Welcome Week set to greet students

By David Cross Lantern staff writer

With the hustle and bustle of university orientation over, campus eyes have turned to another Buckeye tradition -Welcome Week.

Traditionally the campus' official kick off for fall quarter, Welcome Week begins Sept. 19, the same day the estimated 10,000 students move into campus dorms.

'One of our primary goals is to ease the transition on to campus," said Mabel Freeman, assistant vice president of undergraduate admissions.

Welcome Week consists of a series of activities and events for incoming students. The events that take place during the week are based on the nine pillars of campus life and are designed by the student affairs department to broaden students' collegiate experience. The pillars represent ideals such as academics, athletics and cultural diversity. Students are encouraged to balance the different pillars in their lives to create the most enjoyable and rewarding college experience.

Students who live in the campus area also get to sample Welcome Week prior to the arrival of the rest of the students. Before the majority of students move into the dorms, the Hillel staff and students will be walking campus handing out free honey sticks symbolizing the event's name: "Sweet New Year to Go."

While the events focus on incoming freshman, the events are arranged to welcome all new students to OSU.

"It's not just a Welcome Week for just first-year, firstquarter freshmen. It's an event that should welcome the entire OSU community, graduate students, faculty and staff," said Brent Turner, Welcome Week graduate chair.

With more than 100 events scheduled, Welcome Week is also geared toward the community. A charity run will be open to community participa-

In addition to the events, a new logo for students affairs will be debuted during Welcome Week. The new logo has been kept under lock and key and will be unveiled closer to the festivities.

inconvenient," she said.

According to the department of physical facilities, 71 construction projects have begun since last August. Of those projects, 36 are currently being worked on.

"It's not just the summer — there has been lots of construction for the last few years," Miller said.

Miller said this was a concern for the First Year Experience program.

'We were talking to (the department of physical facilities) for months prior to orientation," she said. "Our staff did a lot of planning in anticipation for problems. We talk(ed) with them about maintaining a positive attitude about the construction and focusing on the eventual results."

It worked.

'I think (the construction) is okay because they are trying to improve the campus," said Mike Tumolo, a transfer sophomore from Syracuse, N.Y.

It is a view that many incoming students agreed with, if not begrudgingly.

There's construction everywhere," said Ari Henderson, an incoming fresharound, and I see a giant around."

not complaining. "It looks disorganized, but once they get it done it'll look nice," he said. Michael Chia, a freshman in pre-medicine, said the construction is a "big mess" but good for the university. For Jennifer Osborn, assistant director of the First Year Experience program, the lack of complaints are because incoming students realize the construction will benefit them in the long run.

"They will see the new buildings," she said.

Osborn said students who graduate before construction is finished might not have time to see the benefits. An unfortunate case, she said, led to the Save the Oval campaign in spring — something the First Year Experience program has not forgotten.

On another sign by the Oval, students read: "Clearly This Image Was Not In The View Book.'

"It depends on how you look at it," Osborn said. 'Unfortunate or fortunate, man in computer science and construction is one of those engineering. "I'm walking things we have to work gogical theories of how writing should be taught were documented very well for the first time," he said. "What we are running into now is the fact that the text books have not changed that much in their pedagogical theories.

He said the problem with the pedagogical theory is that most people who have produced textbooks in the past have assumed that the way a person writes affects the way that person thinks.

"And it's impossible to write the way you think, and the tools — the technology that you use - to write has a direct impact on how you can write," he said. "It breaks down to a standard argument between linear and associative thinking."

Chambley said after he graduates he is thinking about returning to his home state of Georgia and teaching at a college

"Also, I have some real estate down there, and they need attention," he said.

He said the University of Georgia has several satelite campuses that look appealing to him.

I want to teach at a smaller university," he said. Chambley teaches first and second year writing. He said he has taught an excellent group of students this quarter. A student in one of his classes had high praise for Chambley.

"When he teaches you know he cares about what he's contributing to the world," said Joanna Paldino, a sophomore in English and one of Chambley's students. "He realizes that we're the people that are going to be running the country in a few years. He just doesn't push through a class, he teaches you how to think for yourself."

Paldino said she will carry a part of Chambley with her.

'He says: 'Whenever you hear the terms fact, truth, or history, start asking questions," she said. "And I think I'll carry that for the rest of my life.

Lewis Ulman, an associate professor of English, said one of Chambley's best qualities is his dedication to teaching.

"I sees teaching at the heart of the university and finds his greatest professional satisfaction in the classroom," he said.

Chambley said a group of people who he respects are public school teachers.

'I admire them because they do it," he said. "I just had a conversation with a someone who has chosen to go into public school teaching as opposed to college teaching. And my reaction was, 'I don't think I could do it."

He said being a public school teacher takes a great deal of strength, patience and motivation.

'Not that I don't have those qualities," he said. "I just think it takes a certain combination of those qualities, and I think teaching in the public school system is very taxing.

"I think that anyone who can do it and do it well deserves our respect."

New school year, new freshman class

By Beth Knieriemen Lantern staff writer

Ready to begin a new part of their lives in Columbus, this year's freshman class will be arriving in a few weeks. Each new student completes an orientation session and schedules before classes begin on Sept. 22.

John Dickhaut from the Office of Academic Affairs said that most students will find problems in scheduling at some point.

"People at all levels get closed out of classes," It is a possibility that incoming freshmen will have more trouble than others, he said. This is the strongest, brightest class so far," she said, "There are more students that were in the top 10 or top 25 of their graduating class and have stronger ACT scores than ever before.'

Freeman said 85 percent of the new freshman class is from Ohio.

"We have stronger groups of students applying to come to Ohio State each year," Freeman said. "It is competitive."

Kerry denounces Bush; veterans remain split

By Nedra Pickler Associated Press

date John Kerry criticized Presitroops, calling it a hastily announced plan that raises more doubts about U.S. intentions than it answers.

"Nobody wants to bring troops home more than those of us who have fought in foreign wars," Kerry said. "But it needs to be done at the right time and in a sensible way. This is not that time or that way."

bring home troops from Cold War-era bases in Europe and Asia before an earlier session of the same gathering of 15,000 members of the Veterans of Forpresident said the repositioning of forces would help save money on maintaining bases overseas.

Kerry singled out Bush's plan to cut 12,000 of the 37,000 U.S. troops in South Korea.

Why are we withdrawing unilaterally 12,000 troops from the Korean Peninsula at the very time we are negotiating with North Korea — a country that really has nuclear weapons?"

Kerry quoted Sen. John McCain, R-- Ariz., as saying that North Korea is probably now more dangerous than since the end of the Korean War in 1953.

This is clearly the wrong signal to send at the wrong time,

Kerry argued that Bush's policy would dangerously reduce forces at a time when the nation is fighting the al Qaida terrorist network in 60 countries across the globe.

Kerry's campaign cited a three-month-old Congressional Budget Office report that said pulling back troops from overseas would produce at best only small improvements in the United States' ability to respond to far-flung conflicts. The report also said a large reduction of the overseas U.S. military presence Bush announced his plan to overseas could cost $7 billion up front, although annual savings could be more than $1 billion.

Pentagon officials who spoke on the condition of anonymity this week said the budget study eign Wars organization. They said the amount of savings for the Bush plan could not be calculated until officials determine precisely which units will return to the United States, what domestic bases they will use and what overseas installations will be closed.

Pentagon officials also said plans to trim U.S. troops in South Korea would not give North Korea an advantage. Miliadvances in U.S. military firepower and a stronger South be more military power in the south with fewer soldiers.

Kerry received a polite if not overwhelmingly positive reaction from the VFW. Large portions of the crowd applauded with each promise to protect veterans' benefits and with many points he made about Iraq and terrorism. But there was a clear divide, with scores of veterans sittings with their arms folded while others clapped. One man heckled Kerry — calling him a liar — as VFW sergeants at arms admonished him.

"I'll say it myself — he's a liar," said John Ranson of Fort Thomas, Ky., a 57-year-old Vietnam War veteran who sat a few feet away from the heckler. He said Kerry has not supported U.S. troops as senator or as a Vietnam veteran who protested

But there was no shortage of Kerry supporters, including some who voted for Bush in 2000.

'He's got a mess overseas," said Dale Hall, 49, of Franklin Park, Ill. "I stand behind the troops, of course, but he's not done a good job."

With voters focused on the war on terror, the VFW convention was the perfect backdrop tary officials have said that for both candidates to tout their war plans. The convention was set in Ohio, a top battleground Korean military mean there can state, with a live audience targeted by both campaigns.

Cats receiving royal treatment at new cafe

NEW YORK (AP) - Dressed in a tuxedo, Simba sat at the front of one of Manhattan's newest dining establishments and nodded at people who greeted him.

Then he yawned, began to roll on the floor and licked his paws. That is acceptable behavior at the Meow Mix Cafe, a new eatery designed especially for cats and their human owners.

Simba, an eight-month-old kitten, was joined by about two dozen other tabbies, Persians and Burmese for a feast at Tuesday's grand opening of the cafe. The establishment is owned by the Meow Mix Company, a Secaucus, N.J.-based cat food maker.

"Why not take your cat out for dinner?" asked Simba's owner, Leah Thompson. "There's always things for dogs, but never cats."

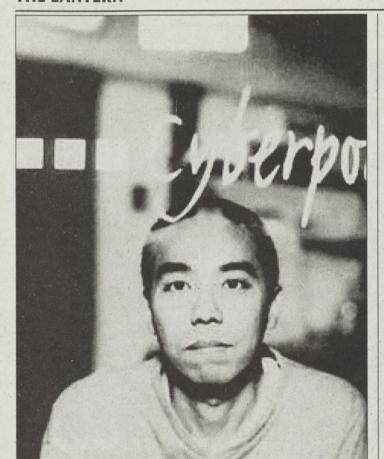

The midtown restaurant serves Meow Mix packets for its feline customers with corresponding dishes to satisfy human palates. "Deep Sea Delight" mackerel for cats is paired with tuna rolls for cat owners; "Upstream Dream" salmon for felines corresponds with mini crab cakes for humans.

Meow Mix president and CEO Richard Thompson said the feline-friendly restaurant has two main rules: no dogs and no catnip, which must be checked at the door. "Our goal is to keep cats happy," Thompson said. "The idea is that you can bring them and start socializing them."

Rockers jam to loud, harsh beats; noise wins over music

By Eric Atienza Lantern arts writer

Tuesday was a night of electronic noise-infused rock at the Wexner Center for the Arts as the Black Dice came to town with Animal Collective in tow.

Animal Collective opened the show with an eerie sound fit for a science fiction movie soundtrack. As is standard for the genre, the band tended to bury its melodies beneath a cacophony of effects and synthesized sounds. The effects created a cavernous sound that filled the performance space, and the band used heavy echo and reverb along with an everincreasing amount of volume to create a gigantic aural presence.

Animal Collective's new songs included heavy bass drumming influenced by African pop music, giving their songs an intenselydriving beat.

- tising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee. The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the
- advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- 10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- 11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication.
- 12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise-
- 13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed
- 14. A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication. 15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.
