THE STUDENT VOICE OF OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

New bio building is facing objections

Area residents worried about possible dangers with hazardous agents

> By Benjamin Hickey Lantern staff writer

The new bioresearch facility, scheduled for construction in Fred Beekman Park, has come under scrutiny before groundbreaking activities have taken place.
Some residents of Upper Arlington and university employees have joined together to form the Coalition for Environmental and Biohazard Safety in order to voice their objections to the Level 3 bioresearch facility.

The lab, which will be constructed adjacent to Pressey Hall, has been a matter of concern for the group for over a year.

"We have contacted the board of trustees and the president," said Jan Grosso, a resident of Upper Arlington and member of the coalition. "We have written letters to different papers."

The Center for Disease Control established the rating system for labs based on four tiered hazard levels. A Level 3 rating indicates the lab will be capable of housing airborne agents that can be potentially lethal

Fires, fights overwhelm Athens PD

ATHENS (AP) - Rioting partiers at an annual Halloween bash started fights, lit couches on fire and threw bottles at officers in what police called "the worst event to date."

City and campus police arrested or ticketed nearly 100 people overnight Saturday and responded to nearly 20 fights and at least five fires, authorities said.

A man's leg was slashed so badly in one fight that it might require amputation, police said. A rape on Ohio University property was also reported, and officers in investigated several thefts.

"This event was far and away the worst event to date," Chief Rick Mayer said in a statement. "It stretched and broke the ability of the department to respond to the needs of the pub-

The man stabbed was one of two men attacked when they tried to stop another man from assaulting a woman, police said. The second man coming to the woman's aid was stabbed repeatedly in the chest, and remained in stable condition yesterday with a collapsed lung, police said. An officer was assaulted when he arrived at the fight; he was treated at a hospital and released.

Police-said they caught two suspects in the stabbing later in Nelsonville. No names or other details were released.

Kucinich campaign stops at OSU

John Lennon's song "Imagine" accompanied U.S. Representative Dennis Kucinich's entrance into the lecture hall. He smiled and shook hands as he made his way to the front of the room. He was then presented with an Ohio State T-shirt that he immediately put on.

Without further delay, Kucinich, a presidential hopeful, spoke to a crowd of 235 on Saturday in Evans Lab. The 25-minute speech highlighted his stance on the United States' presence in Iraq, his opposition to NAFTA and the World Trade Organization and his plan to make education a top priority.

Throughout the speech Kucinich encouraged the audience, mostly college-aged men and women, to challenge conventional political thought and to recognize that their generation can and will make a difference.

"You're the ones we've been waiting for, " he said. "I think you're ready for it.'

Besides the nuclear reactor, researchers use a gamma irradiator at the lab

This device uses cobalt-60 to emit gamma radiation," Kauffman said. "Researchers sometimes want to irradiate items with only gamma radiation, and not the neutrons emitted by the nuclear reactor.'

An example is food irradiated in experiments by OSU's Food Science and Technology. The experiments are used to extend the shelf life of the food, Kauffman said.

The gamma radiation kills bacteria which shortens the shelf life of the food," he said.

But Kauffman said the gamma irradiator is very safe. The items irradiated in the removed and handled right after the experiment because they don't give off radiation like said. things that have been irradiated in the nuclear reactor.

The nuclear reactor lab was about 25 or 30 labs operated by universities, Kauffman said. "There aren't many nuclear reactor labs at universities. OSU is one of the few that has one."

The nuclear reactor is very small. In comparison to a commercial nuclear reactor which has a rating of 500 to 1,000 megawatts, OSU's nuclear reactor only generates up to one-half a megawatt.

The nuclear reactor uses uranium-235 as its fuel for reactions.

'The uranium is actually on loan from the Department of Energy," Kauffman said. "The uranium is theirs. We are actually just borrowing it."

The catalyst for the reactions is a source, made up of plutonium and beryllium, placed near the core, which emits neutrons. The neutrons react with the uranium-235 and create more radioactive waste.' neutrons.

Everyone who handles the radioactive material wears a badge which measures radioactivity. These badges are sent in monthly and tested to determine the level of exposure, if any, Peterson said.

The Nuclear Reactor Lab has several safety devices, such as sensors which measure the level of radioactivity around the lab and controls which keep the reactor at safe levels.

The applications for radioactive material are numerous, Peterson said.

Bio-medical research using radioactive material is very big, he said. "The use of radioactive material in cancer research and veterinary science is big as well.

Subir Nag, chief of Brachytherapy at the James Cancer Hospital and Research Institute, uses radioactive material to treat cancer patients.

Brachytherapy is a procedure in which the radiation is given directly to the tumor site putting the radioactive material (in the form of seeds or pellets) inside or close to the tumor.

'There are several places that we use this procedure — the cervix, endometrium, lung, prostate, head and neck," Nag Brachytherapy is less commonly used to treat tumors of the esophagus, eye, liver, brain, bladder, breast, rectum, pancreas, or in children. The side effects of brachytherapy are generally minimal because only a small area receives the radiation, Nag said. The advantage is that little radiation goes to healthy tissues around the tumor.

Besides cancer treatment, brachytherapy can be used following coronary angioplasty. Coronary angioplasty is a medical procedure in which narrowed arteries that supply blood to the heart muscle are widened. This allows for improved flow of blood through these arteries to the heart, without the need for open-heart

We use the radioactive implants to prevent the regeneration of the arterial lining," Nag said. "Following angioplasty the walls of the arteries begin to replicate, which could cause narrowing of the artery. The radioactive implants prevent the cells in the lining from replicating."

Easy re-election

Mayor needs competition

Voters will have no trouble picking Columbus' next mayor tomorrow with only one name to choose from on the ballot. Incumbent mayor Michael B. Coleman runs unopposed for re-election, practically guaranteeing him another four-year reign as the city's chief executive

His only challenger is Kenneth Besser, the Republican write-in candidate. Besser is an attorney and self-described "soccer dad" with six kids. Diverging a little from the Coleman agenda, he said a mayor should focus more on Columbus Public Schools and putting more uniformed police officers on the street. The Franklin Country Republican Party does not endorse him, and he stands no chance of winning.

Columbus is the 15th largest city in the nation with a population of more than 700,000 people. Out of this massive community, nobody wanted to step up to the election plate and try to take on the Coleman

Something is wrong with this picture. Coleman may have great plans for the city, and already has seen some of his goals through, but does that mean nobody can do better? The Republican party should have at least attempted to form an equitable candidate to keep the race an actual race. Most parties want to have the majority in the state and represent the highest positions in government. In the Columbus mayoral race, Coleman is the Democrats' trump card.

Not to say he hasn't earned it. Since Coleman took office in 1999, he has started several initiatives that have spurred Columbus to be a better place. He created the Neighborhood Pride Cleanup program, encouraging people to build homes in certain central city areas; he has invested $100 million into renovating Downtown over the next 10 years, and he improved the internal make-up of the Columbus Division of Police.

But nobody's perfect. Aside from Columbus having its highest murder rate in recent history, the budget isn't looking much better. Coleman may face having to cut city jobs and services, raising the income tax or adding a garbage collection fee to save Columbus' monetary dilemma.

With Coleman facing no competition, his ideas are the only ones being heard. In a growing city, citizens should want the opportunity to choose from a diverse range of candidates and platforms. Coleman may have the city's best interests in mind, but he isn't the only one who can make a difference. All someone has to do

Senate salaries

Budget doesn't support raise

Just about a week ago, the U.S. Senate voted 60-34 in favor of giving its members a pay raise in 2004. In order to get the raise, senators voted to reject a proposal exempting themselves from a cost-of-living increase that will go in effect next year for all civilian federal workers and military personnel.

By accepting the measure, the Senate mimicked earlier actions by the House. The increase, which would be the fifth straight year members of Congress see their paychecks rise, will increase their salaries from $154,700

On face value alone, the increase is only 2.2 percent. Congress, however, has played a large role in the record budget deficit. Some of its members have become more vocal in criticizing policies that have contributed to record deficit. So, how can members of Congress truly justify next year's increase?

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, tried his best when interviewed by The Associated Press.

"This is not a pay raise," he said. "This is an increase that's required by law."

Of course, Congress writes the laws and wrote this automatic raise into law to avoid trying to justify its annual raises. The civil servant cost-of-living raise was part of a $90 billion spending bill for the Transportation and Treasury departments. Most federal workers and military personnel are in line for raises, but so are Congress, the vice president and Supreme Court justices. Under the new provision, members get the pay increase automatically unless they vote to exempt themselves, which hasn't been done in the last five

While members of Congress may be able to justify their raise through the laws on the books, they will have a harder time justifying it to the millions of Americans out of work. Wisconsin Democrat Russ Feingold, who has continually opposed the congressional raises and has even returned anything more than his senate salary when his term began, was one of the few to go out on a limb, asking "How can Congress give itself a $3,400 pay raise while nearly 9 million people are unemployed and 2 million have been out of work more than half a year?'

With the economy continuing to stutter, the American populace is looking to the federal government for some assurance that their financial standing will be secure in the future. But how can Congress be taken seriously when they continue to add to their already full pockets?

Voter anger encouraged

f Michael Moore is important, he is important because he is an Lepicenter to which people who largely feel they have no other voice are drawn to en masse.

True, he can be vague (supporting overall a "not Bush" platform for 2004), he can be manipulative (harassing Charlton Heston at his home in "Bowling for Columbine") and he can be ridiculously self-unaware (preaching shamelessly at the Oscars). But he is an angry man.

He is able — through films and books and speeches — to keep alive an anti-Bush anger that has been diluted significantly, as it trickled down from the mass protests in major U.S. cities months ago into Midwestern households and offices filled with news about job loss and the continuous American casualties in

His anger is getting smarter, as he desperately tries to level with average Americans faced with a security crisis under a leader such as Bush who has lied

(George Bush) made a big mistake lying to the people of this country," he said in the East Ballroom of the Ohio Union Thursday afternoon. "People don't like being lied to. It's really no longer about liberal, conservative, Democrat, Republican - average, hard-working middle Americans just don't like being lied to."

He still goes off on an angry tirade or occasional revolutionary rant, saying that every time a young soldier dies in Iraq, the defense-contracted Haliburton should have to slay a mid-level executive. But as was evident in his speech Thursday afternoon, he seems to have realized his more radical styling are impalpable to a large majority of the public his side needs to win over to achieve its goal of removing Bush from the White House.

But the sentiment in the ballroom was a sign it may be possible to rekindle some of the anger that is only rearing its head in venues scattered across the country — in meet-ups for Howard Dean, in suburban sidewalk protests that have not come together in any sort of unity behind any national figure, in pop culture or in Washington.

I am writing in response to R.H. Aly's Opinion piece ("Gov. lacks consistency"). I tried reading it on my drive home from class and almost wrecked my car. It cannot be possible that she truly meant what she said. In her piece she calls Lt. Gen. Boykin an "extremist" for speaking his mind in church and alludes to the idea he shall fired and perhaps imprisoned.

On the other hand, she believes that a guy leaving box cutters (among other things) on a few planes makes him some sort of hero.

Is Aly completely out of her mind? I think she concludes her piece by answering that question herself. She clearly does this when asserting that it is a given that the American public agrees with her. Trust me, they do not.

First off, why should Lt. Gen. Boykin be entitled to less free speech than those protesting the war? It seems that those who are complaining about their rights being infringed upon are quick to demonize others for speaking freely, simply because they are in disagreement.

And lets not forget that this man truly said nothing completely untrue or inflammatory in the first place. Last time I checked it was legal (even for a Lt. Gen) to possess an opinion.

Second, how can anybody think that this guy leaving weapons on planes should be made a hero and set free? It's obvious he may have done a good thing and for the right reasons. He clearly, however, went about it in the wrong way.

That's about the equivalent to applauding a kid for leaving a gun in his classroom simply because he wanted to show the teachers how easy one could evade the school's metal detectors.

You've really got to be kidding us in saying that what he did is not only acceptable, but also inspirational.

I hate to say it, but this article was almost laughable. I'm still not sure whether to write it off as a satire or simply accept that somebody's entire thought process can be so much different

Also, if Aly is right in thinking that most Americans undoubtedly agree with her, is my thinking so far down the spectrum that I'm in the minority on this one? I hate to let Aly answer that because I'm afraid that I'd too be labeled an oday's world is fast. No one takes time to enjoy life, and then they wonder why they're always in a bad mood or feel like they're missing something. The reason for this is simple. People don't try to make every day count.

If something doesn't happen today, it will tomorrow. Something needs done, it can wait. Didn't ask out that girl today; she'll be there tomorrow

Time isn't exactly on our sides, so to make the most out of our lives we should try to live each day to the fullest. This can mean different things for different people, so here are a few guidelines to help us make our days seem just a bit brighter.

Laugh as much as you possibly can. There's always something to laugh at, and nine times out of 10 it's probably yourself. If you have trouble laughing (in which case there may be something seriously wrong with you) just turn on the TV and find a cartoon you used to watch as a kid. It's guaranteed to bring a smile to your face.

Act silly. This kind of falls hand-inhand with laughing. People tend to take themselves way too seriously. Everyone has to act "mature." Everything's got to be business. Nothing makes me feel better than hanging out with my friends acting like we're 13.

Don't care what everyone else thinks of you. If our goal in life is to impress as many people as we can, there would be no sweat pants or karaoke, bed-head would not exist, guys wouldn't go bald, girls wouldn't wear makeup and there definitely wouldn't be such a thing as all you can eat crab legs at a Chinese buffet. Well, maybe eating 100 crab legs is pretty impressive.

Read. People don't read enough. They might flip through the paper or read a few columns in a magazine, but not many people read for fun. Books are a great way to find out what the world used to be like, how we got to where we are today and a great way to get lost in something besides a soap opera or a

Be spontaneous. Don't do everything by the book. Take a few risks in your life and do something you never expected to. If you're stressed out because you don't have any money, fly to Vegas and gamble for a weekend. You might win some but if you don't, you didn't have any money to start with and you still had a great weekend. If you wake up on Wednesday and really don't feel like going to class, take a mental health day. You might miss a quiz or not be able to turn in your homework on time, but you'll feel better.

Help other people as much as possible. Don't worry so much about vourself. Good things happen to good people, so try to help someone with something every day. It doesn't take much to help someone carry their groceries, tutor someone in class who doesn't understand or even open a door for someone. If someone offered to do one of these things for you, a smile might even pop up on your face.

Exercise. There is no better way to relieve stress or take your mind off something than exercising. Whether you run, walk, lift weights or ride a bike, exercising is a great way to get away from everything for an hour or so. And you feel great about yourself when you're finished...until you eat a Big Mac

Learn something new. Doesn't matter what it is. Could be how to change the oil on your car, how to make a grilled cheese sandwich or how many times Al Pacino says the f-word in "Scarface." Just learn something new. Or just watch "Jeopardy."

Let the people around you know you care. You never know what might happen tomorrow, so make sure your friends and family know they're appreciated.

If these suggestions don't appeal toyou, just remember the old saying "Live each day as if it were your last," and I'm sure you'll be fine. Unless sleeping 16 hours a day is a priority for you.

10 vendors in late spring. They were weighed against mandatory criteria, then more selective criteria," LoParo said.

All vendors went through a four-phase evaluation process.

Phase one focused on mandatory requirements, such as experience and ability to satisfy voter capacity. A technical review of prototypes rounded out the second phase. Vendors demonstrated their machines during phase three. The fourth phase evaluated cost proposals. Those vendors emerging from the evaluation process entered into final negotiations and contract terms, LoParo said.

Last month, Blackwell approved four vendors and six machines for consideration by Ohio county election boards, he said. Diebold Elections Systems, Election Systems & Software, Maximus/Hart Intercivic/DFM Associates and Sequoia Voting Systems made the final cut,

"All vendors provide electronic voting devices, but Diebold and ES&S offer precinct-count and optical-scan devices as well," he said.

Sequoia Voting Systems had been removed from the evaluation process because of the excessive cost of their machines, he said. The company filed suit in the Ohio Court of Claims and a lengthy court battle was imminent, LoParosaid.

"Secretary Blackwell wanted to put the voters first so he reached an agreement with them," he said.

LoParo said all outstanding legal issues with Sequoia have been resolved.

"Counties are now free to choose which company they would like to supply them with new voting machines," he said.

The secretary of state estimates about three electronic voting devices, or one precinctcount optical-scan device will be needed at each of Ohio's 11,614 precincts, LoParo said. Thus, cost efficiency became a key point, he said.

"We've negotiated best in the nation prices," LoParo said. "From initial to final bids, we've managed to negotiate about $31 million in statewide

"Under HAVA, these 69 counties would get first priority for election reform funding," he said. "Sixteen counties want to move forward for March implementation and have requested March 2 primary.

Allison Nicolia, director of Fairfield County Board of Elections, said her county would be one of the counties purchasing voting machines next year.

"We've narrowed it down to three vendors: ES&S, Sequoia and Diebold," Nicolia said.

"After the 2004 election, we will sit down and look at the machines," he said.

Franklin County's four-member board will have the final say in what device will replace the older model, Hackett said. With millions of dollars at stake, board members have been warned against accepting gifts from vendors, LoParo said. Nicolia and Hackett both said vendor lobbyists have not been problematic.

"I haven't seen it personally, but I can't speak for other counties," Hackett said. "It helps that we're not buying any machines in Nicolia said she hasn't seen many lobbyists because contracts and specifics have already been determined before reaching the county level.

OSU defeats Penn State, dropping PSU to 0-5 in Big Ten

By Nick Houser Lantern sports writer

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — There may have been some changes in the original cast, but the touring drama known as the Ohio State football team pull out another unbelievable finish Saturday at Penn State. With the gunslinger playing in relief for the scientist, the Buckeyes pulled out a last minute 21-20 victory at Beaver Stadium.

Backup quarterback Scott McMullen found Michael Jenkins for a 5-yard touchdown pass with 1:35 left in the game to pull ahead. McMullen, who was inserted late in the second quarter for injured starter Craig Krenzel, marched OSU down the field in military fashion going 72 yards on 11 plays during the final drive.

"I was pretty confident (entering the final drive) and as I looked into the huddle I could see the rest of the guys were pretty confident we were going to win the game," McMullen said.

The senior went 12-of-17 passing for 112 yards and two touchdowns. His other score was to Jenkins on a 4vard strike to open up the second half.

Penn State nearly answered back in the final minutes, but David Kimball's 60-yard field goal attempt fell just short as time expired.

The game-winner, a jump-and-step fade route run by Jenkins, was called by Krenzel on the sidelines during a PSU time out.

McMullen moved the Buckeyes into enemy territory with a series of passes to Lydell Ross, Ben Hartsock and of bounds leaving two seconds on the clock Jenkins. The offense received a gift from the officials, who ruled Hartsock pulled in a key third-down catch, even though television replays showed otherwise.

That was all OSU needed, as McMullen moved the squad 10 yards away from the end zone on a pair of completions to Santonio Holmes.

"(McMullen's) been here for five years and he knows what it takes," Holmes said. "He knows how to control the game and that's exactly what he did. He got UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — Sulking into State football team had a 10-point deficit looming over its head Saturday.

Before the contest, the Penn State Nittany Lions had only allowed 127.6 yards per game in the air. In eight games, Penn State opponents had only scored six passing touchdowns. OSU compiled 148 yards passing and 153 yards rushing.

"He suggested to (McMullen) that he move Mike (Jenkins) over by the boundary and throw it in the air and let him jump and get it," Tressel said.

The plan worked and put the Buckeyes ahead of the Nittany Lions by one point. That point would be all OSU needed to leave

MELANIE WATKINS

Penn State's pathetic press box

Located a block away from the University Creamery at Penn State sits another pasture. The pasture is known as Beaver Stadium and somehow the Nittany Lions figured out a way to herd journalists like cattle.

On the west side of the stadium, above the stands, sits the press box. But it isn't any press box, it is a place where members of the media and athletic communications follow narrow pathways surrounded by railings to direct them to their seats. Most of the seats have one distinct route.

There are three rows of seating with a step in between each one. For viewing pleasures, The Lantern was put against a wall on the far right in the front row. In order to get to the plastic 1980s chairs, one had to duck in and out of doorways and then through an aisle located about 30 seats away from the assigned location.

Once there, getting out was damn near impossible. With other journalists seated in the respected row, one had to "get skinny" and squeeze through the narrow amount of air allowed between the backs of people and the rail of the row behind.

As I sat there, a gloomy thought rolled over me. What if there were to be a fire in the metal-cast box? With only one path out — pinned against a wall - I quickly realized there was no way I would be able to diligently follow the masses and escape alive. I would be the last one out, if I made it at all. The only other option I had was to plow over the frenzy of men and women scrambling to survive. I could also climb underneath the railing behind me as long as no one was sitting in the seats.

Obstacles to escape didn't stop there. Protruding out of the ground were ceiling beams from the camera deck below. The beams were eight inches above floor level. In a hurry people could surely forget the presence of such nonsensical distractions. A domino effect would occur. and all the Columbus and State College football reporters would lay there reminiscing about their favorite pigskin moments in the final seconds before passing out from smoke inhalation.

Of course the occurrence of such a thing would be breaking news across the country Everyone would want to hear the story from a first-hand eyewitness reporter. But that couldn't happen because all of such would be passed out on the office carpet wishing they had never become fond of sports.

The only available source would be the ABC field broadcasters. But there are only so many of those and definitely not enough to go around the country to report the immediacy of the issue to all those who care. Field photographers would have to take over as the television, radio and newspaper personalities for the day.

And the State College fire marshals would be left shaking their heads as to why they never demanded a more flame-safe

It was such a morbid thought; I had trouble concentrating on the game. Add the fact that some overheated reporter opened all the windows and paint chips were flying everywhere, I was certain I would not escape Happy Valley very happily. Given the quality of the rest of the structure, the paint had to be lead-based.

The only comfort I had was the structure of such a place. The entire outside was made of diecast metal, as well as supports that ran from floor to ceiling. It would be a difficult feat for flames to overtake such material in a hurry. But the working counter tops and carpeted floor would have another agenda. All it would take would be for one of the hundred laptops to ensue in an electrical malfunction to take out all of the press box guts.

Krenzel honored for scoring high in education

OSU quarterback Craig Krenzel was selected as one of 15 college seniors to receive an $18,000 scholarship for graduate work by the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Scholarship Committee.

Krenzel, a molecular genetics major, will be the 19th Buckeye in school history to get the award.

Out of the 15 nominees for the NFFHF scholarship, one honoree will be selected to receive the Vincent Paul Draddy Award, a $7,000 award for graduate studies.

Krenzel will receive his award at a black-tie dinner Dec. 9 at the Waldorf Astoria in New York

Wurtzman first Buckeye to get trophy in regional tournament

Senior Jeremy Wurtzman played up to his No. 1 seed in the Midwest Regional Tournament held in East Wurtzman claimed a total of six victories in the tournament on the way to the title. He faced oppenents from Butler, Illinois and Minnesota.

The trophy was claimed Tuesday when Wurtzman defeated the No. 2 seed Michael Calkins of Illinois. Wurtzman won the final round match 7-6, 4-6, 6-3. He is the first Buckeye to win the Regional title.

The Ohio State men's ice hockey team felt like it had something to prove after losing to unranked non-conference foe Mercyhurst at home Oct. 24.

The Buckeyes indeed proved themselves on Friday and Saturday when they swept visiting Alaska-Fairbanks to maintain their place at the top of the CCHA.

Betz bounced back and slammed the door on Alaska, stopping 41 of the 43 shots he faced on the evening. OSU needed all the saves as it squeaked out on top, 3-2.

The way he was playing tonight, it had a calming effect on me that he was there," Markell said of Betz.

The big goal for the Buckeyes came near the end of the second period. Freshman forward Andrew Schembri grabbed a lob pass from junior defenseman Thomas Welsh just inside the blue line. Schrembi beat one defender and caught the Alaska goalie completely unprepared. It was Schrembi's first career OSU goal and gave the Buckeyes a 2-1 lead.

Penn State was clutch on third downs throughout the game. OSU regularly forced it into a third-and-long situation, only to have Mills convert.

OSU moved into a tie for first place in the Big Ten following Michigan State's 27-20 loss to Michigan. The Buckeyes sit at 8-1 and 4-1 in the Big Ten.

Paterno suffered the first fivegame losing streak of his career and the Nittany Lions fell to 2-7 and 0-5 in the Big Ten.

Penn State needed a big effort from Mills after the running game could barely scratch the nation's top run defense. OSU's defense only allowed 33 yards on 27 carries.

second largest college stadium, it does not appear the institution spent much money to make it that way. The entire place looked like an erector set, and a rusty one at that. It was only another way to contribute to my safety concerns. One of The Lantern staff photographers that came along said, "Yeah, I am pretty sure it didn't cost more than $100,000 to build this place."

He was probably right. And if it did spend more, then the money was probably spent on the turf management. The press box had probably not been revamped since its beginning in 1960. Aside from the floor beams, the walking surface rolled along, literally. There were times when one would all the sudden trip over a hidden hill. It was as if the platform was swelling from adverse weather and aging conditions totally out of its control.

As I wandered around trying to find the spread of food, I found myself lost in a maze, moving past staircases that shook and an elevator that shut its door on anyone who tried to enter the photographer almost got squanched between the frame, and while holding it for him a second time, I almost lost an arm.

The only saving grace for the Nittany Lions was the banquet that lay before what they called "university invited guests." There was salad, rolls, mashed potatoes, turkey, cookies and four different varieties of ice cream made at the aforementioned creamery.

It beat out the normal Ohio State press box food of stadium hot dogs, popcorn and the catered Baja Fresh chicken and steak burritos. Given I am a vegetarian, the Penn State grub satisfied my palate more than the popcorn I had become accustomed to eating.

As the clock wound down on the game, I put the thoughts of the death trap aside and stressed while the final minutes played out. The speakers above my head announced every motion on the field in a brassy fashion. In between calls, the microphone feedback stung my eardrums like acid does the skin.

I relished in the idea that I would escape alive and that the Buckeyes would not have to travel to Happy Valley ever again in my tenure with The Lantern. Along with my reporting comrades, I went to explore the Nittany Lion campus and stepped into the car to head to our hotel room. The shadows of death loomed again as I drove over the rolling pavement, and dense fields of fog obstructed all vision. And yet another chapter of the Penn State death trap began...

Saturday's NYC Marathon. The rapper earned $2 million for charity.

By Celia McGee New York Daily News (KRT)

Are American moviegoers ready for "The Human Stain"?

The 2000 novel by Philip Roth, on which the film is based, angered many with its story of an eminent black classics professor who has spent his grown life passing for white. African-Americans and liberals, in particular, resented the book, which is set against the backdrop of smug political correctness at a small New England

In Robert Benton's film, opening Friday, Anthony Hopkins plays Coleman Silk, the celebrated teacher who is tarred as racist after he refers to two student noshows he's never seen as 'spooks." They're both African-American.

Benton and producer Tom Rosenberg added their own twist on the constant ironies of racial stereotyping.

Hopkins was surprised to be approached about the Coleman Silk part: "I asked if they were sure, and how different I'd need to look." But he was only given contact lenses so his eyes would match the smoldering green gaze of Wentworth Miller, who plays the young Silk.

The producer-rapper decided in September he would run his

Killer to confess to nearly 48 murders

SEATTLE (AP) — This week, a whether slightman with thick glasses, a man Ridgway will who has been married three times and is the father of one child, is to stand before a judge who will ask him at least 48 times how he pleads to separate charges of murder.

Each time, Gary Leon Ridgway will respond "guilty," sources involved with the case have told The Associated Press. When it's over Wednesday, he will have ravines, rivers, more murders on his record than any other serial killer in the nation's history, and a mystery that confounded detectives for two decades will come to a close.

Ridgway, 54, a longtime painter at Kenworth Truck Co., is expected to admit being the Green River Killer, named for the river south of Seattle where the first victims were found.

The plea would spare him the death penalty in King County, instead assuring him life in prison without parole, the sources said. Two of the bodies on the official list of Green River victims were found in Oregon, which has capital punishment, and it is still unclear airports and freewaysinthe 1980s. Of them, investigators officially listed 49 women as probable victims of the Green River trading information for his life.

Ridgway will plead to those.

Ridgway had been a suspect from 1984, when Marie Malvar's boyfriend reported that he last saw her getting into a pickup identified as Ridgway's

But Ridgway told police he didn't know Malvar, and a police investigator in Des Moines, midway between Seattle and Tacoma, who knew him cleared him as a suspect. Later that year, Ridgway contacted the King County Sheriff's Green Rivertask force—ostensibly and another involves a woman to offer information about the case and passed a polygraph test.

Detectives continued to suspect him, however, and in 1987 they searched his house and took a saliva sample. It was 13 years before DNA technology caught up to their suspicions and they could link that sample to DNA taken from the bodies of three of the earliest victims.

Ridgway was arrested Nov. 30, 2001, and later pleaded innocent to seven killings. But facing DNA evidence and the prospect of the death penalty, he began cooperating and

He confessed to 42 of the 49 listed killings, as well as six not on the list, the sources have said. He directed authorities to four sets of previously undiscovered remains.

It turned out that the killings continued long after detectives thought the Green River Killer had stopped, the sources said. The last victim on the official list disappeared in 1984, but one of the cases Ridgway is expected to plead to involves a woman killed in 1990, killed in 1998
