Petition to save Panini nets 2,500 signatures

By Jessica Danter
Lantern staff writer

About 2,500 Ohio State students have voiced their concerns to save Panini Bar & Grille.

Sophomore Troy Doucet and junior Dan Rossi conducted a four day petition on the Oval beginning Nov. 17 to save the Panini building, 1561 N. High St., from purchase by Campus Partners. The property sits among 7.5 acres in south campus that Campus Partners hopes to acquire for its Gateway redevelopment project.

Rossi, an international studies and political science major, said now that the petition is complete, he hopes Panini owners and Campus Partners' developers will discuss the situation.

"Hopefully we caught them early enough to include Panini in the blueprints," Rossi said.

Doucet and Rossi's plans are to present their case to save the bar and grill to: the Undergraduate Student Government, David Williams II, Ohio State vice president for student and urban/community affairs and the Campus Partners Board of Trustees chairman, other Campus Partners leadership and the proposed developers.

Doucet, a business major, said Campus Partners has a goal and will do whatever it takes to obtain what it wants.

"But they are probably willing to make some type of changes to their plans to accommodate what the community wants," Doucet said. "Things like the petition should hopefully make a difference."

Shane Hankins, the undergraduate trustee on Campus Partners' board, said he thinks the petition is

Congress mulls impeachment vs. censure

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton must state clearly that he lied in the Monica Lewinsky affair before the House Judiciary Committee can consider any alternative to impeachment, Republican members said Sunday. But other lawmakers warned not to ignore momentum for the lesser action of censuring the president.

One Republican who has come out against impeachment, Rep. Peter King of New York, predicted that a vote to impeach would fall short in the House and pursuing that course could perpetuate the image that Republicans put the scandal ahead of the nation's legislative needs.

"It's going to make it harder to get our agenda across. We have to show that we can lead, that we can bring an end to this," he said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

But the move to censure was complicated last week by GOP dissatisfaction with what they said were Clinton's evasive answers to 81 questions on the affair presented to him by Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill.

"This censure idea without an admission on the president's part is a political cop-out," committee member Rep. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., told NBC. "I do not want to have an unrepentant perjurer leading the nation into the 21st century."

House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, R-Texas, on CNN's "Late Edition," said, "The Congress and the House have no other option but to vote impeachment or not."

CLINTON

Clinton has a chance to directly confront the committee on Dec. 8 when he or his representatives have been invited to testify.

White House spokesman Jim Kennedy said the White House is still evaluating how to respond to the invitation. Already, he said, "We've made a good faith effort to respond to the questions despite the fact that they were designed more for a partisan purpose than a constitutional one."

One Senate Republican, Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, said Clinton should personally appear to defend himself. "I think he ought to have to answer questions and be subject to examination because the answers that he gave were evasive," he said on "Fox News Sunday." "Let's bring the president in."

After that, the committee would decide whether to recommend articles of impeachment to the full House, which could take up the matter the following week.

CNN: Iraq still trying to build missiles

By The Associated Press

Despite years of claims it has ended all programs to build weapons of mass destruction, Iraq made a bid to acquire prohibited missile technology last May, CNN reported Sunday.

In its program NewsStand, produced with Time magazine, CNN said Iraqi missile experts, escorted by Iraqi secret police, went to the Romanian capital Bucharest to negotiate the purchase of guidance equipment for long-range missiles.

Iraq is required to eliminate its long-range missiles and chemical, biological and nuclear weapons under resolutions by the U.N. Security Council adopted after the 1991 Gulf War that ended Iraq's occupation of Kuwait.

The CNN report quoted unnamed sources and Scott Ritter, an American ex-Marine who resigned as a U.N. arms inspector in August who complained the U.S. government was undermining the search for Iraq's forbidden weapons.

Iraq has insisted since the early 1990s that it has destroyed all its prohibited weapons. Tough U.N. trade sanctions, imposed after Iraq's 1990 invasion of Kuwait, cannot be lifted until U.N. inspectors certify that its weaponry has been destroyed.

According to the program's transcript, the Iraqi purchase in Bucharest was blocked because spy agencies from the United States, Romania and Israel uncovered the potential deal and monitored the Iraqis' two-week visit.

"We had the goods on the Iraqis. ... We caught them red-handed," Ritter told NewsStand.

CNN said Romania's government cooperated in the spying operation.

Iraq refused to comment on the reports until after Sunday's broadcast, CNN said.

NewsStand also noted the Security Council, which set up the arms inspection program, was never officially informed of the spy operation in Bucharest that was approved by Richard Butler, the chief U.N. arms inspector.

Ritter, who earlier had disclosed U.N.

arms inspectors' dealings with Israel's Mossad spy agency and the CIA, expressed disappointment the Romanian operation had remained secret.

"We could not present to the Security Council the most compelling evidence" of Iraqi non-compliance with U.N. resolutions, Ritter said.

He said revealing the information would have opened up "the sources and methods used to collect it ... which governments did not want to put at risk."

According to NewsStand, agents learned of the plans for the Romanian visit from an Iraqi engineer who defected. They also had documents found at the farm of Lt. Gen. Hussein Kamel al-Majid, Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's son-in-law.

Iraq allowed inspection of al-Majid's chicken farm after he defected in 1995; he later returned to Iraq and was killed. Among the documents from his farm was a previous contract for missile equipment with the state-run Romanian company AeroRina.

Russia requests support from IMF to relieve debt

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's finance minister asked Sunday for a little empathy and a lot of cash from the International Monetary Fund.

"Money is not the main thing we need from the IMF, although we need that too," Mikhail Zadornov said, according to the Interfax news agency. "We, above all, expect understanding from the IMF, and a program to relieve Russia's debt — that is, $17.5 billion."

Russia has been hoping the IMF would release the next installment of a $22.6 billion loan package frozen in August after the government effectively devalued the ruble and defaulted on its foreign debt.

Those actions helped plunge the country into its worst financial crisis since Soviet times.

Government officials have taken various tacks in asking for the money. Prime Minister Yevgeny Primakov tried exasperation on Saturday, when he complained about the demands of "young boys" from the IMF, but said Russia would grudgingly give in to them.

The IMF has demanded Russia adopt a budget that is acceptable to fund officials before any more money is released.

Zadornov said he hoped the IMF

Pinochet case paralyzes U.S. with indecision

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the Clinton administration, few issues have proved more divisive lately than producing a public stand on Spain's bid to extradite former Chilean President Augusto Pinochet.

After six weeks of internal wrangling, the administration's response can be summed up in two words: No comment.

One concern is that if the administration supports Pinochet's extradition, American leaders could become similar targets.

Could President Clinton somehow be vulnerable to extradition for ordering the bombing of Serb strongholds in Bosnia in 1995, one official wondered. Would former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, a leading architect of the Vietnam war, be vulnerable?

Other officials argue that such concerns are illusory. They support the Spanish bid on grounds that Pinochet should be held accountable for the abuses that occurred under his rule, including the 1976 assassination on a Washington street of a former Chilean ambassador, and his aide, who were opposed to Pinochet. These officials contend Pinochet's extradition could be a warning to dictators everywhere.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright has said little publicly about the issue but is following it closely. She has been considering meeting with family members of the two assassination victims: Ambassador Orlando Letelier and Ronni Moffitt, his American assistant.

PINOCHET

Kenneth Roth, executive director of Human Rights Watch, says the administration should support the Spanish request. American leaders have not committed crimes against humanity, as defined at the Nuremberg tribunal, he says. Only bona fide despots need fear persecution, he adds.

Backers of extradition won a victory this past week when Britain's highest court ruled that the former Chilean dictator cannot claim immunity from prosecution. Home Secretary Jack Straw will decide in December whether to let Pinochet go home or let British magistrates begin acting on the Spanish extradition request on charges of genocide, terrorism and torture.

Michael Posner, executive director of the Lawyer's Committee for Human Rights, hailed the court ruling. "To those who would commit future crimes, it signals that immunity is limited and that a price for murder, torture and other atrocities will be paid," he said.

The only Pinochet-related action taken by the administration has been to provide Justice Department files from the Pinochet era to Spanish officials. They were turned over under a mutual legal assistance treaty.

Administration advocates of caution worry that Chile's hard-won democratic gains could disintegrate if left-right friction divides the country once again.

During a visit to Chile last April, President Clinton hailed Chile as a "shining example" of democracy at work. Officials say other hemispheric countries look to Chile as a role model for both democratic and economic development. They believe the stability Chile has been enjoying should be preserved at all cost.

American ambivalence toward Pinochet dates back a quarter century. The election of Salvador Allende, a Marxist, as president of Chile in 1970 alarmed the Nixon administration, which worried that Cuba would use Chile as a base for subverting the country's neighbors.

President Nixon advocated measures to make the Chilean economy "scream," thereby weakening Allende's government. Records from that era indicate CIA support for a trucker's strike in Chile in 1973.

When Pinochet seized power in a coup in September 1973, many in Washington saw it as a strategic plus. But the brutal methods he used to crack down on leftists appalled many here. In the aftermath of the assassinations of Letelier and Moffitt, Congress imposed sanctions against Chile.

definitely going to make Campus Partners and its developers more aware of Panini's supporters.

"Granted this petition has done a lot to make this visible, but we knew before that students enjoyed Panini," Hankins said. "It was on our radar screen before the petition."

Doucet said he and Rossi are going to keep working to keep Panini and hope to gather more student support.

"We will keep working on this until we clearly see that Campus Partners is willing to do what the community wants," Doucet said.

Rossi said, "We are looking forward to see what will happen. We know that we have no power in the final decision, but we can talk to students and see what they want."

Hankins said no matter what the outcome, he thinks Panini will stay in the area.

"Panini will definitely stay in one form or another," Hankins said. "It is currently being determined (in what capacity)."

Boehner doesn't plan to resign, he says

HAMILTON, Ohio (AP) — Rep. John Boehner, who lost his House leadership position in the aftermath of the Republican losses on Election Day, said he has no intention of resigning from Congress.

Rep. J.C. Watts, R-Okla., replaced the Hamilton Republican as chairman of the Republican conference by a 121-93 vote. Boehner was part of the House leadership team headed by Speaker Newt Gingrich, who announced his resignation shortly after the Nov. 3 election.

Resignation "never crossed my mind, and it never crossed my lips," Boehner said in an interview published Saturday in the Hamilton Journal-News. "For me, I've got all kinds of options. I've got the option to get re-engaged in my committee work, and I've got other options down the road."

Boehner, who represents the 8th Congressional District in southwestern Ohio, was in Butler County for Thanksgiving.

He said he had not expected to lose his position.

"Frankly, I thought I had the votes," he said. "I was shocked."

The Republican caucus was upset at the leadership because there was no substantive message to run on in the election that cost the GOP five House seats, Boehner said.

"There was a lot of built-up anger," he said.

Boehner said that if he had retained his leadership position, the job would have been more difficult because he would have had to lead a slim and fractious majority.

"Newt could have been re-elected as speaker," Boehner said. "But when he looked at trying to lead the troops, he knew it would have been difficult."

Boehner also had some definite views on the subject of impeachment of President Clinton for his involvement with a White House intern.

He said he would vote to impeach President Clinton if one was taken in the House.

"It's clear to me that the president violated the law. It's a clear-cut case. I think I have the duty to vote to indict him," Boehner said.

It's not known yet whether Boehner will have the opportunity to vote for impeachment. The House Judiciary Committee is still conducting its hearing on the matter.

would not only release the next loan installment, but help Russia restructure its foreign debt — and perhaps persuade some creditors to let Russia off the hook.

"Without the consent of the IMF, creditors won't agree to defer, or possibly partly write off, Russia's external debt," Zadornov said on Russian television, according to Interfax.

Another government financial officer, Alexander Pochinok, was quoted as saying Sunday that the draft 1999 budget assumes that Russia will receive the remaining $17.5 billion in loans from the IMF, World Bank and Japan.

Pochinok also said the budget calls for a 2.75 percent deficit, projects inflation at 30 percent for the year and assumes a relatively stable ruble, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

He said it also calls for increasing military salaries more than 60 percent as of Jan. 1, and raising other government salaries in April. Most Russians have lost roughly two-thirds of the value of their income since August, when the ruble fell sharply against international currencies.

Standards for proficiency test raised

By Douglas E. Levin
Lantern staff writer

1. Trace the transformation of energy in the production of electricity from coal.
2. Analyze the global implications of post-World War II regional changes.
3. Apply models and properties of three-dimensional geometric figures.

High school students must answer questions like these in Ohio's new graduation qualifying test, which will replace the ninth grade proficiency test in the spring of 2003.

"The test is different in its actual level of competency," said LeeAnne Rogers, spokeswoman for the Department of Education. The new qualifying exam tests for a 10th grade level of competency, rather than the eighth grade level tested by the old proficiency test.

Beginning with the class of 2005, students must pass all five sections of the test—math, science, citizenship, writing and reading—before earning their high school diploma.

"We're not really holding students back," Rogers said. "Students have a lot of opportunities to retake the sections they fail."

Committees were formed in each of the five subject areas to determine "competencies," or, a list of concepts in which high school students should be familiar by the end of 10th grade. Each competency also includes a vague example of a possible question.

Committee members included high school and university teachers along with administrators from across Ohio. James Bishop, assistant dean for resource and external affairs at Ohio State, served on the science committee. The committee looked at the National Science Education Standards, as well as various other standards from around the nation, he said.

There is some concern that educators may gear their curricula to help students pass the test sections.

"We hope that teachers, curriculum leaders and principals will focus on learning concepts and not focus solely on the mechanics of taking the test," Bishop said. The purpose of the curriculum should be applying concepts, developing skills and improving thinking, he said.

Richard Brown, who taught math for 30 years at East High School in Columbus and now heads Ohio State's Math-Stat Learning Center, said the harder test is necessary for maintaining educational standards.

"There have to be some standards for students to reach before they get a diploma," Brown said. "When I taught high school, I was always amazed that when students got there, they just didn't have the skills."

Brown is skeptical about the new qualifying test, though, because of the low passing rate on the existing proficiency test.

"I'd like to think we could raise the pass rate on the one we have now before we start making it more difficult," Brown said. A student can also be successful in life without mastering some of the concepts on the test, he said.

Math is generally the subject where students score the lowest, Brown said. He says this is the result of a lack of attention to mathematics prior to high school.

"Some of the problems are the result of elementary and middle school teachers who didn't spend as much time on math or aren't qualified enough to teach it," he said. "There are teachers who are not math certified."

The Department of Education solicited input on the recommended competencies from 150,000 educators across Ohio, Rogers said. The department also held 11 public forum meetings across the state in October. They will vote on whether to approve the competencies at their January board meeting.

Rogers agreed that "teaching to the test" is not in the spirit of the test.

"The test already tests what should be built into the curriculum," she said.

New bill seizes title from Prince Charles

LONDON (AP) — A centuries-old perk of British royalty will soon go the way of the broadsword and buggy whip.

Like his father, brother and two royal cousins, Prince Charles will lose his right to sit in the House of Lords, under the Labor Party government's planned purge of Britain's unelected upper chamber, Buckingham Palace said Sunday.

Not that anyone will be missing much: Charles has not been to the House of Lords since making a maiden speech there in June 1974.

And even then he noted that apart from his mother, Queen Elizabeth II — who opens each annual session of Parliament — about 100 years had passed since a member of the royal family had gone to the all-male chamber.

A bill to be introduced soon would strip 759 aristocrats with inherited titles of their 600-year-old right to vote in the upper chamber. The aristocrats currently share the House of Lords with some 500 peers holding lifetime titles.

"Formal advice has been received from the government on reforms, and ... the queen has accepted that advice," a spokesman for Buckingham Palace said.

Taking "advice" is a British term the queen's accepting government policy. As the titular head of state, the queen has no political power.

The other members of the royal family currently entitled to sit in the House of Lords are Prince Philip, Charles' father; Prince Andrew, the Duke of York, who is the queen's second son; the Duke of Kent; and the Duke of Gloucester. The dukes of Kent and Gloucester are the queen's first cousins.

The Conservative Party

opposes the Lords' bill because the government has not said what form the new-look House of Lords will take. Liam Fox, a party spokesman, complained that removing the royals "has the symbolic effect of reducing the role for the monarchy in Parliament."

OUR VIEW

If coach John Cooper listens to the local sports-talk radio shows, he's probably lost any trace of residual giddiness left over from the Buckeyes win over Michigan last week.

While some bowl game prognosticators are placing OSU in either the Orange or Sugar Bowl, both Bowl Championship Series venues, others are predicting that, pending no upsets this weekend, the Bucks will be left out of the BCS and end up in the Citrus Bowl... AGAINST GEORGIA!!!

OSU will be No. 5 in the latest BCS poll released today, and will move higher if Kansas State, UCLA and/or Tennessee lose this weekend (don't hold your breath, but if all three lose, the Bucks will find themselves in the national title game against Florida State). But if they stay where they're at, the BCS gods could feasibly pass OSU up for No. 6 Arizona and No. 7 Florida.

Nothing could be more distasteful or disrespectful to the team, coaches and fans than to be placed in a non-BCS game against a ho-hum team like the Bulldogs. The final score would likely be similar to the whoopin' OSU laid on the Toledo Rockets earlier this season!

If you're an OSU fan, you're hoping one of two things happens on Saturday: K-State, UCLA and Tennessee all lose, or they all win. If they all lose, the Bucks are Fiesta bound. If they all win, then college football has three undefeated teams for two national title game spots, evidence that the BCS is, and has always been, a flawed system. You're also going to have one really pissed off team with no losses and no chance at the title (most likely poor K-State).

We've been screaming for 12 weeks now that the BCS wasn't a solution for college football. It's too complicated, too biased and too susceptible to scenarios like the aforementioned.

An eight-team or 16-team playoff inside the existing bowl system would solve all problems, financial and competitive, that prevents the NCAA from giving in. OSU slipped once against a bad team and that took the Bucks out of the national title picture. And although that one loss shines in the records like a scarlet letter, many experts still look at the Bucks as No. 1. (They even have one first place vote in the coaches' poll... thanks coach Carr.)

A sane and acceptable playoff is destined to happen as soon as ABC's contract with the BCS runs out in four years, and only then will a true champion be determined.

Campus Partners may reject students' wishes

So what does it mean when, with one breath, Campus Partners commends, encourages and supports students organizing to save their favorite High Street buildings, then with another breath, says if land cannot be acquired through negotiations it might have to use eminent domain to acquire some of the 7.5 acres on south campus?

It means students shouldn't expect too much.

The south campus land is part of Campus Partners' proposed Gateway redevelopment project.

Why is it that Campus Partners continues to relate to students in such a condescending manner? Perhaps, it's because Campus Partners has no real respect for the critical thinking intelligence of the student body.

Whatever the reasoning for Campus Partners' way of dealing with students, we suggest that Campus Partners starts taking concerned students seriously, such as Troy Doucet who recently circulated a petition to save Panini's, because such students are activists who have become involved. Such students are intelligent and knowledgeable of campus history and other students' desires, needs and wants. Therefore, it would serve Campus Partners well if it acknowledges, listens to and considers the concerns of students outside its own student advisory board. They don't represent the concerns of the average student or the larger student body. And many in the central Ohio region are watching Campus Partners and Ohio State closely.

We encourage those who are active, concerned and vocal about the plight of south campus in its ongoing battle with Campus Partners to stay involved. Please, don't become discouraged, but keep up your momentum in the struggle to lobby for those south campus establishments you want preserved. And this means continuing the fight beyond Campus Partners and warring right up through the developers.

Keep your activism, momentum and vigilance alive. And good luck.

Holiday warmth leaves some out in cold

Another year is nearing its end. Over the next few weeks we'll all go out and maybe indulge in our chemical(s) of choice. Heads a-pounding, we'll wake up and it will be 1999.

It's that time of year when everyone gets along. Call it the spirit of Christmas or whatever, it's pretty nice. Even Christmas itself is kind of neat. I'm not a Christian, but I've sort of bastardized the holiday and given it my own meaning. It's a time when I like to see my family being happy for no other reason than everyone's home.

I'm not going to take a cheap shot at the commercialization of the holidays. It's there, but it is harmless. If you are generous or foolish enough to indulge in an advertising-induced shopping spree, so be it. You're an adult, and it's your money. At least you're doing something for someone else.

This coming time of year seems to inspire both financial and emotional generosity. Whether we toss a few extra bucks to a bum, donate time or money to charity, or are just a bit less surly than usual, the best in us is brought to the surface.

JOHN

Still though, I wonder what happens to a lot of the faceless people out there. The nutty people walking the street talking to themselves. Maybe they splurge on a couple of Big Macs, and sit in a lonely apartment somewhere and watch the New Year's festivities on TV.

Big Macs and the holidays. As unlikely as it sounds, that brings back the memory of a sad story. I was in high school at one of those blow-off classes that I needed to graduate. My teacher was an odd little man, with physical problems that made him look kind of funny to a class full of cruel kids. The class, which was supposed to be Earth Science, turned into an exercise in group verbal abuse directed toward a weak target. I feel bad about the whole experience.

On the day before a holiday vacation (Thanksgiving, I think) our teacher casually asked us what our plans were. He got a typical range of responses, like going to see family or travel. I don't recall whether anyone asked him what he was doing, or if he decided to tell us.

"I'll probably buy a few Big Macs and sit at home and watch TV," he said. Looking back on it now, he was probably hoping that out of his class of tormentors, someone would have the human decency to invite him over (to my knowledge, no one did.) The classroom got a little quiet after that, hearing him state something that was probably one of the most depressing things we had heard in our young lives. Then I'm sure a couple of us laughed. For me at least, laughing would have been in character.

Hell, he was a little guy. He couldn't have eaten that much turkey or pie. He seemed scary and strange to all of us in the class, but he was just a lonely person who wasn't as fortunate as the rest of us. His presence at the dinner table would have been no more disturbing than seeing Grandpa go on his holiday drinking spree.

But I didn't have the courage or compassion to show a little kindness to someone down on their luck. That's exactly the opposite of what the holidays should be all about.

So beneath what we perceive as other's strangeness, we're all pretty much the same. A bunch of scared, ignorant people trying to get by in a relatively hostile world. Most of us are lucky enough to have family and friends that love us. This makes the whole "life" thing a little bit easier and maybe it's even what makes it worthwhile. But some don't have those vital ties that make the holidays special. It's not too hard to reach out to these people, even if it is only once a year. Happy holidays to all the Mr. C's out there.

John Roszkowski's column appears on Mondays in the Lantern.

Census inaccuracy cheats minorities

The Census. Sounds pretty straightforward. You survey folks every ten years, you add 'em all up, and you figure out which representatives to Congress go where.

But not this year.

True to form, Democrats and Republicans have found a way to create a partisan controversy in a random political cranny — statistical methodology, or how to count people.

You are probably asking why methodology matters. You send out the surveys, you get them back, and you whip out a calculator. Shouldn't matter how you do it, right? Wrong. Surprise, surprise: The motives behind this controversy are slippery, slimy and political. Depending on what methodology the Bureau of the Census decides to employ, a different political party will benefit.

Still sounds crazy? In the 1990 Census, children, renters (especially in rural areas), and racial and ethnic minorities were severely under-counted. Among those missed in 1990 were 4.4 percent of African-Americans, 5 percent of Hispanics, 12.2 percent of American Indians living on reservations, but only 0.7 percent of non-Hispanic whites. Rich people with multiple residences were actually over-counted, making it look on paper like there are a lot more rich people and a lot less minorities than in reality.

In response to the inaccuracy of the last Census, the Bureau of the Census (cronies of Clinton) and the National Academy of Sciences studied the most accurate ways to count people. They came up with a strategy that includes a method called statistical sampling. Sampling uses information derived from a portion of the population to infer information about the population as a whole, and apparently results in a much more accurate enumeration of people who are difficult to contact, such as those who move around a lot (racial and ethnic minorities are disproportionately represented among such people).

Conventional wisdom holds that if minorities, who traditionally vote for Democrats, are more accurately counted, areas with greater numbers of census-recorded minorities will be assigned more representatives to Congress, and the Democrats will get more seats in the House. Vice versa for the whiny Republicans.

You would hope that our honorable elected officials would endorse a more accurate methodology regardless of political gain. Ever so surprisingly, after tarrying around with hasty bills that would ban sampling but were thwarted by Clinton's veto, the Republican-dominated Congress and taxpayers across the country have filed suit against the Department of Commerce. This department controls the Census, and Bill Clinton, saying the use of sampling is unconstitutional and violates the Census Act.

Two lower courts have nixed the Democrats' sampling scheme and the case is being argued today before the Supreme Court.

Need I say that I am pretty darn revolted by these shadesters? The GOP, motivated solely by political gain, wants to continue using an inaccurate methodology that will undercount minorities. Not only are congressional seats apportioned according to the Census, but federal funds are distributed based on these misleading numbers. Just like we all have the right to vote, we all have the right to be counted in a Census paid for with tax dollars. Just one time, can't politicians look past their own gain and do their job, which is to run this government respectably? Call it political strategy, or call it a eensy-weensy bit unethical. I call it extremely shady. And more than a tad racist.

Fight for Furby reflects society's sickness

Whoopiedoo! It talks. So can I. Thank goodness no one is fighting over me.

I am still quite concerned about some of those with whom we share this planet. The battle for Furby dolls is just the latest in the ludicrous weakness of a seemingly sane society to buy into the hype of temporary happiness. If the elves could create a race of toys to interact with us, they wouldn't be able to keep them in supply, regardless of the price. Toys are much easier to control than people. All we have to do is take away the batteries and slam them against the wall.

But when we're dealing with people, we actually have to consider their emotions, their physical pain, their psychological torment, their values and beliefs. Folks want company, or at least someone or something that will listen to them. But many don't want to waste time worrying about the feelings of others. Just listen and shut up. The human approach would require a degree of love, which can't be found in a mentality that lacks a commitment to reciprocity.

So far now, folks are running

KIRK

over one another to get to Furby, a bizarre cross between an alarm clock and furry bird. The doll is simply 1998's symbol of the commercialization of what was once a reflective, winter holiday season — so I'm told, for in my short lifetime, I've never seen it.

It doesn't matter if it's Tickle Me Elmo, Cabbage Patch Kids, My Buddy or Kid Sister. If it's new and desired by many, we want it, too. We don't want our kids mad at Santa Claus because if he doesn't make the kids happy, the kids won't necessarily behave all year to make him happy.

But this sickness runs deeper than a yearning to pacify boys and girls into compliance with the rules of proper conduct. Most of these Furby dolls probably won't even find themselves in gift boxes. Even if the kids are given this toy and are allowed to keep it in their room, do you think they'll have exclusive rights to it? Certainly not in all cases. The taste of Tony's Frosted Flakes isn't the only thing adults haven't outgrown.

Paul Harvey may know the rest of the story. I can only speculate. What I think we're seeing is largely a quest for victory. If we don't make it to the stores at 2 a.m., we've lost to a more dedicated consumer. The obstacle of lateness may lead to a Plan B, which might entail a few athletic maneuvers to blow past our opponents — fellow shoppers — and pounce on a Furby before it disappears. Of course, we need precise timing to burst through the door immediately after it's opened by the store manager. After we get the toy, we've got to clutch it tightly, or a stronger consumer might strip it from us. Remember, it's not ours until we have the receipt — and no, we can't just steal someone else's receipt.

Don't get me wrong. I understand the obsession over toys. I used to play with them myself. I could conjure up the greatest scripts detailing wars between the Autobots and Decepticons with my Transformers. I would hold my plastic sword aloft and say "By the Power of Grayskull" better than He-Man or She-Ra ever could. I would often hold a G.I. Joe action figure in each hand and use my fingers to bend their body parts to simulate punching and kicking. I would get up early on Saturday mornings to watch the Smurfs take on Gargamel and stay up late to watch Ghostbusters and Gremlins.

If I wanted to mildly exercise my mind, I would pull out my Pocket Simon and the minutes would just fly away. I still find it challenging to match the lighted color patterns when the computer increases the speed.

A child shouldn't be denied a childhood. The awe and imagination that toys and cartoons inspire might be critical in the development of well-rounded human beings. But there isn't one specific toy that is so desperately needed to tap into the genius of a child. There are more important things to fight for than Furby.

Kirk D. Richards, a senior majoring in journalism, can be contacted via e-mail at richards.165@osu.edu. Kirk hopes for a safe, pleasant and restful holiday. His column appears on Mondays in the Lantern.

Writer ignorant of Native Americans

John Roszkowski is an idiot and a moron. I can't believe that you continue to print the trash/gibberish that he produces. He conveniently forgets that the Native Americans so traumatized by the white man built their homes on the Native Americans who came before them. At one time, Navajos were in the east and then driven out and headed west. No one lined up to give them handouts, land, or job guarantees. The Indians that were here when Europeans came had driven out those here before them.

The ancestors of these Indians that are crying in their beer today are spinning in their graves. They were warriors. It's time for Native Americans to get off the reservations and get into the mainstream. I won't deny that they received some brutal treatment, but they didn't get anything that they hadn't dished out already. By the way, I have a dose of Indian blood running through my veins.

As to that last little incoherent paragraph, I assume that the editor must have cut something out. Otherwise, Roszkowski is an even bigger buffoon and more pitiful dolt that I already believe.

Native Americans started holiday

And a happy Thanksgiving to you, John Roszkowski.

There's one fact you omitted. Thanksgiving is a Native American tradition. It's based on their lunar calendar: First comes full Hunter's moon, then the full Harvest moon, then the full Thanksgiving moon where people give thanks to the Great Spirit (God) for their bounty. The Wampanoag Indians introduced the idea of Thanksgiving to the Pilgrims. Some Indian nations called it the Corn Festival or the busk, but Thanksgiving has been celebrated by the red man long before any white man set foot on this continent. Hope this clears up a few things. Happy Turkey Day.

Roszkowski article raises good points

John Roszkowski's "Political Conflict: Gambling with lives" raises a number of good issues on which I would like to further elaborate:

John spoke of the preacher in the army who condoned the killing of infidels, in that case Third World, unworthy, brown-looking Iraqi children. As an avid believer in secularism, I am always alarmed when people start mixing up religion and state. I am very sure that this preacher was as despicable as John has presented him to be, but the truth of the matter is that not all religious leaders are like that. John, I was in Jerusalem around that time, and I was fortunate to meet The Most Reverend Edmond Browning, Archbishop of the U.S. Anglican Episcopal Church. I think he was George Bush or James Baker's bishop, though don't quote me on that. He was opposed to the Gulf War and to the killing of innocent children, who always end up being the victims of our adult bigotry. He went and visited the children of Iraq and always advocated a peaceful solution. I am as non-religious as any human can get, but I still believe that we should try not to throw all religious leaders into one category. The majority of them are decent people, and it is the few like this preacher who ruin the image of the rest.

As for sanctions, I cannot agree with you more. Nobody is even willing to justify any of Saddam Hussein's actions. He's a brutal, inhumane dictator that victimized his own people. If anything, we ought to be helping the Iraqi people against this monstrous man. Use of force, however, further destabilizes the region.

President Clinton has frequently stated that the U.S. has no conflict with the Iraqi people, yet our policies seem to continually expose them to cruel and unusual collective punishment. Remember Tiananmen Square? Ms. Albright seems to believe that the best policy to help the people of China is one of "engagement." I agree with her fully, but I would contend that the same policy would also work in Iraq. Think of it this way: what's the incentive for Iraq to cooperate with UNSCOM and comply with U.N. resolutions if the sanctions are open-ended? My friends tell me that he lost the war and should suffer the consequences. I fear he's building castles, and it is the most vulnerable who are suffering those consequences.

Sanctions limit supply of goods, and I can guarantee you that only the powerful few would be able to gain access to these goods. Sanctions only strengthen those in power, whether they be in Cuba, Iran, Libya, or Iraq, it doesn't really matter.

John, you have done a great job and you deserve to be thanked: Toutes mes félicitations!

Weeks' argument has no evidence

I have enjoyed reading the Lantern for a few years now. However, it is clear that a number of articles are written rather impulsively. I am NOT a journalism major, so I understand that this could just be a style of writing; however, I feel that the time to respond has come.

"Weeks' Argument is Weak." Upon reviewing Jessica Weeks' article from the week of Nov. 16th, it has become obvious that it was written without substantial thought. There is no evidence supporting a link between playing computer games and obtaining computer programming jobs. Children, both girls AND boys, have played video games for quite some time. It may have been "old school" Atari, Nintendo, Sega Genesis, a PC, or even on the more modern Sony Playstation. While males may be more likely to play these games, it does not mean they have an advantage in any job market.

Obviously, children tend to focus on the sheer enjoyment of games, not any newly obtained skills. Of course, these skills only involve the hand-eye coordination of pressing a few of the keys on a keyboard, not quite what the modern business world requires. It is imperative that parents encourage children to learn more skills than the aforementioned. It is writing programs, designing databases and spreadsheets, and word processing capabilities that get people (women AND men) jobs, NOT pressing the space bar, hitting enter, and using the arrow keys. Therefore, the fact that there are more male oriented PC games does not relate to the job placement differential between males and females.

Game producing companies are simply targeting the segment of the market most likely to play these games. They are only attempting to yield a profit and increase market share, the likely goal of any and ALL businesses.

Wilson dies at 64; paved way for future black entertainers

By Jeff Wong
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In 1970, the news was filled with anti-war demonstrations and black power. On the nation's TV screens, Flip Wilson put on a wig and a minidress and became Geraldine, who screeched: "What you see is what you get!"

He wasn't a spokesman for race issues, but Wilson broke racial barriers, becoming the first black host of a top television variety show.

Wilson died Wednesday of liver cancer at his Malibu home with his daughter, Michelle, by tumor that was close to his liver.

The man who gave the world Geraldine and the catch phrase "the devil made me do it!" crossed all lines with his come-his side, said Angie Hill, the comedian's assistant. He was 64.

Wilson had undergone surgery Oct. 2 at St. John's Hospital and Health Center in Santa Monica for a malignant dy, said the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who said he had known the comedian since the 1970s.

"Flip was a breakthrough artist for African-Americans," Jackson said Thursday in a telephone interview. "He led with a brand of comedy that was clean and decent and not vulgar. To the end, he was a man I held in high esteem — as a comedian and as a person."

Wilson hosted "The Flip Wilson Show" on NBC from 1970-74. He dressed in drag to play the wisecracking Geraldine. She was perhaps his most popular character because she did not "put down" women, Wilson once said.

"She's smart, she's trustful, she's loyal, she's sassy," he said. While other black performers played down their ethnicity, Wilson reveled in characters such as the Rev. Leroy, pastor of the "The Church of What's Happening Now." Wilson said he was based on a preacher he listened to as a child.

Clerow Wilson was born into poverty on Dec. 8, 1933, in Jersey City, N.J., and raised in foster homes, quitting school at 16. He served four years in the Air Force, earning the nickname "Flip" for his irreverent humor when he began entertaining troops.

Discharged in 1954, Wilson spent more than a decade working at odd jobs and developing a comedy act in small clubs. When Hollywood began to seek out black entertainers in the 1960s, his career took an upward turn.

Wilson made his TV debut on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" in 1965, which led to frequent appearances on "The Ed Sullivan Show" and "Laugh-In" and on comedy series such as "Love, American Style."

A variety special in which he starred led to his own series, which earned him an Emmy for performing and one for writing in 1971. It took competition from a new drama, "The Waltons," to knock Wilson's show down in the ratings and off the air in 1974.

The comedian was divorced about the time his show ended and he won custody of his children.

He reappeared a decade later with two short-lived series: the 1984 quiz show "People Are Funny," for which he was host, and the 1985 CBS sitcom "Charlie & Company," which costarred singer Gladys Knight.

Besides his daughter Michelle, he is survived by sons Kevin and David, and daughters Stacey and Tamara.

No need for insecticide, 'A Bug's Life' delightful entertainment

By Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press writer

So you've seen "Antz" and now there's "A Bug's Life." Does it make any sense to see another computer-animated movie about ants?

Absolutely. Fact is, these are two quite different movies, and each is delightful in its own way.

The main characters in "A Bug's Life" are drawn like shiny, bright-colored toys rather than the more textured creatures of "Antz," and maybe that's a tip-off. Clearly, "A Bug's Life" is far more of a kid's movie at heart. You won't find the knowing, Woody Allen-like verbal humor of "Antz." But you will see more action per minute, and some of it is riveting.

Even grown-ups will snap to attention when a cute, brightly colored songbird terrorizes our new insect friends. The scene drew gasps at a recent screening.

And a closing chase, where the tiny characters speed through a saturation bombing of raindrops and ultimately return to that killer bird, is simply thrilling.

"A Bug's Life" tells the story of an ant colony that's invaded annually by a gang of grasshoppers, who demand a major share of the harvest. One of the ants, Flik (voice of Dave Foley, who stars in TV's "NewsRadio"), accidentally disposes of the offering just before the grasshoppers show up. It's up to him to save his colony. None of the grown-up ants has any faith in him, certainly not the lovely Princess Atta (voice of Julia Louis-Dreyfus from TV's "Seinfeld").

Flik ventures out and recruits what he thinks is a band of warriors, which is actually a third-rate troupe of performers from a flea circus. Together with the ant colony, they drive off the grasshoppers, thanks largely to Flik's cleverness and bravery. Of course, he ends up with Atta.

The animation is superb, as one would expect from the folks who created "Toy Story." Not only is it technically impressive — just watch that tree in the opening sequence, with each leaf shimmering in the breeze — but it's clever. When the overbearing leader of the grasshoppers paces among the trembling ants, two sets of hands are clasped behind his back. When Flik ventures into the great outside world, he wanders into a collection of food boxes that's instantly recognizable as an ant-sized Times Square.

Curiously, just as in "Antz," the villain gets the most interesting face. It's just fun to watch Hopper (voice of Kevin Spacey) be evil.

Grown-ups might find the story sagging a bit before they get swept up in the closing scenes. But for them, there's a treat at the closing credits: a series of supposed "outtakes" in which the insects act all too human. It's some of the best stuff in the movie.

'A Bug's Life' sets Thanksgiving record

By Michael Fleeman
AP Entertainment writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "A Bug's Life" broke box office records for Thanksgiving weekend and "The Rugrats Movie" remained strong against tough competition. But the troubled porker sequel "Babe: Pig in the City" got walloped, estimates showed Sunday.

It was a banner weekend for Disney, which had three of the top five films — "A Bug's Life," "Enemy of the State" and "Waterboy" — and about 60 percent of the total box office take for the Top 10.

Overall, the studio reaped more than $92 million over the five-day holiday weekend, making up for such recent financial duds as "Beloved" and "Holy Man."

"You know those Macy's parade balloons? That's how I feel. Floating on air," Disney distribution head Phil Barlow said.

In its first weekend of wide release, "A Bug's Life," the computer-animated story of an ant colony threatened by greedy grasshoppers, brought in $46.5 million over the Wednesday-through-Sunday weekend. That made it the biggest Thanksgiving movie for Disney, topping the live-action "101 Dalmatians," which had $45.1 million in 1996.

"Bug's" performed better than the studio's last computer-animated film produced in partnership with Pixar, "Toy Story," which opened with $39.1 million in 1995. It also topped the debut of this year's other computer-animated ant movie, DreamWorks' "Antz," which has grossed $84.3 million.

Disney is now firmly established as the Thanksgiving weekend champ, having released the No. 1 film the last five years with "A Bug's Life," "Flubber," "101 Dalmatians," "Toy Story" and "The Santa Clause."

Disney also scored this weekend with the Will Smith thriller

"Enemy of the State," which had $25.7 million for third place, and "Waterboy," the Adam Sandler comedy, which had $19.9 million for fourth.

Still, Paramount's "The Rugrats Movie" managed to get a big chunk of the action, grossing $27.6 million for second. Business dropped only about 20 percent in the second week for the big-screen version of the popular Nickelodeon cable cartoon.

The big loser this holiday weekend was "Babe: Pig in the City," the sequel to the successful 1995 film about a lovable pig. It opened to just $8.5 million for fifth place.

Also getting buried in the crush of bug and rugrat films was the Drew Barrymore-starring, "Home Fries," a quirky romantic comedy that grossed just $5.2 million for ninth, behind Jerry Springer's low-brow "Ringmaster" with $5.3 million for eighth.

It was also a very bad weekend for "Very Bad Things," the black comedy about a bachelor party that takes a turn for the horrible. It debuted with $4.7 million for 10th place.

Here are estimated grosses at North American theaters for Wednesday through Sunday as compiled by Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

1. "A Bug's Life," $46.5 million.
2. "The Rugrats Movie," $27.6 million.
3. "Enemy of the State," $25.7 million.
4. "The Waterboy," $19.9 million.
5. "Babe: Pig in the City," $8.5 million.
6. "Meet Joe Black," $8.1 million.
7. "I Still Know What You Did Last Summer," $6.5 million.
8. "Ringmaster," $5.3 million.
9. "Home Fries," $5.2 million.
10. "Very Bad Things," $4.7 million.

Parents: Abercrombie ads are pornographic

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — The clothing company Abercrombie & Fitch is under fire for the second time this year. Five months ago, the subject was alcohol; now, it's naked models.

Likening the company's catalog to pornography, about a dozen parents protested outside the Atrium Mall Saturday.

They were upset over images of naked teen-agers in the retailer's 296-page catalog, including a picture of a naked young man frolicking in bed with four naked young women.

The photographs are reproduced in larger-than-life size on the walls of the store in the mall.

"It's the 12- and 13-year-old kids who are going in there," Lise Wisel, a Brookline mother of three, told The Boston Globe. "The message this sends is that it's OK for young teen-agers to be having sex."

Others, however, think the protesters are making a fuss over nothing.

"I think they do this in the catalog so people will talk about it," said Lauren Darcy, 18. "It's not that big a deal."

Abercrombie & Fitch said the campaign is geared to college students.

"The photos are meant to be beautiful, fun and sexy and are intended to evoke exuberance and freedom that makes being young so beautiful," Lonnie Fogel, a company spokesman at its Reynoldsburg, Ohio, headquarters, told WHDH-TV.

Abercrombie & Fitch got into trouble for its hip advertising before. Over the summer, the company that gears its clothing for young people infuriated anti-drunken driving groups for publishing an article called "Drinking 101" in its quarterly catalog.

The company later admitted it went too far.

FBI questions fall of Cleveland insurance firm

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Federal agents have interviewed Kentucky insurance regulators about the collapse of Cleveland-based PIE Mutual Insurance Co.

The FBI is investigating matters related to PIE, including talking to athletic officials at the University of Kentucky about their use of a PIE corporate jet for recruiting trips and other travel, the agency confirmed to The Courier-Journal of Louisville in a story published Sunday.

PIE held about 20 percent of the Kentucky malpractice insurance market last fall when Ohio regulators seized the company. Those regulators later reported the company was $275 million in debt and won court approval to take over the company and liquidate its assets.

The collapse left about 2,000 Kentucky doctors without insurance. And patients with claims against those doctors can recover no more than $300,000 from an industry-supported guaranty fund, though PIE's standard policies had provided $1 million or more in coverage.

Ohio's superintendent of insurance, Harold Duryee, claims in a lawsuit filed last month that exorbitant spending by PIE's former president and chief executive, Larry Rogers, was a factor in the company's failure.

The lawsuit alleges that PIE paid more than $7 million to Rogers in the year before the company collapsed and that Rogers squandered company money by using its jet on personal trips — including allowing the University of Kentucky Athletic Department to use it at no charge.

Rogers told the newspaper that he does not know the focus of the FBI probe. He also said the FBI often examines the circumstances surrounding an insurance company's insolvency.

Rogers said he has not filed a response to the lawsuit.

"Lawsuits are to be tried in a courtroom, not in a newspaper," Rogers said. "My input will come at the appropriate time and the appropriate place."

Insurance Commissioner George Nichols acknowledged that FBI agents interviewed officials of the Kentucky Department of Insurance about matters involving PIE but declined to elaborate.

Late last summer, FBI agents interviewed Kentucky athletics director C.M. Newton and Larry Ivy, senior associate athletics director, about the use of the PIE jet.

"I don't remember that much about it," Newton said. "It was really just a brief interview."

Newton said it is common for boosters and corporations to allow the athletic departments of universities to use airplanes for free. The plane was never used to bring student-athletes to Lexington and the university's use of the plane did not violate any NCAA rules, he said.

Ivy said that the PIE jet flew school officials to an annual Southeastern Conference meeting in Florida and on several recruiting trips.

Rogers said he allowed the school to use the plane no more than 10 times.

Misuse of the airplane is one of several charges leveled in Duryee's lawsuit, one of six filed in Ohio's effort to pay off PIE's liabilities. It seeks $40 million from Rogers and other former PIE officials.

Among many other allegations, the suit claims that plane was used extensively for Rogers' personal trips, including gambling junkets to Las Vegas; trips to Hilton Head Island, S.C., where he had a vacation home; and for recruiting trips for high school basketball players, on behalf of the University of Kentucky.

Subsidies may allow farmers to make profit despite low prices

TOLEDO (AP) — Just a few years after politicians discussed ending government agricultural subsidies, federal aid could help many farmers turn a profit this year despite the lowest grain prices in a decade, The Blade reported Sunday.

But while grain farmers cherish the payments as a means of survival, other farmers aren't sure the supplements are vital to the agricultural industry.

An average northwest Ohio farmer with roughly 1,000 acres of corn, soybeans and wheat will receive more than $51,000 from federal taxpayers this year, not including low-interest loans, said John Gaynor, director of the federal Farm Service Agency in Fulton and Lucas counties.

This year's subsidy is the highest in 15 years and five times the rate paid two years ago to farmers, the newspaper reported.

For many grain farmers, the subsidies represent a means of support, with 85 percent of the money going for living expenses, The Blade said.

That has angered hog farmers, who don't receive such assistance despite prices hitting a 28-year low this month.

"It's funny that the government can play around with payments on corn and yet the hog market dwindles and dwindle," said Rod Limes, who raises hogs in Wood County.

A big harvest this year has pushed corn prices to their lowest point since 1988, wheat prices to their lowest since 1990 and soybeans to their lowest since 1991.

Herb Smith, who farms about 900 acres in Temperance, Mich., about 10 miles north of Toledo, said the government money — transferred electronically to farmers' bank accounts — probably means the difference between a profit and loss this year.

Smith said it costs him about $2 to produce a bushel of corn. Profits, however, are unpredictable because prices per bushel at local grain elevators, such as The Andersons Inc. in Maumee, range from $1.77 to $2.05.

Four main farm aid packages cost taxpayers $12.4 billion this year, the Farm Service Agency said. Of that, Ohio farmers get $323.1 million.

But what the public gets in return for the subsidies is debatable, said Hal Reed, general manager of the grain division at The Andersons.

Reed said grain prices on the Chicago Board of Trade generally are not affected by the subsidies. Prices at grocery stores would likely go up without the payments, but not enough for consumers to notice, he said.

Pat Casey, the Ohio Farm Bureau's vice president of corporate and national affairs, disagreed. He said the payments help assure a stable supply of high quality food at reasonable prices.

Carl Zulauf, an agricultural economist at Ohio State University, said the payments make it easier for farmers to adapt to trends.

"I don't think that farm policy fundamentally alters U.S. agriculture in the long run," he said. "But it slows down the rates of change, makes it easier for farmers to adapt."

Man with 8 convictions arrested for drunken driving

CINCINNATI (AP) — A man with at least eight drunken driving convictions who served 10 years in prison for a 1984 fatal crash is facing two new charges of driving under the influence.

Charles W. Jodrey, of the Cincinnati suburb of Milford, was arrested Thursday night in Clermont County east of Cincinnati.

County officials said Jodrey has had at least eight drunken driving convictions, 11 drunken driving arrests and 34 other traffic convictions, but investigators suspect he may have had additional arrests, possibly under other names in other counties.

On Thursday, Jodrey, 55, gave officers a false name and fake driver's license, police said. After officers determined his real name, they discovered he had used the same fake name after an Aug. 23 drunken driving arrest in Milford.

Jodrey now faces drunken driving and driving-under-suspension charges in both cases, and other charges of giving police false information. He also was charged with aggravated menacing for threatening a police officer during the arrest, police said.

"He was extremely intoxicated, uncooperative and verbally abusive," Officer Brett Simon said.

Jodrey was in the Clermont County Jail after Municipal Court Judge

James Shriver set bond of $702,000.

Jodrey was convicted of involuntary manslaughter for a 1984 crash that killed 42-year-old Martin Ackermann.

His blood-alcohol level after that crash was 0.24 percent, more than twice the legal limit. He had been arrested 14 hours before the fatal crash for drunken driving.

Jet stream generates warm weather in Ohio

WESTERVILLE (AP) — When it comes to running in late November, it's usually running tights, a jacket and sometimes ear muffs for Greg Bachman.

But it was a different story Sunday. Under sunny skies with temperatures in the 60s, it was shorts and a T-shirt for Bachman as he ran at Sharon Woods Metropolitan Park in this Columbus suburb.

"This is a pleasant surprise," Bachman of Hilliard, Ohio, said as he finished his four-mile run.

Unseasonably warm weather swept across the Midwest and Ohio over Thanksgiving weekend. Readings were 15 to 20 degrees above normal in some places.

The temperature climbed to 65 Sunday in Mansfield, breaking a record high of 63 for the date set in 1991. It reached 64 in Youngstown on Sunday, eclipsing the previous mark of 61 set in 1962. In Toledo, the temperature climbed to 65. That tied a record high for the date set in 1933.

Thank the jet stream for conditions that were more like spring instead of late fall.

"We've been fortunate to have the jet stream considerably north of where it would normally be at this time of year," said Mark Adams, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Cleveland. "It's allowed a warm bubble of air from the south to just creep north under that jet, up into the Great Lakes."

The warmth, under mostly sunny skies, sent Ohioans outdoors over the holiday weekend. Some walked or worked in their yards. Others played golf or tennis.

"Outdoor tennis beats indoor tennis any time, plus it's free," Mike Gemmill of Westerville said Sunday.

Gemmill, who usually takes his tennis game indoors at this time of year, played singles at an outdoor municipal tennis complex. "This is probably only the second time in the last 10 years that I've played outdoors at Thanksgiving," he said.

Weather forecasters expect the warm pattern to continue through the week, though temperatures could drop slightly at midweek.

But long-range weather service patterns indicate normal or below-normal readings for the winter.

Quick nap
 Jason Thilmory, 16, of Orlando, Fla., waits for a flight Sunday after the extended Thanksgiving weekend at Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport as he returns to school in Camphill, Ala. The Sunday following Thanksgiving is usually one of the busiest travel days of the year.

Funeral homes collect DNA for genetic history

VERMILION (AP) — DNA from the dead is being used to keep families' genetic histories alive.

Some funeral homes have started to take DNA samples from the dearly departed for a fee. The idea is to get a permanent genetic record of a person that could provide medical information to future generations.

While experts are divided on whether such data will be useful, some think the service will be a strong sell for the nation's 21,000 funeral homes.

"I imagine every funeral home will have this service in the future," said Terry Travis, funeral director of Riddle Funeral Home in Vermilion, about 30 miles west of Cleveland.

Travis signed up earlier this month for the service offered by Cincinnati-based DNA Analysis Inc. For $350, he will snip a bit of hair, draw some blood and run a swab inside a deceased person's mouth to get a DNA sample. The samples are packaged in sterile kits and sent to a lab where molecular biologist Paul Harding extracts the DNA. He then sends the family a confidential analysis that is a genetic fingerprint of the deceased.

The company stores the DNA samples for 25 years at minus 80 degrees so they can be analyzed in the future for genetic patterns of disease that usually pass from generation to generation. Only next-of-kin can have the samples tested — for an extra fee.

DNA Analysis, which opened its doors last month with the backing of the Ohio Funeral Directors Association, has about 50 of more than 900 funeral homes in Ohio as its clients.

The company trains funeral directors and embalmers on how to properly take and package DNA samples. Families are required to sign a release that says DNA Analysis is not liable if the tests are lost in the mail or con-aminated.

Another company, GeneLink Inc., has been offering a similar service since 1996 through hundreds of funeral homes and cemeteries in 20 states, said John DePhillipo, president of the company based in Margate, N.J.

"If you trust your loved one to a funeral home and have been working with them for generations, then this might be the right profession to be offering this type of service," said Stephen Gehlert, executive director of the Ohio Funeral Directors Association. "The jury is going to be the consumer."

At the urging of her seven children, Kathleen Hanrahan, 79, of suburban Cincinnati, had DNA samples taken of her husband, Bert, when he died in October. Bernie Naegle, who owns a funeral home in Cincinnati and is co-founder of DNA Analysis, performed the procedure.

Group planning appeal to stop deer 'slaughter'

CLEVELAND (AP) — Knowing that time is running out before the shooting starts, protesters are planning to file an appeal to stop a planned deer killing in city parks.

Members of In Defense of Deer rallied Saturday to protest and prepare for the shootings, which Judge Frank J. Celebrezze of Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court ruled last week could begin Wednesday in the Brecksville and Bedford Metroparks.

Officials say more than 300 deer need to be killed because their overgrown population is crowding out other wildlife.

With signs accusing officials of "slaughtering" deer providing a backdrop, In Defense of Deer spokeswoman Bonnie Vlach urged members to protest the shootings by calling Metroparks officials and faxing a letter to President Clinton.

Some protesters have even threatened civil disobedience. Although her group doesn't advocate such activity, Vlach knows there are some who may be willing to put themselves between themselves and the shooters.

"People are very emotional about this," Vlach said. "So there's no telling what they will do. I don't advocate it. I can't be responsible."

Jane Christyson, director of marketing and visitor services for Cleveland Metroparks who watched the rally from a distance, said she was disappointed when she heard participants threaten to put their lives in danger.

"It's a big concern," she said. "It would be a shame if they did that. It doesn't serve any purpose. Nobody wants to do this. Nobody works for a park district because they want to hurt wildlife. But you have to make hard choices."

She said the shooting will stop if there is anyone in the park.

Last winter, Cleveland Metroparks proposed shooting 100 deer. In Defense of Deer went to court then and a judge blocked the shootings.

Bucks work OT but lose first

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ohio State fell short in overtime, but coach Jim O'Brien said he was surprised the Buckeyes made it that far after trailing by nine points late in their game against Vanderbilt.

Ohio State (6-1) lost its first game of the season 92-86 Saturday night as Dan Langhi and Greg LaPointe hit four crucial free throws in overtime for the Commodores (6-1), who remained unbeaten at home and ended a six-game home-stand.

"If there was one positive thing we did tonight, it was get this game into overtime," said O'Brien, whose team was playing on the road for the first time this season. "I didn't feel we had any right to be in overtime. Our kids did a good job of getting us there. It took a tremendous effort."

Trailing 88-86 with 22.1 seconds left, Scoonie Penn of Ohio State was called for traveling. That forced him to foul LaPointe, who hit two free throws with 20 seconds left to give Vanderbilt a 90-86 lead.

Penn missed a 3-pointer on Ohio State's next possession and fouled Langhi with two seconds left.

Langhi made a pair of free throws to put the game out of reach.

Vanderbilt had squandered a 66-57 lead with 7:32 remaining in regulation play. Ohio State tied the score 80-80 with four seconds left on Ken Johnson's tip-in.

After trailing 7-2 in the first three minutes of the game, Vanderbilt rallied to take an 11-9 lead on Sam Howard's 3-pointer, his first of six for the game, with 13:32 to play in the first half. The Commodores never trailed again.

Vanderbilt, facing a full-court press from the Buckeyes for most of the half, slowly pulled away and built a 39-25 lead, its largest of the game, on Howard's 3-pointer with 2:37 remaining.

The Buckeyes cut the lead at halftime to 39-31.

Howard scored 22 points for Vanderbilt. LaPointe added 18 and Langhi had 14 points and 17 rebounds, while Vince Ford scored 12 and Deandre Moore added 10.

For the Buckeyes, Penn scored 23, Johnson 15 and Michael Redd added 10.

"Scoonie Penn is a terrific basketball player," said Commodores coach Jan van Breda Kolff. "When he played against us for Boston College, I thought he was really good and thought I would never have to face him again. Lo and behold, he transfers to Ohio State and I have to see him again."

Johnson blocked seven shots as the Buckeyes had nine blocks compared with Vanderbilt's one. But the Commodores had a 47-36 advantage in rebounding.

Vanderbilt had a poorer shooting night than Ohio State. The Commodores were 29-for-73 from the floor for 39.7 percent while the Buckeyes were 28-for-62 for 45.2 percent. But Vanderbilt had 13 3-pointers and held the Buckeyes to eight.

Bowl pairings taking shape

By The Associated Press

This could be close.

College football is set for a dramatic finish next weekend, when three games will determine which two teams play in the Fiesta Bowl with the national title on the line.

And if each of the top three teams — No. 1 Tennessee, No. 2 Kansas State and No. 3 UCLA — win on Saturday, the Bowl Championship Series and its computer chips decide which team gets left out.

"It's been a tight race throughout the season and if all three win on Saturday, it would have been a tight race to the finish," Roy Kramer, chairman of the BCS and commissioner of the SEC, said Sunday. "We feel confident in our system and look forward to next week when we designate teams for each BCS bowl."

The new BCS standings, based on the AP media poll and the coaches' poll, three computer rankings, strength-of-schedule and number of losses, will be released Monday. The final standings come out on Sunday.

Tennessee (11-0) is expected to remain in first place this week after its 41-0 rout of Vanderbilt on Saturday. UCLA (10-0) had a comfortable lead over third-place Kansas State (11-0), but the Wildcats are still hopeful of overtaking the Bruins after Saturday's games.

Saturday's glamour games include a makeup, a potential mismatch and a Midwest showdown for the Big 12 title.

UCLA travels cross country for its rescheduled game with Miami (7-3). The game was originally set for Sept. 26, but postponed due to Hurricane Georges.

Miami was clobbered 66-13 by No. 18 Syracuse on Saturday, giving the Orangemen (8-3) the Big East title a berth in either the Sugar or Orange Bowl.

At Atlanta, Tennessee should be big favorites to win their second straight SEC title when they play No. 23 Mississippi State (8-3). The Bulldogs, who beat Arkansas 22-21 last week, topped Mississippi 28-6 on Saturday to get a shot at the Vols.

At St. Louis, K-State takes on No. 10 Texas A&M (10-2) for the Big 12 title. The Aggies enter the game wounded after a last-minute 26-24 loss to Texas that ended their 10-game winning streak.

The stakes are huge for the Wildcats. Even a win doesn't guarantee them a spot in the Fiesta, but they'll do no worse than the Sugar. A loss, though, could drop them to the Alamo Bowl, with the Aggies ending up in New Orleans.

Notre Dame (9-2) fell out of the BCS picture after its 10-0 loss to Southern California (8-4) on Saturday night. It looks like the Irish will play in the Gator Bowl against Georgia Tech (9-2), a 21-19 winner over Georgia (8-3) on Saturday.

No. 6 Arizona (11-1), a 50-42 winner over Arizona State on Friday, is the likely Rose Bowl opponent for No. 8 Wisconsin, but only if UCLA beats Miami. If the Bruins lose, they will play in the Rose and the Wildcats could end up in the Holiday Bowl.

Four of the eight BCS berths have been clinched — by conference champions UCLA (Pac-10), Florida State (ACC) Wisconsin (Big Ten) and Syracuse (Big East). The Big 12 and SEC champs get the other automatic bids, with No. 5 Ohio State, Arizona and No. 7 Florida the top candidates for two at-large spots.

One of the more intriguing matchups could be No. 20 Texas vs. No. 11 Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl, a rivalry renewal from the days of the old Southwest Conference.

Other possible matchups could find Florida against No. 15 Michigan in the Citrus, Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Paul Justin is sacked by Jacksonville Jaguars defensive tackle Jose White for a 10-yard loss in the first half Sunday.

Jaguars crush Bengals, control destiny

CINCINNATI (AP) — With a career-high four touchdown passes, Mark Brunell put the Jacksonville Jaguars in control of the AFC Central.

Brunell rebounded from his worst game as a pro by throwing a touchdown pass in each quarter Sunday, setting up a 34-17 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

Jacksonville improved to 9-3 for the first time in its four years and opened a two-game lead in the AFC Central, which the Jaguars have never won. Three of the Jaguars' last four games are at home, where they've gone 5-0 this season.

The victory came one week after Brunell threw three interceptions — Dewayne Washington returned two of them for touchdowns — in a 30-15 loss in Pittsburgh, wasting a chance to open a three-game lead.

By losing to Detroit in overtime on Thanksgiving, the Steelers gave the Jaguars another chance. The Jaguars took advantage by forcing four turnovers and getting their first victory in Cincinnati.

The Bengals lost their seventh straight game and fell to 2-10 for the first time since 1994. They changed quarterbacks — Paul Justin gave way to Neil O'Donnell after a first-half interception — but wound up derided by the crowd of 55,432, which booed repeatedly and waved anti-Bengals banners.

The Jaguars' running game ground to a halt in the first quarter after two-time Pro Bowl tackle Tony Boselli and running back Fred Taylor got hurt on the same play and spent the rest of the game on the sideline. Boselli sprained his ankle and Taylor banged up his left shoulder.

That put the onus on Brunell, who was off-target at times but made the clutch throws against the NFL's lowest-ranked defense.

The four touchdown passes were a franchise record and gave Brunell 20 for the season, also a club record. He might have had a fifth, but an open Jimmy Smith dropped a long pass down the sideline late in the first half.

Brunell threw touchdown passes of 21 yards to Smith in the first quarter, 8 yards to Keenan McCardell in the second, 3 yards to McCardell in the third and 1 yard to Damon Jones in the fourth. He completed 19-of-35 for 244 yards without an interception.

Smith had seven receptions for 110 yards and McCardell caught seven for 76 yards.

It was another abysmal offensive day for the Bengals, who gave Justin his second consecutive start. Justin completed 4-of-7 for 31 yards and threw an interception directly to line-backer Kevin Hardy as Cincinnati fell behind 17-0.

O'Donnell relieved him midway through the second quarter and produced a touchdown for the first time in his last 20 series, Brian Milne's 1-yard run. His 7-yard touchdown pass to Tony McGee cut it to 20-17 in the third quarter.

But O'Donnell had two turnovers in the fourth quarter — his tipped pass was intercepted by Chris Hudon and he fumbled a snap from center — to end the comeback. O'Donnell completed 20-of-36 for 203 yards.

Ex-49er will join Cleveland Browns as head of football operations

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Dwight Clark is about to join a new team.

After 19 years with San Francisco, including the last 10 in the front office, Clark was expected to take a job with the expansion Cleveland Browns, where he'll be reunited with former 49ers president Carmen Policy.

Clark, who made "The Catch" that propelled San Francisco to the first of five Super Bowls, was expected to be formally announced as the head of football operations for the new Browns Monday.

Clark held a similar position for the 49ers the last four years but he's best known for the leaping touchdown catch that beat Dallas in the NFC championship game following the 1981 season.

A friend of exiled 49ers owner Eddie DeBartolo but also closely aligned with Policy, Clark's departure from San Francisco had been rumored for weeks.

It was held up by the league last month after 49ers interim team president Larry Thrailkill, in a meeting with NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue, raised concerns that the Browns violated anti-tampering rules by talking to Clark during the season about a job.

Clark and Policy denied the tampering allegations but Tagliabue ruled Clark was obligated to finish out the season with the 49ers even though he was working without a contract.

Thrailkill offered Clark a contract two weeks ago but it didn't include the promotion he wanted — the 49ers team presidency — and he rejected it. Over the weekend, the Browns and 49ers came to an agreement allowing Clark to leave, a deal that was also approved by the NFL.

Under the plan, the Browns have agreed they won't hire any more current employees of the 49ers — excluding players — through the 1999 season.

"The best thing to do for us simply was to have an embargo for this period of time," Thrailkill said.

Clark, meanwhile, said he had mixed feelings about his move.

"I'm kind of confused and sad that I'm leaving," he said. "But I'm tremendously excited about the opportunity that's out there with the Cleveland Browns."

Clark, traveling Sunday to Cleveland, had made it clear early this season he didn't plan to stay with San Francisco unless he became team president. But in conversations with DeBartolo, his sister, acting owner Denise DeBartolo York, and Thrailkill, he received no indication he would be considered for the job.

"I'm not upset about it. I'm disappointed," Clark said. "But they are the people in charge and they should be able to select the guy to run their show."

Big bargains dominate at kickoff of holiday shopping season

NEW YORK (AP) — Bargain hunters flocked to stores during the first days of the holiday shopping season, with merchants who offered deep discounts and low prices faring best over the Thanksgiving weekend.

"Price remains No. 1 on everyone's list, and we saw that shoppers would buy if they thought the price was right," said Kurt Barnard, a retail consultant and president of Barnard's Retail Trend Report in Upper Montclair, N.J.

Retailers are optimistic about the holiday season, thanks in part to the recent rise in consumer confidence and sharp gains on Wall Street.

But even in these healthy economic times, consumers put value above most else when making a purchase, and discount stores like Wal-Mart and Target were big winners over the weekend.

Many merchants are going to great lengths to encourage shoppers to buy early in the season, rather than wait until the days before and after Christmas, when stores slash prices significantly to clear out inventories.

The biggest push came Friday, when more merchants than ever opened before dawn and used incentives — ranging from giveaways to significant price cuts — to entice shoppers to arrive early.

The promotions drew record crowds to some malls, with some stores reporting that thousands of people were waiting for their doors to open.

"Price remains No. 1 on everyone's list, and we saw that shoppers would buy if they thought the price was right."

"I saved $100," Joe DiMattia said proudly after he bought a new coat for his wife at the Quakerbridge Mall in Lawrence Township, N.J.

TeleCheck Services Inc., a check approval service, said the amount of sales paid for by check on Friday rose 4.4 percent from the same day a year ago.

Many stores, however, reported that sales slowed as the weekend progressed. That was attributed to fewer promotions and warmer-than-usual weather throughout much of the country.

"The stores that offered the great deals early on were absolutely the most successful this weekend," said Kimberly Baughman, general manager of the Great Lakes Crossing mall in Auburn Hills, Mich.

Even with the slowdown Saturday, many stores reported healthy sales for the weekend, and merchants hope that the season will end with as much excitement as it started with on Friday.

But many remained cautious, knowing that any stock market volatility or unusual weather in the coming weeks could keep shoppers home.

"People are feeling very upbeat," said John Konarski, vice president of research for the International Council of Shopping Centers, a New York-based trade group. "But they know most of their season is still to come."

Especially strong over the weekend were discount stores, which lured value-oriented consumers who like the wide selection of merchandise that's available under one roof.

Electronics and computer retailers also used price to their advantage. Best Buy, the consumer electronics chain, saw huge demand for a $599 IBM computer and printer package, as well as a $288 DVD player, which came with five movies.

Toy stores also found shoppers buying up discounted items, with many retailers offering price cuts on everything from Barbie dolls to Blue's Clues games. Crowds also gathered for the hard-to-find Furby dolls, which sold out of most stores within minutes of the doors opening on Friday.

Department stores continued to struggle, their already troubled businesses hurt by the warm weather in the Midwest and Northeast that inspired few shoppers to buy sweaters or winter coats.

Chinese president continues Japan trip

SENDAI, Japan (AP) — After days of controversy over historical issues, Chinese President Jiang Zemin left behind the bustle of Tokyo on Sunday to tour farms and visit a Chinese writer's memorial in northern Japan.

Jiang and his wife, Wang Yeping, laid wreaths on a pristine day at a monument to Chinese writer and social critic Lu Xun in the northeastern Japanese city of Sendai.

Grandchildren of Lu and Genkuro Fujino, Lu's professor at Sendai's Tohoku University, where the writer studied in 1904, shook hands with Jiang at the ceremony. Lu is one of China's most popular and influential authors.

Jiang also visited Tohoku University and stood at the lectern of a classroom where Lu studied.

Jiang's trip to the rural north on the fifth day of his historic visit to Japan marked a break from the diplomatic snafus that characterized his stay in Tokyo.

On Friday, protesters shouted anti-Chinese slogans while Jiang delivered a speech urging Japan to remind its youth of the horrors it committed during World War II. Three students were arrested in scuffles with security guards.

Scores of demonstrators, protesting China's nuclear weapons program and human rights abuses, were dragged away by police.

Japan's omission of a full written apology for its brutal invasion of China has led observers to question whether Jiang's visit has succeeded in its aim of achieving a full reconciliation between the two Asian giants. Jiang's repeated references to Japan's past militarism in recent days have indicated lingering mistrust of Tokyo.

Editorials Sunday in Hong Kong newspapers branded Jiang's visit a diplomatic failure and said Beijing overestimated its ability to secure a full apology for World War II.

"Japan chose to be confrontational with China because it does not want to see China becoming a major international powerhouse," the Chinese-language Ming Pao said.

Later, Jiang boarded a plane to Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido, where he visited flower growers and ranchers near the city of Sapporo, Kyodo News agency reported.

Sendai is 190 miles northeast of Tokyo, while Sapporo is 515 miles north of the capital.

Jiang's trip is the first of a Chinese head of state to Japan since World War II. The Chinese president departs Monday for Beijing.

Separatist premier set to regain power in Quebec's provincial elections

MONTREAL (AP) — Showing confidence on the last day of campaigning, Quebec's pro-independence premier toured opposition districts Sunday in hopes his party can increase its majority and build momentum for a new referendum on seceding from Canada.

Lucien Bouchard, favored to return to power in Monday's provincial election, urged supporters of his Parti Quebecois to work for a high turnout of separatist voters.

He closed the 33-day campaign with a swing through six districts around Montreal, five of them won narrowly by the anti-separatist Quebec Liberal Party in the last election in 1994.

Liberal leader Jean Charest, who wants Quebec to abandon the threat of secession, insisted he still had a chance of victory.

Yeltsin to stay in hospital at least several more days

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian President Boris Yeltsin will stay in the hospital for at least several more days while he recuperates from pneumonia, his spokesman said Sunday.

Yeltsin planned to hold a series of meetings at the Central Clinical Hospital during his stay, including a session with Prime Minister Yevgeny Primakov, presidential spokesman Dmitry Yakushkin told Echo Moscow radio.

"Everything is going according to plan and Yeltsin is undergoing scheduled treatment," Yakushkin said, according to the Interfax news agency.

A prominent liberal leader, Grigory Yavlinsky, said meanwhile that the era of Yeltsin's leadership "ended a long time ago" and predicted that Russia would hold presidential elections "very soon."

Yeltsin, 67, has been hospitalized since Nov. 22 with the latest in a series of ailments that have raised concerns about his ability to serve out his term, which ends in 2000.

Yeltsin has rarely appeared in public in recent months, and has said little about the country's economic crisis — the worst since the Soviet Union collapsed seven years ago.

Yavlinsky, leader of the moderately liberal Yabloko party, said Sunday that the country is coming to the end of a "very difficult period" — Yeltsin's second term as Russian president, which began in 1996.

Yavlinsky lost in the first round of the 1996 presidential election and is expected to run again. He has refused to join colleagues who have called for Yeltsin's resignation, but said he expected an election to be held soon, without explaining why, Interfax reported.

Yakushkin said Sunday that doctors are treating Yeltsin's pneumonia with caution.
