Mailbox solicitation still getting no response

By Meghan Eisnaugle Lantern staff writer

recycled paper 119th year, No. 106

Although the companies responsible for sending solicitations to the work mailboxes of Ohio State employees admit they obtain the addresses from "list brokers," students, faculty and staff still cannot get a straight answer as to who is giving out their personal information to marketing agencies.

One OSU graduate student decided to take action against the solicitors who were sending mail to his work mailbox on campus, instead of tossing the "junk mail" in the panies, he told them how offended he was about the solicitations he had received at work, citing it was highly inappropriate to be mailed a solicitation for Playboy in a professional environment.

Joseph Sawdy, a graduate student in animal science who holds a research appointment at OSU, contacted three different companies he had received solicitations from.

"It's embarrassing to me when the only thing in my mailbox is a Playboy solicitation, and I know that the office's secretary or students sorted the mail," Sawdy said. He said his character could be judged because of this.

Sawdy said he was concerned with how the marketers had gained his work address since he has never used it. The address is published only on the OSU Web site. A spokeswoman for First National Bank of Omaha — who identified herself as "Lisa" said they purchase compiled listings from marketing companies.

"It's embarrassing to me when the only thing in my mailbox is a Playboy solicitation."

> -Joseph Sawdy Graduate student in animal science

"The lists are compiled of different people... who might have subscribed to a newspaper, magazine or a phone book," Lisa said. However, Sawdy maintains the company was not giving him the answer he needed because they could not have obtained his work address from any other marketers.

"I do not use my work address anywhere," Sawdy said. His personal magazines and newspaper are sent to his home address.

Sawdy searched for an answer from Citibank as to how they obtained his work address, but he was continually 'stonewalled" by customer service.

An account supervisor for Citibank, South Dakota, said they receive mailing lists from outside agencies just like other companies do. In response to his complaint about the company's marketing practices, Playboy emailed him saying they could not tell him where the list came from.

"Supervisors and service associates know exactly where the names come from," Sawdy Sawdy, who has worked in catalog sales in the past, would not settle for that answer and e-mailed them again. Instead of sending him a direct answer, Playboy only sent him an apology and told him his name was removed.

Playboy did not wish to comment for this Though various marketers or "list brokers" could obtain the mailing information of students and staff from OSU's Web site, Sawdy said he has a hard time believing that marketers take the time to search for the information via the Internet.

If individuals want their information removed from the solicitation lists, they should call each solicitor, or contact the Direct Marketing Association at www.thedma.org.

Congressional staff members were given the privilege of wearing the white coat usually reserved for those in the medical profession yesterday after-

In a mock ceremony, Washington-based legislative aides from eight of Ohio's congressional offices and one Senate office were given the coats as part of Project Medical Education, a program designed by the American Association of Medical Colleges to increase the federal government's understanding of medical education.

The white coat ceremony is only a small part of the two-day program.

We are putting them through the entire medical education process," said Jerry Friedman, legislative liaison for Ohio State's medical center. Hopefully they will gain understanding regarding the dynamics of economics in the health care envi-

PME was officially launched at Duke University's medical center in 1999, and 17 states are now represented in the program. OSU is the first university in Ohio to implement a PME program.

Educating policy makers on what medical schools and teaching hospitals do - teach, research, patient care, serving the uninsured — and how they do it leads to a better understanding of the complex system required to train the nation's physicians and the critical role of federal funding," said Julie Gay, administrative director for PME.

"Managed care pressures on reimbursements, cuts in federal, state and local programs, as well as increasing regulatory requirements come at the same time that the public's expectations of health care are on the rise. The public wants high-quality care and high-technology solutions," Gay said Only one of the aides participating in PME has a medical background, Friedman said. "This is one of the few ways political science or economics majors can really understand medicine,"

Each aide was assigned "personalities" - a description of what kind of students they were and what their financial obligations were. "We will show them the choices students have to make in relation to their debt," Friedman said. "Being assigned an identity is a great idea because it enables you to say, 'Here is an example of someone who has been through this,' and relate that to yourself," said Shiloh Reiher, legislative aide for Rep. Deborah Pryce, R-Ohio.

Reiher said the experience will be a helpful tool for the legislative aides to take back to Washington, and the program will set a positive precedent for the future.

Students call for decrease in GECs

By Jill Goodwin Lantern staff writer

Many students consider graduating in four years from Ohio State a nearly impossible task. A new proposal lowering the general education curriculum requirements may make that goal easier to attain.

Undergraduate Student Government is proposing the required number of GEC credits be lowered from 190 to 180 credit hours for the Bachelor of Arts degree.

"With tuition on the rise, graduating on time is becoming more and more of a necessity," said Melissa Koch, vice president of USG.

The organization said students seeking the degree will receive an education equal to what students have now without the additional credits. By reviewing the curriculum, they are hoping to improve the academic program. Discontinuing classes — like university college will allow room for more focused courses that are specific to life, said

"I don't think (President William "Brit") Kirwan or (Ed Ray) the Provost would let the quality of education go down, regardless," Koch

Furuhashi said OSU should provide a "universe of knowledge," saying tuition should be lowered and not the quality of education students' receive.

"It depends on the degree," said Chris Jensen, an undecided freshman. "People studying medicine or engineering might need those classes, but a lot of it can be learned on

Mark Finet, a senior in computer engineering, agreed that GECs were important, but he said he did not believe students would suffer from Videotaping last spring's off-campus riots proved to be a helpful educational tool for the Columbus Division of Police.'

During major problems such as riots, dealing with arsonists or crowd control, about four or five photographers accompany the police with hand-held video cameras.

"The videotapes assure legal behavior. We can look back and use the tapes as evidence whenever needed," Smith said.

Sgt. Tim McVey said the videotapes are a helpful way to see exactly what happens.

"With each situation we can review the footage and determine what the crowd activity was like and how we responded," McVey said. "We can get a sense of what to do and what not to do."

Different photographers are assigned to different situations depending on who is working the shifts. However, the photographers are not treated any differently than the police officers at

"During a riot, if rocks and bottles are thrown at the police, the photograhers receive the same treatment," McVey said.

Smith said some of the photographers are undercover, so it is not always easy to tell if the guy with the camera is an officer or a member of the general public.

Dustin Growick, a senior in communications, was at the riot on Norwich Avenue last spring. He said he saw people videotaping and could not distinguish whether they were police or not.

"I think it's a really good idea that the police use video cameras during the riots," Growick said. "The worst thing that can happen for the police is for them to realize they handled a situation in the wrong way. Next time that problem arises they can be

Nobel Prize winner speaks on agriculture

Fighter in battle against worldwide hunger says challenges still on horizon

A Nobel laureate gave a special lecture at the Fawcett Center auditorium yesterday on the future of global agriculture.

Norman E. Borlaug, the father of the Green Revolution that saved tens of millions from starvation around the world, lectured on the prospects for world agriculture in the Borlaug showed overhead projections displaying agricultural statistics including land use, world food supply, fertilizer consumption and crop production.

Borlaug then touched on the Green Revolution and on the state of agriculture in Asia

The Green Revolution was the process of employing agricultural science to develop modern techniques for Third World countries. It began in Mexico with the quiet wheat revolution in the late 1950s, Borlaug said.

South Asian countries have achieved considerable successes in cereal production especially in wheat — but also in rice, he

"The region at present is a net exporter of wheat and rice," Borlaug said.

China has been Asia's greatest food success story, not only because of its enormous productivity but because of its success in equally distributing food items to poor segments of the population, Borlaug said.

"China's agricultural and rural development successes have greatly facilitated its rapid industrial and urban development,"

He said despite the successes of smallholder Asian farmers in applying Green Revolution technologies to triple cereal productions since 1961, the battle to ensure food security for millions of poor people is far from

"Huge stocks of grain have accumulated in India and China, yet in India hundreds of millions go hungry for lack of purchasing power to buy food, and China continues to make great strides to eliminate hunger," Bor-

Food production in sub-Saharan Africa remains in crisis.

'No Green Revolution has occurred here," Borlaug said. "High rates of population growth and little application of improved agricultural technology have resulted in serious food deficits and deteriorating nutrition, especially among the rural poor.

Borlaug said there have been signs that smallholder food production is beginning to improve in sub-Saharan Africa, but recovery is still fragile.

Borlaug also described the challenges agriculture faces in the 21st century. He said the world population will increase from 6 billion people to at least 7.6 billion people by the year 2020.

"It is likely that the demand for cereals, which account for 70 percent of our food supply, will increase by 40 to 50 percent," Borlaug said. "Animal feed use, driven by rising meat and milk demand, will account for 35 percent of the increased demand for cereals between 1997 and 2020." Besides overpopulation, some of the other challenges Borlaug mentioned were dwindling land resources and increasing water Borlaug was born on a farm near Cresco, Iowa, in 1914.

He attended the University of Minnesota, where he received a bachelor's degree in forestry in 1937, a master's degree in forest pathology in 1940 and a doctorate in plant pathology and genetics in 1942.

In 1944, he was employed as a geneticist and plant pathologist for Cooperative Wheat Research and Production Program in Mexico.

During the next 20 years, he developed a high-yielding, short-strawed, disease-resistant wheat used by six Latin American countries, six countries in the Near and Middle East, and several countries in Africa.

He was the recipient of the 1970 Nobel Peace Prize for launching the Green Revolution. He is now a distinguished professor of International Agriculture at Texas A&M University.

Borlaug will be speaking today at 1:30 p.m. at the Fisher Auditorium on the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center campus in Wooster.

Grad students plead for better compensation

Adequate compensation, comprehensive health insurance coverage and standardized contracts are benefits graduate students are requesting from the university.

President William "Brit" Kirwan has identified faculty and staff compensation as the university's top priority. However, some feel that graduate compensation should not be

According to J. Briggs Cormier, president of the Council of Graduate Students, some graduate students are undercompensated for their labor, even though certain positions have higher market value than others. It is difficult to live comfortably for students receiving the minimum stipend of $900 per month, he said.

'After taxes, a graduate associate takes home around $800. Subtract the $70 per month that we pay for individual coverage in the student health insurance program and a single GA with no dependents has a little over $700 per month to pay for rent, food, car, books, school supplies and living expenses.

CGS has been advocating on behalf of GAs on several issues including health care coverage and options, the level of the minimum stipend and the workloads of graduate students.

It is also calling for a standardized contract for all GAs and the development of an employee handbook which would include university and departmental policies.

The Graduate Employees and Students Organization echoes CGS's concerns about comprehensive health insurance coverage for graduate students, but sees collective bargaining as an alternative way of achieving adequate benefits from the university

GESO strongly believes extending health insurance coverage to all graduate students will improve their material well-being and ensure OSU does not fall behind other benchmark institutions in attracting graduate students, said Alistair Fraser, a doctoral student in geography and GESO supporter.

"Universities aiming to attract graduate students need to consider this issue carefully and ensure they are in the best position to attract topclass talent," Fraser said. "Financial concerns obviously rate highly among potential graduates and so the quicker the university addresses these issues the better."

GESO may face considerable obstacles in its fight to improve graduate compensation.

According to Susan L. Huntington, dean of the graduate school, GA appointments are not acknowledged by the university as employees because their work is viewed as part of their overall training and professional development, and state law must be changed in order to be truly

"I completely sympathize with the issues GESO are raising," Huntington said. "My sincere hope is that the university can work with the students to resolve concerns and find ways to address issues that arise in Huntington identified possible resolutions, such as raising stipends for GAs on the lower end, increasing scholarships without increasing workloads, providing some settlingin and moving costs for students, extending stipends to cover summer months and encouraging students to take advantage of work-study opportunities in their academic area.

Graduate students have made some gains in achieving a higher level of health insurance coverage and compensation from the universi-

The university has approved a $15-per-month partial subsidization of health insurance that is slated to increase to $30 next year and to $50 the following year. The Board of Trustees has also set the minimum stipend for GAs at $900 a month and has issued a $10 raise for all GAs.

Daniel Sedmak, vice dean for medical education said, "The number of people who want to be physicians is declining. We are losing the best and brightest to other careers."

One PME objective is to show the legislature how much academic medical centers have suffered from federal government cuts, Sedmak said.

We also want to teach them what an academic medical center is. Academic medical centers are only 6 or 7 percent of all hospitals, but that small percentage has the unique mission of training all medical students," Sedmak said.

"We hope this program is just the beginning. This is really about developing relationships with the legislature," Friedman Saddle and Sirloin Club will sponsor the 88th Little International tomorrow at the Ohio State Horse Arena, 3658 Kays Ave., near Sawmill Road in Dublin. Preliminary rounds begin at 8 a.m.

Any OSU student can participate in this showmanship competition of beef cattle, sheep, hogs, horses, dairy cattle and guys and gals sheep lead. The competition also includes corned beef and ham cure contests.

It is not necessary to have an agricultural background to participate in either the experienced or inexperienced divisions, said Chad Endsley, a junior in agribusiness and applied economics. Endsley is cochairman of the event with Chris Lutmer, a senior in agricultural construction systems management. The will gain knowledge in determining my field of study." About 200 OSU students are exposed to the livestock industry through training, washing, hair clipping and preparing the animal for the showmanship competition. Each student has one month to accomplish these tasks.

Sara Leonard, a junior in human development and family science, said she goes to the barn five days a week as part of the Equine Behavior and Farrier Science class. In class, she teaches Cassie, her filly, show-

"Not only does she need to learn the fundamentals of showmanship, but she also needs to form a bond of trust," Leonard said. "A lot of time is spent talking to her and grooming. I want her to feel comfortable and learn to trust me in unfamiliar situations."

"We work on having her get used to people and noises, such as clapping," Leonard said. "I practice each day as if I am competing so that Cassie will be familiar with the competition standards. I even wear my hat so that she will adjust to these differences.

Participants are responsible for grooming and preparing the animal for display. The day of Little International, Leonard will arrive at the horse barn at 6 a.m. to finish last-minute grooming.

Little International also sponsors the guys and gals sheep lead contest that supports the wool industry. The sheep lead allows participants to model wool clothing while leading a sheep around the arena, said Mikal Nolan, a sophomore in agribusiness and applied economics and sheep lead chairwoman. The 20 participants are judged on their garments, which are made of at least 60 percent wool fiber.

"Showmen sew or purchase their outfits and can also dress the sheep to match," Nolan said. "The goal is to show off the product that sheep provide."

The top showmen of the preliminary divisions advance to the finals. The winner of each species competes for the Steeb Showmanship Award.

"The finalist of each species returns to the show ring where they show in all categories," Endsley said. "The award goes to the best showman in all species. It is the most prestigious showmanship award in the Little

Tax form flaw can hurt taxpayers

At the beginning of every tax season, the State of Ohio sends tax forms to make the filing process easier. The TeleFile form has a major flaw that will hurt taxpayers who qualify for the new tuition deduction.

Local media reported taxpayers can claim $2,500 for themselves or their dependent for the first two years of post-secondary education. Some Ohio taxpayers received the shorter version of the TeleFile form instead of the regular IT-1040 tax booklets. The information for the deduction is not found in the smaller version but is found on the IT-1040 cover.

The deduction could affect 300,000 Ohio students and taxpayers can save up to $148. The mistake will also cost the state $23.8 million in revenues. Taxpayers are able to save up to $5,000 per student for two years, but the refunds cannot be applied toward scholarships and other tax free-sources.

TeleFile, which started in 1996, allows taxpayers to file their taxes over the phone.

Knowledge helps students at tax time

Tax time can be confusing for students if they do not know what to do when they file.

Here are some tax tips given by Dee Yonek, a supervisor at H & R Block

Students employed as servers in restaurants or bars must claim tip income.

Tip income is noted on the W-2 forms, and if it is not, a form titled 4139 must be filled out. This form allows tip wages to pay in social security and Medicare.

Yonek said the biggest rush in filing refunds has passed, and it can take anywhere from two to four weeks for a person to receive their refunds.

Unemployment filings on the rise

According to the U.S. Department of Labor, the number of unemployment filings rose from 373,000 to 383,000 last week.

In fact, it may already be over, private economists said yesterday, based on various upbeat reports.

The Conference Board reported that its Index of Leading Economic Indicators, a key gauge of future activity, shot up 0.6 percent in January, its fourth consecutive monthly increase.

While the leading index was flashing signals of a rebound, another report yesterday showed that that last year's slowdown may not have been as severe as first believed.

The Commerce Department reported that the nation's trade deficit narrowed by 11.4 percent in December to $25.3 billion, its best showing since September.

This unexpectedly large improvement sent economists scurrying to upwardly revise their estimates for overall economic activity in the fourth

Parents opt to use prepaid tuition plan

As the cost of higher education continues to rise, parents are turning to other options to help finance the education of their children.

About 529 college savings plans have been the answer to parents' problems.

In an article CNN/Money Web site, the prepaid plan allows parents to buy education contracts or units at today's prices to be used for tuition in the future.

These plans are considered to be a no-risk investment that has an effective rate of return.

Prepaid plans are sponsored by states and are to be used for public universities in the given

Frostburn helps students chill

Tonight students will have the opportunity to go where few campus activities have taken them before — into the wee hours of the Frostburn, a dance targeted toward residents in the north campus residence halls, will provide students with substance-free entertainment until 4 a.m. tomorrow. Frostburn's intention is to "provide the students on campus with an alternative to going off campus" to party and drink, said Steve Lynch, a sophomore in English and one of the dance's organizers.

"A lot of people are surprised that we're having six hours of music," Lynch said.

Because that is too long for one DJ to spin, Frostburn will have three — James "DJ Degauss" Tasse, Dan "DJ Miracle" Polito and

Kyle "DJ Cimmerdyne" Anderson. The DJs will play trance, house, UK hard house, high NRG trance, two-step, old-skool rave trax and disco house, according to a flyer distributed to north campus residents

Lynch, a resident adviser in Barrett House, said Tasse, a freshman in psychology, came up with the idea for Frostburn.

"James is one of my residents. He spun for a (Houck-Barrett-Halloran) complex-wide program and said how cool it would be to have an all-night dance," Lynch said.

Tasse said he looks forward to the dance because it may enhance students' interest in raves.

"I haven't seen a lot in terms of what you might call 'rave culture' in Columbus," he said. Tasse said although many people associate raves with drug use, he sees drugs as something which have put a damper on the scene since people who are taking drugs do not get as involved with the music or dancing. Matt Couch, assistant director of the Ohio Union, said he approves of Frostburn's 4 a.m. ending time and hopes to see more activities take place later at night. "I'd be all for more of that happening because I know that students don't go to bed at 1 a.m. on Fridays and Saturdays,"

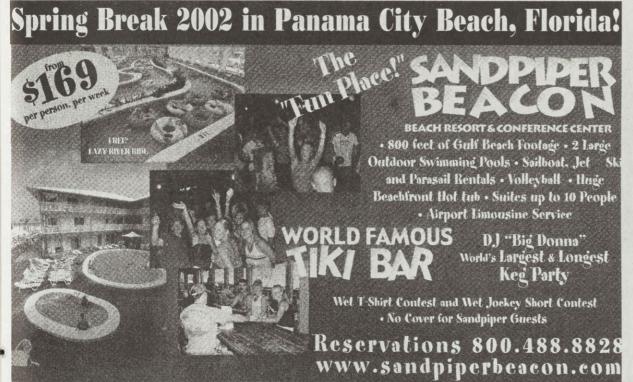

One possible problem with having more late-night programs is funding, Couch said. Ohio State has about $80,000 to $100,000 available for its Student Affairs' Late Night Programming Initiative, also known as Moonlight Madness. Couch estimated that West Virginia University, which has an extensive late-night program, spends about $800,000 per year on such pro-

The money provided to fund Moonlight Madness is handled by the Student Wellness Center. Frostburn was awarded a grant to help pay for decorations, sound equipment rental and promotional materials. The dance is also being funded through grants from several north campus hall councils and the Residence Hall Advisory Council.

Lynch said he is optimistic about high attendance.

"In the past week there's been a lot more people than I expected expressing interest," he said.

Frostburn is tonight from 10 p.m. to 4 a.m. in the Royer Activity Center. Admission is free, and pizza and bottled water will be provided.

Big Brother?

Censorship causes more problems

In an effort to help fight the war against terrorism, the Pentagon and President Bush are working to assert even more control over public opinion. In other words, the U.S. government has decided to blatantly advocate its efforts to mislead the public by creating a new executive-level office, the Office of Strategic Influence, to promote propaganda.

At the center of the office's agenda is a proposal to increase the dissemination of news, be it true or false, to the press in hopes to bolster support for America's ever expanding new "war." Yes, you read that correctly. Bush and his administration officials want to fill the world with fake news that helps

When questioned about this, the OSI claimed it would only be giving the false information to foreign news organizations. But as Americans, we should all be skeptical. We, the American people, and members of the foreign public, are being played. We are being lied to by our own country, the country that boasts being "for the people." Americans, as well as those in foreign lands, should be outraged.

The government has been lying to its people for many years, but to actually admit to doing so creates even more problems.

This is a direct violation of trust and a slap in the face to all people. Obviously, the government no longer feels the need to try and hide its propaganda. Instead, the U.S. government is almost bragging about how it is going to control the minds of all people.

Also, if the government is so willing to admit to lying to people in foreign lands, how long will it be until they bring the lies home to Americans? How are journalists supposed to handle such falsifications? Journalists have been struggling for years to establish rapport and relationships with government sources. It is their job to also get all of the facts and to get them right. Sometimes this is a difficult task, and when an error does occur, the American public, along with the government, are quick to point out the mistake.

Now with the United States and Bush admitting to blatantly lying, it will be impossible to determine between the truth and the lies.

The Bush administration is worried it is losing support overseas, especially Muslims who believe the United States is hostile toward Islam. How does lying gain support and diminish hostility?

Lying will only serve to make Muslims distrust the United States even more and the Bush administration will lose additional overseas support. More importantly, it will squander the government's credibility and decrease the reliability of U.S. public information officers.

Tough Tactics Foreign policy must remain strict

President Bush embarked on an ambitious six-day, three-nation tour of East Asian capitals earlier this week. Although the trip was scheduled last year, a crucial part of the diplomatic journey focused on Bush's desire to clear up some of the fallout from the hard-line foreign policy rhetoric during his State of the Union address.

The visit, long overdue, underscores the fragility of the political and economic situation in Northeast Asia. It gives Bush's Asian advisers a chance to repair the damage they caused last year to U.S. relations with South Korea and strengthen ties with a region that has been overshadowed by the war in Afghanistan.

The world anxiously waited to see how Bush would address statements made about North Korea, Iran and Iraq — all three allied with

Back home we also followed closely Bush's word choice to see whether or not he would maintain his tough-love approach outside of the safety of his home country. Whether or not one agrees with the validity of the president's decision to lump Iraq, Iran and North Korea into the new "axis of evil," the need for Bush to stand behind his earlier assertions is strong.

Without doing so, the point of singling out these countries will be moot. Bush kicked off his trip with an expectedly cordial stop in Japan where he praised Japanese economic reforms as well as the support the country has offered to the United State in its war against terrorism.

All eyes were on Bush when he reached his second destination: Seol South Korea. The two countries have consistently employed drastically different approaches in dealing with the North. President Kim Dae Jung has dedicated his presidency to building diplomatic links with the North. Bush, on the other hand, has taken a decidedly harsher stance and last month lumped North Korea with Iraq and Iran as part of an "axis of evil" against whose advanced weapons Washington might one day feel compelled to use pre-emptive military force.

Bush ended his trip with a final stop in Beijing, where U.S. officials had hoped they would be able to use the visit to announce they had reached a deal limiting Chinese sales of weapons technology to Iraq and other countries hostile to the United States.

All in all, much of the week-long journey yielded little more than a few dozen strategic photo-ops, but the significance of the journey should not be entirely overlooked.

The president did not shy away from addressing his concerns, which for better or worse — can be interpreted as a re-affirmation of his committment to tougher U.S. foreign policy initiatives. We hope this will be the catalyst for future productive dialogues with world leaders.

Writers' rights now important than ever

n a recent magazine article, I read about a woman named Vanessa Leggett. She is a crime novelist in Houston who was investigating the murder of a woman killed by her millionaire husband's brother. Researching this murder-for-hire-case for her next book, she conducted many interviews, including talking to the brother who was charged with the murder.

This sparked the interest of a Houston prosecuting attorney who thought Leggett's notes would be pertinent to the case of the murdered woman. The attorney demanded her notes, and Leggett refused to give them over. The controversy began

The prosecuting attorney stated Leggett is not entitled to keep her notes confidential because she is not an "official" journalist. Leggett thought otherwise, believing she had the right to qualified privilege, or the privilege to keep confidential sources. The state did not agree, and Leggett was forced to serve 168 days in jail for contempt.

This story mimics hundreds of stories of writers struggling to maintain their First Amendment rights. But Leggett is the first writer to ever serve that long of a jail sentence all in the name of protecting her sources, maintaining her integrity and believing in her story. She destroyed a barrier often blocking the path of writers and created a new voice rallying for her rights of freedom of the press

Writers and journalists are under constant scrutiny. The public demands to be informed, but takes for granted the people providing them that service. Too many times, readers don't realize the importance of their truth-seeking and the dependence writers have on the protection from the First Amendment. ment at marin.12@osu.edu.

Now after Sept. 11 and the wave of crackdowns on violence and crime, what is the value of the First Amendment? It seems like the government is pushing for writers to publish in a right-wing way. # Looking back: My life, times here at Ohio State can vividly recall my first time experiencing Ohio State Lfrom a student's perspective. Growing up in central Ohio, I had always heard stories and had been to many football games with my father, but had never experienced OSU first hand. The time came on Martin Luther King, Jr. weekend in

I was sitting in the Columbus airport, waiting for a flight to Washington, when it was canceled because of snow. The weather was terrible and I probably should have shacked up somewhere near the airport, but decided to come back to campus for the night.

When I reached OSU, I arrived at Steeb Hall to meet my friend David, with whom I was staying.

remember the excitement that took hold as I realized the raw energy and life of the people around me. Everyone was happy and having the times of their lives.

This excitement only increased as I met my friend and got settled into his room on the seventh floor. He then proceeded to introduce me to everyone on his floor, the people all making a great impression on

It was all so new and different from any experience that I had before and probably solidified my decision to attend OSU.

Our school has many positives and negatives. Anyone who has stood in the Fees and Deposits line at the beginning of the quarter or had trouble scheduling knows about the negatives, but there are many positives that no one really to tell you my reasons for coming

Now OSU is becoming a different place. The South Campus that used to be alive with people is now silent and empty. There will be no more times at Sloopy's with my friends, and our escapades in Steeb Hall have long been forgotten.

Soon we will graduate and be forced to leave this place to greet the world. But I will take comfort in the fact that no matter where I go, I will always be facing the center of the Oval, and OSU will remain close to my heart.

Matt Claypool is a senior in history and wants to say 'Hi' to his friends and those he might have met recently. He is rooting for U.S. ice hockey to win a gold medal and can be reached at claypool.19@osu.edu.

Lantern ad gives wrong idea

Contrary to what the vast majority of those in the sciences — and public health in particular — believe, "safe sex" is not a myth but a broad range of strategies for minimizing the risk of HIV and sexually transmitted disease that is extremely effective.

The full-page ad in The Lantern on Feb. 14 suggests otherwise. In public health, and health education in particular, our discipline has struggled for acceptance as a science. Unlike what is in this ad, effective health education strategies are based on well-researched theoretical models and previous studies demonstrating effectiveness.

It is not standard practice to preach or encourage a target population to follow one view of one type of religion as the solution to a complex physical and emotional health issue. This ad, in fact, is a prime example of poor and effectively useless public health promotion practice, and therefore should not be seen as such by your readers, regardless of the scientific credentials of those whose names are included.

While those placing the ad are certainly free to advocate their religious beliefs, the listing of the signees' university association implies some endorsement in their official capacity at Ohio State, a bizarre and questionable breach of separation of church and state. While some of us in public health may have strong and varying religious and spiritual beliefs, we also understand that a large part of our effectiveness in our work is based on being free from judgment and preaching, never making conformity with our own religious views the goal of an educational effort.

As people who respect the diversity of these beliefs among our students, many who are Jewish, Muslim, Hindu or other non-Christian religions, we find offensive the idea that Jesus (and therefore Christianity) is the only solution to lack of intimacy in people's lives.

Editorial overlooks all the facts: Condoning Byrd execution wrong What an appalling lack of snitch. Hamilton County prose-

editorial discernment. Your shallow and facile "Our View" on the John Byrd execution may have been one of the lamest pieces I've seen occupying that Did anyone even bother reviewing the facts of this case, or did you just talk it out for five or 10 minutes?

You claim the "state acted wisely" and that "(no) courts ... found grounds to overturn Byrd's conviction." Well, if a whole bunch of judges and lawyers agree, justice must be the end result, right?

The reality is the appeals process is less about facts and more about procedure and technicalities. The state's attorneys exploited this to suppress any of the evidence of Byrd's possible innocence.

Here are some facts: No hard evidence implicates Byrd. The dying victim, a convenience store clerk, made a phone call and described two men, neither of whom could have been Byrd. These two turned out to be Bobby Pottinger and John Brew-

Pottinger was questioned but not charged. Brewer, whose footprint was found on the store counter, later repeatedly confessed to the killing. However, judges reviewing the case found him to be not credible.

Never mind that the initial conviction of Byrd was based on the testimony of less-than-credible Ronald Armstead, who was well known as a jailhouse cutors deny they cut a deal with Armstead, but after testifying against Byrd, the state's lawyers mysteriously reversed their vehement opposition to paroling this felon. Governor Bob Taft denied

Byrd clemency, saying he failed to demonstrate remorse. Why should he do that if he is, in fact, innocent? Even knowing his life was at stake, Byrd reportedly turned down a plea bargain for parole in 10 years, a nearly unthinkable action for someone who was actually guilty.

Regardless of how you feel about capital punishment, this case is stamped with "reasonable doubt" in screaming neon letters, a fact that didn't bother The Lantern editors. A man is (perhaps) wrongly killed by the state and you did-n't even take up all of the available column space. You merely cobbled together a simplistic defense of the execution, consisting mostly of a disgustingly slavish appeal to authority. While you're at it, why not roll over on the tuition increase issue? Heck, a bunch of lawyers and administrators all believe it's in your best interest - it must be right.

Just go back to running your little paper and let the "grownups" make all the important decisions. Way to go.

Accomplishing what seemed impossible for a small group of people on a big campus, former OSU students began a pre-professional company for actors as undergraduates and now employ students as guest performers in productions.

Ensemble Actor's Theatre has been creating theater productions for nearly two years. The company members are OSU graduates Chris Dickman, Greg Maier and Creighton James, as well as senior theater major, Laura Gale. In addition, the company has a permanent stage manager, Katy A. Hite, who is also an OSU gradu-

The members started working together in class while at OSU.

"We decided to produce a show on our own and from there we decided to slate a season of shows," Gale said.

Gale said the goal of the company is to learn about the process of theater and to develop the actors' process through experimentation and not all production.

While working on their first atmosphere outside of the class-scene, the members will go out and script," Gale said.

This production alters the endfessional theater company.

"We wanted to explore things like a student production in the classroom, and focus on the process versus only the artistic. aspects," Gale said.

"Beyond the fact Ensemble Actor's Theatre is a group of people who are coming together with common ideas to create theater they believe in, it also gives me the opportunity to try out different acting techniques," James said.

Ensemble Actor's Theatre work on their projects in a workshop

The group focuses on improvisation and use context of situation and its unpredictability instead of sticking to just the script.

"I can do different things on every show and every role to try and discover what best works for me," James said. "I keep what did work and toss out what doesn't."

The company conducts sightspecific rehearsals. "If you've seen strange people taking notes and acting around campus, it was us,'

"If we can, we will rehearse in the action of circumstance to get a greater authenticity," Gale said. The way we work distinguishes us from other companies."

Gale's "Romeo & Juliet: Happily Ever After," is the company's sixth project, although some members have developed many pieces outside the company. This piece is Gale's thesis project for the OSU theater department's honors program. Arts and Sciences is funding Gale to develop the play, produce it and then write a thesis.

"Laura has written very much from her life and I feel I am very much a part of it," James said. "It should have been easier to act since some of the events somewhat happened in our lives. However, it's challenging to put your life on

Students from three Greek organizations at Ohio State will present a mock wedding as part of the United Black World Month celebration at 7 p.m. in the Ohio

The theme of the wedding is "An Interracial Marriage." The play centers on the relationship between the families of the bride and groom. The bride is black and the groom is white. The bride's family disapproves of the marriage because the groom is of a lower social class than the bride, and the. groom's family is unhappy with his decision to marry someone outside

"It's almost like a real wedding," said Desirae Satchell, a senior in English and the president of the Sigma Gamma Rho chapter. Satchell compares the play to a soap opera because of the many relationships that exist between members of the wedding party.

Although the families have very different beliefs regarding the marriage, by the end of the play both sides have worked out their differences and celebrate together at the reception.

The play is being presented by the OSU chapters of Sigma Gamma Rho, Delta Chi and Sigma Phi Epsilon. Members of the organizations, as well as OSU students

,act in the play, which features a lot of 'ad-libbing,' Satchell said.

Audience members are being invited to participate in the wedding as well, Satchell said. Upon entering the theater, guests will be greeted by an usher who will explain the premise of the play and the different roles played by each family. Guests will be seated either on the bride or groom's side. Actors playing family members will be planted in the audience and prompt the audience to participate in the ceremony.

Organizers of the play hope to improve the relationship between the black and white communities

"OSU preaches diversity," said charity of their choice.

Ryan Frazee, a junior in political science and the president of the Delta Chi chapter. Frazee said the play is a step in the right direction to improving race relations here at

The play also provides an opportunity for the different greek organizations to work together, Satchell said.

A reception will follow the ceremony at the Hale Black Cultural

Admission to the play is free, but a $2 donation is encouraged. Satchell said the money collected will be divided among the fraternities and sorority, with each organization donating its share to the Advertisement: To participate in a Scientific Study

Compensation of $50.00 to $150.00

Requirements:

- 18 years of age or older
- In good health, including body weight
- Not taking any prescribed medications
- Willing to undergo testing for Hepatitis and HIV (free)
- No history of allergies to medications
- · Not pregnant nor plan to become pregnant (during the study).

This study will involve the harvesting of a small amount of bone marrow from normal volunteers for research purposes. This is a one-time procedure that will take approximately 30 minutes to complete. No follow-up is required.

'Fire and Ice' lead Buckeye attack

By Jamie Mossbarger Lantern sports writer

To some people, "Fire and Ice" may sound like the name of a heavy metal band, but to Ohio State women's basketball coach Beth Burns, it refers to her two seniors, Tomeka Brown and Lauren Shenk

Both will be honored Sunday in their last home game against Wisconsin.

"I kind of call them Fire and Ice because they are exact opposites personality-wise, and that's wonderful because they are very compatible and they need what the other can do," Burns said. "They have shown great maturity this year. More than anything, they have been the most dependable because they are always here."

Shenk also felt the nicknames were a good fit, saying, "I think Fire and Ice kind of explains it. She is loud and rambunctious and really gets emotional outwardly, and I am more inner-cool and calm. Brown and Shenk, both Ohio natives, did not know a lot about one another until they signed with OSU and played together on a summer AAU team, and eventually formed a bond.

"We have had a special kind of relationship because we have been here for four years and really are kind of the ones who survived our class," Shenk said.

The day after Burns was hired in 1997, she began her recruiting process. Brown, a Columbus resident, graduated from Marion-Franklin High School and, as a junior, was the first person Burns scouted. Because of the guidelines restricting coaches from calling juniors, Burns wrote Brown a letter and asked her to make a visit to OSU.

The fact that Brown was from Columbus and could have the opportunity to play in front of her friends and family played a role in her decision to wear the scarlet and gray, but Burns herself had more of an influence on her

"Her personality kind of struck me," Brown said. "Coach is really energetic and outgoing and its easy to get attached to people who are that way. I do think I had my mind made up then (to go elsewhere) but when I met her face-to-face it kind of threw me for a loop. I just basically prayed about it and said I am going to follow my heart and my heart led me here."

Shenk's decision to come to OSU was also centered around her family. Graduating from Minster High School, she knew that as a Buckeye her parents would be able to attend most of her games. That was very important to her.

"Lauren was a tremendous scorer in high school, great student, great person," Burns said. "And I thought they would balance each other very well."

Shenk will graduate spring quarter, while Brown will graduate this summer. Shenk plans to go onto medical school after obtaining a degree in molecular genetics and Brown hopes to continue to play basketball.

"I think you reflect back and first of all you can't believe four years is over," Shenk said. "First when I signed, and second when I came here, I was pretty much a clueless freshmen. Just to see how I have grown as a person and a player, it's really kind of amazing."

Both players will be honored in Sunday's game, but that's not the only reason the showdown between the Buck-eyes (12-14, 7-8 Big Ten) and the Badgers (17-8, 8-6 Big Ten) is an important game for OSU. The Big Ten Tournament begins Thursday and the team wants some momentum heading into the conference tourney.
"I just hope to win," Brown said. "As a team now we are trying to get a lot of things accomplished and as hard as we've worked, I think we deserve to win this game."

Schott gets ready to rumble

Lantern sports writer

Columbus native Michael "Cold Blood" Clark will be defending his IBA junior welterweight title tonight in a 12-round main event against Vivian Harris at 7:30 p.m. at the Schottenstein Center.

Clark vs. Harris is the main event of a boxing card for "ESPN's Friday Night Fights" that also features former OSU women's basketball player Gigi Jackson vs. the No. 1 ranked woman heavyweight, Vonda Ward. OSU student Kelli Cofer will also fight on the card that features a total of nine bouts.

The 5-foot, 7-inch Clark (27-1-0, 13 KO's) will have a formidable challenge in the much taller Harris (19-

"His height might be a factor, but I'm used to fighting taller guys because I'm only 5-foot-7," Clark said. Clark added that being a good offensive and defensive fighter will help him combat the height difference. This will be the fourth title match for Clark. His only loss was to undefeated WBO champion Arturo Grigorian in his hometown of Oberhausen, Germany.

The winner of the Clark vs. Harris match will likely get a shot against world champion Disobelys Hur-The second-to-last fight will feature Mansfield, Ohio native Tony Hanshaw against Dana Rucker. Hanshaw 13-0-0 (10 KO's) said he was going to let his fists do the talking against the brash Rucker.

"I'm coming to win, period," Rucker said. "I know it's in his hometown, but I'm going to be victorious. We've been waiting two months and now I'm here. There are going to be two dogs going in that ring. Only one will be victorious. He can't deal with these moves. Rucker talks a splendid game and has a reputation as a tough, straight-ahead brawler, which should lead to an interesting fight.

Jackson vs. Ward is tabbed as the most intriguing match of the night by promoter Larry McCartney.

Both women display athletic talent. Ward played basketball for the Tennessee Volunteers and Jackson played on the Buckeyes Final Four team with Katie Smith in 1993. Ward, at 6-foot 5-inches, will battle the smaller Jackson, at 5-foot 10-inches. According to local insiders, Jackson in her professional debut is expected to overwhelm Ward with her power. Jackson said she is excited to have to opportunity to come back and fight at OSU. "I like the chance to fight in front of my friends, family and the OSU community," Jackson said. "This will be my first chance to shed some blood and sweat at the Schottenstein Center, since we played at St.

John Arena when I was in school." Tickets are only $10 for students with BuckIDs and may be purchased at the Schottenstein Center box p.m. tomorrow on CBS The Ohio State men's basketball team is finally back in the friendly confines of the Schottenstein Center after a long four-game road trip. Despite Purdue's poor record, the Buckeyes can't afford to have a let-down. The last time the Buckeyes came out sluggish at home, it almost cost them against Northwestern. The Boilermakers do have Willie Deane, who comes out of the gate shooting. If OSU shoots well, the game should not be in doubt — if they don't, it could get dicey.

Friday night hoops Marquette at Cincinnati, 7 p.m. tonight on ESPN

There's a quality NCAA basketball game on a Friday night and the tournament hasn't even started. Cincinnati needs to win this game if they want to secure the final No. 1 seed in the Big Dance. But it would be hard to give UC a higher seed than Marquette if the Golden Eagles can get the win and pull off the sweep of the Bearcats. Also, Steve Logan is a treat to watch. He scored 41 points last Friday night and loves to play on national TV.

Going for gold Olympic hockey gold medal match, 2:30 p.m. Sunday on NBC

Olympic hockey has proven to be far more entertaining than the NHL. Wider rinks and the lack of disrupted holding has made this a spotlight for creativity and athleticism. This proves that the NHL doesn't need the fights every 10 minutes to be a good product.

Columbus roots for a team from Michigan Indiana at Michigan

State, noon Sunday on CBS The Buckeyes need the Hoosiers to lose one of their final two road games if they want to share or win the Big Ten title. If Indiana wins, OSU will have to rely on Illinois to beat the Hoosiers next week to have a chance to share the Big Ten title with Indiana. Translation — Go Green! Izzone, by Mississippi State. The Buckeyes play four games this weekend, two against UAB and two against familiar foe Mississippi

The highly regarded Bulldogs have played in the Columbus regional two of the past three years.

This weekend marks the first of three straight road trips for OSU, and a string of 10 games to begin the season away from Bill Davis Stadi-

Coach Bob Todd said his defending Big Ten champs are anxious to get the season started.

"We're going there to win ballgames," Todd said. "But, we're also going to have to experiment a little bit so that we make sure when the Big Ten season rolls around, we have the right people in the right place." Todd has led the Buckeyes to seven of the school's 14 Big Ten conference titles, and two championships over the last three seasons.

Offense doesn't seem to be a huge concern for the Buckeyes heading into the 2002 campaign. "I don't think there's any doubt in anybody's mind that we're going to be able to hit the ball and put up runs," junior Nick Swisher said. Swisher, an All-Big Ten selection can this season, looks forward to the trip south. "Coming out here in the cold weather, it's a lot different than being down south," Swisher said. "Guys in the south have been coming outside since November and December. We Swisher described the chaotic setting that will be occurring behind the outfield wall, a wall he'll shadow, starting the season as the Buckeyes fence," Swisher said. "There's spots in the outfield that have been bought probably five to 10 years in advance.

"They bring in flat-beds with coolers because they don't have an alcohol rule back there. Everybody goes out there and they cook-out, and sometimes it gets so bad that the smoke from all the grills covers the field," Swisher said.

With half of the starting pitching rotation back from last year, the Buckeyes will rely on senior and fouryear starter E.J. Laratta in the opener today against UAB: Sophomore Josh Newman, who earned All-American status as a freshman, will start tomorrow against MSU. Junior Nate Smith, who returns from injury last season, will throw the second game of the doubleheader tonight against UAB. Freshman Scott Lewis will throw the wrap-up of the four-game series

"My junior and senior year of high school I played infield, so it's not too big of a change," Snavely said. "It's a new overhaul, a new look. We just have to work out the bugs, and I think if we start clicking, we can be a real talented infield."
