Millions filing at last minute

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventy-five years after the nation was introduced to Form 1040, Americans are closing another return-filing season with several million taxpayers apparently putting off the chore until the Monday midnight deadline.

The Internal Revenue Service promised that its walk-in offices would remain open on the final day until every taxpayer with a question was served. The Postal Service went out of its way to receive returns and make sure they were postmarked before midnight.

Taxpayers were given an extra two days to file because the April 15 deadline fell on Saturday. Residents of New England and most of New York state have until Tuesday midnight because Monday is a legal holiday, Patriot's Day, in Massachusetts, site of the IRS service center that receives returns from those states.

Neither the IRS nor the Postal Service had a firm estimate on how many people delayed filing until the last day. The IRS said only that it expects to receive about 18 million returns this week, which would include those filed over the weekend. About 14 million reached the IRS last week.

The tax agency projects more than 169 million returns will be filed this year — but not all those will meet the deadline:

- Around 6 million couples and individuals will take four-month extensions, to Aug. 15, by filing Form 4868 along with a check for the taxes they estimate they owe. The extension is only for filing — not for paying.
- A sizable number of the 650,000 Americans living and working abroad qualify for automatic two-month extensions without filing any special form or paying estimated taxes.

- Some taxpayers don't operate on a calendar year and, thus, have different filing deadlines.
- And some will simply miss the filing deadline, despite the fact that such tardiness can bring a penalty for not filing on time — even if there is no tax due — and additional and more severe penalties for not filing and paying on time if there is tax due.

"Of the 109 million-plus returns anticipated this year, we expect about 100 million will file during the regular season," said IRS spokesman Frank Keith.

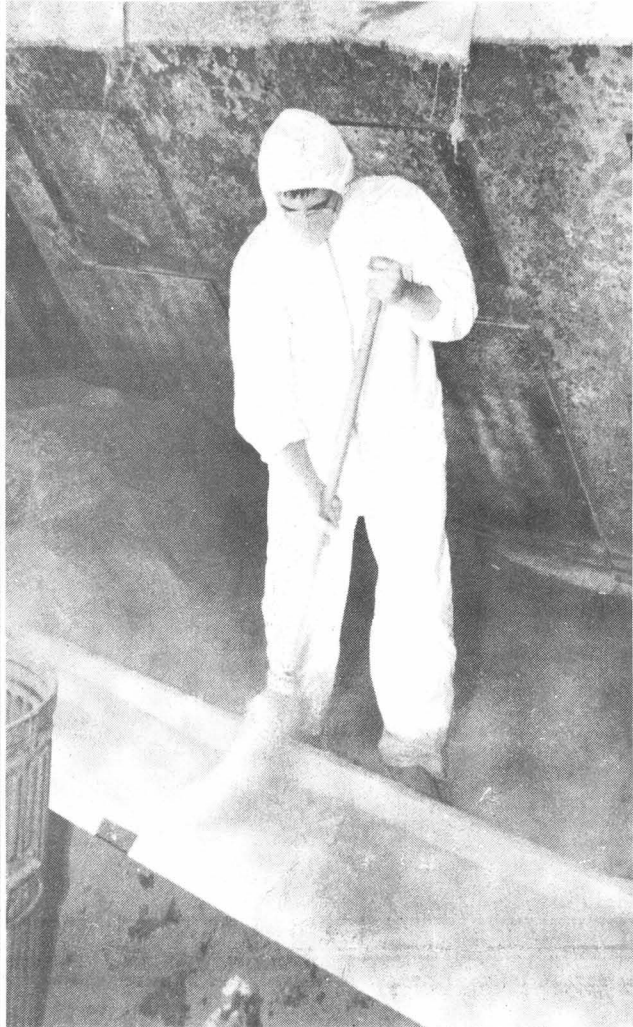

When the first individual returns were filed in 1914, they numbered only 358,000, identifying as taxpayers or dependents considerably less than 1 percent of the population. The returns covered taxes totaling $28 million, a figure so insignificant by modern federal standards that it would show up as an asterisk in budget documents.

The returns being filed this year represent more than 90 percent of the population and will reflect taxes of about $425 billion.

The 1988 returns are the first filed under the three-tax-rate structure that was enacted as the keystone of the 1986 tax overhaul. Those three rates — 15 percent for all the taxable income of the majority of taxpayers, 28 percent for most others, and 33 percent for a relatively few — represent one of the few significant tax-law changes from last filing season.

Nevertheless, an IRS sampling of early returns showed taxpayers making the same mistakes that plagued last year's filings.

Center to face loss, study says

By Lois Wright
Lantern staff writer

Expenses for the new downtown convention center will exceed its income during the first three years of operation, a market study reported last week.

But the study said additional funds needed to operate the center in its first few years would not increase present taxes or create any new taxes. Instead, the study called for re-allocating existing hotel-motel tax revenues.

The study was conducted by Laventhol and Horwath, public accountants, and The Troy Group.

THEY SAID to solve financial problems of the center, the ownership of the Ohio Center would be turned over to the Convention Facilities Authority in 1991.

"In 1991, ownership of the Ohio Center will be reverted back to the city of Columbus and will then be turned over to the Authority," said Brent McCurdy, director of management for Laventhol and Horwath.

Mayor Dana G. Rinehart, the city council and members of the Convention Facilities Authority and Ohio Center boards, proposed funneling $1.6 million in city motel-hotel tax revenues through the Convention Facilities Authority to the convention bureau.

The bureau now gets $1.6 million directly from the city. The proposal said the cash going through the Authority would get a better bond rating and lower interest rates.

JERRY HAMMOND, city council president, said the merger of the two centers calls for a larger center and more money. He said Columbus may give an additional $1.8 million in hotel-motel tax revenues that now goes to the city's general fund to the center.

Linda Readey, project coordinator of the new center, said the Design and Refinement Committee will meet with the Trott-Eisenman Architect team to discuss how to connect the two centers.

The committee, which is composed of Authority members and community representatives, will also address problems with the High Street facade and the loading truck area of the design.

The Trott-Eisenman team's entry was the winner in a design contest for the center that was sponsored by Leslie H. Wexner.

McCurdy said the past success of the Ohio Center will help the new downtown center.

"THE OHIO CENTER has been very profitable and will still have concerts and local shows," he said. "We want to maintain this business at the Ohio Center and possibly increase it with the help of the new center."

He said some of the larger events booked at the Ohio Center for 1992 will be transferred over to the new center.

Study of black males too narrow, critics say

By Reggie Anglen
Lantern staff writer

A new commission to study the plight of black males in society is receiving praise for breaking new ground, and at the same time being criticized for focusing too narrowly on a segment of the population.

The crisis facing black men cannot be resolved unless it also addresses the longterm problems of black women, said the chairman of the department of black studies.

Manning Marable, who is also a professor of history, said he commends the governor for creating the Commission on Socially Disadvantaged Black Males. However, Marable said studying the unemployment, health and education of the black male is like trying to solve a problem with only half of the equation.

"The particular problems that African-American men face are crucial," Marable said. "But there is no longterm solution to the crisis of the black man that doesn't also involve the black woman."

Gov. Richard F. Celeste said the commission was created to study the black male's "vicious downward spiral of alienation and despair."

"Only 2.7 percent of the students attending Ohio's public four-year colleges are black males," Celeste said. "Black males comprise almost half of the state's prison population while comprising less than 7 percent of the state's overall population."

Celeste said life expectancy for black males is decreasing and black male unemployment is double that of white males.

"Our young men are a tremendous resource that are going to waste," Celeste said.

Marable said the status of black men between the ages of 18 and 26 has been undermined by high rates of unemployment and poor housing.

Elected officials, civic and community leaders and representatives from the judicial system, schools and health agencies will make up the bulk of the commission. The commission will hear testimony throughout Ohio from these groups.

The commission will then implement educational and public awareness programs geared toward the black male. A chairman for the commission has been appointed and the rest of the members will be chosen in May.

Samuel Gresham Jr., president of the Columbus Urban League, said he gives Celeste credit for creating the commission.

"I do not believe that the black community will realize its own expectations until black men in that community are able to realize their expectations," Gresham said.

"If we are going to survive as a community, black males will have to be the major actors," Gresham said.

A preliminary report from the commission is due in six months. A final report will be sent to the governor in one year.

Injured officer expects to work again

Will return to narcotics team; complete recovery expected

By Juli Klyce
Lantern staff writer

The Columbus police officer who was shot during a drug raid near campus April 7 said he intends to return to undercover narcotics work after he recovers.

Mark Ely, 35, spoke in a tired voice at a press conference Friday. He said he almost has full sight in his left eye and doctors are giving him optimistic reports for the right eye.

He said he may undergo eye surgery and he expects he will have facial scars after he recovers in about six weeks.

Ely and Sgt. Hugh Stanley, both working undercover for the narcotics squad, were called to 2118 Indianola Ave. to investigate a tip about a package from Miami supposedly containing narcotics.

"It appeared to be a routine situation," Stanley said in an interview last week.

Ely said they were talking with a resident in the house who said someone was coming to pick up the package.

He said he heard the back door open and the resident go into the back room. Ely said he then heard people arguing in Spanish and the sound of a gun being cocked.

Ely pulled his gun. He and Stanley backed up to the wall. When Ely peeked around the corner, he was shot.

He said the bullet deflected off his gun which Ely was holding about a foot from his face.

Ely said he remembers falling to the floor and Stanley jumping in front of him. He said he was conscious the whole time but had lost most of his sight.

The man fired two shots, Stanley said. He said he thinks the man would have fired again, but his gun jammed on the third bullet.

Stanley said he shot three times at the assailant as the man was running away, but thinks he missed him.

Ely said he thinks he could identify the man.

Columbus Police have charged Fredrico Escoto, 19, from Miami with the shooting. Nestor Gutierrez, 23, also from Miami and Tammy L. VanMeter, 20, of Westerville, are charged with obstructing justice in allegedly helping Escoto escape.

Questions about the case were restricted by Lt. Ralph Casto because police are still investigating. Casto said police think the three suspects have left the state. The FBI filed arrest warrants for Escoto, Gutierrez and VanMeter last week.

Ely was wearing a patch over the right eye which took the brunt of the gunblast. His left eye was bruised and blood shot.

Ely, a father of four and a 12-year veteran of the Columbus police force, said he does not think any amount of training could have prevented the incident.

"You hope you have the chance to react," Ely said.

Incidents like this are always in the back of an officer's mind, Ely said.

He said he remembers wondering if the man would come back into the room. Ely said he thought about his family and if he would survive.

"I've got a lot to be thankful for," he said. "God was with me."

Thatcher responds to tragedy

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — Lawmakers Sunday demanded changes in stadium designs, including a ban on anti-riot fences, after a mad rush at a soccer match trapped thousands of fans behind one of the steel barriers. At least 94 people died.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher visited Hillsborough stadium and promised a public inquiry into Saturday's disaster, which turned a soccer cup semifinal into a nightmare.

Then she visited hospitalized survivors and listened to their accounts of Britain's worst sports disaster.

OK, my Federal Adjusted Gross Income, from Federal Form 1040, line 31, or 1040A, line 13, or 1040EZ, line 3.

Why in the hell did I wait until the last minute again this year? Why didn't I file my tax return in January like a normal person?

Ohio Adjusted Gross Income, line 2 added to or subtracted from line 1. Exemptions, add lines 4 and 4a. Now ... number of exemptions from line 4 times $20. Subtract line 8 from line 7, enter zero if credits from schedule C and or D or line 56 on back of this return.

What does all this mean? How did Henry Block ever stay in this business?

If line 19 is less than line 15, subtract line 19 from line 15 and enter the amount you owe.

Easy enough, lets see ... I owe $14,288,789.99.

Two more bodies found

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Authorities discovered two more bodies Sunday buried on a collective farm two miles south of a ranch where 13 victims of a cult of human sacrifice were found last week.

Investigators said it was possible the victims found on the collective farm were killed by the same cult suspected of performing human sacrifices on the 13 discovered at Rancho Santa Elena, about 20 miles west of Matamoros.

Acting on a tip from some children, a 77-year-old man led police Sunday to the common grave in a clearing in an orchard on the farm, Ejido Santa Librada, federal police group chief Martin Elias Salazar told reporters.

The children had told the man, Hidalgo Castillo, that they had seen some people burying a body in an orchard last October, Salazar said. Castillo's son, Moises, 52, had disappeared last May. Salazar said Castillo had discounted the children's tale until the 13 bodies were dug up.

The stacked bodies of the two men appeared to be those of adults, investigators said. Neither had been positively identified as of Sunday night.

Officials disinterred the second body just before sunset Sunday. Salazar searched through the pockets of a pair of black pants found on the second body and discovered 3,000 Mexican pesos and a $5 bill.

Asked if the bodies found Sunday appeared to be related to the ones found on Rancho Santa Elena on Tuesday, Salazar said it was possible but too early to know for sure.

Tax preparers brace for flood

(AP) — Professional tax preparers and U.S. Postal Service officials in Ohio are bracing for a rush Monday of people who have only hours left to prepare and file their 1988 income tax returns.

Tax returns are due by midnight Monday. Taxpayers had an extra two days to file their returns this year because the normal April 15 filing deadline fell on Saturday.

Many people, however, were unaware of the extended deadline, said Kathy Collins of Tax Time, a tax preparation company in Akron.

"We were very busy on Friday. We told a lot of clients that they could pick up their returns Monday and they'd say 'No, that's too late.' I don't know if it (the deadline extension) was really publicized that much," Collins said.

Brooks Drake, a district manager responsible for 18 Dayton-area H&R Block Inc., offices, said clients were relieved Friday and Saturday to discover they had not missed the filing deadline.

"It was like people on death row finding out they had gotten a reprieve," Drake said.

Tax specialists and accountants said they expect to work late into the night Monday preparing returns and filing extensions for last-minute tax filers.

"I have in my clientele a number of individuals I can depend on to come in pretty late," said Jim Oddi of Accuratax of Columbus. He said he works between 65 and 70 hours a week each year from February through mid-April.

"I've operated in Columbus for seven years, and year in and year out there seems to be more and more people trying to file at the last minute. You almost don't want the phone to ring. There never seems to be enough time, no matter how well you plan."

Many post offices will offer special accommodations for people filing returns right up until midnight Monday.

In Columbus, traffic will be directed through the front parking lot of the main post office and people can drive through and hand their completed returns to postal workers.

"Any returns we get by midnight (Monday), we'll make sure they get postmarked on the 17th," said Debbie Rinehart, a mail processing clerk at the main post office in Columbus.

She said the volume of mail the post office handles swells noticeably because of the last minute tax returns, but machines which read bar codes on the returns and route them automatically speed the returns along.

Internal Revenue Service officials expect about 1.8 million returns to arrive Monday at the IRS center in Covington, Ky., which processes returns filed from Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Indiana and West Virginia.

TRAGEDY: from page 1

"We were shouting out to (the police) to get us out and they just couldn't move us," 33-year-old John Davis told her. "It was just sheer bedlam. It was every man for himself. There were people screaming and screaming."

Seventeen-year-old Wayne Adams said he was about five rows from the front of the crowd. "I realized it was serious when I saw one of the lasses standing near me just turn blue in the face. She went down. She was dead. That was it," he said.

Police defended the decision to open 16-foot-wide steel gates outside the stadium just as the match between the Liverpool and Nottingham Forest teams began. Last-minute arrivals then poured into a central standing-room-only section, pressing those already inside against the steel mesh fence.

The sturdy 10-foot-high fence, angled in at the top to stop people from scaling it, prevented them from escaping over the top to the field. Some were crushed to death. Others suffocated or were trampled trying to fight their way out of the crowd or when the barrier finally collapsed.

South Yorkshire's chief constable, Peter Wright, said a senior officer decided to open the gates "to save people's lives and to relieve the crush outside."

An investigation was expected to focus on allegations that some fans entered the sold-out stadium, which has a capacity of 54,000, without tickets or with forged tickets, and why so many were still outside as the match began.

Police Supt. Tony Pratt, asked about the decision to open the gates, said, "Whatever happened there yesterday, there was a demand for police action and action was taken."

Survivor Stephen Dooling, 34, defended the police action. "The police had to open the door because the lads at the front were screaming. They would have died there at the turnstiles instead of in the ground," Dooling said from his hospital bed.

Pratt said the casualty toll stood at 94 dead and 170 injured. Many victims were teen-agers and children, because the cheap standing-room-only section is favored by young fans.

Seventy-one people were hospitalized, many in extremely critical condition.

It was the third major soccer tragedy in four years involving English teams, which have been barred from European soccer competition since May 1985 because of rioting by Liverpool fans.

A stampede by Liverpool fans at Heysel Stadium in Brussels in May 1985 killed 39 people. Eighteen days earlier, 56 soccer fans had died in a fire at Bradford Stadium in England.

Lawmakers and other survivors demanded changes in stadium designs and the elimination of anti-riot fences.

"People were caged in yesterday — people who should have been able to escape off those terraces, who were killed needlessly," said Liverpool Liberal lawmaker David Alton.

He said the fences should come down immediately, a demand echoed by Sheffield Labor lawmaker Joe Ashton, and Denis Howell, a former Labor sports minister.

Bert Millichip, president of the English Football Association, said regulations require fences.

"Nevertheless, in light of the appalling tragedy yesterday, quite clearly we now have to look at the fences and it has to be a very serious consideration whether or not they have to be pulled down," he said.

A disaster fund was set up for families of the victims.

Ohio leaders address racism at Baha'i world peace lecture

By Setsuko Iscoe
Lantern staff writer

Two Ohio leaders working to close the racial gap presented their ideas in a world peace lecture Saturday.

Janet E. Jackson addressed the issue of racism, sharing what she called "painful memories" with the audience at the Ohio Union for the conference titled "Racial Unity: A Requisite for World Peace."

Jackson was the first black to be elected as a municipal judge in Franklin County. She was invited as a speaker to the third annual conference sponsored by the Baha'i Peace Committee of Central Ohio and the OSU Baha'i Club.

The Baha'i faith is a worldwide independent religion based on belief in "oneness of mankind," elimination of all kinds of discrimination, and equality of men and women. It promotes peace and racial justice.

Recalling her childhood, Jackson said she lived in a small, all-black town in southern Virginia, raising tobacco on a farm and going to a little one-room church across the road.

JACKSON BECAME aware of racism as a young girl. She said one incident that shocked her as a child occurred in the local drug store.

Jackson, her mother, and five other children were shopping, when the clerk told her mother that the children were not allowed to touch anything, while white children were doing the same thing and escaped reprimand.

"I always felt tension constantly on my mother's face anytime when we had to deal with anyone who was not our race," Jackson said.

The feelings and misunderstandings Jackson faced in her childhood led her to pursue the best education available.

"In my household, a key word that I heard over and over, and I can't remember the time when I didn't hear it, was education, education, education," Jackson said. "Education was a key to get out of southern Virginia and education was a key to better life."

ALTHOUGH THINGS have changed, she pointed out that the racial gap in this country is definitely widening. Even in Columbus, which Jackson thought was isolated from the rest of the world, has seen cases where young blacks were harassed and threatened by young white males.

Jackson called for action to eliminate racism as well as such problems as drugs and homeless people.

"Open up your eyes and ears, and know what's going on around you," Jackson said.

Elsie Austin, the first black to graduate from the Cincinnati Law School, to join the Ohio Bar Association, and to serve as an Assistant Attorney General for Ohio, also spoke.

As a long-term active member of the Baha'i Faith both in the United States and Africa, Austin provided the Baha'i perspective on racial and ethnic conflicts in the world.

SHE SAID the elements preventing peace throughout the world are hatred, jealousy, prejudice and racism.

Austin called for the unification of the human race by taking a new perspective on human conditions, such as new understanding of cultural and historical differences.

Moreover, Austin stressed the importance of a worldwide religion in providing people with motivation and power to pursue a worldwide peace.

"Fanaticism and materialism prevailing in this country have undermined the moral victory for which the religion is supposed to serve," Austin said.

She also pointed out some of the great issues to be solved for the pursuit of world peace. She said those include racism, discrepancy between the rich and the poor, religious strife, and denial of equal opportunity to women.

EMPHASIZING THE potential of individuals and the new consciousness of the human race, Austin said, "Each one of you is an agent to change."

"Racism is the most important and challenging issue facing America today," said Steve Dimler, chairman of the Baha'i Peace Committee of Central Ohio.

Joe Koen, president of the OSU Baha'i Club, said the objective of the club is to bring world peace movements into the Columbus community, working with several other Central Ohio organizations.

"We are engaged in informal talks about what we can do to stop racism on campus. Some of the members are involved in service activities, such as disability service or helping homeless shelters in downtown," Koen added.

Mother awaits victim's remains

(AP) — One year after Ellis Greene was apparently slain to set an insurance scheme in motion, his mother still wonders what happened to his body.

"We're still hoping that some day, we'll find out what (John B.) Hawkins did with the ashes," said Greene's mother, Darlene Greene of Portsmouth. "That's not much to ask for, but it would be something."

Authorities say the alleged scheme in which Greene played an unwitting role was planned by Hawkins and Melvin E. Hanson, who co-founded the Columbus-based Just Sweats clothing chain, and Dr. Richard P. Boggs, a Glendale, Calif., neurologist.

The three men in California have been charged in connection with Greene's murder. Authorities have said Greene's death was part of a plot to collect more than $1.5 million in life insurance and to embezzle an additional $2 million from Just Sweats.

If they are convicted, the three men could face the death penalty.

Greene, 31, a former Columbus resident, was last seen leaving a bar in North Hollywood, Calif., and getting into a taxi on April 15, 1988. The next morning, Boggs called medics to his suburban Los Angeles office and identified a dead man there as Hanson, investigators have said.

Hawkins ordered the body cremated and claimed the ashes, saying he was going to scatter them over the Pacific Ocean, officials said.

The alleged scam began unraveling months later when an insurance company started questioning the identity of the dead man, who turned out to be Greene.

Authorities claim Boggs and Hanson killed Greene in the physician's office and that Hawkins was in Columbus, but aware of the slaying.

Albert MacKenzie, assistant Los Angeles County district attorney, said that although the body was cremated, authorities have evidence showing the cause of Greene's death. MacKenzie said the cause would be revealed at a preliminary hearing for Boggs this summer.

California authorities have started extradition proceedings to bring Hanson, who is being held in the Franklin County Jail, to Los Angeles for trial. Boggs is being held in the Los Angeles County Jail. Hawkins remains on the run.

Greene's mother said she never will understand why her son was killed, but believes a healing process would start if she could bury his remains.

"I had a son killed in an automobile accident in 1976. Then we had a body and we buried it," she said. "You never get over it, but at least you can start to heal. With something like this, Ellis being killed and his ashes being taken, you just can't come to terms with it."

"We had a memorial service in October at the Pentecostal church just for the family. I thought it might help his brothers and sisters and me understand what happened, but it didn't," she said.

The Lantern is an independent, student-written laboratory newspaper published Monday through Friday during the school year, Monday and Thursday during summer quarter (except finals week, legal holidays and university vacations) by the OSU School of Journalism.

The university administration has no influence over content; editorials reflect a majority opinion of the Lantern editorial staff. Viewpoints expressed in columns, cartoons and letters do not necessarily reflect those of the staff.

The newsroom is in the Journalism Building 271, 242 W. 18th Ave., Columbus, 43210. The business office, room 281, is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

ADOPTION:

Who is the best parent?

Traditional families, those with a mother, a father and two well-behaved children, just aren't around anymore.

With the today's reality of a one-parent family, the stereotypical family is gone — in its place are single mothers, fathers and yes, even homosexual men and women involved in the same task — raising children.

A new bill was proposed to prohibit homosexuals from adopting children or becoming foster parents. The bill, proposed by Sen. Gary Suhadolnik, R-Parma last Thursday in the Ohio Senate, was met by immediate opposition from the members of the gay community.

Since homosexuality isn't accepted in today's society, Suhadolnik says, children raised by homosexual couples will run a higher risk of suffering from emotional trauma.

Suhadolnik, who has had conflicts with the gay community in the past, said, "What we'll have is a precedent for the judges in the state, an ounce of prevention."

Prevention of what?

Perhaps, it is the prevention of acknowledging how many normal, stable homosexual couples there are in the United States — or the prevention of admitting that the "right" sexual preference isn't the only ingredient that transforms children into well-adjusted adults.

Clearly, this is discrimination. And also scary. Children already growing up under the guidance of homosexual couples won't know right from wrong. What they once thought of as being normal, suddenly isn't.

This bill is blatantly biased and harshly directed against homosexuals. It's passage will only perpetuate the same kind of ignorance and animosity that individuals as Suhadolnik are suffering from.

EDUCATION:

A six-year degree?

Our universities are positioned to complete and continue the flow of knowledge gained from high school.

But for those who receive a Pell Grant from the government, a newly proposed bill would interrupt that flow.

For two years, a student would be required to care for children, elderly or handicapped people — or whatever else falls under the title of civil service — full time.

Only then would a student be eligible to receive any government aid.

This postponement, according to the bill's proponents, would help decrease the student loan default rate; it was $1.6 billion last year.

Also, students would receive up to a maximum of $10,000; $4,400 over what they presently get to pay for four years of college.

This approach might work for the students who are willing to take a rain check on their education and careers, but what about those who don't want to be left sitting in the dust of the more fortunate students?

With this bill, there are no choices involved — without a two-year commitment, there is no governmental aid.

For many poor high school students, the very segment at which the Pell Grant is targeted, the incentive to go to college will be gone. They will see the two-year wait as an injustice, blackmail.

Everyone must have the same opportunity for an education at the same time as everyone else — after high school graduation.

Let's not cut off an important part of our society. Better to cut off an arm.

Waiting for the next revolution

Some of you idealistic hippies out there may think that what you're about to read is true.

If so, you're probably still tripping on acid.

You see, I was walking down High Street Friday when I met him. He was a freaky, weird dude. He may have also been an immortal messiah.

Let me explain. I had my head buried in the Lantern while I stumbled down the sidewalk, bouncing into people, bikes, mutilated trees — anything that was in my path. I was typically clueless. I was really into reading this Lantern story:

NEW YORK (AP) — Abbie Hoffman, the Yippie who clung to his '60s idealism amid an onslaught of the '80s yuppieism, was remembered Thursday as a radical and a joker who could provoke a laugh even as he outraged and informed.

Hoffman, 52, and still as anti-establishment as ever, died peacefully in his bed Wednesday...

"Not bad for a nice Jewish boy from The Bronx," said a scratchy voice from over my shoulder.

I turned around. Standing before me was an old, bearded homeless man, wearing bell-bottomed jeans. He kind of looked like the hippie in that commercial for the Freedom Rock album.

I was just waiting for him to yell,

WENGER'S WORLD

"Hey man, turn it up!"

Instead, he softly chuckled, "You know, man, it was a groovy revolution while it lasted, but this here Pig Nation went down the tubes once they elected the gipper. Don't drop your zipper for the gipper, you dig?"

"Hub?"

"It's drug hysteria, man. I mean Reagan's urine testing, budget cuts and harsher penalties have returned drug education and treatment to the Reefer Madness era. And that damn simplistic 'Just Say No!' campaign is the equivalent of telling manic depressives to 'just cheer up.'"

"What?"

"Dig. They're comparing drugs to the plagues of the medieval times. Man, that plague wiped out two-thirds of the people in Europe. According to government statistics, in 1979 3,500 deaths were attributed to illicit drugs, and no deaths were caused by marijuana. I'll take a joint over the Black Death any day."

This was no ordinary homeless guy. This was a real weirdo homeless guy.

"I wrote some books, you know."

"Really?"

"Yeah, I wrote Steal This Book. You see, I didn't want anyone to buy it — I wanted them to steal it. Dig?"

"Well, who did you want to steal the book?"

"Seven-year-old kids, cause that's who I write for. They're the vanguard of the revolution."

"Oh, of course." I shouldn't have asked, I thought.

"Man you still don't get it, do you? You've got to sharpen up that liberal, pin-head of yours."

"It's me man — Abbie."

"Abbie Hoffman?"

"Yeah, man. See, I don't think I have that much to say anymore, not to your generation. I have a lot to do and I think I'm pretty clever and I know how to do a lot of things, but I don't think I have much to say. The ideas are already in."

"Do you think you have much to give?"

"Yes, I had my life to give. I faked it. People like me don't really die, we just wait for the next revolution. See, maybe by dying I can shake some things up, rebuild some interest for the cause."

"But man, your generation — it's apathy. That's the scourge. You may ask, 'What about the innocent bystanders?' But in a time of revolution, if you are a bystander, you are not innocent."

"I grew up with the idea that democracy is not something you believe in, or a place you hang your hat, but it's something you do. You participate. If you stop doing it, democracy crumbles and falls apart."

"When our country is right, keep it right; but when it is wrong, right those wrongs."

"Young man, don't give up hope. If you participate, the future is yours. Tell the people."

And then he turned his back and walked away, muttering something about doing America on $0 a day, and starting a "free America," where no one has to pay for anything.

And as he shuffled off, the weight of 30 years of protests, marches, sit-ins, riots, arrests, drugs and trials could be seen pressing on his shoulders. Yet there was a certain pride in his steps, the pride of knowing that he taught a generation to stand up for what they believed in.

And one day, the grizzled, old protester will return, and he will remind us once again that the establishment does, in fact, suck.

A take-what-you-need math approach?

If you are a successful, well-educated professional, Paul E. Burke has a question for you: How much math do you use?

Unless you are a math teacher, a theoretical physicist, an engineer or some such, he's guessing that the answer is: not that much.

Arithmetic, certainly — including fractions, decimals and percentages — maybe a little algebra. But even if you were once pretty good at analytic geometry, trigonometry or calculus, Burke doubts that you have much use for it now — or for such mathematical arcana as negative exponents, logarithms and imaginary numbers.

So why is the commission on standards for school mathematics (of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics) calling for more required math in the nation's high schools?

BURKE, A MEMBER of the NCTM, suspects the commission's recently released recommendations are based on the erroneous notion that raising the math requirements of high-school students will produce more scientists and engineers in a country in pitifully short supply of these professionals. He has another idea: "Requiring unnecessary math does not create future scientists. It creates dropouts and hatred for math and for school."

Burke, a social scientist at HUD, is no mathematics Philistine. A former math and physics teacher, he took advanced-placement calculus in high school before earning a bachelor's degree in math at Brown University (where he also took his master's degree in urban studies).

"His point is a simple one: High schools should require — even for the college-bound — only the math that successful professionals actually use."

HIS POINT IS a simple one: High schools should require — even for the college-bound — only the math that successful professionals actually use. More esoteric courses should be available for those students with an interest in them, but only as electives. Nor will math-avoiders be happy with his proposed list of required courses.

"Everyone should study percents, statistics, logic (i.e. geometric proof, symbolic logic or law) and a computer language. But the country does not need all students to study polynomials, geometry if triangles and simultaneous equations. These are unneeded barriers in high school. They make many students feel dumb."

Burke doesn't insist that you agree with him. All he wants is a reality-based debate on the subject before the commission issues new standards requiring such things as "matrix algebra and its application to the solution of linear systems," certain advanced physics courses and mathematical regressions.

THE MOST OBVIOUS argument against Burke's proposal is that limiting high-school requirements to the math that most people actually use would foreclose a number of career options. Few high-school students are settled on their career choices. Isn't it likely that his limited approach would make it impossible for late-deciding students to choose math or science majors?

Burke doesn't think so. "I believe there are very few students who dislike math enough not to take it early and then go on to take lots of it. Some particular disciplines — theoretical economics, for example — might possibly be foreclosed. On the other hand, if you make some students feel dumb and they drop out, you've also foreclosed some options for them — and for society.

What of the argument that a person who knows only what he uses is not educated but merely trained? Says Burke: "To be educated, you need to know various habits of thought. There is a mathematical approach. Art and history also involve certain habits of thought that are worth acquiring."

But even if Burke's approach wouldn't do much harm, what good would it do?

He has a ready answer for that one, too. Two answers, in fact.

FIRST: "YOU CAN often learn more of what you really need to know in short courses. I had two weeks of symbolic logic, and that did more to teach me the rules of logic than a year of geometry. The point is that if students are taking extra years of math, they will be taking something else that they like and would be less likely to drop out."

Second: "Math teachers are scarce, which means that good math teachers are scarcer. Eliminating some of the math requirements would mean that we would need fewer math teachers, which should translate into a higher percentage of good math teachers."

I find Burke's ideas appealing, but I'd be glad to entertain others in the interest of productive debate. Any takers?

Rights debated

This is in response to the March 31 Lantern article entitled "Ethics Issues Debated on Animal Rights at Meat Production Forum." I believe the Lantern writer was either biased or simply failed to understand some of the discussion as the article so poorly represented the arguments put forth by those in favor of animal rights. I would like to comment on just a couple of the mistakes in the article.

First, those in favor of meat production made it sound as though it is practically impossible to obtain enough protein without the inclusion of meat in the diet. This is hardly the case. The American Dietetic Association has been lowering the recommended daily allowance for protein. The current RDA for protein is approximately 60 grams and even this amount is considered high by many doctors and dietitians. It is quite easy to obtain this amount of protein daily from pasta, rice, beans, tofu and numerous other vegetable sources. Nor is it particularly difficult to form a "complete" protein as any combination of grains and legumes will suffice.

Second, in the debate, Mr. Lane stated farm animals are not under stress despite the cramped conditions of the factory farm. He used as proof of this lack of stress the fact that the animals can reproduce. It is true that animals, including humans, cannot reproduce when under physical stress which can be caused by lack of nourishment or by over-exercise. No one in the debate stated these animals were not well-fed, and as they get little to no exercise, they are certainly not over-exercised. The stress they do experience is emotional stress, and I do not think anyone would claim animals (again, including humans) cannot reproduce due to emotional stress. The fact these animals can reproduce is not proof they aren't under stress. Chickens, for example, are under so much stress they must be "debeaked" in order to keep them from attacking and killing each other in their small cages.

These are important points when dealing with the issue of animal rights and it is unfortunate the Lantern article failed to include them. I hope such biases will not occur again.

More controversy

In response to the recent publicity about Roe vs. Wade, it seems there will never be an end to the controversy over abortion, no matter what the Supreme Court decides on April 26. There will always be women who believe it is their right to have an abortion at any time they want.

The thing that bothers me about the people who favor abortion is that they always seem to skirt the issue that the embryo growing within the woman's uterus is indeed a living human being, a person. How anyone can say it is not living is beyond me.

Perhaps they feel a little guilty. What abortion does is that it removes the embryo, fetus, products of conception, baby, or whatever you want to call it, from the uterus, often by cutting it into pieces. Once removed it can no longer grow and produce new cells. It sounds like a rather cruel way to die to me.

Because of what abortion does to that tiny person, I cannot be in favor of it.

Once a person takes a stand against abortion, they should be ready to back up their words by being willing to give assistance to women experiencing unplanned pregnancies. I have volunteered at a crisis pregnancy center in Columbus and often it's very rewarding and challenging.

If there is to be any resolution to the conflict, people must first learn to love and respect human life at every stage of development. Life is such a precious gift and can never be brought back once its gone.

The 4,400 babies who are aborted each day will never have a chance to exercise any rights. The value of those lives should not be based on how convenient they are to the parents.

Second, people need to be willing to take responsibility for their actions. If you've slipped up and become pregnant (or your girlfriend is pregnant), don't be so quick to get an abortion and try to erase the incident. The fact of that baby's existence will always be with you.

Third, people especially need to be responsible in their sexual activity. If you don't want to be pregnant, don't go to bed with anyone.

Birth control is not 100 percent effective. Besides, there are a lot more aspects to a person's life than what they do in bed. Explore these other aspects and enhance your relationship with your partner.

Equal coverage

Cheers for the Lantern reporter who took note of the diversity of groups and individuals who marched for the Choice in Washington D.C. last Sunday. Some of us were really under many banners, including that of RCAR, the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights, which represents 30 Protestant, Jewish and other religious groups working together to safeguard the option of legal abortion and to preserve the separation of church and state.

Wrong stats

The article appearing in the April 10 edition of the Lantern, concerning the Women's Rights March on the Capital is a blatant display of irresponsible and biased reporting.

Your own, and erroneous, statistics should have been prevented you from illustrating the march with an inappropriate photograph. You state, erroneously, that there were 300,000 anti-abortionists. Where are you math and logic skills?? Wouldn't it be more appropriate and truthful reporting to have a photograph of a pro-choicer?

Your statistics were incorrect. There were close to 600,000 demonstrators. I know. I was there. The correct statistics makes you choice of photos even more outrageous.

This reporting is a disgrace to journalism, and insult to your readers and an erosion of truth.

Elizabeth Ann Osborn

Inaccurate report

This letter refers to the article on the front page of the April 10, 1989 Lantern concerning the march in Washington D.C. on April 9, 1989.

Let me keep this simple, I have three comments:

1. The title of the article claimed that there were 300,000 people at the march. That is incorrect, I was there and I saw with my own eyes at least five to six times the amount of people that could fill Ohio Stadium, including the field! I also helped get signatures from the marchers for the census, which yielded over 600,000 signatures.
2. There was NO march for abortion anywhere last weekend. There was a march to prevent the illegalization of abortion and give women the right to control their reproductive lives. Many people at the march, including myself, were against abortion. The march was to give women a choice.

3. The photograph beside the article was in no way related to the march on April 9. The "pro-lifers" were minimally associated with the march. There were no more than 100-200 "pro-lifers" and these were completely drowned out in the crowd.

The march was a peaceful demonstration for the opposition of the overturning of Roe v. Wade. It was also considered to be on the same scale as the march for civil rights and for the ending of the Vietnam war. Clearly the importance of this march can not be overemphasized.

I am shocked that the Lantern would print such a biased and wholly inaccurate report of this march. That article was close to an outright lie. We students need to speak up about these types of biases and inaccuracies in our school newspapers and take advantage of the freedom offered in a college newspaper. The Lantern needs to take more responsibility for its printed information. After all, if we cannot believe the news, who can we believe?

P.S. What does George Bush think Roe v. Wade is? Two ways to cross the Potomac? Free Barbara Bush!

Christine Rousseau

Outraged

We were outraged at the sight of the front page of the Lantern April 10. To begin with, we were greatly disturbed at the picture appearing with the story covering the pro-choice march on Capitol Hill Sunday.

What is the justification for including a pro-life picture with a pro-choice article? (Not to mention the powerful implications of the picture.) Was the decision perhaps a subtle statement of the biases that exist among the Lantern staff?

Secondly, we question the placement of the article, itself. Granted, it was on the front page, but the placement of the article at the bottom suggests it is a story of lesser importance. Perhaps the Lantern's front page editor feels she is more qualified to determine what is newsworthy in American's minds than The New York Times or The Columbus Dispatch, who gave the story front page, priority placement. Is this again a bias of the Lantern staff?

Considering that this is an institution of learning, where journalists are trained to be neutral in their coverage of news stories, we are ashamed to say that we attend a university with such a biased newspaper staff. This staff is definitely not representative of The Ohio State University.

Letdown

I was both disappointed and angered by some of the Lantern's recent articles which discussed the pro-choice march in Washington, D.C.

Though this may be a small point, the Roe v. Wade decision was incorrectly referred to as having been decided in 1971; this occurred in two separate articles on different days. The correct year, 1973, is so commonly known, I'm not sure how the writer(s) made this mistake, but when citing a court case, it's normally assumed that one will use accurate information.

The more important problem, though, was the use of anti-choice rhetoric in describing the intent of pro-choice activists. I refer, of course, to the sentence that stated the activists' plan to "demonstrate their support of abortions . . ." in the march on Sunday. As a pro-choice advocate and a participant in the April 9th march, I believe I can vouch for thousands when I say that we did not march in support of abortions, but rather in support of every woman's individual choice to decide to bear or not to bear children. The above Lantern quote falsely implies that we would encourage all women to seek abortions in all circumstances, at all times, which is not our ideology, as that would be diametrically in opposition to the very core of the pro-choice sentiment.

Finally, the biggest letdown was to return to Columbus the following day only to find my alma mater's newspaper selectively printing a single wire photo of an anti-choice demonstrator at the march. Had this been in juxtaposition to a photo showing the thousands who marched in favor of the status quo (i.e., the pro-choice advocates), then I would have viewed it as "equal time" measure. Rather, it was chosen among other photos to be run by itself, placing undue emphasis on the presence of the minority, and perhaps misleading those who couldn't or chose not to attend. Fortunately, on the same day, the Lantern published an editorial (though this was on the 4th page and not the 1st, as was the aforementioned photo), and on the following day, a front-page article, both of which clarified the ideologies and the politics of the opposing groups (thank you Ty Wenger and Tara Anne Powers).

I would encourage the Lantern's journalists and editors to use accurate information, to pay closer attention to the messages they transmit, be they in the form of words and photos, and to remain mindful of the power of the medium which they choose.

'Say Anything' says the same old stuff

REVIEW

JAMES DALLAS

"Say Anything," the Twentieth Century Fox release that opened Friday, has a little bit of everything . . . but unfortunately we've seen it all before.

First off, though, I have to say that the film is okay. It isn't great, but maybe when it comes on HBO I'll watch it again. In fact, I suggest watching it on HBO instead of going to the theater.

In spite of the movie's many problems, John Cusack is a riot and makes the movie enjoyable.

Full of symbolism and underlying themes, the film's messages are good ones, but not new ones.

For example, "sex changes everything." True, but it's not exactly the atomic bomb. Basically, 'honesty is the best policy with the ones that you love' prevails over the movie's many themes.

This film has more cliches than "Dirty Dancing" or "Top Gun," and writer/director Cameron Crowe ("Fast Times at Ridgemont High") seems to be creeping into the John Hughes film genre ("Sixteen Candles," "The Breakfast Club").

The movie opens with our hero, Lloyd Dobler (John Cusack), discussing his dream date with his friends, and wondering if Diane (Lone Skye) will go out with him. You see, they both (cliche!) 'come from different types of backgrounds.'

If that's not bad enough, the scene is high school graduation day and she's the class valedictorian. Nobody really knows her and everybody knows Lloyd.

On a whim she goes out with him, and he (cliche!) 'changes her life by introducing her to the gang at the big graduation party.'

After she (cliche!) . . . you get the idea falls for him, there's the all-important "meet the family" gig. How about at dinner?

Diane's father (John Mahoney) is her only parent because of a divorce, and he is her only close friend. She can literally "say anything" to him. And she does.

"I slept with him," she tells her father. He's incredibly cool about it though.

Cusack ("Better Off Dead") is definitely the highlight of the film, doing what he does best — ramble. Crowe works overtime to give Cusack the one-liners, which he delivers incredibly well.

At the big dinner scene, Lloyd is inevitably drilled on his plans for the future.

"My dad wants me to join the Army, but I can't work with that corporation. I can't figure it all out tonight, sir, I'm just kinda hangin' with your daughter right now," he tells her dad at the table.

Toward the end of the film, he's pressed again for his plans. "I just want to be with your daughter. I'm good at it."

Cusack nervously rambles throughout, making the movie watchable and funny. The problems lie in the hackneyed situations and pseudo-symbolism.

"In your eyes," the movie's love theme performed by Peter Gabriel, has some sort of symbolism. Honesty is in the eyes, I guess.

"Look at those eyes," John says to his friends. In case you don't catch it, he says it again. In all fairness, Skye does have great eyes.

Bathrooms play an interesting role in this film too, but it's hard to tell what it is. When he first calls her, he's in the bathroom.

When Diane's father gets audited by the IRS, he is depressed in the bathroom.

It may be a baptism of sorts. When John and Diane break-up, it rains. John gets soaked, but he's not reborn.

The breakup leads to a great scene with John and the guys. Here, the cliches are the jokes.

John seeks condolence from four other guys who have been dumped, and they all have women down to a science. "Man, you can't trust women," and "You're better off without her," are the offerings of the scientists.

After a barrage of "You gotta get a girl who looks just like her, sleep with her and dump her" advice, John says, "If you guys know so much about women, why are you all sittin' here at a gas station drinking beer on a Saturday night with absolutely no women in sight?" Ouch.

Diane's father, who has pushed her all her life to be the best, seems like a great guy. Diane wins a fellowship to study in Europe and he is incredibly excited for her. He'll do anything for his daughter, and this is what gets him into trouble.

Not only is he incredibly excited, but incredibly stupid. He's being investigated and followed by the IRS, and he leaves evidence (i.e.: embezzled money) almost out in the open.

Another unbelievable event is Lloyd running into his career counselor at a party.

I didn't buy it either. Slightly hard to swallow, Mr. Crowe.

Symbol after symbol pops up. Keep an eye on the pen and the "No Smoking" sign, to name a few. The latter, by the way, is nicely handled. I won't give away the scene, and I'll leave the interpretation up to you.

In all, "Say Anything" is harmless. Cusack is great, but is still playing nervous high-school kids, like his character in "Better Off Dead." No real growth except in his line delivery.

Crowe almost tells an old story with a new angle, but falls just short. A few twists weren't enough to keep the standard format from being just that — standard. The movie was still plagued by the commonplace themes of different worlds, boy meets girl and boy gets girl.

Crowe, with a background at Rolling Stone magazine, shows a great concern for the music in this film.

The sound track includes tunes by Cheap Trick, Nancy Wilson of Heart, Living Color and Peter Gabriel to name a few. Check out the background jams in the party scene. Two thumbs up.

If you can follow the themes about age or honesty or niceness, great. If you can't, that's great too. The flick is funny and just plain old nice.

I would have liked it better if I was in high school though. The leads would have been better had they been at least close to being in high school, as well.

"Say Anything" says it all, but unfortunately we've heard it all. Close, but no (cliche!) cigar.

'Jackknife' typical, but worth seeing

The new film "Jackknife," has nothing to say about the Vietnam War that has not been said in other films, but solid performances by the cast and a good script turn "Jackknife" into a compassionate picture about people affected by the war.

"Platoon" gave the audience an idea of what combat was like, and "Coming Home" has already shown what happened to some soldiers once they were back stateside.

"Jackknife" is just a well-made remake of previous Vietnam movies.

The movie follows the reconciliation of two Vietnam veterans, Megs and Dave, who continue to be guilt stricken and at odds over the death of their friend Bobby, who they saw killed in action in Vietnam 15 years earlier.

Robert DeNiro plays Joseph Megessey, nicknamed Megs, who is a loud and cocky auto mechanic in Connecticut.

Ed Harris plays Megs' old army buddy Dave, now unemployed and an alcoholic. He lives in the house where he grew up with his shy sister Martha, played by Kathy Baker.

When Megs arrives at their house for a fishing trip, Dave is not too keen on having Megs around because of the terrible memories Megs brings with him.

Dave has nightmares of the time in Vietnam when he was pushed out of a helicopter into battle because he was too scared to jump.

Megs is still haunted by the war, but has the courage to attend veteran group meetings and is slowly learning to accept what he did in the war. He even wears a baseball cap that belonged to Bobby for good luck.

Out of love, Megs sticks around

MOVIES

RYAN SOMERVILLE

to confront Dave about their past, but Dave would rather drown his sorrows in alcohol.

When Megs and Martha begin to fall in love, Dave goes off on a self destructive path of amphetamines and booze.

"Jackknife" is based on the off-Broadway play "Strange Snow," written by Stephen Metcalfe. An excellent script makes these characters believable and real.

De Niro gives his usual good performance in the film as the brash Megs, never sitting still and always talking with his hands.

The most enjoyable moments in the film are with De Niro and Baker, as the two characters try to capture their lost youth by attending the high school prom where Martha is a biology teacher.

Martha is insecure, and meeting Megs makes her feel good about herself for the first time in years.

Ed Harris received wide recognition playing the young and charismatic astronaut John Glenn in "The Right Stuff."

Harris' portrayal of Dave in "Jackknife" is excellent, and is convincing because it is tastefully understated.

Instead of histrionic and grandiose speeches about the war, Harris lets Dave's inner pain seep through with subtle expressions and haggard mannerisms.

The balding actor seems to make his temples bulge with emotions that have been boiling in his characters' gut for 15 years.

"Jackknife" is playing at the Drexel North, 4250 N. High.

Elizabeth Herndon Fleming, owner of the Herndon House Art Gallery, shows different works of art from one of the gallery's exhibits.

Graduate exhibits unique paintings

FINE ART

KEITH ACKERMAN

An OSU graduate is exhibiting selected examples of his unique works at a local residential gallery through May 31.

Artist Tracy Steinbrook is being featured in a two-man show at the Herndon House gallery, located at 40 Winter St. in Westerville, said Elizabeth Herndon Fleming, the owner of the gallery.

Steinbrook, a drawing and painting instructor at the Columbus Cultural Arts Center since 1984, graduated from Ohio State with a bachelor's degree in fine arts.

He is exhibiting several paintings at Herndon House, covering a wide range of topics. His work includes haunting landscapes, bold figurative pieces and energetic contemporary works. All his pieces use bright colors and bold strokes.

"His work is sort of joyous," Fleming commented. "It's colorful, interesting in its variety. In his portraits, he captures the character more than the precise form."

Steinbrook said the painting process is his source of motivation.

"I have no idol," he said. "I just have a real love of painting. That's my source of inspiration."

"I do like the idea of paint," he continued. "I like the smell, the look of it. There are painters that try to fool you by painting illusion. I just like the paint."

Steinbrook has also experimented with sculpture, metal work and printmaking while in school at both Ohio State and Santa Monica College in California.

Also included in the Herndon House exhibit is Charles Herndon, head of the sculpture department at The Columbus College of Art & Design since 1973.

He uses unique rocks and processes like lamination to produce smooth organic forms. Herndon also shows versatility through the use of sculpting materials like bronze, steel, cast aluminum and volcanic rock.

Herndon said his talent derived from years of practice and perfecting his technique.

"I've been doing this all my life practically," Herndon said. "I spent a lot of time on Kelleys Island when I was young. The rocks on Kelleys Island are a source of my work."

Herndon said his fascination with what time and natural phenomena like the glaciers can do to rock greatly affect the forms his sculptures take on.

"He's a master of his craft," Fleming said. "The stones are wonderfully graceful forms in which he reveals the intrusions of time."

Herndon House, open since the fall of 1976, is a two-story home situated in residential Westerville. Fleming uses the two larger downstairs rooms to show exhibits, while utilizing the rest of the house to feature selected works from nearly 40 regional artists.

All the artists represented have had shows at the gallery, and all displayed works are for sale.

Fleming's gallery gives new artists a chance to show their talents. And it gives her a chance to share her philosophy on art.

She said art belongs everywhere, and it doesn't have to match the sofa. Her belief is evident by each art-filled room in the house, including the bathroom.

Gallery hours at Herndon House are 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and by appointment.

O'Connor returns

COVINGTON, Ga. (AP) — Actor Carroll O'Connor returned Friday to the set of the television series "In the Heat of the Night" to film the season finale, one month after open-heart surgery.

O'Connor's character, Chief Bill Gillespie, is kidnapped while attending a domestic terrorism conference in Washington in the episode. The show will air May 16 on NBC.

O'Connor underwent heart surgery and had his gall bladder removed at an Emory University Hospital in Atlanta.

Critics justified

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Kim Ulrich, who plays a young nurse on the NBC television series "Nightingales," says she and her colleagues sympathize with critics who don't like to see them running around in their underwear.

"I think that the fact that we've had to do all the underwear scenes and all of the aerobic scenes, we've kind of banded together to fight them," she said recently.

Critics have complained the show focuses on sex rather than nursing and casts the nursing profession in a bad light.

The actress, who plays the character Allyson Yates in the series, said she doesn't enjoy those sexy scenes.

"There are maybe a few people who do enjoy running around in their underwear, and I'm not one of them," said the actress, who is married to casting director Robert Ulrich.

Softball team wins 1 of 4

By Gary Hunt
Lantern sports writer

An eighth-inning rally gave the Ohio State softball team a 4-3 win over Iowa Saturday, and prevented the Buckeyes from being swept in a weekend series with the Hawkeyes.

Ohio State won one game and lost three at North Field over the weekend to move its record to eight wins and 20 losses on the season, 2-8 in the Big Ten. Iowa improved its record to 28-11, 6-2 in the conference.

Iowa won two games against Ohio State on Friday in a double-header, the first game 3-1 in 12 innings.

Iowa won the second game on Friday by a score of 1-0, and took the first game on Saturday, 2-0.

In the final game of the series on Saturday, neither team could manage to score until the bottom of the sixth, when the Buckeyes struck for two runs.

Michelle Fulton started the sixth by reaching first on an Iowa error. After Tracie Matheney singled and Kathy Boettcher hit into a fielder's choice, Carolyn Urse made what has to be considered the most unusual play of the season.

Urse hit a slow grounder to Cara Coughenour, who was playing first base for the Hawkeyes. Coughenour had no chance to force out one of the other Buckeye runners, so rather than get the force on Urse at first by touching the bag, she attempted to tag Urse with her glove. Urse slid under Coughenour's glove, got up, and trotted to first where she was ruled safe.

Urse said that she got the idea to slide under the tag earlier in the game, when she was retired on a similar play.

"I was talking to Michelle (Fulton), the right fielder, and I said 'Next time I'm going to go underneath her (Coughenour) because she's so tall,'" Urse said. "I tried it and it worked. I don't think the umpires knew what was going on."

The play was ruled an error on Coughenour, and loaded the bases with just one out. After Iowa got Susan Gahn to hit into a fielder's choice, Shauna Bowman hit a double to bring in two runs.

The Hawkeyes then struck for two runs in the seventh off of Buckeye pitcher Colleen Kennedy, who had stopped Iowa to that point. After holding Ohio State scoreless in the seventh, Iowa took a 3-2 lead in the eighth.

Ohio State answered, as Matheney singled in the bottom of the inning for the Buckeyes, and Urse sent her to second on a well-executed sacrifice bunt down the third base line.

"She (coach Davenport) told me before I even went up (to bat) that if Tracie gets on, we're sacrificing automatically," Urse said. "We were playing to tie."

Ohio State tied the game when, with two out, Bowman came through again with another double to score Matheney. Kennedy then ended the game with a ground ball up the middle to score Bowman, who just beat the throw to the plate.

Ohio State coach Gail Davenport said that the final game Saturday might have been a turning point in the Buckeyes' season.

"I think we're turning the corner," Davenport said. "I think they really now believe that, no matter what the score is, no matter what happens, they can come back. Up until this game they had always folded. They didn't fold today."

Davenport said that although her team had wanted at least a split with Iowa over the weekend, the fact that the Buckeyes played the Hawkeyes close is something

Top Midwest pitcher signs with Buckeyes

By David Myers
Lantern sports writer

The Ohio State baseball team went a long way toward landing the state's top senior Thursday by signing Cincinnati Oak Hills High School's Scott Klingenberg to a national letter of intent.

Klingenberg, a 6-foot, 180-pound right-handed pitcher is rated one of the nation's top 50 prospects by USA Today and is the only Midwest player to make the list.

Klingenberg, who is 3-0 this season and has not allowed an earned run in 30 innings pitched, led his American Legion team to a national title last summer.

OSU Coach Bob Todd said signing Klingenberg sends a signal to other colleges that Ohio State is a program on the rise, but said there is one more hurdle that must be cleared before the hard-throwing right-hander becomes a Buckeye.

"(Signing Klingenberg) tells a lot of people, not only in the state of Ohio but around the country, that our program is for real," Todd said. "It's a program that will be reckoned with in the future."

"On the other hand, it may not mean anything if we don't get him to school. We kid around the office that we're halfway there. The first half is to recruit a kid to college and the second part is to make sure that he doesn't sign a pro contract."

The major league amateur draft takes place in June and Klingenberg, who said he has been contacted by all 26 major league teams, is expected to be a high-round draft pick and the recipient of a sizeable signing bonus.

Klingenberg said the bonus will have to be substantial to sway him away from college.

"I'm not going to throw out any figures but I'll just say there's going to have to be something there to make me turn down a full-ride scholarship (at Ohio State)," Klingenberg said.

Klingenberg, who is eligible to play next year under Proposition 48 guidelines, said he chose Ohio State because of the coaching staff.

"It came down to (the University of) Minnesota and Ohio State and then it came down to the Ohio State pitching coach (Duane Theiss)," Klingenberg said. "I respect him a lot and I just felt that would be the best place to help me get into the major leagues."

to build on.

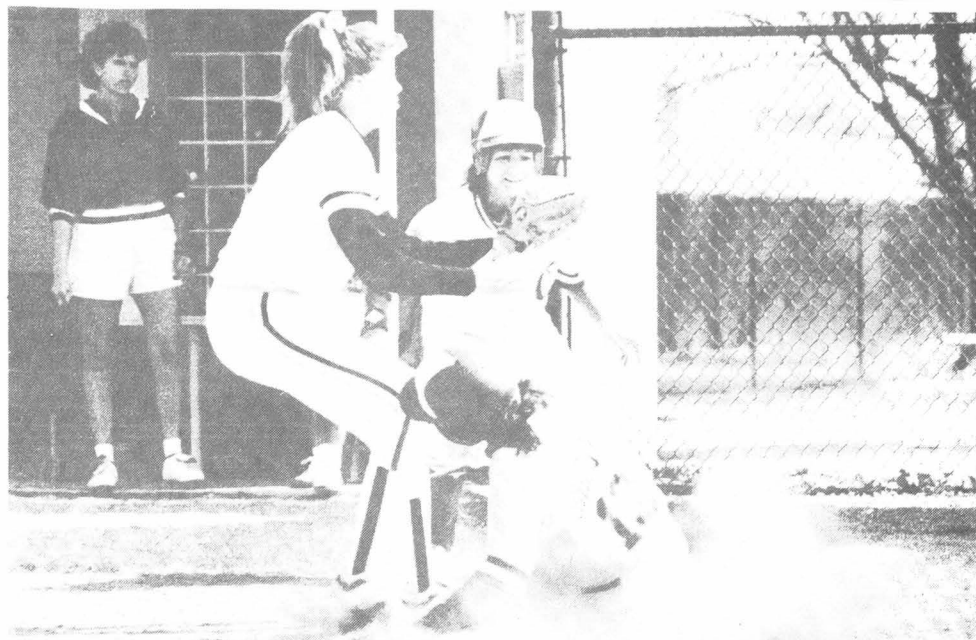

"I think it was important for us to show them that we could stay in any ballgame with anybody in the Big Ten," Davenport said. "We've got some of the weak teams coming up, and if they (Ohio State) can beat these guys, they should be able to beat the weaker teams."

Gayle Blevins, coach of the Hawkeyes, said that she is not satisfied with taking three out of four games in the series with the Buckeyes.

"We wanted to come in and be 4-0 quite honestly," Blevins said. "There are some series where you have to get as many games out of it as you can, and we felt like this was a series where we really needed to go 4-0."

Blevins said she was not surprised that Ohio State gave her team a tough time.

"They played with a lot of determination and a lot of heart, and I think that's a big improvement in the program," Blevins said. "I felt like they got stronger in that last game every inning."

Shauna Bowman, 13, scores for Ohio State on a passed ball as Kathy Boettcher looks on and Iowa pitcher Terri McFarland, 4, waits for the ball.

Women's tennis squad swept 9-0

Eighth-ranked Hoosiers win all but one set

By C.R. Barclay
Lantern sports writer

The Indiana women's tennis team showed why it is nationally ranked and leads the Big Ten as it swept Ohio State 9-0 Saturday at Wirthwein Courts.

The Hoosiers lost only one set in the entire match as they dropped the Buckeyes to 0-7 in the conference and 7-13 overall. Indiana, (8-0, 22-2), took control of the match early and never let go.

Indiana Coach Lin Loring was pleased with his team's effort.

"We wanted to work on footwork and serving today," Loring said. "The match helped us because it gave us a chance to play outdoors since it looks like we'll be outside on Monday."

Loring's thoughts about Ohio State were that the Buckeyes have talent but, must play more consistent to win against Big Ten opponents. Loring said Ohio State also must forget who it is playing against and just play.

"One girl (OSU's Amy Marzluff) won the first set then realized she had a chance to beat Indiana and tightened up in the second and third sets," said Loring.

Marzluff, a freshman from Dayton, had the best performance for the Buckeyes, winning the team's only set all day. Marzluff beat Amy Alcini 6-4 in the first set, but was shutout 6-0, 6-0 in the next two sets. Marzluff's shots in the second and third sets were falling just outside the lines, unlike her shots in the first set.

"I played well in the first set," said Marzluff. "Everything just fell into place and I hit the ball good."

Marzluff said she became anxious in the last two sets.

"I pressed too hard in the second and third (sets)," said Marzluff. "I tried to get the points too quickly instead of just waiting for them."

Neither coach was surprised at the effort Ohio State gave in the match. Both coaches agreed Ohio State had nothing to lose.

"Being ranked eighth in the nation, we are probably the best team they'll see this year," said Loring. "I expected them to come out and go for the lines. If they can't get up for the defending Big Ten champs, then they can't get up for anyone."

"If they can't get up for the defending Big Ten champs, then they can't get up for anyone."

— Lin Loring

OSU Coach LeeAnn Massucci was not depressed by the defeat to Indiana. She said that her team is still improving.

"We came out swinging and went for it," said Massucci. "We talked about being winless in the Big Ten and where we wanted to be as far as performance goes. We've been down this road before. We know that our wins will come and could be in the conference tournament."

Ohio State managed to claim a 6-3 victory on Friday against Illinois State to get a split on the weekend.

Ohio State closed out its spring home schedule with a 2-4 record and will face Minnesota and Iowa on the road next weekend. Ohio State will then head to Bloomington Ind. in two weeks for the Big Ten tournament.

Columbus man takes gold medal

By Eric Hagely
Lantern sports writer

The crowd cheered for its hometown favorite as Greg Baker won the gold in the Men's Welterweight division at the 15th U.S. National TaeKwonDo Championships Saturday night at the Ohio Center.

Baker, 24, of Columbus, is a third-degree blackbelt and was a bronze medalist in the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, Korea, where he was coached by tournament director Master Joon P. Choi.

"I tried to attack, push him back a little and make my counters," Baker said. "I was able to adjust to him fairly well. I tried to outpoint him basically, I didn't want to get into a brawling situation."

Baker's opponent, Bobby Kim of North Carolina, stunned him early in first round, but Baker didn't let him do much else until the final round, using roundhouse kicks to keep his opponent away.

The win allows Baker to compete for the United States in the Olympic Festival, the World Games in Germany and the Ninth World Championships in Korea.

Other gold medalists from Ohio were: Boo Hong Kim, of Canton, Men's Forms (Under 140.8 lbs.); Helen Yee, of Columbus, Women's Finweight; Julie Werhnyak, of Painesville, Women's Lightweight; Luong Pham, of Kettering, Men's Flyweight; and Kim Dotson, of Shaker Heights, Women's Featherweight.

In all, the Ohio team won six golds, two silvers and four bronze medals.

TaeKwonDo is life of Olympic coach

By Eric Hagely
Lantern sports writer

Body, mind and spirit are the three things one must possess to be a TaeKwonDo specialist, and Joon P. Choi is one who has truly "mastered" these.

Master Choi, 43, is an eighth-degree blackbelt from Columbus who has studied the art of TaeKwonDo since the age of 11, more than 32 years ago back in his homeland of Seoul, Korea.

"I was very small and very shy," Choi said. "I didn't have much confidence and got beat up all the time, so my parents enrolled me in TaeKwonDo school."

Choi, tournament director of the 15th U.S. National TaeKwonDo Championships held this past weekend at Larkins Hall and the Ohio Center, developed his skills very quickly and soon fell in love with the sport. This is evident as Choi explains that he has never held another job in his life.

He has had no regrets though. "TaeKwonDo is unlike any other sport because it is a lifelong commitment," Choi said.

The sport has brought success to Choi as he has coached over 15,000 students. He has more than 900 students being taught by about 120 blackbelt instructors.

Choi was the head coach of the 1988 U.S. Olympic team and had to return to his native country of Korea for the Olympics.

"Well, now I'm an American citizen and in TaeKwonDo sports, there is no nationalism," Choi said. "I'll do my best to be the best in the world."

Choi led the Olympic team to four gold medals, two silvers and five bronzes in the Seoul games. His women's team came in first in the world and his men's team came in second.

Overall, he has produced nine national champions, five international championships and one world championship.

In 1976, Choi began his coaching career and a year later had produced enough national winners to be named head coach of the national team. He led them to the world championships where placing third out of 80 teams.

"In 1978, I was made head coach for the Pan-Am Games and the world championships in Korea where we made the top three again," Choi said.

He was named AAU Coach of the Year in 1979 and since has produced the most national and international champions in the United States.

Choi credits his successful coaching career to his knowledge and dedication to the sport.

"I was the All-Korean national champion in 1967 and 1968," he said. "I already know what it's like in the ring because I was once a national champion."

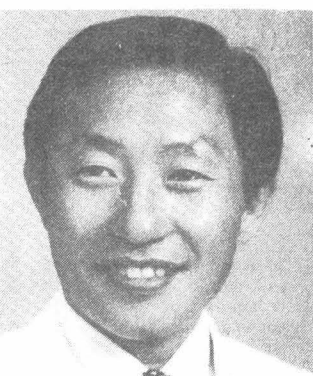

"Then, I constantly studied the current technique changes, trends of the referees and how they think, then developed a new technique, which has been popular since last year."

In addition, Choi said he studies the referees, the way they think and the way they judge, to be able to develop moves to counter the opponent.

"Most of all it is the coaching method, the discipline and dedication of the athlete, and the support of the parents that leads to success," Choi said. "My students are known as the most disciplined and courageous in the whole United States."

Perfection is something Choi strives for his students to obtain. It is also something he strives for himself.

There are five stages to be a master Choi explains: "First, a healthy body brings a healthy mind. Second is self-defense. Third is art and grace in the movements. Fourth is philosophy. And the fifth is spiritual development, one must be in harmony with the universe.

Courtesy Joon P. Choi

Choi said it will take another 10 to 15 years for him to achieve the ninth-degree blackbelt status. The ninth degree is the highest level.

From this point on for Choi, he said the process of moving to the ninth degree is mostly the establishment of the mind. He must write a few books and prove his knowledge of the art.

The learning process of TaeKwonDo is much like the birth of a baby, Choi explains. "In the beginning, a baby follows mom and dad, so in the art, the instructor is his parent. He imitates and follows what the master says. He gives respect, dedication and faith."

According to Choi, once the student receives his blackbelt, he begins to think and experience things on his own, including teaching the art to beginners.

"So, it is the process of the instructor and the student, like mom and dad, at the beginning stage, then like a brother they grow up, and then they become like a friend," Choi said. "Even if the student becomes highly educated under the master, he still has much more to learn."

Marathon could be a classic

BOSTON (AP) — For the men, it's the presence of the first three finishers from last year's dramatic race. For the women, it's the first confrontation in four years between the world's two fastest marathoners.

For Boston, it's the makings of a classic race.

While the rematch Monday of Ibrahim Hussein of Kenya, Juma Ikangaa of Tanzania and John Treacy of Ireland, the 1-2-3 finishers, respectively, in the 1988 Boston Marathon is intriguing, the rare pairing of Ingrid Kristiansen and Joan Benoit Samuelson may overshadow it.

Kristiansen owns the fastest woman's marathon time, 2 hours, 21 minutes, 6 seconds, and has been saying for four years she is capable of becoming the first woman to break the 2:20 mark.

Samuelson, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist and American record-holder at 2:21:21, has beaten Kristiansen in their only two meetings — at the Los Angeles Games five years ago and at Chicago in 1985.

Since the 1985 America's Marathon-Chicago, Kristiansen has run four marathons and won them all — at Boston in 1986, at Chicago in 1986 and at London in 1987 and 1988. Meanwhile, Samuelson, beset with hip, knee and back injuries, and having given birth to a daughter in 1987, has been limited to one marathon, placing third in New York in November.

That's why Kristiansen, also the world record-holder on the track, at 5,000 and 10,000 meters, and owner of world bests at several distances on the roads, is oozing confidence at gaining a measure of revenge against Samuelson.

"I don't think Joan is fit enough to run under 2:25," the Norwegian said. "But she's a tough runner."

Samuelson, far from fit, will be relying more on her experience, grit and guile to help overcome her physical deficiencies.

"I feel strong — stronger than when I ran New York — but I don't have much speed," said Samuelson, who underwent arthroscopic surgery on her left knee in February.

Also in the women's field are 1988 U.S. Olympian Cathy O'Brien (2:30:18); Kim Jones, fifth in last year's U.S. Olympic Trials (2:32:03); and Britain's Priscilla Welch, 44, the fastest Masters runner in history (2:26:51).

Women in science discuss careers

Seminars promote chances to consider scientific jobs

By Rebecca Mugler
Lantern staff writer

About 750 junior high and high school girls met Friday at the Ohio Union to hear women scientists speak about the different career opportunities in their fields.

This was the ninth year the Association for Women in Science of Central Ohio (AWISCO) and Ohio State have co-sponsored such an event.

Association President Gia Randall said the purpose of the conference was to get young women interested in science and to give them information about the different science career choices available.

"I know when I was in high school, all you knew about was being a nurse or a doctor; you didn't know about all the other science careers that were available," Randall said.

Each student picked two workshops out of 26 different science areas offered. The workshops were located throughout the campus and included areas in math, engineering and the physical sciences.

"It made us more aware of all the careers available in science," said Amy Jutte, a junior at Watkins Memorial in Pataskala.

More than 35 women scientists participated in giving the 40-minute workshops.

Randall said it was difficult finding the speakers because there are so few women with science-related careers.

"We feel it's really important for girls to have mentors, but then it's the old Catch-22: How are we going to have mentors if there aren't women in those positions?" she said.

Amy Reynolds, a senior from Dublin, and Kara Blachowski, a junior from Toledo, were two OSU student scientists who conducted a workshop on chemical engineering.

"I think engineering prepares you for any field because it teaches you to solve problems and how to deal with people," Reynolds said. "These skills can help you in any job."

Selma Mohammed, AWISCO member and research assistant in physiological chemistry, said, "I think this is a really nice program because a lot of young women don't grow up with a good background in the sciences."

Mohammed said she hopes in the future there will be an equal number of women and men in the sciences.

"There's a shortage of women in all sciences," Randall said, "especially at the PhD and graduate levels."

Randall said she expects growth in science and technology to be phenomenal, reflecting the progress that has been made in the last ten years.

"If a girl has an interest in science, she should pursue it no matter what," Randall said.

She said because more women are in the work force and involved with careers in science, men are going to be more accepting of them.

"I think things will change," Randall said. "There aren't going to be quite the same barriers that existed 20 years ago."

Melanie Kennedy, vice president of AWISCO, said she thought the day was quite successful.

"We had a lot of comments from parents and teachers about how pleased they were that we were having it because they think it's such a good experience for students," she said.

Soviet activism discussed

By Muchun Yin
Lantern staff writer

The recent unrest and protests in the Soviet Union and other Communist countries are not caused by extremists but by genuine grass-roots movements, panelists at an Ohio State conference said Saturday.

Panelists from the United States and Canada gathered at the Ohio Union to discuss the formation and direction of popular movements in Soviet republics such as Armenia, Lithuania and Estonia and in Eastern Bloc nations such as Poland and Hungary.

One cannot call a nationalist movement "elite" if its rallies draw a third of a republic's entire population, as it did in Estonia, said Tony Farming, an associate professor at the University of Maryland and chair of Estonian studies at the University of Toronto.

"Nationalism, seen from an Armenian viewpoint, is a matter, literally, of cultural survival... a matter of life and death. It's not an intellectual exercise," said Juliette Stapanian, an American-Armenian who chairs the Russian department at Emory University.

Armenians also view their nationalist movement as a civil rights movement like the U.S. civil rights movement of the 1960s, Stapanian said.

ALFRED ERICH SENN, a professor at the University of Wisconsin, illustrated the wide appeal of a Lithuanian reform group, Sajudis. Sajudis members include writers, artists, scientists, Communist Party members and youths, Senn said.

Rock music groups play a part in movements, too, Senn and Farming said. "While in the United States people have been concerned about rock music being played backwards with its satanic messages, in Estonia rock music is extraordinarily nationalistic in content," bringing many youths to the movement, Farming said.

The nationalist movements in the different republics and countries may head in several different directions, the panelists said.

For example, Dennison Rusinov, research professor at the University of Pittsburgh, said the disintegration of Yugoslavia may result if ethnic groups or states try to break from the federation that is now Yugoslavia.

PART-TIME OPPORTUNITIES

UPS has an unusual workout in mind for you. Unusual because this workout doesn't just keep you in shape, you get excellent wages and benefits, and possibly some management experience with UPS: the company Fortune magazine named the "best managed transportation company in America".

You'll start working between 15 and 20 hours a week. If you stick with it and show potential, you may be eligible for a supervisory or management job.

So consider a part-time job with UPS. We'll give you good pay, a benefits package that includes vacations, holiday pay, medical insurance and the opportunity to join the company's savings plan. What's more, you'll get the kind of experience that looks great on a resume.

Interview with UPS on Tues., April 18, 8:30am - 2:00pm in the Ohio Suite A&B of the Ohio Union, Because pumping packages pays off in more ways than one. An equal opportunity employer.

Concerns arise regarding future abortion decision

By Nadine Collins
Lantern staff writer

Ohio pro-choice advocates are concerned that an upcoming Supreme Court hearing on a Missouri law could signal the end to legal abortions in the United States.

About 50 people met last week with The College Women's Network in the Ohio Union to discuss abortion rights in the wake of Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, a case that could restrict access to legal abortions in Missouri.

Jill L. Spangler, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League of Ohio, said she thinks the ruling could affect other states, and could open the door to the overturning of Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion.

"This case was designed to pack away Roe vs. Wade," Spangler said. "NARALOhio is very concerned right now. What was a seven to two decision in 1973, we're afraid could go five to four the other way right now."

The Ohio Department of Health indicates there were 40,571 abortions performed in Ohio in 1987, the latest year statistics were available.

THERE WERE 4,067 abortions performed in Franklin County in 1985, the year the latest statistics were available.

The Supreme Court will begin oral arguments on the Missouri case April 26. At issue is the constitutionality of a 1986 Missouri law that places six restrictions on the legality of abortion.

Reproductive Health Services, with the support of Planned Parenthood, brought the case to the Missouri district court, which found the law to be unconstitutional.

Missouri Attorney General William M. Webster appealed the ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The high court could do any number of things when it rules on the Missouri case. Janet Folger, legislative director for Ohio Right To Life, said the court could rule on any of the following provisions in the law:

- 1. Life begins at conception. The legal rights of the unborn are protected in all stages of development.
- 2. Abortions at 16 weeks or later must be performed in a hospital.

•3. If the unborn child is 21 weeks or older in development, a physician must determine before an abortion if the unborn child is able to live outside the womb independently.

•4. Employers, public and private, cannot compel employees to participate in an abortion, nor can they discriminate against them.

•5. "Wrongful life" lawsuits are prohibited. For example, if a woman has surgery to become sterilized, and gets pregnant after the surgery, she cannot sue her physician.

•6. No public funds, employees or facilities may be used to perform or assist in an abortion, or encourage a woman to have an abortion.

"This case was designed to pack away Roe vs. Wade."

— Jill L. Spangler

IF THE court upholds the law, it would go into effect in Missouri, and other states would be free to draft similar legislation into law.

Folger said if the Supreme Court rules on just one of these provisions, then Ohio can draft a similar law, and no lower court can find it unconstitutional because the high court will already have made a ruling.

Spangler said anti-abortion groups misunderstand the views of those supporting the right for women to choose to have an abortion.

She said keeping abortion safe, legal and accessible to women is the idea behind the right to choose.

Spangler said NARALOhio would not make the decision for someone whether or not to have an abortion.

"WE ARE here to say we have safe methods of doing this procedure, and it's important that the state does not come in and deny women access to that medical procedure," Spangler said.

"Safe abortions save women's lives. There's controversy over when life begins, but there is no controversy over whether a woman is a live human being."

She said because women have to take medical risks, undergo physical changes, and deal with the economic outcomes of having children, women should ultimately make the decision to have children.

"Anything short of that is an unconstitutional invasion into the lives of women."

Stephanie Varga, executive director for the Ohio Right To Life, said, "First of all, we have to recognize what we are choosing."

VARGA SAID people have the right to choose but there are certain things, historically, in this country that have been off limits to choose.

"We cannot choose to kill someone else and what abortion does is take an innocent human life and destroy it," she said.

"There are responsibilities that go with the right to choose and once it infringes on the rights of someone else — the basic, most fundamental right is the right to life — then that choice is not a given."

Joan Krauskopf, OSU law professor, said she is cautiously optimistic that the Supreme Court will adhere to precedence of not overturning prior decisions.

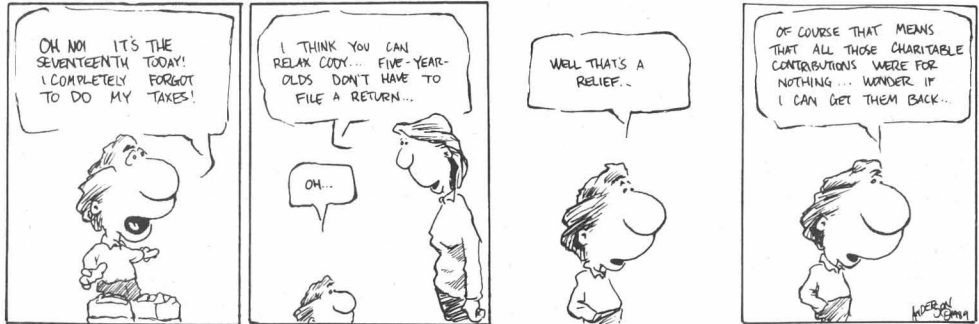

"I think the court is more likely to allow Roe vs. Wade to stand but at the same time approve some type of restriction on the right to abortion," Krauskopf said.

THE LANTERN FIRST ANNUAL ESSAY WRITING CONTEST

In his State of the University Address last October, The Ohio State University President Edward H. Jennings described the university as "eminently prepared for this globally competitive society." He concluded that speech by saying, "We are a university essential to the success of a knowledge-based economy...We are a university of vision and opportunity...We are the model for the American university of the 21st century."

The topic of your essay is how a large university like The Ohio State University responds to the challenges President Jennings has provided.

As a starting point, your essay might address questions like: How does the university prepare students for a "globally competitive society"? Is a university "essential to the success of a knowledge based economy"? How is The Ohio State University "a model for the American university of the 21st century"?

The essay is limited to 500 words, double-spaced, typewritten or submitted from a word processor. Handwritten essays will not be considered.

All essays must be received in the Lantern Business Office, Room 281-E Journalism, 242 W. 18th Avenue, Columbus, OH 43210 by 5 pm Friday, April 28th.

The judges will select a first place winner and three honorable mentions. The first place winner's essay will appear on the editorial page of the Lantern one day in May, together with a photograph of the author.

All winners must be OSU students who will be required to submit proof of student status before receiving their awards. The first place winner will receive $150 and each honorable mention will receive $50. Branch campus students are encouraged to submit essays.

Essays will be judged on originality of ideas, expression and development of thought, and proper grammatical usage. Employees of the Lantern or students currently enrolled in Journalism 421.01, 421.02, or 421.03 are ineligible.

Individuals from the following entities will serve as judges: Lantern Editorial Staff, English Department, College of Medicine, College of Engineering, College of Business and Long's Bookstore.
