National charity president resigns

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — William Aramony resigned Thursday as president of United Way of America and apologized for a "lack of sensitivity" that led to complaints of extravagant spending and demands by local units for his removal.

Aramony, who headed the nation's largest charity for 22 years, announced his decision in a teleconference with local leaders of United Way campaigns across the country. Officials said he had submitted his resignation Wednesday but was asked to stay while a successor is sought.

Aramony, 64, was due to retire in July 1993.

Ted Moore, president of the southeastern Pennsylvania United Way and one of the local leaders pressing for Aramony's resignation, expressed disappointment that Aramony wasn't leaving immediately.

"They can depend on other people there until they can get a successor," Moore said.

"I do apologize for any problems that my lack of sensitivity to perceptions has caused this movement," Aramony said.

Recent news stories have reported that he was paid $463,000 in salary, received generous benefits and traveled in high style. Questions also were raised about the relationship between United Way and some spinoff corporations.

"I don't like it," Aramony said of the criticism directed at the United Way. "It hurts me to see and hear unfair criticism of a system that has done so much for this country."

"I've never been through something like this in my life."

"I probably never should have done it in the beginning, in retrospect," he said of his first-class travel.

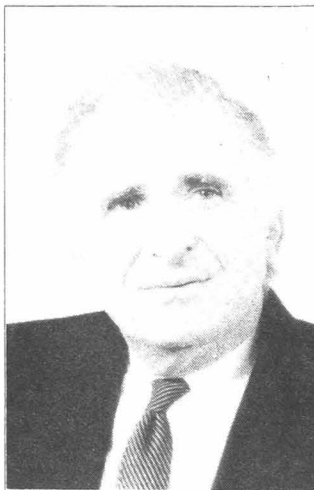

LaSalle D. Leffall Jr., chairman of the executive committee of the charity's board of governors, said an outside investigative firm hired in December found "no wrongdoing on the part of Bill Aramony in its preliminary investigation."

A followup investigation will be completed in early April, he said.

Aramony said he was retiring "to put things back in proper focus ... because media attention is overshadowing the importance of the work of United Way and the countless accomplishments we have made together."

Leffall said that any allegations against the organization's leadership, "whether true or not, can damage public confidence in the United Way movement and its ability to fulfill United Way's century-old mission of helping Americans in need."

"I'm somewhat relieved that he's retiring because I think if he continued it would have continued to play out in the newspapers," said Brian Hassett, president of the United Way of central Massachusetts, based in Worcester. "I think it was the right thing to do."

Berl Bernhard, a member of the Washington law firm which is reviewing results of the internal investigation said the firm will "make recommendations for structural and operations changes."

Bernhard said in their review of United Way operations the law firm "found some of the practices fell short in the nature of omissions."

House approves tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Thursday approved a temporary election-year tax cut for 90 million wage earners that would be financed by permanently raising taxes on the richest 1 percent of Americans.

The final vote on the bill was 221-209. Bush's own plan was rejected on a near party-line vote of 264-166.

"The middle class has been waiting for Republican promises to trickle down for the last 10 years, while the rich got richer, the poor got poorer and the middle class just got squeezed," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Rep. Mickey Edwards of Oklahoma, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, countered that the Democratic bill was designed not to benefit the economy but to "tax the rich, bust the budget, raise the deficit and beat the president."

Bush called the House action "terrible ... political." He added, "I think the Senate will turn it around."

The Democratic substitute for the Bush bill was accepted on a 221-210 vote before the final roll call was taken. Forty-six Democrats voted with the Republicans in both cases.

The legislation now goes to the Senate Finance Committee, which next week begins writing what likely will be a similar version. As a result, Republicans insist, there is no chance it will become law because Bush will veto it.

"The Democratic leaders know there is not a prayer of their bill being signed into law," said Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, the Republican whip.

He and other opponents ridiculed the maximum $400-a-year tax cut that wage earners would collect from the bill this year and next. Rep. Steny Hoyer of Maryland, the Democratic caucus chairman, said that represented a 10 percent tax reduction for a $30,000-a-year family.

The centerpiece of the Democratic bill is a 20 percent credit for Social Security and Medicare taxes paid this year and next. About 80 percent of all workers would get the maximum credit of $200, or $400 for a couple.

The bill would boost the 31 percent maximum tax rate to 35 percent, which would affect the estimated 1 million people with incomes above $105,000 for singles and $185,000 for couples. In addition, about 60,000 people with incomes over $1 million a year would face a new surtax of up to 10 percent.

The Democratic bill includes a capital-gains reduction targeted on investors in small business and a provision designed to prevent taxation of gains attributed solely to inflation. The changes fall considerably short of Bush's proposal, which would exempt from taxation 45 percent of profit from the sale of investments held for more than three years.

The House-passed bill also offers incentives for businesses to step up investment and provides specific tax relief for real estate. It would permit penalty-free withdrawals from Individual Retirement Accounts to help pay medical or education expenses, or to buy a home. It contains nothing like the $5,000 credit that Bush proposed for some home buyers.

The bill would cut taxes by $85.4 billion through 1997 and raise other taxes by $93.5 billion. The extra money would be used to cut the budget deficit.

Republicans pointed out that the bill sets a trap for late 1993. If Congress decides to keep it alive, lawmakers will have to look for other tax increases or spending cuts to continue it. The solution would be expanding this year's tax increases to cover some middle-income people.

All but 13 Republicans voted for Bush's short-term tax plan as it was rejected; all but 13 Democrats opposed it. The Democratic version won support from 219 Democrats, one Republican and one independent; it was opposed by 163 Republicans and 46 Democrats.

Secret revealed

Tim Gruenke, who survived the sinking of the fishing boat Aleutian Enterprise two years ago in the Bering Sea, revealed a secret Wednesday in Seattle. He said he survived by holding onto a basketball-sized buoy, and that another man drowned after a struggle ensued between Gruenke and the other man for possession of the buoy.

Ricart still dealin' fun

(AP) — State attorneys and the nation's best-selling Ford dealer, whose musical sales pitches proclaim "We're dealing," settled Thursday in a lawsuit that claimed his advertisements were misleading.

Ohio Attorney General Lee Fisher said Fred Ricart will pay a $125,000 fine, $29,500 in attorney fees and make restitution to nine customers. Fisher also said Ricart has agreed to follow state advertising laws.

Ricart said Thursday he was satisfied with the settlement and that he wanted to "thank Lee Fisher for dealing."

"I guess I'm just glad to put it behind me. I'd rather give $125,000 to the state government than give that money to a bunch of shiny-shoed lawyers," he said.

The agreement settles a suit Fisher filed Feb. 11 in Franklin County Common Pleas Court. It accused Ricart of several violations of the state Consumer Sales Practices Act.

Ricart, 40, whose ads feature him strumming a guitar and singing sales pitches sung to popular tunes, said the only thing he should be charged with "is a bad voice."

'Phantom' to haunt city

By Amy Hoffer
Lantern arts writer

Broadway's critically acclaimed "The Phantom of the Opera" will premiere in Columbus for a limited showing, beginning July 15, 1995. The announcement came after months of negotiations.

"The Phantom of the Opera" will play at the Ohio Theatre for at least four weeks, Brad Broecker, executive director of the Broadway Series, said in a press conference Thursday.

Columbus is one of 20 cities in the nation set to host the national tour of Andrew Lloyd Webber's original Broadway musical, Broecker said.

Mayor Greg Lushutka said he thinks the city will benefit culturally and economically from the production coming to town.

"This is a major achievement for Columbus," Lushutka said. "Art allows us to reach out and expand our minds. 'Phantom of the Opera' will allow us to do just that."

The tour begins in Seattle in December 1992. It will open in Cleveland in April 1993 and in Cincinnati in November 1993.

Cameron Mackintosh, who will be producing the show, said the show must be just as good as it is on the New York Broadway stage because anything less would be an exploitation of the show's success.

These shows will be just as important, because the people who come to see the performance are the ones that will love Broadway and come back to other Broadway shows, Mackintosh said.

"The Phantom of the Opera" tour preparation will cost a record-breaking $10 million. Each move from city to city will cost an additional $1 million, said Bob Alwine, assistant to the touring press representative for the Broadway Series.

The total cost of the production is unknown because it is undetermined whether the tour will continue beyond the announced dates, Alwine said.

"This is a huge show," Broecker said. "It takes 20 to 25 trucks to move all of the scenery. It only takes 8 trucks to move 'Les Miserables.'"

Each show includes one elephant, three operas, 14 pyrotechnic effects, 60 performers, 230 costumes and 550 pounds of dry ice.

The cast, which has not yet been selected, will probably have no well-known names, because the director likes to employ people for their talent and not for their stardom, Broecker said.

"The Phantom of the Opera" is based on Gaston Leroux's novel. It tells the story of a facially-deformed phantom who lives beneath the stage of the Paris Opera and falls in love with a beautiful soprano.

The original production premiered in London at Her Majesty's Theatre on Oct. 9, 1986.

The United States premiere was on Jan. 26, 1988, at the Majestic Theatre on Broadway where it went on to win seven Tony Awards, seven Drama Desk Awards and three Outer Circle Awards.

Ticket costs will be from $15 to $60. Exact prices are unknown because of the uncertainty of the economy three years from now, Broecker said.

Tickets will first be made available to subscribers in early 1994. Tickets will go on sale to the general public in March 1994.

USG majority calls for extended library hours

By Julie Campbell
Lantern staff writer

About 82 percent of students surveyed by the Undergraduate Student Government said they would like to see OSU library hours extended, according to results of a random study to determine the effect of shorter library hours.

Library hours were reduced for the 1991-92 school year because the library budget received a $396,000 cut; an additional $280,000 cut is expected in July, said William J. Studer, director of the libraries.

The budget reduction eliminated 14 full-time positions, he said. He added that student employees staff 25 libraries after 5 p.m., and the current budget can not cover the costs extended hours.

The current hours at the Main Library are from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to midnight on Sunday. The hours of departmental libraries are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Weekend hours vary.

These hours will not change back to the old hours, which kept many libraries open from 8 a.m. to midnight weekdays, Studer said.

The survey comments indicated that of the 52 percent who said they used the library often, most were working students. One such student said "the library hours need to be re-evaluated, especially for people who work ... late hours are their only hours to study." Finding other places to study late at night is not the only problem for some students who work.

"I am a student employee at the Main Library. Although I don't study there, my working hours have been cut. The cuts have hurt some students' ability to pay their tuition," commented one student in the survey.

Nevertheless, 78 percent of students polled found alternative study areas to offset the loss of library hours.

Miriam Alonso, director of student research for USG, said the 78 percent who have adjusted was not unexpected.

Alonso said of the 500 surveys randomly distributed at classrooms, libraries, and student organizations, 396 were returned, but comments appeared on less than half of them.

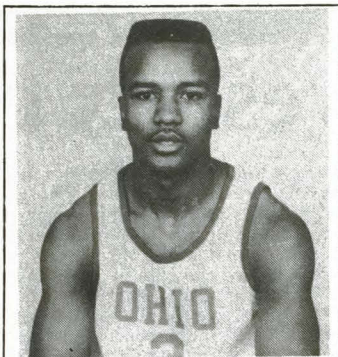

USG officials were hoping the results of the study would give them an indication of how many students would need alternative study space, Alonso said.

Alonso said she attended budget meetings for the libraries, and said she realized that hours can not change and many people will be hurt by that.

USG has formed a committee to look into an alternative study area in the Ohio Union, which would remain open after the Ohio Union closes at 10 p.m., she said.

HIV test results spark report

By Julie Campbell
Lantern staff writer

Since the Columbus Health Department's free anonymous HIV testing at Ohio State Feb. 6, about 88 percent of 504 people tested have picked up their results, said Tom Curatti, HIV health educator for the Columbus Health Department.

Because of an overwhelming response to the free testing and the number of inquiries concerning the general results of the testing, health department officials will compile a report of the tests' findings at Ohio State, Curatti said.

When the health department offered free testing at Ohio State Feb. 6, workers prepared for 300 tests, but over 1000 people requested tests within a 10-hour period, Curatti said.

"I was shocked," Curatti said. "By 1 p.m. we were running low on supplies."

Health department workers gave out 511 coupons allowing people to come back a week later for the free testing because they could not accommodate everyone on Feb. 6. The results for the 298 who were tested the next week are not yet available.

The total number of people tested for the two days was 802.

It is an unusual procedure for the health department to compile a report of results from a specific area, said Carina Sudarski, coordinator for the OSU Office of AIDS Education and Prevention.

But the level of curiosity and the number of people involved in the testing called for a published study, Curatti said.

"The predominant question asked when individuals picked up their results was, 'how many people tested positive?'" Curatti said.

In conjunction with the National Centers for Disease Control, the American College Health Association conducted a broad-based study of HIV infection among students in American colleges in 1990, said Kenny Steinman, health education coordinator for the American College Health Association. The study was published in the New England Journal of Medicine in November 1990.

The study showed that one in every 500 college students has contracted the HIV virus. These results were not concentrated on any one college campus but were a mix of several colleges — of which Ohio State was not included, Steinman said.

The American College Health Association's report showed that white men and students who were 25 and older were found to be the highest carriers of HIV. Categories in the study were assigned according to race, sex and age.

The Columbus Health Department will most likely do its study according to categories based on risk factors, Curatti said. Those categories might be intravenous drug users, gays and lesbians, heterosexuals, number of a person's sex partners, type of sexual activity, and condom use.

These risk assignments were based on questionnaires filled out at the testing site, he said.

Because this was the first time any organization has done any testing at one campus to this degree, the time frame for completion of the report has not been determined, he said.

"We have no idea at this point when it will be done or exactly how," he said.

Curatti said he doesn't like to think in terms of statistics because people tend to use them to increase or decrease denial.

"People have to look at individual risk and can't buy into stats," he said.

Environmental problems create jobs

By Chris J. Davey
Lantern staff writer

The demand for people trained to deal with the nation's growing environmental problems is increasing faster than the supply and the demand offers job opportunities for graduates in a number of majors, said an engineer speaking Tuesday in Bolz Hall.

Neil L. Drobny, president and founder of ERM-Midwest Inc., a Columbus environmental consulting firm, gave a seminar on major trends and developments in the environmental professions. The seminar was sponsored by Kappa Theta Epsilon Cooperative Education Honorary and the Ohio Society of Professional Engineers.

The audience was mostly engineering students, but Drobny stressed that growing environmental awareness in America, and the world, is expanding career opportunities for people in a variety of fields including communications, law, business, journalism and the sciences.

Drobny said that businesses can no longer simply ignore the effects their actions have on the environment.

"It used to be said that the two things certain in life are death and taxes," he said. "There are now three: death, taxes and environmental protection."

Companies that have derived their profit margin at the expense of the environment will be forced out of the marketplace as other businesses begin to promote their environmental responsibility as a means of differentiating themselves in the market, Drobny said.

Drobny, a 1964 civil engineer Ph.D. graduate of Ohio State, spoke of 10 "mega-trends" that are occurring around the world affecting the way citizens, businesses and governments will deal with environmental issues in the coming years.

Among the trends Drobny listed were: a new wave of public concern for environmental action, expansion of the scope and intensity of governmental regulatory action on all levels, a greater emphasis on recycling and conservation, and a growing trend toward a "team approach" for handling complex environmental problems.

Drobny predicted that, as environmental issues continue to increase in political significance, the Green movement will continue to grow, media monitoring of the environment will expand and public relations will become an important element in effective environmental management programs.

According to Drobny, the emphasis on corporations as targets of civil litigation in cases of environmental abuse is shifting to the individual level.

In the coming years more and more people will face criminal charges for involvement in crimes against the environment, he said.

Minorities and women will have more opportunities in environmental professions as a result of the shortage of qualified people in the field, Drobny said.

Contract talks for teachers progressing

CLEVELAND (AP) — Contract talks in the two-week strike by Bay Village teachers recessed Thursday morning with the mediator reporting signs of progress.

Both sides agreed to resume negotiations after reporting to Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Terrence O'Donnell on the status of the talks.

Mediator David S. Thorley said he detected signs of progress in the round of talks that began Wednesday under his auspices at the U.S. Mediation and Conciliation Service office in Broadview Heights.

Bill Cannacci, a spokesman for the Bay Teachers Association's parent union, the Ohio Education Association, said he was unaware of any progress in the talks.

Timothy J. Sheeran, an attorney and the chief negotiator for the schools, could not be contacted for comment on the talks. A message seeking comment was left at his office.

The 142-member Bay Teachers Association struck the 2,411-student district on Feb. 12 over the issues of pay, health insurance and job security.

Medical equipment donated

By Amy Tofte
Lantern staff writer

Medical students at Ohio State are participating in a national campaign collecting stethoscopes and medical equipment to be donated to health care workers in developing nations all over the world.

The Heart-to-Heart campaign, which runs from Feb. 10 to Mar. 16, is a project of the American Medical Student Association and is being run by the International Health Task Force, said Anna Nolan, a second year medical student and the local co-ordinator of the campaign.

She said the campaign was started in 1986 when a medical student at the University of Michigan collected unused stethoscopes from medical students and personally delivered them to Nicaragua and El Salvador.

Nolan explained that first-year medical students are usually given complimentary stethoscopes that are not always used because students usually purchase better equipment as their training advances.

The students want to give developing nations equipment that is taken for granted here but not as available there, Nolan said.

She said a stethoscope that costs a physician in the United States $30 would cost a physician in Nicaragua two months of his salary.

They have already collected 25 stethoscopes and hope to collect at least 150 stethoscopes by the end of the campaign, she said.

Dr. Hagop Mekhjian, medical director of University Hospitals who is helping out with the campaign, said it is important that old, new and unused stethoscopes are given to physicians in developing countries because stethoscopes are the basic tool used by any physician or physician trainee.

"Stethoscopes never get old; they may have some wear and tear over the years, but they never get old," Mekhjian said.

This year's donations are being sent to Columbia, the Commonwealth of Independent States, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Kenya, Mexico, Nicaragua, Sudan, Uganda and Yugoslavia, Nolan said.

Other medical equipment that is being donated are reflex hammers, otoscopes, ophthalmoscopes, blood pressure cuffs, calculators, pen lights and laboratory supplies, she said.

Nolan said financial contributions will also be accepted to be used towards the purchase of more stethoscopes and to offset shipping expenses.

The campaign is being funded by the American Medical Students Association's OSU chapter, which has helped make and distribute pamphlets to medical students, put signs up around the hospitals and has written letters to individual doctors and departments, said Jim Knepler, the chapter president.

Letters have been sent out to many hospitals around the state, but the only hospitals that are currently participating in the campaign are The Ohio State University Hospitals and Mount Carmel Hospitals, Nolan said.

Medical students will take the donated equipment to the National American Medical Students Association conference on Mar. 18. There, the International Health Task Force will distribute the donations to individual medical students who will hand-deliver the donations to the individuals who need them, she said.

"We don't want to ship it blindly to a country, we want to ship it directly to a person," Nolan said.

"That's the whole idea behind the Heart-to-Heart — from our heart to their heart," she said.

Any equipment to be donated can be taken to room 130 of Doan Hall. For more information about Heart-to-Heart, contact Anna Nolan (Med II), P.O. Box 143, College of Medicine, (614) 291-6546.

Consumer Corner

If that new look is what you are after, but you really don't have a lot of money to spend, then we might be able to help.

After pricing different salon services in the area, we have found some salons that are more economic than others.

We found The Posh Mode, 2180 N. High St., offers the best services for the best prices. Their basic cut, which includes a wash and style, costs $10 for men and $15 for women.

Their perms start at $35 and vary with the length and thickness of your hair.

The Posh Mode offers french, oil or regular manicures for only $10. This is the best price we found for manicures.

Heidi's Salons, in the City Center Mall next to Marshall Field's, is a little more expensive, but some stylists offer discounts to students.

Their cuts also include a wash and style. Prices range from $17 to $20 for men and $25 to $28 for women because each stylist is individually contracted.

Hubbard's House of Hair, 1888 N. High St., also offers reasonable haircuts. Men's cuts cost $14 and women's cuts cost $17, which includes shampoo and style.

They also have reasonable prices for manicures, offering regular manicures for $12, which includes pushing back cuticles and a hot oil treatment. French manicures, or painting nail tips white to make them look longer, cost $14.

If you are only looking for that basic cut, Supercuts, 1616 N. High St., is the place to go. All wet cuts are $9 for men and women and $12 if you want a shampoo. If you want the works, cut, shampoo and blow dry, the price ranges from $15 to $18.

If you want to return to your hair's natural color or maintain that new-found color, Hair Shack International II A, 2060 N. High St., has the best prices for coloring and weaving. You can get your hair colored or weaved for only $28.95 and still have some money left over for that big date this weekend.

They also have decent perm prices that run about $49.95, but they come in second compared to The Posh Mode's perms, which start at $35.

If you are getting your perms at Waldo's On High, 765 N. High St., you'll pay a higher price. Their perms start at $60 and could run higher depending on the length and thickness of your hair.

Their coloring prices are also more expensive, and start at $25 and range to almost $90. They charge $35 per hour for labor, and if your hair is long and thick, plan on spending considerably more.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Couple will perform folk music tonight

By Neal Havener
Lantern arts writer

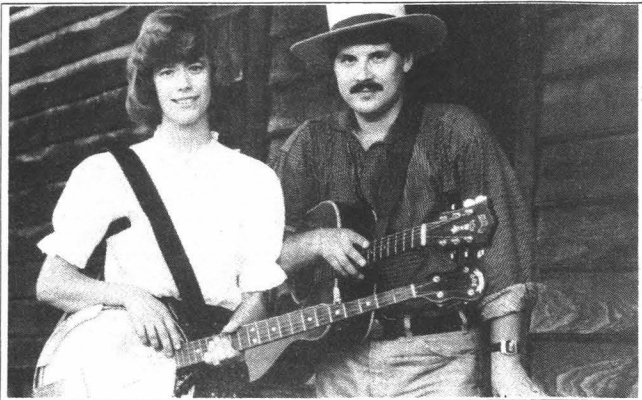

As a resident manager of the Chez Coffeehouse in Columbia, Mo., guitarist Dave Para regularly found himself searching his index cards for folk musicians who would perform there — for free — and often on short notice.

"Cathy Barton was real close to the front," he said, laughing. "If it was getting down to the wire, it was easy to get her to say yes."

Para also coaxed Barton into marrying him, and their musical friendship of the mid-1970s blossomed into a full-time romance and career. The duo specializes in folk music from the Missouri and Ozark region.

"We love traditional music; songs so many people have sung over the years," Barton said. "It's nice to know you're sort of a link in a chain."

Barton believes the audience for folk music is growing, and she hopes the duo helps that growth with their performances and workshops.

"I think people are starting to realize that being a couch potato will only go so far," Para said. Folk music offers a nice alternative because of its participatory nature, he said.

"The wonderful choruses of groups of people, very much like you'd have in a real good coffeehouse setting," are what attracted Barton and Para to traditional music, Para said.

Because younger audiences are used to slick commercial productions, they can find folk music a bit "jarring" at first, Barton said. But they usually end up liking it, she said.

"Popular music has to come from somewhere," Para said. "It's a process — there's a lot of traditional music that resonates right through rock 'n' roll."

"A knowledge of traditional music makes rock 'n' roll more exciting," he added. "It's too bad music becomes compartmentalized — who cares about the labels?"

Cathy Barton and Dave Para perform at 8:00 tonight at the Columbus Music Hall, 734 Oak St., at the corner of Parsons Avenue and Oak Street. General admission is $8, student admission is $4, and admission for members of the Columbus Folk Music Society is $6.

Art museum cancels film series

By Rich Maple
Lantern arts writer

The Columbus Museum of Art has decided to discontinue its foreign film series starting Mar. 1 because of budget cuts.

"Children of Paradise," a French film directed by Marcel Carne, will be the only film of the series shown. The movie screens tonight at the museum, located at 480 E. Broad St.

Linda Taylor, university post-doctoral fellow in the Department of Photography and Cinema, put the series together and is disappointed that it has been canceled.

"The people at the museum feel that there's not an interest in foreign films, so I would like to see an audience there Friday night to show that there is an interest," Taylor said.

She said even if a large crowd attends the screening, the series will still be canceled.

"I don't think a large crowd at the screening would change anything immediately, but I think it would make a certain impact and show the museum that there is an interest," Taylor said.

The concept of the series was to look at films related to writing a screenplay about historical subjects, Taylor said.

Charles Williams, acting chairman of the French and Italian departments, said that "Children of Paradise" is one of the best films ever made.

The Mime in "Children of Paradise"

"Children of Paradise" is a French cult film about the culture of France at the height of filmmaking in the 1930s," Williams said.

Taylor said that "Children of Paradise" is a very emotional film that has a strong impact on its audience.

"The film was made during the occupation of France and was released at the end of the war, making it the first film the French people saw when they were free again," Taylor said.

Williams suggested that people in the community interested in continuing the series start a letter-writing campaign to the Columbus Museum of Art.

Tickets are $2.50 for students and seniors and $4.00 for non-members of the Columbus Museum of Art. For more information, call 221-6801.

GOD'S WORD

1 John 4:15 If anyone acknowledges that Jesus is the Son of God, God lives in him and he in God. (NIV)

Romans 10:13 For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

John 3:14-21 And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life. For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

Interracial love explored in new movie

Heartthrob actor Denzel Washington's new film, "Mississippi Masala," is a mindful victory of message over mush.

This movie, by female director Mira Nair ("Salaam Bombay!"), might have been just another simple story of love crossing racial boundaries.

However, "Mississippi Masala" proves to be a worthwhile film, not only about love and passion but also about the importance of family, heritage and tradition.

"Mississippi Masala" is the story of the fiery love affair between Demetrius (Washington), a proud black man, and Mina (Sarita Choudhury), an Indian woman from Africa.

Their love affair leads to scandal and controversy within the traditional, small town in Mississippi.

"Masala," an Indian word for hot and colorful spices, is indicative of their mixed heritages and of the relationship between the two.

Academy Award winner Washington ("Mo' Better Blues",

Amy Hoffer

MOVIE CRITIC

"Cry Freedom" is fantastic in the role of Demetrius. He quickly develops his character into one that is sincere and realistic, despite the controversy that surrounds him.

Choudhury, in her feature film debut, is refreshingly unpolished in appearance but very polished in terms of her acting and believability.

The movie was shot on location in Greenwood, Miss. and Uganda, Africa. The scenery in Uganda is beautiful and rare (for a feature film) in contrast to the rural backdrop of northern Mississippi.

The film's only weakness lies in how quickly and erratically the love story between Demetrius and Mina develops. It is apparent that it was necessary for their love affair to develop rapidly in the plot for the themes of tradition and discrimination to be explored.

Sarita Choudhury, Charles S. Dutton and Denzel Washington in "Mississippi Masala."

"Mississippi Masala" opens Friday at the Drexel Theatre in Bexley, 2254 E. Main St. Tickets for evening performances are $5.50 for adults and $4.50 for students.

Tie-Dye Harvest reaps music diversity

By Brenda Baker
Lantern arts writer

If you are one of those people who has a hard time making decisions, you will be pleasantly surprised by the sounds of Tie-Dye Harvest.

Tie-Dye Harvest offers many brands of music, from classical rhythm and blues to reggae. Their wide range of playing styles will appeal to all types of music listeners, especially those of you who never know what you want to listen to.

The Cleveland-based band, composed of Jim Tighe (vocals), Eric Sosinski (bass/vocals), Bob Gerhard (keyboards) and Vince Broncaccio (drums), recently released their first self-titled compact disc.

The group attributes part of its name to Pink Floyd's original record label, Harvest. The group used to perform a Pink Floyd revue in order to build a following for its own originals.

The originals performed by Tie-Dye Harvest are in no way close to the sounds of Pink Floyd. Anyone who would try to duplicate Floyd would probably find it impossible.

The group's music cannot be labeled because it covers a realm of playing styles. However, the style the group plays does not matter, because they have intelligent, well thought-out lyrics to accompany all of their songs.

"Losing My Mind in Here" has a country beat to it, with words we all can relate to. "Set me up another round, put it on my bill/Let me know when the morning comes, if I am standing still."

If you don't like country, Tie-Dye Harvest also plays reggae. "Just Say Grow" is definitely a Bob Marley sound-alike.

If you are interested in rhythm and blues, "Farwell To Mr. S" is the song for you. The song opens with a saxophone solo that lingers throughout the song. Appropriately, because it talks about endings, this song is the last on the disc.

Tie-Dye Harvest will be performing Saturday night at Chelsies, 980 N. High St.

In Memory of the 228 Massacre on Taiwan in 1947

In 1945, Taiwan welcomed the Chinese troops after 50 years of Japanese colonialism. However, the bureaucratic KMT, or Nationalist, regime viewed Taiwan as simply a source of resources for their battle against the Communists. They grabbed raw materials and transmitted rampant inflation to Taiwan. Such economic chaos, exacerbated by the corrupt, brutal, and exploitative administration, finally sparked an island-wide uprising starting from Feb. 28, 1947. Under the pretense of negotiations with Taiwanese leaders, the KMT reinforcements invaded Taiwan in mid-March and slaughtered about 20,000 Taiwanese, including many intellectual elites. This tragic incident was typical in Taiwan's history - people were trampled on by the external powers. Two years later, the Communists ejected the KMT to Taiwan.

After 45 years, Taiwan has survived the historic trauma, and the islanders and mainlanders have nearly melted into a new identity. Faced with an unfriendly Communist China, which refuses to denounce the use of military forces against Taiwan, the Taiwanese people must unite and seek international support to avoid another possible tragedy.

Baseball team to end three-week layoff

By Mike Stepanski
Lantern sports writer

The OSU baseball team takes the field this weekend after what was almost a three-week layoff from its last outing.

The 15th-ranked Buckeyes will compete in the McNeese State Lake Area Classic in Lake Charles, La. OSU will play three tournament games and a non-tournament game in the four-team, round-robin tournament. The tournament includes 16th-ranked Creighton, McNeese State, and Louisiana Tech.

OSU Head Coach Bob Todd said the Buckeyes used the break as an opportunity to get back to the basics.

"We went back and worked extremely hard on fundamentals again, both defensively and hitting," Todd said.

"We also gave our pitchers a chance to get on the mound...and continue to increase their endurance by facing hitters and getting used to game-like situations."

"Fortunately, the weather's cooperated to the extent that we've at least been able to get outside on astroturf," Todd said.

The Buckeyes face tournament host McNeese State at 8 p.m. tonight. The Buckeyes play Saturday at noon in a non-tournament, seven-inning game against Creighton, and then face Louisiana Tech in tournament play at 6 p.m.

The Buckeyes wind up the tourney on Sunday, facing Creighton at 1 p.m.

In their last outing, the Buckeyes won the Olive Garden Classic, beating the 17th-ranked, University of Southern California in the championship game 8-6 on Feb. 9, in Kissimmee, Fla.

Todd says that the team's attitude is still very positive, but there are some big problems to consider.

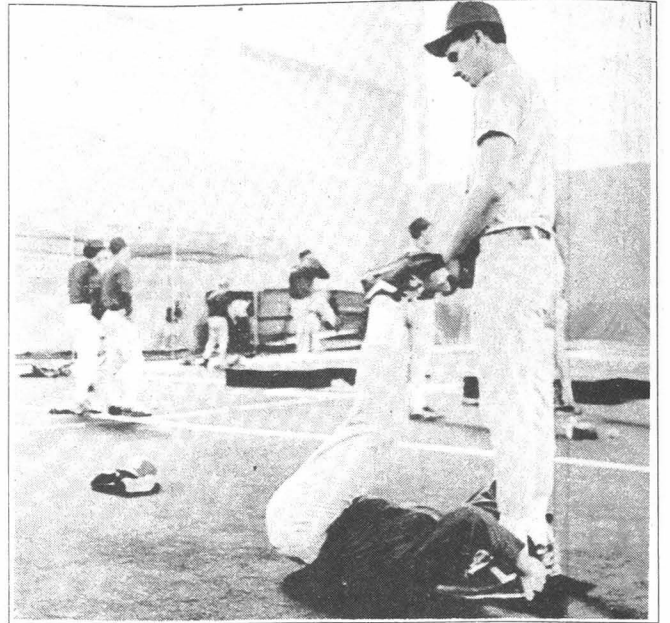

"Our biggest problem, our biggest concern are the injuries on the players," Todd said.

Pitcher, Mike Hayes has a tender elbow, "It's doubtful that he will play," Todd said.

Todd added that second baseman Jeff Anderson is still having knee problems after having arthroscopic surgery over Thanksgiving 1991. "Jeff still has not responded...he's having a lot of problems (with the knee)," Todd said.

Todd added that pre-season All-American candidate Jamie Taylor is barely back to 50 percent and is recovering from a pulled hamstring obtained earlier this year in Kissimmee, Fla. Taylor couldn't be reached for comment.

OSU starting shortstop, Doug Wollenburg gave a preview of the tournament. "We have to overcome the injuries," Wollenburg said. "If we go down and play to our potential, we should be all right as long as we don't fold under pressure."

OSU ice hockey team still alive for playoffs

By Aaron Buckles
Lantern sports writer

The OSU ice hockey team's Central Collegiate Hockey Association playoff hopes are still alive, but just barely.

The Buckeyes will take the home ice for the last time this season when Ohio State (8-19-5 overall, 4-19-5 in the CCHA) faces off against the second-place Lake Superior State Lakers (20-7-4, 18-6-4) on Friday and Saturday nights. The Buckeyes desperately need the win.

Ohio State is in ninth place in the CCHA with 13 points, six points behind eighth place Bowling Green State University. Eight of the nine teams in the CCHA go to the playoffs, and the points determine the league standings.

Bowling Green has three games left and needs three points to clinch the last CCHA playoff spot. In the event of a tie, Ohio State would make the playoffs because of their head-to-head record against Bowling Green (2-1-1). The last time the Buckeyes missed the CCHA playoffs was in 1982.

"No one wants this season to end. We just want to stay alive. We want to remember this weekend as the weekend we beat Lake Superior," OSU defenseman Brian Baldridge said.

"Friday is the game you've got to point towards and say we need the two points here. If we don't get that, now we've got a whole other set of circumstances to try to overcome emotionally," OSU Head Coach Jerry Welsh said.

Lake Superior is led by seniors Mark Astley and Sandy Moger. Astley has 10 goals and 33 assists for a total of 43 points and Moger has 19 goals and 23 assists for 42 points. Laker goalie Darrin Madeley leads the country with a 2.01 goals-against average and is second in the CCHA in wins with 15.

The Buckeyes are led by center David Smith (17-31-48). Smith has the CCHA's longest point-scoring streak of the season. Smith has had either a goal or an assist in his last 19 games.

OSU right wing Brian Loney leads all CCHA freshmen in points (41) and goals (18) scored and is a leading candidate for CCHA rookie of the year. Left wing Ron White leads the Buckeyes in goals scored with 22 (22-10-32).

Welsh said against Lake Superior he's going to put in the players who have had strong performances lately, including going with three offensive lines instead of four.

"We're basically going down to a nine-player, offensive look," Welsh said. "We're going to try to get the best, most consistent performers out front on the three lines."

Friday and Saturday will also mark the final home appearance for six OSU seniors. Baldridge, Greg Beauchamp, Greg Burke, Smith, Rob Schirmer, and Scott Walsh will skate at home for the final time Saturday night.

Cavaliers' Craig Ehlo still a cautious player

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Cavaliers' guard-forward Craig Ehlo, who has played in 200 consecutive games dating back to Dec. 11, 1989, says he always competes like there's someone after his job.

"I've constantly looked over my shoulder, which is kind of strange after nine years," said the 30-year-old Ehlo, who was a third-round draft pick by Houston in 1983 out of Washington State.

Ehlo, who played in the Continental Basketball Association from 1986-87 after playing for Houston, signed with the Cavaliers as a free agent Jan. 13, 1987.

"I think up until last year I was still a little awed by making it in the NBA," said Ehlo, who scored 9 points on 4-for-9 shooting from the floor in his 200th straight game, a 103-100 loss Wednesday night at Phoenix.

"I guess because of where I came from and how I made it, it's very important for me to go out and play every night," Ehlo said. "Deep in the back of my mind, I still may feel that I better play before somebody comes along and takes my job."

Ehlo's game streak began more than 26 months ago at Utah, where he played with an injury and hit two 3-pointers in the final 4.3 seconds to beat the Jazz in overtime.

Ehlo has missed four games in six years with the Cavaliers, just one in the past four years. His streak includes a Feb. 15 game at New Jersey after attending his sister's Texas funeral that morning.

The streak isn't good enough for the record books: at least four other Cavaliers have longer consecutive playing streaks, including John Williams' 250-game streak.

Throughout the streak and his career, Ehlo has displayed hustle, sometimes to the delight of coach Lenny Wilkens, sometimes not.

"I love the guy," Wilkens said. "I root for him. But as a coach, I react when he does something wrong."

Cleveland general manager Wayne Embry also has taken notice.

"You know that during any game Craig will do something that'll make you scratch your head and say, 'Why in the world would he do that?'" Embry asked. "And in the next moment, he'll do something great to make up for it."

The Cavaliers had Thursday off and play the Lakers in Los Angeles on Friday.

Buckeyes face Spartans Saturday in Michigan

By Elizabeth Nugent
Lantern sports writer

The eighth-ranked Ohio State Buckeyes (18-5 overall, 10-3 in the Big Ten) will face the 12th-ranked Michigan State Spartans (18-5, 8-5) Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Breslin Student Events Center.

Ohio State has lost six of its last seven games at Michigan State, including a 75-61 loss last year.

"The thing that concerns us is playing them at home," OSU Head Coach Randy Ayers said. "We need to cut down on their runs."

"It's going to be a special game for us," OSU point guard Mark Baker said. "As a unit we want to say that the seniors have been everywhere and won everywhere."

After losing two straight games, the Buckeyes are coming off a, 71-64, much needed win Wednesday at Purdue. The win kept the Bucks in second place in the Big Ten, one game behind front-runner Indiana.

The Buckeyes defeated the Spartans, 62-46, in their first meeting on Jan. 7. OSU forward Lawrence Funderburke made his debut as a Buckeye, playing 23 minutes, scoring seven points, grabbing three rebounds, and blocking three shots.

Funderburke, who weighs 220 pounds, was paired up with Michigan State center Mike Peplowski, who weighs 270. Peplowski led his team with 13 points and 10 rebounds in the first meeting, keeping close to his average of 14.2 points and 9 rebounds per game.

Funderburke will again pair up with Peplowski as well as MSU sophomore forward Anthony Miller. Miller is averaging 7.7 points and 5.7 rebounds per game.

"Peplowski and Miller are two big guys," Funderburke said. "I played decently against them in the first game, but they have gotten a lot better. We've just got to play hard and play with a lot of intensity."

Ayers said Michigan State forward Dwayne Stephens will be a tough challenge for OSU forward Chris Jent and Funderburke.

"He (Stephens) is shooting the ball well," Ayers said.

Stephens is averaging 11.2 points per game, more than doubling his last season's average of 5.3. He is also pulling down an average of five rebounds per game.

In the first meeting OSU guard Jamaal Brown held Michigan State's leading scorer Shawn Respert to a season low of six points. Respert entered the game averaging 15.8 points per game.

The Buckeyes hope to get another solid performance from point guard Baker. Baker has averaged 20.6 points in three games, scoring 22 at Iowa on Feb. 18, 24 against Indiana at home on Feb. 23, and 17 at Purdue.

"He's starting to get good looks at the basket and starting to get some confidence," Ayers said.

Coach Ayers is still looking at the big picture though.

"It's another road game," Ayers said. "If we want to stay in contention for the Big Ten we have to win."

Rose says he may request reinstatement

NEW YORK (AP) — Although he isn't in the Hall of Fame, Pete Rose thinks he deserves a spot on baseball's all-time greatest team.

"I'd be the utility man because I could play five positions," he said.

Rose, baseball's career hits leader, was always a serious student of the game. So who does he consider the greatest player in history?

"Babe Ruth," he said. "Babe Ruth saved baseball. If Babe Ruth had been a soccer player, soccer would be our national sport."

Rose was banned from baseball in August 1989 by then-commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti, who said the former Cincinnati Reds star and manager bet on games. Rose, who still denies that he bet on baseball, says he may apply for reinstatement this year.

"It's possible," he said after taping an interview with NBC's Bob Costas. "The longer I wait, the better my chances (of getting reinstated). But I'm sure I'll apply in the next few years."

Rose can't be elected to the Hall of Fame until he is removed from the permanently ineligible list — a decision that's up to current commissioner Fay Vincent, who took over after Giamatti died.

None of the previous 14 people banned from baseball were allowed back in, but Rose said none ever applied for reinstatement. Rose said he deserves to be in the Hall of Fame because of his accomplishments on the field and his contributions to the game.

"I don't think anybody ever had more integrity or character about the game of baseball than I did," he told Costas. "Not only did I play the game as hard as anybody who ever played ... I think I'm baseball's best salesman. I always talk positive about baseball. I never say anything negative about the game."

The two-part interview will be broadcast next Tuesday and Wednesday nights on "Later With Bob Costas."

Rose, who served five months in prison after pleading guilty to tax evasion charges, has admitted that he bet on football and basketball. But he insists he didn't wager on baseball.

"I'm disappointed that baseball didn't give me a fair and impartial investigation," he said. "But I'm not a bitter kind of guy. ... I just want to go on with my life."

If he is elected to the Hall of Fame someday, Rose said, "I'll be the happiest guy who ever got in. That's because I appreciate what it takes to get in. I know about the history of baseball. I care about the game."

Rose said getting inducted into the Hall would be one of the most emotional days of his life.

"It would be a real soap opera," he said. "They could probably sell seats at Yellowstone for that one."

Rose said he doesn't bet on sports anymore, although he does occasionally go to the racetrack.

"I'm trying to get into the horsebreeding business," he said. "I'm going to the Kentucky Derby this year and sit with the governor of Kentucky, who's a good friend of mine."

Although he bet on team sports and horse racing, Rose said he never considered himself a compulsive gambler.

"I always thought I bet within my means," he said. "I never took my gas and electric money to the racetrack. ... I never bet my phone bill on Monday night football games. I usually did my gambling when I had a lot of free time. ... I played for the Philadelphia Phillies for five years. The last three years, I lived 40 minutes from Atlantic City, and I only went twice."

OSU wrestlers' final matches this weekend

By Kelly L. Sekella
Lantern sports writer

The fifth-ranked OSU wrestling team travels this weekend to Evanston, Ill., for its last dual matches before the Big Ten tournament.

The Buckeyes, who have a 5-0 record in the Big Ten, will be taking on Northwestern, Ill., and Central Michigan.

"Northwestern will be our toughest opponent this weekend, but we'll beat them," OSU junior Mike Schyck said. Schyck, who is ranked 11th in the nation at 158 pounds, said his biggest opponent this weekend will be Dave Planke of Northwestern.

The last time the two met, Schyck beat Planke 6-1. "I think I'll go undefeated this weekend," Schyck said.

OSU junior Rex Holman, who wrestles at 190, said the Buckeyes have had very demanding workouts for the past month to prepare themselves for the Big Ten and the NCAA Championships.

Holman, ranked third nationally, said he expects his toughest competition this weekend will come from Northwestern All-American Matt

Case. The two met last at the Ohio Open, where Holman defeated Case.

OSU sophomore All-American Kevin Randleman, who wrestles at 177, said he thinks that his big competition this weekend will come from Central Michigan's Kevin Vogel.

"I wrestled him in the finals at the Ohio Open, and I beat him 6-5," Randleman said. "I see myself winning all three, but Central Michigan will be tough."

Randleman added that he sees the teams' toughest competition coming from Northwestern. "Northwestern has decent wrestlers, very decent wrestlers," Randleman said.

OSU junior heavyweight Ray Mendoza, ranked-seventh, said this weekend will be no problem for him. "If I just wrestle my matches hard-nose, I see no problem at all," Mendoza said.

Mendoza said the Buckeyes will not run into any big obstacles this weekend. "We're at a new level right now, no one can touch us except for (top-ranked) Iowa," Mendoza said.

"We're starting to come together, we're putting it together and we know what we have to do to win," Mendoza said.

Lady Buckeyes still trying for first Big Ten road win

By Tony Phillips
Lantern sports writer

The OSU women's basketball team will be looking for its first Big Ten road win of the season this weekend when it travels to Michigan State tonight and Michigan on Sunday.

The Buckeyes, 2-7 on the road, are 11-11 overall and 5-7 in the Big Ten.

Ohio State beat both teams earlier this year in St. John Arena.

The Buckeyes are led by junior guard Averill Roberts who averages 19.1 points per game.

Nikki Keyton, the teams second leading scorer (13.4 points per game) and leading rebounder (7.8 rebounds per game), will be back in the starting line up for the second straight game. Keyton missed three games because of a neck injury she received in the game against Purdue on Feb. 7.

Keyton started against Indiana last Friday and scored a career-high 26 points.

The Spartans (13-10, 7-6) will try to snap a three-game losing streak tonight against the Buckeyes.

Guard Marline Ferguson leads the team with 13.8 points and 4.7 steals per game. She also grabs 5.8 rebounds per game.

Center Sheronda Mayo leads the Spartans in rebounding with 6.4 per game and also averages 10.3 points per game.

Ohio State leads the overall series with Michigan State, 24-7.

Michigan is led by junior forward/center Trish Andrew. She averages 19 points and 10.5 rebounds per game.

The Wolverines, 6-16 overall and 2-11 in the Big Ten, snapped a seven-game losing streak last weekend by beating Minnesota, 67-65.

Ohio State leads the overall series with Michigan, 22-2.

Fetus or child

Supreme Court ruling's language opens door to anti-abortionists

For those opposed to the very existence of abortion, attacking it from all sides, by any means, is the order of the day.

If that means setting up pregnancy-distress centers as fronts to ensnare women who might be seeking an abortion. Then proceeding to browbeat them into having a baby that they don't want or can't care for, that is what will be done.

If that means pushing for the passing of a bill that basically says that a woman doesn't know why she has entered a family planning clinic, then that will be done.

And if that means plotting to have a fetus determined to be a child, then that will be done, too.

An Ohio Supreme Court ruling earlier this month may pave the way for this to happen.

The court ruled that a chemically dependent, pregnant woman could not be charged with a violation of the child endangerment law because she is not carrying a child, but a fetus. Justice William Sweeney went on to say that if a fetus was considered a child, then she could be charged.

A bill, sponsored by State Sen. Cooper Snyder, would find a woman who gives birth to a baby addicted to drugs guilty of "fetal neglect." The case would be dealt with in civil court and the woman would be able to receive help kicking her habit.

Sweeny questioned the constitutionality of a "fetal neglect" bill.

Though the bill, if passed, would recognize fetal neglect, anti-abortion groups will surely grasp the need to call a fetus a child instead.

And, if successful in linking this need to that of protecting the fetus from drug-addicted mother, the anti-abortion supporters would be able to further infringe upon a woman's right to choose when, and if, she will bear children.

Genesis

Stadium concerts should be more than once-a-year event

Ever since Pink Floyd filled Ohio Stadium in the spring of 1988, there have been rumblings and rumors of a follow-up concert.

If not by fans out for a good time, then by administrators who would like to rake in a good piece of money.

The 1988 concert, the only one ever held in Ohio Stadium, grossed about $250,000 for the university.

But when the Athletic Department decided to remove the artificial turf and replace it with real grass, the prospect had to be delayed to give it time to grow.

Fans of concerts held in large venues wrought their hands in anticipation of the big announcement and wondered who the performers would be.

"Genesis," they said.

Surely Genesis has lots of fans. They may — with all of the people who will go just for the experience — fill the place.

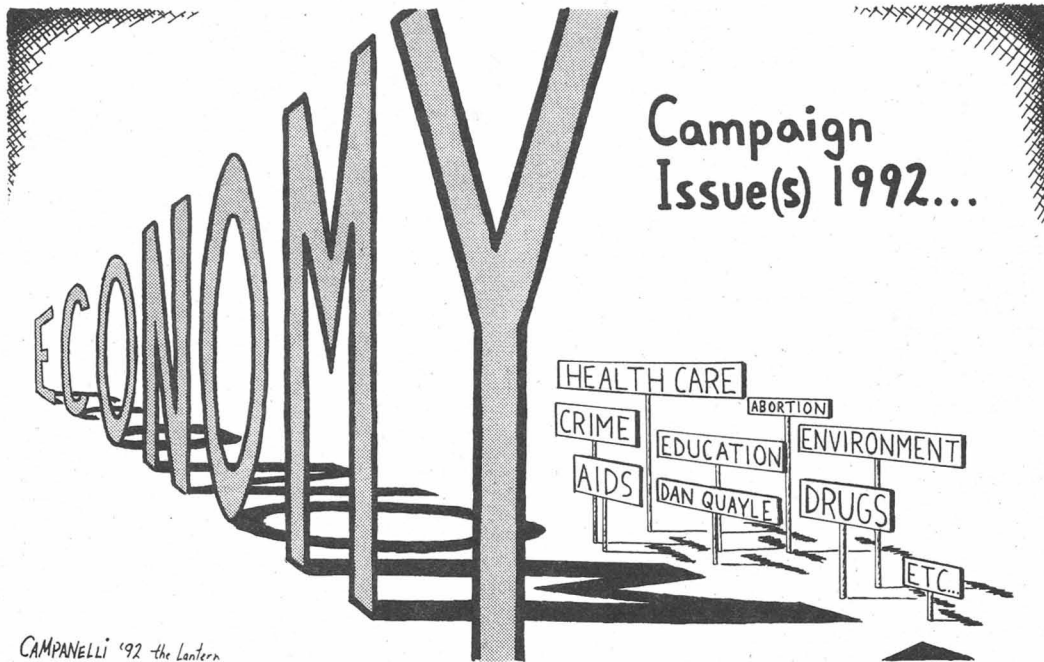

And filling the place is an issue. With the feeling that nothing besides OSU football should be played in the 'Shoe, anything unsuccessful will impair the chances of there being a repeat.

Considering the fact that U2 sold out their March 26 show at the Richfield Coliseum in — by some reports — 17 minutes, wouldn't they be a sure bet to sell out Ohio Stadium?

The Coliseum has, oh, about 20,000 seats. At that pace, tickets would be sold at a rate of about 70,588 tickets an hour — about 7,000 more than the attendance at the 1988 Pink Floyd concert.

And, if the idea is to raise money for the university, then why not hold a couple of concerts in the early summer when the Ohio Glory is on away games? It won't conflict with Ohio State football and other sports, and there would still be a good number of students around campus.

What it comes down to is the fact that holding concerts — because they are popular with students — is one of the few things OSU administration can do to help alleviate the current budgetary problems.

American fighting instinct overrides reason

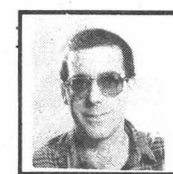

Our need to hate is so strong, we are periodically bamboozled into despising some imaginary enemy or other. Our business and political leaders use their considerable access to the media to relentlessly hammer our sensibilities with images to inspire our hatred. Their goal is to escape blame for their own failures by focusing our resentments onto a vague villain.

Our latest created foes are the Japanese, again. The problem is the Japanese we are prodded to hate don't even exist.

This doesn't matter to us. Raised on Hollywood's history and remember-Pearl Harbor ranting, we gladly embrace the accusations of the inept and condemn these fictitious foes with all our helpless fury.

The unceasing, inane references to Pearl Harbor have become extremely tiresome. We are led to believe the Japanese of today are responsible for a 50-year-old act of war by a militaristic minority. It's true the Japanese military of yesteryear embarked on an inhumane, imperialistic quest and committed countless heinous acts against many countries. For those crimes, the Japanese have paid dearly, guilty and innocent alike.

But we don't care about that.

Jamie Rulli

No, we don't bother to wonder how Hawaii, a group of islands over 2000 miles from the mainland, became part of our country in the first place. We don't care that U.S. businessmen, with the aid of our country's armed forces, overthrew the Hawaiian government. Why should we? We know we have always done the right thing.

Nor do we care that the unprovoked attack on a purely military target by Japanese forces was avenged by the barbaric testing of two atomic bombs on civilians. The enemy's ruthless attack killed 2403 Americans, of which 68 were civilians, and wounded 1200. In retaliation, the benevolent saviors of democracy unleashed a new weapon, whose effects were unknown, killing over 100,000 Japanese civilians and wounding at least that many. So what if the children of the survivors still suffer unpredictable health problems, or that their descendents will continue to be haunted by radiation.

We are, after all, the good guys. Why should we rely on historians for our history when we have the far more reliable accounts of self-interested profiteers and politicians?

But we're not still mad about a war we won, are we? No, we're miffed about international trade now. Except we have conveniently narrowed the scope of international commercial relations to the auto industry, which is nice. Now we can condemn the drivers of certain cars with a clear conscience, without feeling guilty about where our clothing, stereos or video equipment comes from.

We have further simplified our definitions to only consider the nationalities of major corporate shareholders. We don't care if a car is made of German steel and has a Japanese engine. Oh no, that would make our hatred too hard to focus. Nor do we care if a car with a Japanese name is made by American workers. That, too, would make international business as complex as it really is.

The only thing we care about is if a car is produced by a Japanese corporation or not. Forget about German, French or Swedish imports. Those countries are populated by white people. We don't care how much of the Japanese profits are reinvested in the United States any more than we do about the proportion of U.S. auto-makers' profits are diverted overseas. All that worrying would give us monster headaches.

All that buying up of U.S. property is also yanking our chains. We don't care if Canadian, British, Dutch or Swiss businesses buy American property. But their Japanese counterparts? That's where we draw the line. We will not compromise our racism.

We will stand fast in our changing ideals, whatever they are. For now, just remember that if you buy a car with an American name, your money helps pay for rich, white Americans' yachts, summer homes and country club memberships. If you buy one with a Japanese name, you help pay for rich Japanese businessmen's yachts, summer homes and country club memberships.

And that's a difference worth fighting for.

Columnist asks: 'What's up with that?'

The more time I spend on this little rotating mass of dirt and water, the more things tend to puzzle me.

Ryne Sandberg, the superstar second baseman for the Chicago Cubs, is about to sign a 5-year, $31 million contract.

You used to be able to get hamburgers at McDonald's for 25 cents. Let's say a hamburger, for the sake of simple math, has a 4-inch diameter. My powerful little calculator told me Ryne could buy 124 billion hamburgers. I would guess he could string those burgers together and circle the world a few times. At least we might be able to feed a few of the hungry.

The facts are, Ryne does give a lot of money to charity, and he is a great man and a phenomenal ballplayer. The owners must make more than him, but we seem to have a few misplaced morals. As the great Cliff Clavin once said, "What's up with that?"

USA Hockey. What's up with that? Everyone knows we got rooked by the Swedish official because he is sick of seeing those Dave vs. Dan Reebok commercials, and we smoked Sweden's hockey team like a salmon. Besides, people from Sweden cheat all the time, and they hate to lose. They only have icebergs, whales and meatballs, anyway. Nice flag. (Yeah, baby, here comes the letters.)

Shawn McAllister

Camel is offering new "Wide" cigarettes. What's up with that? I think that is what America really needs now. I was talking with a few smokers the other day and one said, "Mmmmm, the delicious kick of nicotine really hits the spot. But damn, I wish it was wider."

Wider. I don't smoke, but if I did, I would really want a cigarette that was more like a tree stump than a twig.

Indiana Hoosiers. What's up with them? Scott Kendrick and I wrote a nice and nasty column about those moonshine-runnin', cow dung-smokin', buck-toothed, corn-growin', fiddle-pickin' wheat-chewin' losers with the understanding we would run a column swap in last Friday's paper. They didn't run it.

Well, fine. We don't run pork belly futures or combine and backhoe reviews in our paper. I guess we never should have made the arrangements. Funny thing is, I could have looked really stupid until next season. Then again, maybe they can't read.

Dick Vitale. What the hell is up with him, baby? I know Dick. We talk at all the basketball games here. I talked to him at his second book release. I call him Dick, he calls me Cal. Now he doesn't even do Dick justice. His comments about Lawrence Funderburke that aired over the satellite feed during the Iowa game showed as much professionalism as farting in a board room.

The off-the-cuff comments that got Vitale to where he is are what will eventually bring him down.

The Flu. What's up with that? Like it's all right for some guy to lay a wad in the back of my head during my Art Ed. 160 lecture and say, "Sorry dude, got the flu."

Like I'm not going to take my notebook, clock him upside the head, and say, "Sorry, dude. Itch."

People who write BOOBLESS with their calculators. What's up with that?

Free-standing hair. What's up with that? Why do I have to guard my eyes when a big-haired bimbo leans over to pick up the lip balm she just dropped. These are the same bimbos who use umbrellas as weapons when the rain melts their pre-formed hair.

I can't walk down the street without watching out for some flake with her daddy's golf umbrella which spans the sidewalk looking to rip my eyes out of my sockets.

Acid-washed jeans. What's up with those?

Cal McAllister is a senior from Detroit majoring in journalism. What's up with that?

Businessman's murder brings ethnicity to fore

I read in Thursday's paper about the stabbing death of a Japanese businessman in California. Police have said whoever killed him might have done so because he was Japanese. It is alleged that the man had received death threats because "You're Japanese, and because of people like you, the American economy is failing."

I do not know if the man was killed by a disgruntled unemployed American worker, or for other reasons. Sin comes in myriads of forms.

But the story did bring to mind being Asian and American in this country. This article got me thinking about when an Asian-American becomes reminded of his or her ethnicity. The main caveat: I am not speaking for all Asian-Americans; I can only speak of some generalities based on what I've experienced...

First, you feel your ethnicity when someone looks through the White Pages, finds an "Asian-looking" name like Chan or Kim or Wong or Yin, gives you a call at three in the morning and proceeds to speak obscenities and make thinly veiled threats of violence.

You feel your ethnicity when you hear non-Asian people who don't know you're within earshot joke about "cooking rice and eating raccoon."

You feel it when you're on High Street alone or with other Asian-Americans, and another group (non-Asian) walks quickly by and makes sounds like those from a (made-in-America) kung-fu movie.

You acutely feel your ethnicity when you look at scholarship and job applications, and the only ethnic minority group NOT listed is "Asian-American."

You feel your ethnicity when whites think you're the model minority and think you don't need help because you've already made it. You also feel it when other minority groups also think you've made it and so leave you out of discussions of "minority" issues.

You feel it when people automatically expect you to excel academically, or when you're pegged as "good at math and science," even while you have problems with classes.

You feel it when you're among a group of non-Asian-Americans and they automatically group you with any other Asian-Americans in the group. I've talked with people who have said that, before they actually knew me, they initially thought I was going out with this or that person in a group I was in solely because we were both Asian-American.

You feel your ethnicity when you act or dress or have your hair cut in a way so as to make yourself stand out from all the other black-haired, brown-eyed people around you, because you want people to recognize you as an individual, not as another Asian.

You feel it when you see "Asian" characters in the media who are totally unlike any Asians you know. (By the way, the only people I ever hear say "no tickes, no washee" or "ancient Chinese secret" or "Ah so, so sowy" are non-Asians.)

You feel it when non-Asian-Americans accuse you of self-segregation while not understanding that you just feel more comfortable with people who share similar backgrounds.

You feel it when you read articles in the newspaper headlined "Is War With Japan Inevitable?" because you realize people with that kind of violent "us-them" mentality are going to take out their frustrations — not on people overseas — but on you.

touch with the normal Ohio family, with his million dollar plus Washington abode, or his private plane, or his boat, or his Vail ski resort. Maybe he thinks he is apart from the rest of us whom he represents with his as-yet unpaid $3 million debt from his failed presidential campaign. Maybe he thinks he feels he is above the regular rules and codes of ethics called for by society with his questionable involvement in the Keating Five scandal. For whatever the ultimate reasons for his weak political career, I assert that Ohio has taken enough and is a state worthy of better.

Maybe voters will look toward the other Senatorial candidate, Lt. Gov. Mike DeWine. It is altogether possible that a fresh perspective, coupled with enthusiasm, political savvy and common sense are exactly what Ohio needs in the coming election. Mike DeWine could just be that person for our state, if the voters will give him the opportunity to contribute to the building of Ohio's future as our Senator in 1992.

Comics degrading

I'm really upset over the cheap standard of the comics section. They are invariably aimed at women and represent women in a very disrespectful manner. I am also offended by some of the cheap advertisements you run in your Lantern.

This is a university paper meant for informing the students and staff on this campus. Comics should be the relaxing part of your paper, not one which contains foul language and annoys people.

Not taking sides

Abortion is a topic I simply don't care about. I could probably think of a million things I'm more concerned with than Roe v. Wade. So why am I writing about it? Well, there is one aspect of abortion I feel is always overlooked and needs to be addressed. I am for legal abortions in the case of rape or other unfortunate situations. But, I am against them if they are used as a method of birth control. I know other people with the same view as mine — some consider themselves pro-choice, and others consider themselves pro-life. I don't consider myself either. I wouldn't spend a dime of my money or a second of my time on either of these groups of whiners. I know the "who cares" category is a very small minority that consists mostly of men, and I know those who do care aren't taking my thoughts seriously. My concern first occurred when a girl I knew said, "My boyfriend and I don't use protection. If I get pregnant, I'll just have an abortion." That is wrong. Always. I think this girl and her boyfriend are two very sick-minded people. Abortion is legal, but that doesn't mean it is always right. I've noticed the logic goes something like this: Whether or not abortion is legal, there will always be abortions. You can use this logic for prostitution, purchasing assault rifles, gambling, drug use, and other acts the government prohibits us from doing. I don't think the government should allow these acts to occur. The point I'm trying to make is just because the government allows you to do something, it isn't always right.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern cannot accept advertising that advocates sedition or other illegal actions, violates normal standards of morality and taste, or attacks an individual race, nationality, ethnic group, religion or sex. In cases of doubt, the proffered copy, illustrations and layout will be submitted by the Lantern Business Manager to the School of Journalism Publications Committee and judged by a majority vote of the members. Decisions of this committee are final.

Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required; this information is for our records only and not available to the public.

The Ohio State Lantern does not restrict advertisers beyond the limits of responsible journalism and the rules imposed by the Ohio State University on all student publications.

- Copy will be furnished by noon three business days before publication, except for published special early deadlines.
- All advertisements are required to occupy at least as many inches in height as they do columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered full column (21 inches) and charged accordingly.
- The Lantern reserves the right to reject any advertisement that promotes illegal activity or activity detrimental or damaging to the university and its educational mission. It further reserves the right to revise any advertisement which is deemed objectionable for any reason.
- Make-good/adjustments will be considered only for those advertisements where errors occur in the following: business/group name, address, or phone number; item price; date, time, or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement, and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered to the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify, otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
- Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.
- A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
- No proof will be furnished on any advertisement received after deadline, or for ads smaller than seven (7) column inches.
- If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and subject to a rebill fee.
- Advertisers are encouraged to avoid making misleading claims or using art or words that impugn or degrade sex, race, age, national origin, creed or color.
- The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until credit rating with the Lantern is established. CERTIFIED check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a rate-holder ad meeting contract minimums, for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser notifies the Lantern office prior to publication.
- Advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees, and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of advertiser's advertisement.
- Advertisers in the Ohio State Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.
- All mail-order advertisers are required to submit sample/proof-of-product prior to publication.

Please note that advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF MEDICINE is Seeking Male Volunteers to Participate IN A CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY STUDY

There is currently a new clinical study being conducted in the Clinical Pharmacology Unit March and/or April, 1992.

1. A new orally administered investigational glucose-lowering compound. The study will require 23 consecutive nights and 24 consecutive days in the Clinical Pharmacology Unit. ($1,500.00)

The project will require that you receive multiple doses of the compound. You will stay in the Clinical Pharmacology Unit for 23 consecutive nights and 24 consecutive days. During this time, you will receive your meals, be able to study, be able to do your laundry and have access to cable television and telephone. Visitors will be allowed. You will have your blood drawn and have laboratory work done to ensure your health. The diagnostic tests will not be charged to you; however, this is not a "free" clinic.

FOR MORE INFORMATION, PLEASE CALL:

614/292-6908

(8:30am until 4:00pm)

or

614/292-3352 after 4:00pm

IF THE LINE IS BUSY, PLEASE CALL AGAIN.

EARN $300.00

Are you breast feeding an infant?

If so, THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF MEDICINE is seeking mothers who are willing to stop breast feeding for five (5) days - TO PARTICIPATE IN A CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY STUDY

In this study you will be asked to take one oral dose of an investigational nonsteroidal antiinflammatory/analgesic (aspirin-like) compound. The study will involve approximately six outpatient visits in the Clinical Pharmacology Unit. The first day of the study will be approximately 12-16 hours consecutively. This study will begin as soon as possible.

You will not be allowed to breast feed your baby for at least five consecutive days (you will use a breast pump during that time) but may resume breast feeding afterwards.

You will be paid $300.00 for your participation.

You will have your blood drawn and have laboratory work done to ensure your health during the study period. The diagnostic tests will not be charged to you; however, this is not a "free" clinic.

FOR MORE INFORMATION, PLEASE CALL:

No smoking fire

Andrian Thomas, owner of Thomas Pharmacy in Meyersdale, Pa., sets fire to his entire stock of tobacco products in the parking lot behind his store on Thursday afternoon. Thomas said he was tired of seeing his customers die of lung cancer and heart disease.

Gorbachev working to support wife, self

LONDON (AP) — After years of power and privilege, Mikhail S. Gorbachev says he is now shopping, paying his own bills and finding that even a former president's ruble pension doesn't go far in Russia these days.

In an interview with Britain's Independent Television News, Gorbachev also said he has no doubts that Russian President Boris Yeltsin is committed to reform, but that under some circumstances, Yeltsin could become "too authoritarian."

Gorbachev's monthly pension of 3,900 rubles is huge by Russian standards, but it's only worth about $55 at current rates of exchange.

"We receive all the bills ... we pay them ... out go the checks and last month we calculated we'd spent 3,900 rubles. That's all my pension," Gorbachev said in the interview, which was broadcast Wednesday.

Raisa Gorbachev gets only a 340-ruble basic pension — about $5 — "even though she has slaved away for 25 years," the former Soviet president said.

"As soon as I started going to the shops, I realized that was 500 rubles gone straight away. What I'm thinking now is that's enough. ... It's time I earned some dollars so I can support my family," Gorbachev said. This week, he started writing an internationally syndicated newspaper column, which should improve his dollar bank balance.

Despite the ruble shock, the Gorbachevs are very comfortable by Russian standards. They have a Moscow apartment and a country dacha, a limousine and 20 bodyguards. They have a considerable though undisclosed outside income from books they have published abroad in many languages, and they have donated thousands of rubles to charities, mainly children's homes and orphanages.

Gorbachev is president of a new foundation with more than 500 employees, including service personnel.

Goal of summit is to cease drug supply, demand

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — President Bush opened a drug summit with leaders from six Latin American nations Thursday, seeking a common effort in the two-front war to cut Andean supply lines and curb demand for drugs in the United States.

"We're going to build on the cooperation that already exists," Bush told reporters as he greeted fellow leaders outside the McNay Art Museum. "It's very good, but we've got lots to do."

But even before they began their talks around a large circular table inside the Spanish-style mansion, strong objections from the president of Peru doomed a Colombian plan to set a timetable for eradicating the drug trade by early in the next century.

Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori, whose country produces 60 percent of the world's coca leaf — the source of cocaine — also complained about "the slight American aid." He asked Bush Wednesday to free $36 million in aid that Congress has frozen because of human rights violations.

The presidents of the United States, Mexico, Colombia, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador, joined by the foreign minister of Venezuela, were expected to issue a declaration calling for annual war councils by top drug-fighters from each country, a U.S. official said.

They also were likely to approve establishment of regional training centers for law enforcement personnel and dispatching a delegation to Europe and Asia to seek money for the drug fight, said the official, who asked not to be identified.

Before the summit, Bush talked trade at a breakfast meeting with Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari. Bush vowed afterward that "no politics, no nothing" will stop him from pressing for completion of a free-trade pact with Mexico.

Bush was flanked by Secretary of State James A. Baker III and drug policy coordinator Bob Martinez as he sat around the table with the other leaders.

Bush said they would "build on those Cartagena goals" set at the first summit in Colombia two years ago with Colombia, Bolivia and Peru.

The sources said that while the summit was expected to steer clear of precise goals for wiping out the drug trade, the presidents will commit themselves to stronger measures to interdict smugglers' aircraft, confront money launderers and share intelligence.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration planned no money beyond what is already in the president's budget. The United States provided almost $710 million in economic, military and counter-narcotics aid to its summit partners last year.

On the question of goals and timetables, Bush said, "We're going to be talking about all that. We want to be as close together as possible."

At a state dinner Wednesday night, Bush dined each country for their efforts to thwart drug traffickers, and assured his guests that casual use of cocaine in the United States was down sharply.

Dear Jill,
Briefly, I am having some problems. My boyfriend and I want to get married. We have wanted to for two years now. We are planning a wedding for the spring.

The problem? My mother despises him, and me when I'm with him. She treated him badly and kicked him out of her house, leaving me in the middle by saying I wasn't her daughter if I chose to be with him. Since then, my boyfriend has said that he doesn't think he can ever forgive her. I really don't blame him.

My question is, how do I tactfully go about announcing my wedding to my mother and her side of the family? I don't even know if I should bother to invite them, because I doubt if they will even come, and if they do, it will probably be hard emotionally on my boyfriend and me.

Troubled Bride To Be

Dear Troubled Bride To Be,
Planning a marriage means preparing for any future obstacles, which includes your mother. You must at least attempt to make peace.

Go to her, alone, and have a heart to heart. Listen to her objections about your fiancé. Do not get upset—show her your maturity. Tell her you love her unconditionally, but you love your boyfriend also. Tell her of your wedding plans and ask that she be a part of them.

Do not expect immediate acceptance—it will take time. If she does not come around at all, still send her and the rest of your family invitations. That way, the ball is in her court. Good luck.

Dear Jill,

I have developed strong feelings of attraction toward one of my co-workers.

The problem with this is that when I first met him, I formed a negative opinion of him and was extremely rude and hateful towards him.

Now, months later, I realize I completely misjudged him. I would like to know the best way to get him to notice me. Our time together is short, and he will be leaving the school at the end of Spring Quarter, so I must do as much as I can before he leaves.

Signed,
Missed Opportunity

Dear Missed Opportunity,
The fact that you were rude to him in the beginning means that you already have an advantage.

Spitting AIDS patient free until case appealed

CINCINNATI (AP) — A judge has ruled that an AIDS patient convicted of assaulting jail personnel by spitting on them may remain free on bond while his case is being appealed.

Steven O'Banion, 40, of Cincinnati, was charged with attempted murder in September for spitting blood and saliva at a nurse and corrections officers in the Hamilton County Justice Center, but those charges were dismissed.

Instead, he was found guilty in December of misdemeanor assault and, earlier this month, was sentenced to serve 20 days in jail. He was to begin serving his sentence Friday and has until then to post $5,000 bond.

Catherine Adams, O'Banion's attorney, said she was concerned about O'Banion's safety if he had to serve his sentence in the same jail where the assault occurred.

O'Banion contended he spit up blood because he was beaten after guards harassed him for being gay.

He probably sees you as a challenge, which means that he has already noticed you.

What you should do now is be nice to him (but not too nice). This will confuse him even more.

I would not normally advise it, but because you are pressed for time, you have to make the first move. Tell him you'd like to buy him a cup of coffee to make up for how you treated him earlier. Then, let him make the next move.

Dear Advice Master,

This past weekend I was shopping in a mall with my father. He noticed a Garth Brooks CD and said, "Gee, Garth Brooks is really huge." I knew he was talking about popularity, but I said, "I dunno Pops, maybe you should confirm that through his physician." He gave me a disgusted sidelong glance and said, "You're sick, you should seek help."

Am I that twisted and demented, or should my father get a sense of humor?

Satan's Child

Dear Satan's Child,
I think it was rather funny, but if your father is anything like mine, forget about him developing a sense of humor and consider yourself lucky that all you got was a disgusted look!
