March marks gay rights' 20th anniversary

By Maria Lopez Lantern staff writer

More than 10,000 people from all over Ohio marched through downtown Columbus in the rain for the civil rights of homosexuals Sunday.

The march marked the 20th anniversary of the New York City Stonewall riots which was the beginning of active resistance and gay liberation in the nation.

The 1969 riots began at the Stonewall Inn, a gay bar in New York's Greenwich Village, when homosexuals fought back against police brutality and harassment. Sunday's march ended the Stonewall Gay and Lesbian Rights Awareness Week that started June 19.

Emily Spiegler a 24-year-old junior from Columbus, majoring in industrial design at Ohio State, took part in the

"I FEEL strongly that everyone should have rights," Spiegler said. "Their race, sexual preference or religion shouldn't matter

Gordon Chase, 25, who is a 1986 graduate of Ohio State, said, "I wasn't going to march, but at this point in my life, people's rights are important to me."

me."
The awareness week featured two speakers and other activities included: a film festival, poetry reading and a spiritual circle during the week.

Maxine Feldman, one of the guest beekers, is known as the grand dame of lesbian performers for her 1969 recording of a folk song; the first by a lesbian performer.

Feldman encouraged gays and lesbians to speak out for their rights during her speech Thursday.

"WE HAVE to have our rights, our rights to love who we choose," Feldman

Feldman said the best part about being involved with the movement is that homosexuals across the nation have

"What matters is that we're out and we're proud that we're gay," Feldman

Feldman believes it's important to hold marches and festivals to show homosexuals who have not yet accepted who they are it's alright to come forward.

"This is a march, not a parade, Feldman said. "We are marching for our lives; we are marching for our rights everywhere."

FELDMAN SAID homosexuals have a right to be recognized as couples and human beings.

The other guest speaker, Karen Thompson, an associate professor of physical education at St. Cloud Univer-sity in Minnesota, defended the rights of disabled homosexuals in her speech Saturday at the OSU Law Building.

In her speech, Thompson said her partner, Sharon Kowalski, was hit by a drunken driver in 1983, causing a head injury and paralysis. Thompson wanted to take care of Kowalski, but her parents claimed they could provide better care.

The legal battle for that right began when Thompson fought for guardianship of her partner.

In July 1985, without the proper testing of Kowalski's competency, the courts ruled to give her father full guardianship.

THOMPSON CONDEMNED Minnesota's court system of not functioning properly or fairly.

"A system that would rather view Sharon as a vegetable, than deal with any other issue that this case poses, doesn't work," Thompson said.

Kowalski was moved to a nursing home, where she wasn't properly taken care of, after Thompson informed Kowalski's parents about their relationship.

This tragedy motivated Thompson to better rehabilitation facility, where she speak all across the nation promoting the civil rights of disabled homosexuals.

"I couldn't believe how Sharon's rights could be stripped away one-by-one," she

IN DECEMBER 1988, the courts ordered Kowalski to be moved to a as better taken care of. Four years of court battle for Kowalsi's civil rights may soon be over.

Thompson said the ruling will be changed to allow a legal guardian to take care of Kowalski, so they will be allowed to live together again.

Major changes take time, but we must speak out for our rights, Thompson said. Michael McFadden, executive director of Stonewall Union, the Central Ohio homosexuals' civil rights organization, said he was excited about the week and the march because homosexuals were able to voice their opinions about getting

Toxic waste causes industry controversy

By Margaret Schryver

Industries will have to pay for toxic waste produced in Ohio if a bill requiring them to do so passes, said a legislative aide to Rep. Daniel P. Troy, D-Willowick, Friday.

Dan Leite said Troy will introduce a toxic waste reduction bill in the House later this week. The bill was introduced to the Senate by Lee I. Fisher, D-Shaker Heights, June 20.

Industries are not charged for the waste they produce now. Paying for the waste is an incentive to reduce pollution, Leite said.

The bill would require major producers of toxic waste to pay 4 cents per pound for waste produced. The fee would increase to 10 cents by the third year, if the bill is passed.

The money will be given to the Environmental Protection Agency, providing grants and programs to help industries reduce waste.

INDUSTRIES WITH more than 10 employees that produce large amounts of toxic chemicals would be affected by this

They are now required to file forms with the EPA stating the toxic waste they release. If the bill passes, these forms will be used to determine how much the industries owe per pound, Leite said.

Businesses will be required to pay a fine if they do not pay their yearly fee on the waste they produce.

"This is not an anti-industry bill," Leite said. "That's not what they're trying to do."

People will not lose their jobs because of this bill, he said. Leite said industries will not have to lay off workers because of the fee placed on them.

ED HOPKINS, environmental policy director for Ohio Citizens Action, developed the bill with Fisher and Troy.

Hopkins said Franklin County produced about 20 million pounds of toxic waste in 1986. It is the tenth largest producer of toxic waste in Ohio, he said. Hopkins said about a dozen states have fees to regulate waste. Ohio will be the first state to have a per pound fee on toxic waste, he said.

Peggy Vince, executive director for the Ohio Chemical Council, 17 S. High St., said they have met the requirements under the law.

66 This is not an antiindustry bill. That's not what they're trying to do.,,

Dan Leite

Vince said they do not support taxes placed on amounts of waste production that are legal under state and local legislation.

THE OHIO Chemical Council does support the concept of reducing waste. Vince said most of their industries have programs to reduce waste and they are looking for more ways to reduce pollu-

Steve Sedan, executive director for the Ohio Environmental Council, said the council supports the concept of waste reduction, but does not think industries should have to pay for the pollution they create.

Sedan said the bill will generate enormous controversy because of this provision. He said no company will want to pay for the waste it produces.

Turmoil in China might harm exchange

Administrators fearful of government that Chinese citizens owning passlimits on student funding, visas to U.S. that Chinese citizens owning passlimits on student funding, visas to U.S.

Ohio State University administrators are waiting to see how recent developments in China will affect Chinese students who want to study here.

"We are hopeful that those who are admitted for fall will be able to get passports and visas to come to the university," said John Greisberger, director for OSU's Office of International Students and Scholars

Greisberger said his office was taking a wait-and-see approach to possible changes in Chinese-

American educational cooperation.
The Chinese government has already attempted to restrict de-partures abroad, a U.S. State Department spokesperson said.

applications.

Chinese citizens desiring to travel abroad must first contact their own passport-issuing office in China in order to apply for a visa at the U.S. Embassy or Chinese Embassy officials in Washington D.C. were unavailable for comment on the issue of its foreign studies programs.

There has also been concern that the Chinese government will cut off tuition support for its sponsored students and scholars.

WHILE MOST of OSU's mainland Chinese students are funded through university scholarships and graduate programs, about six percent are funded by the Chinese government.

"The Chinese have said they will do business as usual but it's too soon to say," said Peggy Blumenthal, vice-president for educational services at the Institute of International Education.

'I can see a scenario in which the Chinese government cuts funds for certain individuals and not others, but it's speculation at this point," she said.

The New York Times reported that since 1979, when Chinese students were first allowed to study in the United States, about 73,000 students and scholars have studied in this country.

Despite the current situation. Greisberger said educational opportunities must continue to be provided for Chinese students.

"BY CANCELLING exchange agreements we would further isolate Chinese leaders from outside opinion at a time when we need more dialogue than distance," Greisberger said.

COTA considers cuts in budget and service

By Lisa Lombard

In an attempt to stretch the Central Ohio Transit Authority's budget, the board of trustees will vote on further reductions Wednesday.

COTA's transit development descriptions has proposed a schedule.

partment has proposed a schedule of route adjustments that would begin in September.

The schedule planned for September would extend the time between buses on the High Street routes by a few minutes, said Joan Florence, public relations officer for COTA.

She said the time adjustments would allow COTA to save money in maintenance, gas and wages.

On May 1, COTA reduced services by 14 percent in an effort to stay within budget, Florence said. The reductions included cutting healt comping hours to 9 nm. ting back evening hours to 9 p.m. and weekend hours to 6 p.m.

SHE SAID some routes with few riders were eliminated, but those riders were left with alternative

No routes were eliminated from the campus area. Cortney Baird, 21, an Ohio State June graduate in history, said, "I think it makes sense to extend the time. The buses do not seem to be used that much, so it will save money."

Baird, who uses the buses to get to the stores downtown, said it is a good idea to eliminate a few buses if it keeps COTA in Brian Smith, 20, a junior from Columbus majoring in finance, said he values his time, and any extra waiting would make it inconvenient for him to get to work. Smith, who does not own a car, works downtown and depends on COTA for transportation.

DAVID MCCOY, who also rides the buses downtown to work, said, "The time extensions are a hassle for people who have to get to work, especially if you work downtown." McCoy, 22, is a marketing major from Dayton.

The new time schedules would make the buses more crowded, said David Norstrom, director of transit development at COTA.

"We are doing what everybody around the country is doing — meeting supply with demand," he COTA faces going out of business if the 0.25 percent sales tax does not pass November 7. Two previous taxes have failed, and COTA is operating on money from the 1980-85 tax levy.

Florence said COTA's top priority, if the sales tax passes, would be restoring the late-night services that were eliminated in May.

MORE THAN half of COTA's riders use the system to get to work, and about 45 percent of the riders have no other means of transportation, Florence said.

COTA serves over 30,000 passengers a day. Norstrom said reductions and eliminations affect a large number of people.

DETROIT (AP) — Civil rights gains will be eroded further if a federal judge approves General Motors Corp.'s proposed settlement of a discrimination suit, a spokesman for a group of dis-gruntled black workers said Sun-

The Concerned Black Salaried Employees of General Motors has called on the black community, including co-workers, to boycott GM products until a more equitable settlement is reached, Napoleon Quick Jr. said.

The group also hopes to fill a courtroom with angry workers Monday, when U.S. District Court Judge John Feikens in Detroit is scheduled to begin two days of hearings on GM's settlement proposal.

The employee group spent the weekend rallying support for the boycott it launched Wednesday, Quick said during a telephone interview from his Detroit home.

"We feel that if the settlement is forced dury to the test."

is forced down our throats by Judge Feiken, then that will begin a new era of discrimination in this country;" said Quick, 52, himself a former salaried worker at GM and a plaintiff in the suit.

"We feel our days in court have been just about snuffed out be-cause of the recent Supreme Court decisions" involving racial issues including reverse discrimination, he said.
"Passive resistance is the approach that we must now seriously consider to make fair hiring practices a real part of good business practice in general," Quick said The suit, filed in 1983 by four black salaried GM employees, was certified for class action in 1986 on behalf of 10,000 such workers in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

GM has offered to pay cash settlements to some workers and raise others' salaries. But the automaker does not admit to discriminating against black workers in pay raises and promotions.

If accepted, the settlement would amount to $20 million to $40 million over the next five years for the plaintiffs, their attorneys said.

GM also proposes to monitor the pay and promotion of black workers for five years and to assess that information using computer models for comparable white employees

Men escape injury as plane looses wheel while landing

OXFORD (AP) - Four men escaped injury Sunday after a twin-engine plane lost a wheel as it was landing at Miami University's airport, university police and State Highway Patrol

University police Patrolman Paul Schmidt said the plane touched down on the airport runway about 11 a.m. and then lost its left wing wheel before it came to a stop. The plane skidded along the runway and its fuel line ruptured, Schmidt said. But the aircraft did not catch fire. He identified those aboard the plane as student pilot Michael Buchert, of Ft. Thomas, Ky., 34; James Jackson, of Cincinnati, 51; a flight instructor; and passengers Richard Williams, 41; and Michael Warner, 33, both of Burlington, Ky.

"'Everything appeared normal until landing, when we got a gear shimmy,' "State Trooper Rufus Irvy quoted Buchert as saying following the incident. "Apparently the left gear came off the airplane, caused the plane to lose control, spin around and skid to a stop. That was about it,"

Irvy said the plane was a Cessna-310.

City health officials temporarily banned water skiing and swim-ming Friday at Griggs Reservoir because of a high level of bacteria from human and animal waste in

The ban lasted from 4 p.m. Friday to 12:45 p.m. Saturday at the reservoir, located on the Scioto River at 2929 Riverside

Some OSU students use the reservoir for skiing and boating.

Boating was still permitted Friday. Michael J. Pompili, city assistant health commissioner for environmental health, said a fecal coliform test revealed high levels of bacteria from the intestinal tracts of warm-blooded animals. Pompili said skiers in contact with the contaminated water could develop flu-like symptoms.

The contamination was caused by heavy rain on Wednesday, but Pompili said he did not know the source of the sewage. After the rain, he said tests were done daily to determine the level of bacteria.

THE LEVEL was five times the normal amount, which is 1,000 units of bacteria per 100 milliliters of water. By Saturday, the level went down from 5,000 to 200 units 200 units.

Pompili said the level of bacteria in the reservoir was diluted by water flowing downstream.

He said there will be a new testing program for the water starting next the month. The water will be tested five times a month, so the bacteria level can be stopped before it gets as high as it did this time, Pompili said.

Sgt. F. Garber, patrolman with the marine and reservoir patrol, said the entire reservoir should have been closed, not just for skiing, but also for boating.

Pompili said he will not bring his boat to the reservoir.

TWO STUDENTS that ski in the reservoir said the water is always dirty, but they never thought there was sewage in it.

Kirstyn Bay, 22, from Vandalia majoring in computer and infor-mation science, said as long as others were in the water, she would water ski.

GARBER SAID although city officials removed the ban on skiing and swimming in Griggs reservoir, there were only a few skiers Saturday.

Pro-choice supporters await ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) - Awaiting the Supreme Court's decision in a Missouri abortion dispute is no lonely vigil.

Never, it seems, have so many waited so anxiously, or made such a public display of their anxiety.

The potential stakes are enormous. The court is being asked to use the Missouri case, called Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, to reverse or substantially limit its 1973 decision that women have a constitutional right

Such a ruling could allow states to outlaw abortion, or otherwise curtail legal abortions, which number 1.5 million each year.

With time running out on the court's 1988-89 term, partisan lawyers gather in the hushed courtroom each day to catch the first word. Interest groups make known their availability to supply instant reactions.

Messengers for the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Bar Association, the National Organization for Women, the American Life Lobby, congressional subcommittees and even one representing columnist George

Will share a peaceful coexistence.

Each day, the word passes quickly: "No Webster today."

Meanwhile, rumors rise, then crash.

The most senior reporter covering the court, Lyle Denniston of The Baltimore Sun, says the anticipation is rivaled only by that experienced before the 1976 decisions reinstating capital punishment and the 1978 ruling in which the court first condoned the concept of affirmative action.

"Here you have the court con-templating taking away a constitutemplating taking away a constitu-tional right it created itself. The fact that is a real prospect now has captured everyone's atten-tion," he said.

Only two "decision days" re-main on the court's schedule —

Monday and Thursday.

RIGHTS:

Discrimination needs to end

The spirit of the fight for homosexual and lesbian rights began twenty years ago in a Greenwich Village gay bar.

Obviously, it has not died.

In Columbus, the Stonewall Gay and Lesbian Pride Parade celebrated the start of the modern gay rights movement. Yesterday, more than 10,000 people joined forces to fight for their rights.

According to The New York Times, many homosexual and lesbian leaders have noticed some changing attitudes regarding discrimination. They are concerned, however, a conservative backlash could just as easily strip the few rights won and deny the approval of more.

In 1988, Columbus Mayor Dana Rinehart openly opposed a bill to include sexual orientation as a protected category in the Ethnic Intimidation Ordinance.

After several meetings with Stonewall Union members, however, Rinehart issued a statement banning discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation in city employment. Using this incident as an example, it's clear the homosexual and lesbian community will continue to fight battles for rights that heterosexual Americans take for granted. Attitudes that deny homosexuals the same lifestyles and freedoms as heterosexuals will only continue to foster re-occuring prejuices. The only way to dispel myths concerning homosexuality is through education.

Obviously, discrimination will not end overnight - the parade proves it. But in 20 more years, where will the homosexual and lesbian community be?

TOXIC:

Reduce waste

The series of mistakes and accidents that caused three oil spills within 24 hours Saturday, three months after the worst oil spill in U.S. history in Valdez, Alaska, have only managed to downplay the actual reason of these accidents.

The United States continues to consume huge quantities of fossil fuels and other natural resources in the name of progress and personal comforts.

Keeping the environment clean and healthy is a double edged sword that will require the cooperation of every American, young and old, now and in the future. The most apparent answer to this problem is Americans will have to pay the price at the gas pump and at the market place to keep the environment clean.

Is it worth it? The only answer is a clear yes.

A bill proposed in the Ohio House would require businesses to pay a per-pound tax on the amount of toxic waste they produce. The idea of this bill is to encourage manufacturers to reduce the amount of waste they produce.

In one form or another, the added cost to the manufacturers will be passed along to the consumer. This will help Americans understand their own personal comforts come at a price.

At the same time, revenues from the tax should be used to help clean up toxic waste dumps. The toxic waste bill will help reduce the amount of waste being produced. At the same time, Americans need to be willing to pay the price for progress.

Gun ban should save lives

The Ohio Gun Collectors Association is moving its conventions to a Cleve-land suburb because the Columbus City Council had the audacity to ban sales of certain semiautomatic weapons and to require gun buyers to wait seven days for their purchases.

The Ohio General Assembly is considering a bill to outlaw purchases of military assault weapons.

Cincinnati Mayor Charles Luken

accused the National Rifle Association (NRA) of "picking off" enough city council members to shoot down a similar bill there.

The NRA and other firearms enthusiasts who comprise the powerful gun lobby in this country have also spoken out in support of, among other things, Teflon-coated bullets.

They have used their First Amendment right to free speech to defend their Second Amendment right to bear arms — including arms like the Teflon projectiles that are designed to penetrate bullet-proof vests, such as those worn by policemen to protect themselves from armed criminals.

The Second Amendment to the U.S. Constitution asserts that, "A wellregulated militia, being necessary to the security of the free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed."

Clearly, the right to bear arms was placed in the context of a "well-regulated militia" and national sec-urity. What is not so clear is whether that right extends to all citizens in all circumstances, or whether the sorts of arms guaranteed in the Bill of Rights includes unsafe and extremely powerweapons.

Small-businessmen, of course, are not the only gun dealers. Woolworth's, the nationwide five-and-dime chain, before it came to its senses, briefly had Uzi submachine guns on its shelves last year in the Miami area.

Gun shops — and pawn shops that sell guns of dubious prior ownership

— seem to be acceptable businesses to most Americans, and can operate freely while some citizens picket convenience stores for selling Playboy magazine from a rack behind the checkout counter.

It's a matter of community standards, the protesters say. America is a curious community indeed in which magazines that portray a few pages of nudity are deemed more harmful to the populace than devices that are designed to kill.

The gun lobby reasons tenuously

But limits on freedoms granted by the Bill of Rights do not lead nexorably to forfeiture of those free-

Even the most basic of those rights - freedom of speech and of the press
- has, and ought to have, certain limitations. Yet the gun lobby argues that such aberrations of the Second Amendment as semiautomatic military assault rifles, Teflon "cop killing" bullets and unsafe Saturday-night specials ought to be guaranteed by the Constitution.

Abuses of the First Amendment, however, do not leave people dead.

Wait a minute, say the gun lobbyists: "Guns do not kill people; people kill people." Yes, people do kill people, and guns make it much easier and quicker for them to do so. A lunatic, or even an otherwise sane man who flies into a rage, can always kill someone with a knife, a baseball bat, an ax or even his bare hands. But guns allow for more impulsive and more impersonal killing – even for random killing.

The other methods require more thought and planning. They require the assailant to be physically much closer to his victim. They are much slower. Time is important to the potential Ohio State murder victim. That's just one reason behind proposals that would require people to wait a week or two to complete the process of buying a gun. (Another reason is for authorities to make sure the prospective gun buyer is not insane and has not been convicted of a violent crime.)

Libel laws are a way to require a writer to think things over before he does serious harm to a person's reputation. Likewise, gun registration and waiting periods require a prospective gun owner to think things over before bringing into the house a lethal weapon that could discharge in the face of a curious child, or be a little bit too handy during a domestic squabble. and waiting periods require a prospec-

There is not necessarily anything inherently wrong with owning guns, or with the right to bear arms. It is fine to want to protect oneself, one's family and one's country, or to hunt game for food. A right to bear arms is clearly in the Bill of Rights, even if the conditions for bearing arms are less clearly spelled out.

But like any right that is abused to the detriment of society, the right to bear arms needs to be controlled and regulated — infringed upon, for those who choose to use that term.

That's why the right to own an arms of the controlled and regulated — infringed upon, for those who choose to use that term.

All these qualifications on our rights are trade offs, the costs of living in a civilized society — which is what the Official language should be English

One of the most frustrating experiences for anyone is to be in a strange country for the first time and not be able to communicate with anyone or even understand a thing of what is going on.
I know what it feels like because I have been there. I had to find my way around Kennedy Airport in 1981 when I arrived in the United States for the first time, alone and speaking only Portuguese. I arrived safely in Chicago after successfully working my way through immigration. customs and, more important yet, finding the right boarding gate.

This experience came to my mind when I read that Sen. Cooper H. Snyder (R-Hillsboro) has introduced a bill making English the official language in Ohio, and the reaction it is receiving from some minority representatives.

I think it is a good idea to make English the official language in Ohio, and in the United States for that matter (an exception for Puerto Rico makes sense to me).

As most people know, there is no official language in the United States. English has been the "de facto" official language, but there is no law that makes it so. There are 17 states which have declared English to be their official language. Ohio is next in line and there are 25 other states considering similar legislation.

While that happens, we often hear cries of foul play from some minority groups claiming such measures are meant to deprive them of their right to maintain their native languages. Robert Recepts former president of the Becerra, former president of the co-ed Hispanic fraternity at The Ohio State University, for example, was quoted in Thursday's Lantern as saying that the bill being considered is a "subtle way of looking at bilingualism as being unacceptable."

I think the problem with Becerra's reasoning is that it fails to make the distinction between a person being bilingual (which I support and think should be encouraged) and a country being bilingual.

The closest example we have of a bilingual country is Canada. If we recall the problems with Quebec, we may want to think twice before talking about the advantages of bilingualism for a

I know many people in Europe who are bilingual. In fact, Europeans are encouraged to learn other languages in addition to their native language. To illustrate it, the European Community recently approved a plan to have every citizen learn two other languages of the community besides his or her native language. Yet every member country of the EC has its official language, and if I know anything about Europe, none of the countries will give up its own national language.

The way I see it, for a country to have an official language (whatever that language may be), should not be interpreted as means to exclude anyone, but rather as means to make everyone feel part of the group. I think that leaving things as they are today in the United States — in terms of not having an official language - does more harm to non-English speaking minorities than any law imposing English as the official language could possibly

Otherwise, let us look at what happens in places like Chicago or Los Angeles, for example: Many people who do not speak English (whether they speak Spanish, Whether they speak Spanish, Polish or Chinese) either close themselves in ghettos or are regularly relegated to lower paying jobs. The reality is that the lack of knowledge of English in the United States is often used, willingly or not, to keep people in some kind of subordinate position. Would it not be better if those people were given the opportunity to learn English?

If anyone willingly decides not to learn English, he or she has the right to do so, but he or she has to be ready for the consequences. What right does anyone have to demand from society to have his or her language recog-nized and used as the language of the hosting country? If that were the case, and in order to be fair to every citizen, we would have to have quite a few official languages considering the variety of linguistic background of the people of the United States.

I am glad I was forced to learn English when I arrived in this country and I am happy to be bilingual. Many times I have told my friends from other countries my friends from other countries to encourage their children to learn both English and their native language. If I were to have children, I would try to make it possible for them to learn Portuguese in addition to English.

I think that instead of using our energies fighting against making English the official language in Ohio, we would do ourselves a favor if we were to use those energies to make it available to, and encourage, our available to, and encourage, our children to learn other languages besides English. The learning of foreign languages in school should be required for all students, the same way it is required in Western European countries.

A common language bonds peo ple together and makes them feel part of a specific society. Requiring newcomers in this country, or people who were born here but do not know English, to learn it is not a question of trying to exclude them from America's mainstream or discriminate against them, nor is it to try to make them deny their own background. It is rather a question of making them be and feel part of the society of which they are members.

Diversity is enriching and I strongly support any policies which provide for the safeguard of individual national traditions, customs or languages. But diversity becomes harmful when it prevents different elements in a society from interrelating.

Making English the official language in the United States, and making it possible for every resident to learn it, will not hurt those whose native language is not English. On the contrary, it will help them. My own experience has shown me that is the case. Or maybe I should have asked The Ohio State University to offer the journalism courses I have taken in Portuguese. Thinking of it again, maybe not!

apparently do not think so.

The post-Khomeini situation is still cloudy. Two viewpoints are still vying for control. One is the suspicious and fundamentalist stance represented by the ayatollah. Its proponents are as wary as Khomeini was of the United States and the Soviet Union. The second is less uptight, but not any less inclined to fall under U.S. or Soviet influence.

The era of the late Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, who sought with billions of dollars of U.S. weapons to be the kingpin of the Persian Gulf, is past. Traveling Bush not home much there if you visit the nation's capital this summer.

From Memorial Day to Labor Day, Bush will have spent more days away from the White House there is it. than in it.

Between lengthy trips to Europe, Bush has been bounding about the country, giving a string of often disjointed speeches and conducting the nation's business on the road.

In the three weeks since he returned from a four-nation, weeklong trip to Europe centered on a NATO meeting in Brussels, Bush:

- Made a 4,000-mile, 30-hour round trip to Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming's Grand Tetons, and Lincoln, Neb., nominally to tout his environmental programs. However, Bush's late-day visit to Yellowstone consisted of a tour of an area damaged by last year's forest fires, and was unrelated to the chief topic of the day - the White House's new clean-air le-

Bush has been doing some business as he moves around the country.

He vetoed the minium wage bill aboard Air Force One as he traveled from Montana to Nebraska last week; in Georgia, he signed a routine message formally transmitting his crime package to

"But when it comes to fighting crime, you deserve more than just business as usual.

However, even in talking about crime — a favored subject — Bush seemed to be sending a mixed message.

After a sough speech in which Bush declared, "let's put the handcuffs on the criminals, not on the criminal justice system," he was asked by a Border Patrol rookie for "some words of wisdom when we enter the field." Bush: "You'll find that you and

Program tracks medical waste

WASHINGTON (AP) - A pilot federal program that tracks medical waste from the hospital to the dump should make life more pleasant for beachgoers and more expensive for illegal dumpers, New Jersey's senators say.

"Who wants to tiptoe through the needles?" asked Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., as he and Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., dis-cussed implementation of the 1988 Medical Waste Tracking Act, which became effective Thursday.

The federal law authorizes a two-year pilot program that subjects producers, transporters and disposers of medical waste in New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Louisiana, Rhode Island, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico to federal and state inspections and legal action.

Caped Crusader soars on the big screen

Batman finally has graduated to the big screen and has done so admirably.

Warner Bros. went all out to insure success with this movie, hooking big names such as Michael Keaton as Batman, Jack Nicholson as The Joker and Kim Basinger as Batman's love interest. There are even songs written and performed by Prince.

The movie, of course, takes place in Gotham City, a mythical metropolis patterned after New York City. Crime in the city is rampant. Gotham is in the clutches of a gangster leader (Jack Relevae), and politicing on help. Palance) and politicians are help-less against the crime. Even the police are no help because the gangsters control them.

Micheal Keaton, shown with the Batmobile, stars as Batman in the film of the same name. The movie,

The subplot focuses on news-aper reporter Alexander Knox (Robet Wuhl) and photographer Vicki Vale (Kim Basinger), who are trying to get the scoop on the Batman story. Vale becomes romantically involved with millionaire Bruce Wayne, who at appropriate moments, transforms himself into Batman Eventually, The Joker decides he wants Vicki Vale for himself and kidnaps her. Of course, Batman pursues in the famous Bat-mobile.

Director Tim Burton has done a fine job of playing this movie just right. He knows when to make the movie an adventure, a romance and most importantly, when not to take it too seriously. The screenplay, by Sam Hamm and Warren Skaaren, is based on the DC Comics' Batman characters created by Bob Kane. It is filled with fast punchlines and witty remarks.

Keaton shines as Batman and does a good job with Bruce Wayne. He has some fine scenes during which we learn the genesis of Batman.

Basinger does what she can with her character but, as in many adventure films, the female lead is not a very developed part. But she does have a career and a there will be a sequel

But in the end, this movie belongs to Nicholson. No one else could have done The Joker justice. Gleefully psychotic, he spouts lines such as, "Wait'll they get a load of me!" His black humor comes out again after he electro-cutes an enemy gangster and sings, "There'll be a hot time in the old town tonight!" The audience ends up rooting for The Joker.

Danny Elfman's powerful soundtrack adds to the drama and adventure of the movie. The music builds at appropriate mo-

Warner Bros. is hoping for a blockbuster. Theaters are passing out pamphlets hawking Batman shirts, coffee mugs and other memorabilia.

Aside from all the hype, Batman remains a fun summer adventure movie. I'd lay money

Pigg, Smyers win Columbus Triathlon

OSU students, grads also compete in race

By Kathy Monard Lantern sports writer

Competition and excitement mounted on the streets of Columbus Sunday in the Bud Lite/Q-FM 96 Columbus Triathlon as professional and recreational triathletes, including OSU students, raced to beat the clock and the heat.

Mike Pigg, from California, was the top male finisher and overall winner of the 1.5K swim, 40K bike and 10K run in one hour, 48 minutes. He also won in 1987, making him the first two-time Smyers, who finished fifth in 1988, did not expect to win the race this year, which was her first big win of the season.

"I wanted to be one of the top two finishers to make the team," Smyers said.

But Smyers said she knew Jan Ripple, the race favorite, would be competitve. Ripple finished second for females in 2:07.

When she got to the run event, she ran hard for the first three miles, caught up to a group of runners at the three and onefourth mile mark, passed Ripple at the four mile mark and held on to win.

"Now I can start preparing for the World Championships," Smyers said.

SHE SAID she will continue racing throughout the summer and take the weekend off before the championships to rest.

"I will try to do the best I can," she said.

Smyers does not have a goal set for the championships yet because she said it depends on the competitors in the race.

"I don't have any control over them" she said.

Control over competitors is something Mark Stephan, 23, of Columbus, wished he had in the

"THERE WERE some ringers here." Stephan said.

Many tough triathletes came from across the country, which made Stephan's hope of qualifying for the championships a challenge he has yet to accomplish.

Despite a sixth place finish in the 21-24 age division, Stephan was disappointed in not beating his time of 1:59, set in a Memphis triathlon at the end of

The swim portion was Stephan's best event in the Columbus race, but he suspected that the course was marked longer than the advertised 1.5K.

The transition from the water to the bike was difficult for him, however. Stephan said he did not adjust to the bike until the second half of the event.

Vontsolos became dehydrated because he did not drink enough fluids during the race.

Instead of carrying water on his bike as he normally does, Vontsolos tried a body fluid replacement drink, similar to Gatorade. He found out during the bike event, however, that he didn't like it.

This did not overshadow his performance in the bike event, which he was very pleased with.

"I hammered it," he said. "I really pushed."

VONTSOLOS BIKED 25 mph, finishing the 40K route in under one hour.

He continued to race well through the first two miles of the run, at a pace of five minutes, five seconds per mile, but began to slow down with an eightminute third mile off my run, I will do it (2:04) before my season is up," he said. Amy Wheeler, 18, an exercise physiology major from Grove City, did more than she expected.

She was the second female to finish in the 17-19 age division with a time of 2:21.

"I DIDN'T expect to place in the top two," she said, especially after just having tonsillitis and a temperature of 102 the week before the race.

Following seasons with the OSU women's swim team, cross country team and outdoor track team, Wheeler continued training in the summer.

As a second-place finisher in her age division, she has also qualified to compete in the World Championships. Despite this, Wheeler said she doesn't think she will go.

"I would love to go," she said. "It would be a great experience, but it would be expensive.'

INSTEAD, SHE wants to focus on the rest of her triathlon season in the Columbus area.

Athena Yiamouviannis, 22, former USG president, also surprised herself with a fifth-place finish in the 21-24 age division.

"My goal was to be in the top five places," Yiamouyiannis said. "I didn't know fourth place was so close to me, either.

Yiamouyiannis finished in 2:29, ten minutes faster than her performance two years ago. She said with more preparation she could do even better.

"I have to start training more if I want to get serious," she said.

YIAMOUYIANNIS SAID she needs to bike more in the future.

After a fast swim, Yiamouyiannis ran into complications during the race. The water bottle cage on her bike broke, which prohibited her from drinking water gradually throughout the course.

Instead, she drank a lot of water at the two water stations along the run course to prevent dehydration. This caused her to get stomach cramps for the first two miles and she had to walk part of the course.

"During the last two miles, I picked up my pace and felt good,' she said.

OTHER OSU finishers included: •Gail Stennett, 22, a spring quarter mathematics graduate from Tallmadge. She crossed the finish line as the third female in the 21-24 age group with a time •Scott Spees, 19, an engineering major from Dayton. He was in second place following the swim event, but fell back during the last two events and didn't place in the top five for his age division.

Former split end, Everett Ross, will be honored this week in California for being the final pick in this year's NFL draft. He will visit Disneyland, in addition to other attractions, courtesy of the "Irrelevant Week Committee" which traditionally provides each year's last draft choice with a week of festivites. Ross, OSU's leading receiver in 1987, was drafted by the Minnesota Vikings.

Freshman, Dave Bals, has been declared medically unfit to play football next season by team trainer, Billy Hill. Bals, a reserve inside linebacker for the Buckeyes, is suffering from a narrowing of the spine, Hill said.

Former back-up quarterback, John Wagoner, recently underwent shoulder sugery. Wagoner was moved to wide receiver in the spring because of a recurring shoulder pain. It is uncertain whether he

Cincinnati manager wins 14-day restraining order

By Joe Kay AP sports writer

CINCINNATI - Pete Rose won in court Sunday when a state judge, saying A. Bartlett Giamatti had "prejudged" the case, blocked the baseball commissioner from holding a hearing on evidence the Cincinnati Reds manager bet on Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert Nadel's un-precedented ruling prevented Gia-matti from holding a hearing Monday in New York on allega-tions that could get Rose banned for life from baseball.

Nadel granted a temporary restraining order and said Rose can't be disciplined by major league baseball or fired by the Reds in the next two weeks. On July 6, the judge said he will consider a motion for a preliminary injunction, which would further delay baseball's case while Nadel decides who should determine Rose's fate.

Nadel ruled Giamatti "has prejudged Peter Edward Rose" as guilty, and that a hearing Monday before the commissioner would be "futile and illusory and the outcome a foregone conclusion."

NADEL, 51, was a low-profile judge who had been thrust into the national spotlight by the case. He was appointed to office and is up for election next year.

"I regret the judge's decision. I have absolutely no prejudgment or prejudice regarding Pete Rose," Giamatti said in a statement. "We will contest this matter tooth and Rose, on an interview with Reds' radio station WLW before Sunday's game against Los Angeles, said he was "very happy" with the ruling.

"I think they proved (Giamatti) already made up his mind," Rose said. "It just wasn't going to be a fair hearing, in my eves. It was obvious he believed my accusers." "I think we got justice," Rose's attorney, Reuven Katz, said.

LOUIS HOYNES, who presented baseball's case against Rose, disagreed vehemently.

"The judge has made a mistake, a big one," Hoynes said. "It's an erroneous ruling. It's a problem, a serious mistake."

Hoynes did not immediately say whether baseball would appeal the

The ruling marked a rare court victory for someone challenging the broad powers of the baseball commissioner. Federal courts have upheld the commissioner's sweeping powers in deciding previous challenges by team owners Charles O. Finley and Ted Turner.

Turner had sued in 1977 to overturn a one-year suspension for tampering with Gary Matthews. Finley went to court after former commissioner Bowie Kuhn blocked the sale of three Oakland

NADEL ADMITTED his ruling Sunday was the first in "an unprecedented legal battle."

Nadel's ruling was the first in a lawsuit filed last Monday by Rose against Giamatti. Rose wants a state court in his hometown, not Giamatti, to decide whether he bet on Reds' games. He also had asked for the temporary restraining order to block Giamatti's hearing, the final step before the commissioner would take any Baseball investigator John Dowd testified during two days of hearings before Nadel there is substantial evidence that Rose bet on Reds' games and other baseball games in 1985, 1986 and 1987. He said the evidence includes telephone records and betting sheets that bear Rose's handwrit-

Baseball's rules the real problem, not Rose

If Pete Rose did not bet against the Cincinnati Reds, he should not be suspended for one day.

Baseball rules state that betting on a team other than one's own carries a one-year suspension and betting on a game involving one's team carries a lifetime suspension. If Pete Rose did bet on Reds games, he is stupid for breaking rules he already knew about. At the same time, baseball's rules are

What is the crime of betting on a baseball game? The inferred crime is being in on a fix. But if Rose bet on the Reds, he has even more motive to manage the Reds to victory than he does otherwise.

IN A sense, every baseball player, coach and manager is betting on their own team in each game they play. They are awarded thousands of dollars for finishing anywhere from third in their division to winning the World

Baseball's paranoia of its figures being involved in gambling started in 1919 when eight Chicago White Sox were barred from baseball for life for throwing the World Series to, ironically, the Cincinnati Reds.

In an attempt to take a firm stand on the situation, the owners hired Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis as commissioner and gave him unlimited powers that have been upheld in courts many times.

Although the White Sox players were found not guilty in a court of law, Landis used the powers of the baseball commissioner's office to bar the players.

More recently, former Commissioner Bowie Kuhn temporarily banned Willie Mays and Mickey Mantle from baseball for working as front men for casinos. Kuhn said at the time baseball needed to avoid the appearance of impro-

WHAT KUHN meant when he said the appearance of impropriety should be avoided, was that even though nothing wrong had been done by Mays and Mantle, base-ball was not willing to take the chance that they would become involved with organized crime figures normally associated with that claims to be America's pas-time, it would be nice to see American ideals of justice take

The lack of respect given to due process by baseball means that Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti has free reign to do with Rose what he pleases. Rose's case will not be heard in a court of law. It will be heard in the unfriendly confines of Giamatti's office.

The two-week restraining order handed down Sunday by Judge Norbert Nadel in Cincinnati has no precedent and is an incorrect ruling according to most legal experts who have spoken on the subject. The one thing Nadel had on his mind is obvious - reelection.

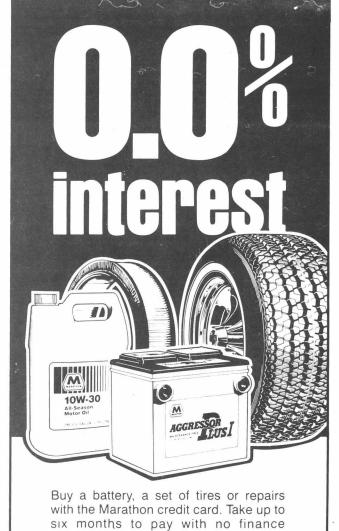

BUT ASSUMING Rose did bet BUI ASSUMING Rose did bet on Reds' games, Giamatti won't suspend him for life. He won't suspend him for life because Rose was one of the best players of all time. This is precisely the wrong reason not to suspend him. If Giamatti really believes in base-hall's own set of laws does he ball's own set of laws, does he think some people should be above them because they can hit

The right reason not to suspend Rose is that there is nothing wrong with him betting on baseball games, as long as he does not bet against the Reds. It's Rose's money and he should be able to spend it as he pleases. At least if Rose bets on baseball he will only lose about 10 cents on the dollar compared to about 50 cents on the dollar he would lose on our highly moral, socially acceptable, statewide fraud — The Ohio State

Help came to Gilbert in the form of an OSU program aimed at helping minority single parents obtain their diploma.

The program, called ACCESS, is designed to recruit and maintain minority single parents at Ohio State, said Cynthia Applin, the program's original coordinator.

Robb said the ACCESS program links the individual with valuable resources and information at Ohio State, such as child care, financial aid, and housing.

"We're just trying to take out some of the hustle and bustle and running from here to there for our mothers because it's hard as it is to just be a student," Robb said. "To be a student and a mother is a real problem.

"This program lets you know someone's there to help you," Gilbert said. "Right now there's not enough people taking advantage of it.

Robb said the number of students in the program will increase to 16 by fall quarter, with at least 50 inquiries wanting to hear more about the program.

BARBARA NEWMAN, associate provost for the office of academic affairs, heaed a planning commmittee of 14 which initiated the program last summer. The committee applied for an OSU affirmative action grant and was awarded $15,440 to fund the said.

Gilbert is the only member of ACCESS taking advantage of the program's connection with Buckeye Village to help members find housing.

The program has a similar relationship with the OSU Child Care Center to help with child care costs. The program offers two free nights of babysitting at the center.

One of the original members of ACCESS, Terri Long, takes advantage of this babysitting service. Long, 29, a sophomore majoring in education, has three children ages 11, 9, and 2. She said she uses the time the children are with the babysitter to study.

Robb said there are currently no statistics determining how many single parents are at OSU.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) - The nation's only law requiring AIDS testing for a marriage license just needs Gov. James R. Thompson's signature to be off the books.

The legislature sent a repeal measure to Thompson's desk on a 33-23 Senate vote late Friday.

A spokesman for Thompson said the governor had not decided whether to sign the bill, which

Sen. William Marovitz, the bill's sponsor, said Louisiana, the only other state to have adopted such a law, already had repealed its statute. He also noted that such groups as the Illinois State Medical Society were opposed to the testing requirement.
"This is a low-risk population,"

Marovitz said, referring to couples applying for marriage licenses.

The state Department of Public Health said that through mid-June, 44 people had tested positive for exposure to the acquired immune deficiency syndrome-causing virus out of an estimated 221,000 marriage-license applicants who have been tested since the requirement started in January 1988.

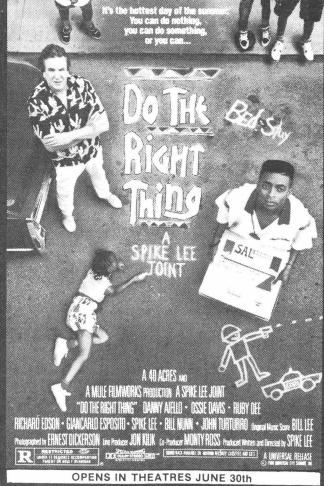

"This is not good public health policy," Marovitz said.

Computers to aid Arabic study

But thanks to a program being developed by the Department of Judaic and Near Eastern Languages and Literature, students used. will soon be able to use computers to help them decipher written Arabic. Mahdi Alosh, a lecturer in Arabic and a co-director of the project, said students will be able to practice Arabic script identification, listening comprehension, and language applications on MacIntosh computers through a series of drills and exercises.

Ibtissam Alama, a graduate research associate from Syria, expects the program to be ready for Arabic 101 students in the fall, and hopes to expand the program for upper level Arabic courses as well. Alosh said similar programs have been written for French, Spanish and German languages, but these programs are designed for advanced level students who have a knowledge of the language. "Our program is different because we are starting from scratch with students who do not know anything about the language," Alosh said.

Arabic is not necessarily a difficult language, Alosh said, but because it uses a different al-

"The program will use menus to help students quickly locate material they are interested in reviewing and will let them practice a drill over and over without having to rewind a tape or flip, through the pages of a work-book," Alama said.

Students writing drills and exercises on the computer will have the advantage of receiving immiediate feedback, instead of waiting for a teacher to return homework to find out if questions are phabet and many different speech answered correctly. Students will

> The program will help students improve their listening, comprehension and speaking skills, Alama said.

> ALAMA BEGAN research for the project spring quarter and spent several weeks learning how to write the program in HyperTalk, a computer language used to program MacIntosh computers.

> Frederic Cadora, chairman of the language department, said the project was made possible by a grant from the Center for Teaching Excellence, which also awarded Cadors and Alosh codirectorships of the project.

The grant will provide funds for the development of the program and will allow the department to purchase three MacIntosh computers for the Arabic Individualized Instructional Center in Cunz Hall.

When the project is finished, students will have access to the computer program, cassette tapes and other learning materials that are currently in use.

60 inmates privileged, out driving

(AP) - Every week, Pickaw ay Correctional Institution inmate Jody Whitehead picks up keys to a truck, bus, van or car, climbs in and takes off.

English professor wins arts grant

By Stephanie Schleappi

OSU English professor David Citino wants to teach.

Citino, a poet and Creative Writing Center director, has been trying to find time to stay in the classroom since winning a $50,000 grant from the Ohio Arts Council last January.

Out of more than 60 who applied for the two-year, Major Fellowship grant, Citino was one of six awarded this year by the Ohio Arts Council.

The fellowships are awarded to Ohio artists who have a substantial record of achievement in their field, said Susan Dickson, coordinator at the council.

Although the arts council has annually given out an award to writers, Citino is the first poet to win a Major Fellowship, Dickson and Major Fellowship, Dick said.

Bill Enders, an assistant at the Creative Writing Center, said there is an image of people who

"THE IMAGE is that when you get a major grant you take off to your own corner of the world," he said.

"If anything," Enders said, "I think (Citino) has been more available to students since getting the grant. It has helped release him from the more mundane teaching duties (and) given him more time to creatively interact

I don't want the dean to know how much I love my job. I love to teach, and after a month or two out of the classroom, I find myself getting restless to get back."
Although Citino said he will be taking a break from teaching this fall to travel to Italy and Ireland, he is teaching a poetry writing class this quarter, and will be teaching again when he returns teaching again when he returns from Europe.

"I almost did not apply for the grant," Citino said. "I was so surprised to get it. This is the kind of award one gets as a capstone, at the end of one's career, which I am not."

one of his favorite sayings, by hockey star Wayne Gretzky, "One hundred percent of the shots you don't make don't go in.' So I applied for the grant.

Citino has written several books, including "The Appassionata Doctrines" and "The Gift of Fire." His forthcoming book, The "House of Memory," includes proposed by written with the company of the compan poems he wrote while traveling in Italy a few years ago on a National Education Association Fellowship.

He has also received a variety of other poetry awards and the Alumni Distinguished Teaching

No more waiting for aid

By Allison Fanning Lantern staff writer

Because of afternoon-long waits for students, there will be no more walk-in hours at the OSU financial aid counseling office beginning July 3.

Merilyn Rose, a counselor at student financial aid, said students have had to wait up to several hours to see a counselor.

"Students who came later in the afternoon couldn't even sign in because we had enough back load that we weren't going to get done by 5 p.m.," Rose said.

Walk-in hours weren't serving the students, said Brenda Sterns, director of financial aid counsel-

"Some students couldn't make the appointed hours and walk-in hours because they had classes," Sterns said.

Students will now have to make appointments to see a financial aid counselor, she said.

"This way the students can see a counselor at their convenience," she said.

Rose said the decision was made by the financial aid department because walk-in hours were creating a lot of frustration for students as well as the counselors.

Originally, there were walk-in hours all day, every day, but because there is a limited staffing, counselors have other administrative duties in addition to seeing students, Rose said.

"We've been seeing probably close to 200 students a week, including walk-ins and appointments," Rose said.
