Ersatz Keeps Germans Happy, Writer Asserts

Horse meat for beef, no eggs, coffee substitutes, butter cards . . . that's the situation in Berlin. And yet, the citizenry appears serene and happy. Such is the observation of Isabella Ziegler '23, foreign correspondent and columnist.

Last September local newspapers carried an item recounting the arrest of Miss Ziegler by Nazis just before the invasion of Sudetenland. She was released after 18 hours, having convinced her jailers that she had no intention of blowing up anything.

Originally a language teacher, trim-figured, reddish-blonde, Miss Ziegler has for the past seven years written for the Richmond News Leader and the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Miss Ziegler was stationed for eight months in central Europe,

In the University, we have, at least, difference of opinion. German universities have been completely Nazified, she said. Being Nazi-educated from the cradle, restraint passes unnoticed.

Much has been made of the claim that the German people are dissatisfied with the way Hitler has managed. Miss Ziegler discounts these reports as wishful thinking.

A New Ohio Union

The old question of a new Ohio Union is with us again. It was raised last week by Harry Sondles in the Student Senate. Let's take a look at the feasibility of new union fund raising plans.

The University's need for other buildings of a strictly educational nature is so great that there is little hope for a new union coming from legislative appropriations for a great many years to come.

The Committee on Urgent University Needs, which gave some study to union proposals, has estimated the cost of such a building at approximately one million dollars. Sondles made two suggestions to the Senate that were designed to raise this sum, or at least part of it, through the students.

Careful study of these suggestions will show that even under the most optimistic estimates of long term student fund raising ability, it would take more than 50 years to raise enough to finance a new building. Ohio State can't wait that long. Some other plan must be resorted to.

An alternative proposal presents itself which would build the new building with borrowed funds. This money would then be repaid over a long period out of profits from the union and student fees assessed for that purpose.

We think such a plan would be unwise. The additional cost of maintaining a larger union coupled with additional costs to pay off bonded indebtedness would necessitate a union fee inconsistent with students' ability to pay. When a new union is built, it should be built with cash on the line.

The only feasible plan of new union fund raising is a campaign such as was conducted to build the Stadium. There will come a time in the history of the University when alumni and other friends of Ohio State will respond to a request to underwrite an adequate Ohio Union.

The time is not yet ripe for such a campaign, but there are two policies which should be followed to insure our being ready for the campaign when the time comes. The first and most important of these is the setting aside of funds sufficient to finance the

Some epicureans seem to be licking their chops since a couple of federal courts handed down decisions outlawing sit-down strikes. What these meat-eaters forget is that labor -like tough pork-has a hard center that can stand a lot of punishment.

What has also slipped their minds is a basic understanding of what is labor's aim and what labor will do to gain necessary ends.

Any labor leader will rightly claim that his union strives for one or all of the following needs: the right to bargain collectively, wages, decent hours, or a closed shop. And the Supreme Court has recognized these aims as entirely justifiable and within the realm of the Constitution.

As for tactics, the right to strike is still one of the guarantees that any popular government considers basic. In fact when a dictator marches in, one of his first moves is to strip the labor unions of this power.

During the labor renaissance of 1937 the sit-downs were used not because labor wanted to destroy private ownership, but as a tactical measure to organize the mass production industries. And even the conductor of "Right Turn" will have to admit it was successful. You see, when workers sit down on their jobs it isn't quite ethical to club them because the clubs might miss and break machinery. An important sidelight was that local "law and order" officials couldn't "protect the general public" because the sitdowner was merely taking time out for union identification. Violence could not be claimed.

A lower federal court now holds that the sit-down is illegal. So what? The sit-downs were only a temporary measure. They were used in the same way that a pitcher tosses a change of pace. The batter looks for a fast one and breaks his back on a floater. The employers looked for a picket line outside the plant and found a Town Hall inside. It was quite democratic, to say the least.

Today labor has reached the stage of maturity where squeeze plays don't have to be relied upon. There's enough stuff in the labor movement-and there will be more when the whole movement unites-to rely upon a show of strength in channels still called legitimate.

Nope, the employers who see in the recent decisions a chance to permanently break the back of organized labor will be sadly disap-pointed. We're afraid that labor progress, like sex, is here to stay.

promotion of a big fund raising venture.

The second is continued enlargement of the present Union as rapidly as funds will. permit. These additions should be so planned that they could be incorporated into the new union when it comes. The facilities for carrying out both of these policies are inherent in present financing provided careful planning is adhered to.

The percentage of the student activities fee which has been alloted to the Union in the past has been sufficient to operate it and build up a small yearly surplus. Improvements such as the new lounge have been financed out of this surplus. This percentage was cut drastically during recent years. We recommend restoring the cuts in order that enlargement of the present union may be hastened.

Long term planning should be used to set a rather definite date for a new union campaign. If this were done, remodeling of the present building could be stopped soon enough to permit building up a surplus sufficient to finance the campaign.

This is the general policy that has been followed in the past. It is a wise one. It should be continued. Meanwhile continued agitation from students pointing out the need for a new building and questioning ways and means to achieve it will and should continue.

Quotable Quotes . . .

"As it seems to me there is room for a clearer realization on the part of the public that football is not a trade, a profession, or a mimic war game in which you must win, no matter how. It is a good American game. It has done a vast service in keeping America alert, young, just, and good natured. I believe that the game can go on as a clean wholesome part of a college course and I hope that it will go on in that way with good fun and good will in it."

tria by Germany. A formal declaration of a state of hostilities is not what starts a war. War is a fact. It is not something that is begun or ended by the signing of a scrap of paper. The new, modern, streamlined version of power politics has cut away such preliminary moves as a formul ultimatum and declaration of war.

While Germany and Italy are ostensibly at peace with the rest of Europe they are fighting a more successful war than the Central Powers did in the early days of the first world war. Since the armies of the Rome-Berlin axis have been on the march they have occupied nearly 500,000 square miles in Europe and Africa and have brought under their domination practically 30,000,000 people, while losing little more than a corporal's guard in men. Ludendorf or Hindenburg would have died happy if they could have come close to anything like this.

The last five years in Europe have proven that economic warfare, which used to be considered only as an adjunct to military measures, when coupled with the threat of force, is just as devastating and just as liable to bring a nation to its knees as a long campaign. This form of warfare has other advantages in that it is infinitely less expensive and less wracking on the civilian population of the nations using it.

It is with the threat of force and economic pressure that Germany and Italy have been waging a successful war on the rest of Europe. The only real show of force was in Abyssinia while Czechoslovakia, Austria, Memel and Albania all capitulated without any nation formally going to war. It is well for the United States to think of this when amending the present neutrality act. For in these times any act that isn't truly neutral or that calls one nation an aggressor is de facto a declaration of war. And the day its provisions go into effect the na-tions discriminated against will act accordingly. This is how modern wars start and are fought, and such a question as when will the next war start is purely academic.

That long-standing question of whether college football is superior to pro football or vice versa will come closer to being settled this summer than ever before when the New York Giants battle the Eastern All Stars in the annual charity game held in New York.

All stars versus professionals have not meant a thing in the way of settling this dispute in the past for the college stars who play in these games are not typically representative of the collegiate game.

The best way to settle this argument would be to pit one top shape for the season's inaugural of the best college teams against one of the superior pro elevens. This is impossible to do for the college authorities would never permit one of their teams to play against a pro team in a game.

However, the Eastern All Stars this year will have 10 of the 11 regulars from Pitt's great team of 1938 playing for them and they will be coached by Jock Sutherland, who recently resigned his post as mentor of the Panthers. This situation will provide practically the same setup as if Pitt were playing the Giants. The only differences will be in the eleventh member of the starting team and in the substitutes who will be chosen from other star graduates of colleges in the East.

This game really will be something to watch and should help settle the debate between backers of both college and pro football. It is very rare that so many members of a great team graduate at the same time and can be pitted together like the Sprunger, Dave Dugan, Gordon Mc-Pitt boys this year.

Baseballers Off to Good Start ...

By whipping the Ohio U. Bobcats, 10-6, in their initial game since the spring training trip, the Buck baseballers made an impressive start to their 1939 season. Fritz Mackey did not hold out any hopes for his boys playing so well against the strong Bobcats since they have not had any practice to speak of in the past two weeks. The Bobcats have just returned from a highly successful spring trip themselves and were supposed to be in top shape.

When Michigan State brings its crack nine to Columbus for a two game series with the Scarlet on Friday and Saturday, the local fans will get a chance to see one of the best teams to have ever worn the Scarlet colors if advance notices mean anything.

The battles with the Spartans will be the final tuneup clashes of the year for the Bucks who will launch their stiff Big Ten schedule in a two-game series with Michigan here the following week end.

This is baseball's centennial year and Mackey is looking forward to his first season as baseball coach here as one which will do both the University and the game some good. His primary interest is to bring a Conference title to Ohio State this year and his chances of succeeding are not too remote.

With a few breaks, the team can go to town. It has pitching, hitting and fielding. Mark Kilmer, one of last year's mainstays, has been kept away from practicing so far this year because of a flu attack, but it is hoped that he will regain his strength and get back in uniform soon. With Mark in top shape to aid John Dagenhard on the mound, the Buck pitching is second to none in the Big Ten Conference.

The closest thing yet to a game between a college team and a professional squad.

Mr. Staley suggested that the present tendency to departmentalize camps and to hire specialists should be reversed in favor of better and greater versatility in the teaching of fundamentals. For example, he said, "A nature specialist could make better use of his subject if he knew children as well. A camp staff should not only take every precaution to safeguard the camper's health but should be able to teach him the how and why of such measures."
