tuesday with possession, trafficking and transportation of illegal drugs.

Felix Gallardo stood behind bars during the proceeding at a court inside the Southern Prison on the outskirts of Mexico City.

He denied involvement in drug dealing. When asked if he used drugs, he replied, "Yes, sporadically, but I'm not an addict."

Senate defeats Bush's wage plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's minimum wage plan was defeated Tuesday as the Senate moved closer to confronting him with a proposal he repeatedly has promised to veto.

The Senate, in a 61-39 vote largely along party lines, backed an amendment to legislation sponsored by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that brought the measure essentially in line with a House-passed bill calling for an hourly minimum wage of $4.55 by October 1991.

Rejected, by 58-41, was Bush's proposal to increase the minimum wage by 30 cents a year from the current $3.35 an hour to $4.25 in January 1992. It was the second time Bush's proposal was defeated in Congress. The president's plan was rejected by the House three weeks ago.

More amendments were being considered before the legislation itself faced a final Senate vote, likely to come Wednesday, but no further significant changes were expected before then.

tute, Sarah Melendez, director of the Office of Special Minority Initiatives at the American Council on Education, a non-profit organization that represents higher education on the supreme court level, Guy D. Garcia, staff writer for Time magazine and author, and Joseph Unanue, president of Goya Products, the second largest Hispanic owned company in the U.S. food industry.

Other activities include: the Hispanic Chamber Music Series, a panel discussion on human rights in Cuba and an exhibition of paintings by Hispanic women artists.

Last year the Hispanic Awareness Week program received the Phillip E. Frandson Award, a national award given by the National Association of Continuing Education. It is given to programs at least four years in existence that have excellence in quality programming.

"I want non-Hispanics to know that this week is for them too," said Lopez. "Hispanics will be the new minority in America by the year 2000. Consequently, non-Hispanics will find themselves faced with Hispanics."

Lopez said it would serve some purpose to have someone from the majority culture to come to the activities and see what it's like to be a minority. "He or she would be surprised to see how American we are."

groups," he said.

The popularity of breakdancing in the mid-'80s and now rap music have helped increase the size of gangs, which began to develop leadership, Schaffer said.

"It became the 'in' thing to do," Schaffer said. "In many cases we're talking about a 14 to 16-year-old kid who hangs around the recreational center. They're not quite old enough to get a job or their (driver's) license. The gang provides him with something to do."

Traditionally, gangs in larger cities would claim a certain block of their neighborhood as their territory.

"We didn't really see a whole lot of that in (Columbus)," Schaffer said.

"One of the major things we saw as territory were the skating rinks," he said.

The growing problem of gang activity is escalated by the involvement of gang members from larger cities.

Schaffer said members of a gang from Detroit came to Columbus to get a better street price for cocaine and crack.

Gang members from Detroit also showed some members of a Columbus gang different ways to steal automobiles, he said.

Previously, car thefts in Columbus were not a serious problem, he said. However, last year, car thefts rose 118 percent, Schaffer said.

down because the commission determined that he was, "financially over-extended" with two cars and several credit cards.

Flinn said personal details were discussed during case hearings by Nelson Waldrop, investigator for the commission, which might have improperly influenced the commission votes.

In another case, the commission awarded a woman, who was robbed and assaulted, more money after investigating a claim for emergency funding. Although her expenditures were discussed, comments during the hearing included "she was pretty beat up" and "I don't know, maybe she has a boyfriend."

"What I see here is an arbitrary decision process... a lack of policy, procedure and guidelines," Flinn said.

Bradley, Flinn and Ashline have made oral and written requests during the last three years to the commission asking them to establish standardized guidelines for determining financial need.

Deschler said three priorities need to be set and completed as soon as possible. Increasing space and staff and developing guidelines is necessary to properly serve the people, he said.

Boyd said the idea is to pack a large quantity of the hydrogen nuclei tightly in palladium, a rare metal. If compressed tightly enough, hydrogen nuclei will undergo fusion.

Fusion occurs when the nuclei of atoms are combined and release energy. Fusion is found in nature as the sun's power source. Unlike nuclear reactors, which produce energy by dividing atoms, fusion is clean and does not create radioactive waste.

"But the question is, can this be done at room temperature?" he said. "If you're talking about nuclear fusion, you ought to see nuclear things coming out, like gamma rays or neutrons."

Boyd said OSU researchers made changes and took some shortcuts in their experiment to speed the results.

Bailey said it made good sense for OSU researchers not to duplicate Pons and Fleischmann's experiment.

"It was a good idea to change the experiment around because it may strengthen the verification or bring out some aspects people normally would not see," Bailey said.

Boyd said a university grant will allow researchers to purchase the supplies they need to start the next round of experiments, which will begin in a few days.

Bailey said he is skeptical but hopeful that researchers will make a breakthrough that can be put to good use to improve the world.

Rally held to protest amount of taxes consumed by military

By Tuz-Au Lee
Lantern staff writer

Students for Peace and Justice will hold a rally today on the Oval to protest military spending.

Robert Lavigna, member of Students for Peace and Justice, said the rally will feature several speakers from different student organizations.

"We encourage everybody to speak out about their opinions," he said.

"The main purpose of this rally basically is to give the people an idea of how money from tax payers is misspent by the military and how we could better use the money," said Melissa Clifford, a sophomore majoring in political science. "We would like to see that our money could be better spend on people or our environment."

Ann Heller, a freshman from Columbus, said the rally is to protest the fact that 63 percent of American taxes is used for the military.

"We just want to make people care about the decisions made by government," said Brian Grondin, a senior majoring in history.

The protest will take place from 10:30 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Lavigna said the Students for Peace and Justice began in 1981 as a small group of students, staff and faculty members at Ohio State that joined together in an attempt to "repoliticize campus." Currently, the organization has 200 members.

During the winter of 1988, the members of the organization decided to change its name from Student from Peace and Disarmament to Students for Peace and Justice, reflecting the growing emphasis on social justice issues as an integral part of true peace.

"Ideally, we would like to separate ourselves from political ideology, neither affiliated with Democrat nor with Republican," Lavigna said. "We are a non-partisan group."

Trial may set precedent

TOLEDO (AP) — The prosecution of a woman on a criminal charge because she used cocaine while she was pregnant could set a dangerous precedent in Ohio, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer said Wednesday.

But the Lucas County prosecutor said successful prosecution would deter other women from using drugs during pregnancy and could be a landmark case nationally.

Tammy Gray, 24, was indicted by a Lucas County grand jury in February on one count of child endangering for allegedly using cocaine before her daughter, Sierra, was born in 1987.

"We are very worried about this case," said Julia Davis, an ACLU lawyer in Columbus. "This is the first time in Ohio that a county prosecutor has tried to use a child abuse statute to criminally prosecute a woman for leading a lifestyle that could harm her fetus."

The case is unique because it is the first time a prosecutor's office has filed criminal charges against a mother for using drugs during pregnancy.

There was a similar case in Columbus, but the case involved the custody of a fetus. A juvenile-court judge ruled that the court could take custody of the fetus because of the mother's drug addiction.

The ruling was overturned by a state appeals court a few months after the child was born.

Lucas County Prosecutor Anthony Pizza's office is prosecuting Gray under Ohio's child abuse statute, which prohibits a parent of a child under the age of 18 from creating a substantial risk to the health or safety of the child.

Last week, the ACLU joined Gray's attorney in filing a motion in Lucas County Common Pleas Court to dismiss the case, contending the state's child abuse statute cannot be used in relation to a fetus.

A hearing on the motion has not been set.

"The state argues that there exists a right to begin life with a sound mind and body," Davis said. "This could mean that a pregnant woman has a legal duty under the law of Ohio to eat and exercise properly, not to take prescription drugs, stop working during pregnancy, refrain from sexual intercourse, and even have a duty to have an abortion if prenatal testing reveals that the fetus has a painful or disfiguring disease."

She said prosecuting the woman will encourage other women to get abortions because Ohio's child abuse statute requires doctors and other professionals to report any indication of child abuse or neglect.

Pizza said that when Gray allegedly smoked cocaine during her pregnancy she created a condition that continues into her daughter's childhood.

"This will be a landmark case not only here but throughout the United States," Pizza said.

Wittenberg utilizes course to combat racism problem

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Wittenberg University might begin requiring students to take a new course on racism and multicultural awareness in about a year, the school's president said Wednesday.

William Kinnison said many college students today are not as aware of other cultures as were their predecessors.

"There are so many students entering college now that did not have the experience of the '60s and '70s when the civil-rights movement was at the forefront," Kinnison said.

The recommendation for the new course was one of many contained in a report issued last week by the Committee on Interracial and Multicultural Awareness. The report followed a request of Kinnison by Wittenberg's Concerned Black Students to improve racial relations on campus.

Kinnison said the purpose of the committee was to "get out ahead of the kinds of incidents" that have been occurring on other campuses.

He said the school offers a core course for all freshman that covers multicultural topics. He said that while it probably will take about a year to define what form the new course will take and to put it in place, other committee recommendations will already be under way.

The committee's report calls for the university to hire more black faculty members, recruit more black students, make them feel more a part of the university, and make white students more aware of cultural diversity.

"Many Wittenberg students, like students across the nation, begin college with stereotypical images of racially and culturally different people," the report said.

Club helps jazz up city

REVIEW

ELIZABETH WOODS

Columbus' new addition to jazz is the Major Chord. This jazz club and restaurant is like a taste of New Orleans.

General Manager Susan Wyant said the club, 700 N. High St., has been here for a little over a year.

The club is the dream of Jerry Hammond who is the general partner along with Les Wright.

Hammond, who is also president of Columbus City Council, said the club seemed like a good idea at the time.

"It's something the city always needed," he said.

Major Chord has hosted such nationally known acts as Wynton Marsalis, Diane Schuur and Ahmad Jamal. Jamal will be returning for his third visit this month.

"A lot of things are happening to Columbus right now to make it more cosmopolitan...the whole development of the downtown area...and the Short North is really conducive to a jazz club like this," Wyant said.

Wyant added the Gallery Hop, scheduled the first Saturday of each month in the Short North, is a particularly exciting time for the club.

"It's like being in New York for an evening because the streets and clubs are full of people," she said.

Wyant said Major Chord is very different from many jazz clubs in the country. Most jazz clubs are small and smoke filled while Major Chord seats 165 and is open and airy.

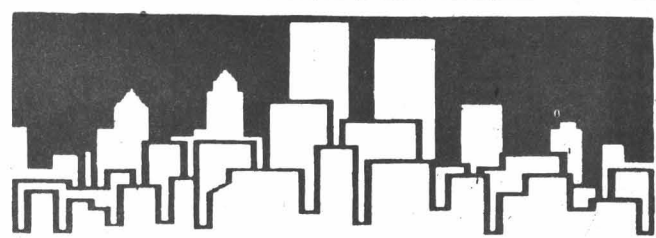

The club is designed in three different levels with a balcony. All tables face the stage, where live entertainment is regularly featured.

Wyant said she does not see many students in the club. She attributes this to a misconception that the club is very expensive. The basic cover charge ranges from $3 to $5. However, when national acts perform there is an additional ticket price.

"It's not any different from things that are scheduled at the Newport," Wyant said.

Hank Marr Rhythm Section with Gary Carney and Michelle Horsefield performed Saturday night at the Major Chord.

Coming this month is Angela Boffill and Ahmad Jamal, among others.

The Sullivan family, as featured in the motion picture comedy "The Beer Drinker's Guide to Fitness and Film Making." The film opens Friday.

Film reveals life's hilarities

"The Beer Drinker's Guide to Fitness and Film Making" is a fast-paced and witty movie about a man, his art and his beer.

The man is Fred G. Sullivan, a failed independent filmmaker from the Adirondack Mountains in New York state.

His beer of choice is Budweiser in long neck bottles.

This movie is Sullivan's autobiographical, low budget labor of love that he wrote, produced, edited and directed. It is Sullivan's silly and often cerebral way of poking fun at his wife and kids, his creditors, his high school friends and, above all, himself.

The movie is not as decadent as its title. It was originally titled "Sullivan's Pavilion," but the current title was adopted to catch people's attention.

Lacking narrative, the film makes quick jumps between Sullivan's trials as a filmmaker, his family life and commentary from a variety of folks who know him. All put together, the film is about Sullivan balancing a zany family life with his lifelong dream of being a filmmaker.

It has the look of a hilarious home movie, but goes beyond family members simply hamming it up and delves into the heart and soul of its characters.

Sullivan uses his own family as the supporting cast, giving the movie a very warm and honest feel.

MOVIES

He coaxes wonderful performances from his wife and children, especially his 7-year-old son Tate, who begins the movie by saying, "My father says if people don't come and see this movie, we'll starve."

Several professional actors in the film play parts that take the movie into the realm of the surreal, characters with names like The Shrink, The Temptress and Cretin Beer Lover.

All of Sullivan's troubles are symbolized by a philosophizing,

Russian-speaking bear, who finally answers the question, "Does a bear poop in the woods?"

As we follow Sullivan's life in this film, beginning with the artist as a young boy making his first films, "St. George and the Dragon" and "Sgt. Murphy of the Mounted Police," then passing through his army days up to the present, it is often difficult to decipher what is real from what is not.

There is no question, though, that the laughs and the warmth in this film are genuine and real.

Sullivan seems like a personal friend by film's end, and a man you can admire for never outgrowing his dreams.

"The Beer Drinker's Guide to Fitness and Film Making" opens Friday.

Stevens evolves into role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Connie Stevens didn't want a full-time role when she signed on for "Starting From Scratch." Then she began to worry that her recurring character could be seen as an uncaring, occasional mother.

"It's a more difficult role than I had anticipated," she said. "I don't want to be a fool, or a mother who doesn't care and gives the wrong message."

In the syndicated comedy series, which also stars Bill Daily, she plays a runaway wife and mother who suddenly returns home after five years. She wants to pick up where she left off and win back her husband's affection.

Stevens said she's trying to play the role as a mother who can't cope, who ran away once but can't cut the umbilical cord.

"I don't see them getting back together," she said. "If they do, then it's another domestic comedy. The fun is that they're not married. They haven't found anyone else, but they still cling to each other. I didn't want to play a mother who just pops in the door. Being a single mother, I know there are a lot of problems. I've had trouble balancing the gags with the reality."

Stevens originally was supposed to be only a part-time character in the show, which focuses on Daily and their two teen-agers.

"It looked perfect for me," she said. "I could come in, play a show and disappear. Then I found that as the show become popular I was in every show and having to stay in Montreal, where it's made."

Stevens said she was concerned, however, about how her character was developing.

"I didn't know where they were taking my character, and they didn't know where the character was going," she said. "We haven't resolved it yet. It appealed to me because I'm a single parent myself with two children."

"I felt I could make it interesting. I didn't want to be an ex-wife who had no life of her own, no viewpoint of her own and who was mercenary. In the pilot I was throwing credit cards around like crazy."

"You can only get away with that if there's a great friendship and a great love as a foundation. She's always borrowing money from him. She's never balanced a checkbook. She can't hold a job."

This is the first series in a number of years for Stevens, who is probably still best known for her role as Cricket on "Hawaiian Eye" in the 1950s.

She was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., but came to Los Angeles with her father's band as a singer. She soon found her way into films.

She played the goofy young singer-photographer in "Hawaiian Eye," which centered on two private detectives, played by Anthony Eisley and Bob Conrad.

PEOPLE

Star's dog seized

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Customs officials seized entertainer Liza Minnelli's dog, charging she brought it into Sweden illegally.

Minnelli was forced to send her Cairn terrier, Lilly, to Paris early Tuesday, while she stayed on to perform, said Customs Inspector Stig Thelberg.

Minnelli, on a world tour with Frank Sinatra and Sammy Davis Jr., was reported to be distressed.

"Liza is guilty of smuggling, and the case will be taken to court as in all other cases where someone tries to smuggle animals to Sweden," Thelberg told The Associated Press.

Minnelli brought her dog with her on a bus in which she traveled from the Netherlands.

A spokesman from the hotel said she was not available for comment. But Minnelli's press agent in New York, Allen Eichhorn, said "that dog has been all over Europe and all over the world. If officials hadn't informed her or they didn't know in advance, who's to suspect it's illegal?"

Newley divorces

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The third wife of actor-composer Anthony Newley filed for divorce, seeking undisclosed support payments for herself and the couple's two children.

Dareth Newley cited irreconcilable differences as the reason for the breakup of the nine-year marriage, according to a Superior Court petition filed Monday.

Newley, 57, who wrote "Candy Man" and "What Kind of Fool Am I" and appeared in 40 films, was previously married to actress Joan Collins, with whom he had two children. His first wife was Ann Lynn.

'Gypsy' to debut

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A Broadway-bound revival of "Gypsy" starring Emmy-award winning actress Tyne Daly, will debut in May in a newly refurbished theater, the theater manager said.

The 30-member cast will rehearse for two weeks, then perform for five days before starting a 14-city national tour on its way to a Broadway opening in November, David Johnson, manager of the Tivoli Theater, said Monday.

The ornate theater, which seats 1,762, featured gold-plated electrical fixtures, the largest pipe organ east of St. Louis, a silk curtain and a ceiling hand-painted in China when it opened in 1921.

OSU men split pair with U.C.

By David Myers
Lantern sports writer

The Ohio State baseball team split a doubleheader against the University of Cincinnati Wednesday, and continued to have problems holding onto leads late in games.

The Buckeyes, whose record now stands at 16-16, held on to win the first game 13-9 despite a seven-run uprising by the Bearcats (11-14) in the top of the seventh inning. The Buckeyes lost the second game 5-3.

Ohio State lost leads late in the game in three of the four games against Purdue last weekend and settled for a split in the four-game series instead of a possible sweep.

Another problem for the Buckeyes in the opener was defense. All nine of Cincinnati's runs in the opener were unearned as a result of five Ohio State errors.

Coach Bob Todd said he was pleased with his team's hitting in the first game, but said he was still concerned with the team's inability to escape opponent's late-inning rallies.

"I thought our hitters did a good job of adjusting (to Cincinnati's first-game starting pitcher Tom Infante) after the first time through the lineup," Todd said. "But then we turn what should have been a laugh into a tight game at the end. We just don't have that killer instinct."

Todd said that he stayed with starting pitcher Mark Mesewicz despite the seven runs in the seventh inning because, especially in non-league games, he likes to see how some of his younger players will respond to challenges.

Mesewicz came within one out of a complete game and picked up his first collegiate win against no losses.

Senior Bill Wertz relieved Mesewicz in the seventh and struck out pinch-hitter Jeff Rheude to end the game.

Todd said he thought the Bearcats' late rally would give them momentum at the start of the second game.

Todd's prediction turned out to be prophetic as Cincinnati jumped on Buckeyes' starter Mike Hayes (1-3) for four runs in the third inning, three com-

Ohio State freshman Ken Tirpack slides safely into home plate in the first game of a doubleheader Wednesday at Trautman Field as University of Cincinnati catcher Mike Mottice waits on the throw.

In the opener, Cincinnati took a 2-0 lead in the top of the second, but Ohio State countered with a run in the bottom of that inning on shortstop Brad Young's run-scoring single, his first run batted in as a Buckeye.

The Buckeyes then took the lead for good in the next inning on a solo home run by junior Keith Klodnick, his sixth of the year, and an RBI single by freshman center fielder Mike Mulligan, who was three for three in the game with three runs scored and two RBI's.

"It felt good to finally get a few balls to fall in," Mulligan said. "It also felt good to start and know that I would get at least two or three at bats."

Mulligan, a reserve outfielder, went into the doubleheader hitting only .150. Ohio State broke open a close game with six runs in the fifth inning and added four more in the sixth.

Senior catcher Angelo Palladino had a two-run single and senior right-fielder Jay Semke hit his sixth home run of the season, a three-run shot, in the six-run fifth.

"I like the way I swung the bat today," Palladino said. "I had some bad swings against Purdue (last weekend), but today I felt better."

Recruit missing

(AP) — As men's college basketball signings began Wednesday, no one seemed to know what had happened to former All-Ohio player Lawrence Funderburke.

The 6-foot-8 Funderburke, who was The Associated Press' Division IV player of the year when he played at Columbus Wehrle High School two years ago, had verbally committed to Indiana University. But he did not attend Wehrle on Wednesday and Indiana officials said they knew neither his whereabouts nor his plans.

"Indiana called a while back to get his full name and social security number, apparently to type up the letter of intent," said Wehrle coach Chuck Kemper. "But when he was going to (sign), I don't know."

Funderburke, who averaged 25.3 points a game as a junior in leading Wehrle to the state small-school championship in 1987-88, was dismissed from the team early this past season for what Kemper termed negative behavior. It was his second suspension of the season.

Funderburke was mentioned in two of the 18 NCAA allegations of misconduct against the University of Kentucky program. The Wildcats' coach, Eddie Sutton, and his staff have resigned in the wake of those charges.

Funderburke surprised many people by verbally committing to Indiana on Jan. 4. At that time, he said, "The first time I got suspended, (Indiana coach Bob Knight) told me to go ahead and stick it out. And he's been telling me all along that he wants to coach me real bad."

Women gymnasts in national meet

By Richard McAninch
Lantern sports writer

Championship flags hang from the ceiling of the OSU gymnastics workout room. They are a constant reminder of what the gymnasts work toward all year long.

The OSU women's gymnastics team will participate in the NCAA national championships held today through Saturday at the University of Georgia in Athens, Ga.

"The girls are real excited to be back at the national championships after missing out last year as a team," said OSU Coach Larry Cox. "We're going into the tournament seeded 12th and I think I have a team that can move up four or five places at the end of the meet. It's going to be based on their performance in their session."

The women's gymnastics team is in the first rotation and no team has ever won the NCAA championships starting in the first rotation, Cox said.

"I would just like to to win our rotation and advance into one of the top six spots, which would move us into the late rotation scoring," he said.

Ohio State won the NCAA Northeast regional championships, beating defending champion Penn State with a record score of 189.65. The team accumulated only three misses while qualifying for the national championships.

"The most important thing for this team is that they treat this meet the same as they did the regionals," Cox said. "We had a near perfect meet and the only way we can improve is to have no misses at the nationals and I think they're ready to do that. We're as good as any team we're competing against."

Since the regionals, the team has had two weeks of practice to prepare for the nationals.

The strength of the team is in the leadership of seniors Julie Somers and Monica Stavros, Cox said.

"The seniors are having the best workouts, they have been through it before, they know what it's all about, they know where they're going and what has to be done," he said.

Senior Monica Stavros could become All-American, Cox said.

"It's hard to get from the first rotation to the second rotation to be an All-American, but I think I can do it," said Stavros. "We've (the team) worked hard all year and we're real excited for it."

Freshman Debbie Black, who got Ohio State rolling in the regionals winning the balance beam event with a score of 9.65, is another All-American hopeful ready for the nationals, Cox said.

"I have to pretend I'm in a workout," Black said. "It will help the team and I will get psyched up. We've been working all year just for nationals and we're all ready to go."

"We seem to have a lock on eighth," Cox said, "but I would like to break that and finish above eighth."

Tennis team beats Toledo

By Leslie Mendelsohn
Lantern sports writer

The OSU men's tennis team defeated Toledo 7-1 Tuesday in its first outdoor match of the spring season at Wirthwein Tennis Facility.

The Buckeyes, now 12-6, won the overall match after the six singles matches were played.

Junior Kevin Dibelius won his first set 6-4, lost the second 3-6 and in the third set he sprained his left ankle.

Dibelius was scheduled to play doubles with freshman Ty Tucker. The doubles match was not played because the team had already won the overall match and Dibelius was injured.

Dibelius' injury was not serious and he is expected to play this weekend in away matches against Minnesota and Wisconsin.

A change in the usual lineup placed sophomore Saamil Jhaveri in the No. 6 spot in Tuesday's match.

"I was happy about playing," he said. "Hopefully, I will play a few more matches in singles."

Jhaveri said that all match experience is helpful.

"Next time I will be a little less nervous," he said.

Another sophomore who got the chance to play against Toledo was Eric Berg. He played doubles with senior Chris Gatt.

"I haven't played a lot and the cold weather doesn't help me," Berg said. "But it is good to get a win."

This past weekend, the Buckeyes played their first Big Ten matches of the spring season against Michigan and Michigan State. Both matches were away from home.

The team defeated Michigan State 7-2 on Saturday, but the Buckeyes lost to 17th-ranked Michigan 9-0 on Sunday.

"We played terrible on Sunday," OSU coach John Daly said. "We really thought we'd win, and to lose that bad, there was no explanation."

Tucker played a three-set match against Michigan sophomore Malivai Washington, the No. 1 singles player in college tennis.

"He (Tucker) has only played in four collegiate matches," Daly said. "Considering that, it was a good performance."

Senior Ted Glavas said the team needed more luck against Michigan. Glavas lost his singles matches 4-6, 6-2, 2-6.

"I played good at both places and I was happy," he said.

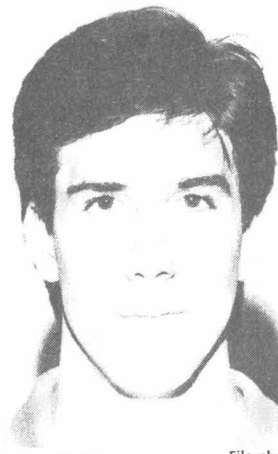

"We should put that behind us," Glavas said. "We're playing good teams this weekend and they are both beatable teams."

Glavas is looking forward to the rest of the season.

"We have to keep our efforts up," Glavas said. "It is a long season ahead. I still have faith and think we can beat Michigan."

The Buckeyes could meet Michigan again at the Big Ten Championships in May.

Daly thinks Ohio State could beat Michigan in the future. He is also looking forward to this weekend.

"The team's morale is just lower for the moment," Daly said. "We know we can play. We'll do fine this weekend at Minnesota and Wisconsin."

OSU men's track team looks to improve

Third place finish in California meet spurs optimism

By C.R. Barclay
Lantern sports writer

The OSU men's track team will be looking to make this weekend's meet in Tennessee a track class-room to measure its improvement.

Ohio State is coming off a third place performance last weekend in California. The meet included Washington State, Cal. Davis and Cal. Berkeley and was the first outdoor meet this spring for the team.

The Buckeyes managed 83 points and finished behind Washington State and Cal. Berkeley. Ohio State won three events and placed in several others.

Ohio State will look to improve its efforts in the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville, Tenn. this weekend. Though team members say the effort by the team was not bad, there is room for improvement.

"I was happy to compete and run twice that day," junior John Gill said. "I was not happy with the time I had."

Some members of the team already appear to be ready for the upcoming conference meet later this season.

Joe Greene, a junior, displayed the efforts which gained him All-America status during the indoor season. Greene, 22, participated in all three of the team's first place finishes, winning the 200-meter dash, the triple jump and the long jump. He also ran a leg on the 4 X 100-meter relay team which finished second.

Greene qualified for the NCAA championship meet next month in Provo, Utah, in the long jump and triple jump. Greene's triple jump (53'9") is a new Ohio State outdoor record. His long jump (25'10 1/4") tied his career best.

Senior Keon Gregory, 21, posted second place finishes in the 4 X 100-meter relay and the 400-meter dash. Gregory also had a fourth place finish in the 200-meter dash.

Other members of the team will look to use the Dogwood Relays and the meets that follow to prepare themselves for the Big Ten Championships and to join Greene and junior distance runner Mark Croghan in Utah for the national championships.

"We'll be entered in several events now to help build our base," Gill said. "As we get closer to the Big Ten meet we'll run less."

Gill, a distance runner, placed second in the 3000-meter steeplechase on Saturday with a time of 9:00. The standard qualifying time for the nationals is 8:48.

Gregory said the relays early in the season can be used to improve a certain aspect of an athlete's training.

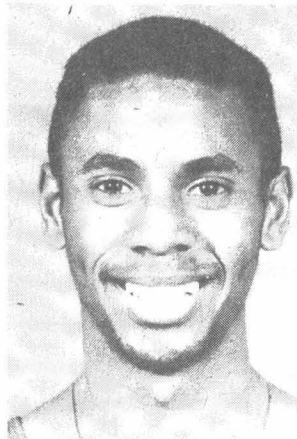

"I would like to use this meet to work on my speed a little," Gregory said.

In addition to the work that can be accomplished at the meets, the competition itself prepares the team for the Jesse Owens Classic next month.

"I enjoy running in the relays," Gregory said. "But it's experience for the younger members."

Freshman George Joachim said the team must use the meets to push itself to improve.

"We may not be the best athletes, but we can still try to achieve as much as we can," Joachim said. "You have to do the very best you can everytime out and not be satisfied. You have to want to do better and push in order to improve."

Keon Gregory

Snyder, Clark lead Tribe past Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — Cleveland's Cory Snyder felt he was "struggling a little bit," so he took some extra batting practice Wednesday.

Snyder apparently discovered an instant cure as he drove in six runs with a pair of two-run homers and two RBI singles, leading the Indians to a 10-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

"It was just one of those days and I kept swinging the bat," said Snyder, who also scored four runs as Cleveland won for the fifth time in seven games this season. "Days like this are hard to come by and I'll take them anytime. They're very nice."

Snyder hit his second and third home runs of the season off Boston starter Oil Can Boyd, who also was tagged for a solo homer by Dave Clark before being relieved with none out in the fourth.

Snyder, who had driven in just two runs in six previous games, had two-run homers in the second and fourth, grounded into a fielder's choice and later scored in the sixth and added RBI singles in the eighth and ninth.

Snyder's slugging marked the fifth time he has hit two homers in a game since he came up to Cleveland in 1986. He also hit three homers against Minnesota on May 21, 1987.

"It's talent," Cleveland Manager Doc Edwards said. "When you have talent like Cory does, you're going to have days like this."

"It wasn't our day," Boston Manager Joe Morgan said after his club fell to 2-5 for the season. "We got plenty of hits, but not much pitching. Oil Can was hot and cold. He pitched good in spots, but he made mistakes on the home runs. That's what did him in."

After Boston scored a run in the first inning on Mike Greenwell's bases-loaded double-play grounder, Pete O'Brien led off the second with a walk and Snyder followed with a drive into the left-field screen for his first homer.

The Red Sox took a 4-2 lead in the third. Jody Reed walked and scored on Wade Boggs' double into the left-field corner. Two outs later, Greenwell singled home Boggs and Jim Rice followed with an RBI double.

But O'Brien drew another walk to lead off the fourth and Snyder followed with a shot high into the screen in left-center. Clark then put the Indians ahead with a drive into the right-field seats.

That finished Boyd, 0-1, who has not beaten the Indians since a 24-5 victory in Cleveland on Aug. 21, 1986.

OSU student delegates in Arabian conference

By Patrick J. Geyer
Lantern staff writer

When five Ohio State students attended a conference at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Mich., they were not representing the state of Ohio, or even the United States. They were representing Syria.

The students participated in the Midwest Model of the League of Arab States, a mock United Nations-type conference, March 27-29. The purpose of the conference was to learn parliamentary rules and lobbying techniques used by countries in the Arab League.

Fifteen schools participated in the model conference, each representing a country that is a member of the league. At the conference, each country presented resolutions to social problems and attempted to have them passed through the committees.

The delegations consisted of a minimum of five people who acted as members of different committees: political, economic, social and cultural, legal and Palestinian affairs. The committee members discussed various resolutions, and after voting on the resolutions they made recommendations to the General Assembly.

"We get all of the resolutions from other countries and you see that you have things in common with the other countries," said Ahlem Ben Othman, a senior from Tunisia majoring in civil engineering. "So you caucus and see if you can co-sponsor a resolution."

Much of the debate and the discussion of proposals is actually done outside of the committee meetings.

"You can never get away from it," said Adrea Hurtado-Meja, a senior from Colombia majoring in international studies. "It happened over lunch breaks, at the hotel and at dinner. That's what's really neat because that's what politics really is like."

Other delegation members from Ohio State included Randy Fletcher, Mohammad Mourad and Michael Shea.

Ohio State has sent representatives both years there has been a Midwest model. Last year, OSU students represented the Jordan delegation.

Hurtado-Meja, the head delegate, was a member of last year's group and organized this year's delegation as well. The group assembled during winter quarter and prepared for the event by thoroughly researching Syria.

The Syria delegation received more awards than any other school, with each delegate receiving an award from his respective committee. Although no other delegation came close to receiving the number of awards Syria won, the delegates finished in second place overall.

"I think that one of the big parts was that both of Syria's main allies in the Arab League weren't present," said Shea, a senior from Columbus majoring in economics.

"The problem was our country," Hurtado-Meja said. "It is so radical that we don't get resolutions passed because we're against everyone. So anytime we got a resolution passed, that was a big victory."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican legislators on Tuesday introduced a child-care bill that would offer a tax credit to low- and moderate-income families who care for small children at home as well as those who send their children to day-care facilities.

"We're going to use the tax code of this country to put dollars in pockets of parents," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chief sponsor of the bill in the Senate. "We're not going to discriminate if they want to put their children in day care centers, they're going to have money to pay for it ... and essentially we're not going to discriminate if in these families the mother or father chooses not to work."

The proposal recognizes "every family has different circumstances," said Rep. Tom Tauke of Iowa, the bill's chief House sponsor.

Republicans said their bill is an alternative to the Act for Better Child Care (ABC) bill that has been revived by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.

They said their bill would serve more families, give the money directly to parents and not day-care providers, allow state and local governments and not the federal government to set day-care standards and not restrict eligibility to child care in center-based facilities.

"The tax credit approach is not a child care bill," responded Dodd spokesman Jason Isaacson. He said the $1,000 credit proposed by the GOP would cover just one-third of the average annual $3,000 child care costs families face.

Republicans, including then-presidential candidate George Bush, were critical of the Democrats' version of the bill in the past Congress.

Current tax law provides tax savings up to $720 annually per child for a maximum of two children to help offset some expenses required for parents to get or keep a job.

Domenici said the GOP initiative would help the majority of the nation's families whose children he said were not served in day-care center settings but were in home-based facilities.

The bill, called the Child Care Assistance Act of 1989 would:

- Provide a $1,000 refundable tax credit for the first child under age five and $500 each for up to two additional children.

- Expand the current dependent care block grants authorization to states to $300 million annually.

- Offer a 10 percent tax credit to employers for spending on dependent care assistance programs made available to employees.

- Establish a $75 million fund to assist states in establishing insurance liability pools to which any accredited child-care provider may belong.

- Authorize $25 million in revolving loan funds which family-based day-care providers could tap to help them make capital improvements to meet accreditation requirements.

Two Columbus men have been charged with the March 28 robbery of a local music store, a representative from the Franklin County prosecutor's office said Wednesday.

Thomas Tornabene said Robert W. Wilson, 21, of 107 E. Norwich Ave., was charged with vandalism, theft and breaking and entering.

Tornabene said Wilson was charged with the theft of six guitars worth about $3,000 from the String Shoppe, 1704 N. High St.

Wilson's roommate, Gregory Workman, was charged with aiding Wilson in the robbery, Tornabene said.

Workman's case is pending grand jury indictment. Tornabene said Workman, 21, is still in jail because he could not post the $250 bond.

Wilson posted bond for the most recent charges but faces a trial April 25 for other charges on receiving stolen property, Tornabene said.

A fast food restaurant on North High Street was robbed Tuesday morning, Columbus Police reports said.

Reports said two suspects entered Burger King, 2166 N. High St., and ordered an employee to open the safe.

One of the suspects took money out of the safe while the second tied up another employee with a nylon rope, reports said. The employee was struck in the face and her gold ring, worth about $50, was stolen.

Dana Rogers, Burger King manager, said over $1,000 was taken from the safe. Rogers said the men told employees they had a gun but no one saw it.

It is not known how the men entered the building. According to police reports, employees said the door was locked and the store was closed.

The employee suffered a bruised right eye, reports said.

About $1,500 worth of computer equipment was taken from a fraternity house Friday night, Columbus Police reports said.

Reports said the equipment was taken from a room in the Sigma Nu Fraternity, 22 E. 16th Ave.

Police are still investigating.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Terrorism increased worldwide to a record level in 1988, including a jump in the number of anti-U.S. incidents, the State Department reported to Congress on Tuesday.

The bombing of a Pan Am jetliner in December over Scotland, which the department's office to counter terrorism said probably was a terrorist incident, and the Palestinian uprising on the West Bank and in Gaza, helped push the total of incidents to a new high of 856, up 3 percent from 1987.

In all, 658 people were killed and 1,131 wounded, an increase in fatalities from 633 in 1987 but a decrease in injuries from 2,272.

The casualty figures include terrorists themselves who were killed or wounded during attacks.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that the Army's top uniformed lawyer has contended the U.S. military can legally attack terrorists without violating a 1976 presidential order that bans assassinations of individuals abroad.

Maj. Gen. Hugh Overholt, the service's judge advocate general, argued in an eight-page draft memorandum that because of changes in "the nature of the threat," action against terrorists can be justified on grounds of national self-defense.

Overholt's memorandum was disclosed Monday by the newsletter, Defense Week and confirmed by Army officials.

The State Department report said the United States remained a primary target for international terrorism last year, as the number of anti-U.S. incidents rose from 149 in 1987 to 185. They resulted in 192 persons killed and 40 wounded, compared with seven Americans killed and 47 wounded in 1987.

The increase in deaths was due mostly to the attack on U.S.-bound Pan Am 103 in which 259 people aboard the jumbo jet and 11 on the ground perished.

Latin America was the area showing the largest percent of incidents against U.S. citizens and property — 60 percent.

On the whole, the Middle East again had the highest incidence of international terrorism, with 313 attacks. Israel, again, was the main target.

The State Department credited Syria and Iraq with a substantial reduction in direct involvement in terrorism last year, but said both countries continued to provide safe haven and training to terrorist organizations.

At year's end, 20 foreigners were listed as political hostages being held in Lebanon, two others possibly were dead, while 13 were released during the year.

Ranked behind Israel, in order, as sites for the most terrorist incidents were Pakistan, Colombia, Spain, Lebanon, West Germany, Zimbabwe, South Korea, Peru and France.

Activist discusses animal rights

By Patrick J. Geyer
Lantern staff writer

One of the world's leading animal rights activists compared the campaign for animal rights to those of civil and women's rights in a discussion Tuesday in Meiling Hall.

Henry Spira talked about his role in the animal rights movement in a lecture titled "Animal Rights: The Evolution of a Revolution," and answered questions from a mixed audience of supporters and adversaries.

"The animal rights movement is not a fad," Spira said. "I think it's here to stay. There is an increasing awareness that we need to have a less exploitive relationship with the rest of nature and with other animals."

Spira was instrumental in reducing the use of the Draize test, in which chemicals are placed into the eyes of rabbits to test for a reaction. The groups he targeted were the cosmetic companies Revlon and Avon.

"They are not putting gasoline in the rabbit's eyes," said Patricia White, a pre-med graduate student from Cleveland. "They are testing shampoos and eye-liners."

White is in the process of forming a group to counter animal rights activists by promoting the use of animals in research facilities. There are similar groups at Michigan and Berkeley.

"He's comparing civil rights and animal rights," White said. "I don't see any comparison there. He's comparing having an animal in a barn and slavery."

Besides getting companies to reduce the use of the Draize test, Spira said he has also tried to persuade them to contribute money to start centers for alternatives to animal testing at both Johns Hopkins University and Rockefeller University.

"If you do research, you have to be accountable for it," Spira said. "I think they're emerging public concerns, and I think the company has an obligation to be responsive to that."

Spira's visit was sponsored by University Laboratory Animal Resources, the group that oversees the use of animals in the university's research centers.

"I invited Henry Spira here because I feel he is the rational voice in a sea of irrationality," said Jerald Silverman, Associate Director of University Laboratory Animal Resources. "He is probably the most significant figure of the animal rights movement here in the United States."

Henry Spira

Spira advocated the reduction of the use of farm animals, although he admitted his main focus wasn't on farm animals.

"It's a lot easier to raise money with a cat or a dog or a primate, than it is with a chicken or a cow," Spira said.

Spira is trying to get researchers to replace the use of live animals with other means of testing. This advocacy runs from rats to "pound dogs" that were to be put to sleep from overcrowded shelters.

Senate panel to meet on gas price increases

CINCINNATI (AP) — U.S. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum said Monday a Senate panel will meet next week to discuss whether oil companies are using the Alaskan oil spill as an excuse for increasing gasoline prices.

Metzenbaum, a Democrat, said the Senate subcommittee on energy regulation and conservation will meet Monday in Washington to discuss the possibility that oil companies have made the spill on March 24 in Alaska's Prince William Sound "a pretext for gouging prices."

"People are angry and they have a right to be," Metzenbaum said. "They believe they're being ripped off, and they should let the oil industry know they're angry."

Ohio service station operators last week said they are receiving complaints from drivers because gasoline prices at the pump have increased by 10 cents or more per gallon during the past week or two. The station operators accused oil companies of using the spill as a basis for the price boosts.

But oil companies say gasoline prices are likely to remain up after the spill is cleared and the flow of crude oil returns to normal. They say a combination of rising seasonal demand and steady price increases for foreign oil probably will keep prices close to their current levels for several months.

"PEOPLE WERE getting gas at rock-bottom, bargain-basement prices for a long time," said Larry Shushan, a spokesman for Chevron Oil Corp. in San Francisco. "Now we're seeing a combination of factors bringing the price more in line."

He said many refineries raised prices immediately following the spill because they didn't know how much impact it would have on the flow of oil and wanted to make sure they had adequate supplies.

The price of gasoline has jumped by an average of 12 cents per gallon since last month, according to a survey released Monday by the American Automobile Association. The report shows the Cincinnati metropolitan area had the largest price boost in the nation with an increase of 17 cents per gallon.

Prices in Cincinnati now stand at about $1.10 per gallon for self-service regular unleaded gasoline, according to the AAA survey.

Albert Greenstein, a spokesman for Atlantic Richfield in Los Angeles, said the sharp increases are a result of a defensive action by refineries.

"WE SAW a lot of companies anticipating shortages and higher prices," Greenstein said. "And that kind of psychology feeds on itself, whether the fears are real or imagined."

He said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has raised the price of oil from about $12 per barrel in January to nearly $20.

Mike Kunnen, president of the Greater Cincinnati Gasoline Dealers Association, said the spill is a convenient scapegoat for companies that want to raise prices now because they expect new taxes on gas and oil to take effect later this year.

He said a 20-cents per gallon boost in gas prices will translate into an additional profit of $90 million per month for the major oil companies. He said service stations have no choice but to pass on the costs.

Two companies join to dispose of wastes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Conrail and OHM Corp. announced a $110 million joint venture Tuesday to develop a multistate network to treat and dispose of solid and hazardous wastes.

The companies said the venture would use Conrail's 13-state Northeast and Midwest rail network to transport wastes to the sites, which have yet to be chosen.

In a statement James L. Kirk, chairman of the Findlay, Ohio-based OHM said, "These facilities will incorporate the most advanced technologies which can be applied to eliminating the potential long-term environmental consequences of solid and hazardous wastes."

Both companies will contribute $55 million, with Conrail also supplying a $100 million loan, the companies said.

Conrail last year began transporting solid waste from East Coast sites to landfills elsewhere. OHM has been in the waste business for 20 years, beginning in 1969 as a family-owned firm that dealt primarily in industrial accident response.

Stanley E.G. Hillman, acting chairman of the Philadelphia-based freight railroad, said the partnership will produce a company ideally suited to the waste industry.

The companies said the waste resource-recovery, treatment and disposal markets "are expected to provide substantial future revenue and earnings opportunities as regulatory compliance demands technically sophisticated, environmentally secure solutions to the nation's waste disposal problems."

Bruce Wilson, Conrail senior vice president, said the companies want to have one site open at the end of two years and two open by the end of three years. He said he could not comment on how soon sites would be chosen, but he said "that will be the first order of business" for the venture.

The companies said the venture would consider acquiring existing solid-waste disposal sites.

"We see that there is a large, and becoming larger, problem in the disposal of both municipal solid waste and hazardous waste," Wilson said. "Given the growing size of the problem we think it's a very good potential market."

Historical city gambles again

DEADWOOD, S.D. (AP) — Wild Bill Hickok was shot in the head during a poker game in Deadwood more than a century ago, but the city's voters have bet that restoring gambling will give a shot in the arm to the gold-rush town's economy.

Residents voted 690-230 Tuesday to allow poker, blackjack and slot machines, with the city's cut of the proceeds to be used to restore and preserve buildings in the historic Black Hills community of 2,000.

An amendment to the South Dakota Constitution last year provided that gambling limited to $5 bets would be permitted in Deadwood if 60 percent of the city's voters approved it.

South Dakota is the third state to allow casino gambling, joining New Jersey and Nevada.

Melodee Nelson, head of the Deadwood You Bet Committee, said legalized gambling should boost the economy, increase tourism, create jobs and help hold down property taxes.

"But let's all remember it's first and foremost a funding mechanism for historic preservation," she said. "That's what it started out as. That's what it's always been."

Supporters hope the games can begin this summer, said Bill Walsh, owner of the 85-year-old Franklin Hotel. He said the restoration of gambling is about as important as the arrival of the first train in 1890.

"It's here, and we want to all jump on the train and ride this thing for the betterment of the city of Deadwood and the state of South Dakota," he said.

About 50 supporters of the measure gathered Tuesday night in the hotel lobby, which is guarded by a bust of Hickok.

But their celebration was subdued by the outcome of the mayoral election. Mayor Tom Blair, a gambling supporter, ran into trouble in his re-election bid. Blair finished second in a three-way race, and now will face first-place finisher Bruce Oberlander in a runoff in two weeks.

Some residents quietly opposed a return to gambling on moral grounds, and argued that the games wouldn't provide that much of an economic boost.

"I don't know that I'm as disappointed as much as I'm hurt by this, when people aren't looking at moral issues here," said the Rev. Don Hadrick of the United Methodist Church in Deadwood.

Supporters think gambling will help make the area a final destination for tourists, instead of just a stop on the way to Yellowstone National Park, the Rocky Mountains or Mount Rushmore National Monument, which is about 50 miles away.

Deadwood owes much of its tourism reputation to Hickok, the U.S. marshal and frontiersman who was shot in the back of the head in 1876 during a poker game in a saloon called No. 10. Legend has it he was holding a pair each of aces and eights, known since as the "dead man's hand."

12 slaughtered in Mexico; police accuse satanic cult

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — A satanic cult of drug smugglers who sacrificed and apparently cannibalized humans slaughtered 12 people, including a U.S. college student on spring break, authorities say.

Five people were arrested in connection with the killings and on drug charges by Mexican Federal Judicial Police, which found the dozen bodies in graves at a ranch just south of the U.S. border.

Police said they planned to resume digging today at the Santa Elena Ranch, searching for two more bodies.

"It was horrible," Cameron County Sheriff Alex Perez told a news conference Tuesday in the Texas border city of Brownsville. "It was like a human slaughterhouse."

The suspects were U.S. and Mexican citizens, said Sheriff's Lt. George Gavito, who did not identify them further.

The dead included 21-year-old University of Texas student Mark Kilroy, who vanished last month in Matamoros, Gavito said.

Kilroy apparently was chosen at random by drug smugglers who had hoped human sacrifices would protect them from harm, Gavito said.

Kilroy was grabbed after the cult members "were told to pick one Anglo male that particular night," Gavito said.

The cult had been involved in human sacrifices for about nine months, he said, and prayed to the devil "so the police would not arrest them, so bullets would not kill them and so they could make more money."

Authorities found candles and kettles full of body parts and animal bones, said Oran Neck, chief U.S. Customs agent in Brownsville.

Also found were bowls and a caldron from which brains, hearts and other organs of victims were eaten, Perez said.

"They were cooking body parts in a big pot there on that ranch," said Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox.

"It was horrible . . . it was like a human slaughterhouse."

Felipe Flores, spokesman for the Mexican attorney general's office, said he knew nothing about reports of cannibalism. But he added that during the ritual killings victims' brains were cut out and put on a fire, mixed with blood, herbs, rooster's feet, goat's heads and turtles.

Mattox said investigators believe the cult had 10 members.

The Mexican attorney general's office said the voodoo-practicing cult's leader, a Cuban-American, is believed to have fled into the United States. He is known as "Godfather" to the sect's members, officials said.

Police reported finding the 12 bodies in nine graves, Mattox said.

Perez said the cult members removed some of the victims' vertebrae "to use them for necklaces."

Authorities would not identify the other victims, but said all were males.

Some victims were shot in the head, and others appeared to have been slain with machetes or sledgehammers, Neck said.

The bodies were found Tuesday morning in a field about 20 miles west of Matamoros, Gavito said.

Anthony Padilla, a photographer with The Brownsville Herald, said he saw Kilroy's body at a Matamoros funeral home. "There was nothing inside the skull," Padilla said.

In some forms of witchcraft, removal of the brain signifies a sacrifice of the victim's soul.

Padilla said Kilroy's legs were cut off at mid-calf and his spine was severed and twisted.

Kilroy, a premedical student, vanished from a crowded Matamoros street shortly after 2 a.m. on March 14 while drinking with a group of friends in the city of 180,000 just across the Rio Grande from Brownsville.

The 3-foot-deep grave containing his body was found after federal police alerted U.S. officials early Tuesday they had obtained confessions from the suspects, officials said.

At least one of the suspects admitted involvement in Kilroy's death, said Neck.

The topic of your essay is how a large university like The Ohio State University responds to the challenges President Jennings has provided.

As a starting point, your essay might address questions like: How does the university prepare students for a "globally competitive society"?
