Missing OU student's dad issues warning

By Cameron Yannayon Lantern staff writer

"Students think that they're invincible, and they're not. This could happen to anyone," said Keith Noble Sr., father of the missing Ohio University student and Worthington Kilbourne graduate Keith Noble Jr.

Noble Jr., a freshman at OU, has been missing since Saturday morning Noble Jr.

His disappearance comes in the wake of Stacey Beth Colbert, OSU alumnus who has been missing since March 21. Colbert disappeared from the Governor's Square Apartments on the northwest corner of Kenny and Henderson Roads.

"I know exactly what (Colbert's) family is going through," Noble Sr. said. "My heart goes out

Paul Johnston, one of Noble Jr.'s neighbors in Mackinnon Hall and a friend from high school, was at the party where Noble Jr. was last seen.

When friends at the party noticed he was gone, they searched the house and called his name outside several times, Johnston said.

"We just figured he went back to the dorms," Johnston said. When we got back about 2 a.m. he wasn't there, and he hasn't been back since.' The search for his son has een an exhaustive one, said Noble Sr.

"The area just a mile off campus is very desolate and remote," Noble Sr. said. "Yesterday, a rescue team with canine units searched the surrounding area, and today police choppers were brought in. Police searched the Hocking River by campus and have found nothing."

A $10,000 reward has been offered by parents of the missing student's friends. Noble Sr. said OU officials are working to match the sum.

"There has been a warm and compassionate outreaching of friends," Noble Sr. said. "We have all been doing everything human-ly and financially possible to find

Noble Sr.'s only disappointment in the search effort so far was the timing. He believes universities should be better prepared for these sort of happenings and start searches much sooner. "Bureaucrats won't let searches for missing people begin until they have been missing for 48 hours," Noble Sr. said. "The police knew he was missing six hours after it happened but didn't start looking for him for two days. It's just policy." Noble Jr.'s parents are standing by in Athens waiting for any word of the whereabouts of their son. Noble Jr. is 5 feet 9 inches tall, and weighs about 155 pounds. He has brown hair and brown eyes.

"I'm hopeful that he is alive and we will find him," Noble Sr. said. "We put our faith in the Lord, he is the only one who knows where he is now."

Israel observes 50th birthday of Jewish state

JERUSALEM (AP) — To the piercing cry of a ram's horn and the ethereal strains of a biblical harp, Israel ushered in celebrations of its 50th birthday Wednesday, marking its anguished rise from the ashes of the Holocaust.

In a twilight ceremony atop Mount Herzl — named for a Zionist visionary who did not live to see the founding of the Jewish state - a dozen torches symbolizing the 12 tribes of Israel were set ablaze.

"Long live the state of Israel!" Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said before red, green and blue fireworks lit the ancient stones of Jerusalem.

But in Israel — a nation not quite at war, but hardly at peace the mood was short of celebratory.

An array of woes — the break-down of peace talks with the Palestinians, a sharp split between secular and religious Jews, increasing restiveness among the country's 1 million Arab citizens - left many Israelis feeling it was no time to throw a party.

Highlighting those divisions, dozens of ultra-Orthodox Jews tore Israeli flags off cars driving near their Mea Shearim neighborhood Wednesday, police said. Many ultra-Orthodox Jews oppose the creation of a Jewish state as blasphemous before the coming of the Messiah. But even amid the doubts and divisions, the anniversary brought heartfelt displays of homegrown pride.

From the rolling green hills of the Galilee to sun-baked towns of the Negev desert, thousands of blue-and-white Israeli flags hung from apartment balconies and fluttered from car windows.

"I feel happy and at home that's enough for me," said Even Livni, 73, who immigrated from the former Yugoslavia in 1951.

Netanyahu, in an anniversary statement, called Israel a "modern miracle," citing a roll call of cultural, technical and economic accomplishments. Simple survival, of Israel as a state and the Jews as a people in the face of Nazi genocide, headed the list.

From birth, Israel has been besieged - and, critics say, sometimes belligerent and shortsighted as a result.

Early wars against Arab neighbors were widely seen by Israelis as righteous ones. But later conflicts the 1982 invasion of Lebanon and the 1987-93 Palestinian uprising - were much more morally ambiguous, profoundly shaking the sense of national purpose.

You have to remember that at the same time (as Israel's independence) we embarked on our disaster," said Palestinian leader Yasser

"We work with subsidiaries of Banc One in the Columbus area. In no way are we connected with their headquarters, which cuts down on communication," long-distance Shkurti said.

Bank One offers OSU a number of services such as checking accounts, trust services and credit cards, Nichols said.

"There has been some concern about a $3 service charge being reinstated for non-account holders cashing checks at Bank One," Nichols said. "This charge will continue to be waived if students are cashing checks from OSU."

OSU also holds accounts with Huntington, National City, Fifth Third and KeyBank. Many of the same services are provided at these banks as well.

"Banks have been acquiring one another for years, it's common, said Nichols. "The financial world may be affected, but the way we operate with Bank One will not change."

Popular impotence pill raises questions of medical necessity

Viagra becoming the hottest drug on the market, health insurers are demanding proof from doctors that their patients really do need the impotence pill and are not just would-be Casanovas looking to spice up their sex lives.

Insurers also are being forced to answer this tricky question: How much sex is enough?

Because Viagra is a use-it-asyou-need-it drug and not a daily pill, insurers are trying to determine what constitutes a monthly supply: six, eight,

For now, not all insurance companies cover the $10-a-pill drug, which is available by prescription only. Many of them, like Aetna U.S. Healthcare, haven't decided what to do.

Some of those that are paying for Viagra are doing so only under temporary rules. But those that do cover the drug all require a doctor to diagnose the patient as impotent.

"We have to make safe and efficacious drugs available to those men who have a real medical necessity, men who without Viagra have absolutely no chance of having an erection," said Beverly Hayon, a spokes-woman for the HMO giant Kaiser Permanente, which does not cover Viagra — at least not yet. Kaiser officials are meeting this week to decide what to do.

Revenge factor focus of Texaco trial

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) A Texaco executive was so angry about being laid off he vowed to get even, leading a colleague to fear he would "come back and do physical harm to people," according to trial testi-mony Wednesday.

Instead, Richard Lundwall

went public with secretly recorded tapes that captured him and other company officers allegedly disparaging black employees and plotting to hide and destroy documents sought in a race discrimination case.

The tapes forced Texaco into a $176 million settlement of the discrimination case and led to the indictment of Lundwall, 56, and former Texaco Treasurer Robert Ulrich, 63, on charges of obstruction of evidence. They could be sentenced to 10 years in prison if convicted.

At the executives' trial Wednesday, prosecutors seemed to focus on Lundwall's motives for going public with tapes that would get him into trouble.

Texaco executive Peter Meade said Lundwall, whom he described as a friend, railed at him at a 1996 company picnic about being forced out after 30 years with the oil giant. In addition, he testified, Lundwall complained that he was not getting a going-away party and that no one from Texaco had called during a recent hospital

Meade invited Lundwall to lunch two weeks later, during which Lundwall loudly declared several times "that he was going to get even with Texaco," Meade said.

He told the court he reported Lundwall's concerns to his superior, the company treasur-er, because "I was concerned that Richard might come back and do physical harm to peo-

Lundwall's attorney objected to the comment, and Judge Barrington Parker later ordered it

Meade added that Lundwall seemed "much calmer" a couple of weeks later. Defense attorney Vincent Briccetti tried to show that by "getting even," Lundwall meant he would file an age discrimination suit.

State aims to lower I-71 traffic

COLUMBUS (AP) - The state is considering options such as establishing passenger train service, building a permanent lane or adding detours to ease traffic during construction on Interstate 71 between Cleveland and Columbus.

The Ohio Department of Transportation is holding public hearings on the $400 million to $435 million, 10-year project to rebuild the heavily-traveled interstate. The latest hearing was Tuesday, and work is scheduled to start later this year in Medina County.

Road conditions on the stretch of I-71 are deteriorating rapidly because of the high volume of traffic, which ODOT estimates as more than 56,000 vehicles daily, said department spokeswoman Michele May.

The department is considering its options because it does not plan to reduce traffic to one lane in construction areas, as is done in most cases. A lane reduction would make the twohour drive take about four hours, she said.

"The truckers would like to get more people out of cars and onto a rail," said Edd Hauser of Kimley-Horn Associates, who conducted motorist surveys. "But overall, the choice of most drivers was to add a third lane all the way from Columbus to Cleveland."

Groups such as the Ohio Farmland Preservation Task Force worry that a third permanent lane might bring increased pollution and urban sprawl. ODOT estimates adding a lane could cost $302 million.

Supporters of light rail say it is the best long-term option for easing congestion and protecting the environment. But Marc Conte, state program coordinator for the Sierra Club, said it is likely to be overlooked.

"We fully understand the need to rehabilitate a highway system that shows signs of age," he said. "But we don't want to see any expansions. That increases sprawl and will induce more traffic."

USG pushing absentee ballots to ensure student vote on Issue 2

"We're focused on campus and on getting students to take the time to vote," said USG President John Carney at Wednesday night's USG Senate

Their key concern is Issue 2, he said.

The passage of Issue 2 would raise Ohio's sales tax by 1 percent, generating new state revenues which could then be used to meet the Ohio Supreme Court's order that state legislators find a more equitable way to fund primary and secondary education in Ohio. The current system was ruled unconstitutional in March 1997.

"We'll be out from now until Tuesday's vote," Carney said. "It's important to students and I think we're at a university where you want people thinking about issues and becoming politically involved.'

One of their primary goals is helping students who will not be in their home counties on election day participate through absentee voter ballots, said Kevin Cope, USG cabinet mem-

"A lot of students don't know how much the outcome of Issue 2 will affect them," he said, alluding to widespread fears that should it fail, legislators will be forced to cut money from higher education to make up the shortfall in state revenues.

"Hopefully we can both educate and motivate," Cope said.

USG volunteers registered about 100 Taylor Tower residents as absentee voters last Monday, Carney said. They hope to register even more when volunteers hit the campus with applications again tonight, this time concentrating on South Campus dorms.

The deadline for applying by mail for an absentee voter bal-

Students to celebrate Asian culture

By Rani Kumar and Onyero Onyeacholem Lantern staff writers

May is Asian Awareness Month, an event intended to increase cultural awareness and improve understanding between Asians at OSU and other members of the OSU community.

"Asian students play a very vital role in OSU, especially in graduate work, and sometimes their upbringing makes them feel intimidated by the faculty, who place emphasis on individual thinking," said Anil Pradhan, professor of astronomy. "In most Asian cultures you are expected to do what you are told and this can lead to misunderstandings between the students and faculty."

Asian Awareness Month gives all students an opportunity to celebrate Asian heritage, said Sheila Kapur, coordinator of the Asian American Student Services. She said lack of knowledge regarding Asian culture in the U.S. school system has made it necessary to sponsor Asian Awareness Month.

"It will give an accurate portrayal of Asians and helps break the stereotypes people have about Asians," Kapur said.

This year's awareness month marks the 10th anniversary for the celebration, Kapur said. In 1995, the celebration was expanded from a week to a month-long event.

"There was so much interest for it," Kapur said. "So many people wanted to expand the celebration."

The registrar reported an increase in new Asian students in autumn 1997, which brings the OSU Asian population to types regarding languages and cultures at OSU, said Steven Knicely, assistant director of Chinese language program. "As an American who has been to Asia without taking any formal courses in Asian culture and languages, I now have a better understanding of what... Asians go through while coming here," he said.

Issue 2 ads dominate TV, radio as May 5 vote nears

COLUMBUS (AP) - Both sides of the school funding debate will air new television and radio ads this week, leading up to Tuesday's primary

Every Child Counts, a coalition of pro-Issue 2 groups, said Wednesday that it is running its sixth TV spot in markets across the state. The National Taxpayers Union of Ohio said it has begun airing an ad opposed to state Issue 2 on 71 radio stations statewide.

Issue 2 would raise $1.1 billion annually to be split evenly between schools and property tax relief for homeowners. The issue is part of the state's response to a Supreme Court ruling last year that said Ohio's current funding formula is unconstitutional.

The court said current funding creates inequities among Ohio's 611 public school districts, in part because it relies too heavily on property taxes. Every Child Counts, which

Principals face pre-job examination

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) -A licensing test for would-be principals can measure their ability to handle budgets, discipline, safety and other realworld matters, say developers and advocates who unveiled the examination Wednesday.

Four states have already adopted the School Leaders Licensure Assessment, developed by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., for use this fall. Five states and the District of Columbia financed development of the six-hour, standardized examination.

Most states do not require licensing tests for new principals, although prospective teachers in 35 states must take a nationally standardized test before they are hired or begin studying education. Nationally, 5,000 new principals are licensed each year by states.

The principals' test was created using standards developed by a consortium of states and national education groups organized by the Council of Chief State School Officers, which represents state heads of elementary and secondary school-

"Our nation is preparing students by establishing rigorous standards for student learning in many subject areas and raising requirements for those who enter teaching and administration," said Gordon Ambach, executive director of the council. "Today we are adding a new, challenging assessment for school leaders."

The examination has three two-hour sections. Candidates say how they would act in situations that a principal would commonly encounter, then must justify their actions. They also analyze documents such as budgets and staff evaluations, and answer questions about those documents.

States decide the passing souri and North Carolina have adopted the test. Development was financed by Illinois, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina and the District of Columbia.

Samuel Sava, executive director of the National Association of Elementary School Principals, said the group was part of the consortium that helped develop the examination, but passage "does not guarantee that an individual is going to be successful."

FBI adds new face to most wanted list

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — The FBI is preparing to add Eric Robert Rudolph, charged with the nation's first fatal bombing of an abortion clinic, to its 10 most wanted list and offer a $1 million reward for his capture, officials said Wednesday.

Bureau officials had originally planned to announce that the 31rear-old carpenter from Murphy, N.C., was added to the list Wednesday but postponed that until next week while they obtained the expected approval from the Justice Department to boost the reward from $100,000 to $1 million, according to Justice officials, who requested anonymi-

Rudolph has eluded capture since the Jan. 29 bombing at the New Woman All Women Clinic in Birmingham, Ala., which killed a security guard and badly injured

Within a week of the blast he was sought as a material witness. By Feb. 14, he was formally charged with using an explosive device to damage the building, which carries a possible death

Late last month, Rudolph was the subject of a false alarm in Denver after someone thought he had spotted the license plate for his truck, which actually had been found abandoned near his hometown in North Carolina within days of the bombing.

On March 17, the task force investigating the Birmingham bombing was formally merged with an older task force assigned to solve three bombings in Atlanta, including one at Centennial Olympic Park in July 1996.

Although the merger announcement made no mention of Rudolph, the now-superseded Atlanta Bomb Task Force had been looking into whether he might also be responsible for the Atlanta attacks.

Officials say they have found some tenuous links between Rudolph and some of the Atlanta bombs, but not enough to charge him in those blasts. The new Southeast Bombing Task Force is working in Alabama, Georgia and North Carolina on all four attacks. It includes the FBI; Treasury's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms; the Alabama Bureau of Investigation; the Birmingham Police Department; the Georgia Bureau of Investigation; and the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation. Some state and local law officers are deputized to carry out certain operations for the federal task force.

Links between Rudolph and the Atlanta bombings so far could be merely coincidences, said a senior agent on the case, who requested anonymity. "But in this business if you can pile up enough coincidences, sometimes you get somewhere," the agent said.

Investigators have been trying to learn if Rudolph was in Atlanta when bombs exploded at Centennial Olympic Park, at an abortion clinic in January 1997 and at a gay nightclub in February 1997. Agents hypothesize that the same person or people were behind all three Atlanta attacks.

The Olympic and Atlanta abortion clinic bombs had one-eighthinch thick steel plates, designed to direct the blasts. These plates were long ago found to have the same general formulation of steel, the agent said. Some of the manufacturers who make that type of steel sold it in the Southeastern states, including to a metalworking plant in Franklin, N.C., where an associate of Rudolph's worked,

Tons of beef recalled after e. coli found

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — The country's biggest meatpacking company is recalling more than 282,000 pounds of ground beef nationwide following the discovery of contamination with a virulent strain of E. coli bacteria.

The tainted sample was found during a routine testing program conducted by the Agriculture Department on a single package of beef produced April 14 at IBP Inc.'s plant in Joslin,

The recalled amount represents that entire day's production and was possibly shipped to numerous states, Jacque Knight, spokeswoman for USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said Wednesday.

"We consider it a nationwide recall," Knight said.

IBP, based in Dakota City, Neb., said in a statement that 50 retail and food service customers have been contacted and asked to return the meat to IBP. The beef is typically processed further by grocers and restaurants, so there are no product codes for consumers to check.

To our knowledge, there has been no illness associated or reported on the product from this date," the IBP statement said. "However, in an abundance of caution, IBP is conducting this voluntary recall."

Health departments in all 50 states have been alerted to watch for cases of E. coli, as has the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The Agriculture Department has isolated the DNA of the sample ... in question, which could be used to determine if any illnesses result from the recalled beef. Symptoms of infection include abdominal cramps,... diarrhea and fever. E. coli, a microbe that gets in meat mainthrough contaminated.

manure, is particularly dangerous for children, the elderly and people with AIDS. Cooking hamburger to an internal temperature of 160 degrees Fahrenheit will kill the pathogen. Ground beef should never be eaten rare.

The recall is the latest in a series of cases involving E. coli and ground beef, including the record recall of 25 million pounds last summer by Hudson Foods Co. People were sickened in that case, and the financial fallout resulted in Hudson's buyout by Arkansas rival Tyson Foods Inc.

Despite its high profile, E. coli contamination is still relatively rare: The sample found by the Agriculture Department was only the 13th out of some 20,100 tests on beef since 1994.

The IBP plant in Illinois is among those that have implemented a new governmentmandated meat inspection system intended to reduce E. coli and salmonella contamination through controls at certain spots along the production line. There are 45 employees at the plant dedicated to food safety.

Parental advice curbs teen birth rate, studies show

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — New polling and years of research suggest the key to reducing teen pregnancy is not a program or a condom but a parent, say advocates working to reduce the rates.

"Parents matter much more than they think," said Isabel Sawhill, president of the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy, which is working to reduce the rate of teen pregnancy by one-third by

The 2-year-old campaign supports a variety of anti-pregnancy efforts, including programs that promote abstinence and those that encourage use of birth control. It scheduled a Capitol Hill forum Thursday to release its research review, polling data and a new brochure to help parents discuss sex with their children.

The polling indicates that parents and teens are both reluctant to talk about the topic. Parents were more likely to blame parental discomfort and teens were more likely to blame teen discomfort.

About one in four parents but just 17 percent of teens said the biggest barrier to talking about sex was that parents are

Tests show abortion pill works

BOSTON (AP) — The first formal testing of the abortion pill RU-486 in the United States found that it successfully ended pregnancies in 92 percent of women.

Although the drug has already been widely tested and used in Europe, the Food and Drug administration requested that additional studies of its safety and effectiveness be done in the United States.

Those results are being published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine. The drug's U.S. developer says it hopes to have the pill on the market sometime next year.

In this study, the drug was slightly less effective than in earlier European experiments, where it triggered abortions in 96 percent to 99 percent of Success meant that the women expelled their fetuses without the need for surgery. The approach was considered a failure if women did not abort after 15 days, although some abortions might have occurred after this. The researchers said the pill may have appeared to work less well in this test because U.S. doctors are inexperienced at giving abortion medicines, or because of the way the study was designed. "The side effects we saw are what are expected for the drug to work," Ann Robbins said. "You need to bleed, and you have to have cramps, and that's what we saw."

Robbins was the study's manager at the Population Council, which was given U.S. rights to the medicine in 1994 by the French manufacturer Roussel Uclaf. The FDA declared the drug safe and effective in 1996. after reviewing European data and hearing preliminary results from the U.S. study.

The Population Council licensed its rights to the drug to the Danco Group, a newly created pharmaceutical firm, after plans to get the drug made by a Hungarian company through.

At Danco, spokeswoman Heather O'Neill said the company has found a manufacturer, which she declined to identify, and is working out details with the FDA to get the drug on the market in 1999.

The study found the drug was most effective when given within 49 days of gestation. The longer a woman had been pregnant, the less likely the pill was to work. Among women who were pregnant between eight and nine weeks, it was 77 per cent effective.

Two days after taking the pill, the woman must return to her doctor's office to take a hormone called mispristol, which causes uterine contractions to expel the fetus. The woman must wait there four hours in case of severe reactions, such as diarrhea and nausea, and about half abort during this time.

DeWine calls for drunken driving limit

Responding to an argument fellow conservatives used against his drunken driving initiative, Sen. Mike DeWine on Wednesday invoked a name near and dear to them: Ronald Reagan.

Along with co-sponsor Sen. Frank Lautenberg, (D-N.J.), DeWine, (R-Ohio), has been at the forefront of an effort to make 0.08 percent blood-alcohol content the national standard for determining that someone is too drunk to drive.

The standard was approved as part of the Senate's version of a large six-year transportation bill, but the House never voted on a 0.08 limit, leaving it to a conference committee to determine whether remains in the final v

DeWine said the drunken driving change he favors would be "the same kind of common sense standard President Reagan implemented" when he signed that law.

It was an argument calculated to appeal to those who object not to the standard but to the federal government telling the states what to do.

"Who's been a stronger proponent for states' rights than Ronald Reagan?" DeWine said in an interview. When you're dealing with certain human issues, limited issues of national safety, there's a reason to have a national standard."

Also appearing at the Capitol Hill news conference was state Rep. Rex Damschroder, sponsor of an Ohio-only version of the drunken driving standard DeWine supports.

The conference committee handling the transportation bill has not even begun to discuss the issue, said Sen. John Chafee, (R-R.I).

Drivers complain, but Talladega not listening

By Eddie Pells AP sports writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. - Bobby Labonte knows what a track like Talladega Superspeedway can do to a driver.

Although he was lucky enough to avoid a 20-car wreck in the DieHard 500 and win the race, he hasn't forgotten the perils of running on the world's biggest oval track - a place where it's every man for himself.

"You spend 29 races a year trying to be nice to everybody," he said. "If you're in the way, you move out of the way and if you're faster, guys move out of the way for you. Here, it's just the opposite. It's kind of hard to have friends."

Those thoughts were echoed in much stronger terms by almost every driver whose car was towed, pushed or scraped off the first turn after the fiery wreck put more than half the field out of contention last Sun-

The accident wasn't surprising, nor was the reaction from officials at NASCAR's most dangerous track. They're already looking forward to their next race in October.

"Quite frankly, in my opinion, this is the most exciting race track in the world," said Talladega president Grant Lynch. "You see guys here racing side by side, lap after lap.

"Nobody in the stands sits down. They didn't leave their seats for 140 laps, until we had the mishap."

Because the accident didn't cause any serious injuries, the day turned out almost perfect from the track's standpoint. About 125,000 people showed up. The race was decided, as usual, on the last lap.

Every complaint by a driver also seemed to serve as testimony to why racing fans love the

"As long as people want to see 40 cars going nose to tail, you're not going to see a change," said Jimmy Makar, Labonte's crew chief. "As long as they keep us bunched, I'd say, yeah, you're going to see stuff like that."

So the second-guessing will continue, mostly from inside the

They'll blame it on speed-limiting carburetor restrictor plates. They'll blame it on jittery drivers. They'll complain about 43 cars racing within a fuel filter's distance of each other at speeds of more than 190

"I feel really awful about it," said Ward Burton, whose inno-cent bump of Dale Earnhardt triggered the chain reaction. "Of course, it's nothing I would do on purpose by any means, particularly the 3 car.

"I will say I think I caused it, and I know a lot of people in the past have speculated and speculated and nobody has taken the blame for it.'

A nice gesture, but not enough to make up for a week's worth of lost work by drivers like Earnhardt, Bill Elliott and Mark Martin. The hopes of all three ended in the wreck.

"Sometimes you wonder if cars have outgrown this race track," said Martin, who believes the accident-free race he won last year at Talladega was a fluke. "That might have been the case when they were running unrestricted here at 190. It's surely the case now that they're running restricted at 190 and really want to go

Pete Harnisches Phillies, 1-0

CINCINNATI - Pete Harnisch pitched a two-hitter for his first shutout in two seasons and Eddie Taubensee singled home a first-inning run Wednesday as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Philadelphia Phillies 1-0.

Philadelphia lost two of three in the series, dropping its road record to 3-10. The Phillies have lost four road series this season and split one.

Harnisch (2-0) struck out eight and walked only one, a day after the Reds issued 11 walks in an 11-8 loss. He allowed only two runners to reach second as he finished off Cincinnati's first complete game this season and his eighth career shutout in 230 starts.

Kevin Sefcik doubled in the first inning and Alex Arias had an infield single to shortstop in the fifth, the only hits off Harnisch. He retired the last 13 Phillies in order, ending the game in 1 hour, 58 minutes.

Mike Grace (1-3) was nearly as effective and wound up losing because of a ball that After Dmitri Young forced Greene at second, Taubensee singled through the hole at second to drive in Harris and extend his hitting streak to eight games, the best by a Red this season. Taubensee also won the opening game of the series with a ninth-inning homer.

After the first inning, Cincinnati didn't get another runner to second base. Grace left for a pinch hitter in the eighth after allowing five hits and one walk in seven innings.

Philadelphia's Glanville went 0-for-4, ending his hitting streak at 14. It was the longest active streak in the major leagues and tied Colorado's Vinny Castilla for longest in the NL this season.

Cincinnati's Barry Larkin went 0-for-2 with a walk, extending his slump to a careerworst 0-for-24. It's the deepest slump by a Reds player since Curtis Goodwin went 0-for-29 last season.

Larkin missed most of spring training because a bulging disc in his neck that required surgery on March 13.

No love lost between Heat, Knicks

By Jim Litke AP sports writer

The gestures are even, the series is not.

A little more than four minutes remained in Tuesday night's Heat-Knicks opening-round playoff game when Miami's Eric Murdock sank a shot and then, while heading back upcourt, quickly drew his index finger across his throat.

The gesture was premature — New York made one last run and whittled that nine-point lead to 87-83 with 55.9 seconds left. But Murdock could barely contain himself. He was in that much of a hurry to pay back Chris Childs for the same kind of symbolic throat-slashing the Knicks guard performed after he made a big shot in the closing moments of New York's win in Game 2

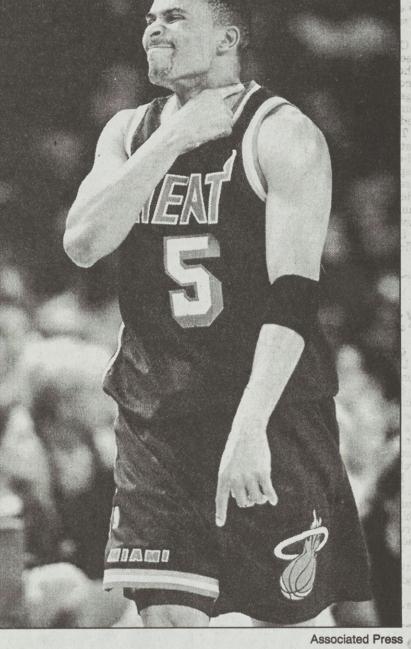

"It was something that was stupid. I shouldn't have done it," Murdock said after Miami won 91-85 and claimed a 2-1 edge in the bestof-5 series.

"I got caught up in the emotions of the game, and it was something that just happened and I'm sorry it was caught on tape."

Maybe he couldn't help himself. Plenty of fans, however, could be forgiven for assuming the gesture was intended for them. Because that, no doubt, is how a very large number of them felt after investing nearly three hours in a basketball game that only the most disaffected hockey fans would have found entertaining.

Before the Heat and Knicks were through, there was more whistling inside Madison Square Garden than outside at a construction site in midtown Manhattan in a week. In between was a nearly endless sequence of pushing, shoving, clutching, grabbing, hacking, slapping, bumping and grinding—61 fouls in all, nearly split down the middle.

Maybe a tough town needs a tough team — New Yorkers excuse what the Knicks play as "city ball." And so maybe Miami had no choice but to play tough, too. Maybe not. In fact, not even close.

Eric Murdock of the Miami Heat taunts the New York Knicks with a throatslashing gesture during the Heat's 91-85 win Tuesday.

The common denominator, of course, is Pat Riley, who coached in New York before fleeing to Miami, the same Pat Riley who figured out soon after leaving Los Angeles and "Showtime" behind that his future as a coach would depend as much on terror as talent.

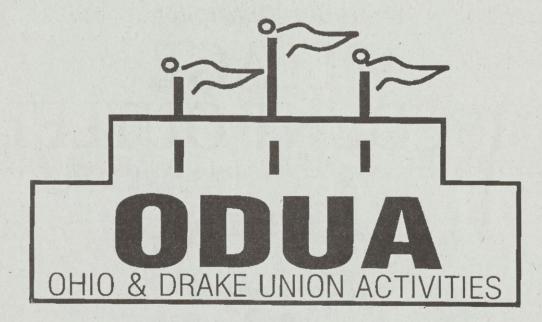

The artist that lurks in every NBA coach would love to have a team that plays with brilliance on both ends of the court. But the pragmatist that resides within every coach also recognizes the talent that enables a team to do that — a Magic Johnson, whom Riley coached in L.A., or a Michael Jordan or Larry Bird — is in very, very short supply.

And so what Riley set out to do, first in New York and later in Miami, was fill out his roster with whatever bruisers and hulks, bouncers and punks he could find, then tell them every opposing player who drives the lane threatens their manhood.

Schott not urged to sell by MLB

By Joe Kay AP sports writer

CINCINNATI — Major league aseball would be pleased if Marge Schott sells her share of the Cincinnati Reds, but it has not rged her to do so, a baseball ource told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

The Cincinnati Post reported hat baseball is trying to persuade Schott to sell the team before her uspension is up on Nov. 1. Otherwise, the other owners would conider extending the length of her unishment, the newspaper said, uoting anonymous sources.

However, a ranking baseball official, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said Schott's case is not actively being considered by the owners and officials, and probably won't be until later in the season.

The source also said that baseball has hinted to Schott it would be happy if she agreed not to resume running the team when her suspension ends later this year, but is not trying to persuade her to do

NL president Len Coleman and Reds managing executive John Allen both declined to comment on the matter. Schott, who is recovering from a broken hip, did not answer her phone at home.

Schott agreed to give up authority to make day-to-day decisions in June 1996, following another round of inflammatory comments. Allen will run the team until at least Nov. 1, when she's allowed to Baseball officials are pleased with the direction Allen has taken. Under her agreement with baseball, Schott is allowed only to negotiate for a new stadium and approve the annual budget.

Baseball has grounds to suspend her again if it chooses. Schott was accused of using the names of Reds employees to fake 57 car sales contracts in 1995 in order to meet a sales quota and keep her General Motors dealership.

LARKIN STILL 0-FER: Shortstop Barry Larkin is going through the worst slump of his career.

Larkin flew out to right field twice Wednesday and drew a walk, extending his slump to 0-for-24. Until this month, he'd never done worse than 0-for-19, a mark he reached three times previously.

It's the worst slump by a Reds player since Curtis Goodwin went 0for-29 from July 19 to Aug. 5 last

"I'm ugly. I'm straight ugly," Larkin said. "I think I'm going to hit all day Thursday (an off-day). I'll be here at 9 o'clock. They'll have to get the pitching machine set to throw."

The slump is the byproduct of Larkin's latest physical problems. Larkin, who turned 34 on Tuesday, played only three games during spring training because of a bulging disc on his neck. He had surgery on March 13 to repair it.

Larkin said the neck has not bothered him, but his swing is out of

"I feel great," he said. Manager Jack McKeon isn't concerned about Larkin's slump. Sometimes with injuries like he's had, you're going to have to be patient," McKeon said. "Everybody knows Barry and the type of guy he is and assumes he's a Superman and everything's going to get there quicker. He's coming along. But if you lay off a long time, it's going to take awhile to come back.'

resulting pinball game in the paint Tuesday night said it reminded him of something former Boston Celtics center Bill Russell used to say. Russell was one of the best defenders ever and never shied away from physical play. But he Heat coming back to win the series. That's what accounts for the always made an important distinction: Contact was a part of basket-ball, but the collisions were the point of football. That distinction appears wasted on Riley, not to mention Knicks coach Jeff Van Gundy who, after all, apprenticed with the master during his stay in New York. Both seem to prefer a kind of NASCAR on sneakers to basketball. And so the inevitable crackup came to pass in last year's playoff, when New York's Charlie Ward and Miami's P.J. Brown touched off a melee that led to five Knicks being suspended over two games and the hostility that seethes just below the surface every time these teams meet, let alone in the supercharged atmosphere of Madison Square Garden at playoff time. All that colliding may produce close games thick with tension and drama. But speed and grace and athletic ability, when it shows up, almost seems like a coincidence. The rest of the time, the most compelling reason to watch is to see whether the big wipeout takes place and who gets caught up in it.

That's the appeal of auto racing, not basketball. But that's what the Heat and Knicks are selling. Anybody who doubts that should have been in the locker room Tuesday night when Miami guard Tim Hardaway, a good guy and one of the few real talents on either team, got caught up in the act.

Told about Murdock's mock throat-slashing, Hardaway replied, "He did that?"

Instead of disgust, there was only admiration in his voice.

"Shoot, I wanted to do that," Hardaway said. "I'll do it Thurs-

Shows blend live action, technology

By Robin Jentes Lantern arts writer

rough recent decades, the younger generation has grown accustomed to the fast-paced world of communication by viewing hightech videos and colorful computer images. However, what happens when one combines this with an older form of communication?

Beginning tonight, Will Smith, professor of dance, hopes to accomplish a 1990's newer form of dance with use of computerized programs and video images in the "Multimedia Festival" presented by the Department of Dance.

Technology is not going away. It is the heartbeat of our culture," said Smith when describing the reasons behind the "Multimedia Festival" which he directed.

"So we are using the expression of dance and stretching the boundaries by utilizing technology," he said. The program will showcase six performances and two video and animation dance pieces. In addition to the performances, there will be several displays in the lobby show casing the development of technology through the 1990's in dance. "It is very hip." said Alyssa Stith, a freshman majoring in dance and one of the dancers in the live piece "Inside the Pineal."

'I had never danced in a piece dealing with this type of technology and I had never realized the preparation of doing this type of program," Stith said.

Shawn Renee Coyle, a second year graduate student in dance, and choreographer of "Inside the Pineal," said that she never realized how much preparation was involved in developing a dance with the use of a video image to develop her theme. Coyle's piece deals with exploration of the pineal gland that acts as a third eye or light detector as an energy source. "Inside the Pineal" is one of the aspects of how dance is based on the connection between the spirit of the body and mind, Coyle said.

"It took hours of preparation because of working with the timing of the technology and the live stage piece." Coyle said. "I wanted to [know] how use this technology to show what I am feeling in my dance.' In "Very Much Alive: My Foot, My Hand, My Head," choreographer Joan Nicholas-Walker, a second year graduate student in dance, went even further in developing technology with dance. In her piece, Nicholas-Walker interacts with several animated computerized figures that were created by Smith.

"It is basically dealing with three animated figures that have exaggerated heads, hands and feet," Walker said.
"The animated figure does the same movements after I have done them. So, the whole piece is commenting on what do you get out of watching a real live dancer and an animated dancer."

Smith's "Multimedia" will also show several of his non-live performances, but programs that are completely computer animated. In Mila Parrah's "Blue Trio," the dance is choreographed and developed through a computerized program.

"It is more natural to have movement come from a human dancer than from a computer lab, however, I want to show people new parts of the human prism or human expression through technology." Smith said. "Galileo had telescopes to chart his heavens, we now have computchart our heavens

Irish poet to read works on women's struggles

By Shawnda Drennen Lantern arts writer

In tradition of the Irish culture and history, the Dublin Irish Celebration Committee and the Dublin Arts Council will present an evening of poetry reading with Eavan Boland, an internationally-recognized poet from Ireland Friday.

Boland's poetry and essays have a female and history focus that stem from the national historical concerns of Ireland, said Wally Maurer, a professor emeritus of English at Ohio State University and a member of the Dublin Irish Celebration Committee of Dublin, Ohio. "She (Boland) has an instant connection with the human circumstances that she examines and looks at things that aren't prefabricated. She is constantly discovering details and open up reality in her poems," Maurer

Maurer is the person responsible for having Boland come to Dublin. Since Maurer is on the Dublin Irish Celebration Committee, he wanted to bring a writer to Dublin who was strongly associated with Irish culture and history, to celebrate Dublin's heritage.

"It was actually suggested to me to have Boland to come and read by Morris Beja," said Mau-Beja is also a professor of English at OSU, and is familiar with Boland's work.

"I had seen her several times in Ireland at conferences and throughout Europe. This will be a good chance for Americans to hear her work," Beja said. "The people that come to hear her will definitely be moved. Her poems and essays are very interesting and fascinating. It will be a great way to celebrate Dublin."

Boland has many poems and essays that focus on women and their struggles throughout history, especially in Ireland. Her writings consist of eight vol-umes of poetry, "New Territory," which she wrote in 1967, and her most recent works, "In a Time of Violence," which she

"She is known for being an extremely feminine poet," Maurer said. "She also directs creative writing at Stanford University and also lead a protest against the 'Anthology of Irish Literature, because few women poets, besides herself, were included in the collection," Maurer said. "Which turned out to be a success, because the editors are going to publish a supplementary to the 'Anthology of Irish Literature' because of the Boland also uses a lot of her own experiences in her work, said Ellen Jones, an associate professor of English in Women Studies, and Irish Studies, at The St. Louis University. Her father served as an Irish ambassador to England and her mother was an artist, and she is able to display her experiences of living in different countries from having to move around all of the time in her work, Jones said.

"When Boland began writing poetry, the words, women and poetry, were opposed to each other. Major writers of poetry, when she began, were men and the women that did write were not well known. By writing from her childhood experiences, she is able to write from her personal, historical past," Jones said. "She feels that women have been silent and they have to come to terms with it by writing out of this void and making the historical silence of women recognized. Boland feels that they (women) have a birth right in poetry.

"She is a role model for many women and many of my students find her to be an inspiration. I think that the people who hear her on Friday will see this, too," Jones said.

The reading will be held at the 1919 Building, on West Bridge Streetin Dublin. Admission for Boland's reading will be $7 and $5 for students and seniors. The reading will start at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, May 1. Boland will also be at Denney Hall in the English Department, Commons Room 311, the following Saturday at 9 a.m.

Classic Garbo films featured at Wexner

By Stephanie Hunter Lantern arts writer

One of the most mysterious and alluring stars ever to emerge from Hollywood, Greta Garbo, is being featured during May in the series "Cinematheque: Garbo" at the Wexner Center for the Arts.

For five nights beginning this Friday, 10 of Garbo's most beloved and well-known movies will be shown.

Dave Filipi, associate curator of media arts at the Wexner Center, said that each night, one of the two movies shown will be some of Garbo's strongest performances.
"'Queen Christina,''Ninotchka,' 'Camille' and 'Grand Hotel' are her four strongest films," Filipi said.

In "Queen Christina" (1933), Garbo plays the Queen of Sweden who dresses as a man to get away for a few days. Garbo's character falls in love with a Spanish ambassador, played by John Gilbert, her on-and offscreen lover.

"At the end of 'Queen Christina,' there's a famous shot of Greta Garbo with a blank look on her face. The director told her to 'think of nothing.' It's a really long shot of just her face, and it just captures her essence on film," Filipi said.

The comedy "Ninotchka" (1939), is considered by critics the best film of Garbo's career. She plays a Russian Communist who goes to Paris on a mission and falls in love. "The whole movie pokes fun at her cold persona. She doesn't show much emotion, and the film exaggerates that," Filipi said.
In "Grand Hotel" (1932),

Garbo plays a fading ballerina who is looking for love. She costars with other famous Hollywood actors such as Joan Crawford, John Barrymore and Lionel Barrymore.

Two of her early silent films, "Flesh and the Devil" and "The Kiss" will be accompanied by pianist Brian Casey of the local jazz combo Honk, Wail and Moan.

Garbo was born in Stockholm, Sweden in 1905. After a brief film career in Europe, she moved to the United States to further her career. Garbo's early success was based on her late 1920s silent films, but she later soared to stardom once sound was added to films. Throughout Garbo's Hollywood career (1926-1941), she made 24 movies. Her characters were always interesting - she was the temptress, the femme fatale.

Garbo refused to give interviews when she was at the height of her fame. This intensified her mysterious aura. The public wanted to know about her private life, but she never granted its wish. Her famous quote from "Grand Her Hotel" was "I want to be left alone." Garbo's last film, "Two-Faced Woman," was not successful, and after 1941, she never returned to the screen nor gave an explanation for her sudden retirement.

Although Garbo was romantically linked to many men in her career, she never married. After her retirement, Garbo moved to New York City where she lived until her death in 1990.

All shows start at 7 p.m. Tickets for the Greta Garbo double-features may be purchased at the Wexner Center or TicketMaster. Prices are $5 for the general public and $4 for students. For more information, call the Wexner Center ticket office/information desk at 292-

Killing the old fashioned way: A scene from the Columbia Pictures/Mandalay Entertainment Presentation of "Les Miserables."

'Les Mis' story still powerful on-screen

Lantern arts writer

As the saying goes, some things never change.

"Les Miserables" appear to be one of them.

The essence of the film, as well as most of the story line, remains the same as always, powerful and a little unsettling. However, some of the finer points have taken a different track in the new film from Columbia Pictures.

In 19th-century France, Jean Valjean is released from 19 years of hard prison labor to realize the world is just another ugly place to hurt and judge people. Upon his parole, Valjean meets a kind bishop, whose generosity serves as a steppingstone to a new Valjean eventually makes something of himself and encounters Fantine, a poor woman who lives only for her illegitimate daughter, Cosette. The young girl lives in a different town to be cared for while her mother works to support her. Fantine dies without seeing her child returned, and receives a promise from Valjean to protect the little Valjean becomes Cosette's guardian and spends the next decade hiding from his past. This would not be so hard were it not for police inspector Javert, who is chasing Valjean for skipping parole. Javert has made Valjean's recapture and imprisonment his life's ambition. Javert barely misses fulfilling his dream on numerous occasions, as Valjean continually slips through his

In all fairness, let me say I went in with a somewhat biased mind. I've seen the musical and read the (abridged) book, so I know my way around the block. Many audience members may be in the same situation. Yet I also tried to keep an open mind. Every piece of work must have its identity, this film proves no different. The surprises, while at first quite distressing, should be interpreted as distinguishing factors to set it apart from previous ver-

A few surprises (without too are a more developed relationship between Fantine and Valjean, a missing character, and a slightly violent Valjean. There are also many smaller variations, such as changes in locations or reduction of minor characters.

Although French characters speak with British accents for no apparent reason (call it artistic license), the performances are otherwise truly well-done. Uma Thurman beautifully portrays Fantine in all her selfless devotion to daughter Cosette. At each fork in the road, we can sense Fantine's helplessness and need to protect the most important person in her world.

Liam Neeson, as Jean Valjean, later takes up this all-encompassing dedication when he assumes the role of Cosette's protector. Neeson much detail to ruin the movie) convincingly shows the turmoil of a man torn between trying to hide what he is and attempting to be true to old promises. Whether

Cosette's wishes, the words flow from Neeson as if he truly were her "My So-Called Life" glory. Picture a repressed Angela Chase in 19-century fashion and you have the image. However, as her character develops, she more easily assumes the role of a confused girl who yearns to accept the love that awaits without disappointing the man who raised her.

Geoffrey Rush also delivers as the compulsive Javert, causing the audience to be both indignant on Valjean's part and yet drawn at the same time.

His Javert is driven, single-minded and remorseless, carrying out each decision with no second thoughts or hesita-

True to "Les Miserables" form, the themes blend to prey upon almost every facet of the heart and soul. Revolution, love and loyalty serve as counter accents to questions about what makes a man honorable, how people can redeem themselves, and when it

NEW YORK (AP) - In: Gwyneth Paltrow, Julia Louis-Dreyfus, Erykah Badu and Leonardo DiCaprio. Out: John F. Kennedy Jr., Tom Cruise, Michelle Pfeiffer and Mel Gibson.

So says People magazine's annual list of the 50 "most beautiful people in the world."

In addition to the expected actors (Matt Damon, Will Smith), actresses (Halle Berry, Calista Flockhart) and singers (Stevie Nicks), there are a few surprises.

Arundhati Roy, who wrote "The God of Small Things," made the list, as did British Prime Minister Tony Blair, 87-year old Titanic star Gloria Stuart and Bernard Parks, the police chief of Los Angeles.

Angeline Jolie, star of the HBO movie "Gia," also made the list. She told the magazine one of her beauty secrets: "Sometimes I'll watch TV and go into a lotion trance for an hour. I try to find brands that don't taste bad in case anyone wants to taste me."

The issue hits the newsstands in most cities on Friday.

Separate from the magazine's list, which is done by an editorial board, is a People Online poll asking Internet users to vote for their favorite most beautiful person from ranks that include DiCaprio and Gillian Anderson.

The polling doesn't end until May 8, but the front-runner Wednesday was a write-in candidate - Hank the angry, drunken dwarf, a beloved figure to Howard Stern listeners. Hank has more than 50,000 votes so

Bacall bemoans lack of quality

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Lauren Bacall may have been nominated for an Oscar and a Golden Globe last year, but she says good movie roles are hard to come by.

"They are not writing wonderful parts for women," she said in Wednesday's Los Angeles Times. "That is the sad truth. They were certainly not breaking down the doors for me, anyway."

Bacall, 73, won acclaim for "The Mirror Has Two Faces." She'll make a two-episode guest appearance on "Chicago Hope" beginning this week, playing a wealthy artist with a brain tumor.

The part is worthwhile because "it's not a stereotype," she said. "I am not playing somebody's mother or somebody's aunt. It's refreshing to be offered something that is not like that, so I grabbed it."

Ferguson craves sweets, stays strong

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Pitching her new cookbook and the Weight Watchers program, Sarah Ferguson says she still craves butterscotch ice cream, sausage rolls and mayonnaise.

"The full-blown fat mayonnaise," she told a crowd of Weight Watchers stalwarts Tuesday.

The Duchess of York likes to show off her weight loss.

"I think I've gotten a little more risque," she said. "Shorter skirts."

But the audience hissed when a reporter asked her weight.

"The nice thing about Weight Watchers is that you never have to disclose your weight to anybody," she said to wild cheering.

'Seinfeld' creator almost ran away

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Larry David, the manic co-creator of "Seinfeld," says he nearly quit when NBC executives wanted to tinker with the show before it was even picked up for a full sea-

"Whenever they wanted to change things, I was willing to quit," David said in Wednesday's Los Angeles Times. "It wasn't character or backbone so much as the fact that I was scared and insecure and wanted to leave anyway."

The final episode of "Seinfeld" airs May 14.

Mazar talks fashion at NY benefit

By Carol Deegan Associated Press writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Debi Mazar has been wearing Isabel Toledo's designs for five or six years. So it seemed a natural fit for Toledo to create the outfits Mazar would wear as costume designer Edith Head for "Edith Head: A Retrospectacular!"

The benefit at the future Cipriani hotel at 55 Wall St. on April 23 raised $1 million for the Motion Picture & Television Fund and the Design Industries Foundation Fighting AIDS.

Mazar, 33, who appeared in the popular TV series, "Civil Wars" and "L.A. Law," made her feature film debut in Martin Scorsese's "GoodFellas." She plays Sammy "The Bull" Gravano's wife in "Witness to the Mob," to be aired May 10 on

Born in Queens, N.Y., Mazar is much more understated than the characters with the big hair and hoop earrings she has often played. She is both beautiful and elegant on a warm day in April, wearing dark slacks and a crisp white shirt — just the sort of outfit any stylish New Yorker would wear. Mazar, who splits her time between New York and Los Angeles, admits, "I'm loud with jewelry." A chunky charm bracelet is a favorite accessory.

Associated Press

Designer Isabel Toledo measures Debi Mazar at Toledo's New York studio.

She arrived at Toledo's Fifth Avenue showroom with several pairs of her own shoes that could be worn at the gala event. She and Toledo discussed the expensive necklace Mazar had borrowed for the evening. The question they pondered: which neckline would best frame the Eight designs were created for Mazar's "Edith Head" look. Her choices? One white, the other black. She wore the white outfit as she circulated among the partygoers at the beginning of the evening. She wore the black one for her portrayal of Head in the stage production. The costume designer's signature eyeglasses and hairstyle completed the look.

1. How would you describe your personal fashion style? Mazar: I'm very modern with retro touches. It changes every day. It goes with my mood. 2. Do you have a favorite color? Mazar: I usually have something black on. ... I'm into jewelry and shoes.

3. How many pairs of shoes do you own? Mazar: I don't know. I have many. 3 1/2. Dozens of pairs? Hundreds? Mazar: In the hundreds.

4. Do you ever keep something you've worn in a film? Mazar: I do keep the clothes if I like them. It's a prerequisite of my contract. ... I actually kept many of the clothes from 'Civil Wars' and 'L.A. Law' because they were custom-fit-

5. You were spotted at several of the recent Fashion Week shows in New York. Do you have a favorite designer?

Mazar: I buy Isabel's stuff. At Isabel's show, I put in a big order. Occasionally, Armani will give me something. At Armani, they've been really supportive of me. They loan me outfits for events, which is good. I support people who sup-

'Seinfeld' ad prices push 'Super' records

By Skip Wollenberg Associated Press writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Advertisers are expected to pay a record amount to air commercials during the "Seinfeld" finale.

NBC will sell the 30-second spots for between $1.5 million and $1.7 million, sources familiar with the price but speaking on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press. That would surpass the mark of $1.3 million set during the network's Super Bowl telecast in January.

The network expects as many as 90 million people will watch some of the May 14 telecast.

NBC reportedly received a $2 million commitment from two buyers a few months ago when commercial time was first made available. The price for those early buyers is expected to be cut to conform with what others will pay.

NBC declined to say what it was getting for ad time on the show, and ad buyers say that the true price is hard to pin down because some ads were sold as part of package deals involving other programs. The network had sold all 10 minutes for national commercials in the hour that the show was supposed to run in, but it is possible the program may run an extra 15 minutes.

That means that the network may have additional commercial air time. Those advertisers who bought less expensive time on the retrospective show preceding the finale are expected to get the first crack at any additional airtime during the actual show. NBC may shorten the one-hour retrospective. Among the advertisers for the final episode are Anheuser-Busch and Coors, Visa and MasterCard and Wendy's.

Steve Grubbs, who oversees national broadcast ad sales for the ad agency BBDO Worldwide, said "Seinfeld" commanded prices higher than the Super Bowl even though it may attract a smaller audience because of its young, upscale

In addition, he said the final episode represents a widely anticipated, one-time-only event.

"There just aren't that many places particularly at this time of year where you can draw that kind of audience," Grubbs

Bootleg copies of 'Titanic' seized from East Coast city streets

By Arny Westfeldt Associated Press writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — "Titanic" is already out on video — on the

After smashing box office records worldwide, the ocean liner disaster flick is fast becoming one of the most popular pirated video on the streets of several East Coast cities.

The Motion Picture Association of America's video piracy unit has seized 1,500 illegal "Titanic" videos from street vendors in New York City since January. Dozens more have confiscated in Newark. Philadelphia, Chicago and Cleve-

The two-tape video, selling for $10, comes in a professional-looking sleeve bearing photographs from the film, said Bill Shannon, who heads the association's East Coast antipiracy unit.

Paramount, the studio with domestic rights to the film, isn't sur-

"It wouldn't be unusual that this movie is heavily pirated," said Anat Levy, the executive director of antipiracy operations for the studio. "It is the best-selling movie of all time."

"Titanic" has grossed $560.6 million in theaters nationwide. Paramount hasn't even decided on an official release date yet for a home videocassette.

A growing number of the pirate tapes are believed to be copies of some of the videotapes sent to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' 5,400 voters.

Paramount mailed a copy to each voter in its Oscar campaign. The film won a record-tying 11 awards, including best picture.

"The Academy members know that these tapes are not to be distributed and sold or copied," Levy said, noting that each Academy tape came with instructions saying just

Other "Titanic" videos are made by people who smuggle camcorders into theaters, Shannon said. But these are of very poor quality, with grainy images, background noise and the occasional audience member walking in front of the camera.

Bootleg videos cut into film industry profits, taking $250 million a year from U.S. sales and $2.5 billion worldwide, said Ken Jacobsen, director of the MPAA's anti-piracy pro-

But why buy a videotape when the movie is still in theaters?
