GOP halts plan to end shutdown stalemate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defying President Clinton and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, stubborn House Republicans rebuffed a Senate bill Wednesday that would have immediately returned idled federal workers to their jobs.

Clinton called the partial government shutdown "an unnatural disaster born of a cynical political strategy" and said it would not make him retreat in budget talks.

Heeding Republican arguments that the shutdown is applying needed pressure on Clinton in budget talks, the House voted 206-167 against considering a Dole-authored measure that the Senate approved Tuesday that would reopen agencies. Reps. Connie Morella of Maryland and Tom Davis of Virginia, whose districts are heavy with federal employees, were the only Republicans to support the measure.

As the shutdown spilled into its record 19th day, Clinton declared that the House GOP's position would not affect his own in negotiations over balancing the budget by 2002.

"This shutdown is not speeding our talks. It is only casting a shadow over them," Clinton said at a brief news conference.

The fifth White House session in six days between Clinton and congressional leaders commenced Wednesday afternoon. Bargainers were still trying to resolve differences over how extensive to make tax cuts and how much savings to realize from Medicare, Medicaid and other social programs.

Like Clinton, Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., pointed his finger directly at the GOP-controlled House. He, Clinton and other Democrats pointedly praised Dole, R-Kan., for Senate passage of the measure.

"We now know exactly where the problem lies," he told reporters. "The problem lies with the House Republican leadership and their intransigence."

The vote on Dole's bill was forced by Minority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., who knew its defeat would focus attention on the House GOP.

Republicans blame the government's closure on Clinton's vetoes of spending bills. They vowed to continue it because they do not trust him to bargain seriously without it.

"The sentiment is we need to stay the course, try and get the president engaged, hold his feet to the fire without opening the government up," said freshman Rep. Ray LaHood, R-Ill., after House Republicans discussed the shutdown privately.

At their meeting, LaHood and other Republicans said, Majority Leader Richard Armitage, R-Texas — one of the budget bargainers — said he has not seen enough evidence that Clinton truly wants a budget-balancing deal to merit lifting the shutdown.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Budget Committee, said Clinton was being cynical by refusing to propose a balanced budget of his own while continuing to "pound Republicans for what they would do." He said Clinton is

"as much to blame for the closure of the government as the Republicans, House or Senate."

Dole's legislation would have immediately returned to work 280,000 furloughed employees through Jan. 12 and would have paid them and 480,000 other civil servants who have been working since Dec. 16 without salaries. The affected employees work at nine Cabinet departments and dozens of other agencies whose 1996 budgets have not been enacted.

The Dole measure's rejection by the House also underscored a year-long intraparty GOP clash over tactics. The Senate's more moderate Republicans have taken a more conciliatory approach to the administration. The more conservative House, spearheaded by its confrontational freshman class, has insisted on keeping the pressure on Clinton.

"It's a cave-in," House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, R-Texas, said of the Dole measure. "The House once again has to hold up the strength of balancing the budget."

Federal employees suffer from 19-day shutdown

By the Associated Press

The message on Janice Bowden's answering machine captures the frustration and worry of federal employees facing a growing pile of bills with no paycheck in sight:

"Hi, this is Janice: Loyal, faithful, unpaid federal employee. I'm either outside working on a cardboard house or I've gone out to rob a 7-Eleven. Leave a message and I'll get back to you, if I still have a phone."

Bowden, a radiation therapist at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Johnson City, Tenn., is one of thousands of government workers who have gone from helping the needy to becoming needy themselves.

In some places, banks are offering low- and no-interest loans to workers squeezed by the 19-day federal shutdown. Other banks are offering extensions. In Miami and Oklahoma City, VA hospitals set up food banks for their employees. In Portland, Ore., even the dead were suffering the effects.

Graves at the Willamette National Cemetery have become overgrown since 19 of the 43 grounds-crew workers were furloughed two weeks ago, and the remaining employees are straining to keep up with a dozen burials a day.

Norm A. Thompson visited the cemetery Tuesday and found his brother's plot sinking and grass growing over his marker.

"It was sickening to me to see graves in that condition," said Thompson, 79.

John Hernandez, a range management specialist for the Forest Service in Grand Junction, Colo., said the shutdown has been tough on his family.

"I have six children and when you go home for Christmas there's no presents under the tree and the bills keep coming in," said Hernandez, who was applying for an interest-free loan Wednesday.

Plan gives OSU control of capital funds

By Angela Miller
Lantern staff writer

The Ohio Board of Regents recently announced a plan to give state universities more control over capital spending. Part of the plan includes a recommendation that Ohio State receive $96.2 million for physical improvements.

The plan, submitted Dec. 15, is "essentially developing a decentralized system in which campuses get money through a formula," said Matthew Filipic, vice chancellor for administration at the Ohio Board of Regents.

Currently, universities present projects individually to the Board. The new plan will give universities a lump sum of funds to allocate.

The revised system will allocate money for physical improvements based on a formula considering factors such as enrollment, age of buildings, and sponsored research.

OSU will have to pay 10 percent of the amount it overspends back to the Board. The repayment will come from the school's operating funds.

As an incentive to use their money wisely, a school that does not spend all of its allocation will receive 10 percent of the difference added to its operations monies.

"There are two things going on, there is a formula allocation giving campuses resources and then there is a system of financial accountability for capital appropriations where essentially it will appear to the campus that they are paying the state's debt service on the bond sold to finance their improvements," Filipic said.

While it is too early to tell if the plan will meet its expectations, there are definite advantages for OSU, said William J. Shkurti, vice president of finance.

"We've been pretty good about doing our capital planning, so we have the capability of managing our own building projects probably better than most institutions," Shkurti said.

Wetlands park weather station vandalized during winter break

By Cathy Franz
Lantern staff writer

A break-in at the weather station of the Olen-tangy River Wetland Research Park, located on a 22-acre site north of campus, resulted in about $1,000 in damages over winter break, said Bill Mitsch, director of the park.

"It was wanton destruction. There was no reason to do such a thing," Mitsch said.

The motive behind the vandalism does not seem to be research sabotage, but was possibly the work of young vandals, said Ron Michalec, university police chief.

The individuals entered the weather station by prying a lock off the chain link fence surrounding the station, Mitsch said.

The station was damaged with a blunt object and a 300g water tank was thrown into the Olen-tangy River, Mitsch said.

The tank was retrieved from the river, he said. University Police are investigating the incident and looking at juvenile offenders because of the nature of the crime. No suspects have been named, Michalec said.

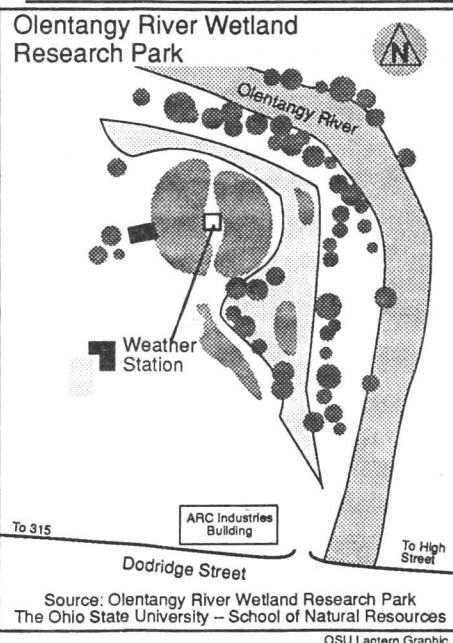

The police are trying to secure the weather station from future acts of vandalism, Michalec said.

The area is not under heavy observation, but there is routine monitoring of the area.

"We always know if something happened within 12 hours," Mitsch said.

The Wetland Research Park is a privately funded research area, so repair costs will come from donations, Mitsch said.

The park serves as a focal point for the research of constructed and restored wetlands and is used for education purposes by the School of Natural Resources.

Bosnia's civilians not protected by peace accord

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The top civilian peace official flew into Sarajevo on Wednesday and immediately dodged responsibility for protecting the city's civilians, saying it is a job for Bosnia's rival factions.

Up to 16 Bosnians who believed in the freedom of movement promised by the Dayton peace accord are now being held by Serbs after crossing voluntarily into Serb-held territory.

Their continued detention marred Wednesday's visit by U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry and dented NATO's optimism about compliance with the peace accord.

The Bosnian government has blamed the NATO-led force that is implementing the accord for not protecting the civilians. NATO officials, on the other hand, have suggested the detentions were a civilian law enforcement problem.

Carl Bildt, the top civilian administrator of the peace process, said Wednesday the 2,000-strong international police force that is supposed to be in place by Jan. 31 cannot force anybody in Bosnia to respect the accord.

"The responsibility is mainly on the parties. It's their peace agreement, not ours," Bildt said, "Freedom of movement will have to be guaranteed one way or another."

So far, only 100 of the international police are in Bosnia, and Bildt said it would take some time to recruit the force. Bildt lacks an office and a car to patrol Sarajevo. The police force itself is going to be unarmed.

The Bosnian government says up to 16 people have been detained since Dec. 22. Serbs said Wednesday they had released three people, but others were still under investigation.

Those detained apparently believed NATO assurances that roads and areas closed to them during 3 1/2 years of war were now open.

Bosnian Serb sources said two of the detainees were arrested while buying meat in the Serb-held Sarajevo suburb of Ilidza, while two others were held after going to check on their old apartments there. Serb refugees now living in the apartments summoned police, the sources said.

Most people in government-held Sarajevo still would not dare enter Ilidza, let alone stop to trade or inspect property. Serbs living there are angry and nervous because their areas are supposed to come under the control of the Muslim-led government by March. They vow to leave en masse if no concessions are made.

The dispute cast a cloud over the optimism exuded by Perry, who finally made it to Sarajevo after being stymied by weather and fighting during two previous attempts during the war.

"What has happened is fundamentally a law enforcement problem," Perry said of the detentions, after meeting Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic. He stressed, "I want to be clear that NATO and IFOR (the NATO Implementation Force) are not ignoring that problem."

Ilidza Mayor Nedjeljko Prstojevic claimed some of those detained had strayed from "the usual routes" or engaged in "illegal activities."

NATO officials, however, said there were no prescribed routes.

Prstojevic spoke after meeting with a senior British commander, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Walker, who emphasized that the peace agreement calls for full freedom of movement.

Perry said Adm. Leighton Smith, the NATO commander in charge of the 60,000-strong peace enforcement force, was looking into the disappearances.

Smith said the NATO forces "would continue to work to create a safe and secure environment for everyone and work to find out what exactly has happened," said his chief spokesman, Capt. Mark van Dyke.

Asked what measures NATO troops could take, van Dyke said, "We do have limits to our authority. We are not a police force."

Dance department ranks top in nation

By Kerry Borton
Lantern staff writer

Students and faculty of the Ohio State Department of Dance aimed high and danced their way to the top in 1995 according to the December issue of Dance Teacher Now magazine.

A nationwide poll of more than 100 dance administrators found Ohio State to have the number one ranked dance department in the nation.

The department heads were asked to rank their personal choices of the top 20 university dance departments based on factors including reputation, location and opportunity for employment after graduation.

OSU was ranked highest overall and received the highest scores for reputation. The number two spot went to Florida State University, followed by the University of Utah.

"We knew we had a good reputation, but we didn't know it was this good," said Vickie Blaine, Chair Emeritus of the Department of Dance, "It is an honor to be recognized by one's peers."

The OSU Department of Dance has been recognized by The New York Times and Dance magazine. The list of alumni and faculty accomplishments is long.

"Our faculty members are nationally known as artists and scholars," Blaine said.

Many of the faculty members are former professional dancers and a lot of alumni are successful choreographers, performers and dance teachers.

Dance department alumni have started distinguished dance companies including Bebe Miller of New York and Lynn Dally of Los Angeles.

Other alumni have performed in the dance companies of Twyla Tharp, Bill T. Jones and Paul Taylor.

The department is composed of approximately 75 undergraduate students and 30 graduate students. Most of the undergraduate students are recruited through an audition process in their senior year of high school. Students can also audition for enrollment while attending OSU.

"Our curriculum combines an in-depth study of contemporary dance in a technical, social and historical context with a strong general education curriculum," said Karen Bell, acting chairwoman of the Department of Dance.

The department offers programs in dance performance, choreography, lighting, notation, dance education and dance history.

Recognition of this type is very uncommon in the field of dance, Blaine said. The number one ranking came as a very pleasant surprise, she said.

Defense Secretary William Perry walks over a 2,000-foot pontoon bridge linking Bosnia and Croatia over the Sava River Wednesday

Perry tackles Bosnian problems

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Defense Secretary William Perry got muddy with the troops in Bosnia Wednesday, hailing their early progress but predicting a year in which problems rise as surely as the flooding Sava River.

"That's going to be the history of our time in Bosnia now. It's going to be dealing with one problem after another as these problems come up," Perry told reporters at the U.S. headquarters complex in northeastern Bosnia.

A problem high on Perry's agenda Wednesday was the detention of 16 Bosnian Muslims who ventured into Serb-held parts of the republic. In a Sarajevo meeting, Perry told Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic that IFOR, the NATO peace implementation force, would provide temporary military police help until a separate international police force can be established.

"IFOR is not ignoring this problem," Perry said later at his Tuzla news conference. But he said NATO troops are not in Bosnia to handle such policing activities.

Perry flew into Sarajevo in a military transport plane. But despite the entire NATO force at his disposal, he entered Bosnia a second time the Army way — on foot. Perry walked from Croatia into Bosnia over the 2,000-foot-long Army pontoon bridge spanning the flooded Sava River, Bosnia's northern border.

der. "Nothing better exemplifies the spirit of the United States Army," Perry said, pausing to shake hands and pose for pictures with soldiers on his way across the floating structure as long as the Brooklyn Bridge. He even stopped to re-enlist 1st Sgt. Charles Kidwell, 33, of Springfield, Ky., for four more years in the Army. "What we see as problems, weather problems, flooding problems, mine problems, they see as challenges," Perry said.

After a week's delay, completion of the bridge has boosted U.S. force strength 14 days into the deployment to an estimated 4,000 soldiers, an officer said. With convoys crossing the bridge today, that number was growing.

Idling just behind Perry and a battery of senior officers, Bradley fighting vehicles from the 1st Armored Division waited their turn to cross into Bosnia for a year's deployment.

Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, expressed pride in the "super team" who labored to build a route into Bosnia for what will eventually be a force of 20,000 American soldiers working alongside 40,000 from allied nations.

"You have to walk the bridge that we walked across the Sava today to recognize how good they are," Shalikashvili said.

Trial begins for Ohio man accused of bribing congressman

WASHINGTON (AP) — By 1990, Donald Lukens had lost any clout he had in Washington, the defense said Wednesday as the trial opened for an Ohio man accused of bribing the former congressman.

John Fitzpatrick of Middletown, Ohio, gave thousands of dollars to Lukens, but it was not bribe money, defense attorney Brian Shaughnessy told a U.S. District Court jury.

"Mr. Lukens had been an idol of Mr. Fitzpatrick for many years," Shaughnessy said. "He was kind of inclined to help Mr. Lukens when he was in trouble."

Some money went to Lukens after the Ohio Republican left Congress in disgrace, he added. "If you're going to bribe someone, it makes no sense whatsoever to bribe them by check," the defense attorney said.

Fitzpatrick, 40, maintained a poker face throughout a long day of pretrial wrangling and jury selection, consulting notes and nodding approval before each change in the lineup of 12 jurors and six alternates.

He is on trial for bribery, conspiracy and giving false information to grand jurors in a case that grew out of the Justice Department's probe of overdrafts written by members of Congress on accounts at the now-defunct House bank.

Thomas Eicher, chief of the House Bank Task Force, said the case displayed "a picture of fraud, corruption and cover-up."

Eicher told the jury about Fitzpatrick's position as president of the Cambridge Technical Institute, a chain of trade schools. Two lawsuits accused the school of misleading students and engaging in improper recruiting practices in order to grab federal aid payments for students who either dropped out or showed up for only one day of class.

More than 80 percent of Cambridge's federal student loans — worth more than $8 million — defaulted.

Eicher said Fitzpatrick helped create dummy records to try to fool auditors into thinking the school had all the students it received aid for, but when the task of manufacturing thousands of grade sheets, attendance sheets and other documents proved too great, he switched to "Plan B."

"Plan B was: Blame everything on Henry Whitesell (the school's owner, later found murdered in Cincinnati)," Eicher told the 10-woman, two-man jury.

"A month after the audit had started, he (Fitzpatrick) lays out Henry Whitesell's fraud and says he knew nothing about it until the auditors came."

Matthew 22:34-40 Hearing that Jesus had silenced the Sadducees, the Pharisees got together. One of them, an expert in the law, tested him with this question: "Teacher, which is the greatest commandment in the Law?" Jesus replied: "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind.' This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like it: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.' All the Law and the Prophets hang on these two commandments." (NIV)

John 15:9-12 As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full. This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

The temperature dropped Tuesday as blizzard-like conditions covered Columbus.

Police use sensors to locate gunfire source

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Police are conducting the first tests of a high-tech weapon against random gunfire — a computerized sensing system that quickly pinpoints the source of shots.

"If you can give an officer an intersection, and that officer can get there in a minute or so, you have a really good chance of catching the person who's doing the shooting," police Sgt. Frank Wilkins said Wednesday.

The city 25 miles south of San Francisco is believed to be the first in the nation to test such a system, which uses microphone-like sensors and a computer to send police to the right spot. Tests began two weeks ago in a one-square-mile area that has been plagued by crime.

"The testing has been very successful," said Wilkins, who coordinates the program. "It had us within 60 feet."

The Urban Gunshot Location System is part of the city's overall effort to curb shootings, particularly random gunfire. It decided to pay the system's developer, Los Altos-based Trilon Technology, $25,000 to test the sensors after leaders in a bullet-ridden part of town appealed for help.

The test uses five acoustic sensors mounted on telephone poles and rooftops, four in each corner of the area and one in the middle. A computer back at police headquarters uses the data from the sensors to find the source of the gunfire. Then it shows the spot on a highly detailed map.

The system is set to detect sounds within a certain decibel range common to gunfire. Fireworks and car backfire generally fall in different ranges, but if they fall within the range the system is set for, they will be treated as gunfire.

No one needs to report the gunfire; the system computer alerts the police dispatcher. Police say that a quick alert gives them an edge in finding shooters and witnesses and getting help to victims.

"It's a good feeling that ... we're finally seeing some positive results," community activist Hector Guerrero said. "If (the system) works as well as we expect it to, it could help other cities, too."

Ohio State's national rankings extend beyond its football program. The strength of several academic programs are attracting students from all over the world to OSU.

Gulnur Arabaci, a graduate student in chemistry from Turkey, said she chose OSU as her study destination primarily because of OSU's good graduate school rankings in its chemistry program.

OSU's ranking in engineering was a useful and "decisive factor" in choosing the school, said Chun-sung Chen, a graduate student in industrial, welding and systems engineering from Taiwan.

Many foreign students do not get much information on American educational systems, he said.

Both Chen and Arabaci said they got ranking information from The Gourman Report.

The Gourman Report is a qualitative evaluation report about American higher education institutions and international institutions.

According to the 1993 Gourman

Report, OSU was ranked 28th in the evaluation of the top 50 graduate schools in the United States. OSU got a 4.57 score on the 5.0 scale.

In addition, in the rating of research libraries, OSU got a 4.56 score and was rated 16th among 41 institutions with scores in the 4.0-5.0 range.

Rong Qi, a graduate student in economics from China, said she considers the scholarship factor first followed by the school's academic reputation.

Among the three schools that provided her scholarship, OSU has the best academic reputation, Qi said.

Sang-chul Park, a graduate student in industrial, welding and systems engineering from Korea, said OSU provides the specialization that he is interested in.

"As far as I know, OSU is the only higher education institution in America that offers a welding engineering program," Park said.

Tomoko Watanabe, a graduate student in business education from Japan, said when she visited her friend living in Columbus three years ago, she visited OSU and was impressed by the library equipment, professors and its huge campus.

OSU is the only school to which she applied, Watanabe said.

Paramita Sastrosatomo, a senior majoring in interpersonal and organizational communication from Indonesia, said her stay in Ohio as an exchange student in high school made her familiar with this environment.

"I want to stay in an environment that I am familiar with and go to a public university, so I chose OSU," Sastrosatomo said.

The population of international students has increased steadily from 2,897 in 1989 (5 percent of total student enrollment), to 3,827 in 1995 (7 percent of total student enrollment), according to a study released by the OSU Office of International Education. The data is based on the enrollment in every Autumn Quarter from 1989 to 1995.

"The reasons that international students chose OSU as their study destination may be rich and diverse," said Kevin Harty, assistant director at the Office of International Education. "The most important is that they can get a good education quality, knowledge in their disciplines and a positive American experience."

Drivers ride on cheap side

STERLING, Va. (AP) — Three months after America's first privately built toll road in more than 150 years opened, the 14-mile highway is still the road less traveled.

The Dulles Greenway outside Washington is drawing only a third of the traffic its backers expected. The millionaire financier behind the project has laid off about 30 percent of his toll collectors, shelved plans to raise the $1.75 one-way toll and scheduled pep rallies to drum up drivers.

"People are balking at paying that high toll," said John Undeland, spokesman for the American Automobile Association's Washington chapter.

The road runs from Leesburg, 40 miles west of the nation's capital, to Washington's Dulles International Airport. It cuts through pastures with vistas of the Blue Ridge foothills and goes past new subdivisions and office plazas.

The toll road cuts a rush-hour drive of an hour or more down to about 20 minutes. But the slower route is free.

Toll road director Michael R. Crane, whose partnership stands to lose as much as $82 million if the road flops, is working with his creditors — chiefly three major insurance companies — in hopes of renegotiating loan terms or securing new financing.

"When there is $326 million at stake, you have lots of meetings," Crane said in an interview in his office near the entrance to the wide, squeaky-clean highway.

Crane acknowledged he is having problems convincing people that the time they save on his road is worth the money. He insists the Greenway is just an idea ahead of its time and the paying public will catch up.

He may not have much time to wait. If the toll road operators don't make up a shortfall in toll receipts — Crane won't say how much the road is losing or expected to take in — the creditors could take control later this year.

Lisa Sharpe, who works at a bank in Washington, said she used the road twice in the first week it was open, when the operators offered a free ride to entice customers. She went back to her old route into the city the day the Greenway tolls took effect.

"Yes, it did save me some time. But no, it was not worth it," Ms. Sharpe said. "Maybe at some point I would feel differently, but for me paying $2 or whatever it just seems like a luxury."

The AAA's Undeland noted that Washington drivers are unused to tolls. A publicly built toll road east of Dulles Airport is the region's only other toll highway.

"This is not New York City, where people are used to paying a toll every time you go over a bridge," Undeland said.

The Dulles Greenway operators also miscalculated when they bet that drivers would rather pay one larger toll up front to drive on both the Greenway and the Dulles Toll Road, Undeland said.

"The alternative would be making two stops to pay two tolls, but the effect was to make the Greenway price seem a lot higher," he said. Drivers on the Greenway who continue on to the Dulles Toll Road pay a total of $2.10.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, leaves the Chamber of Commerce political forum breakfast at the Promises To Keep restaurant in Derry, N.H.

Senator stops at voters' homes on campaign trail

LACONIA, N.H. (AP) — Sitting down to kitchen tables in homes all around New Hampshire, Phil Gramm is wooing Republican voters two by two.

At this rate, it'll take a long time to convince them all that he's the man for the White House.

With New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation presidential primary just seven weeks away, the Texas senator is trying to break out of single-digit poll standings and gain ground on GOP front-runner Bob Dole.

Rather than pack rallies with hundreds of poster-hoisting supporters, Gramm is meeting with Republicans two at a time, in their homes and at small businesses.

"I kept saying, 'Why us? We're only two people,'" print-shop owner John Bancroft said after the candidate spent a half-hour talking with him and his wife, Carolyn, in Laconia.

"A big conglomerate or something I could see, but not us," said Bancroft, adding that the personal visit had moved him from undecided to "leaning Gramm."

Gramm hopes such visits will have a broader impact as well. Reporters were invited in to chronicle the entire conversation at a folding table in Bancroft's shop.

Likewise later that evening, when Gramm sat down with Tara and Roland Cote and two fidgety children at their kitchen table in Keene.

At both events, Gramm promised a balanced federal budget would yield lower interest rates, saving the Cotes and the Bancrofts $1,760 a year on a 30-year home mortgage.

"Wow. We just bought a home and that would help. We could build a new garage," Mrs. Bancroft said.

"We could put a new roof on the house," said Mrs. Cote, a dental hygienist.

Her husband, a cellular phone salesman, later nodded in approval. "He (Gramm) will never get enough people this way, in my book, but it's a nice way to go."

Gramm's kitchen-table strategy is a take-off on an anecdote that is a staple of his campaign speech. He often reminisces about sitting around the kitchen table with his mother and older brother to discuss the family's monthly bills.

Appetite suppressor works in rats may help people

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have identified a powerful appetite suppressor in the brain, a substance that in rats causes them to eat as much as 95 percent less by making them feel full.

It may be the most potent natural appetite suppressor yet identified in rats, said Dr. Stephen Bloom, a professor of endocrinology at the Royal Postgraduate Medical School in London and a researcher at London's Hammersmith Hospital.

Scientists might need only two years or so to develop a pill for human testing as a way to fight obesity, he said.

The substance is called glucagon-like peptide-1, or GLP-1. Scientists knew it existed in the brains of mammals, but they didn't know what it did, Bloom said.

The new work suggests it is a key part of the brain's regulation of food intake. GLP-1 and the brain-cell structures it acts on are found in a part of the brain called the hypothalamus, which regulates appetite and other basic behavior.

While the substance has been tested only in the rats, GLP-1 is found in the hypothalamus of people and it acts on similar structures, so Bloom said he is highly certain that GLP-1 has the same role in people.

In a study reported in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature, Bloom and his colleagues injected GLP-1 into the brains of rats. In animals that hadn't eaten in 24 hours, the injections reduced food intake by up to 95 percent, depending on the dosage.

Rats injected with GLP-1 "behaved like any animal does after it has a meal," Bloom said. "It gets sleepy, it grooms itself, it doesn't move around so much." That shows GLP-1 was cutting appetite by making the rats feel full rather than sick, he said.

Scientists also tested a substance that blocks the effect of GLP-1. The blocker more than doubled food intake in rats that were full already, suggesting that it was interfering with the rats' GLP-1 stop-eating signals.

In starving rats, the blocker had no effect, presumably because the hungry rats had no GLP-1 signal to be blocked.

Bloom said the researchers plan to study GLP-1's relationship to the recently discovered substance leptin, another signaler of satiety, which is created by fat cells and acts on the brain. One question is whether leptin does its job by turning on production of GLP-1 in the brain, Bloom said.

To turn the GLP-1 research into a pill for people, scientists might look for a substance that acts like GLP-1 but can reach the brain after being taken by mouth, he said.

Another possibility would be to devise a drug that slows the natural breakdown of GLP-1 so that it acts longer than normal, he said. That drug would be effective only if a person already is full and so has the GLP-1 signal.

Such a drug might make fat people eat less but not help anorexics starve themselves, he said.

Timothy Moran of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, who studies the body's regulation of appetite, said Bloom's study contains convincing evidence that GLP-1 plays a role in controlling food intake. Such studies in rats have generally been shown to apply to people, he said.

At least four other kinds of peptides — substances built up from amino acids — also serve as the body's appetite-suppressing signals, he said.

As with these other peptides, it's too soon to tell whether the GLP-1 research can lead to a useful weight-loss drug, he said.

High blood pressure can lead to kidney failure

Study shows even modestly high pressure triples risk

BOSTON (AP) — Even a little high blood pressure can be bad for the kidneys.

High blood pressure, or hypertension, is already recognized as a major underlying cause of heart attacks and strokes. While severe high blood pressure is known to cause kidney failure, doctors have been less certain about the effect of modest cases on the kidneys.

Now, a major study begun in the 1970s shows that mildly high blood pressure triples the usual risk of kidney failure.

Nearly 200,000 Americans must undergo dialysis or transplants because their kidneys have failed. About one-quarter of these people die of complications annually.

Dr. Michael J. Klag and colleagues from Johns Hopkins University followed the health of 332,544 men for 16 years. During that time, 814 of them lost use of their kidneys.

Blood pressure is generally considered healthy if it is below 120 over 80. When blood pressure is this low, the chance of kidney failure is slim. About five in 100,000 will develop this disease. The latest study shows that the risk rises as blood pressure goes up.

Blood pressure is considered to be mildly elevated if the systolic pressure — the first and larger of the two numbers — is between 140 and 159, and the diastolic pressure is between 90 and 99. Men with blood pressure this high are three times more likely than men with optimal blood pressure to suffer kidney failure.

For those with moderate hypertension — up to 179 over 109 — the risk is six times higher. With severe hypertension — up to 209 over 119 — it is 11 times higher. Hypertension higher than this is considered very severe, and it carries a 22 times higher risk of kidney failure.

The research was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Museum throws art parties

By Tricia Janusz
Lantern arts writer

The Columbus Museum of Art staff is excited because tonight is the first Thursday of the month.

First Thursday is an event run by the museum at 480 E. Broad St. The event is from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. and includes music, art, hors d'oeuvres and drinks.

The museum has an extra reason for excitement because it is celebrating the event's one year anniversary.

The staff pondered the idea of this event for a while and when new director Irvin Lippman joined the museum in September 1994, immediately gave the "go ahead," said Jennifer Keefe, head of media relations for the museum.

"The idea is that we want people to come when they are young," Keefe said. "You don't have to have kids or be retired to enjoy the museum."

"I have never been to the museum because it seemed so prestigious, but an event like this seems down to earth...fun," said Dene Dixon, a senior majoring in consumer affairs.

During the nonsummer months First Thursday brought in an average of 1,500 to 2,000 people each month. In the summer, when the sculpture garden is open, between 2,000 and 3,000 people attended the event, Keefe said.

Although admission and parking are free, donations are welcomed. Parking is available behind the museum and at State Auto Insurance Company, adjacent to the museum.

"The event has been a booming success," Keefe said. "Other museums do events similar to this, but ours has just skyrocketed."

Brian Young, assistant registrar, views the event from two different angles. "From a museum standpoint it is a chance to make the museum more accessible and a chance for younger people to enjoy themselves here and hopefully become the future supporters of the museum," Young said. "It's also a great place to meet people."

The entire museum is available to view tonight, but it is the last chance to see an exhibit titled "The Music Box Project." This exhibit includes 17 contemporary music boxes created by different artists. One display is a guitar with 12 music boxes built inside. The piece is designed so that the guitar can be played along with the music boxes.

Another display was created by Aminah Robinson, the artist who created the murals at The Columbus Metropolitan Library downtown. Her music box is made from 8-foot-tall organ pipes painted in bright colors with iron headresses.

"It is a light, whimsical and more fun exhibit compared to some of our other exhibits," Young said. "It joins along with the fun of the music boxes and it questions what we come to think of as the traditional music box."

Tonight's musical entertainment is the blues and soul music of Mighty R and the Velvet King Snakes.

"This event is a great alternative to the bar scene: no smoke-filled rooms or beer-spilled floors," Keefe said. "It is a fun time to come hang out with your friends, have a few drinks and enjoy the art."

Patrons sip and sing at piano bar

By Jennifer Bowell
Lantern arts writer

Howl at the Moon Saloon is the only dueling piano, sing-along bar in Columbus.

Located in the Brewery District at 450 S. Front St., Howl at the Moon features a 56-foot-long bar, twin Baldwin baby grand pianos, and a custom sound system.

Mari Odell, office and sales manager, said Howl at the Moon is different from other bars because the guests come to listen to the piano players and become part of the show by singing along with familiar songs and show tunes.

Last Friday's show started at 5 p.m. and the crowd got involved immediately by singing along to the theme song from the Brady Bunch and "Great Balls of Fire."

The song selection varies from old show tunes to more recent hits, with the majority of songs being classic rock 'n' roll, Odell said.

In order to create a better and more exciting environment, the entertainers, or staff members perform "bits", most of which are very funny, and some are a little risqué, Odell said.

During Friday night's show, members of the audience, as well as staff members, joined the pianists up on stage as they sang and danced to the "Hokey Pokey."

Pianist Jeff Ross said the primary way of choosing which songs to play comes from the audience's requests, often written on napkins. They also play songs they think the audience would enjoy when they run out of requests, Ross said.

There are a total of six pianists. Two play at a time for one to two hour shifts, Odell said.

"The piano players must be able to sing and play 90 songs in order to play at Howl at the Moon," Odell said. "It's not an easy thing to do."

Howl at the Moon seemed to be a very upbeat, fun place that contained a lot of noise and audience participation with the entertainers.

Howl at the Moon thrives on audience participation, so if singing along with classic rock 'n' roll tunes, or dancing to the dreadful "Chicken Dance," which is done at weddings, doesn't seem very appealing, this bar is not for you.

Howl at the Moon attracts people between the ages of 19 to 81, depending on what day of the week it is, Odell said.

Tuesday is "College Night," when admission is free for ages 19 and up, and select drafts and shots are $1 with a college I.D., Odell said.

Howl at the Moon offers other drink specials Wednesday through Saturday, as well as a free buffet Thursdays and Fridays during happy hour, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m., Odell said.

Howl at the Moon is closed on Sundays and Mondays, unless it is rented out for special parties or activities, Odell said.

There are six Howl at the Moon Saloons in the United States, all of which are owned by Jimmy Bernstein, Odell said.

Howl at the Moon is open Tuesdays and Wednesdays, 7 p.m. to 2 a.m., and Thursdays through Saturdays, 5 p.m. to 2 a.m., Odell said.

Admission is $2 on Wednesdays and Thursdays and $3 on Fridays and Saturdays, Odell said.

Artist puts his brush to bottle

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The effervescent pop of champagne corks, followed by the flow of fizzy foam in flutes is for many the fine art of enjoyment during times of merriment and celebration.

Add a label designed by Roy Lichtenstein, and it is fine art, period.

"Champagne is made for seduction," said Claude Taittinger, who asked Lichtenstein to design a 1985 limited-edition bottle for the Taittinger house. "Champagne deserves a subtle covering."

Artists have been applying their special touch to wine bottles for many years, on anything from the great claret Mouton Rothschild to the less-than-great Vino della Pace.

The best is on view in the "Art in Wine" exhibit at the Brussels Credit Communal gallery until March 10.

Lichtenstein's trademark benday dots seem made for frothy champagne. But other artists, from Pablo Picasso to movie director John Huston, haven't been kept back from designing world-famous labels.

The label-art craze goes back to the inventive French winemaker who needed a special touch to introduce a wine-marketing innovation in 1924 — the "mise en bouteilles au chateau" or chateau-bottled wines.

Baron Philippe de Rothschild decided to bottle the harvest himself that year instead of turning it over to wine merchants and needed a special label to make sure it stood out.

He turned to cubist designer Jean Carlu, who incorporated the de Rothschild's trademark ram-and-arrows symbol into a delightfully stylized design.

"It probably was too much ahead of its time," said the baron's daughter, Philippine de Rothschild. The label was discontinued after two years, but the idea of custom-designed labels lived on.

Philippe de Rothschild turned to a little-known artist, Philippe Julian, to create the 1945 label incorporating the V-sign for the Allied victory in World War II. "It was an immediate success," Philippine said.

Another watershed year was 1955, when cubist Georges Braque offered his services. He started a series of Rothschild labels which now look like a who's-who of contemporary art: Salvador Dali, Henry Moore, Marc Chagall, Picasso, Robert Motherwell, Andy Warhol, Keith Haring, Georg Baselitz and Francis Bacon.

None of the artists were paid cash for their contributions, but each received an undisclosed number of cases of the superb wines.

Mouton Rothschild has become a classic series and a trendsetter.

"Philippe de Rothschild preceded me," said Taittinger. "I decided to follow him."

The tradition puts lovers of art and wine in a bind.

Taittinger bottles are fully covered in the design, and breaking the cap means damaging the art. "Consuming is destroying," said Taittinger.

Since Victor Vasarely designed the 1978 bottle, the price has soared 50-fold and continues to climb every time someone succumbs to the temptation.

Los Angeles native Peter Goldstein once owned a 1983 Taittinger bottle designed by Portuguese artist Vieira da Silva — only to drink it.

"It was just another bottle of champagne to me," he said. "Now I know the sad truth." The bottle now holds flowers in his Brussels apartment.

In California, Clos Pegase stands out with elegant labels, featuring the likes of Max Ernst. The love of art is also visible in its Napa Valley winery, which is designed by post-modern architect Michael Graves.

Records don't lie — Cooper has struggled late in the season

By David Fong
Lantersports editor

Football coaching has always been a tricky proposition. It is a profession with little job security, consistently high expectations — and a coach is only as good (or bad) as his last game.

upset Penn State 24-6 in one of the biggest wins in Cooper's career up to this point. Opinion begins to tilt in Cooper's favor.

• Nov. 1993 — Cooper takes an undefeated team into Ann Arbor, only to get mugged by Michigan, 28-0. OSU then squeaks by BYU in the Holiday Bowl to give Cooper his first shrines being erected in Cooper's honor around Columbus run rampant.

• Nov. 1995 — Once again, Cooper brings his Buckeyes into Ann Arbor undefeated, only to lose a Rose Bowl berth and a shot at the national title to the Wolverines. One month later, OSU loses to Tennessee in the Citrus Bowl in Orlando, Fla. Fans flood the airwaves of sports call-in shows and send reams of letters to the editor.

OSU football fans sure are fickle. "I'm obviously very disappointed," Cooper said after the most recent loss to Michigan. "I don't know if I've ever been as disappointed as I am right now."

Cooper could very well have been talking about his end of the season performance just about every year.

Under Cooper, the Buckeyes are 1-6-1 against Michigan, and 1-6 in bowl games. In all other games under Cooper, the Buckeyes are 54-14-3. This was the first time the Buckeyes have finished in the top ten in the AP final poll under Cooper, despite being in the top ten going into the final two games of the season at least three times.

Perhaps part of the problem is centered around the fact that the Buckeyes are playing longer seasons than they ever have before. OSU plays at least 12 games every season (provided they make it to a bowl game — which they have done for the past seven years), and the last two years, they have played in a pre-season game which has expanded the schedule to 13 games.

By contrast, legendary OSU coach Woody Hayes — to whom every OSU coach will inevitably be compared — only played more than 10 games in the last seven years of his career. In those seven years, Hayes held a modest 3-3-1 record

Associated Press

John Cooper is 1-6-1 against Michigan and 1-6 in bowl games as coach at Ohio State.

against Michigan and a 2-5 record in bowl games. However, it should also be noted that Hayes also took the Buckeyes to four Rose Bowls in that stretch, something Cooper has yet to do with his Buckeyes.

Cooper also has to deal with players leaving school early to enter the NFL draft, something Hayes didn't have in his era. For example, try to imagine this year's squad with all of its current players — along with Dan Wilkinson, Korey Stringer, Lorenzo Styles and Craig Powell. All of these players would have been playing for OSU had they used up all of their eligibility. That would have been four first-round NFL draft picks to go along with a team that went 11-2 without them.

"The expectations never change, even when you lose the talent," Cooper is often fond of saying.

• Oct. 1993 — Set against a snowy backdrop, the Buckeyes bowl victory. Once again, fans begin to call for the beleaguered coach's head.

• Nov. 1994 — Amid rumors that another loss to Michigan would cost Cooper his job, OSU beats Michigan for the first time under Cooper, and fans immediately begin calling for a contract extension for him.

• Sept. 1995 — OSU defeats Notre Dame in the first meeting between the two teams in sixty years. One week later, the Buckeyes beat Penn State, a team they lost to 63-14 one year earlier. Rumors of Money isn't everything — increased spending didn't make Bengals a winner

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals spent more money in 1995 than nine NFL playoff teams. But they still wound up with a losing record, for the fifth consecutive year.

Bengals owner and president Mike Brown is irked with the Dallas Cowboys for what he said is abuse of the salary-cap concept that is supposed to put NFL teams in large and small markets on a more equal footing.

Dalls paid $62.5 million to players in 1995. That is more money than the Bengals made, Brown said.

"All I'll say is it's more than we earned," said Brown, whose team operates in one of the NFL's smallest markets. "It's wrong. It's a system we have to make work on an equitable basis for everyone."

According to an NFL Players Association salary survey, Cincinnati's 1995 payout of $43.8 million ranked ninth in the league. That included the $7.1 million signing bonus Cincinnati paid to No. 1 draft choice Ki-Jana Carter, the running back whose knee injury during the preseason cost him the 1995 season.

A team's payout figure is derived by adding 1995 salaries to the total paid out in signing bonuses. The Bengals spent $8 million more than the $35.6 million salary cap, counting prorated bonuses.

"That's an eye opener," said Ralph Cindrich, the agent for Bengals quarterback Jeff Blake who negotiated a long-term deal between Blake and the Bengals last season.

"There's only one way to compete in free agency and that's to come up with the signing bonus," Cindrich said. "The Bengals haven't wanted to front-load those contracts, but that's the main attraction to free agents."

Bonuses don't always mean that teams make the playoffs. The Cleveland Browns ($23.7 million), Carolina and New England ($21.9 million) and Jacksonville ($21.3 million) were the closest teams to Dallas' $40.5 million in signing bonuses, and none of the four made the playoffs.

Miami, No. 5 among bonus payers at $20.1 million, was knocked out in the first round.

Brown said the Cowboys abused the system by rolling much of their 1995 bonuses into uncapped years to get around the cap. But he also blamed himself for paying Carter and defensive tackle Dan Wilkinson $12 million in upfront bonuses as the last two No. 1 picks in the NFL draft.

"I'm the guy who did it. The reason they're paid so highly is the public relations pressure," said Brown, who has been criticized as cheap for not matching the money other teams pay to top players. "You feel it very much. You want to do what you can to get the team up and running."

Ohio State loses to Penn State, 72-69

Jason Paquet
Lantern sports writer

Ohio State returned to the friendly confines of St. John Arena last night for the opening of the Big Ten portion of the season against the Nittany Lions of Penn State.

And a cold welcoming it was after the long road trip to Wyoming as they dropped a close one to Penn State 72-69.

The Nittany Lions (10-0, 1-0) extended their unbeaten streak for the season to ten and their win streak over the Bucks (7-3, 0-1) to three. The streak was propelled by the three point shooting of Pete Lisicky (coming into the game shooting at a 61.2 clip from beyond the arc), Dan Earl's passing and strong defense from Calvin Booth, a graduate from Groveport High School in Columbus.

The Bucks played catch-up for most of the night. They brought the score within two at the break when Stringer drove the lane and laid it in with thirty seconds remaining.

Earlier in the half Coleman nailed a trey off of Damon Stringer's pass to pull within one. Stringer and Coleman hooked up again to put the Bucks up 14-13 with just over thirteen minutes to play.

OSU started their run at Penn State just before the half when Tate, igniting the crowd, jammed it home after tearing the ball from a mob.

"The crowd really picked us up," said guard Stringer.

Earl came out as an offensive force for the Lions in the first half, going 5-for-5 from the field.

Penn State pulled ahead of the Buckeyes late in the second half, with a 9-2 run lengthening their lead 57-47 at the 8:20 mark.

But OSU trimmed the lead down to six with 5:40 left in the game after Coleman completed a four point play by hitting a three-pointer and making his free throw after he was fouled on the play.

"We have a lot of great three point shooters, Rick Yudt hit a couple" Stringer said.

Coleman pulled the Bucks within two when he layed it in with 14 seconds left to go, but Earl was fouled at the other end of the floor on the inbound pass.

Freshman center Jermaine Tate said "It's (the Big 10) a lot more physical than pre-conference. It's going to be a lot harder going on the road (against Indiana next Saturday). We're going to have to step it up."

Ohio State freshman Jason Singleton dives for a loose ball during the first half of OSU's loss to Penn State Wednesday at St. John Arena.

Cleveland may have lost Price, but Brandon's play has them talking playoffs

CLEVELAND (AP) — Looking at the numbers, you'd swear they belong to Mark Price.

The 19.3 points per game. The 46 percent shooting from 3-point range. The 67 consecutive free throws made.

But the Cleveland Cavaliers' starting point guard this year is Terrell Brandon, and he's helping them turn what should have been a rebuilding season into a credible run at a playoff spot.

"Anytime you trade Hot Rod Williams and Mark Price, and you don't have Brad Daugherty in your lineup—it's not the old Cavaliers people are used to seeing," Brandon said Wednesday. "This is a whole new team. It looks more like a rebuilding team. We accepted that."

"But we knew that we have good players, guys with great character, guys who work extremely hard in practice."

It became apparent last season that Brandon was ready to run his own team. After three seasons as Price's backup, he started 41 games in 1994-95 while Price was bothered by a series of injuries, and he responded with an average of 13.3 points (third on the team) and 5.4 assists (second on the team).

The season ended ominously for Brandon.

Terrell Brandon

ple of feet.

"I've learned patience," Brandon said. "I can take my time, knowing that I'll get a substantial amount of minutes every night. I don't have to be in a rush to score. My job as a point guard is to make everybody else happy. When they're struggling, then I have to create something for myself."

Brandon skipped his senior year at Oregon after averaging 26.6 points as a junior, and the Cavs — who had missed the playoffs in 1990-91 after Price blew out his knee early in the season — chose Brandon with the 11th overall pick in the 1991 draft.

Price came back better than ever the next season, though, so Brandon had to spend a lot of time watching from the bench. Instead of griping about it, he used the time constructively.

"I don't regret anything about it," Brandon said. "I just tried to make the most of the minutes I received. Mark is a great, great player. Anytime you have a Dream Team player, an All-Star, in front of you, there's not much you can say. A lot of the success I've had so far comes from watching an All-Star. I think it was good for me."

Now, the Cavs are reaping the benefits. With Brandon and backcourt mate Bobby Phillips playing far above expectations, Cleveland has won 16 times in 21 games since it opened the season with seven consecutive losses.

With addition of North Korea, 1996 Olympic games in Atlanta now full LONDON (AP) — What if they gave an Olympics and everybody came? That's just what will happen in Atlanta next July.

A historic 100 percent turnout was assured Wednesday when North Korea said it would send a team to the Centennial Games.

Of the 197 nations invited by the International Olympic Committee to compete in Atlanta, North Korea had been the only one failing to reply.

But after weeks of diplomatic efforts by the IOC and former President Jimmy Carter, the North Koreans sent late word that they would take part after all.

The acceptance came in a letter to IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch from the president of the North Korean national Olympic committee, Myong Chol Park.

It marks the first time in the postwar era that all nations affiliated to the IOC have agreed to compete in the Olympics — a triumph for a sporting spectacle that was marred by political tensions and the boycotts of the 1976, 1980 and 1984 Games.

"This is wonderful news," IOC director general Francois Carrard said. "We are extremely pleased. Our objective has always been to gather the youth of the world. To reach this goal for the Centennial Games in the United States is very important."

The participation of 197 countries in Atlanta shatters the previous record of 169 set at the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona. In addition to North Korea, the field includes other international pariahs such as Iran, Iraq and Libya.

"That's thrilling," said Billy Payne, president of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games. "It's extremely important, it being the centennial. We are just excited as we can be that every single invited country is going to be here for the Games."

North Korea boycotted the 1984 and 1988 Olympics but competed at the 1992 Barcelona Games. The Atlanta Olympics will mark the 100th anniversary of the modern Games.

"Depending on the location of the Games, it can be difficult to have all the countries participating," Carrard said by telephone from IOC headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland. "Barcelona was a less sensitive place. So to have all the countries competing in the United States is a sign of great progress."

North Korea and Afghanistan were the only countries failing to reply to the IOC invitations by the original Nov. 15 deadline. Afghanistan sent its acceptance last month, a delay attributed by the IOC to "communications problems."

Samaranch contacted the North Korean Olympic committee on Dec. 18 to renew the invitation.

Two days later, the Koreans replied they were still considering the matter, Carrard said.

In addition, Carter wrote to the nominal head of state in North Korea, Kim Jong-il, and personally invited the country to send a team to Atlanta.

Carrard said he was unaware whether Carter's initiative had played any role in the North Koreans' decision.

Wednesday's letter from the Olympic committee offered no explanation for the delay, he said.

Carrie Harmon, a spokeswoman for Carter, said the former president was traveling and had not received any independent confirmation about the North Koreans.

"We are very pleased by the IOC announcement," she said.

After helping to open lines of communication between North Korea and the IOC, Carter "encouraged North Korea to respond through the normal channels," Harmon said.

Carrard said the North Koreans asked the IOC for help in ensuring their athletes qualified to compete in gymnastics, judo, shooting, track and field and weightlifting.

North Korea has not sent teams to any major international competitions over the past year, meaning its athletes have missed key Olympic qualifying events.

Carrard said the IOC has asked some of the international sports federations to facilitate the qualification of North Korean athletes.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern cannot accept advertising that advocates sedition or other illegal actions, violates normal standards of morality and taste, or attacks an individual race, nationality, ethnic group, religion or sex. In cases of doubt, the proffered copy, illustrations and layout will be submitted by the Lantern Business Manager to the School of Journalism Publications Committee and judged by a majority vote of the members. Decisions of this committee are final.

Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required; this information is for our records only and not available to the public.

- Copy will be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for published special early deadlines.
 - All advertisements are required to occupy at least as many inches in height as they do columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered full column (21 inches) and charged accordingly.
 - The Lantern reserves the right to reject any advertisement that promotes illegal activity or activity detrimental or damaging to the university and its educational mission. It further reserves the right to revise any advertisement which is deemed objectionable for any reason.
 - Make-good/adjustments will be considered only for those advertisements where errors occur in the following: business/group name, address, or phone number, item price, date, time, or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement, and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered to the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify, otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
 - Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.
 - A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
 - No proof will be furnished on any advertisement received after deadline, or for ads smaller than seven (7) column inches.
 - If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and subject to a rebill fee.
 - Advertisers are encouraged to avoid making misleading claims or using art or words that impugn or degrade sex, race, age, national origin, creed or color.
 - The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until credit rating with the Lantern is established. CERTIFIED check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
 - Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a rate-holder ad meeting contract minimums, for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
 - A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser notifies the Lantern office prior to publication.
 - Advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees, and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of advertiser's advertisement.
 - Advertisers in the Ohio State Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.
 - All mail-order advertisers are required to submit sample/proof-of-product prior to publication.
- Please note that advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

GIVE A DAMN! GIVE A DOLLAR...

UNIVERSITY DISTRICT
CLEAN TEAM
City of Columbus
The Ohio State University
The University Community

Let's face it, this place needs a good cleaning and we all need to help. If you can't donate time how about donating a dollar so that the University Community Business Association can hire people to clean up our backyard.

This is home to many of us and we need to keep our own space clean, attractive, and safe. The Lantern is asking for your help in raising money to provide a daily clean up crew on High Street. If everyone gives just one dollar, we can make this the cleanest, safest, campus area in the country. Please help. Send or bring your dollar to The Lantern, Room 281 Journalism, 242 W. 18th Avenue. The funds will be given to the University Community Business Association to help their efforts to clean up the area.

It's not too much to ask and it's not too much to give.

Apparent kidnap victim found slain

CLEVELAND (AP) — The body of a woman apparently kidnapped from the suburban Parma town Mall was found Wednesday in the back of her van, which was parked at a commuter train station in Cleveland, police said.

There were no obvious signs of violence, but the death of Mary Jo Pesho, 46, of North Royalton was being investigated as a kidnap-homicide, city homicide detectives said. No suspects had been found and a motive had not been determined.

The body was found at the Regional Transit Authority's Trickett train station by an Ameritech co-worker of the victim's husband.

Ohio EPA fines factory for pollution

OREGON (AP) — A Chicago-based company that runs a factory in this Toledo suburb has agreed to pay a $350,000 fine for air pollution problems.

Rieter Automotive Globe Inc., also known as Globe Industries, also has agreed to make $15,000 in improvements to the plant.

The company could have faced millions of dollars in fines for pollution violations at the plant, which makes soundproofing materials for the auto industry. About 400 people work there.

Instead, it agreed to settle with the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency by paying a $500,000 fine. The attorney general's office said $150,000 of that is suspended, pending the success of two proposals to reduce fumes.

Storm wipes out legislative sessions

COLUMBUS (AP) — The Legislature has started the second half of its two-year session, but not in the way it expected.

A winter storm that disrupted travel forced the House and Senate to postpone Wednesday's scheduled voting sessions until next week.

Instead, each chamber held non-voting sessions that permit bill introductions — and in one case, speed of travel was the subject.

Sen. Charles Horn, R-Dayton, introduced a bill to set a uniform 65 mph speed limit on all interstate highways and state highways built to interstate standards.

"Some local jurisdictions generate revenue by operating speed traps on interstates. The officer waiting on the berm pulls into traffic to catch a motorist who didn't notice the speed just dropped to 55 mph," Horn said.

A recent change in federal law gave states power to set their own speed limits.

Man pleads guilty to murder of brother

AKRON (AP) — An 18-year-old man pleaded guilty Wednesday to voluntary manslaughter in the beating death of his brother.

Dana Jokela, of Twinsburg, had been charged with murder. However, Summit County Prosecutor Maureen O'Connor agreed to reduce the charge to voluntary manslaughter.

Sentencing is scheduled Jan. 26. Jokela could be sentenced to 10 to 25 years in prison.

Sledders injured on 'Suicide Hill'

DAYTON (AP) — Four sledders broke their backs in separate accidents last month on a golf course slope known as "Suicide Hill," a doctor said.

The four women hit the same bump on the slope at the 12th tee of Community Golf Course in suburban Kettering and went airborne. As they came down, they suffered compression fractures to the lower back.

"It was strange, because they were practically carbon copies of each other," Dr. Norman Schneiderman, medical director of the emergency and trauma center at Miami Valley Hospital, said Tuesday.

More than two dozen other Suicide Hill sledders also were injured in mid-December. Schneiderman feared that Tuesday's snowfall would result in more injuries.

Although the women did not suffer spinal cord damage or paralysis, they may have to live with chronic pain.

The hill has been popular for at least 20 years, but the city of Dayton — which owns the course — has been trying to stop the sledding.

Exhaust emissions test gets stricter

By The Associated Press

Auto emission test failure rates rose when stricter exams began and were expanded to 13 more counties in Ohio, a testing agency said Wednesday.

The failure rate in Cuyahoga County, the only county where the test was previously required, had been 10 percent. The initial failure rate in the wider test area has been 12 percent.

The tougher tests began Nov. 1 for cars with registrations expiring in January and February. The stricter tests were mandated effective Tuesday.

Lisa Makarchuk, a spokeswoman for Envirotest Systems, which does the tests in the Cleveland-Akron and Dayton-Springfield areas, attributed the higher failure rate to the extension of tests to new areas.

Motorists in Cleveland had been used to keeping their cars tuned up for the tests but drivers in the new counties had not faced that requirement, she said.

The tests are required in Cuyahoga, Lake, Lorain, Medina, Portage, Summit and Geauga counties in northeast Ohio; Montgomery, Clark and Greene counties in the Dayton area and Hamilton, Butler, Clermont and Warren counties in the Cincinnati area.

Emission tests were required previously only in Cuyahoga County, which includes Cleveland. Cars were checked in Hamilton, Lake and Lorain counties only for tampered emission controls.

The tests previously had checked for hydrocarbon emissions. The updated tests additionally check for oxides of nitrogen, a byproduct of auto combustion that can contribute to smog on warm, sunny days.

Heidi Gagnon, a spokeswoman for the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency, said there were no figures available on repair costs for cars that flunk the new test.

But she said average repair costs in a similar program in Colorado are $140 to $160. Costs under Cuyahoga County's old system averaged $90 to $100.

Makarchuk predicted that long first-day lines experienced Tuesday would not persist. She blamed the lines on the holiday, drivers anticipating the winter storm, and drivers with December plate expirations belatedly getting tested.

Test locations had no lines Wednesday amid the snow storm, she said.

The test costs $19.50 and must be done every two years. The old annual test was $7.

Under the old test, a probe was inserted into the exhaust pipe to check emissions. The new test involves revving up the vehicle engine with the car on rollers.

The tests are intended to reduce air pollution and avoid federal sanctions for elevated smog levels.

Limited Inc. under investigation, papers say

COLUMBUS (AP) — The Limited Inc. has filed amended disclosure forms detailing $8,000 its subsidiaries paid to Senate President Stanley Aronoff and former House Speaker Vern Riffe, two newspapers reported Wednesday.

The forms were filed Tuesday with the legislative inspector general and the Joint Legislative Ethics Committee, The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer and The Cincinnati Enquirer said.

The fees, which were not originally disclosed by either the Columbus-based clothing retailer or the legislators, are now part of a Franklin County grand jury investigation.

At issue is whether Riffe, Aronoff and at least nine other present and former lawmakers should have reported thousands of dollars in multiple speaking fees they received for attending dinner parties and other small gatherings with lobbyists.

The Joint Legislative Ethics Committee refused to release copies of the documents filed Tuesday.

"They're in dispute," said Thomas Charles, the inspector general and the committee's executive director. "We are investigating."

Attorneys for Riffe and Aronoff told the Enquirer that they made their own filings Tuesday in response to the company's amended disclosures.

"We've disputed it and asked for an opinion because we ... believed all the companies involved were separate," said Riffe's attorney, Ritchey Hollenbaugh of Columbus.

An attorney for Aronoff said he is not disputing the filing but is asking for clarification.

"The Limited says the companies are separate, and we're saying the companies were separate," said Columbus attorney Terry Sherman. "All we're asking the inspector general is, 'What do you want for us to do?'"

Riffe and Aronoff each received six $500 checks from The Limited and its subsidiaries during a 1991 Cleveland breakfast and two $500 checks for a 1993 event, both of which are part of the grand jury's investigation.

Neither the legislators nor the Limited disclosed the payments at the time.

Under state law at the time, legislators had to disclose such payments only if they exceeded $500, unless the money came from a single source.

Attorneys for Riffe and Aronoff say the $500 checks came from separate companies — even though all the companies were subsidiaries of The Limited.

The Limited also maintains the subsidiaries are separate companies and therefore it did not fall under the state law requiring it to report payments exceeding $500 from a single source.

Limited spokesman Jonathan Baskin told The Plain Dealer that Limited executive Alfred S.

Dietzel, who prepared the original statements and organized the events, had not yet been summoned to testify before the grand jury.

"If they want to talk to him, he would cooperate fully," Baskin said.

"I Don't Do Weekends!"

"I told UPS that I needed my weekends free to study, but really I just wanted to hang out with my friends. UPS said, 'No problem!'"

"I make $8.00 an hour and work 3 to 5 hours a day, five days a week. But get this, not only do I get paid well, I also get full benefits, paid holidays, and paid vacations. UPS also gave me week-ends off and a choice of working hours, which made it perfect for my busy schedule."

HOROSCOPES by Linda Black

HOROSCOPES

By Linda C. Black

It's a fantastic day for doing business. Invest in real estate, put money into a secure investment, or talk to financial planners. The older generation will have excellent advice today. They might also be talked into co-signing for loans, or providing investment capital to children who show exceptional promise. If you're going to try something like that, make sure you have a profitable idea. A spirited discussion will improve the plan.

Aries (March 21-April 19). If you and your boss have any areas of disagreement, they are guaranteed to come up today. Rely heavily on humor. You can safely discuss business or cooking, but only if you do the listening. When a friend offers an excuse to get out of town later, take it!

Taurus (April 20-May 20). You're very powerful today. Use your own instincts and experience. Also ask an older woman for advice. Don't worry about a rebel who doesn't appreciate you. Don't budge from your most important principles, but do compromise on a lesser item.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Make sure you meet the deadlines, with no excuses. Goofing up today could be expensive. If you want to get more out of a family get-together, take your tape recorder. Get the old folks' stories down for posterity. You might discover a secret!

Cancer (June 22-July 22). You're very lucky today, so do something outrageous! Get your plans worked out this morning and you'll be in a good position to move by this afternoon. Later, celebrate with a gathering of the clan. The moon's in your sign, and that's reason enough.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Something is going on behind the scenes. It's to your advantage to find out what. Put aside petty squabbles so you can concentrate. If a friend in a large company owes you a favor, ask for it now. It might make a tough job easier.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You will be busy today, but you should have a lot of fun too! If you keep your ears open, you might hear a good investment tip. If a person you're attracted to is playing hard to get, turn the tables. It's a sneaky trick, but it might work.

Today's Birthday (Jan. 4). This is a lucky year for you, and your partner. Select the best one now. Invest in machinery or computers in February. April's good for setting up housekeeping with a friend. Commit to a romantic idea in May and it'll lead to lots more. Use your opposition's energy to push yourself over a barrier in July. Save up in August so you can take a trip in September. Wrap up a deal in December, and win.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Offering a contradictory opinion to the boss today will be a colossal waste of your valuable time. Let your folks have their own way, too. If you're not in the mood to be compliant tonight, stay home and start a few traditions of your own.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You're a very influential person. Today, make sure you use your power wisely. In business, you'll be able to get just about whatever you want. It may be almost too easy! In love, there'll be more of a challenge. To win there, listen attentively.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Your biggest concerns today may be financial. Don't pour any more money down a rat hole. Something that didn't work before is probably not going to work again. A friend may be able to get through where you've been frustrated. Delegate.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Your opposition may be arguing with each other and forget about you. That could be the break you need. If you're working with a partner tonight, so much the better. You don't have to agree on everything, but you do need to share a major objective.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). If you don't feel like losing today, maybe you'd better not compete, especially if you're up against a Capricorn or a Cancer. They're holding all the aces. Love should be plentiful, even if there isn't total agreement. That'll make it more interesting!

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Commit to a massive and wonderful goal, even if you don't have the faintest idea how it can be accomplished. Others will help you with that. Encourage an older person to lighten up and you'll make the day more enjoyable for everybody. In love, follow.

Long road ahead as Syria, Israel resume peace talks

Secretary of State plans trip to Mideast for negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syria and Israel reopened peace negotiations Wednesday as the Clinton administration predicted "many, many, many difficult discussions" before the longtime adversaries find their way to a treaty — if they ever do.

As the delegations settled in at the Wye Conference Center near Queenstown, Md., for a three-day session, State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns announced Secretary of State Warren Christopher will go to the Middle East next Wednesday.

"Our ultimate objective here in 1996 is to try to help Syria and Israel reach a comprehensive agreement between them that will resolve the problems that have separated them since 1948," Burns said.

There were strong indications, though, that a breakthrough was not imminent. While Christopher is willing to conduct an open-ended shuttle between Damascus and Jerusalem to get a peace treaty, the trip next week is expected to be brief. Also, U.S. diplomats said Syria and Israel had yet to agree on a formula to resolve their differences.

"He'll have two things on his mind,"

"Our ultimate objective here... is to try to help Syria and Israel reach a comprehensive agreement."

— State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns

Burns said of Christopher, who will be making his 15th negotiating trip to the region. "What kind of substantive progress did we make at the Wye Plantation during the two rounds of talks; and what now makes sense procedurally as a way to continue the momentum that we hope will come out of Wye."

The talks are being held in private under the supervision of U.S. mediator Dennis B. Ross. Occasionally, the State Department issues brief and unspecific claims of progress, but without any elaboration.

Negotiators for Israel and Syria have said the talks were being held in a positive atmosphere but that none of the outstanding issues had been settled.

These include the future of the Golan Heights, a strategic enclave held by Israel since 1967, the prospect of peace between the two countries after three bloody wars, and ways to make the border secure.

"We expect many, many, many difficult discussions before an agreement is reached, if an agreement is going to be reached," Burns said.

One of the tasks at the conference center on Maryland's Eastern Shore is "to figure out a procedural way to move those discussions forward," the spokesman said.

Christopher plans to fly to Paris on Monday to attend a conference on financing Palestinian self-rule on the West Bank and boosting Palestinian economic development. Donor nations agreed last April to contribute $60 million toward meeting the Palestinians' budget shortfall of $136 million for 1995.

Christopher will then go to Jerusalem on Wednesday and later to Damascus.

Weather

Snow, ice close schools cause major headaches

By the Associated Press

Sleet and heavy snow glazed highways Wednesday from the Ohio Valley to New England, closing schools and airports and stranding drivers.

"Some days it doesn't pay to get out of bed," grumbled Tom Horvath, digging a car out of a knee-deep snowdrift outside his home in Toledo, Ohio. "I hate snow. Wake me up when it's spring."

There were scattered school closings from Missouri to Maine.

"Snow is made for kids," said 10-year-old Stella Knapik of Agawam, Mass., as she and her 11-year-old sister tumbled down a snow-covered hillside.

Thirteen inches of snow was reported at Utica, N.Y., with 10 inches by midday in central Indiana, 9 in Illinois and up to a foot in Missouri. Snow flurries were reported as far south as Alabama.

Up to 18 inches fell along the Great Lakes in upstate New York. Rochester's total this season jumped from 43 inches to 58, seven more inches than all of last season, and Buffalo's 10 inches of new snow gave it a season total of just over 88 inches, up from 35 at this time last year.

In New England, Concord, N.H., had

6 inches by afternoon, for a total so far this season of more than 40 inches, compared with 35 during all of last winter.

Boston's Logan Airport closed for 30 minutes for snow removal, and Cleveland's airport was closed for two hours. Non-emergency car travel was banned in a dozen of Ohio's hardest-hit counties.

Snow-packed, icy highways stopped motorists in the Midwest.

"Every room in town was booked, and they set up a shelter at the Presbyterian church down the way for people who couldn't get a room," said Matt

Nelson, night auditor at a motel in Mattoon, Ill.

Some 75 to 100 people had to spend the night at a school in Indiana's Shelby County.

About 300 people were stranded at the downtown Greyhound bus station in Columbus, Ohio.

"We have passengers all over the place. We can't move anything out of here," said Greyhound customer service representative Elyse Henson.

Down the street from the bus station, the snow postponed the first voting sessions of the year for the Ohio Legislature.

So many people got the day off in Massachusetts that Nynex reported extremely heavy telephone volume. Some people had to wait for dial tones or could not get through at all.

However, the Rev. Jim Renfrew had an appreciation for the weather.

"I figure if it's going to snow at all, it might as well be a good snow," said Renfrew, walking his son to the YMCA through knee-deep drifts in Rochester, N.Y. "It quiets the city down, it gives people exercise shoveling snow, it gives us more time with our kids who don't go to school. Let us enjoy it — this is beautiful!"

Tornado sweeps through southern Florida, injures 30

MIAMI (AP) — A tornado skipped through a residential neighborhood outside Miami on Wednesday, tossing people and cars into the air and damaging about 100 homes and a church. About 30 people were injured.

"You know those movies with Indians and buffaloes in them? Well, it sounded like a million buffalo galloping," said Jose Vega, whose home was damaged. "The house was shaking like a giant had it in its hand."

"It sounded like a monster shaking the house," said Armando Diaz, whose house had moderate damage.

The tornado struck an unincorporated area southwest of Miami. Three people were taken to a hospital with injuries that weren't life-threatening, and about 30 were treated at the scene, said Metro-Dade Fire Chief Donald Paulison.

Maritza Acosta was in her car when it was picked up to about the height of a one-story house and thrown 50 feet.

"I saw like wood, bricks — I don't what else — inside of the tornado," she said from a hospital bed, where she was treated for cuts and bruises. "Whoever sees my car thinks I died."

The passenger side of the car's roof was mashed down level with the trunk and hood.

"It sounded like a monster shaking the house."

— Armando Diaz

The twister grabbed Marie Pineda's purse from her hands and then lifted her feet into the air as she held onto a heavy garbage can holder.

"I could see everything swirling around me. It was dark. Everything looked really eerie — yellow and green," said the 105-pound woman.

Florida Power and Light Co. said the storm knocked out electricity to 20,000 customers.

Sonia Avoy, a teacher at Trinity Christian School, was standing with a mother and an infant when the tornado touched down nearby.

"What I saw was a humongous thing coming — just wind and leaves. And all I could do was crouch down," Avoy said, picking glass out of her hair.

None of the 11 children at the school, ranging in age from 4 months to 4 years, was hurt. Half an hour later there would have been about 40 children at the school.

Smith, Evans lead Lady hoopsters to 8-3 start, No. 22 ranking

By Sean Palchick
Hoopla staff writer

The Lady Bucks opened up their 30th season on the road Nov. 25 against No. 18 Georgia. Katie Smith and Peggy Evans both scored a team high 19 points and Kelly Fergus scored 10 points in the game. The Lady Bucks fell in their season opener 79-70.

The Lady Bucks (0-1) travelled to Kansas State (1-0) on Nov. 27 and won 87-73. The Buckeyes were led by a team high 21 points from Katie Smith along with 20 points from Peggy Evans and 19 points from Marlene Stollings.

The Lady Bucks (1-1) returned home on Dec. 4 for their home opener against Kentucky (3-0). The Lady Bucks led 34-30 at the end of the first-half. Katie Smith led the Buckeyes with a team high 26 points including 13 rebounds and 11 free throws made, Peggy Evans helped the cause with 20 points. The team shot 46 percent from the field and 66 percent from 3-point range in the second-half. The Lady Bucks won the game 75-59 and improved to 2-1.

The Lady Bucks then took to the road for the Kona Classic in Hawaii Dec. 9-11. Their first game was against Sacramento State on Dec. 9. The Lady Bucks led by 10 points 39-29 at the half. The team was paced by a team high 8 rebounds from both Peggy Evans and Lisa Negri. A game high 31 points from Katie Smith and 12 points from Marlene Stollings helped the Buckeyes to a victory 93-71.

The next game was against Pacific and the Buckeyes (3-1) started the game strong and shot nearly 54 percent from the field in the first half and led 38-32. The Lady Bucks were outscored by Pacific in the second half 42-29 and lost 74-67. The team was led by 24 points from Katie Smith, 14 points from Peggy Evans and 9 rebounds from Lisa Negri. The Lady Bucks fell to 3-2.

The team bounced back in their finale against Idaho State and won 119-63. The game included a career-high 40 points for Katie Smith. The team improved to 4-2.

The Lady Bucks returned home to host the Buckeye Classic at St. John Arena December 16 and 17. The teams first opponent was Cincinnati. The Lady Bucks led the game at the end of the first half 39-26 and pulled away in the second half and won 82-50. The team was led by 22 points from Katie Smith and 19 points from Peggy Evans.

The Lady Bucks (5-2) then hosted Ohio University in the championship game. The team pulled away in the game in the second half and defeated their in-state opponent 79-52. The Buckeye Classic MVP was Ohio State's Katie Smith and Peggy Evans was named to the All-Tourney team.

The Lady Bucks (6-2) then started a stretch of three straight games against Top 25 teams. The team hosted No. 3 Louisiana Tech (7-1) on December 20th. The team trailed 49-37 at the half and lost the game 98-81. The team was led by a game high 28 points from Peggy Evans and 18 points from Marlene Stollings, including 16 points in the second-half.

Ohio State (6-3) then had a week off to prepare for a home game against No. 5 Penn State (8-1). The team came out strong after trailing 6-0 to begin the game and went on a 16-1 run. The Lady Bucks led 44-25 at the end of the first-half and went on to win 78-63. The team was led by a double-double from Lisa Negri, who scored 10 points and pulled down 12 rebounds. The team was led in scoring by 25 points from Katie Smith and 14 points from Peggy Evans.

The finished the year with an upset win over No. 14 Purdue 71-68. The team was paced by five players scoring in double-figures. The Lady Bucks improved their record to 8-3 and cracked into the polls for the first time this season at No. 22.

UNIVERSITY DISTRICT CLEAN TEAM

City of Columbus
The Ohio State University
The University Community

Let's face it, this place needs a good cleaning and we all need to help. If you can't donate time how about donating a dollar so that the University Community Business Association can hire people to clean up our backyard.

This is home to many of us and we need to keep our own space clean, attractive, and safe. The Lantern is asking for your help in raising money to provide a daily clean up crew on High Street. If everyone gives just one dollar, we can make this the cleanest, safest, campus area in the country. Please help. Send or bring your dollar to The Lantern, Room 281 Journalism, 242 W. 18th Avenue. The funds will be given to the University Community Business Association to help their efforts to clean up the area.

It's not too much to ask and it's not too much to give.

Stanford, Cal in Top 25; Duke drops out of Top 10

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — For 83 years, Stanford and California have been traveling across San Francisco Bay to play each other in basketball. This year, the rivalry could take on national importance.

Stanford jumped into the AP college basketball poll at No. 23 Monday, six spots behind California. It's the first time in at least two decades that both teams are in the Top 25.

North Carolina remained No. 1 for the fifth straight week. The Tar Heels (9-0) were again the runaway choice for the top spot, receiving 54 first-place votes and 1,613 points from the national media panel.

North Carolina, UCLA, Arkansas and Massachusetts remained first through fourth for the third straight week. Kansas moved up one spot to fifth and was followed by Connecticut, Maryland, Kentucky, Arizona and Syracuse. Kentucky dropped three spots after losing 88-86 at Louisville on Sunday.

Duke fell four spots to 11th, the first time the Blue Devils have not been in the Top Ten since Jan. 21, 1991, a span of 67 polls.

Duke, which lost to Iowa in the opening round of the Rainbow Classic, was followed in the Second Ten by Georgetown, Florida, Michigan State, Arizona State, Iowa State, California, Wake Forest, Nebraska and New Mexico State.

The last five teams were Indiana, Iowa, Stanford, Georgia Tech and Penn. Iowa and Penn joined Stanford as newcomers to the poll this season.

Wisconsin, which lost at Stanford and Marquette last week, fell out of the poll. So did Cincinnati, which lost to Arkansas and Hawaii in the Rainbow Classic, and St. John's.

Stanford (9-0) is making its first appearance in the Top 25 since 1991-92. The Cardinal is off to its best start since the 1953-54 season, when it won its first 10 games.

Heading into the Pac-10 season, though, Stanford is concerned about the health of offensive leader Brevin Knight, who averages 17 points a game and had 26 points in the 95-78 win over Wisconsin.

Knight, a 5-foot-10 point guard who slashes through opposing defenses, missed last Thursday's win over Cornell with a stress reaction to his right shin. Doctors said it could lead to a stress fracture if not treated properly.

Knight said after the Cornell game that he would try to stay off the court before this Thursday's Pac-10 opener at Washington.

"I'm planning to play against Washington," Knight said. "Right now the leg is not hurting, but I'm not doing anything on it either. It does hurt whenever I run."

Stanford and Pac-10 rival Cal have not been ranked at the same time in more than two decades. Records stretching back farther than that were not available.

Cal fell three spots in the rankings after a 76-73 overtime loss to Alabama. The Golden Bears (7-1) fell a game short of their best start in 35 years.

With the addition of Stanford, the Pac-10 tied the Atlantic Coast Conference with five ranked teams. It's the most the Pac-10 has ever had in the Top 25 at one time.

UCLA, Arizona and Arizona State also are from the Pac-10. The ACC is represented by North Carolina, Maryland, Duke, Wake Forest and Georgia Tech.

BIG TEN MEN

Michigan to turn Big Ten blue

By Michael C. Fitzpatrick
Hoopla staff writer

Michigan
Never before did a group of fuzzy-cheeked teenagers evoke the vitriol and anger of college basketball fans. They were the team America loved to hate.

Their baggy shorts, black socks, and trash talking made the Wolverines the team most likely to be vilified by the demographic who listens to Rush Limbaugh.

But alas, Chris Webber, Jalen Rose and Juwan Howard have all departed to the NBA.

Even with the loss of the intimidating Webber, the tandem of Rose and Howard combined to average 40 points and just over 14 boards per contest last season.

However, Michigan was denied a third straight trip to the Final Four by a loss to eventual champion Arkansas.

Senior Jimmy King, 6-5 (12.3 ppg, 3.8 apg) and senior Ray Jackson, 6-6 (11.4 ppg, 6.3 rpg, 2.6 apg), are the only Fab Five leftovers.

Jackson is an underrated player who is a solid defender. King is a smooth offensive performer who must fill the void left by the departure of Rose and Howard.

In addition to these sure shots, the Wolverines return point guard Dugan Fife and two role players, Oliver Saint-Jean and Makhtar Ndiaye.

The mass exodus of Wolverines talent would have most programs going through rebuilding pains, but coach Steve Fisher has restocked the Wolverines with another quintet of funky — and talented — freshmen.

Paced by Jerod Ward, F, 6-9, Maurice Taylor, C/F, 6-9, and Maceo Baston, C/F, 6-9, Michigan will be young, gifted, and back in the NCAA tournament.

Please disregard those early season losses to Penn, Washington and Duke, you can chalk them up to growing pains.

conference race.

Robert Montgomery Knight's record speaks for itself. Love him or hate him, you must admit the guy can flat out coach. Check out his resume: three National Championships, an Olympic Gold Medal in 1984, and 11 Big Ten Championships.

Just think, the guy went to Ohio State. He might have sat in the same chair you are sitting in as you read these words.

"Knight-Time" will come often in 1995 for Big Ten foes because the General has reloaded the Hoosiers after the departure of Indiana hoop legend Damon Bailey (19.6 ppg), Pat Graham, and Todd Leary.

This year the focus of the Hoosiers offense will be on senior Alan Henderson, F, 6-9, (17.8 ppg, 10.3 rpg, 1.9 bpg). Henderson went down with a serious knee injury late in the

Associated Press

Chris Webber, left, and Juwan Howard have departed Michigan for the NBA. However, a talented freshman class will keep the Wolverines near the top of the Big Ten standings.

1993 season but now seems fully recovered. Henderson is one of the best rebounders and shot blockers in the conference. Senior Brian Evans, F, 6-8, (11.9 ppg, 6.8 rpg, 2.2 apg), will give the Hoosiers an outside threat.

Replacing Bailey in the backcourt will be freshman Neil Reed, G, 6-3, who has been impressive in the early season. For a freshman this youngster is a great floor leader who never seems to get flustered no matter what the situation; he had 17 points in a close loss to Kentucky. His haircut makes him look like he stepped off the set of MTV's Alternative Nation. Freshman Andrae Patterson, F, 6-8, has skills, but he suffered a knee injury in late December which could slow his development.

Michigan State

You can rest assured this scene will unfold in a Big Ten arena this winter. A call by an official will go against Michigan State, and in turn, coach Jud Heathcote will turn as red as a stop sign and proceed to beat himself about the head with closed fists; (instead of throwing chairs, he likes to pound his skull).

You can also take to the bank the Spartans' wonderfully talented senior guard Shawn Respert, G, 6-3, who is sure to rain in jumpers over Big Ten opponents like a Midwestern downpour. Respert averaged 25 ppg last season and is a member of every preseason All-American squad. His backcourt mate is senior Eric Snow 6-3, (6.8 ppg, 6.7 apg), who couldn't make a foul shot if the hoop was the Pacific Ocean. However, foibles at the foul line can be overlooked because he is the Big Ten's best defensive guard and playmaker.

The Spartans possess a trio of serviceable front-court players in junior Quinton Brooks, 6-7, junior Jamie Feick, 6-8, and junior Damon Beathia, 6-7. But none of them are going to make you forget Kevin Willis, who is currently with the NBA's Miami Heat.

Prior to the season, Heathcote said Feick would be the most improved player in the conference. Through the preseason he was averaging over 10 rebounds a game.

Illinois

Shelly Clark is back for another round of fine dining at Big Ten restaurants. Clark appeared on the scene in Champaign, Ill. with a couple pounds of press clippings, having been the National Junior College Player of the Year. Clark, however, did not live up to his expectations. It seems as though the 260 pounds he had to lug up and down the court seriously curtailed his ability to rebound and score.

Last season was an up-and-down one for Clark, who averaged 9.5 ppg and 6.4 rpg. Through the early portion of '94-'95 he is averaging 10 ppg and 7.1 rpg. An interesting stat concerning Clark is that in the Illini's first 11 contests he has reached double figures in rebounds only once, with 11 against Illinois-Chicago.

Joining Clark in the front court will be Chris Gandy and Jerry Hester. Senior Robert Bennett 6-6, (5.0 ppg, 3.7 rpg), who has exceptional leaping ability, will provide depth. Freshman Bryant Notree is expected to make an impact but has struggled early.

The backcourt is in the capable hands of sophomore Kiwane Garris and junior Richard Keene. Garris, a 6-2 guard, (15.9 ppg, 3.8 apg), was runner-up for Big Ten Freshman of the year in 1994. Garris commits too many turnovers and does not distribute the ball as well as coach Lou Henson would like.

Keene, 6-6, (8.0 ppg), is a good shooter, but he has struggled this year (36 percent from the field in the Illini's first 11 contests in '94-'95).

preseason Iowa was able to throttle Gary

Trent and Ohio University and then upset Duke in Hawaii. The Hawkeyes are led by sophomores Jess Settles and Chris Kingsbury. Settles, 6-6, (15.3 ppg, 7.5 rpg), plays his best in big games as evidenced by his 28 points in the win over Duke. He missed three games early in the year but is now healthy.

Kingsbury, 6-5, (8.2 ppg, 2.6 rpg), is an Ohio native who got away when Ohio State chose to pursue Damon Flint.

Junior Kenyon Murray, 6-6, (12.3 ppg, 5.8 rpg), is a veteran of Big Ten wars. If he improves his outside shooting he could blossom into a superstar.

Iowa was not invited to the NCAA tournament last season. If turned down this year it would be the first time since 1977-'78 they have been left out of the tournament in consecutive seasons.

Here is a tidbit for those of you who play office pools in March: Davis has never coached a team that lost in the first round of the tournament.

Wisconsin

The Badgers are under new management. Stu Jackson, who bolted to assume the role of general manager of the NBA expansion franchise in Vancouver,

However, Jackson did not leave the kitchen bare. Returning is '94-'95 National Player of the Year Candidate Michael Finley. Finley can do it all, score, rebound, and pass. Dick Vitale said the senior, 6-7 (20.4 ppg, 6.7 rpg), is "the most underrated player in America," and Billy Packer says Finley is the closest thing in the college game to Michael Jordan.

Giving Finley help along the front line is sophomore center Rashard Griffith, 6-11, (13.9 ppg, 8.5 rpg, 2.6 bpg), who almost transferred during the off-season. Griffith is the consummate "aircraft carrier," he eats up space in the lane and is a great shot blocker. He will have to avoid foul trouble which plagued him last season.

The Badgers lost the services of point guard Tracy Webster, the school's all-time leading assist man, but Darnell Hoskins should be able to handle the duty. Freshman Sean Daugherty is the top scorer off the bench with 7.8 ppg.

For Wisconsin to compete for the Big Ten title it will have to improve their road record. Last season the Badgers were a woeful 1-8 in Big Ten games outside of Wisconsin Field House.

Minnesota

One of the more intriguing stories that will unfold this winter involves senior Voshon Lenard. Lenard, 6-4, (18.9 ppg, 2.2 apg), tested the waters of the NBA draft and was picked a disappointing 46th by the Milwaukee Bucks. Lenard knew that with no jump shot, he had as much of a chance to make it in the NBA as Leonard Nimoy.

"Beam me up back to the Big Ten," Lenard said. Who would want to play with Glenn Robinson anyhow?

The Gophers won the Great Alaska Tournament in December, upsetting high-ranked Arizona. But Lenard has struggled through the early portion of the campaign shooting just

Big Ten Conference Preview

BIG TEN WOMEN

Bucks, Purdue, Iowa, Penn State to vie for title

By the Hoopla Staff

The outlook for the 1994-'95 Big Ten Women's Basketball Conference is actually a new look.

For the first time since the league was formed in 1981 the women's conference will have a post-season tournament at the conclusion of the regular season. The Big Ten Conference Tournament is scheduled for March 2-6 at Butler University in Indianapolis, Ind.

The winner of the new tournament will earn an automatic bid to the women's post-season NCAA championship. This year, the women's "Road To The Final Four" ends April 1-2 at the Target Center arena in Minneapolis, Minn..

Although the winner of the Big Ten conference post-season tourney will earn an automatic bid, league officials believe four to six Big Ten teams will qualify for a slot in the coveted 64-team NCAA tourney.

As the conference enters its 14th season, many observers of the league say it's balanced — with a couple of exceptions — from the top to the bottom.

There are four teams with an inside shot at the conference championship and, depending on how the ball bounces, as many as seven teams may contend for the title.

This year's teams could be split into three distinct groups: the favorites: Purdue, Iowa, Penn State and Ohio State; the dark horses: Indiana, Minnesota, Northwestern, Michigan State and Wisconsin; the cellar-dwellers: Illinois and Michigan.

THE FAVORITES:

In this pack the favorite of the favorites has to be the PURDUE BOILERMAKERS. The Boilers may not have it all, but they have more than enough to win the Big Ten this year.

The defending Big Ten champions return every starter from last year's 29-5 squad that went to the Final Four. The Boilers lost to eventual champion North Carolina in the semifinals.

A mix of experience and youth brought the Boilers to within one game of the final. Sophomore center Leslie Johnson leads the way on offense, while senior guards Cindy Lamping and Jennifer Jacoby head up a tight, stingy, box-in-one defense that has kept their opponents off balance for the last two years. Purdue led the league in defense last year allowing a mere 57.1 ppg average.

With savvy veteran coach Vivian Stringer again leading the way, the IOWA HAWKEYES are looking to bring the title back to Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

In the off-season, Stringer was able to string together the No. 1 recruiting class in the nation. This bevy of freshmen talent will have a team leader in senior forward Tia Jackson who averaged 16.8 ppg last year. As for their bench, the Hawkeyes have the deepest one in the conference.

Like Purdue, Iowa also plays a stingy, in-your-face defense that could classify them as the New York Knicks of the Big Ten Conference.

The PENN STATE NITTANY LIONS may be poised to win their first Big Ten title in only its third year in the conference.

The Lions return what many regard as the best backcourt in the nation. Anchored by junior guard Tina Nicholson, the Lions play with a three-guard scheme. Nicholson is a candidate for Big Ten Player of the Year honors. Last year, she dished off an eye-opening 193 assists for the season.

(To read about OHIO STATE turn to page 3.)

THE DARK HORSES:

If the preseason is any indication, the INDIANA HOOSIERS may have a shot at the Big Ten after posting a sparkling 10-0 mark.

However, after a closer inspection of their schedule, one will see that the Hoosier victories in Bloomington, Ind. have been against a number of cream puffs.

At any rate, with the tough inside rebounding and scoring ability of senior forward Shirley Bryant (13.9 ppg last year), and the steady play of junior forward Lisa Furlin, the Hoosiers may hang a banner of their own beside the numerous championship flags of their male counterparts in Assembly Hall.

The MINNESOTA GOLDEN GOPHERS will have to do without Carol Ann Shudlick, who was the Gophers' Michael Jordan. Shudlick took home the Big Ten Most Valuable Award Trophy last year. Besides the accolades, the miss-do-everything-star took her 23.4 ppg to graduation.

Faced with eight newcomers on their squad and lacking a key go-to person in crucial situations, senior guard Shannon Loeblein will have to become the team's leading scorer for the Gophers to have a shot at the title. Loeblein averaged 11.9 ppg last season.

The NORTHWESTERN WILDCATS may be known as a losing program in its revenue producing sports, but when it comes to non-revenue sports, especially women's basketball, the Wildcats have always been a force.

However, Obi-wan Kenobi may not be there to help out because this squad does not have the Force to win the title. The Wildcats have come out of the gates with a morbid 4-7 mark.

The Northwestern offense has not been a problem for the Wildcats, but it's the defense that has tripped them up early. Coach Don Perrelli hopes the defensive play of senior guard Maureen Holohan and sophomore forward Katrina Hannaford can give the 'Cats at least a chance at some respectability.

The good news for the MICHIGAN STATE SPARTANS is that they have the oldest and most experienced coach in the league in Karen Langeland. But the bad news is that if the Spartans do not show major improvement, this may prove to be Langeland's 19th and last season.

The Spartans return all five starters from last year. But there's a problem, last year's team posted a 12-15 record. Langeland's best chance at job security may lie in senior forward Kisha Kelley (19 ppg last year) and the experience of senior guard Tanya Place.

If those two produce, the Spartans should finish above .500, and with a break here and there, may finish in the upper tier of the conference.

Finally the Black Beauty of dark horses, the team with perhaps the longest of long shots to win the conference are the WISCONSIN BADGERS. After finishing ninth in the Big Ten and piling up a disappointing 8-20 overall mark last year, the Badgers decided to make a change and brought in coach Jane Albright-Dieterle to badger the Badgers towards the top of the Big Ten standings.

Her job will not be easy, but one person who could make it less painful would be forward Barb Franke. Franke was third in scoring and field goal percentage and fourth in rebounding in the Big Ten last season.

Franke can dominate a game, and if she delivers this season, the Badgers may get an invitation to the "Big Dance."

THE CELLARDWELLERS:

ILLINOIS and MICHIGAN are the only occupants of this group and with good reason. The Illini lost three starters due to graduation from a squad that posted a dismal 5-13 mark.

Former Buckeye assistant and current Illini coach Kathy Lindsey will have her hands full. But her year will not be as rough if fellow Ohioan, senior forward Kris Dupps (who hails from Heath), has a big year. Dupps lead the squad in scoring last year with 16 ppg.

To all those Michigan bashers: you will not hear the Michigan band churning out their fight song "Hail To The Victors!" often at the Michigan ladies hoops games this season. The Wolverines will try to improve on their deplorable 3-24 overall record of a year ago which featured a 0-18 conference mark.

A shining light for the Wolverines, perhaps the only light, will come in the form of sophomore forward Amy Johnson. Johnson returns as the leading scorer for the Wolverines having boasted 15.6 ppg last season.

under 40 percent.

Lenard is joined in the back court by senior Townsend Orr, 6-1, (9.9 ppg, 3.2 rpg, 3.3 apg), who is off to a great start this season as he was named MVP of the Great Alaska Shootout.

Massillon, Ohio native junior David Grim, 6-7, is logging in minutes at the small forward position and is averaging just under eight points a game.

Seniors Jayson Walton, 6-6, (7.0 ppg, 4.5 rpg), and Chad Kolander, 6-9, (6.8 ppg, 3.3 rpg), add depth to the Gophers' front court.

Minnesota is another team that does not win on the road. In the last four seasons, the Gophers have won just seven contests away from home. This fact is even more significant when you consider they garnered four of those wins at Northwestern.

Purdue

Two things you can count on in 1995: shots fired at the White House and Purdue not repeating as Big Ten Champions. Last season's squad, led by National Player of the Year Glenn Robinson, came within one game of going to the Final Four, but there will be March Madness in West Lafayette again this year.

Coach Gene Keady will have to find a way to replace the 30 points a game the "Big Dog" provided. However, a lack of Robinson is no reason to believe Purdue will go straight to the kennel.

Senior Cuonzo Martin and Matt Waddell will provide scoring and leadership. Martin, 6-6, (16.9 ppg, 4.3 rpg, 44.9 percent on 3-pts), stepped up last year to become a serious three-point threat and has the potential to take over games.

Northwestern

Northwestern is coming off its most successful season since the days when the ball had strings.

The Wildcats' 15-14 record was capped by an upset over Michigan in their last conference game. They were then extended an invitation to the NIT.

Unfortunately for the Wildcats, they graduated four of their starting five players from that squad. Their lone returning starter, senior Cedric Neloms, has been a problem for coach Rickey Byrdsong. Neloms was suspended for a game after he misbehaved during practice.

Neloms, 6-5, (11.7 ppg, 4.3 rpg), will have to get his act straightened-out or this team could find itself finishing behind Ohio State.

Penn State

If it was a perfect world the Nittany Lions would capture a Big Ten title this season and hang the banner up for a few days in their old fabled gym, the Recreation Building.

It would serve as a lasting tribute to the building they have played in since 1928 and which they are leaving for a new basketball arena next year.

But you know that the world is not perfect and this is a far from perfect team.

But if there is any hope for the Nittany Lions it lies in senior center John Amaechi, 6-10, who is Penn State's bloody good chap in the middle. He comes to Penn State via Manchester, England and Toledo, Ohio. He ranks as one of the best in the league after averaging 16.9 ppg, and 8.9 rpg per contest last season.

The rest of the team is not going to make you forget the UNLV teams of the late 1980s. As a matter of fact, the football team probably scores more points. Sophomore Dan Earl, 6-3 (8.4 ppg, 4.2 apg), is a solid floor leader who was 10th in the conference in assists last season. Junior forward Rahsaan Carlton will help out Amaechi. Penn State fans can watch highlights of this season's Rose Bowl for enjoyment. Maybe coach Bruce Parkhill can get Ki-Jana Carter to come play some hoops.

This year, its a whole different ballgame for Bucks

By Michael C. Fitzpatrick
Hoopla staff writer

OSU basketball coach Randy Ayers stood at the podium in the media room of Gund Arena in Cleveland, his head slightly bowed, a look of disappointment masking his face. The Buckeyes had just been beaten by Cleveland State, 75-73.

A heartbreaking loss.

Less than 30 months ago Ayers had stood at a similar podium, discussing his team's loss 75-71 to Michigan which denied the Buckeyes a trip to the Final Four. That loss was disappointing, but even in the despair of that loss there was hope, there was next year.

On this December night in the spanking new Gund Arena, the Buckeyes trailed CSU for most of the game. With 28 seconds remaining Ohio State was able to forge ahead 72-70 only to eventually lose 75-73.

Gut wrenching.

Another loss to an Ohio school that last year the Buckeyes would have most likely disposed of with little trouble. But much has changed over the last 12 months in Columbus.

There are no more cupcakes on the Buckeye schedule. Their 2-7 record includes losses at home to Bowling Green and Ohio University.

Last year the Buckeyes, playing the toughest schedule in the country according to USA Today, stumbled and staggered to a 13-16 record.

During January of 1994 Ayers slipped on a patch of ice and fractured his ankle, an ironic foreshadowing of the fall the basketball team was about to take.

Since that time the basketball program has imploded.

Gone is the highly touted recruiting class of 1992 that included Greg Simpson, Derek Anderson, Charles Macon, Gerald Eaker, and Nate Wilbourne. Simpson, Macon, and Eaker left after well chronicled run-ins with the law. Anderson, the most talented of the bunch, broke camp for the bluegrass of Kentucky and Wilbourne decided he would like to finish his career in South Carolina.

To say the Buckeyes are undermanned this year is like saying Davey Crockett was a little short of help at the Alamo.

Ayers has had to go with a team that has only four players with Division I college basketball experience in Antonio Watson, Doug Etzler, Otis Winston, and Rick Yudt. His tallest player is the 6-9 Watson.

Randy Ayers discusses strategy in a time-out during the Buckeyes loss to Cleveland State at the Gund Arena.

This leaves Ayers with an eight-man rotation which features two freshman — Kevin Martin, and Carlos Davis — in the starting line-up, with Martin being a walk-on to boot.

The Buckeyes are a game bunch. Their never say die attitude will endure them to the fans more so than their under-achieving predecessors of the past two seasons. In December they made a gutsy second half comeback against Tennessee-Chattanooga in which they overcame a double-figure deficit late in the game and eventually won in overtime, 84-83.

But even in victory, memories of what was just a short time ago linger. You sit in St. John Arena and can't help but remember another Buckeye overtime victory. One in which Jimmy Jackson passed off to Treg Lee to beat Indiana 97-95. The nadir of Ayers' era.

And the question remains; "What in the heck happened and who is to blame?"

Just 30 months ago Randy Ayers was the toast of the collegiate coaching world. Two straight Big Ten titles and two successive No. 1 seeds in the NCAA tournament.

As the saying goes, "His future was so bright he needed to wear shades."

But that was before the NCAA investigation into the recruitment of Damon Flint became public. That was before the Buckeyes put together back-to-back lack-luster seasons with no NCAA tournament appearances. That was before players started acting up and the Buckeyes suffered three losses in one season to in-state rivals.

Today the only reason Ayers might have to wear sunglasses is to maintain anonymity.
