"(The solidarity movement supporters) have lost a lot of their steam," he said. Herfeld also said he believes the conference promotes anti-Semitism.

Saleh said both of those statements are untrue. She said 500 people registered to attend the conference this year, just slightly under the number of people who attended the two previous conferences. Saleh said this had more to do with the last-minute decision to change the location of the conference than a lack of support.

Saleh also said none of the participants advocate discrimination against Jews.

New courts ready for use

By Chris Galoski Lantern staff writer

The volleyball and basketball courts on north campus near Taylor Tower are getting a necessary makeover.

Renovations for the volleyball courts took about two weeks to complete and the basketball courts are expected to be finished by the end of November, except for color coding.

The basketball courts were built in the 1950s, and there really hasn't been any renovation since the mid-1950s," said Bruce Maurer, associate director of recreational and intramural

The basketball courts were two side-by-side courts. A new lighting system, rims, poles, four were also installed on the west side. Because the color coding requires four 50-degree days, it will probably be completed during the spring, Maurer said.

Before the courts were split. Now they're consolidated and there's a hillside to sunbathe, throw a football or catch a baseball," Maurer said.

The volleyball courts were constructed two years ago with an additional six inches of sand, an 18-inch retaining wall to keep the ball in play, and a place for spectators to sit.

Because the courts were mired in bad sand, incorrect dimensions and a poor location, they were moved across College Road, said Steve Kremer, director of housing and assistant vice president of Student Affairs. He also praised the removal of a chain-link fence that had been surrounding the courts since the 1960s.

"Nobody liked it, but nobody took the initiative to get rid of it,"

Even though students had limited time to use the courts before the weather changed, the demolished and replaced with renovations have not gone unnoticed.

Student PR group best in country

The Ohio State chapter of the Public Relations Student Society of America was named the top chapter in the nation at a national conference in New Orleans, La., Oct. 24-28.

"I'm obviously excited, but I'm more excited for the chapter as a whole," said Amber Newman, president of the OSL chapter of PRSSA. "Without everyone, we wouldn't have gotten this award."

Various awards were given at the conference, including top firm and best community service project. The OSU chapter earned the 2004 Dr. F.H. Teahan Award which is given to the chapter that pursues strong university and community networks, maintains active membership at the local and national levels, provides internship opportunities, engages in strong alumni relations, and provides students with the opportunity to work for public relations companies.

"If you want to be in the communications field, (by joining PRSSA) you are going to have more real-world experience and you are going to learn more than from any other avenue at OSU," said Dan Steinberg, faculty advisor for the OSU chapter of PRSSA.

"Obviously, by being chapter of the year, the whole organization at the national level recognizes that we are doing things different than any other chapter," he said.

Over the past two years, the OSU chapter has grown from 20 to 238 members and is one of the largest in the country. PRSSA meetings are held the first and third Wednesday of every month at 6 p.m. in the Journalism Building's Hall of Fame

"CLS student chapters that wish to affiliate themselves with the national organization should adopt the national bylaws," said Michael Berry, president of the Ohio State chapter of Christian Legal Society. "If we voted not to adopt the bylaws, it would effectively mean that the chapter decided not to affiliate with the national organization."

The society can remain in compliance with the university if members vote against the amendments, but this would mean the group will no longer be able to use the name Christian Legal Society and will lose benefits provided by the national organization.

The issue has drawn much attention from law students, professors and members of the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgender group at OSU. The main concern has been the issue of exclusion from the group, which is something that contradicts university policy.

"I understand that this matter involves deeply held beliefs on both sides. Our group's only complaint is as to exclusion," said Chris Geidner, president of OutLaws, the OSU Moritz College of Law's GLBT student group. "The purpose of the university's nondiscrimination policy is simple: All students have the opportunity for full participation in all university-recognized student groups."

Standards of the Christian Legal Society are not "targeted" at homosexuals and even if society said nothing about homosexuality, the group would still continue to elect only believing Christians as officers — which would place them in violation of the College of Law's nondiscrimination clause with regards to religion, Blackwell said.

The vote today will likely cause a clash of viewpoints regardless of the outcome, and supporters of both sides are anxious to find out if the OSU chapter will amend its constitution to reflect that of the national organization. The decision is expected to be reached by 1 p.m., but there is a possibility of postponement.

We look forward to a respectful resolution of these concerns and trust that the members and leadership of CLS feel the same," Geidner said. "OutLaws has full faith that Dean Nancy Rogers (of OSU Moritz College of Law) has the best interest of all students in mind as she works on resolving this complaint."

OUR VIEWS

Peace reigns

Quiet weekend good for all

While the Third Nation Student Conference of the Palestine Solidarity Movement has been the subject of controversy and debate for weeks, the weekend event came to an end Sunday at the Ohio Union — peacefully.

With many people opposing the OSU location for the Palestine Solidarity Movement conference, massive protesting seemed guaranteed.

President Holbrook released a statement asking the university community to refrain from violent actions as the Palestine Solidarity Movement group convened for two days of workshops and discussions to free Palestine.

Aside from minor verbal confrontations, both the pro-and anti-Palestine groups voiced their opinons — respecting Holbrook's advice.

Many in opposition held signs and shouted at the movement's supporters, while groups such as the Columbus Jewish Federation along with other Jewish student-organizations discouraged protesting all together. The Coalition for Jewish Concerns presented Holbrook a letter objecting the conference, but her representative told The Lantern "this conference is permitted to occur because of the right to practice free speech afforded by the First Amendment."

The conference coupled with the peaceful protesters represent the First Amendment at its best. Both the Palestine Solidarity Movement supporters and the pro-Israeli side were able to exercise their freedom of speech in an effective manner because they peaceably assembled. Neither message became blurred by violent outbursts that so often askew public perspective.

In the past such hostile eruptions have stolen the true essence of why people gather. For example, the riots after the last year's OSU/Michigan game. After that weekend, the national media focused more on the massive fires raging east of High Street rather than OSU's victory. The same can't be said about the Ohio Union this weekend, where the focus remained on both sides of the issue.

Not only did Holbrook release the right statement using the First Amendment as her defense, her message may have been the reminder people needed to get their ideas truly across.

Despite the mutual disagreement between the Palestine Solidarity Movement members and the groups in opposition, the university did a good job remaining as unbiased as possible. OSU had more courage than Rutgers University which refused to hold the conference because Jewish leaders protested.

In order for the Pro-Israeli and Pro-Palestinian groups to find peace, which should be the ultimate goal of all, conversation and debate is a must. In this country, the First Amendment may be the key that unlocks the controversial door.

Docudrama TV

Networks exploit Lynch, Smart

For one week in November, America's televisions are bombarded by surprise guest stars, network events and the first wave of new show "hiatuses." The seven days are referred to as sweeps week, which pits the major networks against each other for an additional portion of the coveted 18-49 demographic

For this sweeps week, both CBS and NBC decided to forgo their traditional Sunday night schedules for opposing docudramas last night. NBC aired "Saving Jessica Lynch," the story of a plucky young soldier who fought for her life in Iraq and became a national treasure when she was rescued. CBS aired "The Elizabeth Smart Story," the story of a plucky young Utahan who fought for her life from her kidnappers and became a national treasure when she was rescued.

And who were the winners last night in the TV wars?
Those who skipped both movies and watched new episodes of "Alias" and "Malcolm in the Middle."

All of these such docudramas are merely exploitative events that try to capitalize in on someone else's, often undeserved, fame. Obviously, it's a great thing that both Lynch and Smart were rescued from their respective captors, but neither one seems very excited about telling her story. The same has been true for docudrama subjects in the past — such as Amy Fisher, O.J. Simpson and Scott O'Grady. None of them really deserve the extra media attention, and these movies just perpetuate the media frenzy around these famous non-celebrities.

Although Lynch has signed a $1 million book deal and sold her exclusive interview to Diane Sawyer, the made-for-TV movie of her struggle was announced days after her rescue last April. In fact, Lynch herself has nothing to do with this movie. It was put together entirely through news reports and the book "Because Each Life is Precious" by Iraqi lawyer Mohammed Odeh Al-Rehaief. Unsurprisingly, the movie centers more around the lawyer, who aided in the rescue, than Lynch.

At least "The Elizabeth Smart Story" makes an attempt at realism. Ed and Lois Smart, Elizabeth's parents, actually authorized this movie, meaning the movie may be more accurate than one put together with unreliable news stories. But the Smart movie still isn't better than exploitative schlock. The Smarts authorized the movie as a way to express their opposition to being thrust into the spotlight. The irony isn't lost on the film, which has actually gotten a few positive reviews — "skillfully told and emotionally powerful" said The Columbus Dispatch.

But positive reviews alone are not enough to merit the film getting made. Although both Lynch and Smart are reacting to their new infamy differently — Lynch is embracing her "hero" role and Smart is trying to get a normal childhood back — both are being used by these two networks solely as a ratings grab, which doesn't do justice to the subjects' wishes or their stories.

N. Korea may stir critics

In a report to Congress last week, the Central Intelligence Agency said it believes North Korea has the necessary technology to produce nuclear weapons using fuel obtained from its nuclear fuel sources.

This intelligence report is another indication that the country will seek to make weapons the United States wants to outlaw the rest of the world from producing. For the rather hawkish Republican wing that has strongly influenced Bush's foreign policy, a political statement such as this — especially to an administration touting the Bush Doctrine of pre-emptive self-defense — means action.

What action will be taken regarding North Korea cannot be yet known. The president has been relatively openminded about multi-national talks to possibly offer security to the country if it disarms. But he has said previously that he will not tolerate a nuclear North Korea, especially not if the nation continues to break treaties and develop weapons of mass destruction openly.

Too, the South Pacific has been a tricky region for the United States for nearly six decades — a place of the United States has come to know mostly through combat. Now with regional economic and militaristic superpowers China and Japan looming large in the region, a U.S. military already overstretched and the possibility of another hefty price tag for drastic action, the situation gets trickier.

But what Kim Jong II, North Korea's erratic, bespectacled leader, can and will do — with technology he may or may not have — is only part of the dilemma Bush will face in the coming months. As North Korea's nuclear capability continues to become more visible, the question for the Bush administration will be this: Even if the threat is real, how will the administration shape the intelligence to a public made skeptical by the misinformation about the threat of weapons of mass destruction in Iraq?

For most, the "intelligence community"— where these weapons reports originate — has always been a mythical, mysterious entity. Analysts are involved, as are computers and satellites, but how any information is processed and transmitted is largely a secret and tangled web.

For many during the past year, that mystery has turned from mystique to the potential to be misinterpreted. Though deceit has always been a part of the American presidency, how a president can willingly manipulate intelligence is one of the lasting legacies of the war in Irag.

Critics of the war point to the White House's deliberate tinkering with intelligence; most who still support Operation Iraqi Freedom realize the claims about WMDs were false.

Whatever action is taken abroad will be preceded at home by a different battle, in which George Bush must act using a bag with many fewer tricks. Once it was a bag that was untested and, therefore, not mistrusted. It is now a bag many feel was used to legitimize an invasion that has yielded more chaos than democracy and more deaths of U.S. soldiers than weapons of mass destruction.

And pitching policy without many of his old tricks to a people weary over death tolls and an uncertain future abroad — a people who realize they had been lied to from the start — will be difficult

I want to comment on your news article and editorial about the OUAB Big Free Concert held at the Schottenstein Center. I worked with the students in preparing them for a concert of this size at a venue they had not used before so I am aware of some of the struggles they had in presenting their first show.

I will qualify my remarks by first saying I cannot address the final choice of acts with respect to the music genre. That was strictly a student decision. I do know, however, they explored numerous bands before deciding that 311 was the act they wanted — based or cost and availability.

I will, however, address the scheduling and capacity issues.

Scheduling is an issue I face every day in my job as booking director for the center. Neither I nor the OUAB can control tour routing.

Agencies, managers and bands decide the cities they want to play on the tour, and the dates for the tour far in advance of calling us to book a date. The 311 tour was basically booked for the fall wher the student activity fee was put into place. Dates were limited, and if that show was to play Columbus this fall, Monday, Oct. 27 was the only routable date.

Certainly we have a wonderful 20,000 seat building. But we never assume a capacity crowd. Sure, there are certain acts we think will fill the seats given to us by the show. Most often we set up in an end-stage, a 180 degree configuration that allows for approximately 12,000 seats. (The number of seats available for any given show is also determined by the agent and manager). When we also book shows, we fully understand we won't attract that many.

Therefore, the center developed its theater as a way to make the setting more intimate when a smaller show is booked.

Not every show is a 20,000 seater. The tour history for 311 shows they are selling 3,000-4,000 tickets. So to have 6,000 show up for a free show is right in the ballpark for their fans.

I commend the OUAB for their efforts. We at the Schottensteir Center look forward to a long and successful relationship.

Abortion ban saves lives

is a senior in agricultural communications. He can be reached for comment at bussa_4@yahoo.com I usually try to stay away from any type of political views when writing my columns, but this week, I'm going to have to make an exception. Congratulations President Bush. You have helped our country take a giant step in the right direction. Last week, President Bush signed into law a bill preventing partial-birth abortions.

While it is true that abortions can still be performed during the first trimester of a pregnancy, we seem to be headed in the right direction to completely ban abortion in our country. For antiabortionists, this is big.

A partial-birth abortion occurs when a baby's head is exposed from the uterus and then hit with an instrument or poked with a needle. Are you joking? Why not just have the doctor stick his hand in, yank the baby out, throw it in a pool and tell it to swim? At least that way it has a chance, right?

Partial-birth abortion is the most cruel and inhumane thing a person could think of. It's almost like something out of a Quentin Tarantino movie.

What kind of a person would one have to be to perform one of these "procedures?" I definitely wouldn't want to meet him. Even worse than the doctors are the people who support these procedures.

The president of the Planned
Parenthood Federation of America said

Parenthood Federation of America said the bill "marks a concerted effort to set back decades of progress in achieving reproductive freedom."

Reproductive freedom? Poking a hole in a baby's head because a girl decided she doesn't want it is reproductive freedom?

Reproductive freedom is not a girl going out whoring around every night because she knows if she gets pregnant it won't be a problem. She can just call good ol' Dr. Problem Solver the next day and everything will be fine. Give me a break. Be a responsible person for once, and deal with it.

What would make a person decide to have an abortion that late in their pregnancy anyway? I mean, a person's fine with it for the first six months, then decides, ahh, I've changed my mind. I think I'll make a decision to commit murder now. Why not just wait it out a few more months and put the kid up for adoption? I guess that would be too much trouble. It might get in the way of a party next week.

President Bush made a statement saying, "For years, a terrible form of violence has been directed against children who are inches from birth while the law looked the other way."

This could be the most intelligent statement made by the President. He went on to say, "Today, at last, the American people and our government have confronted the violence and come to the defense of the innocent child."

Innocent child. Those two words should be enough for anyone in favor of abortion. What do you think the kid would say

What do you think the kid would say if we ask it whether or not to perform an abortion? Well, if it knew anything at all about its mother, the kid might not think it wasn't a bad idea.

Abortion rights groups said the law was to broad, didn't consider the health of a woman, and was the first step in a larger campaign to ban abortions for the first time since they became legal in 1973.

Yes, it's a first step, and it's about time someone took it.

Doesn't consider the health of the mother? I think the mother should be worrying about her own mental health if she's willing to let a doctor whack a baby upside the head.

I don't know what abortion rights people are worried about. Even if abortions ever do become illegal, there will always be some cracked-out doctor willing to be a rebel because he believes women should be able to choose.

Again President Bush, I applaud your courage for not being afraid to stand up for what you believe is right.

It makes me so proud that I might decide to vote for you in the upcoming election.

If you accidentally got pregnant, could you still make it to graduation?

Depo-Provera is 99.7% effective in preventing unintended pregnancies.

If you're not ready, you're not ready. That's why more women than ever choose Depo-Provera. You need just 1 shot every 11 to 13 weeks to protect you from pregnancy. So, you can focus on history, not maternity.

Depo-Provera does not protect you from HIV/AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases.

You shouldn't use Depo-Provera if you could be pregnant or if you have had any unexplained periods. You should not use it if you have a history of breast cancer, blood clots, stroke, or liver disease. When using Depo-Provera, there may be a loss of some of the bone mineral stored in your bones. This could increase your risk of developing bone fractures.

See what Depo-Provera is all about. Call toll free 1-866-519-DEPO or visit www.depo-provera.com.

Some women using Depo-Provera have side effects. The most common are irregular periods or spotting. Many women stop having periods altogether after a few months. You may gain weight when using Depo-Provera. About two thirds of the women in clinical trials reported a weight gain of about 5 lb during the first year of use.

If you're not ready to get pregnant, be ready with effective birth control. Talk to your health care provider to see if prescription Depo-Provera is right for you.

Birth control you think about just 4 x a year.

Seats still open on Grad Council

Busy schedules just one reason for vacancies

By Chris Paul Lantern staff writer

The Council of Graduate Students wants you.

Numerous delegate positions on the council remain unfilled. The CGS is the student government for about 10,000 Ohio State graduate students.

This is something that happens every year," said Alistair Fraser, a delegate for the geography department. "I know several graduate students who do not want to be a delegate."

The existence of a competing organization might be a reason for the open seats, Fraser said. The Graduate Employees and Students' Organization at OSU also represents graduate students.

GESO wishes to represent about 4,000 graduate assistants,

According to GESO, the group's focus is on the working conditions of graduate assistants at OSU. The distinction is that they are concerned about those graduate students who have research or teaching assistant positions and are considered employees of the university.

However, the CGS represents all 10,000 graduate students.

"But maybe some graduate assistants feel that GESO may be better for them," Fraser said.

Graduate students' busy schedules are the reason for the open delegate seats, said CGS president Jamie Depelteau.

"Graduate students are typically more focused on their research and/or teaching responsibilities and sometimes don't have the time to participate in other activities," he

"Also, many graduate student advisers, programs and departments discourage their students from participating in extracurricular activities such as CGS," Depelteau said.

The size of the graduate programs at OSU is another reason for the open delegate seats, said William A.T. Clark, associate dean of the graduate school and CGS' advisor. "There are more than 120 graduate programs at OSU spread throughout a large campus.

CGS placed an ad in The Lantern informing graduate students of the open seats.

"It's hard to communicate such positions to a large community," said Clark. "There are a lot of positions to begin with, and it's very difficult to fill all of them."

Clark said GESO isn't the reason for the open delegate seats.

"These are very, very busy stu-dents," he said. "Graduate students probably have more work than the typical undergrad. It just becomes more and more difficult to find time to volunteer."

Although there are more than 70 open delegate positions, CGS is still a large group, Clark said

'GESO has a small amount of people in their group," Clark said. They have just been making a lot of noise lately, which has brought them a lot of attention."

CGS is very good at representing the needs of graduate students, Fraser said. "It's just that some students aren't active.'

The open delegate seats do not require the rest of CGS to pick up the slack, Depelteau said.

The council is appropriately represented throughout the university," he said. "I don't feel that the delegates have to make up for the unfilled delegate seats since non-delegate graduate students are also involved with CGS.'

Gazing at the stars, sky clears for eclipse

By Terry Kinney Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Sky-watchers in every continent but Australia reveled in the relative rarity of a total lunar eclipse Saturday night — but as stargazers have rhapsodized for centuries, it was a matter of celestial perspective.

"From the moon, they're having a solar eclipse," noted Dean Regas, a staff astronomer at the Cincinnati Observatory Center.

A lunar eclipse occurs when the moon, Earth and sun are in perfect alignment and the moon passes through the planet's shadow. In a solar eclipse, the Earth is in the moon's shadow.

The Cincinnati Observatory, which claims to be the oldest in the United States, was founded in 1842. It had one of its biggest nights ever Saturday, as officials estimated about 800 people stood in lines for a chance to peer at the moon through the observatory's tele-

Outside, amateur astronomers set up telescopes on one of the city's highest promontories. Bill Lewis, a 53-year old computer programmer old brother, Bennett. from suburban Montgomery, declared the viewing a success.

"It's a good one, because the sky is so clear," he said, adjusting the focus on his new $500 rig. "I thought there would be about 10 of us crazies out here, but look at the crowd.'

The only bigger night observatory officials could remember was earlier this year when about 1,500 turned out for a special viewing when Mars was at its closest to the Earth in 60,000 years.

The lunar eclipse is seen from the Observatory in Cincinnati Saturday. Many amateurs brought out their telescopes in addition to the observatory's large telescopes.

Fred Moss and his two children watched with the naked eye because they were near the end of the telescope line.

'It was really cool," said 9year-old Hana Moss.

"I thought it was beautiful, the way it shined," said her 12-yearmedroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension

DEPO-PROVERA[®] Contraceptive Injection (medroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension, USP)

This product is intended to prevent pregnancy. It does not protect against HIV infection (AIDS) and other sexually transmitted diseases.

What is DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection is a form of birth control that is given as an intramuscular injection (a shot) in the buttock or upper arm once every 3 months (13 weeks). To continue your contraceptive protection, you must return for your next injection promptly at the end of 3 months (13 weeks). DEPO-PROVERA contains medroxyprogesterone acetate, a chemical similar to (but not the same as) the natural hormone progesterone, which is produced by your ovaries during the second half of your menstrual cycle. DEPO-PROVERA acts by preventing your egg cells from ripening. If an egg is not released from the ovaries during your menstrual cycle, it cannot become fertilized by sperm and result in pregnancy. DEPO-PROVERA likes rauses changes in the lining of your uterus that make it less likely for pregnancy to occur.

How effective is DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

The efficacy of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

The efficacy of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

The efficacy of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection depends on following the recommended dosage schedule exactly (see "How often do I get my shot of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?"). To make sure you are not pregnant when you first get DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection, your first injection must be given ONLY during the first 5 days of a normal menstrual period. ONLY within the first 5 days after childbirth if not breast-feeding and, if exclusively breast-feeding, ONLY within the first 5 days after childbirth if not breast-feeding and, if exclusively breast-feeding, ONLY at the sixth week after childbirth. It is a long-term injectable contraceptive injection is over 99% effective, making it one of the most reliable methods of birth control available. This means that the average annual pregnancy rate is less than one for every 100 women who use DEPO-PROVERA. The effectiveness of most contraceptive methods depends in part on how reliably each woman uses the method. The effectiveness of DEPO-PROVERA depends only on the patient returning every 3 months (13 weeks) for her next injection. Your health-care provider will help you compare DEPO-PROVERA with other contraceptive method is the right choice for you.

The following table shows the parest of the provider of the provider will be provided in order to decide which contraceptive method is the right choice for you.

What if I want to become pregnant after using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive What it is want to become pregnant and injection?

Because DEPO-PROVERA is a long-acting birth control method, it takes some time after your last injection for its effect to wear off. Based on the results from a large study done in the United States, for women who stop using DEPO-PROVERA in order to become pregnant, it is expected that about half of those who become pregnant will do so in about 10 months after their last injection about two thirds of those who become pregnant will do so in about 15 months; and about 93% of those who become pregnant will do so in about 15 months; and about 93% of those who become pregnant will do so in about 15 months; and about 93% of those who become pregnant will do so in about 18 months after their last injection. The length of time you use DEPO-PROVERA has no effect on how long it takes you to become pregnant after you stop using it.

2.Bane Mineral Changes
Use of DEPO-PROVERA may be associated with a decrease in the amount of mineral stored in your bones. This could increase your risk of developing bone fractures. The rate of bone mineral loss is greatest in the early years of DEPO-PROVERA use, but after that, it begins to resemble the normal rate of age-related bone mineral loss.

Buckeyes back on track in big win over Michigan State

By Nick Houser Lantern sports writer

Throughout the last week Craig Krenzel faced so much scrutiny it seemed the fickle Buckeye Nation had forgotten all about last year's national championship. Still very much in the hunt for another title, No. 6 Ohio State, its quarterback and the rest of the offense roared back to life downing No. 14 Michigan State 33-23 Saturday at Ohio

Krenzel rebounded from last week's injury by going 12-of-23 through the air for 213 yards and three touchdowns. While Krenzel threw one interception, back-up Scott McMullen did not see any action until the Buckeyes were up 30-17 midway through the fourth quarter.

"I wasn't motivated by being replaced, I was motivated by offensively we haven't done as well as we should have all year long," Krenzel said. "And we know down the stretch of this season that we're going to need to put some points on the board to help our defense out and our special teams out."

Aiding Krenzel in his return was nning back Lydell Ross, who finally had a big game against a formidable defense. He ran through the Spartans' defense, which had only been allowing 101 yards per game for 127 yards.

"They had tons of them," senior tight end Ben Hartsock said. "They area conversion and kept the drive alive, very aggressive team, but sometimes they were overly aggressive. We've been preparing for that all week."

The Spartans' two biggest penalties came in the second quarter after Buckeye sophomore Tyler Everett's 66-yard interception return. a Buckeye first down that led to the eventual go-ahead touchdown.

There were only two penalties against the Buckeyes, but one came back to haunt them. The infraction occurred midway through the first quarter when MSU faced a third-andfive situation. OSU defender Chris Gamble made contact early on a pass from senior MSU quarterback Jeff Smoker to sophomore wide receiver

The resulting pass interference call gave the Spartans a critical third-down which resulted in a touchdown. Many fans disagreed with the call, and television replays seemed to suggest that the play was clean. But the damage was done, and Michigan State capitalized on the penalty to take an early lead.

The other OSU penalty, a delay of game call in the winding moments of the fourth quarter, had no effect on the

Shelley's goals put out Flames

By Craig Sweeney Lantern sports reporter

An offensive explosion from an unexpected source and an explosive power play in the second period helped the home team grab the victory last night at Nationwide Arena.

Two goals from left wing Jody Shelley and three goals during a 2 minute, 11 second span in the second period powered the Columbus Blue Jackets to a 4-3 victory over the Calgary Flames.

"It was good to take it home with a 4-3 win," coach Doug MacLean said. "I think it's a real character builder."

Shelley, a fan-favorite for his tendency to get in scuffles on the ice, got the Blue Tackets on the board in the first period with his first goal of the season after deflecting a Scott Lachance shot. The power play goal was Shelley's first of his NHL career.

It was Shelley's second goal of the night that began the scoring burst in the second period to put the Blue Jackets in front for good. Shelley said he was obviously excited about his first multi-goal game.

'That's pretty awesome," Shelley said. "I was pretty pumped and the boys were pretty pumped to see it."

Shelley's teammates were excited for him and glad to see him get into the scor-

'It's great to see him rewarded with a couple of goals," left wing Geoff Sanderson said. "He does all the dirty work for us. He gives guys like me room out there."

With the score knotted at 2-2 following the Shelley goal, power play goals by center Andrew Cassels and Sanderson followed within a minute of each other.

MacLean was glad to see Cassels and Sanderson contribute after struggling early this season. 'Cassels and Sanderson scoring for us is huge," MacLean said. "You know it's going to happen. It's a matter of time." The power play was key in the second period and in the game registering three goals for the Blue Jackets. MacLean said he can see good things happening with the power play in the future following last night's performance. "It hasn't been in sync and we've got to keep developing that," he said. "I think there is potential for it to be real good." The two goals by Shelley increased his career NHL total to six. In 121 career NHL games entering this season, Shelley had scored four goals and racked up 465 penalty minutes.

Eight seconds after Calgary's first goal, Shelley tangled with Flames left wing Krzysztof Oliwa. The scuffle earned both men five-minute major penalties for fighting. The scuffle dated back to the early match up this season when the two had a run-in.

"That's what I enjoy," he said. "You got to feed off stuff like that."

ning of the game, and we felt that individually we had to step our game up and help out the secondary," OSU defensive end Will Smith said. "He had too much time to throw the ball."

The Spartans ran the ball for only 5 yards on 17 attempts and did not find the end zone again until the closing moments of the game.

Instead the Buckeye offense showed up with a little help from its defense. Following Nugent's first field goal of the game, Smoker

Back in the driver's seat, Krenzel made a big play on third down in the red zone. With the pocket collapsing, he side-stepped the heavy pressure to find tight end Ben Hartsock open along the sideline for a 17-yard touchdown to give OSU the 10-7 lead with 10:53 left in the half.

A little over three minutes later Krenzel was at it again, needing three plays to go 60 yards to make the game 17-7. After he connected with Jenkins for a 21-yard toss to start the drive, the senior quarterback found Santonio Holmes who out-maneuvered four defenders and dove into the end zone for the 37-yard score.

final outcome. The Buckeyes' 33 points was the second-highest regulation total score of the season. "We felt like if we could keep our penalties down, we could put more points on the board," freshman receiver Santonio Holmes said.

Too many penalties have been costly for the Buckeyes earlier in the season. When visiting San Diego State took OSU down to the wire, the Aztecs were helped by 12 Buckeye penalties resulting in 124 yards. The Buckeyes outdid themselves the following week by committing 14 penalties for 129 yards in their triple-overtime victory against North Carolina State.

"That was something we talked about last week that we have to get better at - eliminating our penalties without eliminating the aggressive style of play that we have," coach Jim Tressel said.

On a day when the muchmaligned offense was finally rolling, the Buckeyes did not see long plays called back for holding. The Buckeyes were also not called for a single false start penalty. The result was a potent offensive attack that, at times, resembled the undefeated champions of last

"Our guys didn't pop off or lose their cool," Hartsock said. "We stayed composed, and we were able to capitalize on that."

OSU joker tickles funny bone at new home

Senior displays 'smart' wit at Larry's becomes more than a bar every Tuesday night; it transforms into what is affectionately known as the place "where comedy goes to

On these nights, local comedians take to the microphone to try out their new material and practice the old. One of these comics is student with a resume full of stand-up performances.

Ryan Silverman, a senior in English, has been doing stand-up for almost three years now.

"Istarted doing open mics back in Febuary of 2001," Silverman said. "I'd been writing bits and stuff though for years. I bought a comedy notebook back in high school, although all the stuff I wrote before my first open mic night pretty much ended up on the cutting room floor.'

Silverman got his start at Easton's Funny Bone.

"The FunnyBone used to have an open mic every Monday night at 8, and there was a workshop at 6:30 where people could go up to try out new stuff in front of the other comics," Silverman said. "New comics like myself could build a solid five-minute set."

The Funny Bone used to hold contests for comedians twice a year, said Silverman. The first Larry's, on High Street, contest, held during the summer, awarded the winner a small cash prize and a guest spot opening for another comic's show.

'I entered that contest and lost in the first round, which was harsh, although I had only been doing comedy for about four months at that point," he said.

Silverman's second contest not just funny; he's an Ohio State attempt took place the following autumn. This time the winner would be given a paid guest spot opening for the incoming comedians.

"From late September through mid-November, I went through three rounds, and beat out about 40 comics, to tie for first place," Silverman said. "From that I got booked to MC in July of 2002 and I did a decent enough job that they brought me back to work two more weeks that year and eight Though Silverman's public success has occurred recently, he has performed comedy to his family since he was young.

"Ifirst noticed Ryan's tendency towards comedy as a young child," said his mother, Debbie Silverman. "He has always liked to perform and be in front of the audience, which in itself is a talent. It takes a lot of self-esteem to

He also took his youthful humor to the ears of his childhood friends.

At cub scout pack meetings he was the one to volunteer to perform silly skits in front of the whole pack," Mrs. Silverman said. "Many of the parents of his classmates always have marveled to me at his ability — even as a small boy — to get in front of people and perform."

Silverman has moved a long way since his years in cub scouts by performing all over Ohio, as well as in Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Illinois. He even opened up for Dave Attell, one of his favorite comedians.

Silverman's comedic influences range from older well-known comedians, to newer ones as well. Steve Martin is my all time favorite. He's easily the reason I ever considered comedy to begin with. The man is a genius," Silverman said. "Robert Klein is another old-school comic I really like.

Silverman has been using his talents to work with others. He sometimes collaborates on material with other comedians.

'Ryan and I will write together Meghan Frazer. "Sometimes you have a premise for a joke, and you need someone else's perspective to finish writing it. We have different styles, but I think that's why we do write well together.

"I have a handful of comic friends that I write with on a regular basis. I really pride myself on my writing. I try to write smarter jokes."

Much of Silverman's success can be attributed to his ability to reach his audience.

On Tuesday, Silverman tried some of his new material at Larry's and was well received by the crowd, though most were fellow comedians. Silverman told some old favorites which everyone seemed to enjoy.

"People want to ban dodge ball from gym class cause they say they pick on the fat kids and lower their self esteem... that's bull, I was the fat kid in gym class and I loved dodge ball 'cause if you get beaned in the first 10 seconds you can sit down for the rest of the class," Silverman said.

"That joke is so funny because I know exactly what he is talking about," said Jessica Curry, a first timer at Larry's. "When he tells a sometimes," said comedian joke like that I can really see the action, not just hear it."

was held at Northberg Tavern, that is, until it closed. Although Larry's may not be the ideal venue for the local comics, it provides a "Sometimes I'll run a joke by a supported environment for them

"We've made Larry's our new home, but it's still an adjustment, trying to get back our old audience and woo some new people," Silverman said. There's the running joke of Larry's as 'where comedy goes to die,' but I think it could eventually be a nice little venue."

Stand-up at Larry's and guest spots at the Funny Bone are keeping Silverman's name out there for now. He saidhehopestotravelafter graduation and test his talents else-

"After school I'm probably going to try hitting the road for a bit, working in various clubs in various cities. I'd eventually like to move to L.A. or New York," Silverman said.

"When I was a kid my dream was always to be a 'Saturday Night Live' cast member, and I guess I still would like to do that, but for now I'm more interested in becoming a writer for TV," Silverman said. "I'd like to do some acting or voice-overs too. My dream job would be writing for an animated sitcom like 'The Simpsons' or 'Family Guy,' or a talk show like Conan or 'The Daily Show.'

Wherever Silverman ends up, Previously the comedy night he is sure to continue his stand-up

'Regardless, I want to keep doing stand up," Silverman said. "I don't think I could ever quit it, I love it too much.

Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.

2. Copy must be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for special publications whose deadlines will be announced.

An advertisement is required to occupy at least as many inches in height as columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered a "full column" (21 inches) adver tisement and charged accordingly.

4. Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.

Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion

A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.

No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than seven column inches. If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee

The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check of money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.

10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.

11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication 12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise

13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed

14. A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication.

15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.
