Senate hears testimony on education

Presidents, students ask for support

By Jeffrey Brodeur
Lantern staff writer

The Senate Finance subcommittee heard testimony from state university presidents and students Monday in an attempt to work out the details of the higher education portion of Ohio's budget bill.

The subcommittee, chaired by Sen. Eugene Watts, R-Columbus, was told by witnesses that financing higher education in Ohio is an investment in the future.

Paul Pearson, president of Miami University and chairman of the Inter-University Council of Ohio, told the committee he urged the support of Ohio's system of public education.

"Ohio's public four-year universities are the heart of the state's secondary education," he said.

Wright State University, said Ohio ranked 41st in the United States in state appropriations to public universities per student.

"Clearly, the legislature should maintain and improve the subsidy of Ohio's public higher education," he said.

Mulhollan presented a booklet, prepared by two Wright State professors, which outlined the importance of Ohio's public universities.

"What's good for higher education is good for the State of Ohio," Mulhollan said.

President Edward H. Jennings told the committee that among all the contributions made to society by Ohio's universities, the greatest achievement of the state's schools is the diploma each graduate receives.

"There is no doubt (graduates) will make substantial contributions to the community," he said.

However, Jennings said universities can not provide great instructional programs without funding for basic needs.

Paul Steger, University of Cincinnati president, said Ohio universities have momentum for the future, and he urged the committee to keep the momentum going.

"Please provide us with the $160 million we need to move from excellence to greatness," he said.

Watts said he was impressed by the testimony of the presidents and was pleased with the reaction they gave him.

"All the presidents reaffirmed accessibility as the No. 1 priority, where it should be," he said.

Watts said he had been concerned about the outcome of the meeting, which was the culmination of a great amount of talk.

"The Senate has made education their top priority," he said.

Watts also said Jennings is honestly trying to keep the cost of tuition at Ohio State low.

"Tuition increases at Ohio State have been lower than many other schools," Watts said.

Watts said he was happy to see the four-year schools supporting President Edward H. Jennings cited examples Monday of excellence in higher education in his testimony before the state Senate Finance subcommittee in an effort to obtain increased funding for Ohio's state colleges and universities.

The Ohio Senate is holding a series of hearings on educational funding before the Senate and the House of Representatives vote in July.

Jennings said the responsibilities of Ohio's public universities do not end with educational instruction, but include research and related services that will enrich the lives of Ohioans and improve the quality of life in the state.

He said the investment by the state in higher education is a necessary investment in the successful future of Ohio.

"We have accepted the responsibility of preparing our citizens for today's workplace and for tomorrow's challenges," Jennings said. "We are providing opportunities for Ohioans to improve not only their own futures, but the shared futures of all of us."

Jennings gave Ohio State's Young Scholars Program and the University of Akron's STEP program as examples of higher education's commitment to the future of Ohio.

"(These are) programs aimed at populations under-represented in higher education, and are innovative attempts to enhance the level of educational achievement for all of our children," he said.

Jennings said he hopes these and other efforts will increase minority enrollments around Ohio in the coming years.

Victim returns to testify in 'handcuff rapist' trial

By Melissa Eisen
Lantern staff writer

An army private flew in from Korea to testify Monday she was raped in April 1988 by a Columbus man charged with numerous counts of rape, kidnapping, felonious assault and aggravated robbery.

The woman testified against Robert Biddings, formerly of 3607 Cleveland Ave, Apt. C-7. Biddings was indicted last year on 57 counts involving 19 victims, from 12 to 46 years old.

Biddings, 35, pleaded not guilty on all counts in Franklin County Court of Common Pleas. If convicted, he could spend life in prison.

James Straight, a Columbus detective, said someone within the Columbus Police Department named this the "handcuff rapist" case. Straight has investigated several of the incidents in this case.

Last week, six women testified that Biddings raped them. Another woman said in court that Biddings kidnapped but did not rape her.

The army private, who was 18 years old at the time of the assault, testified that a man with a gun approached her as she was walking home on Westerville Road, April 2, 1988, at about 11 p.m.

The woman said he put his arm around her neck and held the gun in front of her. She said she pushed him into a ditch, ran and tried to wave down a car. None stopped.

The man tackled her, grabbed her and threatened to kill her, she said. Then she said he dragged her across the street and took a hat off his head and placed it over her eyes. The woman said she could still see him as he took $16 out of her wallet.

She said he raped her and, after the assault, told her to wait a half-hour before leaving the scene. The woman was treated at St. Anthony Medical Center, 1492 E. Broad St.

8 publishers sue Kinko's

By Tomoko Kotaka
Lantern staff writer

Eight publishing companies have collectively filed a lawsuit against two Kinko's Copies stores for allegedly reproducing material without consent of the authors.

The suit, brought against two New York stores April 25, is not expected to have an immediate impact on Kinko's Ohio State locations. But the lawsuit is raising many questions about copyright infringement.

Officials of Kinko's Service Corporation in Ventura, Calif., said the material that prompted the lawsuit was reproduced for Columbia University, New York University and Eugene Lange College.

The lawsuit was filed in federal district court in New York.

John Baumgarten is the copyright lawyer who will be representing Basic Books, Harper and Row, John Wiley, McGraw-Hill, Penguin Books, Prentice, Richard

D. Erwin and William Morrow Publishing Companies.

Baumgarten said he hopes the lawsuit will stop the reproduction

"Professors don't have the time — they would rather be spending their time preparing their course material than trying to track copyright owners all over the world."

— Kurt Koenig

of material without the author's consent.

He said the publishers object to the copying of selected works from different authors without authorization.

Kurt Koenig, vice-president and copyright and trademark counsel for Kinko's, said the material cited in the suit qualified under the Fair Use Act of the Federal Copyright Law.

Koenig will be the defending attorney representing Kinko's Copies.

According to section 107 of the Federal Copyright Law, the use of reproduced material for purposes such as criticism, comment, news-reporting, teaching or research is not an infringement on the law.

Koenig said Kinko's helps professors obtain permission from authors.

"Professors don't have the time — they would rather be spending their time preparing their course material than trying to track copyright owners all over the world," Koenig said.

Student dies from apparent overdose

By Juli Klyce
Lantern staff writer

A 21-year-old OSU student was found dead in a friend's apartment Monday morning, Columbus police said.

Scott Sirkin died from an apparent drug overdose said the Franklin County Coroner's office.

Sirkin, a senior majoring in computer and information science from Mayfield Heights was discovered by a resident of a 13th Avenue apartment.

Dr. William Adrion, from the coroner's office, said toxicology tests will determine any drugs that may be in Sirkin's body. The test results will take a week, but the cause of death appears to be a drug overdose, Adrion said.

Diane Madorsky, Sirkin's mother, said she has no reason to believe he would take drugs on purpose and that it may have been an accident.

An OSU student who graduated from Mayfield Heights High School with Sirkin said he spent Sunday evening with him.

The student, who asked not to be identified, said Sirkin called him around 6 p.m. and asked him over to watch a movie.

Sirkin wanted to be alone for the weekend and borrowed the 13th Avenue apartment from some friends who had gone on a rafting trip for the weekend, the student said.

Madorsky said Sirkin was a very private person.

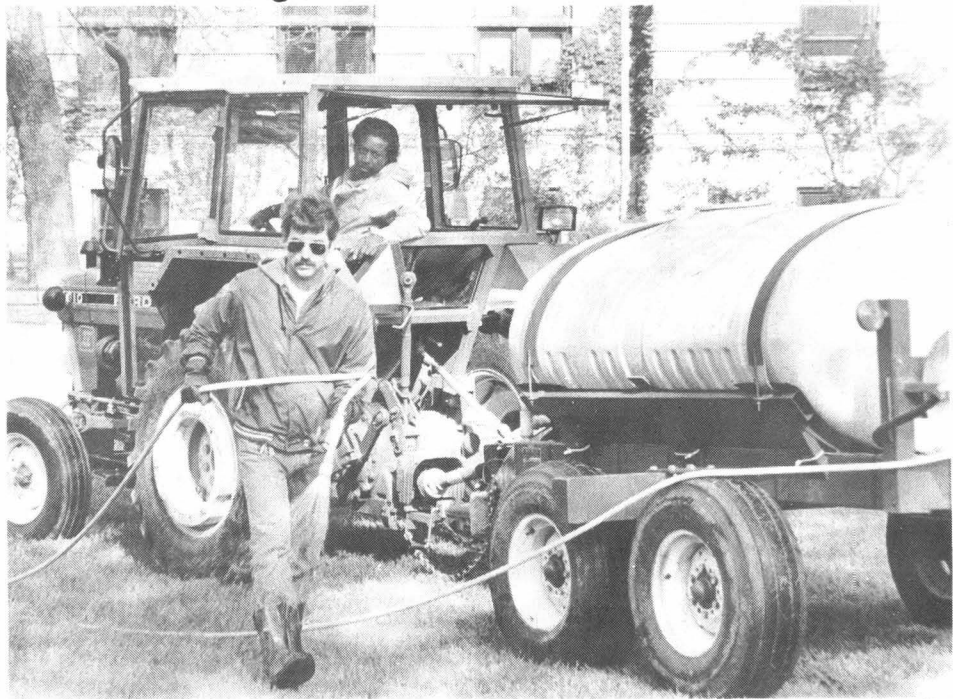

The student said he and Sirkin watched a movie in the apartment then went to his house for a party. He said Sirkin left around midnight.

The student said a resident of the apartment found Sirkin's body and called police around 3:30 a.m. Monday.

Sirkin was a member of Sigma Alpha Mu Fraternity and was planning to graduate in two quarters.

The Columbus homicide detective who is working on the case could not be reached for comment.

Space shuttle returns after probe launched

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Space shuttle Atlantis landed on a desert runway Monday after a successful mission that put U.S. planetary exploration back on track with the launch of an unmanned probe to Venus.

Atlantis touched down at 3:43 p.m. EDT on a Rogers Dry Lake runway after a fiery, hour-long plunge from orbit 184 miles above Earth. Only about 27,500 of a predicted 100,000 spectators braved baking heat to see Atlantis dive through the thin high clouds and rock the desert with the its signature twin sonic booms.

Re-entry began when two big engines at the rear of the spacecraft ignited and burned for 2 minutes, 38 seconds over the Indian Ocean on Atlantis' 64th orbit. The crew — commander David M. Walker, pilot Ronald J. Grabe, and mission specialists Norman E. Thagard, Mark Lee and Mary L. Cleave — rocketed into space from Kennedy Space Center on Thursday and launched the Magellan spacecraft.

The $550 million probe will reach Venus after a 15-month, 800 million-mile journey and begin mapping the surface of Earth's cloud-shrouded sister.

Magellan marks the first new U.S. planetary exploration in 11 years. The start of its mission was cheered by scientists working on a variety of programs that were delayed by the long hiatus in the shuttle program after the Jan. 28, 1986, Challenger disaster.

NASA last explored Venus with the 1978 launch of the Pioneer probe, which examined the planet's murky atmosphere and did some radar mapping. Magellan's radar should map 90 percent of the planet and with much greater resolution than Pioneer.

The Soviet Union sent two Venera probes to Venus in 1983 but only mapped about a quarter of its surface. Atlantis' mission, the fourth since shuttle flights resumed Sept. 29, 1988, had two significant technical problems. The orbiter was 31 seconds from launch on April 28 when a short-circuit was detected in a fuel pump, delaying takeoff until the pump and a leaky fuel line were replaced. On Sunday, one of the four redundant computers that control the shuttle's systems failed.

Ohio Student Association asks senators for support

By Rebecca Mugler
Lantern staff writer

The Ohio Student Association met with senators at the Statehouse Monday to emphasize the need for access and affordability in higher education.

Representatives from eight of the 13 colleges within the association were at the Statehouse. The association is a state-wide student advocacy organization which represents the legislative interests of all Ohio university students.

In between the Ohio Senate Finance subcommittee hearings, the student association spent its time imploring senators to understand the effect tuition increases would have on students currently enrolled at public institutions and the importance of higher education in Ohio.

Scott Mounts, program director of the association and vice president of USG, said the group was requesting $630 million for public higher education in Ohio, which would be an increase of $200 million.

"The House has already allocated $76 million from the state budget for this biennial," Mounts said. "We're hoping that the Senate will make up the difference."

He said the association is hoping the senate will devote an additional $130 million to public higher education, but Mounts said he is fairly confident the senate will not comply.

"Sen. Watts wants to give education the funding it needs, but without costing Ohio anything as far as additional tax dollars," Mounts said. "He wants to see it come out of the existing budget."

Mike Thomas, vice president of the student association and a senior from Miami University, said, "Based on the projected increases, many students are not going to be able to go to college."

"They're stretching students to the limit and the choice of higher education is going to disappear," he said.

Thomas said the organization has received over 5,000 letters from students throughout Ohio who are concerned they will not be able to go back to school next year.

Kirk Perry, president of the student body of the University of Cincinnati, said the association wanted consistency with the other state agencies. Perry said while all the other state agencies received an average increase of 10.8 percent over last year, higher education only received a 3.6 percent increase.

"They need to quit using education as a political volleyball," he said. "There are other areas the money can come from. State prisons received a $17 million increase and Medicaid received a $1 billion increase."

Members of the association from Shawnee University, a small college in Portsmouth, said one of the major advantages of attending the school was it's low tuition rates.

The majority of the student body is over 25, working and many are single mothers. Their university will raise its tuition by 23.5 percent beginning July 1 of this year.

"If the tuition is raised, it will put us in the same range as colleges like Ohio University," said Kyle Chamberlin, a sophomore at Shawnee.

"I'm a mother with four kids and my husband was injured at work and we're on a limited income," said Jody Watts, a freshman at Shawnee. "I can't afford a tuition increase."

Jeff Berding, the president of the association and a senior from Miami University, said the presence of the association was not so much to argue over numbers and percentages, but to stress the importance of affordability and access to higher education.

He said it is important for the senators to realize that investing in higher education is an investment in the future.

Mounts said historically higher education has received 16 percent of the budget. He said if this percentage of the budget had remained consistent with the increases in the income of the state's budget, public higher education would not be in a predicament.

professional development for Ohio's businesses, he said.

Jennings cited successes in research on retroviruses and diseases of aging, in agriculture on frost and drought resistant crops, and in engineering on technology for underwater welding.

He added that these programs cannot continue without a strong base budget.

"The institution must have adequate human and fiscal resources across the curriculum in order to attract and retain the type of faculty and staff that we know can carry us forward," he said.

Sen. Eugene Watts, R-Col., chairman of the finance subcommittee, said larger budgets are not necessarily what public universities need, but the cutting of duplicate programs in the state would aid the institutions in their efforts at cost containment.

He gave graduate programs as an example of unnecessary duplicate programs.

"I find it difficult to accept the notion that you have to have a graduate program within 50 miles of everybody's house," Watts said.

Watts advocated continuing the graduate programs around the state, but suggested discontinuing the "not-so-excellent" programs.

Jennings said cost-containment is a "dirty word" around campus and said Ohio State has saved more than $50 million over the last several years because of cost control.

He said the university has eliminated and refocused several programs and would welcome any suggestions of viable money-saving methods.

Kinko's compiles packets upon the professor's request, and has a very strict reproduction policy, Koenig said.

If the material presented by the professors does not clearly fall into the standards of the fair use act, Kinko's will not copy the material, he said.

Koenig said $30,000 to $50,000 of business a year is turned away for that reason.

Carol Risher is director of copyright and new technology at the Association of American Publishers, the trade association that represents the publishing industry in the United States.

Risher said publishers put a lot of investment in textbooks and the only way they can recuperate the investment is by sales profit.

Risher said permitting people to reproduce educational material will dry up the market and take away the incentive to create books.

"There shouldn't be a free exemption for educational purposes," she said. "Schools pay for paper, they pay for typewriters, they pay for equipment — why do they only steal intellectual property?"

One clause of the Fair Use Act says that reprinted material cannot be used to replace textbooks, Risher said.

"These Kinko's packets are replacements of textbooks," she said. "They're creating their own textbooks by using parts of multiple books."

Despite Kinko's claims of strict enforcement of copyright laws, Risher said the material pertaining to the lawsuit did not request permission and did not obtain the permission to reproduce the material.

"I have evidence in my office of letters that said 'you may not copy' and they went ahead and copied," she said. "Even more than not requesting permission, specific cases where they were denied permission."

Risher said although obtaining permission is the responsibility of the person using the material, the professors involved in this case could not be held to blame.

"In this particular case the professors had been told 'we will get the permission for you' so they were misled," she said.

Thomas C. Klak, OSU professor of geography, said he relies on the publishing company.

Two weeks after the incident, the woman moved to North Carolina, where she completed her senior year in high school. After graduating, she enlisted in the army and is now stationed in Korea.

graphs of suspects to Patricia Spicer, a detective in North Carolina. Spicer said she showed the photographs to the woman on Sept. 6, 1988.

The woman picked out Biddings as the man who raped her.

During direct examination, Edward Morgan, assistant prosecutor, asked the woman if her attacker was in the courtroom Monday. She pointed to Biddings and said, "That man right there. Not any doubt whatsoever."

Another woman testified Friday that Biddings handcuffed her to a tree and then raped her.

In a detailed description of her attacker, she told Straight that the man had a scar on a knuckle of his right hand.

James Kura, public defender, asked Straight to step down from the witness stand and examine Biddings' right hand.

Straight looked and said there was scar tissue and discoloration near a knuckle of Biddings' right hand.

James Pusateri, defense attorney, said in opening statements last Tuesday that the Columbus police were embarrassed because they had been working on the case for four years and still had not made any arrests.

Pusateri said police were overzealous and wanted to make an arrest quickly in connection with the rapes.

Biddings has also been charged on similar counts in a case filed Feb. 10, 1989. This case will be tried separately in the fall.

Biddings, who was convicted of rape in the Summit County Court of Common Pleas Jan. 12, 1973, is being held in Franklin County jail.

When he is brought into the courtroom, the jurors are not present and do not see him being escorted in by police. He has worn a suit during the trial, instead of the jail uniform.

More testimony will be given today.

the two-year schools.

"Two-year schools have a different mission... but it's good to see people are not engaging in fratricide," he said.

At a later session of the subcommittee, representatives of the Ohio Student Association were allowed to testify prior to Ohio Board of Regents Chancellor William Coulter.

Mike Thomas, a senior at Miami University, urged the committee not to lose faith in Ohio's college students.

"Ohio's students spend hours working at their education — their future — and now they feel like their future is going out the window," Thomas said.

Thomas said he thought the testimony given by his group had made their message clear to the committee.

"Historically, the Senate has been very supportive, so we're glad the message has been heard," he said.

BRUTUS causes schedule woes

Access codes and windows conflict with student registration information

By Lois Wright
Lantern staff writer

Many students in the College of Arts and Sciences are finding that BRUTUS is not living up to its name this quarter.

Henry Le, systems analyst for Better Registration Using Touch-tone phones for University Students, said problems with the system are the result of a "communication mix-up."

One problem students are having is that BRUTUS will not take their Personal Access Code.

"Many students have come to us with this problem," said James R. Tootle, assistant dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. "BRUTUS tells them that their PAC code isn't any good."

The code is entered after the students' social security number. It is the key assigned to the student to assure the security of their registration.

"Students tell me that BRUTUS won't take their PAC codes and we know these are the right codes they (the students) should be using," said Betty Gaddan, administrative associate of the department of history.

She said this is the only problem she had seen so far.

"In the communication route from the mainframe to the voicebox, some of the signals were getting mixed up and BRUTUS would not take the codes," Le said.

He said this problem was taken care of last week and since then he had not encountered any PAC code problems.

Students are also having problems with the BRUTUS registration window. The window is the appointed time and date that is assigned to the student to call BRUTUS and schedule.

Tootle said many of the students were told by BRUTUS that they were calling at the wrong time, when they were calling during at the time they were told to on their registration instruction sheets.

"Somehow, BRUTUS thinks that the students have two windows, one for summer quarter and one for fall quarter, when they really only have one window for both summer and fall quarters," Tootle said.

Tootle said BRUTUS is also telling students they can't take a course they request but then is enrolling them in the course.

"So we have students enrolling in many courses that they don't realize they are in," he said.

Le said this problem was exclusive to classes which require permission.

"Between the time when (the students) called BRUTUS and the time when they went to Dr. Tootle's office, they had been given permission and BRUTUS had then enrolled them in the course," Le said.

Tootle said he has been telling students to keep calling and trying to use BRUTUS. If that doesn't work, he recommends they come in and have their schedule entered in by hand.

David Richter, associate professor of journalism, said some students were being enrolled in prerequisite courses in the summer but were then told they weren't able to enroll for the courses they needed in the fall.

Richter said he thinks the problem was a result of the combination enrollment of summer and fall quarters.

"I think these problems could have been avoided if the system had been programmed to understand what was going on or if there had been two separate registrations for summer and fall quarters," Richter said.

Le said this was the first time they had used this combination enrollment of summer and fall quarters and he said despite these problems, they would do it this way again.

"This was done for the convenience of the student, and so far it has been successful," he said.

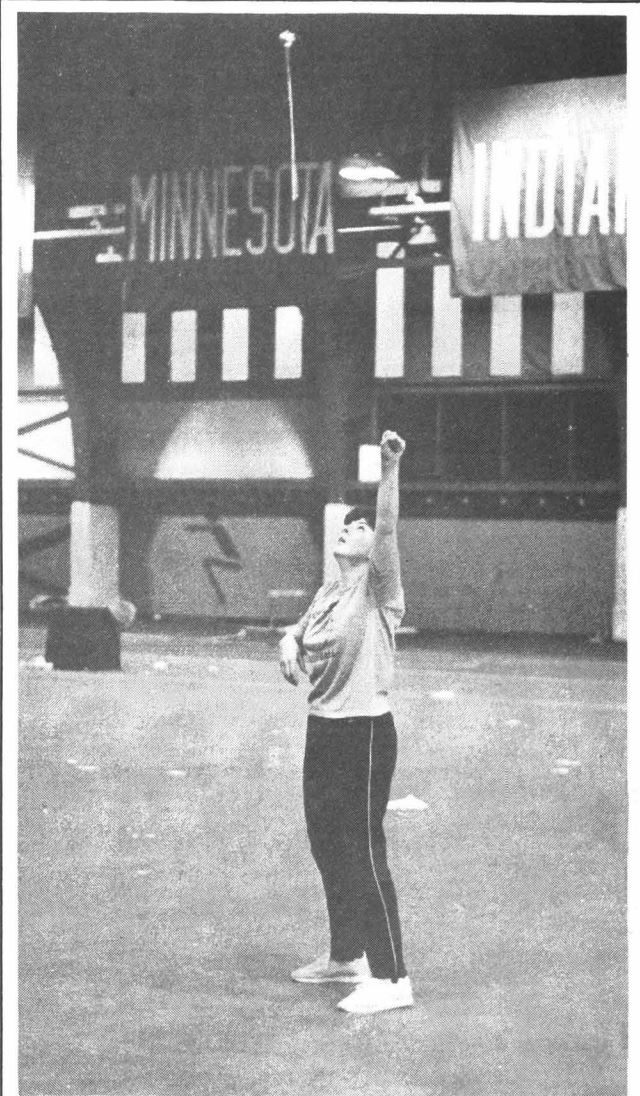

But some people still think that additions should be made to the BRUTUS system to make it easier for the colleges and the students.

"The main problem I see is not with the system but with the students not understanding the system," said Sharon Brock, assistant executive director of the School of Journalism.

She said the biggest problem she has encountered is with courses requiring permission from the instructor.

"BRUTUS tells the students that they need permission for a course but what the students don't understand is that they can go ahead and enroll in the course," she said. "They only need permission if they are closed out of the course."

Brock said there should be a central trouble shooting office where students can call or go for help.

Shelling resumes in Lebanon after lull

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — When people slipped out of bomb shelters Monday for food and water during a lull in the fierce, artillery war, the shelling resumed, killing eight and wounding 31.

The third day of intense shelling since a cease-fire collapsed, brought casualties in the two-month battle between Christian and Moslem gunners killed at least 308 and injured 1,162.

Police said 25,000 shells and rockets hit Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors from dusk Saturday to Monday afternoon.

Shells blew gaping holes in scores of apartment buildings on both sides of Beirut's sectarian dividing line. Hundreds of burned-out cars smoldered in streets blanketed with debris and shards of glass under dangling remnants of power lines.

Shopkeepers banged down their shutters when the shooting started and motorists sped away, blaring their horns at pedestrians scurrying for cover. Police said streets emptied in less than 15 minutes.

"They've destroyed everything I own! I hope they roast in hell, all of them!" said Mahmoud Younis, 30, staring at his gutted electrical shop in the Mosseitbeh district of Moslem west Beirut.

The shelling threatened peace-making efforts of Arab League envoys trying to reconstitute the cease-fire called 11 days ago in the latest round of Lebanon's 14-year-old civil war.

Police said gunners of the Syrian army and allied Druse militia pounded the coast around the ports of Jounieh and Byblos, blocking the only escape routes for a million people who live in the besieged Christian enclave north and east of Beirut.

Christian gunners struck back with barrages of 155mm howitzer fire aimed at seaside Moslem districts in Beirut and at the airport, which was closed soon after the fighting began March 8. Police said the Syrian fire came from those points.

Shells were fired only sporadically during a lull that settled over the city at dawn Monday, but the pace quickened again before noon, catching people in search of supplies. Shells and rockets rained down on the city and on resort towns in the mountains above Beirut.

Movie addresses suicide

'Heathers' approaches teen problems while maintaining degree of comedy

Simply put, "Heathers" is a comedy about teenage suicide.

Suicide is never funny. But "Heathers" makes fun of all the teenage frustration, insecurity and adolescent cruelty that fills every high school hallway.

And when the bell rings, the film gives a definite anti-suicide

MOVIES

lesson.

Winona Ryder stars in the film as Veronica, a student at a fictional Westerburg High School in Sherwood, Ohio.

VERONICA ASPIRES to be in the most powerful social clique of the school, the Heathers, so named because each of the girls in the group name themselves Heather.

The Heathers are three bratty rich girls to whom money and social mobility mean everything, and they do not mind stepping on a few fingers to get it. In fact they get a kick out of seeing how many fingers they can bruise along the way.

They are straight-A students, but use their intelligence to decide which color of Revlon products to buy and how to hit three keg parties before curfew.

Veronica has the tickets for getting into the Heathers — money, looks and intelligence. But the group's cruelty leaves her a little bit confused.

She begins to think the world would be a better place if only all the Heathers in it would drop dead.

OF COURSE Veronica would never really kill anybody, she does not have the nerve.

But in comes J.D. (Christian Slater), the rebellious new kid in school with nerve to spare.

Kill the Heathers? No problem for J.D., or so he says.

Veronica thinks J.D. is only joking until one morning when they visit the home of Heather 1 (Shannen Doherty) who is in bed with a hangover.

J.D. tricks Heather 1 into drinking some industrial strength boat cleaner to clear her head. She chokes and falls through a glass coffee table.

Courtesy New World Pictures

Christian Slater, left, and Winona Ryder star in "Heathers," a comedy in which they attempt to adjust the social order of their school in a fairly permanent manner.

It is symbolic that the Cliff's Notes of "The Bell Jar" are on top of the table as she crashes through.

TO COVER up the murder Veronica forges a suicide note.

But Veronica and J.D.'s plan to rid the world of Heathers backfires when, like Sylvia Plath, Heather 1's apparent suicide rockets her to martyrdom and sainthood.

The once cruel and hated Heather 1 is now loved and missed by all. Veronica takes out her frustration on a couple of other teenagers as she continues to rid the world of its Heathers.

J.D. says suicide is the "Woodstock for the 80's". That statement seems to sum up the message of this movie; the only way today's kids can get attention is by killing themselves.

"Heathers" is very startling, but has lots of laughs thanks to a very funny script.

EACH HEATHER masterfully insults those of different social orders in cruel and inventive ways.

Winona Ryder gives an intelligent performance as a dark and brooding young girl, much like her character in "Beetlejuice," who was the only person in a haunted house who could see its ghosts.

In "Beetlejuice" her character was in touch with the dead. But in "Heathers" her character grows up some and begins to appreciate the living.

As J.D., Christian Slater sounds too much like Jack Nicholson to be taken seriously. He sounds like he is doing an impression instead of developing his own style. This film has a strong anti-suicide message and remains brilliantly funny at the same time.

THE FILM is entertaining but not preachy.

A problem with the film is the explosive ending that is very baffling. What started out as a film about teenage angst, seems to end like a film that was just written by an angry teenager.

This film comes a little too close to hiding its message behind its dark and humored facade.

"Heathers" is now playing at the Drexel North, 4250 N. High.

Singer's jet used to pay for bad act

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Officials at a concert arena got an order to seize Hank Williams Jr.'s private jet Sunday to cover expenses of a brief, profanity-filled appearance in which the country singer failed to finish a single song.

A spokesman said Williams, 39, was sorry about Saturday night's concert at the Baton Rouge Centroplex and would put everything right.

After the concert a few of the 7,000 concert-goers threw bottles and tried to burn souvenir T-shirts, said police. There were no injuries or arrests reported and damage to the building was described as minor.

Michael M. Pierce, director of the 11,000-seat arena, said the singer "would do three or four bars ... and then use some profanity and say 'We don't need this song,' and then immediately sing something else."

After about 20 minutes, during which he talked incoherently and attempted several songs, Williams threw his fiddle into the air and stumbled offstage, helped by members of his entourage, witnesses said.

Williams, who was voted the Academy of Country Music entertainer of the year three times, was apologetic and promised to pay for ticket refunds, other expenses and any profit the arena would have made, spokesman Kent Arwood said Sunday.

Arwood said Williams is not an alcoholic and that a problem he had acknowledged having with pills is a thing of the past. His father, the famous country singer-songwriter Hank Williams Sr., died in 1953 at age 29 of the effects of alcohol abuse.

Halo brace removed from Burson's neck

Lantern staff reports

The removal of the halo brace Monday that former OSU basketball player Jay Burson has been wearing since February, has revealed "excellent healing," said team doctor Robert J. Murphy in a press release from the OSU sports information department.

Burson, who sustained a broken neck in a Feb. 13 game at Iowa, had the brace removed at University Hospitals and will wear a neck collar for the next four weeks. He will then begin rehabilitation.

Burson, 22, was not available for comment and will hold a press conference at 10 a.m. today. He reportedly left for his home in New Concord, Ohio immediately after having the brace removed.

The first team all-Big Ten guard has said he wants to pursue a professional basketball career. He told the Lantern in March, "I've had a lot of adversity (in my career). I've had to prove that I could play, and my goal is to play again. I might not have gone on if I could have finished the season, but I wasn't ready for it to end... not like this."

The neck injury was not Burson's first injury in his career. He suffered a severe concussion during a pick-up game in the summer of 1986, and still can't remember

The following summer, he severely cut the middle finger on his shooting hand while lifting weights. The injury required several stitches, but Burson was ready to play by the beginning of the season.

Burson averaged 22 points and four assists per game in his final season as a Buckeye. He is the fifth all-time leading scorer in Ohio State history with 1,756 points. He ranks sixth all-time in assists (329), first in steals (204), and fourth in games played (122).

During Burson's career, Ohio State won the National Invitational Tournament in 1986, beat Kentucky in the 1987 NCAA tournament, and beat several top-ranked teams in the country.

Burson's charity work overlooked

Painting former OSU basketball player Jay Burson as a person who is only looking to make a quick buck is akin to painting an incomplete portrait.

Burson, who had his college career ended by a broken neck he received in a game at Iowa on Feb. 13, has parlayed his celebrity status into several lucrative endorsements. But at the same time, he has become involved with a bevy of charity and goodwill activities.

Burson, who had the halo traction brace he has worn since the injury removed yesterday, signed an endorsement contract with the Kroger Company in March. But, according to his agent Bret Adams, it was Kroger's that called Burson.

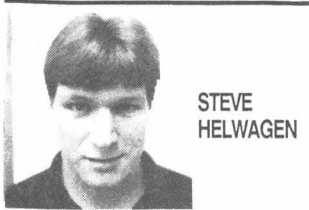

"They initiated the conversation with Jay," Adams said. "They have every other athlete in town. He was a natural for them."

Adams said the offer came before the Ohio State season had finished, but there was never any thought to doing ads before the last game.

"We didn't want to do endorsements while Jay was still in the halo traction brace," Adams said. "But, Kroger's came up with a tasteful thing, the thank you message on local TV. There was no other ad or outlet made."

"As far as Ohio State goes, we went to (athletic director) Jim Jones and said here's what Jay has. We let them know about what was going on with Kroger's."

According to Adams, a deal for Burson to endorse an oversized training basketball practically fell into his lap.

STEVE HELWAGEN

"I own half interest in the oversized ball design," Adams said. "My partner and I talked to representatives of Mikasa on the airplane to the national (coaches and equipment) convention in Seattle and they were interested in producing it."

"At the booth at the convention, the President of Mikasa was impressed by the reaction Jay got and how he was bombarded by the people."

Burson, the fifth-leading scorer in OSU history and the top scorer in state high school history, never returned to Ohio State after the injury. His departure made him eligible to accept the endorsements because he renounced his athletic scholarship.

"He couldn't go to school because of the brace," Adams said. "It's such an uncomfortable thing for him to wear. The commercial opportunities came to Jay. He never sought anyone or anybody out."

The injury and the prospects of his future in pro basketball might have figured in the decision. After all, there is no guarantee that Burson will ever make the big dollars in the NBA or play at any level if he does not recover.

If Burson makes a full recovery, he might be a first round choice. All 25 players selected in the first round last year were on an NBA roster at the end of the season.

It is more likely he will be selected in the second round (the draft this year is shortened from three to two rounds), where 14 of the 25 players selected finished the season.

"From what we've heard from NBA scouts, he will be drafted," Adams said.

Adams said there is also a possibility Burson could play in the 6-foot-5-and-under World Basketball League where the Youngstown Pride hold his rights.

"Jay's father (Jim Burson) and I went to Youngstown to check out the franchise and we were impressed with the caliber of play," Adams said. "The team sold out all of its season tickets and has a strong following."

"The only problem is the WBL season runs from May to August and Jay may not be ready to play in time."

Burson would not get rich in the WBL as the league has a salary cap of $25,000 per player.

Since the injury and since he left Ohio State, Burson has not been sitting at home collecting big paychecks. Rather, he has immersed himself in charitable activities.

"He has virtually been running himself ragged," Adams said. "You can't believe the number of requests we get. We get letters for speeches and from coaches who have players with neck injuries who would like a letter from Jay."

Burson's uncompensated, charitable activities include:

- Acting as honorary chairman of the Central Ohio Lung Association campaign.

- Sponsoring and organizing a golf tournament to benefit Canine Companions, which provides guide dogs to assist the blind and paraplegics.

- Signing autographs at local malls for Operation FEED.

- Working on fund-raising for the Cystic Fibrosis Association.

Finally, in the past three years Ohio State has watched two football players and one basketball player admit they accepted money from agents before their college eligibility had expired. For all intents and purposes, Burson's collegiate eligibility ended on Feb. 13.

Considering the uncertainty of his future, Burson had no choice but to accept the endorsement opportunities when they presented themselves.

Men's tennis team has 7th straight win

By Leslie Mendelsohn
Lantern sports writer

The OSU men's tennis team extended its winning streak to seven as it defeated Iowa and 17th-ranked Northwestern in its last matches of the regular season.

Ohio State faced Iowa Saturday indoors at the Jesse Owens West facility in what both teams thought would be an even match. Ohio State's 7-2 win proved otherwise.

Freshman Ty Tucker lost 6-2, 7-6 to Hawkeye Claes Ramel in the No. 1 singles spot.

OSU junior Steve Miguel defeated Mike Kiewiet in the No. 2 singles spot 6-3, 6-3.

Seniors Ted Glavas and Chris Gatt each played three-set matches. Glavas won 6-2, 3-6, 6-3 and Gatt defeated his opponent

1-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Ohio State had clinched the day's match after the singles were played.

Junior Kevin Dibelius and Miguel played No. 1 doubles. They lost 6-2, 6-2 to Iowa's Ramel and Martin Aguirre.

Senior Ulf Hartwig and junior Enrico Sartori won 6-3, 6-3 playing No. 2 doubles.

Ohio State defeated Northwestern in a close 5-4 match Sunday, also at Jesse Owens West.

Unfortunately for the Wildcats, their No. 3 singles player, Pat Han, did not play because of an ankle injury.

Tucker again played at the No. 1 singles spot and beat sophomore Steve Herdoiza 7-6, 6-4. Herdoiza is ranked 17th in the nation in collegiate men's singles.

The victory came on Tucker's

19th birthday Sunday.

Dibelius beat Chris Gregersen in two sets with scores of 6-3, 6-4.

Glavas lost his match to Wildcat Jimmy Cushing 7-5, 6-2.

"I thought that I was playing well. I was up 5-2 in the first set but then I lost nine games in a row," Glavas said.

Although Glavas was not happy about his loss, he thinks he could beat Cushing if they played again.

"I am glad this happened now instead of in the Big Ten Tournament," he said.

Gatt defeated his opponent 6-3, 6-2. Gatt was happy about his play.

"I played well. I didn't make any stupid mistakes," he said.

In doubles, the Buckeyes did not finish as well. Dibelius and Miguel went into three sets and lost 2-6, 6-4, 4-6.

Glavas joined his brother Kostis and they lost in the No. 3 doubles spot. The match went into a seven point tie-breaker with a final score of 7-5, 5-7, 7-6.

The winning doubles team was Sartori and Hartwig. Their win closed the match and gave the Buckeyes the win.

The team will be the third seed in the Big Ten Tournament this weekend, said OSU Coach John Daly.

"We could be tied with Iowa, but since we beat them we will be put ahead of them," Daly said.

Ohio State could meet both Iowa and Northwestern this weekend at the tournament.

"We proved we can beat them indoors and I think we are better than them outdoors," Daly said.

The tournament begins Friday morning in Iowa.

Baseball Bucks battered by Blue

By David Myers
Lantern sports writer

The OSU baseball team's chances of making the Big Ten Tournament took a beating Monday at Trautman Field.

The Buckeyes lost both games of a doubleheader against first-place Michigan, 5-2 in the first game and 14-2 in the second, and dropped one game behind fourth-place Michigan State in the battle for the final playoff spot.

Ohio State plays Michigan State this weekend at Michigan State and must win three out of the four games in order to make the tournament.

The top four teams qualify for the Big Ten Tournament May 19-21, which will be held at the home field of the regular season champion.

The sweep dropped Ohio State's record to 28-25 overall and 12-12 in the Big Ten and improved Michigan's record to 39-11 overall and 18-5 in the Big Ten.

Senior co-captain and first baseman Tom Eiterman said a playoff berth is still possible.

"We definitely have to win three now," Eiterman said. "In order to do that everybody on the team has got to pick themselves up. I know we can win three against Michigan State, though."

In the first game, the Buckeyes managed only three hits against Michigan starting pitcher Tim Lata and reliever John Locker.

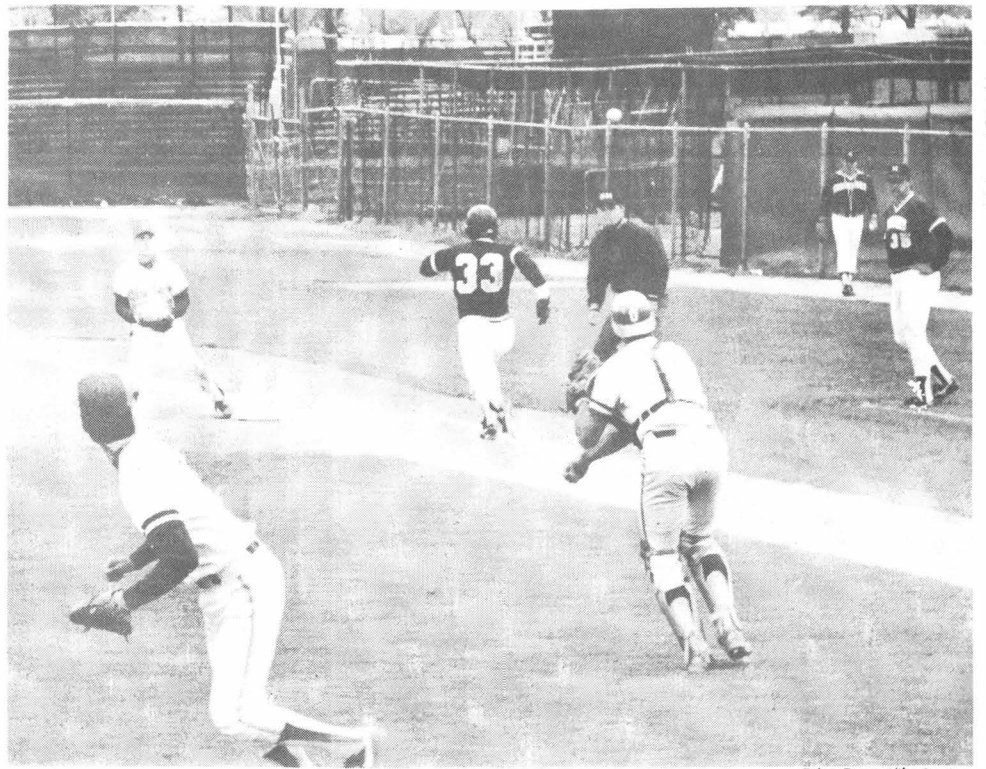

Michigan began the scoring in the first inning against OSU starting pitcher David Mumaw (3-5, 2-4) on a two-out single by designated hitter Dan Ruff that scored second baseman Matt Morse.

The Wolverines made it 3-0 in the top of the fourth inning on a two-out, two-run double by left fielder Jim Durham.

Ohio State came back with one run in the bottom of the inning. Senior designated hitter Angelo Palladino doubled with one out, went to third on a wild pitch by Lata (7-1, 3-1) and scored on a groundout by junior left fielder Mark Pfaff.

The Buckeyes made it a one-run game by scoring a run in the bottom of the sixth, but missed a chance to tie the score.

Brian Borgert/the Lantern

Ohio State catcher Mike Durant (13) fields a bunt by Michigan's Matt Morse (33), but throws the ball into the right field bullpen Monday at Trautman

went to third on a groundout, and after Eiterman walked, scored on a fly ball to left field by Palladino.

Eiterman then stole second base, but was left there when Locker came in and struck out Pfaff.

Coach Bob Todd said the missed opportunity in the sixth was critical.

"We get back in the ballgame and we have the tying run in scoring position and once again we can't get him in," Todd said. "Then we have a defensive breakdown in the next inning and pretty soon the score is 5-2."

The defensive breakdown that Todd was referring to was a three-base throwing error by freshman catcher Mike Durant on a sacrifice bunt attempt by Morse that scored Durham all the way from first base.

With Morse on third and no outs, Todd replaced Mumaw with senior Bill Wertz.

Morse scored when Wertz threw a wild pitch to the next batter.

Locker retired the Buckeyes in order in the bottom of the seventh to record his fourth save of the year and second in Big Ten play.

In the second game, Michigan scored four runs in the first inning off freshman Mark Mesewicz (3-2, 1-2) and won the game easily.

The Buckeyes got back in the game momentarily with two runs in the third inning off Wolverine starting pitcher Ross Powell (7-0, 6-0), but Michigan blew the game open with seven runs in the fifth inning.

Mesewicz, who had settled down after the first inning, walked shortstop Chris Gagin leading off the inning and Todd brought in Wertz.

Four hits, four walks, a balk and a hit batter later Michigan held a comfortable 11-2 lead.

Mesewicz said walking the lead-off hitter led to his demise.

"I was frustrated about walking the guy, but I hoped he (Todd) would leave me in," Mesewicz said. "But he knows better than I do what to do."

Michigan finished the scoring with another run off Wertz in the sixth and two off junior Ben Regoli in the seventh.

Ohio State plays its final home game of the year Wednesday against Cleveland State University at 2 p.m.

Bengals linebacker hopes to recover

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals linebacker Kevin Walker, whose knee injury wiped out most of his rookie season in 1988, hopes to be improved enough physically to challenge for a starting job this season.

The 240-pound Walker is still undergoing daily physical therapy and is limited to walking and jogging. He isn't certain whether he will be able to return for the start of the Bengals' preseason training camp in July, or whether his recovery could take substantially longer.

"At this point I can see the light at the end of the tunnel," Walker said after the Bengals concluded a weekend mini-camp session Sunday. "I'm real close now to being about 90 percent."

Other Bengals are still on the mend from injuries last season, including quarterback Boomer Esiason (sore shoulder), nose tackle Tim Krumrie (broken leg), nose tackle Mike Hammerstein and tight end Eric Kattus (both knee injuries).

Running back Stanford Jennings suffered torn ligaments and a broken bone in the ring finger of his right hand Saturday when he reached for a pass during a receiving drill in the mini-camp. He underwent surgery Saturday and had his hand placed in a cast.

He is expected to be recovered by the start of the July camp.

Walker, 23, from the University of Maryland, suffered torn knee ligaments in the sixth game of the regular season last year against the New York Jets on Oct. 9. The injury required major reconstruction surgery on his left knee.

If his situation improves, Walker could push veteran Reggie Williams for his job at outside linebacker. Williams, a 14-season Bengals veteran who is also a Cincinnati city councilman, was serving as Walker's tutor last season before the injury cut short Walker's season.

"The unfortunate thing is that it stopped his development," linebackers coach Dick Selcer said. "I don't think he is back to being a rookie, because he has an understanding of our system. The whole thing for him is to feel comfortable. Once he does it, it's like being a parachutist the second time. The first time you don't know what you didn't know. The second time you know exactly what's happening."

Walker is still concerned about how long he will be sidelined.

"A finite prediction on it is a little too soon," Selcer said. "We're talking the rest of May, June and almost all of July. I'm not making a prediction."

Journalism professor earns position in ethics workshop

By Lori Shoemaker
Lantern staff writer

An OSU journalism professor was recently chosen to participate in the Gannett/Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication. It is a national workshop on the teaching of ethics in journalism, which will be held in October at the University of Missouri at Columbia.

Cathy Pratt said she was surprised about being chosen to attend the workshop because Gannett usually has a greater focus on the media and not as much on public relations.

Fifteen people were selected from more than 65 applicants to participate in the workshop which is funded by a $25,000 grant from the Gannett Foundation.

"My research is to investigate how people make decisions and I'd like to translate that into class material so we can train our students in some of the tools to make ethical decisions," Pratt said.

Pratt was awarded a Lilly fellowship earlier this year. Her project for this fellowship is to develop an undergraduate media ethics course.

"My research interests are in ethics and law and so I look at things like codes of ethics," Pratt said. "I have a number of different projects going, all of which relate somehow to ethics."

Ed Lambeth, associate dean of graduate studies and research at the school and director of the workshop, said there are three goals of the workshop.

The workshop is designed to help develop research agendas, teach faculty how to organize and implement a course on ethics, and to generate an understanding of how faculty can handle ethical problems.

"I think whether you are a public relations practitioner or a journalist, as you go through your career there are some genuinely difficult decisions that you make," Pratt said. "We don't necessarily give students the tools in which to make those decisions."

"There are not always rights and wrongs. There are personal decisions, professional decisions and institutional decisions that we don't get to talk to students about how those decisions ought to be made."

— Cathy Pratt

Pratt gave a few examples of a clear lack of ethics such as a public relations practitioner involved in insider trading and reporters who make up stories. She identifies these as ethically wrong. She wants to help students in the decision making process where the distinction between doing right and wrong may be a very gray area.

"There are not always rights and wrongs," Pratt said. "There are personal decisions, professional decisions and institutional decisions that we don't get to talk to students about how those decisions ought to be made."

"It's like when you're a little kid and you steal a candy bar from a store and your mother makes you return it and you think to yourself, this is just a 25-cent candy bar, why is she making me do this," she said. "She's doing it because it is the principle."

Law stiffens penalties for discriminatory acts

By Erik Battenberg
Lantern staff writer

City officials and community leaders met last weekend to discuss a new law that discourages discrimination on the basis of race, religion, national origin or sexual orientation.

Lisa Griffin, public information officer, said the Ethnic Intimidation Ordinance was written in response to a cross burning and the harassment of a store owner on the West side of Columbus that were believed to be racially motivated incidents.

The law states that anyone who violates one of the 14 Columbus City Codes on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin or sexual orientation will face a first-degree misdemeanor with at least ten days imprisonment.

Repeat offenders face a mandatory minimum sentence of at least 90 days imprisonment.

The 14 City Codes the law applies to include assault, menacing, sexual imposition, telephone harassment and disorderly conduct.

The discussion, held at the YWCA, 65 S. Fourth St., featured panelists from city departments and community groups.

Griffin said during a public hearing last November, Stonewall Union, a gay and lesbian rights group, testified for the sexual preference amendment.

The bill passed City Council by a six to one margin and was reluctantly signed by Mayor Dana Rinehart, who wanted the sexual preference amendment removed, Griffin said.

"There are certain people who feel that it is a fun thing to do; to look for a gay man or a lesbian to beat up, to rape or to kill."

— Gloria McCauley

Griffin said she did not know if the law extends to crimes motivated by the victim's views on issues such as abortion or animal rights. But she said if the attorney general has a good case, the law might apply.

Gloria McCauley, of the Stonew-all Union speaker's bureau, said the Stonewall Union lobbied to include sexual orientation in the legislation because of the numerous attacks on gays and lesbians.

"There are certain people who feel that it is a fun thing to do; to look for a gay man or a lesbian to beat up, to rape or to kill," McCauley said.

McCauley also said that 47 percent of "hate crimes" are committed against gays and lesbians.

McCauley said Stonewall Union used to get six to eight calls per week from homosexuals who had been harassed because of their sexual orientation. McCauley said the calls have decreased since the ordinance was passed.

Sam Gresham, executive director of the Columbus Urban League, said racially motivated crimes have been on the rise since 1977. He said in 1986, he conducted a study revealing that Franklin County had the highest rate of racially motivated crimes reported in Ohio's 88 counties.

The discussion was presented by The Public Policy Committee of the YWCA, The League of Women Voters of Metropolitan Columbus and Women Lawyers of Franklin County.

OSU researchers regard fusion claim improbable

By Vera McCruter
Lantern staff writer

OSU researchers gave Pons and Fleischmann's "fusion in a jar" experiment a thumbs down after attending a week long science conference last week in Baltimore.

Richard Boyd, a physics and astronomy professor and spokesman for OSU cold fusion researchers, said scientists from all over the United States attended the American Physical Society conference and that researchers from across the nation are still in the dark about the experiment.

Stanley Pons of the University of Utah and Martin Fleischmann of the University of Southampton, in England held a news conference March 23 to announce the discovery of fusion at room temperature.

Fusion is a nuclear process which produces energy by taking two atoms and fusing them together to make a single element, unlike fission, where elements are split apart to make energy. Fusion has been presumed to only take place under extremely high pressure and temperatures.

Pons and Fleischmann claimed they could produce fusion without the high pressure and temperatures, which they call cold fusion.

Fusion is considered to be a better energy source than fission, because fission produces dangerous radioactive elements that have to be carefully stored for many years. On the other hand, fusion is much cleaner because it produces almost no radioactive residue.

Fission is the process that is currently used in nuclear power plants around the world. Fission reactors were in use during the nuclear accidents at Three Mile Island and Chernobyl.

Boyd said he questions the validity of the Utah claim.

"A major inconsistency is between the heat output and the nuclear effects which they should be seeing if the heat is really the result of fusion," he said.

If scientists would have agreed that the Pons and Fleischmann experiment was really fusion, it would have had a major impact on the world economy.

Richard Tybout, a retired professor of environmental economics, said there is too much controversy about the physics of the Pons and Fleischmann experiment, much less its economic impact.

"The public really does not have enough information to predict right now whether or not their findings would mean an economic breakthrough for society's economy," Tybout said.

Boyd and other scientists have also questioned the way which Pons and Fleischmann announced the results of their experiment.

"When scientists come up with something, they submit it to their peers for review. Pons and Fleischmann submitted their work for review, but have been extremely non-communicative in regards to the details of their experiment," Boyd said.

"Scientists have a problem with this and are feeling frustrated," he said.

Pons and Fleischmann's experiment is an offshoot of a simple electrolysis. The electrolysis process runs an electrical current through water. The current causes the water molecules to separate into hydrogen and oxygen elements. The current is passed through the water by two pieces of metal called electrodes.

In the cold fusion experiment, one of the electrodes is made of a metal called palladium, and a special type of water, deuterium, is used instead of normal water.

Will Brooks, a postdoctoral researcher in nuclear physics, presented the results of experiments that were conducted by OSU cold fusion researchers at the Baltimore conference.

"Although the Pons and Fleischmann's experiment was shot down at the conference, we will continue to study the details of the fusion experiments and possibly run more experiments," Brooks said.

‘May Week’ party begins on Lima regional campus

By Keith D. Ackerman
Lantern staff writer

Alumni and former students of OSU's regional campus in Lima are invited to attend Alumni Day and the Golden Oldies Block Party on Wednesday, May 10, as part of the campus' annual "May Week" celebration, May 8-13.

Highlighting Wednesday's Alumni Day festivities will be a barbecue and an outdoor concert by local '50s and '60s band, BMW.

"It (the block party and barbecue) is the biggest event of the whole week," said Don Harrod, president of the student senate at Lima. "We sponsor the barbecue, and this year we sent out over 6,000 invitations and we're hoping for a good turnout."

Lisa Fell, coordinator of communications for OSU Lima and Lima Technical College, said the week-long outdoor festival consists of games and gymnasium activities, including an opening day tricycle race, a pizza eating contest, a Twister contest and a timed fruit juice drinking competition called the Baby Bottle Gobble.

"The focus of 'May Week' is not on recognizing the school or its student groups," said Carole Enneking, coordinator of student activities at OSU Lima. "It's a way of showing students that there's more to school than just going to classes."

Most students at Lima are commuters who just drive to campus, attend classes and leave, Enneking said.

"May Week" has been an event ever since the Lima branch started in 1968," Fell said. "It started out as simple games and dances, but it's become more sophisticated."

During the course of the week, approximately five to 10 events will be held each day from 12-3 p.m., she added.

Fell also listed special events like the Battle of the Bands competition on May 13 as the finale of the week.

The event, sponsored by WOSL, the campus radio station, also involves a competition between six local music groups. The bands will be judged by a panel of four local music enthusiasts, with cash prizes of $200, $100 and $50 to be awarded to the top three groups, she said.

The week-long festival gives students a chance to enjoy the warm weather and to meet new friends, staff and faculty, she added.

Enneking said 20 student organizations sponsor portions of "May Week," including games, concessions and special events. These groups plan, staff and get the equipment needed for their portion of the celebration.

Harrod said many student organizations use "May Week" as a way to make money for their group, but the focus is to have fun.

"We (the student senate) do use the barbecue we sponsor as a money-maker," he said. "But it's more to promote ourselves in a fun way to the campus and to the community."

Tickets for the Alumni Day barbecue are $4.25 for alumni and $4.50 for students. Ticket information is available from the Student Activities Office.

Judges' seats in jeopardy; quitting clubs not enough

WASHINGTON (AP) — Candidates for federal judge who belong to discriminatory clubs are finding last-minute resignations may not be enough to win over critics and save their chances for a seat on the bench.

"Resigning immediately prior to being appointed or knowing that one may be appointed is not adequate," says Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. "It misses the point. The concern is that the jurist is going to be considered open-minded and fair."

The Senate — which makes the final decision on judicial confirmation — thus far has not flatly ruled out approval of nominees who belong to discriminatory clubs, but the pendulum appears headed that way.

In practice, consideration of potentially controversial nominees sometimes simply grinds to a halt without formal, public action.

One attorney's hopes for a seat on the bench fizzled in 1988 when he waited until two weeks before his scheduled Senate hearing to resign from Virginia's exclusive James River Club and told a black group he never felt "any kind of moral fire within my belly to go out and correct what is perceived to be wrong by some."

A 17-year-veteran of the Colorado Supreme Court saw his hopes die last year after he balked when lawmakers urged him to resign from a country club with no black members and specific restrictions on women. He said he would not bow to political pressure "to enhance my chances for confirmation."

The new concern about club memberships goes beyond the Senate.

The American Bar Association last week took steps to revise its rules and ban judges from being members of clubs that "invidiously discriminate." It could be the group's official policy by February 1990.

No one is challenging the right of private clubs to discriminate, as long as they are truly private and not merely wearing that label as a means of dodging the public accommodations laws.

The question is how much should membership in such a club weigh as lawmakers consider attorneys for lifetime appointments to the bench and whether judges who belong to clubs that discriminate can ever project an image of fairness.

Metzenbaum says he could support a member of a discriminatory club for judge if the candidate had consistently worked to change such policies. But he scoffs at last-minute resignations merely to appease the Judiciary Committee.

Money taken from nearby video store

An undetermined amount of cash was taken from a video store near campus Sunday evening, Columbus Police reports said.

A clerk from the North Campus Video Store, 2465 N. High St., told police the man came to the counter and handed him a note that said "Give me all your money, I have a gun."

A struggle ensued and the clerk suffered scratches on both his arms, reports said.

Another clerk who was in the store at the time said the suspect escaped through the back door.

There are no suspects and police are still investigating the incident.

Gym stereo taken

Stereo equipment, owned by OSU Buck-I-Robics, was taken from Larkins Hall over the weekend, OSU Police said.

Two speakers, a cassette deck, amplifier, equipment box and miscellaneous cords were stolen from a closet on the second floor adjacent to a gym where the workouts are usually held, said Deputy Chief Richard Harp.

A set of keys that open the closet and equipment case were taken during an aerobics class on Friday, Harp said.

There were signs of forced entry and police are still investigating the case, he said.

Liz Davis, aerobics coordinator, said the value of the equipment is undetermined.

month, OSU Police Department said.

The board was taken from an office in Smith Hall, Deputy Chief Richard Harp said.

Ryland Truax, systems analyst for the astronomy department, said the board is used inside a computer as a drive that allows the user to display data in a graphic form.

Harp said police are still investigating the incident.

Machine missing

A scheduling machine was taken from Hamilton Hall Sunday, OSU police said.

The machine, worth about $275, was stolen from an office on the third floor, Deputy Chief Richard Harp said.

The door was locked and there was no sign of forced entry. Police are still investigating the incident.

Police sting 'heels'

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — They thought they were getting free sneakers, but 69 criminal suspects got snookered instead when they showed up at a phony shoe store "for people on the run" and were arrested on outstanding warrants.

"I knew this was too good to be true!" one suspect exclaimed as he was handcuffed by sheriff's deputies during the two-day sting operation. "I've never won anything."

The Lancaster County Sheriff's Office, masquerading as an athletic footwear business, mailed 500 letters to people with outstanding arrest warrants offering a free pair of athletic shoes just for filling out a survey.

The suspects were invited to show up at the new Grabar Athletic Footwear store — "a new concept in shoe stores for people on the run."

The name was a takeoff on Gray Bar Hotel, a slang term for jail.

By 8 p.m. Saturday, little was left of Grabar. A small sign on the door read "Grabar Shoes closed. We'll catch you next time!"

Lancaster County Sheriff Ron Tussing said human nature helped net 69 suspects on 96 active arrest warrants Friday and Saturday.

The operation was successful because it appealed to people's greed, Tussing said. "Everybody wants to get something for nothing."

The warrants were for offenses ranging from traffic infractions to burglary, assault, drug possession and theft. The majority were for minor offenses.

After being taken to jail, suspects were required to post a bond or pay whatever fines or costs they owed. One man arrested for back child support had to pay $3,000.

"I knew this was too good to be true! I've never won anything."

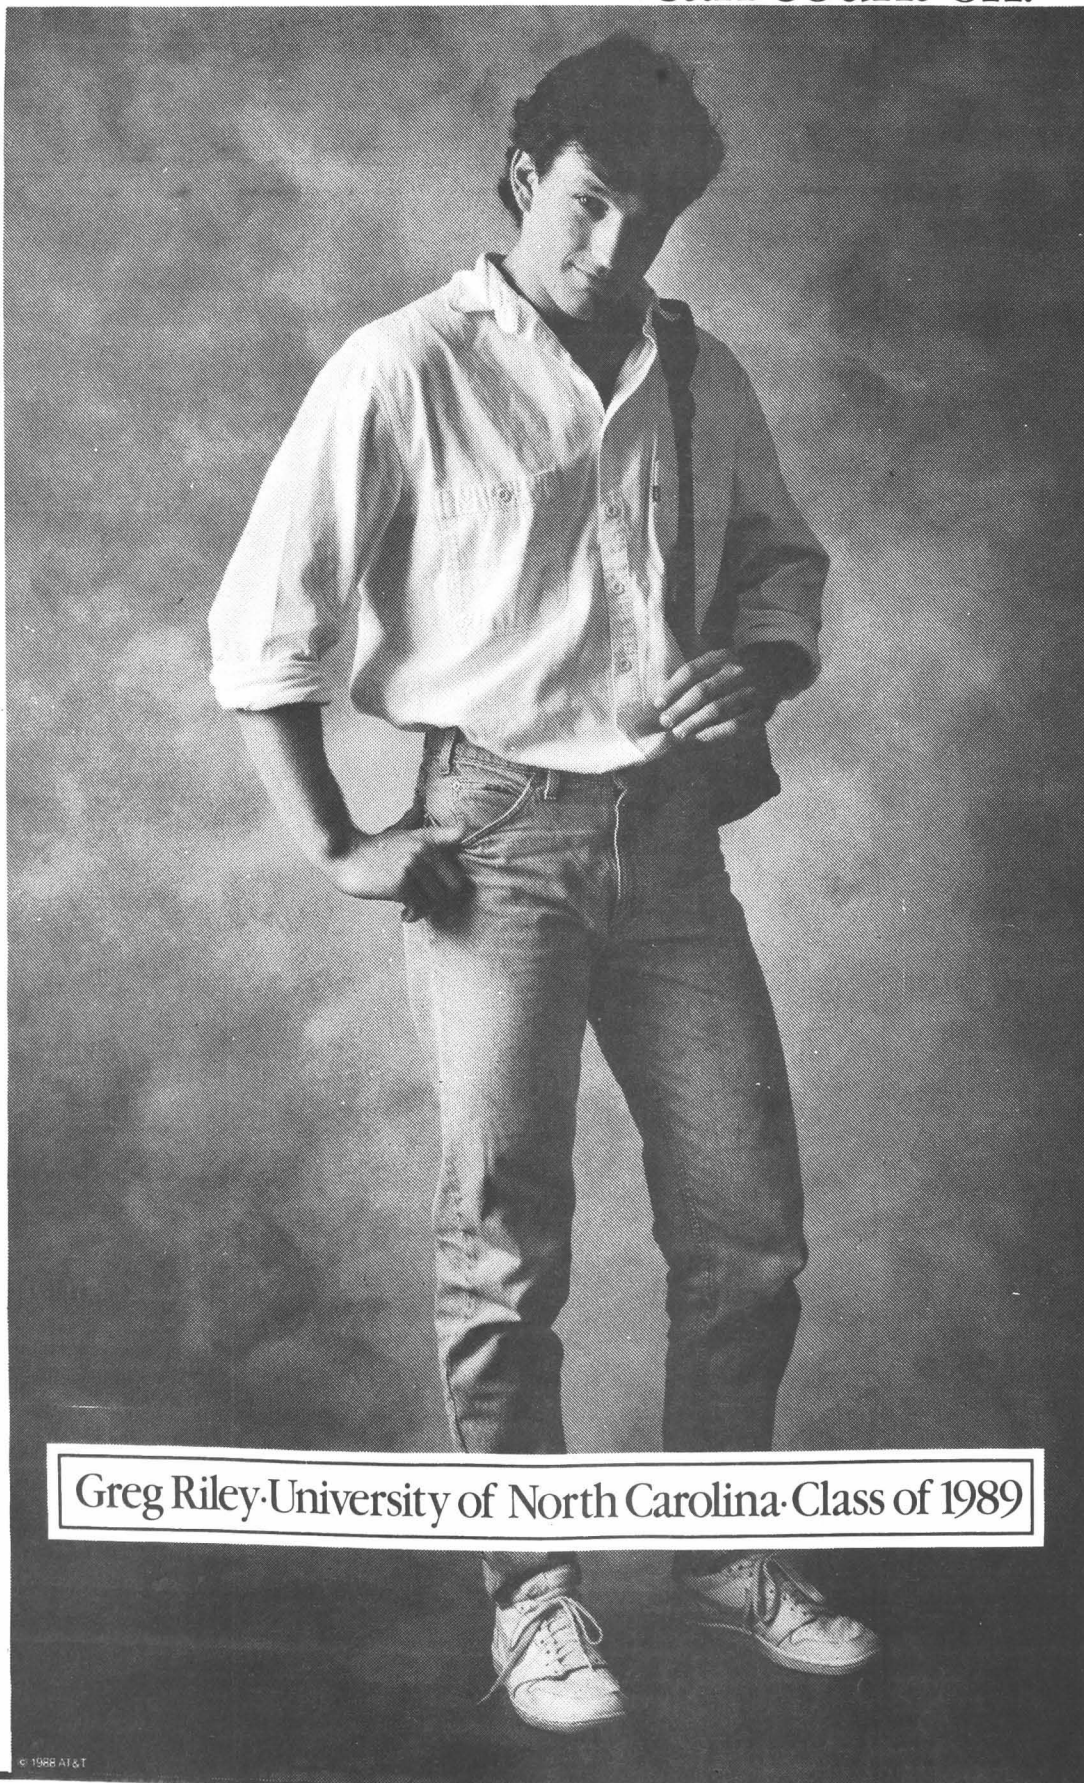

— unidentified suspect

Of the 500 letters mailed, about 120 were returned because of incorrect or outdated addresses, Tussing said. In similar operations around the country, a 10 percent arrest rate has been considered successful, he said.

Three people who were arrested on outstanding warrants also were arrested for marijuana possession at the "store," and one person was arrested for carrying a concealed weapon (brass knuckles).

"Some of these people have not committed real serious crimes, but they haven't lived up to their responsibilities to pay fines or whatever," Tussing said. "It sends the message that we're not going to ignore this stuff."

"I don't want a lot of hype. I just want something I can count on."
