DOMESTIC PARTNER BENEFITS

Trustees to wait on state for guidance

By Melissa Sharp Lantern staff writer

According to the Human Rights Campaign, over the past two years U.S. employers offering domestic partner benefits has increased by 50 percent. Ohio State is not one of these employers.

Both President William "Brit" Kirwan and Provost Ed Ray want to offer OSU employees domestic partner benefits, but it must be passed by the Board of Trustees.

"The board is waiting for the state to take action," Ray said.

However, with the Ohio House of Representatives passing House Bill 234, it does not look like the state will be recognizing gay and lesbian couples anytime soon. HB 234 bars the state from recognizing same-sex unions, saying the state will not give married bene-fits to unwed couples, gay or

This means if the bill is passed by the senate and signed by the governor, OSU will not be allowed to offer their employees domestic

"If it gets to the governor's desk as written, there will be direct communication from the university. The university should be able to decide who they extend benefits to," Zach Waymer, program coordinator for Student Health Insur-

Waymer said he is hoping the bill will get thrown out. At the very least, he said he hopes the language of the bill will be changed to allow couples to have insurance, even if they aren't allowed to have same-sex unions.

Vermont is the only state which recognizes same-sex unions. A gay couple who married in Vermont is suing the state of Georgia to recognize their union. If HB 234 becomes law, the state of Ohio would protect itself from this type of lawsuit.

According to the Human Rights Campaign Foundation, as of August 2001 a total of 4,284 companies, colleges, universities and state and local governments were offering health insurance coverage to the domestic partners of their employees. The Human Rights Campaign defines domestic partner benefits as making benefits available for their unmarried employees' partners and legal dependents.

Domestic partner benefits can include medical and dental insurance, disability and life insurance, pension benefits, family and bereavement leave, education and tuition assistance, credit union membership, relocation and travel expenses and inclusion of partners in company events.

According to Kirwan, if HB 234 does not pass, the university could offer domestic partner benefits to their employees through their insurance carrier.

Waymer said OSU uses self insurance to cover medical needs, which means it is up to the university to extend the benefits to domestic partners. Vision insurance is provided by Vision Service Plan, and dental insurance is provided by Delta Dental.

According to Waymer these two companies are two of the largest commercial carriers, and he does not see a problem with their compliance.

"Most insurance carriers won't charge a premier or extra fee (for covering domestic partners)," Waymer said. He believes it is up to the university to offer these benefits to their employees.

Ray does not think the Board of Trustees would make this decision without the state's support.

"They're responsible for the university and their concern is with the state backing. They don't want to put us at risk with the legislature," Ray said.

Waymer said this argument is losing weight.

'They've already cut the budget by 6 percent. What more could the state legislature do to the university?" Waymer said. Kirwan and Ray have been looking into what benefits they could offer employees without the Board of Trustees' approval. They have categorized the benefits into hard benefits — which include, health care, medical, vision, dental, prescription drugs and tuition reimbursement — and soft benefits — which include, group life insurance, global care services, family medical leave and discounts on special events.

"Talk is cheap," Ray said. He said he thinks they are in a waiting process, and he doesn't believe anything will be changed soon.

While OSU employees and students wait for action, other universities and companies are making moves to offer these benefits to their employees.

On Sept. 14 the trustees at Indiana University unanimously approved offering their employees and students domestic partner benefits for same-sex partners.

The state of Indiana does not recognize same-sex marriages. In order for same-sex couples to qualify for benefits, they are required to register with the university that they are in an exclusive relationship.

"We are at a distinct competitive disadvantage without this provision for our employees. In a global market that places a premium in talent, we must be on equal footing with our peers if we hope to succeed," said Indiana University president Myles Brand after passing the proposal.

Officials at Indiana University estimate that about 50 employees will take advantage of the new domestic partner benefits option available to them.

More than 150 colleges and universities offer domestic partner benefits to their employees and students. Of the Big Ten, Iowa, Michigan, Michigan State, Minnesota, Northwestern and Indiana offer domestic partner benefits.

There are also other colleges and universities in Ohio which offer domestic partner benefits to their employees despite the state's position, which are the following: Antioch College System, Baldwin-

President Bush waves to the crowd after speaking at Georgia World Congress Center yesterday in Atlanta.

Bush urges U.S. to be responsible

By Sonya Ross Associated Press

ATLANTA — President Bush assured an uneasy nation last night that the United States will prevail against terrorists and said Americans should not "give in to exaggerated fears or passing rumors.'

In a prime-time address, he told Americans to turn their fears into action: Volunteer in hospitals, schools, homeless shelters and at military facilities or train for emergency service work and join a new civil defense force he hopes to build.

"We have entered a new era. This new era requires new responsibilities — both for the government and our people," the president

Nearly two months after the hijacker attacks in New York and Washington, Bush conceded that his administration does not know who unleashed anthrax in the U.S.

Nor did he offer hope that U.S. troops would soon find Osama bin and unravel

Afghanistan-based terrorist net-

But he confidently predicted victory abroad — "We will persevere in this struggle, no matter how long it takes to prevail" - and lauded Americans for their actions so far.

"We are a different country than we were on Sept. 10: sadder and less innocent; stronger and more united; and in the face of ongoing threats, determined and courageous," the president told a crowd of 5,000, most of whom were police, postal workers, firefighters and other uniformed public servants.

He was interrupted by applause more than 25 times in his 32minute speech.

The loudest applause of the end, when he praised the actions of passengers who fought with hijackers aboard United Airlines Flight 93 before it crashed into a Pennsylvania field.

Bush recalled the words of Todd Beamer, a 32-year-old businessman and Sunday school teacher, who was overheard on a cell phone to say, "Let's roll" as passengers charged the terrorists.

Women groped on campus

By Melissa Goldfein Lantern staff writer

As a woman, walking late at night when you're alone isn't the safest thing to do, but now the daytime hours aren't safe either.

Between the hours of 9-11 a.m. on weekdays, a man is approaching women and grabbing their breasts. There have been five cases reported, said Detective Dave McKee of the Columbus Police Sexual Assault Squad.

The Columbus police have released a description of the suspect. He is a black male, 40 years old, 5 foot 10 inches tall, 185-190 pounds, with a gap in his front teeth. He is possibly homeless, wears a dark jacket and pants, black skull cap or baseball cap with a red bandanna. As women are walking in the area bordered by Lane and Neil Avenue, Maynard and High Street, the man approaches them from either behind or by walking beside them. After he grabs the women, he turns and walks away, then mumbles words that resemble an apology, said McKee.

"The more women who report this, the more attention it will get," said Mike Folmar, acting clinical director of Counseling and Consultation Services. The man is considered more of a nuisance at this point and assaults are classified as misdemeanors,

Throughout the university there are a variety of services that are offered to women who are victims of sexual assault. "Counseling and Consultation offers 10 free sessions to all students to discuss feelings about such an attack," said Deb Schipper, director of Rape Education Prevention and Protection (REPP). "REPP offers free self-defense classes, each quarter, that are open to all women of the community. McKee suggests the most impor-tant tips for women are: When

OSU, Michigan battle for blood

The Ohio State football team hosts Purdue University and the University of Illinois before their trip north Nov. 24 to face the University of Michigan. However, the battle against the Wolverines actually began Oct. 22.

The American Red Cross "Beat Michigan Blood Battle," a yearly contest to see which university can donate the most blood, began earlier than normal, according to Roxann Montgomery, American Red Cross campus recruiting rep-

"There are many opportunities for students to donate blood," Montgomery said. "We really need to get people out, due to our slow start.

The opportunity to donate blood continues today in the Rhodes Hall lobby, at the Ohio State University Medical Center, from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

Students can donate blood at various locations on campus from now until Nov. 21.

Beth Ullum, coordinator of special events in the Ohio Union, said the drive will heat up as part of Beat Michigan Week, beginning Nov. 18

Ullum said Nov. 20 from 11 a.m.-7 p.m. and Nov. 21st from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. are the last two days of the drive. Blood can be given in the main lounge of the Ohio Union on the second floor.

"After 20 years, an event like this becomes tradition," said Montgomery. "The Blood Battle has become an integral part of OSU." Buckeyes lead the Blood Battle competition, which began in 1982, with a record of 11-8.

UNIVERSITY SENATE Faculty senators set conditions for possible switch to semesters

By Dave Lieberman Lantern staff writer

We're willing to move to semesters, with

This was the sentiment expressed by a vote of faculty senators on the issue of calendar conversion. The vote, which had 33 faculty senators favoring a switch to semesters, 25 against and three abstentions, was announced during yesterday's University Senate meeting.

Marilyn Blackwell, professor of Germanic languages and chair of the Faculty Council, stated the position of the majority of the faculty sena-

"The Ohio State University Faculty Council endorses the conversion to semesters on the condition that the conversion is revenue neutral and that the recommendations of the Ad Hoc Calendar Committee are met and documented to the satisfaction of Faculty Council," Blackwell said.

The Ad Hoc Calendar Committee issued a report last June supporting a switch to semesters, with a set of 11 conditions. These conditions include items such as having additional advising available to students, a neutral increase in teaching loads and allowing liberal graduation requirements during the transition.

Susan Fisher, professor of entomology and secretary of the senate, said the vote's outcome was somewhat unexpected.

"I was surprised," Fisher said. "Based on comments coming out of the council, I thought there was very little support for semesters. The vote, which is in no way binding, was taken as a way to publicly express Faculty Council's opinion on the issue. A formal Senate vote on the calendar was tabled in by President William "Brit" Kirwan until autumn 2003, due to current budget strains. Some senators were ready to have the firm vote ence and chair of the Ad Hoc Calendar Committee. "If the university, faculty and students say we want to be on semesters, let's go ahead and do that. Let's at least get it off the table.'

Despite this position, yesterday's vote by the faculty has implications for the final conversion decision two years from now.

"Folks in Bricker Hall need to come forward with a detailed explanation of how this will be paid for," Fisher said. "If this can be done, it looks to me that we will probably move forward with semesters the next time this comes to a vote.

Provost Ed Ray said the caveats set forth by the vote are reasonable and the administration would be developing a set of responses. Ray did note the current financial climate was not conducive to a switch to semesters.

"I honestly do not believe we will be positioned financially for going forward (with a conversion) for at least two years," Ray said. "We have a window now to make the case for conversion.

"Some of these conditions will take a long time

The policy states "accordingly, discrimination against any individual for reasons of race, creed, religion, sexual orientation, national origin, sex, age, disability or veteran status is specifically prohibited." Waymer wants the university to start practicing this policy. "The way it's worded is not true, because we don't treat everybody equal. We do not have equal benefits for unmarried

First, same-sex domestic partners tend to be employed themselves and therefore have their coverage through their own jobs. Second, privacy concerns and lack of laws protecting gays and lesbians from employment discrimination keep couples from revealing their relationship.

Sophomore has fingers on success

Looking back, Kanuga's success at OSU shouldn't be too surprising. He came to the university from Hilliard Darby High School where he was voted, "Most Likely to Succeed." He also came here with nearly two years of experience in owning a small business under his belt.

Kanuga began his business, which distributes fingerprinting software called Webcheck to companies, when he was a junior in high school. His interest was sparked after he read an article with his friend and former business partner, Ben Powers, a junior in aviation. He bought out Powers last August and is the sole owner.

"We read about it in a newspaper about two and a half years ago," Kanuga said. "Then we contacted the company who manufactured it to ee if we could get a demo unit.'

Kanuga's inquiry could not have been timed better.

According to Kanuga, the California-based company expressed a con-cern for an Ohio-based distributor. He and Powers wrote a proposal and their bid won.

Webcheck is a system companies use to do background checks on potential employees. The system collects the data from fingerprints and a driver's license scan that is then sent to a number of databases via email. The processing takes about

"Now they don't laugh at us anymore," he said.

According to Kanuga, he has over 500 clients in Ohio, including OSU. Kanuga said it has not always been a smooth road, but he learns from all the bumps in the road and he always applies his real world knowledge to his classes.

"In accounting or business financing I always see the problems they talk about and I see the same stuff at work," Kanuga said. "It always ties in with each other. It's great to go up to a teacher after class and say, Hey, I've run into this problem. How do I solve it?' You can get some great discussions out of it.

Kanuga said part of the reason he decided to attend OSU was due to its proximity to his downtown office and his home in Hilliard. He was also influenced by the excellent reputation of the business school.

"I needed a school that would help further my skills from where I've been," Kanuga said.

According to Kanuga, the entire Kanuga said he maintains his busy schedule with a little help from his friends.

'It gets a little bit hectic at times," Kanuga said. "My Palm Pilot and cell phone keep me in line."

His parents are also involved with his company. Kanuga's father, Sunil Kanuga, is chief financial officer of B&S Fingerprints, Ltd. His mother, Rita Kanuga, works as the financial analyst.

He also has people like his men-tor, Ann Merrill, director of student services and academic programs in the School of Physical Activities and Educational Services, to lend a hand when needed.

"He's so awesome. He could be my mentor practically," Merrill said.

Although Merrill maintains Kanuga needs little guidance, she said she has helped him when he had questions about getting into the business school.

Merrill and Kanuga met more than a year ago when she became. his mentor through the Mount Leadership Society.

"I realized very quickly he probably didn't need a mentor the way some of the other students did," Merrill said.

This is probably true. At the ripe old age of 18 he is into his third year of owning a business, he is a fulltime honors student and he has been flying since he was 12 years old. He is not stopping there. Kanuga is planning on going straight through and getting his bachelor's degree and an MBA in an intensive five-year program.

According to Merrill going through this program is phenomenal for any student, but it is the norm for

"I am just blown away by him really," Merrill said. "I don't know how he does it all. He is just a pretty awesome student."

As a member of the Mount Leadership Society, Kanuga has a chance to demonstrate his leadership skills outside of the office.

"For Samir's year of service project, he is going to be focusing on publication for Mount and recruitment for Mount," Kathy Krujnak, director of the Mount Leadership Society, said.

Krujnak said students who are in the Mount program applied and had to go through a selection process that is based on their scholarship, class rank and leadership they have

The Mount Leadership Society is a two-year program that encourages the student's leadership abilities through programs that emphasize problem solving, leadership and public policy.

Kanuga was an ideal candidate for the program.

"He is an outstanding student who has great business experience," Krujnak said. "He is committed and dedicated and active in the Mount Leadership Society. It seems Kanuga leaves his mark everywhere he goes.

After Kanuga graduates, he plans to continue working with his business. He said he is also thinking of combining his business experience with his hobby by starting a charter plane company.

The first Latino needs assessment was taken in 1994. It discovered that only 8 percent of the Latino student respondents reported first hearing about OSU from family, friends and teachers. Only 25 percent reported they were recruited by the Office of Minority Affairs.

Mora said discovering information like that allows the university to better address the Latino community and target areas that need improvement.

With the results of the 1994 needs assessment many initiatives are now established. The new multi-cultural center located in the Ohio Union, the magazine "Que Pasa" getting a production location, Hispanic awareness month and a Latino studies minor have all been implemented since

"1994 is almost eight years ago, conditions here on campus have changed as well as in the community," said Keith Kilty, professor of social work. "We want to know what kinds of programs are in demand. With tuition rising we know it is causing difficulty for many students and we need to know what their needs are."

Bill Hall, vice president for Student Affairs, is a strong supporter of the needs assessment.

"We need current information to make decisions about how to shape policy and programs in 2001 and beyond," Hall said.

OUR VIEW

Too much power Act threatens essential freedoms

People who have to work quickly often make mistakes. With furious political pressure to act in haste after the Sept. 11 attacks, the U.S. government has erred in its fight to eradicate ter-

Although its goal is laudable, the new anti-terrorism bill signed into law two weeks ago - known laughably as the USA Patriot Act lays the foundation for a frigtening new system that will go to unprecedented lengths to gather information and intelligence within

Besides allowing new surveillance on the Internet and loosening the standards under which a wiretap can be obtained, the law changes the focus of the FBI from crime fighting to intelligence gathering. It allows the CIA to obtain evidence gathered by wiretaps and federal grand juries, to influence FBI surveillance inside the United States and to access financial records gathered by the Treasury

The USA Patriot Act represents a shift in the nation's mood and negates several reforms passed by Congress in 1970s that were intended from keeping the federal government from having too much

Although senators wary of giving the federal government anti-terrorism powers that could violate civil liberties thankfully inserted a "sunset provision" in this act, meaning it is up for renewal in 2005, it still sets a disturbing precedent for government instrusion in citizens'

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and chief negotiator of the bill, has said he expects the Justice Department to consult with the committee on any fundamen-

However, there are already signs that Attorney General John Ashcroft may not be willing to play ball — he cut short his testimony before the Judiciary Committee and then didn't bother to attend two more Senate hearings for closer questioning. If the federal government won't even make the effort to consult with Congress during the process of passing the bill, one can only imagine its willingness to cooperate now that it is the law of the land.

Battling terrorism is all well and good. But the ends do not justify the means. We can't allow an overly authoritarian government to replace a network of terrorists as American citizens' worst enemy.

Beware of flag fever Symbols don't equal patriotism

The American flag has invaded U.S. society faster than the Beat-

Since the Sept. 11 attacks, the flag has become a symbol visible across the country, in every sector of life. People wear flag bandannas, others have flag tattoos, and some people wear entire flag out-

How long must this go on?

Supporting one's country is indeed a great thing, but when patriotism becomes politically correct as opposed to an expression of true sentiments, it has gone too far.

We, as a country, have almost reached the two-month anniversary of the attacks on New York City, and U.S. citizens show no real signs of slowing their mass patriotism. But is wearing a flag and singing "God Bless America" going to do anything to help our country succeed in international affairs?

The way to help our country is by donating money to those who need it, by helping out in the community and making the U.S. a better place to live. That has nothing to do with how many flags are displayed in every neighborhood.

People do need something to rally behind in times of crises, and it is painstakingly obvious what that rallying point is in this situation. Now the question must be asked — why?

If there had been no terrorist attacks, there is no way our citizens would be showing the blind support they are now. Criticism of our government was heard loud and clear before we were attacked. Now people seem to forget that it is our duty as citizens to responsibly judge our government and criticize them when we deem it necessary.

There are those citizens who are serving their country correctly, by watching overseas actions intently and becoming aware of the difficult situation our country is in. Others show their patriotism in the ultimate way, by joining our military forces and risking their lives for the well-being of this country.

Those people are not the ones who need to re-adjust their beliefs. There have been many cases of people becoming so patriotic that they denounce foreign, including U.S. citizens, who emigrated from other

Others condemn those who are not supporting their country on their chest and wearing red, white and blue 24 hours a day.

If someone doesn't know the words to "Proud to be an American" it does not make them an unworthy citizen of this country. Those who believe that patriotism is shown through clothes and words, not actions, are the ones who need to re-evaluate their position in society. Read about our country and stay informed.

Our flag is a great thing, but so is a peaceful, well-educated world.

HEY, OSAMA! THEY ALREADY MADE A MOVIE ABOUT YOU!

Election anniversary passes with little hype

For roughly 51 percent of registered voters, Nov. 7 represented the one-year anniversary of the beginning of the

For us (the crazy, hypocritical, bleeding-heart liberal whiners), what might have been a the promising continuation of a progressive domestic and foreign policy agenda, became instead a terrifying timewarp back to '80s pessimism and corporate greed. For me, like my communist friends, the next 36 days were a blur of stunned disbelief, tearful struggles, undying hope and a truly detestable conclusion.

Yet now, one year after the election to determine which candidate won Florida and the presidency, many seem content to keep quiet about the dubious nature of a now popular commander-in-chief's court-ordered presidency.

Democrats who pledged that they would "never forget" the Nov. 7 presidential election and its bitter aftermath seem now to have muted their criticism. With George W. Bush's approval rating hovering around 90 percent, the anniversary that Bush aides dreaded is passing with only a restrained response from partisans who just months ago complained bitterly about how the election had been stolen.

of last year's vote has clearly been obscured by the war on terrorism and anthrax scares that continue to shake nation. And the Bush administration has done its part by scheduling a series of high-profile meetings with foreign leaders that serve to buff the chief executive's presidential image.

the anniversary

National unity in the wake of the tragic Sept. 11 attacks clearly reflects the spirit and courage of the citizens of this country. We are sending an undeniable message to those who wish us ill that we are stronger than their hate and our nation will survive.

Our actions as well ought to reflect the pride we feel for our way of life. In spite of all of my favorite jabs at my fascist right-wing foes, I (along with the rest of the leftist lot and the normal, although infuriating, undecided citizenry as well) need them to add that splash of cold ance and occasionally honest and intelligent criticisms, this country would surely dissolve. Our survival depends on a reliance on a balanced government. We achieve this balance only through contentious, determined and down-right dirty debates from both ideological spectrums inadvertently compelling policy toward the center.

Despite eviwater to our save-the-world dence of some Without Republicans to offer balin Washington,

We can't continue to run in fear of unpopular ideas and unusual perspectives. Even as ideological enemies we remain committed friends.

We all have our election memo-ies and many probably just want to forget pregnant chads and manual recounts ever existed. Unfortunately, it's not that easy. There remains work to be done.

The 'thieves,' 'sore losers' and

'didn't really care either way' voters must come together, set our mourning veils and triumphant flags (respectively) aside and make real bi-partisan changes to our election

The president and his supporters needn't hide from such reforms. George W. Bush has secured himself a seat at the head of the table for at least the next three years and bility to care for and lead this country. In so doing, he should freely acknowledge past mistakes (mistakes out of his control), and take an active role in implementing

The House Democratic Caucus set the play in motion. On Wednesday, the Dems issued a call for national standards to improve voting machinery, improve access at polling places, restore the voting rights of ex-felons and create statewide voter registration databases for use by poll workers on Election Day.

Bush needs to take the next step to mend the electoral process by pushing ahead with concrete changes to address legitimate concerns that have been too long ignored — if for no other reason than out of respect for the thousands of disenfranchised voters in Florida and elsewhere.

Continue attack despite sacred holiday s the military campaign against the al-Qaeda terrorist network and the Tal-Laiban leadership in Afghanistan continues, it becomes important to determine whether the military campaign should carry on during the Muslim holy month of Ramadan. President Bush and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfield have stressed that our military action will take time. Certainly, it will still be going strong when Ramadan begins on Nov. 17.

If American military objectives have not been fulfilled when Ramadan comes, the U.S. and its allies should continue to carry out the campaign through the Muslim holy month.

The operation underway is not merely a series of isolated attacks. Our president does not subscribe to the "Missile Diplomacy" his predecessor used so frequently with little effect. Instead of launching limited missile attacks or even bombing runs, the U.S. is committed to defending itself in more effective ways against an enemy terrorist organization, and the regime that supports and harbors it. Al-Qaeda, through its leader Osama bin Laden, is prosecuting a pernicious war in which no targets are too sacrosanct and no methods too vile. To counter such an enemy, the U.S. must respond decisively.

Guest Columnist

Each day we delay bin Laden's reckoning, is another day American lives are unduly put at

As for our enemy, we know he will show little concern for Ramadan. By intentionally killing innocent men, women and children, bin Laden has defiled the religion for which he claims to be fighting. Religious respect did not deter Iraq and Iran from fighting during this period, nor did it deter Egypt, Syria and Jordan from launching the Ramadan War. Haven't heard of the Ramadan War? It's a commonly used synonym for the Yom Kippur War of 1973.

As a reminder, in the past, many Arab countries have been unconcerned about fighting during Ramadan, or on the holy day of another religion. The U.S. should be and has been careful to differentiate between the followers of bin Laden and the adherents to one of the world's great religions. Those who claim to fight for Islam but desecrate its central tenets cannot be permitted ceasing bombing during Ramadan, we blur the critical distinction between violent extremists and practitioners of a peaceful faith.

Unfortunately, in deciding to press forward with our campaign, the U.S. will likely offend many Afghans, who, while opposed to bin Laden, desire peace for religious observance. Yet it was not the U.S. who put them in danger. Even now, the U.S. is taking unprecedented precautions to insure absolute minimums of innocent civilians are injured in the hunt for bin Laden.

Our goal in Afghanistan is not hegemonic; rather, we seek to eliminate a serious hazard to our lives and freedoms. We stand against the oppressive Taliban regime, but with people of Afghanistan who live under their rule. We understand their fear, and we sympathize with their suffering. So while we will continue to supply humanitarian aid to this war-torn land, we must also realize the best way to remove the threat Airterrorism poses to America, and to remove the yoke of repression from Afghans, is to judiciously and swiftly engage our common the opinion pages of The Lantern regarding health care benefits for same sex partners.

Everyone deserves health care

Evidently, Undergraduate Student Government President Eddie Pauline is in favor of a policy mandating same-sex benefits to Ohio State employees' partners. His claim is that people of same-sex marriages have a right to health care coverage. There is no, as one OSU student critic put it, "right to health care."

While in spirit I actually agree with Pauline, it is unfortunate that he referred to it as a right. More important, I feel that he and most everyone is missing the real issue.

Health care in our modern world has become exorbitantly expensive. Most students are fortunate enough to be covered by their parents' health care plans, and the university does offer a reasonable insurance plan to those who are not already covered.

The real problem is not the small number of people involved in samesex relationships, where one partner

There has been recent debate in cannot receive coverage even though their life partner works for the university in some capacity. The problem is the general inability of the working poor to afford health insurance or even the cost of simple medical procedures.

What we need to recognize is that in a capitalist society such as our own, there will be winners and losers. It doesn't matter if every citizen in this great country has earned doctoral degrees; the system will produce financially impoverished

We need to look beyond the narrow scope of securing benefits for particular minority groups and provide for the general welfare of society as a whole. We need to understand the downside to our wonderfully productive capitalist system and provide health care for every person, not because it is a right, but because it is the right thing to do.

To the military: I am proud of you When I picture a "peace activist," I tend to see someone different than those who have been holding anti-war rallies

To me, a peace activist is a 27-year-old man dressed in military uniform making a collect phone call to his tearful and proud family to say "I'll be away for a while."

Transformed from the wiry, shaggy-haired teen-ager enlisting in the armed forces to a strong and determined soldier, he leaves behind his homeland and family to go fight for your right to feel at peace when you board a plane or go to a ballgame.

He is fighting for a way of life and even for a person's freedom to publicly voice ignorant anti-war speeches. He is fighting so that his four-year-old daughter can grow up in a peaceful world. The soldier is fighting against those who don't believe in a free and peaceful society. He is fighting for the same issues anti-war rallies are protesting against.

The military doesn't want to have innocent people killed. However, our own innocent people have already been killed, and who wants to "peacefully" sit back and wait for it to happen

When you protest this war, you are protesting against freedom. What other cause could persuade thousands of young men and women to enlist each year?

To the armed forces, I am so proud of you. Thank you for protecting and fighting for peace in our nation.

'Uncommon Clay' tells story of French artist

By Paul Landefeld Lantern arts writer

The story of early 20th century artist Camille Claudel is brought to life by director and writer Jeanine Thompson in a 90-minute play "Uncommon Clay." The play describes the triumphs and trials of Claudel's artistic career.

"The physicality of 'Uncommon Clay' tells Camille's story and expresses the transformative beauty of her sculptural work," Thompson said.

The story begins in Villeneuve, France with a young Claudel (Allyson Rosen) and her brother Paul (Jeremy Meier) and follows Claudel until her death. Because the play follows Claudel through her life, there are six different actresses who play the part of Each had to play the same character but they had to play each part of her life differently, Thompson said. Rosen did a good job of bringing out the youthful exuberance and ignorance one forgets as they get older.

Meier has the task of playing the supporting role of Claudel's brother throughout the life span of the sculpturess. He did a excellent job of aging his character to fit the personality to the character's age.

As the story moves forward Claudel is incarcerated by her family at the urging of her former lover and teacher Auguste Rodin (Kenderick Hardy). Naomi Hatsfelt had the formidable task to portray Caudel through this difficult time but she did so very con-

Thompson took much of the script from Claudel's thoughts during her incarceration.

"The majority of the text is based on the letters Camille wrote while she was institutionalized," Thompson said.

During the portrayal of Claudel's incarceration the music, effects and the ensemble create a dark and dreary atmosphere suiting the mood of the time. Hatsfelt did a wonderful job of portraying a woman, once proud and carefree, who becomes beaten down until all she cares about is the next package sent from her mother.

Her mother Louise Claudel, layed by Sara Borgeson, resents Camille because she never became a "traditional woman." Borgeson's performance was somewhat lacking. The actress never brought out the hatred and envy the mother should feel towards her rebellious

The single set features a large window surrounded by a brownish background and a small landing to the right, which is occupied by a sculpting Camille (Kathleen Gonzales) throughout the play.

This play requires a lot of imagination on the part of the audience. The entire cast did an excellent job of using motions to portray actions, such as sculpting, and making it easy for the audience to follow the action.

This man is arguably the greatest writer since Shakespeare, yet today's generation is totally unaware of who he is. Almost all who listen to music are influenced by Dylan, directly or indirectly.

If there was a river of influence for these and hundreds of other artists, it would lead back to Mount Dylan.

He is the man who taught them about baring feelings in lyrics and stinging inflection in meaning.

In the 1960s Dylan was considered to be the "voice" of the generation and wrote the soundtrack to the civil rights movement. lan receives sentence in racially motivated case

By Dan Nephin Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — A black man was convicted yesterday of killing three white men and injuring two others in a racially motivated shooting rampage last year at his home and two fast-food restaurants in suburban Pittsburgh.

Jurors deliberated 4 1/2 hours before finding Ronald Taylor, 41, guilty of several charges, including three counts firstdegree murder and nine counts of aggravated assault.

Defense lawyers had acknowledged ings said, "Jesus Christ made a very big, costly mistake by putting white trash people on the face of the earth." Taylor was the shooter, but said he suffered from delusions and paranoia, believing whites were persecuting him and other minorities. They argued he should not be held accountable for his actions.

Prosecutors maintained Taylor knew what he was doing and purposely targeted whites.

During the trial, prosecutors showed jurors copies of hate writings found in Taylor's apartment that railed at whites, Jews and homosexuals. One of the writ-

The jury will begin considering today whether Taylor should receive the death

Prosecutors said Taylor, on March 1, 2000, became angry at maintenance workers fixing a door at his apartment in Wilkinsburg, about 10 miles from downtown Pittsburgh, and shot and killed one of the workers, John Kroll, 55.

He then walked to two nearby fastfood restaurants, fatally shooting Joseph blacks and other minorities.

other men were each shot but survived.

Taylor went to a nearby office building and, according to testimony at trial, threatened to kill other white people there. After a two-hour standoff, he surrendered to police.

During the trial, Dr. Horacio Fabrega, a psychiatrist, testified for the defense, saying Taylor's actions were not those of an angry racist but resulted from "extremely irrational beliefs," including that there was a conspiracy against Fabrega testified Taylor was thrust into a "psychotic storm" on the day of the shootings by a series of stresses, including worries that the lease at his apartment would not be renewed.

He said Taylor was legally insane at the time of the shootings and remains a paranoid schizophrenic.

On cross examination, however, Fabrega acknowledged that Taylor "had an awareness" that killing was considered wrong by society, but that he believed it was the right thing for him to do under his imagined circumstances

Purdue coach gets last laugh with 'gimmick' offense

By Albert Breer Lantern sports writer

Purdue coach Joe Tiller did not invent the spread offense. But try telling that to the other Big Ten coaches

When Tiller arrived at Purdue which Ther arrived at Furdule five years ago, many thought the "gimmicky," "Mickey Mouse" offense he rode to two Western Athletic Conference titles at Wyoming would be exposed in the robe to two blooms. tumble Big Ten. They thought it would surely wilt when faced with ball-control attacks that would leave his defenses gassed and his offenses cold on the sideline.

Four bowl appearances and a conference title later, Tiller is getting the last laugh. The offense has helped his program on the field, maximizing the available talent, and off the field, in recruiting.

"It hasn't been a passing fancy to me," Tiller said. "And I don't think this effects is going away."

this offense is going away."
In the copycat game that is football, the blueprint of Tiller-ball has been used at Northwestern and variations of it have popped up at Indiana, Illinois and even smashmouth Wisconsin.

The idea of the offense is to create mismatches by spreading the field and moving receivers around. Purdue's No. 1 receiver may not be as good as Michigan's top cornerback, but Tiller was willing to bet on arrival at Purdue that that receiver was better than a Wolverine nickel or dime back. It was just a matter of finding a way to get that

It relies on a smart, quick-thinking and accurate quarterback and receivers who aren't necessarily blazing fast, but quick enough to find holes in the defense, exploit them and then run after the catch.

"It was developed for teams that may not have the natural athletic talent of a Michigan," said redshirt freshman quarterback Brandon

"It hasn't been a passing fancy, and I don't think this offense is going away."

> -Joe Tiller Purdue coach

Hance, who has started every game this season. "It isn't any more diffi-cult than any other offense, but peo-ple have to know their assignments and the blocking schemes. It's a little more based on decision-making."

This strategy brought immediate results to the Boilermaker program and has not stopped producing

Going into Tiller's first season, 1997, Purdue had endured 16 conecutive losing seasons. Since, the Boilermakers have run off four successive winning seasons and need one more win this season to clinch a Further, Purdue qualified for five bowl games over the program's first 100 seasons, dating to 1996. It is a near certainty now they will match that figure in the first five seasons of the program's second

And with that, success has come in recruiting.

Drew Brees, now the future quarterback of the San Diego Chargers, came from Texas. Hance was recruited out of California, and promising true freshman Kyle Orton was lured from Iowa.

The team has become so deep at quarterback that hotshot recruit Mike Rhinehart, a true freshman, was moved to tight end upon arriving at fall camp. West Lafayette, Ind. has suddenly become a hot spot in the nation for quarterbacks.

son why.

"It was a huge factor for me," Hance said. "Definitely, one of the main reasons. It's just an extremely exciting offense to play in.'

It has happened at other positions as well. Receivers get the chance to catch more balls, running backs get to play a diversified role and linemen develop the pass-blocking skills that NFL scouts look for.

"When I watch their games, I get a little jealous," said Ohio State tight end Darnell Sanders. "They run a fun system up there." Fun for Purdue. Fun for the fans.

Not so fun for opposing defenses.

When OSU hosts the Boilermakers tomorrow, they will have come off games against Wisconsin, San Diego State and Minnesota, all teams based around the exploits of talented tailbacks running out of the I-formation. They will have to look back to the Northwestern game to gain a feel for the amount of covering and rushing they will be doing, things that drain players.

"A lot of the defenses we used against Northwestern, we (are going to) put in for Purdue," said OSU defensive end Darrion Scott. "I'm thinking pass the whole game and getting off the ball and getting to the quarterback."

Hance follows in a long line of distinguished Purdue signal-callers that includes Len Dawson, Bob Griese, Jim Everett and Brees. Whether he will reach that stratosphere is uncertain.

But if he does, one of the reasons why will be abundantly clear.

"This system tailors to quarter-backs," said Tiller. "You could see that with Drew which he had 1,500 snaps under his belt. We give them the best chance to succeed."

Field hockey Bucks get second crack at UVA in tournament

By Christopher Shook Lantern sports writer

Forget March. It is November Madness for the No. 5 Ohio State field hockey team.

The Buckeyes will have momentum and confidence on their side this weekend when they travel to Winston-Salem, N.C. to play in their second NCAA tournament in the program's 30-year history. Their last appearance came in 1994.

They are riding a four-game winning streak and were able to earn an automatic bid by sweeping through the Big Ten tournament last weekend.

OSU players are admittedly excited about playing in their first tournament game

"It's just a really wonderful experience," said forward Vanessa Immordino. "It's so exciting for everyone.

The Buckeyes will come into the tournament with a 15-4 overall record. In the first round, they will take on No. 10 Virginia, which comes into the contest with 13-7 record. Revenge for a 2-1 defeat at the hands of the Cavaliers on Oct. 7 will be on the minds of many OSU play-

"We dominated pretty much that entire game," Immordino said. "I think we're going to put on the attack a little more this time because we deserve to win."

"There's definitely a revenge factor, and that's just going to add to the excitement," senior goaltender Allison Blanton said.

In that game, the Buckeyes outshot Virginia 12-6 and had an 11-5 advantage in penalty corners. The Cavaliers, however, got spectacular goaltending from Emily White, who recorded eight saves to offset the OSU attack.
OSU coach Anne Wilkinson said the Buckeyes will have to be more aggressive this time around to crack the armor of White.

"She's beatable, but we've got to matter of showing it."

be looking for those second and third shots," Wilkinson said.

The Buckeyes will also be looking for Blanton to continue her recent dominance. She gave up just one goal last weekend, which included shutouts over Indiana and No. 7 Michigan before leading the Buckeyes to a 2-1 win over Iowa in the championship game.

Blanton, who was named co-MVP of the tournament along with OSU midfielder Marije van Nouhuys, gives all the credit to her

"The only reason I looked halfway decent out there is because of my defense," Blanton said. "They were just flying, diving, and stopping everything."

The stingy Buckeye defense will have to fend off a potent Cavalier offense that has scored four or more goals seven times this season. The Virginia attack is led by senior mid-fielder Jessica Coleman, who has 38 points this season on 18 goals and

Wilkinson said the Buckeyes are peaking at the right time and she does not plan to change the team strategy

'I'm really confident in our defense, and our forwards are clicking, so I'm not going to touch anything," Wilkinson said.

In the other regional game, host-school Wake Forest will take on No. 9 Ohio University. The No. 3 Demon Deacons, who are coming off a 3-2 loss to No. 1 Maryland in the ACC championship game, will give the Bobcats all they can handle.

The Buckeyes are secretly hoping for an all-Ohio regional final on "That would be really fun," Immordino said. "We hope to be playing on Sunday, and if they win, I think it would be a good match."

Wilkinson said anything is possi-ble if the Buckeyes play up to their capabilities.

We know we have the ability," Wilkinson said. "Now, it's just a

Buckeyes still respect Boilermakers, quarterback

By Travis Sawchik Lantern sports writer

Their were no tears shed by the Ohio State football program when the 32nd pick in the NFL draft was chosen in April. That is when former Purdue quarterback Drew Brees joined the San Diego Chargers.

Purdue (5-2, 3-2 Big Ten) enters into the 'Shoe tomorrow fresh off of a 38-13 pounding behind the woodshed handed out by Illinois last Saturday. The Boilermakers want and need this game as much as OSU (5-3, 3-2 Big Ten). The Buckeyes will look to build on their 31-28 victory over Minnesota last Saturday.

Every week is our bowl game basically, OSU defensive lineman Tim Anderson said. "In the offseason I really didn't know how they would be after losing Drew Brees. But their quarterback now has done a good job

It will be the second spread offense OSU has seen this season, defeating Northwestern earlier this season.

"They line up the same but they don't do many of the same things," Tressel said.

"Northwestern's is a spread that likes to run the ball, they are run first pass second. Purdue lines up in a spread and they are pass first and run second.

Lantern Challenge Week 7

What a difference a week

High off the exhilaration of a 6-1 record in Week 5, Lantern sports editor Dave O'Neil had the worst week of the season, going 2-4 and dropping into a last-place tie with Travis Sawchik at 24-17.

Sawchik, Justin Powell (27-14) and Lucas Sullivan (26-16) all went 4-2 last week.

Sullivan has been the quiet warrior all season, but spoke up after last week's results.

"Powell," he said. "Is meat." Powell is not worried though. "Luke can use the force all he wants," Powell said. "He doesn't have the brains to hang with

Only four weeks remain in the challenge, but O'Neil and Sawchik aren't worried. "I don't have another Pyschology 100 test until the final, so I can fully concentrate on the task at hand," O'Neil said. "And that's winning this." Sean Casey was selected as the guest picker this week.' "O'Neil saw me in the hall-way outside the newsroom and asked," Casey said.

mance tomorrow or kidnap Illinois quarterback Kurt Kittner. A big key will be if OSU's offensive line can match its performance against the Purdue front four on defense like they did against Minnesota. The Gophers average just 250-pounds per man across, while Purdue averages more than 280-pounds per defensive line-

"Purdue is nicely sized up front. Minnesota wasn't undersized but they were a little bit small," OSU offensive lineman Adrien Clarke said. "They move here and there, right and left. They are the most mobile line we have faced.'

The OSU defense needs to stop big plays if they want a share of the Big Ten title

"I think we have missed some tackles. We are going to have to tackle better to be a good enough defense and we have had some missed assignments," Tressel

The OSU defensive captain

"I think we made defensive mistakes that we can correct which is great," linebacker Joe Cooper said. "They still have big play receivers and their quarterback. I've seen do some great things on film."

Hance has passed for 1,342 yards this season with eight touchdown passes and seven interceptions. Purdue receivers Seth Morales and John Sandeford have combined to catch seven of the those touchdowns.

At least Purdue coach Joe Tiller is in love with the OSU squad if nobody else in central Ohio is. Tiller said this week he felt OSU had the most athletic team in the Big Ten, more athletic than Michigan and Illinois.

Tressel is more cautious in his portrayal of the Buckeyes.

"I learned a long time ago from Earl Bruce that nothing is as good as it seems and nothing is as bad," Tressel said.

Men's soccer loses, women win, in round one of Big 10 tourney

Yesterday was a day of mixed emotions for Ohio State soccer

The OSU women's team defeated Purdue 2-1 in overtime in the first round of the Big Ten tournament, while the men's team lost to Michigan State by the same 2-1 score.

The women will take on No. 8 Penn State today at 1 p.m. in the semifinals, while the men closed out their season yesterday at 10-6-2 overall.

Down 1-0 to the host Boiler-makers with three minutes to go in regulation, forward Lisa Grubb scored the tying goal on an assist from defenseman Jen Miller.

Grubb would figure into the overtime scoring as well, assisting the gamewinner to forward Sarah Lanham a little more than two minutes into the extra ses-

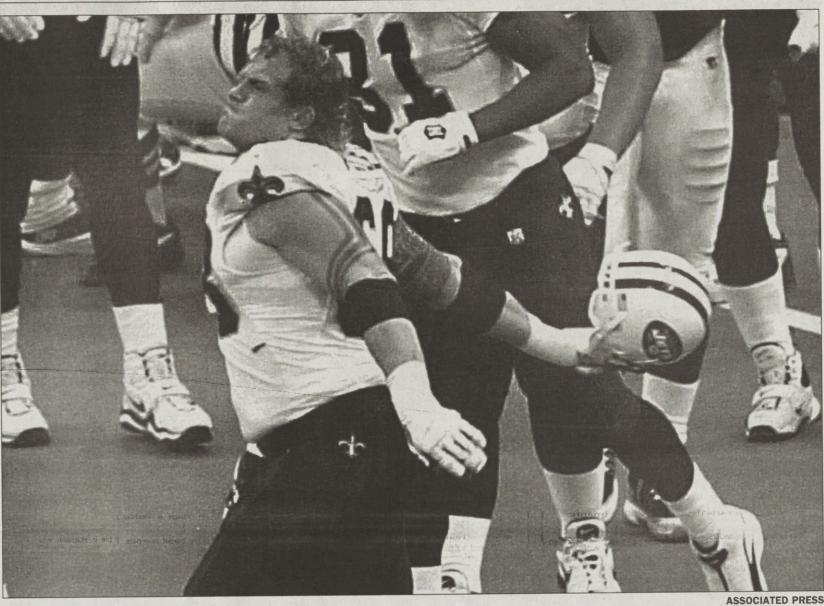

While the women's team made a near-miraculous comeback, the men's team let one slip away.

Up 1-0 with 35 minutes to go, Michigan State scored two goals midway through the second half to provide the victory.

If the women's team defeats Penn State today, they will play for the Big Ten title on Sunday in West Lafayette, Ind.

A win on Sunday would also give the Buckeyes an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

An important workplace or romantic partnership may enter a phase of EMOTIONAL REVERSAL. TUESDAY THROUGH FRIDAY, WATCH FOR A CLOSE ASSOCIATE OR LOVED ONE TO REVISIT PAST ISSUES OF TRUST, ATTENTION TO DETAIL OR POORLY USED TIME. ALL OF THIS IS UNAVOIDABLE. REMAIN GRACIOUSLY ATTENTIVE AND ALL WILL BE WELL. SOME TAUREANS MAY ALSO FIND THAT AN OLD FAMILY PATTERN IS REPEATED. LOVED ONES NEED CONCRETE IDEAS AND A NEW DIRECTION.

FIGURES MAY BE TEMPERAMENTAL.

BUSINESS AWARENESS TO ARRIVE. MAHINOG, Philippines Tropical storm Lingling battered the Philippines for a second day vesterday, leaving at least 108 people dead, sinking a cargo ship and virtually shutting down several provinces.

The death toll included 78 in Mahinog town on the resort island of Camiguin, which suffered its worst disaster in a half-century. With 300 people missing, officials said the overall toll was likely to Nineteen of the missing were Filipino crewmen on a cargo ship that sank yesterday in stormy seas off the northwestern Philippines. There was no word on survivors, as the poor weather hampered rescue efforts.

The storm was blamed for the collapse of a tunnel in a copper mine in Cebu province. Rescue workers were trying to reach 14 miners trapped under tons of rock and earth.

Workers in Mahinog, which reported 203 people missing, scur-ried to embalm dozens of corpses to avoid an outbreak of disease in the steamy tropical heat. Urgent requests went out for chain saws to cut through trees and other debris, and for anyone with a shovel to help dig through tons of mud.

But the devastation was so complete — only five houses were still standing in Hubangon, one of the villages that make up Mahinog that it was hard to tell where most homes had stood.

"I saw the people, the children, the innocent who died," Camiguin Gov. Pedro Romualdo said, sobbing as he spoke to ABS-CBN television. "It's the first time I've seen something like this."

Fast-moving flood waters bearing boulders cascaded from hills around Hibok-Hibok, one of seven volcanoes on the island, into mountain villages in Mahinog and riverside communities in Catarman as most people were still sleeping Wednesday.

Casiano Matela, regional director of the provincial Office of Civil Defense, said residents reported hearing a thunderous water spout a tornado over water — before

Police officer Romeo Jaguilma and his family survived in Hubangon by climbing on the roof of their concrete house, which withstood the flood waters, and clutching their children in the darkness as he sang a hymn. They could hear cries for help from their neighbors over the rushing water all around them.

"The noise was very deafening," said Jaguilma's wife Lorna, 36. "It sounded like a hundred trucks and a hundred boats all arriving at the same time

Her husband said he also could hear boulders hitting the side of the house. Three coconut trees and two small fruit trees provided some pro-

Dozens of corpses, mostly elderly and children, were lined up on a basketball court in Mahinog as people nervously inspected posted lists of the dead and missing.

"We have to bury them this afternoon; otherwise they will cause a stench and pose health risks," Mahinog Mayor Benedicto Castanares said as about 20 workers made coffins in the back of the gymnasium.

Rescuers wash the mud covered body of a flash floods victim in the island province of Camiguin, Philippines yesterday after it. was hit by tropical storm Lingling.
