In a state that is more difficult to call than anywhere else, whoever comes out on top will do so by the thinnest of margains. I feel that if my generation shows up at the polls tomorrow, we can welcome John Kerry into the White House. If not, I envision four more years of declining employment and increased fear across the entire globe. But because I believe in my peers, I am calling a time to be in college. In Ohio.

I can not imagine a more important and controversial election to cast my first ballot in. Years from now people will still be talking about this political season, and it has all revolved around this campus and this state. The interest is so palpable that my friends and I were watching the debates with the same passion as a football game. What

After the Republican National Convention, I felt a palpable momentum shift towards the president. However, with questionable performances during the debates and increasing public scrutiny of the war in Iraq candidates spent a great deal of Kerry gained needed ground as the election approached. I see the spector of Florida 2000 looming in the Buckeye State, as Bush truly missed out on an environloses the popular vote and wins Ohio and the election.

The best aspect of this election, from an OSU standpoint, has been the tremendous access students have been given. Ohio defined the phrase "battle-ground state" this fall as both time and money here. Students who did not take a minute to see ment none of us, I think, will ever truly see again in this state.

The worst aspect of this election was the amount of malicious rhetoric targeting supporters of both candidates. The Lantern felt the brunt of this throughout the quarter as we were at times chastized for being too liberal or too who were seen all over the conservative depending on the photos we ran that day. It seemed the focus on Ohio in the media during this election there was no room to concede that both candidates might have points to make about the future of our country.

Mainstream media, a.k.a. partisan "documentaries" were aimed at both liberals and conservatives. This election also was the rise of the 527 special interest groups, swing states promoting a particular candidate while pretending not to promote a candidate. I think these groups are going to be with us for some time to come.

This election has been pretty exciting from the get-go, especially for us Ohioans. With constant political bombardments and rallies, complete with a certain actor from "Predator" and a particular musician we often that it does matter if they vote or refer to as "The Boss," how could this get any better? When all is said and done, and the lawsuits have been filed and decided, I think that Kerry will win booths, and then wind up comout over Bush — even if Kerry doesn't take Ohio.

The best aspect of this elecmany people are actually getting involved in the democracy of the United States of America. People are finally beginning to realize not. Nov. 2 will not be a regular day where people just go about their normal business, not even plaining about who wins. This day will be one for the books.

The worst aspect of the election is definitely the fact that so tion is all the animosity that has ing in this election, and so occurred between the parties. A person can barely walk around Columbus without hearing someone making fun of another's political beliefs. In a period of time when people should be learning how to live peacefully with each other, there's a large thinking about going to voting shadow of anger that looms over us. I'm not sure where it comes from, but I hope we all get over our petty differences soon.

With so many people votmany new voters, this election will be historically significant in that aspect alone. I've never seen such passion for an elec-tion before. People are nearly gushing with excitement. It's like watching a reality television show...with actual reality in it. May I dare say this will be as exciting as an OSU vs. Michigan football game? I won't go that far, but it's close.

With Ohio positioned to be a key swing state in today's election, the calls have never been more plentiful.

"In the last couple months, I've easily done interviews with a couple hundred journalists and I've talked with journalists from about 16 countries," Asher said. "And I have been talking to a lot. of journalists from all over the United States and throughout the world. I've done a live radio interview on BBC, I've been on and on many local programs."

Asher said he and his colleagues have been giving numerous talks to community groups quoted in countless newspapers, both local and abroad.

"We have an outstanding political science department," he said. "OSU is a very good environment. It's exciting to be here."

According to a comprehensive study by the London School overall in the world.

Candidates reach finish line

By Calvin Woodward Associated Press

CINCINNATI — President Bush and Democratic challenger John Kerry swung into a frenzied last day of campaigning yesterday, Bush appearing at dawn in the Midwest and Kerry stumping in Florida for the top prize in a presidential election still too close to call.

Squeezing every dwindling hour for campaigning, Bush laid on a six-state, seven-stop tour stretching from early morning into late night, mostly in the Midwest. Kerry was working the heartland for a final time, too, after a morning stop in Florida, scene of the disputed 2000 vote that gave Bush the presidency.

In an airplane hangar in Wilmington, Ohio, Gov. Bob Taft warmed up Bush's crowd of several thousand supporters on Bush's sixth straight day in the crucial battleground state. "He's putting his heart and his soul on the line for us, for our families, for our future," Taft

Baghdad deputy governor assassinated; four kidnapped

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Militants kidnapped an American and three other foreigners in a bloody assault on their office in the capital Sunday, and gunmen assassinated Baghdad's deputy governor in a drive-by shooting, new violence that came as voter registration began for vital January elections.

U.S. forces are gearing up for a major offensive against Fallujah, the strongest bastion of Sunni insurgets. The order to launch what would likely be a bloody assault must come from Prime Minister Ayad Allawi, who warned Sunday that his patience with negotiations was

U.S. and Iraqi officials hope to curb the insurgency in time for national elections by the end

A handful of Iraqis showed up for the first day of voter registration in central Baghdad yesterday. They refused to allow TV cameras to film them for fear of future retaliation.

Fresh American soldiers arrived in the capital yesterday.

The latest in Iraq's wave of kidnappings came when gunmen stormed an office in the upscale Mansour district of Baghdad, sparking a battle with guards during the evening Iftar meal when Muslims break their daylong fast in the holy month of Ramadan, police said.

One attacker and one guard were killed in the fight, police said, and the gunmen escaped with the American, an Asian and two non-Iraqi Arabs, Interior Ministry spokesman Col. Adnan Abdul-Rahman said. He did not know the other victims's nationalities. U.S. Embassy spokesman Bob Callahan confirmed that the fourth victim was an American.

Also yesterday, gunmen

Baghdad province's deputy governor, Hatim Kamil, to work Monday morning, killing Kamil, said Baghdad Governor Ali al-Haidari. Two of Kamil's bodyguards were wounded, Interior Ministry spokesman Col. Adnan Abdul-Rahman said.

A known militant group, the Ansar al-Sunnah Army, claimed responsibility for the attack in southeastern Baghdad.

'This is the fate of whoever is aiding or supporting the crusaders against the Muslims and mujahedeen," the group said on its Web site. It was impossible to verify the claim's authenticity.

The group also said it was behind the assassination of the deputy governor of Diyala province on Friday in the central Iraqi city of Baqouba. Aqil Hamid al-Adili, the assistant to the governor for projects affairs, was killed by unidentified gunmen as he was sitting in a friend's office.

Allawi's speech Sunday seemed aimed at preparing the Iraqi public for an onslaught in Fallujah, Allawi warned of civilian casualties, saying that if he orders an assault, it would be with a "heavy heart."

"But I owe, owe it to the Iraqi people to defend them from the violence and the terrorists and insurgents," he said.

Commanders have estimated that up to 5,000 Islamic militants, Saddam Hussein loyalists and common criminals are holed up in Fallujah.

He did not give a deadline for how long he would give negotiations with Fallujah's city leaders in which he demands the handover of foreign fighters.

In a position that appeared to contrast with Allawi's, the country's interim president said a military assault was the wrong solution, according to an interview published yesterday.

Religious differences spark violent outbreaks in China

LANGCHENGGANG, China - Violent clashes in a central China village killed seven people and injured 42, the government said yesterday. Police imposed martial law on the area after the fighting between hundreds of rioters that pitted Muslim Chinese against non-Muslims.

The unrest began Wednesday after a traffic accident and lasted through Sunday, the government said in its first official report on the violence. Everything "is now under control," it said in the statement, run on the state news agency Xinhua.

Martial law has been imposed on the area in Zhongmou County near the city of Zhengzhou in Henan province, and thousands of police have been sent in to restore order. Eighteen people have been arrested, Xinhua said.

Some 400 to 500 rioters from the Han ethnic majority and the Hui Muslims clashed in the town of Langchenggang, burning several houses, residents said.

Yesterday, thousands of police lined the road into the town. They stopped cars at checkpoints outside town, but it was not clear whether any were turned away. Foreign reporters who visited the area were detained. Government minivans with loudspeakers strapped to their roofs drove through the town broadcasting appeals for calm.

"I still dare not leave the house," said one man, who would give only his surname, Li, and who said he lived a half mile from the scene of the fighting. "To the west and east are Hui villages. So people are afraid to go outside."

"A lot of people were carrying clubs to fight. They set fire to several houses," a Langchenggang resident with the surname Liu said by telephone. "Right now, there are lots of police. The local government is allowing residents to move around but everyone is afraid of going out."

Residents could not confirm a report by The New York Times that as many as 148 people were killed in the fighting.

Ethnic tensions rise

Martial law was imposed on a Chinese town near Zhengzhou Monday after rioting between hundreds of the Han ethnic majority and Hui Muslims killed at least seven people.

The government statement did not give details on the traffic accident that sparked the fighting.

The Times said it broke out after a Han girl was struck and killed Friday by a Hui taxi driver. One resident, an accountant, said it began after three Hui men in a car beat up a 17-year-old Han boy who blocked the street.

That confrontation escalated until a group of 400 to 500 Hui came from a nearby town and large-scale clashes occurred, the accountant said

A spokesman for the county government gave a different version, saying the violence began after a collision Wednesday between two farm vehicles, one driven by a Han and the other

The two men summoned help from relatives, and fighting broke out, said the spokesman, Liang whether the men were Hui or Songzhou. He said the violence Han.

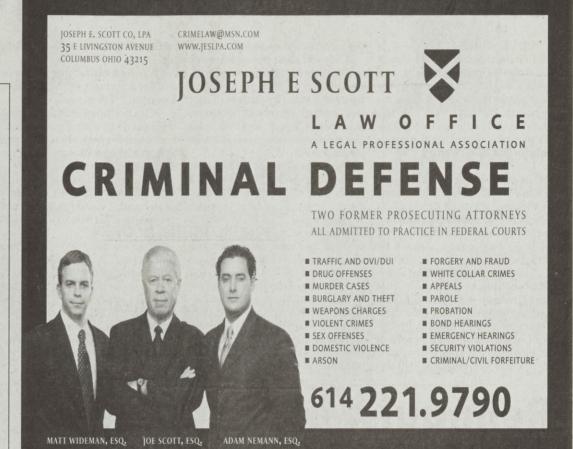

spread Thursday and Friday. In addition to the one confirmed death, he said there might have been an additional two deaths.

This has nothing to do with ethnicity," insisted Liang, deputy directory of the county Propaganda Office.

County and provincial officials contacted by phone refused to release any information, and several residents said local officials had told them not to give information to reporters.

Yesterday, a reporter who visited the town saw residents sitting outside shabby brick houses beside piles of drying corn.

Shattered glass was scattered across the road in the adjacent village of Weitan. Villagers said the debris was left over from an altercation between soldiers and a group of men, but it was not clear

R. Kelly taken off tour after entourage incident

By Larry McShane Associated Press

The "I Believe I Can Fly" singer was booted from remaining shows at Madison Square Garden by the promoter Jeff Sharp of Atlanta Worldwide Touring Saturday, a day after a member of Jay-Z's entourage allegedly blasted R. Kelly with pepper spray, said his publicist, Allan Mayer. The promoter announced that Jay-Z, with special guests, would do the shows alone.

Kelly's lawyers were filing complaint against the entourage member and considering action over the decision to remove Kelly from the tour, Mayer said.

"The fans deserve better than this," Kelly said in a statement. "I'd like the show to go on. It's really disappointing that Jay-Z and the promoter don't." Jay-Z and Kelly were in the midst of a 40-city "Best of Both Worlds" tour, which has been beset by canceled shows and reports that the feuding performers weren't even on speaking terms. The tour, which had been scheduled to run through Nov. 28, has been canceled. Jay-Z's publicist was unsure if the rapper would try and fill the remaining dates as a solo

The pepper-spray incident happened about an hour into Friday night's show, when Kelly walked on stage and said he saw two people in the audience waving guns, Mayer said. Kelly abruptly stopped his set around 9:30 p.m. while arena security employees searched for weapons.

Finding none, guards told Kelly it was safe to continue performing, Mayer said. But

Local cartoonist honored in exhibit

James Thurber, famous for his cartoons in The New Yorker, will be honored by the Ohio State Faculty Club, a place where he began his scholarly journey 91 years ago. The exhibition will include 25 reproductions of his original line drawings.

Thurber was born in Columbus in 1894 and attended OSU from 1913-1918. During childhood, he lost vision in one eye from a bow-and-arrow.

Before his death in 1961, Thurber wrote 25 books and had numerous collections of drawings, including titles such as "Is Sex Necessary?" and "The Seal in the Bedroom.'

Geoff Smith, head of the Rare Books and Manuscripts Library at OSU, said a lot of Thurber's work was drawn from his experiences growing up in Colum-

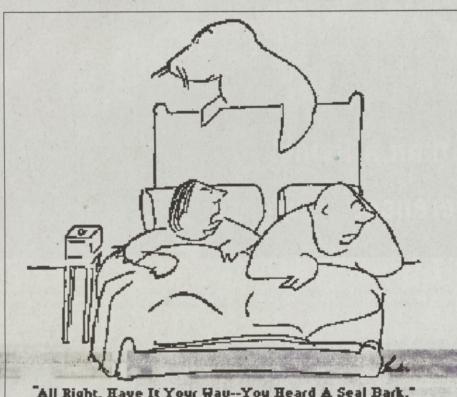

"The on-running theme, which may be politically incorrect today, is the war between men and women," he said. 'There was a sexual tension between his male and female characters. The flood of 1913 was something that infused his imagination. His own quirky family and any political things also influenced his work.

Marion Fisher, arts coordinator for Manuscripts Library at OSU for being able to hold the exhibition.

"I was aware a couple years ago that the 110th anniversary of his birth was coming up in December — and I knew that there was a collection at OSU — so I went to the Rare Books and Manuscript Library and asked them if we could have an exhibition as a club, which would coordinate with that time period," Fisher said. "The collection of Thurber's work is available to scholars and people doing research. They are not actually on view frames at the library and that is one thing we offer with this exhibition. There was a lot of effort put together to take these out of the collection, have them framed, and have them ready for exhibition.

Fisher said the OSU Faculty Club goes through a long process to choose what will be used in an exhibition.

"Our art exhibit program at the club features artwork of selected OSU facultv. staff, students and alumni which have contact with OSU," she said. "It is they are presented to an arts committee more information call 292-2262.

With provisional ballots, voter fraud and any number of headaches still in the mix, today will be more entertaining than any summer shoot-'em-up could ever be.

My prediction for the election is that there will be no president - in fact, all society will collapse after Ohio breaks free of its land-locked-dom and sinks into Lake Erie to hang out with Atlantis.

The movie rights will promptly be sold and America will have the next great epic, entitled "Election Fever." Of course there will be car chases and the three presidential debates will be turned into a wrestling match Hulk Hogan would envy. It will be entertaining, and that is what this election is — entertainment.

In real life imagine Brutus Buckeye dueling to the death with the rapping transient on 13th Avenue. No, help is not on the way and neither is a president - this is our fate today. Death to Republicans, death to Democrats; long live third-party

If you want to avert the apocalypse and star in your very own political commercial, vote. In fact, if you don't vote I will come to your house, kick your dog and make out with your mother. The sky will fall like your grades after a drinking binge - that's how important

Are you going to vote for Bush? I don't care. How about Kerry? Yeah, Kerry who? Even if you have to throw away your dignity and vote for Lyndon LaRouche, I'd say you're a nutbag — but a brave nutbag.

oteMob and ACORN had the right idea — mobilize college students and politicize the community. If ever there was a time for college students to do more than worry about what grade they got on a midterm or what bar they're going to drink at tonight, this would be it.

This election is the equivalent of the OSU vs. Michigan game on steroids. There will be drama, yelling and at least one fistfight over social security. This is how the masses want it. This is how the history books will remember it and this is how I want my children to remember it.

If I was a betting man, which I am, I would wager our generation will go down in history as a generation that voted.

Generation X had its shining moment when it went into the work force and proved it had more than just teen spirit, but what about Generation Y? Fifty years from now people will look back and say someone lit a fire under our butts.

If at least 60 percent of the nation votes, I will walk through Mirror Lake and shave the percentage into my hair.

Sixty will become the official number I cheer for on every sports team, and I will shake each person's hand no matter who they voted for.

By the time you've read this far in the column, you could have voted a straight party ticket and bought a pack of gum before praying to your god that there will be a tidal wave of voters sparring "American Gladiator", style for their only chance to punch a candidate - or at least punch a candidate's name into a computer or voting ballot.

The only thing I ask is that when you see me on campus tomorrow with "60 percent" shaved into my hair, stop me and make sure I voted. If I say I haven't, you have my permission to make out with my mom, but no one kicks my dog.

Roethlisberger ends Patriots streak

By Alan Robinson AP Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH — He wasn't yet born the last time the Pittsburgh Steelers won the Super Bowl. That isn't preventing rookie quarterback Ben Roethlisberger from bringing back the memories of the greatest times — and the greatest teams — in franchise history.

The Steelers are 6-1 after ending New England's 21-game winning streak with a dominating 34-20 victory Sunday in which Roethlisberger improved to 5-0 as a starter. In a fitting throwback to the days when the Steelers won four Super Bowls in six seasons, Roethlisberger is off to the best start by an NFL rookie quarterback since Pittsburgh's Mike Kruczek was 6-0 in 1976.

Drugs played a role in MVP's death

NEW YORK (AP) — A drug overdose killed former San Diego Padre and NL MVP Ken Caminiti, who admitted using steroids during his playing days and tested positive for cocaine in the days before he died.

Coronary artery disease and an enlarged heart were listed as contributing factors in the death of Caminiti, Grace Brugess, spokeswoman for the New York Ĉity Medical Examiner, said Monday. She said the death had been ruled an accident.

The 15-year major league veteran, who won the NL MVP award in 1996, admitted in a Houston court just days before he died that he had tested positive for cocaine. Caminiti, 41, died Oct. 10 in the Bronx.

Tissue and toxicology tests confirmed Caminiti's cause of death as "acute intoxication due to the combined effects of cocaine and opiates," Brugess said. She said those drugs had weakened his heart.

Opiates are drugs that tend to have a sedative effect on the body - as opposed to cocaine, which is marked by rapid heart race and other accelerated effects.

In 2002, Caminiti told Sports Illustrated that he used steroids during his 1996 MVP season, when he hit .326 with 40 home runs and 130 RBIs. He estimated about half of major league players also were using them at the time.

Early in his career, he admitted to abusing alcohol and painkillers. On Oct. 5, Caminiti admitted to a judge that he violated his probation by testing positive for cocaine in September. It was his fourth failed drug test since he was put on three years' probation for cocaine possession in March 2002.

He was sentenced to 180 days in jail, but was quickly freed because he received credit for time served in jail or for treatment.

"There's nothing in the report that changes the enormous amount of love that Ken had in his heart for his family, his friends and his teammates,' Rick Licht, who was Caminiti's agent and lawyer, said Monday.

He said he could not comment on any past opiate use by Caminiti retired in 2001 after a career that included two stints with the Houston Astros, four years with the Padres and brief tours with the Texas Rangers and Atlanta Braves.

NHL player willing to play even if union is still locked out

Longtime NHL enforcer Rob Ray would play with replacements

OTTAWA (AP) - Rob Ray is willing to get back on the ice if the NHL uses replacements during its labor war with the players

The Senators right winger told the Ottawa Sun that he would need some time to get back into shape because he wouldn't be the first one to agree to break ranks with the union.

'I'd cross the line in a second. Why wouldn't I," the 15-year veteran said. "I know about 10 guys who would be ahead of me and these guys are 10 current NHL players.

'Everybody just wants to get back to playing.

Ray doesn't support a salary cap to settle the current lockout, but he said he'd like more players step up and challenge NHLPA executive director Bob Goodenow to go back to the bargaining table with commissioner Gary Bettman.

The thing people have to realize is the people in the players' association office are going to be there a long time after these players are gone," Ray said. "The players who are in the league now only have a short window of opportunity to make their money, and by

Wagner, Diop hurt already for Cavaliers

CLEVELAND (AP) - The Cleveland Cavaliers placed guard Dajuan Wagner and center DeSagana Diop on the injured list Monday, and they will miss at least the first five games of the regular season.

Wagner, whose brief NBA career has been sidetracked by injuries, has been sidelined the past few weeks with a sprained right ankle. Diop has a sprained finger.

Last week, the Cavaliers decided not to pick up the $3 million contract option for 2005-06 on Wagner, the No. 6 overall pick in the 2002 draft.

Cleveland general manager Jim Paxson wants to remain flexible with the club's payroll and for future free agency, and because of Wagner's past problems with injuries, the Cavaliers did not want to invest anymore in him.

With Diop sidelined, veteran Scott Williams will likely handle the backup center duties behind Zydrunas Ilgauskas.

The Cavaliers open the 2004-5 season at home Wednesday night against Indiana.

Johnson wins third in a row, eyes championship

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Jimmie Johnson is a realist.

When he finished 37th at Talladega, then 32nd at Kansas City, he figured that was it. No chance of winning his first Nextel Cup Championship this year. Might as well start looking ahead to 2005.

Of course, Johnson didn't count on winning three races in a row.

His latest victory came Sunday, overcoming Mark Martin's dominant car at Atlanta Motor Speedway. Johnson is the first Cup racer since 1998 to win three straight in a season.

"It is just amazing," Johnson said. "I thought three weeks ago, with the way that some of the teams have been working ... there was no way that circumstances would work out to allow us to have a shot at it."

Points leader Kurt Busch had a terrible day in Atlanta, going out with a blown engine and a 42nd-place finish. Six others in the championship playoff also had major problems, winding up far behind Johnson. Suddenly, it's a race again for the title with Johnson right in the middle of it. Busch leads with only three events to go, but second-place Johnson has closed within 59 points. He knocked 148 points off his deficit in a single day, also jumping two

Johnson doesn't want to stop now. His eyes are firmly on Victory Lane. He sees no reason why he can't close the year with a that's never happened in NASCAR's mod-

"It is a whole new world for us," Johnson said. "Nobody can play defense. Everyone is going to have to be on offense.

He was on top of the standings most of the summer, building a lead of 232 points with his August victory at Pocono. Then, engine failures in three straight races wiped out his comfortable margin.

The start of the season may still be a couple of weeks away, but an era is ending. After 25 years at Purdue, Keady is saying goodbye and the Big Ten is already feeling

"I, personally, love the guy," Michigan State coach Tom Izzo said Sunday at Big Ten media day, where coaches found themselves talking as much about Keady as their own teams.

"He just does so much for the game and for the conference and for the school," Izzo said. "He's such a professional, he's a guy that cares about the sport and all of us. None of us will match what he's done, we can only aspire to get close."

would return to Purdue for one final season, ball. his 25th with the Boilermakers. He then helped the university pick his successor, Matt Painter, to ensure the transition would be as smooth as possible.

Painter, who led Southern Illinois to a 25-5 record and the NCAA tournament in his first season as head coach, is spending the year as an assistant before taking over.

It's been great, I've really enjoyed it," Keady said. "I like the way things are going. impact on," Davis said. "A lot of players, I'm going to miss him."

Keady is the last of the Big Ten's oldguard, coaches who stayed at one school for Rocking chairs are not welcome. A nice decades and built intense rivalries in the process. There was Jud Heathcote at Michigan State. Lou Henson at Illinois. Tom Davis at Iowa. And of course, Keady's biggest rival of all, Bob Knight at Indiana.

They were all successful, and they helped make the Big Ten a basketball powerhouse. "He's outlasted a lot of the legends in the game," said Illinois coach Bruce Weber, who spent 18 years as Keady's assistant at Purdue. "He's the last of the characters.

A character he is. His combover hairstyle has been the source of jokes for years Indiana native David Letterman has poked fun at it — and his trademark scowl and oncourt tantrums make him seem gruff and

But underneath is a caring coach who Keady announced last spring that he schools his players in both life and basket-

> "He's meant so much to me as a person. He's a like a father figure to all of us," junior guard David Teague said. "I had some great experiences with him on and off the court, and I'll always cherish them.'

> That's what makes Keady's departure so tough, Indiana coach Mike Davis said. There aren't enough coaches like him in the game.

Think of how many lives he's made an

CHICAGO (AP) - Gene Keady has Now if we win at the level I want to, things quite sure, and the community as well. He'll be missed."

That kind of talk makes Keady squirm, because he'd much rather be talking basketball. He is Purdue's leader in career wins with a 505-249 record, and has led the Boilermakers to six Big Ten titles and 17 NCAA appearances.

But Keady knew he was in for a seasonlong farewell tour when he announced this would be his last year. He saw it with Heathcote, who got all kinds of gifts from his rivals, including a clock from Iowa. When Henson announced he was leaving Illinois, Knight gave him an engraved chair. "I expect cars, trips," Keady joked.

Turning serious, he said he doesn't want his departure to be a distraction for his players. He plans to follow Heathcote's advice, and keep his players away from the party as long as possible.

"I want to play games. I don't want to go through that," Keady said. "I'll keep players in the locker room and then we'll move on. I don't want them part of that. I want them focused on the game."

No matter how hard he tries, though, this won't be an ordinary season - for him, or anyone in the Big Ten.

'When a kid in Indiana hears the name Purdue, you automatically think of Gene Keady," said Michigan State guard Chris Hill, an Indianapolis native. "The Big Ten is
