Random robberies not part of trend

Home invasions become issue on campus following several incidents

By Phil Helsel Lantern staff writer

The recent shootings of two East 13th Avenue residents and the armed robbery of an East 10th Avenue home last week are not part of a rising trend of home invasions, though the apparent randomness of the robberies is unusual, police said yesterday.

"There isn't an increase (in home invasions), we're actually down a little bit," said Sherry Mercurio, spokeswoman for the Columbus Police Division. "It's just that you've seen a number of them in the last couple of months. You've seen ones that have garnered some media atten-

There were 250 residential robberies reported to the Columbus police in 2000, while only 122 have been reported this year as of Sept. 3.

Although lately the rate of home robberies has been abnormally high, Mercurio does not expect that to continue.

"What you see is a kind of roller-coaster effect. You might have a month or two when the numbers go up, then you arrest some people and it goes down," Mercurio said. "Right now we're in an up, but we're starting to see it tapering off."

The figures can be misleading, said police spokesman Sgt. Earl Smith, because not all crimes listed as home robberies are similar to the two recent raids on offcampus residences.

"With the kids on campus, that was clearly legitimate. Those guys weren't doing anything," Smith said. "They're not all home invasions. A lot of time, they're there for dope rips, they're invited in. As a whole these things are not happening to hard-working, law-abiding cit-in the off-campus area in the wake of two incidents on Sept. 18 where armed robbers stormed homes on 13th and 10th Avenues, forcing residents to the ground at gunpoint. When gunmen rushed into 62 E. 13th Ave., two occupants were shot by the assailants.

Salvatore Pisioneri, 21, was shot in the chin during the attempted robbery, while Thomas Lewis, 21, was wounded when a bullet grazed his leg. Both were taken to OSU Medical Center where Lewis was treated and released. At the request of family members, hospital officials declined to comment on Pisioneri's condition.

What's most surprising about these crimes are not that they happened, but the random nature of the robberies, according to Mercurio.

These kinds of things happen all the time but a majority are drug-related," Mercurio said. "Most (victims) have been targeted, they are not unknown to the people who are committing the robberies. It's not like TV where Mr. and Mrs. John Doe are sitting there and all the sudden some men barge into the house. That's a very rare occurrence."

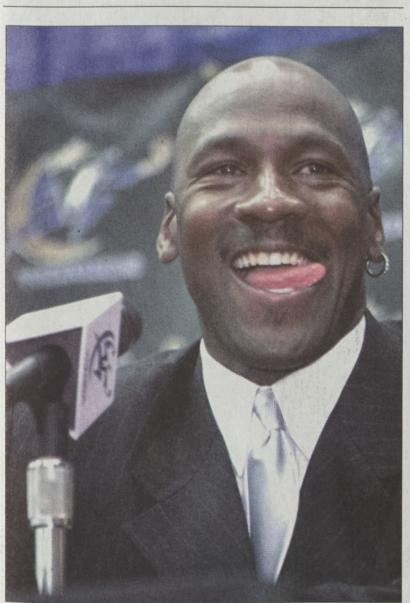

The relative rarity of random home robberies hasn't eased safety concerns in the off-campus area, with OSU administrators continuing to emphasize that students take preventative measures against crime.

"They should keep their doors locked all the time," said Willie Young, director of Off-Campus Student Services. "One of the things we noticed, walking around Friday, is the number of doors that were open. People just sitting up in the house with the door open, sometimes people were asleep."

Young also suggested that students contact their landlords if there are unsecured doors or windows and have them fixed.

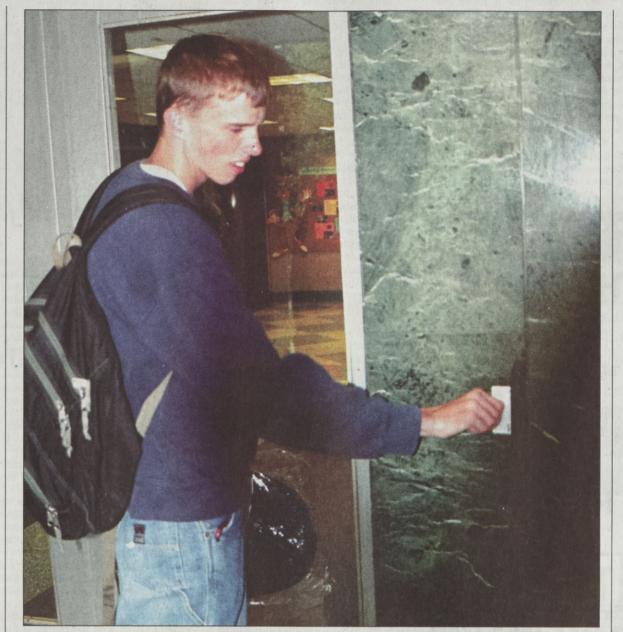

A spokesperson for Inn-Town Homes & Apartments, management for the site of the shooting, 62 E. 13th Ave., was unavailable for comment.

A slightly different policy is under way for students living in on-campus residence halls.

Students living in residence halls have access to all dormitory doors 24 hours a day by swiping their Buck ID. The policy was implemented at the start of this school year.

Students are now responsible for signing in guests between the hours of 11 p.m. and 7 a.m. This time has been changed from the previous 9 p.m. regulation.

Kristen White, Morrill Tower resident, said 11 p.m. is a reasonable hour for students who live in the residence halls to be required to sign-in guests.

"I think students living in the dorms thought that 9 p.m. was too early because people are just starting to make plans for the night and if you wanted a guest to visit just after 9 p.m. it was a pain," White said. "Making a time like 11 p.m. will be much more appreciated.

With this policy, students will have access to front and side doors 24 hours a day. Side door access had previously been cut off at 9 p.m. Jenny Klein, assistant director for residence life, said trying to keep doors locked at all times was the reason for allowing increased access to side doors.

"We want to treat students like adults and give them the most access possible to their home," Klein said. "And we hope side door access will prevent the propping (open) of doors.'

Each door is electronically monitored, allowing a staff member to notice any open door. Between the

"I am relieved there (are) security assistants who make sure the right people come into the building and the wrong people stay out of the building," Knowlton said. "It is nice to know that I am in a safe environment.

Christopher Ruddell, Steeb Hall manager, said the change in the policy came from students keeping doors propped for an easy way to bring alcohol and unknown persons into the building.

"I think this policy is working so far," Ruddell said. "I have had no problems. Security is good."

Ashley Lowery, a senior in communications, said she agrees with the change in the guest signin time but has doubts that students are responsible enough to have 24-hour side door access.

"If the university is trying to keep track of students in the building as well as keep alcohol from being snuck in, the side door entrances should not be available 24 hours," Lowery said. "The side doors are the best place to enter because no one is there checking for valid identification."

Klein said one of the major challenges with this policy is to figure out if students are legitimately using the side doors, or if they are simply abusing

Giuliani: Life is risky; be unafraid

By Larry McShane Associated Press

NEW YORK — The last standing piece of the World Trade Center towers — a seven-story twisted metal ruin that has come to symbolize the Sept. 11 attacks — will be carefully removed and saved for possible use in a memorial.

"We're going to preserve as much of that wall as possible,"
Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said yes-

The remnants of the south tower — the one struck by the second jetliner and the first to collapse - have been captured in scores of photos of ground zero since the Sept. 11 attack on the twin 110-story towers.

Demolition began yesterday. Removal of the tower will also make cleanup efforts safer and easier, the mayor said.

Earlier, as New Yorkers voted in primaries for his replacement, Giuliani encouraged residents to move beyond the World Trade Center terrorist attacks and get

"Life is risky," he said. "You can decide to live your life afraid of that happening, or you can decide to live your life the way Americans live their lives, which is unafraid. There's no reason to have this increased fear.'

Giuliani's comments came as workers started a third week of digging through the ruins of the twin towers and as the families of the more than 6,000 victims began receiving help in paying their

The mayor cited statistics showing that violent crime has plunged in the two weeks since the terrorist attack. New York is now the safest large city in America, the mayor said. The attack on the trade center was "a once-in-our-history incident," Giuliani said.

The mayor also said a regulation is being considered to bar single-occupant passenger cars from entering the city to cut down on traffic, beginning tomorrow. A final decision on which bridges and tunnels would be affected should come today, he said.

Preserving the ruined tower as a memorial was suggested by Philippe de Montebello, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and by John Tierney in his column Tuesday in The New York Times: "It's the building hanging on, still refusing to fall, just like New Yorkers.

In Oklahoma City, granite salvaged from the bombed Alfred P. Murrah federal building in 1995 was used in a memorial to the 168 victims. Also, Berlin, London and Hiroshima have erected monuments from wartime debris.

Giuliani, who is barred from running for a third term, discouraged New Yorkers from casting a write-in vote for him. But he has left the door open to trying to

Cramming costs students more than sleep

By Kim Kirschenheiter Lantern staff writer

Mention "cramming" to a college student and images of grueling, all-night study sessions instantly come to mind.

What more students — especially those living off-campus need to be aware of is another form of cramming. This form may loosen their wallets.
"Cramming" also refers to the practice of adding charges to a bill which the customer did not specifically want or ask for. Unfortunately, cramming is a practice not many students are aware of.

Mike Sowko, a senior in atmospheric science, has been a victim of cramming in the past..

"The problem is, there are so many little charges that it's hard to even tell what's legitimate," he

The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio has identified many examples of cramming on utility bills, include adding features such as voice mail and caller ID, which are not requested by the consumer to phone bills, charging higher rates than promised or agreed upon and charging numerous fees not agreed to by the consumer.

Even "psychic friends networks" can provide an example of cramming; callers sometimes may be charged a monthly fee after placing the original call since their participation has unknowingly signed them onto the network, Shana Gerber, a public information officer for the PUCO, said.

Sowko cites his phone bill as a past problem, but says he was often able to settle the situation

WE GET IT. THEY DON'T.

Campus Partners hopes to provide an alternate restructuring plan for the Broad Street portfolio with the help of BREAD

The Broad Street portfolio is a series of 1,335, subsidized units in 242 buildings located in various places such as Weinland Park, Near East Side neighborhood, Italian Village, Harrison West, Linden and Franklinton.

The tenants pay a fixed percentage of their incomes to the owners. It is usually about $100, Steve Sterrett, Campus Partners spokesman, said. Then the rest of the money is paid by the govern-ment, in this case the U.S. Office of Multi-family Housing Assistance Restructuring. The money paid is theoretically supposed to be used to renovate the houses.

Currently OMHAR is renewing its Section 8 contracts with the existing owners, the Broad Street Company, Sterrett said.

Under the renewed contract, the owners are asking the government to reduce the subsidy by 25 percent, which will reduce the amount of money that can go into renovating the subsidized hous-

According to Foegler the housing conditions are desperate. The tenants have no showers, washer-dryer hook-ups, carpeting or air conditioning.

Campus Partners wants to fix these problems and asked BREAD for support of its plan.

The goal is to invest $35 million into renovating the housing, Sterrett said.

By committing to pull together the investment, the government would recognize the higher rate of a subsidy for the houses,' Hoffman said.

Sterrett said OMHAR will restructure the contract agreements with Broad Street owners by Oct. 31. Adding an amendment will provide for more time to institute their alternative plan. Within a six to 18 month period, they must provide ownership and financing for the property, transfers of ownership, and developments of new contracts between the new owners and the government.

In the principles outlined by BREAD, Campus Partners will not be the owner of the Broad Street portfolio. Instead, another community-based owner should be found for the project.

Finding an owner is one challenge that Foegler faces. "No one wants to step up and buy the portfolio, because it's difficult to manage, it's scattered throughout neighborhoods and it's not lucrative," he said.

Financing is another obstacle for Foegler. Finding money to finance the project is difficult too, he said. So far, the finances provided by the government through Section 8, tax credits and federal assistance will be some of the money used.

Along with renovation, there will be support services provided as well, such as day care and job training, Foegler said.

"This could be a positive and great thing for the neighbors," Hoffman said. "The hope is that people can get up on their feet."

Officers prepare for chemical attacks

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — With added urgency, emergency officers from across the country met with terrorism experts yesterday to discuss ways to respond to a possible new wave of attacks, including assaults with chemical or biological weapons.

"We in law enforcement know how to take care of people with guns," said John Skipper, a sher-iff's captain in Anderson, S.C. "We need to learn more about biohazardous stuff. Law enforcement is in the dark on a lot of this."

"The way we are going to find it we are going to find five or six dead cops," he said.

Leon Schenck, a former FBI agent and anti-terrorism specialist who is now Huntsville's deputy police chief, told the conferees that 'New York was a soft target," unlike military bases or other protected places. He said other American cities are just as vulnerable.

Schenck said that in dealing with suicide-terrorists, "any target they want to destroy, we have to make it difficult."

"If somebody wants to kill you and they are willing to sacrifice their lives to do it, chances are they are going to be successful," he said.

Schenck said terrorists are much more likely to use chemical or biological weapons than nuclear weapons. He said a biological attack with smallpox could be catastrophic because there is not enough vaccine to protect America's population.

"It's going to take years to build up enough," he said.

Safety in the dorms Rules needed despite inconvienence

The impact of new security policies enacted following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks will affect new and returning Ohio State students—especially those living in university housing. Before we begin griping about these new rules, we should consider the intent behind them, the concern for our well-being. In fact, we suggest OSU look to other colleges and universities for strategies to even further improve the safety of dorm life on

Night assistants at the front desks of dorm rooms will not be checking student IDs until 11 p.m. now, as compared with 9 p.m. last year. All entrances to the specific dorm rooms where students live are now accessible 24 hours a day. These actions were brought about to keep students from propping doors open as well as to give them easier access to their

But even with these new electronic monitoring systems in place, the application and enforcement of the new standards must be proficient. It is foolish to assume these rules will always be enforced and followed no matter how tough they look on paper. Certain students will always try to bypass residence hall security, to sneak in contraband or to move around more quickly. Certain night assistants will always be more lax than oth-

Perhaps Residence Life could enact security measures other universities have taken to prevent security problems. Miami University in Oxford has installed timed alarms on all doors which sound after being held open for too long. This would alert residence hall employees and definitely stop the alleged door proppers. It would also combat lax enforcement.

UCLA has an automated card-swiping system, allowing only valid university students and staff to enter the lobby of dorm buildings. A student must swipe the ID card again to enter the living quarters, helping to ensure only residents of that building, and their escorted guests, gain access to the living areas. A similar system is used at Bowling Green Trying to combat the problems of student security in such a large urban environment will always be a challenge. OSU's and Residence Life's policies must be the first line of defense students have against the criminal activity located in and around the campus area. It would also be in the university's own interest to enact policies that eliminate its liability should any security problems arise.

These new policies were enacted to ease student mobility, but their first concern should be for safety. And though annoying at times, the security problems these policies prevent pay off if only one criminal act is prevented. Residence Life should constantly monitor the success of its policies, and quickly react to any problems that arise. The safety of the OSU student should remain a top priority at this university.

The American Way Protecting the innocent is essential

It was after the catastrophe, when they shot the president and machine-gunned the Congress and the army declared a state of emergency. They blamed it on the Islamic fanatics at the time.

Keep calm, they said on television. Everything is under control.

That was when they suspended the Constitution. They said it would be temporary. There wasn't even any rioting in the streets. People stayed home at night, watching television, looking for some direction. There wasn't even an enemy you could put your fingers on.

In Margaret Atwood's acclaimed 1985 dystopia, "The Handmaid's Tale," she foretells a future of a world turned upside down in the aftermath of a national tragedy. And while we are by no means suggesting that the Sept. 11 attacks foreshadow any such negative repercussions, this extreme case does offer an appropriate starting point to discuss some of the lessons that we have learned from our own history. Lessons that we must safeguard throughout the proceeding hostilities.

In an honorable attempt to protect the citizens of this country, government officials have, during times of war, often lobbied for crackdowns on certain individual liberties for the expressed purpose of upholding order. In a war against the faceless enemies who have attacked our people and attacked our way of life, it becomes far too easy to get caught up in hunting down the enemy by any means necessary and overlooking the protection of the innocent.

While we seek to defend ourselves against future threats, we must also guard against allowing our own anger and fear to cause us to act against our own interests as a free people. We have already seen pundits and political leaders suggesting the fight against terrorism requires us to sacrifice the constitutional liberties that are at the core of what it means to be an American: That would be a victory for our nation's enemies.

We have already witnessed violence and harassment directed toward Arab-Americans and Muslim Americans. Now is the time for all Americans to rise up against this cowardly behavior in their own neighborhoods. We made an unthinkable mistake when, during World War II, we abducted Japanese-Americans from their homes and shipped them off to internment camps. It is intolerable when Muslim-Americans fear for their safety in neighborhoods and communities where they live.

We will relentlessly support the government's efforts to bring these terrorists to justice. And we will just as relentlessly stand up and fight efforts to exploit this terrible tragedy in ways that may chip away at the civil liberties for which we have fought for and died to uphold. Now, more than ever, we must strive to reinforce and to protect the ideals of the American way.

America gets an overdue wake-up call

Thile studying abroad in Spain this summer, I was able to pick out my fellow Americans for the sore redwhite-and-blue thumbs they were.

Americans were loud and obnoxious in the cathedrals and mosques, while everyone else was subdued. They spoke English louder when the waiters did not understand them. Capitalism exuded from them like a body odor, leaving those in their wake pinching their noses from the stench of travelers' checks and greenbacks, when peseta was the more widely used currency.

Americans expect the world to adjust to the "American way," and it takes a rude awakening - like the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11 — to rouse us from our continual sleepwalking over other cultures. Why else did the multi-faith service at the National Cathedral hold so much meaning in the days following the attacks?

Yet, in the hazy daze of the mourning light, ignorance still takes hold of the conscious thoughts of some.

America's greatest defense is the ignorance of her citizens; hate crimes are, indeed, born out of the ignorance of uneducated people. Hate crimes infringe upon the civil liberties of other Ameri-from the broken glass. In fact, She lost something, because one of Her children's liberties were recklessly taken into disregard. But ignorance is not limited to hate crimes or those without degrees. It is found everyday on the Ohio State campus—and from sea to shining

Ignorance can be found whenever the term "towel head" is muttered, just as it was when the generation before us incorporated the term "gook" into their vocabulary during the Vietnam War.

Stupidity, evoked from fear, is what prompts people to suggest that all Muslims and Arab-Americans should be held in an area until things get figured out. It is as poor of an idea now as it was when we subjected Japanese- and Asian-Americans to prejudice during World War II.

If our fountain of knowledge only runs to the depth where the term "sand nigger" springs forth, then we are as shallow in our perception of those from the Middle East as our ancestors were in their views of Native Americans as "savages' and "red devils."

Ignorance is a choice, and bigotry is an evolution. Making the choice to belittle or hate a culture in the name of patriotism is a warped idea and misplaced loyalty.

Making the choice to remain ignorant now, creating further stereotypes and prejudices, sets up the next generation to succeed-for it will mean we failed to change our world, starting with our minds.

New code of conduct: Prosecution policies unfair to off-campus partiers last year's football season and again in the spring, there is a concern among students and officials alike that beer-fueled meatheads may take to the streets, setting dumpsters ablaze, destroying cars, throwing bottles at riot cops, and defiling the streets of our fair city.

After the student body last year failed to show any sort of objection, our university president instituted a new Code of Student Conduct. This new code allows the university to prosecute offenders who commit crimes off-campus. Individuals who are students at this fine institution are now held liable by the university when they have a drunken lapse of judgment and throw an empty beer box onto a Dumpster fire.

Let us think of the implications that this new tolerance policy has on off-campus life. The officials of this venerated school of higher learning can now overstep the bounds set by campus and reach into our lives in the city of Columbus. The university has no business involving itself in the affairs of students off-campus. When a student violates a law on campus property, then university officials can take action. Their jurisdiction ends where campus property ends. When a student steps off said campus property, he or she ceases to be a student, but rather a citizen of the city of Columbus.

If an individual commits a crime and is apprehended by the good, honest, hardworking riot police after a good beating with the truncheon, he or she is jailed by the city, charged by the city,

he or she is punished again by the university, when the crime did not take place at a university sponsored function or on campus. The repercussions could be suspension or even dismissal. The person is punished twice for the same crime. The president of our fine university has even attempted to take further action by involving area Eric landlords in his new quest for a cleaner, safer campus area. The ultimate goal of this effort is to have the landlords evict students or even non-students from their homes if they host or participate in a large party that degenerates into a riot. Roll that one around in your mouth a few times and get the taste of it. Eviction. Some poor student may not only get booted from school, but run out of the town as well, just because he or she thought a party might be fun.

Harrelson

Perhaps the most offensive measure taken by university officials is the request of local supermarkets and convenient stores to cease selling beer in glass bottles. The director of off-campus student services, Willie Young, was quoted in The Lantern saying it doesn't make sense to sell beer in bottles because they're dangerous.

he school year has barely even begun and we are again on the subject of off-campus rioting. After the riots during and if convicted, penalized by the city. He or she has paid for what's been done. Now, with this new code in place, if this individual is a student, bottled beer. This is by far the most laughable seurs of beer to be able to taste the difference of bottled beer. This is by far the most laughable thing that university officials have considered risky. I suppose that area stores shouldn't sell metal dining utensils, or glass drinking vessels. Maybe there ought to be warning labels on the bottles: Do not throw at police, the Surgeon General says it might be dangerous.

First, if individuals are rioting, they're going to find something hard, sharp, and heavy to heave at cops, whether it be a bottle of beer, a bottle of soda, a rock, or any other sort of debris that may be lying about. Second, there is a considerable difference between the taste of bottled beer and a canned beer. I am a college student, and I appreciate the taste of a finer beer after a hard week of class and work. To assume that all students are Natty-swilling Neanderthals with no other intention than to get uncontrollably drunk and shout at the top of their lungs and chuck heavy things at police is not only unfair, it's ridiculous.

Rioting was a problem last year, and I sincerely hope it will not continue to be one this year. Chipping away at our freedoms, increasing police presence and threatening our homes, and more importantly, our education is not the manner to combat this issue. The president of this university believes in a clean, safe, free educational environment. I guess that freedom has limits. I hate it here. Eric Harrelson is a senior in English. He can be

Stop your whining: Columbus police doing the best job they can under circumstances departments cannot ensure our safety, nor are they obligated to. Think about it. The city of Columbus is divided into several precincts, which are divided into cruiser districts. That means ,at best, an officer has several blocks to cover on their own. At worst, an officer has several square miles to cover

A large part of police work is "after the fact" investigation. The officer cannot stop someone from breaking into your car unless they are already there. A majority of the time is spent filing reports on crime which has already occurred and turning this over for investigation. The police catch criminals, yes, but usually after the crime has been committed. And while this criminal is being chased down, other crimes have taken place.

The police know that a party is going to be taking place over the weekend. The police do not know when someone is going to shoot someone. They choose to put a large number of officers on the streets because a large number of OSU students can't handle their booze and end up getting in fights, vandalizing cars, committing DUIs, leaving their empty cans in my yard, and pissing in my bushes. To suggest that police are afraid to go after "real criminals" is an editorial low

That is the reality of our situation. Some people think an officer on every block would solve this problem, but it would create more problems: "Who would pay this officer's salary?" There will always

Repeat after me: Police officers and police be those who complain when the police are present for "breaking up their good time" and open the gates of Hell in an editorial when they had to wait an hour for an officer to take a report on their busted windshield.

Until the governor activates the Ohio National Guard to patrol the OSU campus, I would suggest to the student body making a few changes to your lifestyle to make yourself a less desirable target for criminals. If someone knocks on your door at 3 a.m., perhaps you should identify the person on the other side before you open the door.

If you live in the campus "ghetto" maybe you shouldn't leave your door wide open while playing Playstation all night. Maybe you shouldn't wear headphones while jogging. Instead of having 50 CDs in the back of your car, maybe you should get a folder for them, or put them in the trunk. Try organizing a neighborhood watch. Try making criminals feel unwelcome. Instead of throwing beer bottles at police officers, why not give them a cup of coffee instead?

A large part of crime on and off campus can be minimized by students taking more responsibility for their actions. Then, the city wouldn't blow its salary budget giving officers time and a half to fight campus riots, and could in turn afford to do more "real" police work.

U.S. shouldn't overlook peaceful alternatives

In the wake of the Sept. 11 attacks, The Lantern online poll asked "What immediate action should the United States take in response to terrorist attacks in Washington, D.C., and New York City?" Judging by the list of previous polls — including favorite beverages and favorite team color — Lantern pollsters don't take themselves too seriously.

But the Sept. 18 poll is of a different nature, asking students to voice their opinions about weighty issues of global concern. Among the options are two different types of military action, extradition of criminal suspects to the United States. economic sanctions and two con-cluding categories: "Nothing" and "I don't know." How about "none of the above" or "other"?

Absent from the list is a non-violent course of action through the United Nations Security Council, a subject widely discussed among peace activists and international law theorists. In the Sept. 21 editorial, Lantern writers opined, "We must raise the standard of living and civility throughout the entire world, spreading our democratic tradition and rule by law to people of every class and creed." Lofty sentiments — but they contradict the multiple choices given in the poll.

How about a peaceful response that does not involve further violence, United States unilateralism or greater deprivation of people in the Third World? I hope that the OSU academic community will rise above the nationalist and bellicose voices of mainstream media, and I urge Lantern writers and readers to widen the scope of dialogue by discussing nonviolent alternatives.

Police in Cincinnati prepare for riots after verdict

The shooting sparked three nights of rioting, the city's worst racial unrest since the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination in 1968. A citywide curfew was ordered, dozens of people were injured and more than 800 were arrested.

"The old folks, for the most part, are resolved to the fact that yes, we've got problems here, but we've got bigger problems with what's going on around the country," said Thomas, who has joined with clergy members in recent months to walk the city's streets and talk to young blacks about their concerns.

Thomas, a Cincinnati policeman for 27 years before he took his present job in 2000, said he can also sympathize with Roach, who ran into a dark alley in one of the city's most violent neighborhoods in pursuit of Timothy Thomas. Justices to make ruling on vouchers

By Anne Gearan Associated Press

WASHINGTON Supreme Court agreed yesterday to decide whether a school voucher program that provides tuition aid to 3,700 Cleveland students is a constitutional use of taxpayer money

The Ohio pilot program offers the justices an opportunity for a broad ruling on a long-simmering political issue that generally pits social conservatives and some inner-city parents against civil liberties groups and teachers'

The court said it will hear three related cases on the fiveyear program, which provides money to help low-income families pay tuition for schools outside Cleveland's troubled district. The program provides kindergartners through eighthgraders up to $2,500 annually to be used at private or parochial schools.

Lower courts reached opposite conclusions about whether the program is unconstitutional government promotion of religion.

Advocates have argued the program gives low-income parents an alternative to the Cleveland public schools. Opponents have said it is an illegal use of public money since 96 percent of those enrolled in the program attend religious schools.

A high court ruling is expected

"More than anything, I am eased that the nearly 4,000 low-income Cleveland-area children benefitting from this valuable program will have their day in the Supreme Court," Ohio Attorney General Betty Montgomery said. The Supreme Court's decision to hear the case will "remove the constitutional cloud from school choice," said Clint Bolick, vice president of Washington, D.C.based Institute for Justice, a libertarian law firm that represents Cleveland families in the pro-

The Ohio Federation of Teachers, a voucher critic, said the court's scrutiny would expose the program's many problems.

"The program has been fraught with scandal, misman-agement, it has not shown any significant academic results where's the compelling public interest to breach the Constitution even a little?" said OFT President Tom Mooney.

School vouchers were a centerpiece of President Bush's education platform during his campaign, and his top Supreme Court lawyer filed an uninvited friend-of-the-court brief urging the justices to take on the Cleveland dispute.

Solicitor General Theodore Olson argued that the Cleveland program is constitutional because it provides the same amount of cash help to students no matter whether they enroll in church-run schools or nonreligious private academies.

Christine Suma, one of six parents represented in the cases before the Supreme Court, has four children attending Catholic school with the aid of Ohio's voucher program. She said she hopes a favorable Supreme Court ruling will allow voucher programs to be expanded in Ohio and other states.

"I think it'll be the beginning for every parent to have a choice and every child to have a chance," she said.

Barry Lynn, executive director of Americans United for the Separation of Church and State, called vouchers the most important church-state case in 50

"It will be a historic showdown over government funding of religion," he said.

Experts question the effect of war on U.S. economy

NEW YORK — Rarely in the history of conflict have such high costs added up so

Just two weeks after the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington, airlines plan more than 80,000 layoffs, the world appears poised for recession and some congressional estimates say the United States could need an additional $100 billion for the war against terror and related costs. A conflict could set the global economy back by $160 billion this year, according to one private economic forecasting compa-

War has in the past helped to strengthen weak economies like the one America is mired in. World War II pulled the United States out of the Depression as industry mobilized to build warplanes and other military hardware. The Vietnam War spurred an economic boom in the 1960s.

But as President Bush has repeatedly stressed, this will be a war unlike any in history. There likely won't be any full-scale deployments of ground troops or massive arms buildup to track down Osama bin Laden, the No. 1 suspect in the Sept. 11

If the U.S. military attacks Afghanistan and captures bin Laden, it's unclear where the United States will retaliate next. Predictions of how long a war may go on and how much it might cost vary widely.

In today's dollars, World War II cost $4.71 trillion and the Vietnam War cost $572 billion, according to the Congressional Research Service. The most recent conflict, the Persian Gulf War in 1991, cost $80 billion adjusted for inflation, according to Congress' research arm - but 90 percent of that was picked up by other nations like Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Japan. That isn't expected to happen this time since the United States is retaliating for attacks that took

"I think the first thing to recognize is this time we're the ones who are going to bear the cost. That enhances the impact on the U.S. economy," said Marshall Goldman, a professor of international economics at Wellesley College.

Such uncertainty has made divining the economic road ahead an unusual challenge.

Economists agree the terror attacks struck the already weak U.S. economy hard, at least in the near term. With consumer confidence waning and businesses laying off thousands and putting expansion plans on hold, a recession - two quarters in a row of negative economic growth — seems all but inevitable.

Stock market investors sent the Dow average plunging 14.3 percent last week, its worst one-week tumble since the Depression. While the market partly recovered on Monday, analysts say sentiment remains extremely shaky.

Artificial heart patient ready for life, burgers

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - The first recipient of a self-contained artificial heart has been doing well enough to make trips outside the hospital in a van, his doctors said yesterday.

"We are trying to make fairly routine trips into the city," University of Louisville surgeon Dr. Laman Gray said. "He absolutely loves doing that."

On Robert Tools' first trip outside the hospital last week, he went to Louisville's Waterfront Park, then had a special request on the way back to the hospital. 'He wanted to stop by the

Tornado blows through Maryland, killing two

By Gretchen Parker Associated Press

COLLEGE PARK, Md. - Students and school officials sorted through wreckage yesterday at the University of Maryland, where tornadoes killed two sisters, both students. At least 50 people were injured there and elsewhere in the Washington suburbs.

A 78-year-old volunteer firefighter collapsed and died after helping with the damage. The father of the dead sisters was among the injured.

Several buildings were damaged by the tornadoes that struck late Monday afternoon and mobile homes containing offices were destroyed. Debris, overturned cars and trees were strewn across the campus.

More than 100 cars had shattered windows or had been smashed into other vehicles.

Student Insley Schaden tried to determine if she could get her car out from between two others. Most of her car's windows were broken, but she said she thought she could salvage it, unlike a nearby vehicle that had been ripped in half.

"You see this wiry thing and it's actually a Jeep," Schaden said.
Gov. Parris Glendening, who once taught at the university, toured the area yesterday. He had declared a state of emergency on Monday. "Where that touched down, it could have been much worse in loss of life and injury," Glendening said yesterday.

The tornado's wind speed likely ranged between 158 and 206 mph, said John Margraf of the National Weather Service in Sterling, Va.

The governor's office said it was Maryland's worst tornado in 75

Roughly 22,000 business and residential customers lost power, said Potomac Electric Power Co. and Baltimore Gas and Electric.

Two tornadoes touched down in the area about 10 minutes apart late Monday afternoon, part of a storm system that stretched along the East Coast, the National Weather Service said. At least one funnel cloud was visible from Washington.

Ryan Wirt, a freshman, said he looked out his dormitory window and saw a funnel cloud approaching with lightning flashing inside.

"It looked as big as my whole building," Wirt said.

The two students died when their car was hurled hundreds of yards. They were identified as sisters Colleen Patricia Marlatt, 23, and Erin Patricia Marlatt, 20, of Clarksville, Prince George's fire spokesman Chauncey Bowers said.

The tornado carried their car the length of two or three football fields, pushing it over or between dorm buildings before it came to rest in an area of trees, said Mark Brady, another Prince George's fire department spokesman.

Their father, F. Patrick Marlatt, needed 40 stitches for facial cuts. He is deputy director of the Maryland Fire and Rescue Institute, whose trailer offices on the campus were destroyed.

In addition, 78-year-old volun-teer firefighter Clarence Kretizer collapsed and died after returning to his fire station from the campus area, Bowers said.

Detailed pictures shed new light on comet Borrelly

By Andrew Bridges

Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. — Detailed images of a comet taken by NASA's Deep Space 1 probe reveal an unexpectedly complex object with a surface of rugged terrain, rolling plains, deep fractures and very dark material, scientists said yesterday.

The spacecraft, nearing the end of its useful life, flew within 1,340 miles of comet Borrelly's bowling pin-shaped nucleus on Saturday and snapped two dozen pictures.

The images of the 2 1/2-by-5-mile nucleus revealed it was spewing three distinct columns of They also showed that the nucleus' frozen core of dust and ice is coated with a pitch black material, thought to be a mix of organic molecules. "This was sort of like a Dove Bar the size of Mount Everest," said Don Yeomans, a comet expert at the National Aeronautics and Space

Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory,

where results of the flyby were displayed at a news conference. The three jets of dust are thought to emanate from deep, well-like structures located in bowlshaped depressions in the nucleus.

"These are regions of active erosion," said Larry Soderblom, a U.S. Geological Survey scientists and leader of the imaging team.

All of the space probe's science instruments collected data during the encounter. "They were able to see, smell and hear the atmosphere of the cometary environment," said Marc Rayman, the mission's project manager. Deep Space 1 caught Borrelly at its most active, just a week after its closest approach to the sun. The comet was 137 million miles from Earth at the time.

It was only the second close-up scientists have had of a comet's nucleus. The other came in 1986 when the European Space Agency's Giotto spacecraft flew past the comet Halley, but Yeomans said Deep Space's images have higher resolution than those acquired by Giotto.

The encounter was a bonus for the $164 million Deep Space 1 mission. The probe is nearly out of fuel and NASA plans to turn it off later this The location of the comet's nucleus within its surrounding cloud of charged particles was unexpected, said David Young, a University of Michigan scientist and leader of the mission's space physics team. Scientists had expected the nucleus to be within the center of the cloud, formed when the solar wind interacts with the dust and gas given off by the comet. Instead, the nucleus was located to one

"It's in the wrong place, period. And we have to figure out why," Young said.

Comets are believed to contain pristine examples of the materials that coalesced 4.5 billion years ago to form the solar system.

"We're just scratching the surface," project scientist Robert Nelson said.

Arab students leave U.S. after attacks

By Nicholas K. Geranios Associated Press

Around the United States, scores of Arab students have dropped out of college and left the country, many of them after being called home by parents fearful of war and anti-Arab sentiment following the terrorist attacks.

Some 47 students from the United Arab Emirates have quit Washington State University in Pullman, Wash. There are also reports of about 100 Arab students leaving other U.S. colleges in the wake of the Sept. 11 suicide hijackings.

"There are some students who feel anxiety," said Shafeeq Ghabra, spokesman for the Kuwaiti Embassy in Washington, D.C. "Their parents back home in Kuwait are more anxious than they are. Some would like to be together with their children."

While it is unclear exactly how many Arab students are leaving, it appears that the vast majority are staying. Of the 570,000 foreign students in the United States, about 40,000 of them are from Arab countries, according to the American Council on Education.

One of the biggest exoduses appears to be from Washington State, which has a total of 18,000 students.

"For the most part it's because their parents want them back," said Ranna Daud, 20, head of the Muslim Student Association at WSU.

Daud, an Arab-American raised in Pullman, said there has been no violence against the students, though some have been harassed verbally.

Efforts to contact some of the departing students were not successful because colleges would not release their names.

The Saudi government is providing free airfare to students who wish to go home. Those who choose to do so will not lose their government scholarships.

Kuwait has more than 3,000 students in the United States, Ghabra said. "We have encouraged students to stay," he said.

Those who are afraid to stay in the United States are getting Kuwaiti government assistance to come home, but are being asked to return to this country for the spring semester, said Ghabra, who has a daughter who is a junior at American University in Washington, D.C.

"There were some difficult times for her in the first days, but she is over it," he said. "My daughter is staying on and her friends are staying on."

More than 30 Arab students were reported to have left American University.

Elsewhere:

— About two dozen Arab students have left both the University of Missouri and the University of Colorede at Dowyer of Colorado at Denver.

— Up to 30 students from Arab countries have left California countries have left California State University, Long Beach.

— Four Middle Eastern students have left the University of — At Boston University, five Arab students have left.

— Three students from the United Arab Emirates have withdrawn from Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma.

At Montana State University in Bozeman, all the Arab students appear to be staying, said Abdullah Bahazig, head of the university's Muslim Student Association. The school usually has about 30 Arab students a year.

"I think Bozeman is one of the safest places in the U.S. for an international student," Bahazig

VIENNA, Austria — The facade of OPEC unity showed signs of cracking yesterday as the cartel's delegates strained to reconcile their alarm over plunging crude prices with their pledge to provide enough oil for a weakened world economy now reeling from terrorist attacks in the United States.

Delegates of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries expressed diverging views about what to do when they officially meet today in the Austrian capital to reassess their current output.

Israeli-Palestinian peace talks scheduled despite recent attacks

Bv Mark Lavie Associated Press

JERUSALEM — High-level Israeli-Palestinian truce talks were finally set for today, following several delays and intense U.S. pressure, officials said.

The announcement raised hopes the talks could pave the way for a gradual end to the year of violence that has shattered peace hopes and killed more than 800 people, four-fifths of them Palestinians.

Israel would not confirm the time and place of the meeting between Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, but Palestinian officials said it would be at Gaza airport this morning.

The meeting was made possible when Arafat's long-awaited visit to Syria was abruptly called off yesterday, leaving the Palestinian leader with free time today.

In his first interview on Palestinian TV since fighting erupted, Peres said yesterday that "the meeting was prepared properly, in my view, and it is being held in an atmosphere of agreement between the two sides

The United States has been pressing hard for such a meeting, and Secretary of State Colin Powell has been in daily telephone contact with leaders from both sides, according to officials.

The Bush administration believes that quelling Israeli-Palestinian violence is essential to its efforts to gain support in the Islamic world for a united offensive against terrorism in response to the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

Although Palestinian-Israeli II violence has decreased in recent days, there was no guarantee the 6 meeting would not be scuttled at the last minute, or that it would succeed in cementing a cease-fire.

Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon has demanded 48 hours without Palestinian attacks before any talks can take place.

Saudis to sever ties with Afghanistan's leadership

By Robert H. Reid

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Saudi Arabia cut diplomatic links with the Taliban yesterday, leaving Pakistan as the sole country with formal ties to Afghanistan's hard-line leaders. Osama bin Laden's organization, meanwhile, threatened attacks against "Americans and Jews." "Wherever there are Americans and Jews, they will be targeted," said

"Wherever there are Americans and Jews, they will be targeted," said a statement faxed to news organizations in Pakistan's capital, Islamabad, in the name of al-Qaida's chief military commander, Naseer Ahmed Mujahed. "We can defend ourselves. The holy warriors are fully prepared."

prepared."

"Wherever there are Muslims, they should prepare for jihad (holy war), and by the grace of God, the victory will be Islam's," added the statement, warning against any American-led retaliation for the catastrophic Sept. 11 attacks in New York and Washington.

Pakistan, Afghanistan's neighbor, has joined in the U.S.-led campaign against terrorism — a move that was praised yesterday by a high-level European Union delegation.

The EU promised $18 million in emergency aid to help the country cope with an anticipated flood of refugees if the United States attacks cope with an anticipated flood of refugees if the United States attacks Afghanistan, and the delegation stressed that the anti-terrorism campaign was not directed against the entire Islamic community worldwide. "Pakistan has shown it can and is willing in very difficult circumstances to take up its responsibility as a member of the international community," Belgian Foreign Minister Louis Michel told a news conference after meetings with Pakistani officials.

In northern Afghanistan, where an opposition alliance is battling Taliban troops to try to take strategic areas north of the capital, Kabul, an opposition spokesman reported intense fighting yesterday.

Reached by telephone from Kabul, spokesman Mohammed Ashraf Nadeem claimed the opposition had captured several villages in the Sangcharak district, killed six Taliban soldiers and captured weapons including artillery, tanks, mortars and rocket launchers. Several alliance soldiers were wounded, he said.

No Taliban official was immediately available to comment on the claims.

Outside assistance to the Afghan opposition is already causing unease in some quarters. Pakistan's foreign minister, Abdul Sattar, called it a "recipe for great suffering" for the Afghan people.

He did not specifically mention either Russia, which said Monday it was ready to provide the opposition alliance with weapons and military equipment, or the United States, which has increased its contacts with the opposition in recent days.

Saudi Arabia accused the Taliban of providing a haven to terrorists who carry out attacks "defaming Islam and defaming Muslims' reputation in the world." Bin Laden has sheltered in Afghanistan since 1996, and the Taliban have rebuffed calls to hand him over in the wake of the attacks.

Without citing the Saudi-born bin Laden by name, the Saudi government said in a statement carried by the official news agency that the Taliban are using their land to "harbor, arm and encourage those criminals in carrying out terrorist attacks which horrify those who live in peace and the innocent, and spread terror and destruction in the Pakistan said yesterday that it would maintain diplomatic relations with the Taliban, although the government pulled its 12 diplomats from its embassy in Kabul over the weekend. A Taliban embassy remains in operation in Islamabad.

The United Arab Emirates also broke diplomatic relations with the Taliban over the weekend.

In Kabul, about 500 people staged a noisy anti-U.S. demonstration, shouting "Death to America!" and "Long live Osama bin Laden!" The Taliban-run Persian-language Anis newspaper said senior Taliban minister had told people not to worry about possible U.S. strikes, because "fresh holy warriors are volunteering to join the militia."

Intelligence officials said a U.S. Defense Department delegation was sharing evidence with Pakistani authorities implicating bin Laden in the terror attacks on New York and Washington.

The officials said the delegation, led by Air Force Brig. Gen. Kevin Chilton, Pentagon director of strategic planning for the Near East and South Asia, was also outlining plans to use Pakistani airspace and military facilities and to exchange intelligence in support of a possible attack on Afghanistan.

Pakistan has agreed to close its 1,560-mile border with Afghanistan and to permit U.S. military flights over Pakistani territory.

The meetings began Monday and were continuing yesterday. Pakistani defense and intelligence officials speaking on condition of anonymity said the talks were focused on finding a common strategy to hunt down bin Laden and his alleged terrorist network in Afghanistan.

Despite fierce opposition at home from Islamic militants, Pakistan has pledged "full support" for Washington's war on terrorism. But like many other governments, it has said it would like to see hard evidence against bin Laden. The intelligence sources said another highlevel U.S. delegation was expected to arrive in the coming days.

Also yesterday, the U.N. World Food Program said it was resuming food aid shipments to northern and western Afghanistan for the first time since Sept. 11. The Romebased food agency said it would start trucking food into Afghanistan from U.N. warehouses in neighboring Turkmenistan and Tajikistan on a trial basis.

Will the real slim Carey please stand up?

By Anthony Breznican Associated Press

BURBANK, Calif. — The world could have lost Drew Carey in August when the bespectacled comedian underwent emergency surgery to open a blocked artery. Instead, it got two of him.

First is the familiar sitcom character "Drew Carey," beloved for his beer-swilling, junk food-loving lifestyle. There's also the real, newly reformed Drew Carey, now health-conscious and increasingly the seventh season of ABC's "The Drew Carey Show," his health scare has caused the divide to grow between the real man and his fictional alter ego.

That means one aspect of his trademark look will have to go.

"I'm going to definitely lose weight because of the healthy way I've been eating. But I'm worried about how I'm going to look," Carey said. "I hope people don't get turned off because I'm skinny ... I hope that doesn't scare people away from the show.

His character will continue rel-ishing the coarser things in life fatty foods, beer with his pals and stressful romances (this season finds him married to two women).

"It's amazing how the show has paralleled my real life, but Drew's not going to go on a health kick," Carey said of his self-titled character. "I don't think he's going to change at all... He'll just have better fitting suits.'

Carey's blue-collar fantasia about a peculiar group of Cleveland friends has a new energy since his operation.

"Now that he's watching what As the 43-year-old comic starts he does and what he eats, his energy has picked up 10-fold," said Ryan Stiles, who plays Lewis Kiniski on the sitcom and also costars with Carey on the comedy improv show "Whose Line Is It Anyway?"

"Drew came back and was saying, 'Let's go. Let's have fun.' And it really spread throughout the crew," Stiles said.

"The Drew Carey Show" retains a vigor that many sitcoms lose by their seventh season because it not only tweaks reality but wrestles it to the ground in an absurdist head-

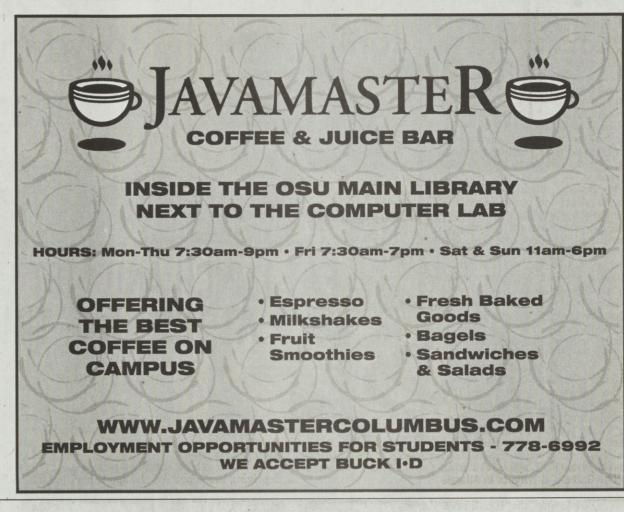

"Drew was very smart by opening up the show to be whatever we imagine it can be. You can skew reality as often as you want," said Diedrich Bader, who plays Carey's lackadaisical pal with the unlucky name of Oswald Lee Harvey. Last season concluded with Drew, a beleaguered middle manager, locked in an insane asylum after suffering the unbearable Machiavellian machinations of his office rival, the cantankerous, cos-meticized Mimi (Kathy Kinney). In the hourlong season premiere 9 p.m. today, Carey's cadre of oddball pals scheme to free him by staging a flashy dance number at the hospital that lets him ... well, waltz out unnoticed.

The show began going over-thetop late in its first season with plot points like "Buzz Beer," a caffeinated alcohol Drew started making in his garage so people can "stay up and get drunk all over again.'

Fantasy has increasingly trumped reality on the show, with last season featuring an episode in which a comatose Drew found himself in a dream world of pizza trees

Human brain excited by music

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Brain structures that are activated by food or sex are also turned on by music, researchers reported in a study yes-

"People now are using music to help them deal with sadness and fear," said Dr. Anne Blood, a researcher at Massachusetts General Hospital in Charlestown, Mass. "We are showing in our study that music is triggering systems in the brain that make them feel happy.

According to a study appearing yesterday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, Blood and her co-author, Robert Zatorre of McGill University in Montreal, used positron emission tomography, or PET scans, to find which areas of the brain are stimulated by music that test subjects had described caused "shivers down the spine."

"In the reward and emotion systems of the brain, there are certain structures that are active," Blood said. This activity clearly shows up when patients are given PET scans at the same time they are experiencing the stimuli that produce euphoria.

Previous studies have linked the midbrain, the ventral striatum and parts of the cortex to sex and food. The new study, Blood said, clearly shows a similar response in these areas to musical sounds the test subjects had preselected as beautiful enough to give them "chills." There was no such response, however, to other types of sound.

Dr. Ira Glick, professor of psychiatry, Stanford University School of Medicine, said music is one way to cope" in periods of stress, and it is known that "behind every emotion and every piece of behavior there is a change in a

"With this new technology, the PET, for the first time we can see it," he said. "It is exciting to see the biology unfold before our eyes as we explore the human mind.

In the study, Blood and Zatorre asked 10 musicians, five men and five women, to choose stirring music. The subjects were then given PET scans as they listened to four types of audio stimuli - the selected music, other music, general noise or silence. Each sequence was repeated three times in random order.

Blood said, when the subjects heard the music that gave them "chills," then the PET scans detected activity in the portions of the brain that are also stimulated by food and

Although the tested subjects were all musicians, Blood said that "80 percent of people experience these chills" from some types of

"The experience of chills is a very common phenomenon, and it is highly likely that the same (brain) structures would be active in other people," she said.

Blood said the reaction to music is highly individualized and culturally based. She said this suggests that some people may react to rock 'n' roll in the same way that others are affected by Beethoven.

Just why humans developed such a biologically based appreciation of music is not clear.

The appreciation of food and the drive for sex evolved to help the survival of the species, but "music did not develop strictly for survival purposes," she said.

"Because it activates the parts the brain that makes us happy suggests that music benefits our physical and mental well-being,"

Anthony Hopkins stars as Ted Brautigan and Anton Yelchin is Bobby Garfield in "Hearts In Atlantis"

Hopkins, Davis shine through in 'Atlantis'

By Paul Landefeld Lantern arts writer

We have all heard the phrase "Never judge a book by its cover." It sounds clichéd, but that is exactly what can be done when walking in to view "Hearts in

A similar question among all who hear this title is "What is 'Hearts in Atlantis'?" This movie didn't have the high powered advertising budget as a "Rush Hour 2," but it may not need it.

The movie unfolds the memories of a photographer Bobby middle-aged Garfield. Played by David Morse, who was also in "The Rock," the memories resurface because of the deaths of two of his childhood friends. His movie-long flashback is of the summer when young Bobby (Anton Yelchin), begins to realize many things that were kept from him by others and himself.

Young Bobby's eyes begin to open as Ted Brautigan, played by Anthony Hopkins, moves into the apartment above Bobby and his mother. Hope Davis, who plays Liz, Bobby's mother, is struggling to support her and her son after her husband's death six years earlier. Hope Davis puts in a very strong performance as a self-obsessed woman who is depriving her son while she spoils herself. Davis was great throughout the movie, making her character seem convincing to the viewer

However, the performance of Yelchin was not impressive at all. The young actor didn't seem to make emotional transitions within scenes well. Yelchin did have shining moments as the movie wore on, but his overall performance was not

Hopkins put in a solid performance as a traveler that is seems to be running from something. His character befriends young Bobby and fills in the roles of both mother and father during his stay, filling the void that Bobby's mother and father

The movie is based on the book by the same name, written by best-selling author Stephen King and adapted by Oscar winner William Goldman, so it is no surprise the movie was very well written. The conversations didn't seem scripted, but flowed as if the actors were speaking their own thoughts. Light humor was also mixed in to keep the movie from having too dark of a tone. The movie was solid and kept the interest of the viewers throughout. If you're in the mood to see a quality movie, which nowadays seem few and far between, take in a viewing of "Hearts in ring Pizza is a bit off course

It is with a great sense of disillusionment that I write this week's column. For years, I have recommended Flying Pizza, located at 1812 N. High St., to friends and colleagues as the pinnacle of campus pizza and a symbol of how New York-style pizza can taste. The hand-tossed crusts, the fresh ingredients and sauce set Flying Pizza apart from its many competitors — at least until lately.

Upon my most recent visit to this famed locale, I was saddened that upon critical examination the crusts were burnt, the ingredients were oftentimes merely afterthoughts and the atmosphere was decidedly cramped — if not unhy-

As anyone who has ever visited Flying Pizza understands, the ordering system is antiquated and unreliable. One after another, customers repeat their orders time and time again to the beleaguered employees behind the counter. The employees, struggling to keep several orders straight at one time repeat their mantra, "Who had the pepperoni? Who had the cheese?"

Clearly, this is a situation that frustrates all involved. While certainly no expert in operations management, this lowly critic would like to point out to the staff at Flying Pizza that paper and pencil would go a long way towards keeping order during the apparent madness of the lunch

The seating situation is not any better. Their tiny dining area does not hold any more than about 16 people, less if one cares for any degree of comfort.

"While leaving the front door open does keep the atmosphere cozy, if not homey, the flies this policy lets in doesn't help the ambiance," co-masticator Frank

Nor does the fact that one hearty bout of gas from anyone in the room would another in a Hobbsian struggle to exit the masticating building. Therein public fore it is with a certain degree of trust in man's humanity to man that one dines at Flying Pizza.

"These mushrooms simply don't make the grade. I'd like to see a 'shroom pizza with mushrooms under the cheese. All in all, this is a good quick lunch if you're around campus, but don't expect to score points with the ladies for your knowledge of fine cuisine at holein-the-wall locales," wrote Frank. I'd take him at his word, readers. Besides Frank's renowned engineering brilliance, if there's one things he knows it's how not to score points with the ladies.

Co-Masticator John sampled the meatball sub and comments, "The meatball sub, otherwise known as the Italian meatball sandwich, was well-worth the $3.50. Cheese was a nice addition, though steep at 75 cents. This place is no place for large groups."

My slice of pepperoni and mushroom suffered some of the same problems as my companions. My mushrooms seemed to be tossed loosely on top of the slice and then doused with a fresh coat of pizza sauce to help them stick to the surface. The mushrooms were luke-warm compared to the rest of the pizza and the extra sauce made the entire affair unnecessarily messy. I can dribble pizza sauce down my shirt without the help, thanks. The crust was a bit burnt too, but not burnt as badly as the slice of Sicilian cheese pizza I tried. Unfit for human consumption, at least to humans that don't enjoy unmercifully burnt pizza. To put things plainly: No refills, no smoking, no seats, no service. Don't get me wrong, I've ordered some great pizza from this place before — but they sure dropped the ball today and hopefully, this article helps turn things back

When it comes to lunch, you can do a lot worse for yourself than stopping by Flying Pizza. After all, pizza is like sex. When it's good, it's great. When it's bad, it's still pretty good.

Thank You Students!

Your patience with the bus route changes during the first few days of classes has been greatly appreciated!!

We know that the changes are difficult, and getting timely, correct information to all students has been a challenge. As our staff have been explaining over the past few days, the following changes have occurred:

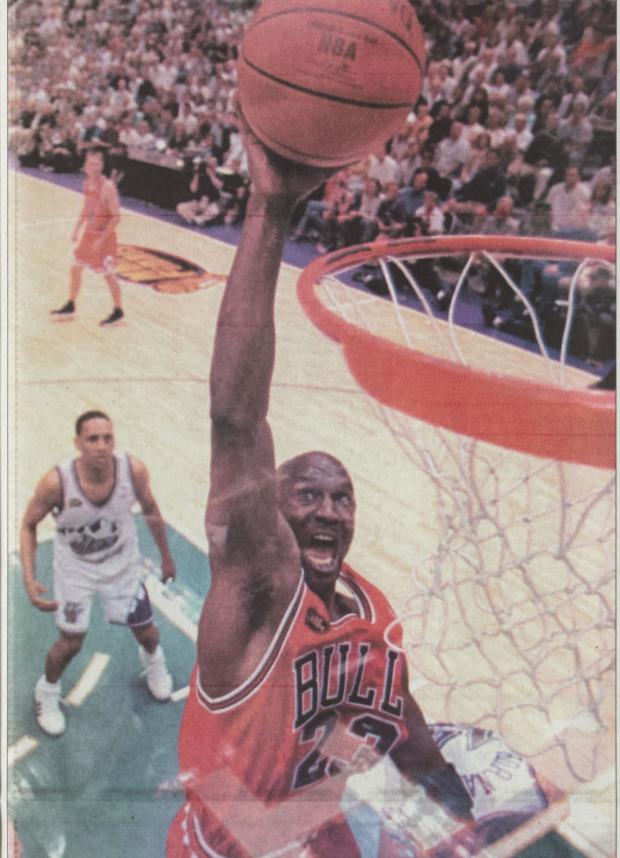

WHERE IS THE NORTH EXPRESS ROUTE ???

The North Express, formerly running between West Campus and Central Campus, has been re-routed to provide bus service to the only available overflow parking on campus and is now called the Commuter Express. As many of you experienced last year, West Campus parking fills up early, and there is no place to park nearby. To alleviate this problem, and prepare for the impending loss of MORE parking on Central Campus in the next year to construction, we are using the 2,000 space lot located at Fred Taylor Drive and Ackerman Road. No new funds are available to CABS to provide the necessary bus service linking this lot to Central Campus, so a reallocation of existing buses had to be made.

WHY CAN'T YOU ADD MORE BUSES ???

CABS is supported solely from parking fees and fines, and parking fees are already increasing to fund the construction of additional Central Campus parking in new garages (two scheduled to open in 2003!). Additional funds were not available to simply add buses, thus the need to reallocate resources and modify routes.

If you need assistance in route planning, have questions related to parking or CABS, or would like to comment on the route changes, please email us at: tpinfo@osu.edu.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Michael Jordan announced his decision yesterday that he will once again make a return to basketball. He will donate his entire 2001-2002 salary to the relief effort of the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11.

MJ officially returns

By Joseph White Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Michael Jordan made his comeback official yesterday, announcing he will return to play in the NBA and sign a two-year contract with the Washington Wizards.

"I am returning as a player to the game I love," Jordan said in a news release issued through his management agency.

Jordan will donate his entire salary for the upcoming season to relief agencies working with the victims of the terrorist attacks on Washington and New York, said Estee Portnoy, a spokeswoman for SFX, Jordan's management agency.

"I am especially excited about the Washington Wizards, and I'm convinced we have the foundation on which to build a playoff-contention team," Jordan said. "The opportunity to teach our young players and help them elevate their game to a higher level, and to thank the fans in Washington for their loyalty and support, strongly influenced my decision."

The five-time league MVP, who retired for a second time in 1999 after leading the Chicago Bulls to their sixth title, announced his comeback after clearing up a licensing issue with one of his sponsors - a disagreement that caused the official announcement to come a day later than expected.

Jordan never completely ruled out a comeback when he retired in January 1999, hedging his bets with the statement that he was "99.9 percent" certain he would never play again. Leaving the door open, even by one-tenth of 1 percent, meant Jordan could always kick it back open without going back on his word.

Now, he has.

"This is certainly an extremely important moment in the history of our franchise, however our excitement is muted by the world events that surround us," Wizards owner Abe Pollin said.

"The greatest player in the history of the game is joining my team, and for that I am extremely honored and pleased.

Jordan, 38, said he would not comment further on his return possible comeback for about six months, at first saying that he was simply trying to lose the extra weight he had gained in retirement. He rigorously worked himself into playing shape over the summer by holding several invitation-only camps of pickup games with other NBA players at a gym in Chicago.

Jordan's first official practice with the Wizards will be Oct. 2, the first day of training camp at Wilmington, N.C. He occasionally worked out with the team last season when he was president of basketball operations, a job in which he almost completely overhauled Washington's roster and put the team into a rebuilding mode.

His supporting cast will include the likes of Jahidi White, Richard Hamilton and Courtney Alexander - none of whom were in the NBA when Jordan was playing for the Bulls. Turning a team that won only 19 games last season into a winner might be an insurmountable challenge even for Jor-

"I know there are a lot of naysayers out there," Jordan said earlier this month to reporters in Chicago when he all but made his return official. "Winning isn't always championships. What's wrong with helping kids find their way, teaching them the game?"

To comply with NBA rules, Jordan had to sell his ownership stake in the Wizards, which he obtained along with a share of the NHL's Washington Capitals on Jan. 19, 2000.

That paperwork was completed Friday, and Jordan's attorneys ironed out the last few glitches toclear the way for his comeback announcement.

"I am happy to welcome Michael Jordan, the player, back to the NBA. Although, as commissioner, I am sorry to lose him in the board room," NBA commissioner David Stern said. "Michael has always brought joy to basketball fans around the world and, in these difficult times, we can all use a little more joy in our lives."

Jordan will be in the unusual position of playing for the coach he hired, Doug Collins, who joined the Wizards in April and also coached Jordan for three seasons with the Bulls in the 1980s. Jor-Jordan has been training for a dan will share the court with players he signed, drafted and traded for. That includes high school graduate Kwame Brown, selected No. 1 overall by the Wizards in June, and veteran forward Christian Laettner — a graduate of Duke, the archrival of Jordan's alma mater, North Carolina.

Jordan suffered three physical setbacks over the summer, raising doubts about whether his body could endure the rigors of an 82game schedule. Back spasms and knee tendinitis curtailed his workouts, and two cracked ribs from a collision in a pickup game took him off the court for four weeks.

Jordan will return without the all-star cast that he hoped would accompany him. Charles Barkley, who spoke of playing with Jordan, abandoned his comeback bid during the summer, and the Wizards were unable to sign any marquee

But by ridding the Wizards of the high-salaried, long-term contracts of Rod Strickland, Juwan Howard and Mitch Richmond, Jordan has given the Wizards enough salary cap flexibility to restock the roster next summer.

Jordan won 10 scoring titles and is the NBA's fourth all-time leading scorer with 29,277 points. He has averaged a league-record 31.5 points per regular season game throughout his career and 33.4 in the playoffs.

Jordan's first retirement came in October 1993, after he led the Bulls to three titles. He played baseball in the Chicago White Sox organization for one season, but he couldn't make it out of the minor leagues and returned to the Bulls in March 1995.

Jordan led the Bulls to three more titles and retired again in January 1999, shortly before the start of the lockout-shortened sea-

Jordan is scheduled to make his return appearance in Chicago on Jan. 19. His regular-season debut will be Oct. 30 at Madison Square Garden against the Knicks, and his first home game for the Wizards will be Nov. 3 against Allen Iverson and the Philadelphia 76ers.

"While nothing can take away from the past, I am firmly focused on the future and the competitive challenge ahead of me," Jordan

Bellisari QB decision to come tomorrow

By Lucas Sullivan Lantern sports writer

The answers to fans' questions are coming, but it is going to take some time.

At the weekly Big Ten luncheon at the Buckeye Hall of Fame, OSU coach Jim Tressel was looking ahead to Indiana and quarterback Steve Bellisari was unavailable for comment for the third day in a row since returning to Columbus.

A week ago Bellisari was the No. 1 starter, no questions or doubts. This week Tressel said a decision on who would start would come tomorrow.

This comes after backup Scott McMullen did not play in the 13-6 loss to UCLA, after fumbling a snap and throwing an interception in the win over center LeCharles Bentley and walk-on punter Andy Groom were in attendance, but questions centered around the controversy that has erupted since Saturday's performance.

And for the first time in his OSU coaching career the heat seemed to get to Tressel.

"It's a little blown out of proportion," Tressel said about the attention given to the quarterback position.

Bellisari's performance, 5 of 23 for 45 yards, has prompted many outbursts among the media and fans, but that does not worry Tressel.

"That shows they care," he

When asked if there was anything like this at Youngstown State, Tressel replied "Yeah, but there were 200 (fans) in here, not just the elite (media).

'Our offense has to look harder at getting better at what they do," he said.

In making the decision to start Bellisari or McMullen. Tressel said he worries about the person first and what it will do to the team.

"We keep in mind the person," said Tressel, explaining

"If I was Steve, I would be in that huddle until someone told me to get out."

—Jim Tressel

his thought process in making the most important decision to date - as OSU coach.

So what are the differences that Tressel sees in Bellisari and McMullen?

"If Steve holds the ball down and runs, he's going to have a chance to make a big play," Tressel said. "I don't know if Scott will make more than a first down. On the other hand I think Scott has some ability from a quick release."

In giving out weekly grades to players after each game, Tressel said that nine out of 10 guys on the team were given a good grade after UCLA, leaving Bellisari as the only one who didn't. But will it be Bellisari behind center come Thursday?

Tressel won't divulge, but said in practice the guy in the huddle will be the senior and third-year starter. "If I was Steve I would be in that huddle until someone told me to get out," Tressel said. "I think that's the way Steve would be." The comments and insults hurled at Bellisari have been plentiful and sometimes cruel. ressel seems to sympathize with his position and can see a difference in his attitude.

"I'm not sure there is a more difficult athletic position in the state of Ohio," Tressel said. "It's harder to be the quarterback at Ohio State than for the Bengals or the Browns.

"I'm sure it's tough on him," he said.

too much. Bellisari's performance was effected by the offensive line play and the lack of a consistent running game, to be sure.

But that doesn't take away from one obvious fact. While Bellisari possesses tools that made The Sporting News dub him a potential Steve Young two years ago, the guy is not a quarterback.

Florida State knew it four years ago when they recruited him as a safety and not a signal-caller. And now we know it, too.

Think about the receiver you see coming around on a reverse and winging the ball 50 yards downfield. That guy runs a 4.4 dash and has a strong arm. Nobody's asking him to play quarterback.

Much more goes into the position than a strong arm and quick feet. You must have the right mindset for the position. And, at this level, your mechanics better be damn good.

What makes this situation dicey is the respect that Bellisari has from his teammates. As muchmaligned as he is, the team has voted him as captain twice, which makes him the first player to accomplish that since Pepper Johnson in the mid '80s.

It won't be easy to bench him, but right now he is leaving the coaching staff with few options. Maybe Scott McMullen, Craig Krenzel and Rick McFadden just aren't ready to start. Maybe Tressel is just biding his time, waiting for Massillon Washington star Justin Zwick to come to campus.

The one thing that is clear is that something has to happen at quarterback, a position at which Bellisari has proved himself to be, at the very least, awkward.

And at the end of the day, it's a shame that Ohio State has wasted such athletic potential by playing someone out of position. But, make no mistake about it, that's exactly what they did.

The men's and women's cross country teams began their seasons with impressive showings at the Miami Cross Country Fall Classic. The men placed second out of seven teams with a score of 43 points, marking the fourth consecutive season the men have opened their season with a Top 2 finish. The women placed fifth, scoring a total of 112 points. Host Miami took first place in both races.

Leading the Buckeye men's squad with an outstanding performance was senior captain J.J. O'Reilly, who placed second running the 8,000 meter race in 24:54. Other exceptional performances came from sophomore Jon White, who placed sixth and junior Josh Folger placed eighth. Freshman Daniel Glaz secured 11th place. Senior Rob Myers, freshman Jacob McCauley and freshman Chris Basinger finished to take 16th, 18th and 19th, respectively.

Getting off to a quick start for the women was freshman Robyn Detty who led the team with a 12th place finish with a time of 23:16 in the 6,000 meter race. Senior Kati Stevens took 14th and Brooke Patterson took 25th, with sophomore Lyndsi Gay finishing one second behind Patterson in Gay's first meet as a Buckeye.

Next up for both teams is the Indiana State Invitational, Sunday in Terre Haute, Ind. Hosted by Indiana State University, the meet will be held at the LaVern Gibson Championship Cross Country Course and will feature over 17 teams.

Not to be confused with Buckeye fans and alumni can now catch women's volleyball action on the Ohio News Network. Commentary for all the games will be provided by former Ohio State player and All-American Audrey DiProno-Flaugh and ONN's Arica Robbins covering the play-by-play.

The next match for the Lady Bucks is 1 p.m. Sunday when they take on Purdue.

Vanessa Immordino becomes the second Buckeye field hockey player to win Big Ten player of the Conference best

The Big Ten Conference announced Monday Vanessa Immordino as offensive player of the week for field hockey. Immordino, a sophomore from Roseland, N.J., took part in every goal in OSU's wins over No. 11 Penn State and No. 9 Iowa last weekend. She scored an astonishing 15 points in three games, including seven goals and one assist. Immordino is the second straight Buckeye to earn offensive player of the week honors, as senior Marije van Nouhuys warranted the honor on Sept. 10.

Immordino has registered 19 points on nine goals and one assist to help the Buckeyes to a 6-1 record overall and 2-0 in the Big

The Buckeyes travel to Illinois this weekend to face Northwestern at 3 p.m. Friday and Stanford at 2 p.m. Saturday.

At least one men's team is Top 10

The National Soccer Coaches Association of America announced yesterday the OSU men's soccer team is ranked No. 10 in the NSCAA/Adidas Men's Division National Poll. The ranking is the team's highest in program history in a poll that is the most widely recognized national and regional soccer ranking systems in the

The undefeated Buckeyes (6-0l overall, 1-0-0 in the Big Ten) are off to their best start since 1977. Last weekend the Buckeyes secured victory at the 2001 Ohio with wins over the then-No.14 Creighton Saturday and South west Missouri State Sunday.

No. 6 Indiana and No. 8 Penn State and the only two other Big Ten Schools ranked in the Top 25

The next big matchup for the Buckeyes begins at 7:15 p.m. today at Akron. Penn State visits OSU at the Jesse Owens Memorial Stadium for a 2 p.m. game on Oct. 14.

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22). SOCIAL AND ROMANTIC RELATIONSHIPS WILL ENTER A NEW PHASE OF SHARED GOALS, GROUP ACTIVITIES AND INVITATIONS. THIS IS AN EXCELLENT

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Emotional clarity and bold social statements are IMPORTANT. WATCH FOR A ROMANTIC TRIANGLE OR A UNIQUE SOCIAL MISTAKE TO BECOME PRIME TOPICS OF CONVERSATION. FIND A WAY TO AVOID OFFERING OPINIONS.

TIME TO EXPAND YOUR CIRCLE OF FRIENDS OR ASK FOR ADDED SUPPORT FROM LOVED

LIBRA (SEPT. 23-OCT. 23). A FRIEND OR CLOSE COLLEAGUE MAY SOON BE DISTRACTED BY STRONG EMOTION OR FOCUSED ON WORKPLACE ETHICS. STAY WELL BACK FROM ALL SUCH SPECULATION. AT PRESENT, OTHERS MAY NEED TO RESOLVE THEIR FEARS OR

SCORPIO (OCT. 24-Nov. 21). FLASHES OF WISDOM OR SOCIAL INTUITION WILL CAPTIVATE YOUR ATTENTION. KEY ISSUES MAY INVOLVE ARGUMENTS BETWEEN FRIENDS OR EMOTIONAL DEBTS FROM THE PAST. SOME SCORPIOS MAY ALSO EXPERIENCE POWERFUL DREAM ACTIVITY OR RARE GLIMMERS OF FUTURE EVENTS. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). FINANCIAL ADJUSTMENTS OR NEW EMPLOYMENT

GOALS MAY BE NECESSARY. RARE MONEY PROPOSALS, UNIQUE PROMOTIONS OR REVISED DAILY ROLES WILL BRING FAST RESULTS. PAY CLOSE ATTENTION TO TEAM OBJECTIVES OR ASSIGNED DUTIES. CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-JAN. 20). SUBTLE SOCIAL POLITICS OR HIDDEN DISAGREEMENTS BETWEEN FRIENDS MAY INCREASE GROUP TENSIONS. ALTHOUGH PRIVATE INFORMATION

HAS PREVIOUSLY BEEN REVEALED, DON'T OFFER AN OPINION. AQUARIUS (JAN. 21-FEB. 19). QUIET ROMANTIC REFLECTION IS ACCENTED. EXPECT A WAVE OF INWARD THOUGHT AND SUBTLE SOCIAL DOUBT TO ARRIVE. NO SERIOUS OR LONG-LASTING EFFECTS CAN BE EXPECTED. DO, HOWEVER, REALIZE THAT STRONGLY

DEFINED BOUNDARIES IN LOVE RELATIONSHIPS MAY SOON BE NECESSARY. PISCES (FEB. 20-MARCH 20). LOVED ONES MAY OFFER UNUSUAL OPINIONS OF RECENT SOCIAL EVENTS. WATCH FOR GROUP DYNAMICS, RARE SOCIAL ENCOUNTERS OR UNEXPECTED ROMANTIC CHANGES TO BE A PRIME TOPIC OF DISCUSSION.

IF YOUR BIRTHDAY IS THIS WEEK ... FAMILY RELATIONSHIPS, HOME RESPONSIBILITIES OR PROPERTY MATTERS MAY REQUIRE SPECIAL ATTENTION. EXPECT LOVED ONES TO REQUEST KEY CHANGES IN THE HOME, PROPOSE NEW LIVING ARRANGEMENTS OR PLAN FOR EXTENSIVE RENOVATIONS.
