Leaders join in supercomputer dedication

By Tracy Elmer
Lantern campus reporter

A ceremony Wednesday at the Ohio Supercomputer Center for the dedication of Ohio's new giant supercomputer, brought together state leaders in education, industry, and government.

Gov. Richard F. Celeste joined in the dedication of the CRAY Y-MP/864, the most powerful supercomputer in the world.

"The new supercomputer will be a key component in keeping Ohio's businesses and industries on the cutting edge of research and development," Celeste said.

Celeste said the dedication of the supercomputer represents a "coming of age" for Ohio. He said the event affirms Ohio's dedication and desire to provide researchers with equipment for work they never dreamed possible.

Spending state tax dollars on the supercomputer is a giant step towards the future, Celeste said. It will bring great challenges and produce the best graduate students in the country, he said.

Celeste said the supercomputer represents a statewide collaboration of researchers and industry, he said.

He said C. William McCurdy, a professor in the Department of Chemistry at OSU, used great imagination to bring the CRAY Y-MP/864 to the state. "It is imagination that carries us through research. Citizens will be thankful that great imagination was used in this essential investment in the future," he said.

The 7.8-ton supercomputer performs billions of operations per second, which is 280 times faster than an average mainframe computer. What would take a mainframe computer a week, the CRAY can do in 36 minutes. The supercomputer can also perform many computations at the same time, where older computers can only do one at a time.

The equipment cost $22.22 million, and the cost of operation for one year is $4.5 million.

The supercomputer will be used for such varied assignments as designing automobile and aircraft components, researching consumer products, predicting hurricane behavior, simulating the development of cardiovascular disease and studying black holes.

The CRAY is now the centerpiece of Ohio's Supercomputer Center, currently used by more than 20 colleges and universities throughout the state.

Celeste said Ohio is one of only four states to have created a supercomputer center with state funding.

James N. Scott, Chairman of the Ohio Supercomputer Center, thanked Ohio on behalf of scientists across the state for providing them with the finest equipment available.

Chancellor William B. Coulter of the Ohio Board of Regents said Ohio has never before invested intensively in research.

"This is an affirmation of Ohio's determination to compete with the world in knowledge," Coulter said.

OSU employees meet with union

By Katherine Buchmueller
Lantern campus reporter

Organizers from the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Union met Tuesday with university employees interested in a union and its resources.

AFSCME is targeting nearly 5,000 clerical, technical and professional employees that are not already union members.

"A number of employees wanted to talk to someone when they were faced with having their (health) benefits cut," Kathi Horwath, international union area director for AFSCME, said.

She said hospital employees the union is concerned with are those not currently covered by collective bargaining agreements of the Communications Workers of America or the Ohio Nurses Association.

Before July the university paid for all employee health care. Stephen W. Stoffel, associate vice president for Personnel Services, said, "What was originally a no-cost plan now has to be paid for by the holders of the health care plans."

Madison Scott, vice president for Personnel Services, said, "The university does not encourage or discourage employees meeting with AFSCME. This is a public university and the people have a right to assemble and we aren't going to interfere with that; at least I'm not."

The CWA represents two bargaining units at Ohio State, skilled maintenance and the dietary and housekeeping staff at OSU Hospitals.

In 1987 the CWA was unsuccessful in organizing most hospital workers. "At the time the workers thought the university would take care of them, but they aren't," Horwath said.

"One of the reasons people are interested in university jobs is the attractive benefits package. We accepted lower wages in return for great benefits, when the benefits are taken, all we will have is lower wages," an employee, who asked not to be identified, said.

Another employee, who also chose not to be identified, said, "People don't know what is going on. We need to let them know about the changes that are happening."

AFSCME requires that a minimum of 2,500 employees sign authorization cards before an election deciding to organize a union or not is held. "The cards are a non-binding entity to petition for an election," Horwath said.

AFSCME is an affiliate of AFL-CIO, the largest public-sector union in the country.

Veto on funding abortions upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional opponents of abortion say they are confident they have the votes to sustain President Bush's veto of a bill allowing Medicaid abortions for victims of rape and incest.

Supporters of expanding federally financed abortions for poor women acknowledged they faced a tough task in trying to raise a two-thirds House majority for an override vote today.

"It's going to be very tough, but we're working to win," said Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., who sponsored the amendment that won a surprise victory in the House two weeks ago.

"We don't know how many votes we'll get," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., a supporter of expanded availability of abortion. "But ... we know the pendulum is swinging in our direction."

A two-thirds vote of the House members present was needed to override Bush's veto.

"The times are not changing," said Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., a leading abortion opponent. "We will sustain his veto."

The liberalized abortion language passed on a 216-206 vote two weeks ago. The measure, which cleared the Senate by a wider margin, is part of a $156.7 billion appropriations bill for education, labor and health programs.

Bush said he was seeking "room for flexibility" on the issue immediately after the House vote. But under pressure from anti-abortion supporters he hardened his stand and vetoed the bill Saturday.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., called Bush's veto "mistaken" and said the Democratic House whips were seeking votes for an override.

On Tuesday, freshman Rep. Frank Pallone Jr., D-N.J., reversed his previous stand and said he would vote in favor of an override.

"I think it's wrong for me as a congressman to dictate to women ... what decision they should make in the case of rape and incest," said Pallone, who added he remains personally opposed to abortion.

The abortion provision would reverse a law in effect since 1981 that bans all Medicaid abortions for poor women except when the mother's life is endangered by her pregnancy.

Although the Senate has endorsed more liberal abortion provisions, the House in previous years insisted on keeping the current law. The House vote two weeks ago to accept the Senate version surprised even its supporters.

The disputed provision would allow Medicaid funding of abortions in cases of rape or incest, when the victim "reported promptly" to health or law authorities.

Assailant strikes Glenn at ceremony

'Earthquakes are starting,' man shouts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A neatly dressed man watched Sen. John Glenn help plant an Ohio tree outside the Smithsonian Institution on Wednesday, walked up to the senator and then punched him in the jaw.

Glenn, 68 and a former Marine, stopped the assailant by grabbing his arms, witnesses said.

Michael Breen, 31, of southwest Washington, was arrested and charged with assaulting a member of Congress, which is a federal offense, said District of Columbia police officer Quintin Peterson. Breen's arraignment was scheduled for today in U.S. District Court.

The man was taken into custody, but a police spokesman would not immediately say where he was being held or whether he would be charged.

Glenn's press secretary, Rebecca Bell, said Glenn was talking with television reporter Gary Nurenberg when "this guy starts muttering 'The earthquakes are starting.' The earthquakes are starting," comes up and socks Glenn on the jaw.

"Glenn grabbed his arms and called for the Smithsonian security guards who were standing not far away," she said. "The Smithsonian guards wrestled with the guy, threw him up against the wall and handcuffed him."

Nurenberg, a correspondent with Gillett News Bureau, said, "The senator at 68 had better reflexes than anybody else there."

Nurenberg said Glenn rubbed his jaw and said, "I haven't been hit like that in 30 years."

Before police took the assailant into custody, he talked to Nurenberg about last week's California earthquake as a harbinger of catastrophe in which two-thirds of the world's population would be wiped out.

"He talked about the children of Fatima. He said the pope is withholding information," the correspondent said. The man told Nurenberg he hit Glenn "to get attention."

Nurenberg described the man as well-dressed, wearing a coat, tie and suspenders. "He looked to be a professional, yuppie type," he said.

In addition to muttering about earthquakes the man also said "You gotta listen to me, the pope knows about it. I've filed it at the Capitol," said Loel Solomon, a Glenn aide who witnessed the attack.

Solomon said Glenn's jaw was

O'Brien, Brown battle for title of city attorney

Experience key for city attorney

By Debra Baker
Lantern city reporter

Prosecuting experience is the focus of City Attorney Ron O'Brien's campaign for re-election Nov. 7, he said Monday.

"My experience overall and in this office is the kind of experience the public likes to see," he said, citing two years as a legal intern, five years as an assistant prosecuting attorney, eight years as city prosecutor and four years as the city attorney as proof of his qualifications.

O'Brien, the endorsed Republican party incumbent, is challenged by Democrat Wayne A. Brown for the city attorney race.

O'Brien said the most important issue facing the city is the drug problem. His office has been active in efforts to strengthen criminal laws and to toughen criminal prosecution, he said.

Utilizing federal forfeiture laws to seize cash and property associated with crackhouse raids have enabled the city to take away some of the profit that motivates drug traffickers, he said.

Close to $2 million of cash, jewelry and cars have been forfeited to the city in the last four years, he said.

O'Brien said this money, under federal law, is allocated for law enforcement purposes.

Drug education, prevention and rehabilitation are also necessary in handling the drug problem as well, he said.

"In some cases, locking up drug dealers won't be enough," O'Brien said. Programs need to deal with rehabilitating dealers so that they don't return to dealing when they get out of prison, he said.

"The big challenge will be finding money," he said.

Collection of delinquent income taxes is also important, O'Brien said. Over $1 million of delinquent taxes were collected last year alone, he said.

"We have done a good job in the past, and we would like to continue," he said.

O'Brien said Brown lacks the experienced background he has. "He is a good lawyer, but my background and experience is strong," he said.

Although Brown has raised questions regarding the present O'Brien administration, O'Brien said that many of the claims against him are unfounded.

Brown said millions of dollars are wasted on legal expenses paid to outside legal firms, but O'Brien said 95 percent of the city's cases are handled in-house.

Brown said $700,000 alone was spent on outside legal advice in the Dow Chemical case involving the downtown Marconi Building.

However, O'Brien said the legal firm involved in the case had previous experience and expertise that city attorneys did not have. "It was in the public's best interest," he said.

Brown has also accused O'Brien of continually siding with the mayor over city council, but O'Brien said that Brown is the only one who has made this type of statement.

"City Council's silence indicates this claim is not true," O'Brien said.

"We try to guide the city and city officials down the best path possible," O'Brien said, "Whether it is the mayor or City Council."

O'Brien graduated from the Ohio State University College of Law in 1974 after completing his bachelor's degree in business administration at Ohio Dominican College in 1970.

He is a member of the Columbus Bar Association, the Ohio State Bar Association, The American Bar Association and the National District Attorney's Bar Association.

Married to Susan O'Brien, he and his wife have two children, Katie and John.

Brown pledges job leadership

By Debra Baker
Lantern city reporter

Wayne A. Brown said he will provide leadership and experience in both civil and criminal cases to the city attorney's office if elected Nov. 7.

Brown, the endorsed Democratic party candidate, challenges Republican incumbent Ron O'Brien.

"The city attorney should be an active leader and not a reactive follower," Brown said.

As a former assistant prosecutor and a current private practicing attorney, Brown said he has the combined experience in civil and criminal law that his opponent lacks.

Private practice has given Brown the management and decision-making experience he thinks is important to the city attorney's office, he said.

"If you want to get something accomplished, you have to be a decision maker," Brown said. "O'Brien is not a decision maker," he said.

If elected, Brown said he will be willing to offer his opinion on which actions he thinks the city should take.

"I can't be worried about making mistakes," Brown said. Too many politicians are concerned about making political mistakes, he said.

Brown said O'Brien rarely takes the initiative to offer his opinion. He usually waits for someone to ask for his advice, he said.

Brown believes the city attorney should be both an administrator and prosecutor.

"Ron sees himself as a prosecutor only," he said.

"It is important to prosecute misdemeanor crimes, but it is equally important to handle civil lawsuits," Brown said. "I think he has been neglecting this part of the office."

Brown said he sees many problems in O'Brien's administration.

He said O'Brien's premature referral of outside legal aid in the Dow Chemical case was an example of taxpayer waste that has incurred throughout his administration.

Although O'Brien said outside aid was sought because of the expertise they had in the area of the case, Brown said the aid was sought prematurely.

"Ron should have known the case would have been settled out of court and negotiations could have been taken on without outside aid," Brown said. As a result, $700,000 of the $4 million settlement went to pay legal fees.

Although he sees drug problems and drunken driving as important issues, Brown said the prosecutor's office is responsible for handling these issues.

He said the city attorney should continue to give the prosecutor's office advice toward handling felony prosecution, but should concentrate his efforts on finding space for those convicted.

As the chief legal officer of the city, the city attorney is dependent on the police department to make arrests, he said.

"I think the city attorney is not doing his job if the police department cannot arrest criminals and bring them to court (because there is no room in the jails)," he said. "The criminal community knows this situation."

He said the city attorney's office should help deal with the drug problem by more aggressively prosecuting the peripheral crimes associated with drugs.

"If we make it less convenient for drug dealers to be in Columbus, they will move to a different community," he said.

Brown received his bachelor's degree in history from Ohio State in 1970 and his juris doctorate degree from the OSU College of Law in 1972.

He is married to Mary Singhass-Brown and has a 7-year-old son, Wayne II.

Suspect arraigned in connection with High Street fire

By Debra Baker
Lantern city reporter

A Columbus man was arraigned Wednesday on charges of aggravated arson in connection with a Sept. 21 fire at a vacant building at 1521 N. High St.

Terry Winslow, of 1950 Denune Ave., Apt. A, was arrested Tuesday and awaits a preliminary hearing Nov. 2 in the Franklin County Jail, court documents state. Bail was set at $25,000.

The fire caused about $25,000 worth of damage to the DeSantis Properties apartment unit, Mike Hobbs, vice president of the DeSantis Group, said.

"Basically the building was totaled," Hobbs said.

Charges were filed after an unnamed witness confirmed reports that Winslow, 30, was seen at the scene of the crime, Arson Squad supervisor Lt. Greg Lee said.

A warrant was issued for his arrest on Monday, but the suspect was not arrested until Tuesday, Lee said.

"Apparently he was attacked by the gentlemen who lived in that establishment, and he wanted to get even," Lee said.

Lee said it was ironic that the tenants had moved out of the apartment before the fire occurred.

The residents were evicted about 45 days before the fire, Hobbs said.

Albert J. DeSantis previously reported that the tenants living in the apartment had caused fights in the neighborhood and had destroyed the inside of the building.

"We evicted those tenants because of numerous complaints from other tenants and because of damage they had caused," Hobbs said.

Celeste reveals plan for gas revenue

By Aria Ala-U-Dini
Lantern city reporter

Gov. Richard F. Celeste this week unveiled his plan to use the revenue generated by last summer's gasoline tax increase to fund road repairs in Ohio.

Celeste's plan calls for $259 million to be spent on 28 road construction projects in 19 Ohio counties.

"Our intention is to see to it that the few pennies a gallon Ohio drivers pay in gasoline tax are returned to them in the form of millions of dollars in well-planned roadways," Celeste told reporters during a press conference.

He said the projects are also selected based on how well they can help economic development in those areas.

"We approved these projects so that Ohioans can look forward to a future of well-planned roads and better jobs," Celeste said.

A spokeswoman for the Ohio Department of Transportation said the planned 5.2 cent tax increase over the next two years can generate as many as 12,000 jobs for these projects.

Michelle Rafferty said the gas tax also allows her department to repair roads more quickly.

"By using the gas tax we can expedite projects since we won't need to get any federal approval for our expenditures," she said.

"There are still plenty of construction projects requiring attention," she said.

The funding provided by the federal government will still be channeled into these secondary efforts, Rafferty said.

underway in Ohio.

While the announcement of the repairs was generally considered as welcomed news, some Celeste administration critics wonder if it would be more feasible to have someone outside of the transportation department head the projects.

Sen. Paul E. Pfeifer, R-Bucyrus, repeated his call to have a project expeditor overseeing the completion of the road repairs.

their jobs done, he said.

Pfeifer charged that the main reason Ohio does not have such an individual overseeing the highway repairs is that the transportation department's director, Bernard B. Hurst, does not want one.

Pfeifer used the example of the American Electric and Power company which uses an expeditor to oversee the company's $5 billion worth of construction projects scattered around the state.

"I encourage the governor to go sit down with somebody like that who is outside of the government and get some input," he said.

Pfeifer predicted the transportation department will have an expeditor by next summer.

Celeste, accompanied by other transportation department officials, travelled around the state to announce his new construction projects.

"But the governor flew; he didn't drive, because he knows as well as any Ohioan you can't drive and get anywhere in this state with traffic snarled due to languishing highway projects," Pfeifer said.

Rafferty said Celeste hopes to have most of the repairs completed before he leaves office in 1991.

— Richard F. Celeste

Under the Celeste proposal, the state will receive $94 million in revenue during the first year and nearly $180 million the following year, Rafferty said.

Rafferty said the Department of Transportation would oversee all the projects in addition to the 14 construction projects already "An expeditor is able to cut through the red tape and get a greater utilization of the money, manpower and equipment and get the roads built faster and safer," Pfeifer said.

Another function that an expeditor has is to publicly embarrass the people who are not getting

Peace Corps to visit OSU campus

By Lynn Echelberger
Lantern campus reporter

The Peace Corps will set up information tables on campus, give class talks and conduct question and answer sessions by former Peace Corps volunteers beginning Nov. 1, Peace Corps spokeswoman Daniel Gilbert said.

The Peace Corps is an international service organization established in 1961 by President John F. Kennedy. Its goals are to share skills and knowledge with people of the developing world in order to make them more self-sufficient.

Gilbert said Ohio State is a productive school for the Peace Corps. From 1961 to 1985, Ohio State was 11th in the number of volunteers in the United States.

Students and faculty with backgrounds in math, science and English are in demand because of expansion of the Peace Corps, particularly in Hungary and Haiti, he said.

The Peace Corps relies on recent college graduates to volunteer. Eighty percent of the programs require a four year college degree. The remaining 20 percent require three to five years experience in a skilled trade.

Peace Corps volunteers are required to serve for 27 months — a two year commitment with a three month training program.

The training program is usually held in the host country and includes language and technical training as well as cultural awareness orientation, Gilbert said.

After volunteers complete their service, a $5,400 readjustment allowance is paid. Also some student loans can be deferred.

Pamela Thomas, OSU Peace Corps representative, served in the Peace Corps from 1980 to 1984.

Program seeks leaders

Minorities wanted for leadership seminar

By Mary R. Hale
Lantern campus reporter

The Leadership Ohio State Program is looking for a few good freshmen.

"The program is open to all freshmen and we strongly encourage minority students to apply," said Public Relations Chairman Willie Wong.

Fifty freshmen will be selected for the program this year. Last year about 30 percent of the students were minorities, Wong said.

"The students selected will be a cross section of the university," he said. "We're looking for people with leadership potential."

Last year was the first year the program was in effect.

"The program was created in an effort to develop leadership on campus among freshmen, especially minorities," said Kevin Taylor, co-chair of the program.

Taylor said approximately 60 students applied last year. The organization expects at least 70 applications this year because of the positive response from the students last year, he said. The deadline for applications was Monday.

The first workshop is set for Jan. 27. Betty Siegel of Kennesaw College will be the main speaker, Wong said. Other speakers include: Columbus City Councilman Ben Espy, Dean of Student Life Vic Boschini, Special Assistant to the OSU President Barbie Tootle, and Dean of Student Life Rich Hollingsworth.

Follow-up programs will be planned after the initial program, Taylor said.

"We want to have programs for these students continue through their senior year," Taylor said. "The students that were freshmen last year are still involved in the program as a sophomore this year."

He said different issues are presented to the two classes of students because they are dealing with different stages in college.

"We want to meet the needs of the students in their particular year of school," Taylor said.

Last year the program was funded by an affirmative action grant. He said because the grant was good for one year, the Honors House is sponsoring the program this year.

Leadership Ohio State is a special program of the class honoraries, which include Mortar Board, Sphinx, Bucket and Dipper, Chimes, Mirrors and Romophos. A representative from each honorary resides on the officer team, Wong said.

Student-designed car to race in national competition in May

By Matthew Thompson
Lantern campus reporter

An OSU student-designed and built race car will take to the track in a national competition held in Michigan this May.

The car, which raced last May in Texas, was constructed last year by members of the Ohio State Society of Automotive Engineers. This year the society is redesigning the car. The original vehicle will retire after this race, due to contest rules.

The Formula Society of Automotive Engineers contest has been run by the national society since 1981 and features cars conceived, designed and built entirely by students. A car can be entered twice in the competition.

The society's adviser, Lawrence A. Kennedy, chairman of the mechanical engineering department, said the car performed well last year for a first-year entry.

The car finished 16th out of about 38.

Chairman Mike Rizzo, said he was pleased with the car's performance, noting that the car had no mechanical problems.

"A lot of cars break down out there," Rizzo said. Rizzo is a senior from Upper Arlington majoring in engineering.

Rizzo, who was involved in the construction of the car last year, is taking Mechanical Engineering 564. The class project is to redesign the race car.

Bernard J. Hamrock, professor of engineering, who teaches the class along with Assistant Professor Chia-Hsiang Menq, said designing the race car is especially beneficial because it gives the class members the experience of working within a team.

Rizzo said the class of about 12 is divided into three teams: one redesigning the engine, one redesigning the suspension and one redesigning the chassis.

Construction work will be done in Mechanical Engineering Lab 581, though Rizzo said some work is being done on the car now. Rizzo said he spends about 12 hours a week on the car. His duties include designing the car, working on it and looking for sponsors to fund it.

Contest rules place no limit on the cost of the race car, but the builders must show that a run of 1,000 of their cars would cost no more than $6,000 each to produce. The society is looking for sponsors to fund the production of their car.

Several sponsors from last year, including Honda of America and the American Sunroof Co., have agreed to lend their support. In addition, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. has agreed to help the group, Rizzo said.

Rizzo feels confident about this year's race and expects the car to place in the top six.

"Maybe even first," Rizzo said.

SPORTS

Linebacker awaits chance to play again

By John Kampf
Lantern sports reporter

The OSU football team has overcome many obstacles this season but one player's obstacle has come back to haunt him.

Andy Gurd was expected to play a lead role in this year's Buckeye defense from his inside linebacker position but three operations on his left shoulder thwarted those plans.

After playing in all 11 games as a freshman, Gurd was prepared to step into a full-time position. He started the first three games of the 1988 campaign and had 26 tackles. The problems blossomed, though, after the third game.

The graduate of Chagrin Falls Kenston High School said he was not sure how he injured the shoulder.

"I noticed that it would crackle when I moved it," he said. "It also felt weaker. To tell you the truth, I don't know how I did it."

He said that basic wear and tear could have been the root of the problem.

Doctors at the Cleveland Clinic performed an exploratory scoping of the injured limb in October of last year. Dr. Jack Unverferth, a team physician, said the scoping revealed nothing and that no explanation could be given for the problems.

Shortly after Gurd returned to Columbus, the cracking continued. Unverferth and the medical staff made a diagnosis that Gurd was suffering from a subluxation of the shoulder (a partial separation). Surgery was on the horizon.

Two surgeries were done in Cleveland in December 1988. Co-Head Trainer Billy Hill said the operations were done to repair and stretch out a slight tear in the Labrum — a piece that has a similar chore in the shoulder as cartilage has in a knee. That sidelined Gurd for the remainder of the season. The prognosis was good and he was itching to get back into the action.

"I rested and then went through an 8-week rehabilitation program," Gurd said. "The operations reduced my strength so I had to build it back up. After that, I was ready to go."

Tragedy struck once more, though. On the third day of fall practice, the shoulder started to crack again. Another surgery was done in September and a pin was put in the shoulder to help the healing process. That surgery was done in Columbus by Unverferth.

"(The doctors) said that I hurt it before I came into camp," Gurd said.

He said this time the whole muscle tore. The muscle was supposed to reach from the front of the shoulder and hold it in place. When the doctors operated, it was not where it was supposed to be. It had to be stretched out and attached with a pin.

Hill said the latest operation would have to suffice because another tear would jeopardize Gurd's career.

"If he re-injures it to the same extent, it will be tough to repair," he said. "With time and rehabilitation, he will be fine. On the other hand, if he goes too fast, he will risk hurting it again."

Unverferth agreed with Hill. "He has to rehabilitate slowly," the physician said. "We are guardedly optimistic that he will be back."

The idea of a career-ending injury has entered Gurd's mind but he has tried to block it out. He has realized that thinking positively is the best thing to do but gets tired of just sitting around.

"I don't know if I can describe my frustration with words," he said. "I found it impossible to watch someone else play the position that I should be playing."

His position is in the hands of a long-time friend, though. High school teammate Judah Herman is currently holding down the spot. Gurd said he is happy that his friend has found success.

Andy Gurd vowed he will play again for the Scarlet and Gray. He is hoping to participate in spring drills but expects to be held out until fall arrives. All he has to do is take the time to let the shoulder heal correctly.

Andy Gurd

That may seem easy but he said that going through it more than once has made it much more difficult.

NFL commissioner stalemate continues after latest meeting

CLEVELAND (AP) — The stalemate continued Wednesday as weary and frustrated NFL owners, working under Commissioner Pete Rozelle's implied threat to walk away, tried to find the votes that can produce Rozelle's successor.

There was one vote taken in six hours of meetings. Paul Tagliabue, the NFL's Washington lawyer and one of Rozelle's top aides, received 15 votes and New Orleans Saints president Jim Finks 11. Nineteen votes are needed for election.

The meeting was adjourned at midday until 8:30 p.m. EDT so that representatives of the San Diego Chargers and Los Angeles Raiders could return. The teams' owners, Alex Spanos and Al Davis, left the meeting on Tuesday when Tagliabue ended with a 16-11 margin — Spanos presumably being the extra vote.

"There's discussion going on," said Joe Browne, the NFL's communications director. "Movement? I'm not sure."

"There's been a great deal of progress in private conversations," said William Bidwill, owner of the Phoenix Cardinals. "We hope we can get something done."

Still, the stalemate seemed more like the one that ended with a 33-year-old Rozelle, then the general manager of the Los Angeles Rams, getting the job in 1960 as a compromise candidate after 23 ballots over 11 days.

This logjam has now held for 111 days, or since July 6, when a faction led by Mike Lynn of Minnesota, Norman Braman of Philadelphia and other members of what has become known as the "New Guard" blocked the election of New Orleans Saints president Jim Finks, who had been the sole recommendation of the league's first selection committee.

A second selection committee then came up with four candidates and the insurgent group adopted the 48-year-old Tagliabue as its candidate, somewhat ironically in that he has been close for years to Rozelle and members of the so-called "Old Guard."

On Tuesday, Tagliabue inched closer to the job, reaching 16 votes when Pittsburgh, Atlanta and, presumably, San Diego moved into his column.

Browne said that the return of the Chargers and Raiders was to get all the teams represented and make it easier to get things done. General manager Steve Ortmayer was to represent San Diego and Jeff Birren, the in-house counsel representing the Raiders.

"The owners had the feeling that if all 28 clubs were here that they might be able to bet some movement from one club or another," Browne said.

However, William Bidwill, owner of the Phoenix Cardinals, said he believed the reason for recalling the two teams was "to make sure nobody else leaves." The meetings in Grapevine, Texas, two weeks ago broke up when owner after owner began going home.

Most owners said they believed that the Raiders and Chargers will support Tagliabue.

But even if both went for Tagliabue — not a sure thing since both teams originally were for Finks — it still would leave him two votes short, votes he would need to break loose from a bloc of 11 that remained solidly for the Saints president.

Carson gives Oilers their due

BEREA (AP) — Head coach Bud Carson thinks his Cleveland Browns will be facing one of the NFL's most complete teams when they host the Houston Oilers in Sunday's key AFC Central Division battle.

"They have a shot at being a Super Bowl team this year," Carson said Wednesday as the Browns began preparations for the game.

Cleveland, Houston and the Cincinnati Bengals are tied for first place in the Central Division with 4-3 records.

The Oilers' offense leads the AFC with 194 points, five less than the NFL-leading Chicago Bears, who were stopped 27-7 by Cleveland on Monday night.

"They can send their running backs at you in waves, they have big play receivers on the outside, and (quarterback) Warren Moon is an effective thrower who causes defense problems with his mobility," Carson said.

"They've used high draft choices to build an outstanding offensive line, which allows all the high-priced guys a chance to get into the end zone."

The Oilers had lost all seven games which Moon quarterbacked against Cleveland until they split two regular season games last year. Moon then led his team to a 24-23 wild card playoff victory in Cleveland last December.

"Warren is an excellent quarterback," Browns' strong safety Felix Wright said. "Without him at quarterback, the Oilers wouldn't be as dangerous as they are."

The Houston defense has been inconsistent, allowing the fourth most points in the NFL. They beat the Pittsburgh Steelers 27-0 last Sunday, however, and shackled the Miami Dolphins 39-7 earlier this season.

Quinn refuses comment on Reds' manager spot

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds general manager Bob Quinn still isn't tipping his hand about who the team's next manager will be, but he says he would like to have the choice made next week.

"We're really trying to be as thorough internally as possible," said Quinn, who was hired only Oct. 13 as the Reds' general manager and vice president. "This is a vital decision. It's my first major decision, and we want to be sure what we do is in the best interests of everyone."

Quinn has identified top candidates for the job as former New York Yankees manager and Chicago Cu's executive Dallas Green, interim Reds manager Tommy Helms, former Cleveland manager Doc Edwards and ex-Houston manager Hal Lanier. Former Cleveland manager Pat Corrales is also a candidate, The Cincinnati Post reported Wednesday, quoting unidentified sources.

Green, fired in August as the Yankees' manager, says Reds owner Marge Schott has offered Green the job, but he is still deciding whether he wants it. But, Quinn has been saying only that Green is a candidate and that the job has not been offered to anyone.

Quinn conducted an interview Tuesday with Helms, who finished the 1989 season for the Reds after former manager Pete Rose was banned from baseball Aug. 24 for sports gambling allegations. The Reds were 14-21 under Helms and finished fifth in the National League West. Their 75-87 overall record was Cincinnati's first losing record since going 70-92 in 1984.

Quinn met with Green on Friday in Philadelphia. Quinn said he plans to conduct more interviews, in person or by phone, before making his recommendation.

Quinn said he would like to have a manager in place before the baseball general managers' meetings Nov. 6 in Palm Springs, Calif.

Edwards, fired as the Cleveland Indians' manager Sept. 12, called Quinn on Tuesday to reassert his interest in the Reds' job. The two have a previous working relationship. Quinn, in his capacity as Cleveland's farm director, hired Edwards to manage the Indians' Class AAA affiliate in Charleston, W.Va., in 1982.

Edwards described Tuesday's conversation as informal.

"Bob knows me as well as anyone," Edwards said. "He knew my name was in the hat before he became general manager. He and I always worked well together. We have a good rapport."

"He said I was definitely on his list, but that he still has some other things to look into. He said to stay in touch. I just wanted to let him know how interested I am in the job," Edwards said.

Corrales and Quinn have worked together in Cleveland and New York. Corrales is currently under contract to the Atlanta Braves as a special assignment scout, so Quinn has to receive permission to interview him.

Quinn reportedly has yet to do that, but it doesn't appear to be a problem. Atlanta general manager Bobby Cox said members of his staff are free to leave if a better opportunity comes their way.

Lanier has been playing golf this week. His wife, Mary, said he has not been contacted by the Reds.

Intrasquad meet opens OSU swim season

Freshmen to help OSU women's team

By Steve Casburn
Lantern sports reporter

The OSU women's swim team has improved greatly over last year's fifth place squad, and could break into the top three of the Big Ten.

But don't ask head coach Jim Montrella to make any predictions.

"I'm reluctant to predict anything, but... knowing how much faster we are as a team right now compared to previous years, I would say our outlook is extremely positive. I'm not going to say where I think we can place," said Montrella, who is in his tenth year as head coach.

One major factor in the squad's revival is an improved sense of team spirit and unity, Montrella said.

"The team is very cohesive. You can sense that there is an awareness and concern for each other. They've identified similarities in their personalities rather than differences," Montrella said.

Susan Gottlieb, an All-American last year, agrees.

"Instead of having a lot of little cliques like last year, we're being a team and helping each other," said Gottlieb, a junior from Shelbyville, Ind.

Gottlieb, the only female OSU swimmer to reach the NCAA championships last year, is seen as a force on this year's squad.

"She is a premier swimmer and our highest scorer," assistant coach Bev Montrella said.

It's hard to single any one person out because they are close in performance, Jim Montrella said, but he did mention Kim Wines, Erika Cottrell, and Sunny Lambson as three swimmers he believes will also be top performers.

"But without the depth (that we have), the key people wouldn't be able to pull us through," Bev Montrella said.

The Buckeyes also did well in recruiting this year.

"I think the team has improved dramatically," said Margi Coyle, a sophomore swimmer from Huntington, citing good recruiting as a major reason.

"We have a very good class of freshmen. It was a good recruiting year, and we know coming in that the talent is there," Bev Montrella said.

Freshmen Joyce Lightfoot and Suzi Burt wasted no time showing their talent, each breaking two Scarlet and Gray meet records Friday. Burt broke the pool record in the 200-meter backstroke.

The Scarlet and Gray meet is held at the start of every season. The men's and women's swim teams are divided into competing Scarlet and Gray teams. The meet gives coaches a chance to see the swimmers race, and it gives the swimmers a chance to compete against each other.

The meet ended with the women's Scarlet squad, captained by Aileen Pagilagan, beating the Gottlieb-led Gray squad 67-55.

No captains have been chosen yet for the regular season, which starts Nov. 17 at home against the University of Cincinnati, but perhaps none are needed.

"We're all leaders in our own way," Coyle said.

Wadley awaiting men's swimming improvements

By Steve Casburn
Lantern sports reporter

When Bill Wadley was a boy, he dreamed of being a Big Ten swimming coach.

The Rockford, Ill. native grew up watching Big Ten swimming. He swam at Austin Peay State in Tennessee, then worked his way up the coaching ladder until he was named head men's and women's coach at Michigan State in 1987.

Two years later, after rebuilding a moribund Spartan program, Wadley accepted the head men's coaching position at Ohio State.

"This is the dream of a lifetime," Wadley said. "Now I'll have to do something with it."

This may not be the year.

Wadley was hired late in the spring — too late to recruit. Other than one standout, Gerry Wilson from the Los Angeles area, recruiting didn't happen, Wadley said.

Last year's veterans, whose team finished in the second division of the Big Ten, are long on heart, Wadley said, but "not in a position to be competitive right now."

But Wadley sees more than a won-loss record when he looks at his team.

"These are tremendous people. They're very academic — half of them are engineers. This team has a chance to be an Academic All-American team (which requires a 3.0 team GPA). They're ready and willing to learn, and interested in becoming the best they can be. I like them."

The co-captains of this year's team are Mike Grady, Greg Grotke and Doug Hamlin. Grady, a senior from Newark, feels he has important responsibilities as a captain.

"It's important for me to set an example for the guys, especially the freshmen. If the younger guys see me taking it easy, and not

Losses in 'Jungle' force Bengals to improve as schedule toughens

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals players are taking it on themselves to figure out what has caused the collapse that prompted the team to lose two consecutive games at home.

"Nobody has to tell us we've dug ourselves a hole by losing two in a row at home," tight end Jim Riggs said. "Now we have to win in some tough places."

The Bengals, 4-3, lost to Miami and Indianapolis in the two home games after blowing leads in both games. The losses broke a 12-game home winning streak for Cincinnati, which had been the longest current streak in the NFL. Cincinnati is at home again Sunday against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The Bengals' schedule figures to get much tougher during the season's second half, with games at Houston, Buffalo, Cleveland and Minnesota.

Coach Sam Wyche said the players and coaches must share blame for the Bengals' collapse. But he suggested that the offense is more to blame than the defense. The Bengals lost 20-13 to Miami and 23-12 to Indianapolis.

"The defense is saving our tail right now," Wyche said. "I'm not saying there isn't room for improvement — we're not getting sacks — but we're keeping the score down, and that's the bottom line."

The Bengals rank fifth in NFL scoring defense at 16.7 points per game.

"We don't need to change a thing," quarterback Boomer Esiason said. "We just need to fight through this like the veteran team we are."

Bengals players met by themselves Monday before gathering with the coaching staff.

"They wanted time by themselves, which is the way I would have it if I was picking a way for the club to regroup after two losses," Wyche said. "I had some things of my own to say, but after looking at the expressions on their faces after I came in, I could feel they had said things better than I would say them. They were a very quiet and serious group."

The Bengals' injury-plagued offensive line has allowed Cincinnati's quarterback to be sacked 15 times in the last four games. The line had allowed only three sacks in the first three games.

Esiason was banged up in the Indianapolis game and backup Turk Schonert suffered a broken, non-throwing hand when he was sacked after coming in for Esiason. Schonert's injury will keep him out at least several weeks and possibly longer, team officials said. Rookie Erik Wilhelm is now Esiason's backup.

Starting right guard Max Montoya is questionable for the Tampa Bay game after suffering a strained knee against Indianapolis. Starting left guard Bruce Reimer played the entire game against Indianapolis after sitting out the previous week because of a shoulder separation, but is hurting.

Versatile offensive lineman Brian Blados may be started Sunday at one of the guard positions. If that is done, Joe Walter could make his first start of the year at right tackle.

doing what I should be, then they'll think it's okay for them, too," Grady said.

Ohio State could do well in the Big Ten this year. Grady doesn't think the Buckeyes can finish in the top three this year, conceding those spots to Michigan, Iowa and Indiana, but he said anything else is possible.

The Buckeyes will have their first dual meet of the season against Ohio University on Nov. 11 at 10:30 a.m. in the Peppe Aquatic Center in Larkins Hall.

Standouts on this year's squad include Scott Spees, the only male Buckeye swimmer to qualify for the NCAA national meet; Chris DiSalle, who broke two records at Friday's annual Scarlet and Gray intra-squad meet; and Steve Lauffer, who is good in the 200-meter breaststroke.

Wadley is looking toward the future, however.

"The biggest challenge is to recruit hard and bring in good groups of freshmen for two or three years in a row. Then we can go after a Big Ten title," Wadley said.

Grady believes if anyone can lead Ohio State to a Big Ten title, Wadley can.

"It will be two or three years before there's a dramatic impact, but when I'm an alumnus then, (the Big Ten championship) will be between Ohio State and Michigan," Grady said.

Wadley sees men's swimming at Ohio State, with it's NCAA-record 11 national titles, in the same light as football at Notre Dame.

Wadley said he wants to be like Lou Holtz, the Notre Dame coach who led the Irish to last year's national football championship. He wants to put new life into the tradition.

"I'd like to think I could be here as long as I do a good job. I feel like this is my last job," Wadley said.

As for Grady, this will be his last year as a Buckeye — something he's well aware of.

"I either get it right (this year) or that's it," he said.

A's flee to Phoenix to prepare for Series

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Before the World Series resumes at Candlestick Park, part of it will spend some time in Phoenix.

The Subway Series is taking a jet.

The Oakland Athletics were to work out today and Thursday at Phoenix Stadium, their spring training facility.

A week after a devastating earthquake hit the Bay area, San Francisco and Oakland worked out Tuesday after morning showers.

The World Series is scheduled to resume Friday at Candlestick after an 11-day delay between games. It's the longest delay in the history of the Fall Classic.

The decision to move to Phoenix was made after Tuesday's workout by General Manager Sandy Alderson.

"Sandy told the players this was their best chance to get ready," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said.

"We'll work out at 2 (p.m.) on Wednesday and noon on Thursday and leave at 6 (p.m.)," La Russa said.

"If they could guarantee we could do everything here that we need to do, we would stay here," La Russa said. "The people here just want us to be ready."

Scattered showers were predicted for the Bay area for today and Thursday.

The A's started their season in Arizona in February and played their first exhibition game at Phoenix Stadium on March 5.

It was suggested to La Russa that the A's are going back to spring training.

"I wouldn't put any label on it," the A's manager said.

"It's more like being on the 15-day disabled list," A's catcher Terry Steinbach said. "I'm sure everyone will feel a little strange on Friday at Candlestick."

The Giants will continue their workouts in San Francisco, where an aftershock of 4.5 was registered Tuesday. The aftershock, the latest of about 3,500 to hit the area since the quake, did not affect the teams nor the stadiums.

"We're feeling a lot better now because we know what's going on," Giants pitcher Kelly Downs said. "It would be real tough if they would've needed to delay it again. If that happened, I'm sure a lot of guys would feel that they should just cancel the World Series."

Candlestick Park, meanwhile, is set to go for Game 3 on Friday evening. San Francisco mayor Art Agnos on Tuesday certified the stadium as structurally sound.

The weather also seemed ready to cooperate. After a week of scattered showers, the National Weather Service predicted clear skies for the weekend.

The weather is beyond the Athletics' control. But the Rolling Stones aren't.

The rock group is scheduled to play at the Oakland Coliseum on Nov. 4-5 and nearly 120,000 tickets have been sold. The Stones say their contract allows them to move into the stadium five days early to set up, and that could conflict with Games 6 and 7 of the World Series, if necessary, on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1.

Pitcher acquired in Esasky trade leaves Cincinnati

(AP) — Pitcher Jeff Sellers, a free agent when the Cincinnati Reds assigned him to their Nashville farm team this month, signed a contract Tuesday with the New York Yankees' Columbus minor league team.

The right-hander, acquired by Cincinnati with first baseman Todd Benzenberger in the deal that sent first baseman Nick Esasky and reliever Rob Murphy to the Boston Red Sox last winter, may not be able to pitch in 1990. He underwent reconstructive surgery on his shoulder in August.

Sheldon Bender, the Reds' vice president for player personnel, said a player automatically becomes a free agent when he is signed to his sixth renewal in the minors. The list of six-year free agents became available to major-league clubs Sunday.

Besides Sellers, the Reds' list of free agents includes pitchers Hugh Kemp, Mike Griffin, Candy Sierra and Jim Jefferson, catcher Doug Gwosdz, and outfielders Skeeter Barnes and Tito Landrum. All are free to strike deals with other teams, if they choose.

Sierra, like Sellers, was a disappointment for the Reds. They acquired Sierra, a reliever, in June 1988 in a trade for left-handed starter Dennis Rasmussen, but arm problems prevented Sierra from ever reaching his potential.

"They were gambles to begin with," Bender said of Sellers and Sierra. "We knew they had good arms. But apparently, they had injuries that reoccurred."

Haunted mansion tour exhumes city's spooks

By Kathleen Clark
Lantern arts reporter

Columbus' horror history will emerge from the grave for three spine chilling nights when the dead will inhabit area landmarks and the living will simply witness the event in fear.

The Columbus Landmarks Foundation will give bus and walking tours Thursday through Saturday from 6:30 p.m. until 9:30 p.m. of some historic Columbus homes and neighborhoods which have been known to have spirits lurking within them.

Doreen Uhas, vice president for The Columbus Landmarks Foundation is organizing the tour.

"We're encouraging people to come forth and tell us their best ghost stories," she said.

The old governor's mansion on East Broad St., rumored to be haunted, is one stop on the tour.

"Supposedly a young woman appears at the top of the stairs walking from one side to the other," Uhas said.

The Kelton House Museum and Garden is also a stop. The original owner, Fernando Cortez Kelton, died there and it is rumored his spirit still haunts it.

"The house stayed in the family for 150 years and then his granddaughter died in the house in December of 1976," Uhas said.

"Her ghost has also been seen in the house."

On one occasion the security system went off at the Kelton House. When people came to check it, all of the paper towels and toilet paper rolls had been placed in a circle in the middle of the hall, she said.

Along with the Kelton House, tourists will also be taken to the North Market area where the ghost of John Kerr is said to have been seen searching for his body. Kerr was one of the original founders of Columbus.

According to Uhas, the city passed an ordinance that eliminated the use of some graveyards within the city limits. Shortly after this, Columbus development caught up with the area and a lot of the bodies were never moved.

Supposedly John Kerr's ghost still wanders aimlessly with a lantern in hand as he searches for his body, she said.

The tour stops at Livingston Park in front of Children's Hospital, where confederate prisoners were buried during the Civil War.

Some of the bodies were relocated to nearby Camp Chase, but a few remained there.

Uhas said the ghost of a woman wearing gray has been seen walking through Livingston Park. The woman has been said to be crying as she searches through the trees for something.

Columbus' literary heritage will also be included in the tour with

It's a visitor, not a ghost, peering out of the window of the Thurber House, 77 Jefferson St. where Author James Thurber and subsequent residents reported strange sights and sounds.

a stop at the Thurber House, where James Thurber's story "The Night the Ghost Got In" will be told.

John Young, a volunteer guide for the Thurber House, 77 Jefferson St., said Thurber had recalled hearing a ghost walking around the dining room and then running up the stairs until it reached the top.

Thurber never heard these unexplained sounds again.

Later, when the residence was turned into a rooming house, a ghostly hooded figure was sighted in the corner of the dining room, Young said.

"There are some people, and I'm one of them, who think the house was built in the same area where the central Ohio lunatic asylum burned down about 150 years ago," Young said. "Now there are people who will tell you that the ghost is one of the inmates of this insane asylum and he has come back to haunt it."

'The Bat' frightening Halloween season fun

THEATER

KEVIN J. HAVENS

The elegant mansion has all the cliches of any classic mystery tale: secret passageways, hidden rooms, and a whole assortment of suspicious characters. Of course, there is a frightful thunderstorm outside.

The terrors that took place there will be relived during a revival of the 1920s Broadway thriller "The Bat," which will be performed by the Contemporary American Theatre Company beginning Thursday, Oct. 26 and running through Saturday, Nov. 18.

"The play has absolutely no significant social value whatsoever," said Geoffrey Nelson, CATCO artistic director. "It's just a lot of fun."

Ionia Zelenka, who plays the spinster-wanna-be-sleuth in the play, said, "The play has no message that will change anyone's life; it's strictly to entertain."

The whole point of the play is "Who is the Bat?" Nelson said.

The Bat is a bloodthirsty master criminal who terrorizes the local community by committing murders and robbing individuals of their wealth. His next reign of terror is within the mansion being rented to Cornelia Van Gorder, a 1920s version of Agatha Christie's well-known character Miss Harper.

The role of Van Gorder is played by Zelenka.

The 10-member cast also includes a Columbo-like detective, a Japanese butler and a suave and cynical attorney.

"It's not a realistic thriller," Nelson said. "In fact, it's quite hokey."

CATCO usually produces contemporary plays that have meaning and some social value, Nelson said.

"This is a change for our company," he said.

Michael Harper, appearing as the rich playboy Richard Fleming, said, "As dumb as it may seem, you get a sense of the way plays were performed in the 1920s. You get a sense of history."

Zelenka said, "It's done in the style of the day. The acting is done in the exaggerated melodramatic style of the era."

The play is based on "The Circular Staircase," a novel by Mary Roberts Rinehart, one of America's most popular mystery writers.

"The Bat" has continued to be produced since its Broadway debut in 1920. A film version starring Vincent Price and Agnes Moorhead was produced in the 1950s.

Asked if the production of the play was sparked by the recent "Batman" brought on by the recent box-office hit "Batman," Harper replied, "Nelson was interested in 'The Bat' as early as 1985, before the Batman craze."

There's no place like home for The BoDeans

By Keith A. Benjamin
Lantern arts reporter

After endless nights of performing concerts and recording albums, the BoDeans are finally back home.

With the release of their third album, "Home" on Slash/Reprise Records, Kurt Neumann and Sam Llanas have matured into one of America's most promising bands.

The two friends from Waukesha, Wis. formed the band in 1983. They combine their unique voices to create a style of music which can only be defined as distinctively the BoDeans.

Following the release of their second album, "Outside Looking In" in 1987, the BoDeans became respected around the music industry for their raw energy and unique sound.

Their performances on Robbie Robertson's solo album, and as U2's opening act, on the "Joshua Tree" tour, exposed many to the BoDeans' music. As a result, they were named last year's "best new American band" in Rolling Stone magazine readers' poll.

The band's latest album, "Home," continues the BoDeans path to success with a slight change in recording direction. It was recorded in Wisconsin instead of the sterile and unfamiliar environment of the modern recording studio.

"We wanted to do the record where the band was most comfortable," said co-vocalist Neumann. "We decided to do it our way and bring the studio to us, in our room."

The result is an album which has received much praise from critics and fans, and as a result, has become the BoDeans' most successful album to date.

"Home" was made virtually "live" with the band performing and recording the album at the same time, shunning today's modern techniques of laying out one voice or instrument at a time onto several different tracks. The result is an album that has a live feel to it, which Neumann believes personifies the BoDeans at their best.

"We love it. This is the band's favorite record," Neumann said. "From the very first note of it we knew that we were headed in a direction that was going to make us very happy."

The BoDeans combine a wide variety of styles into their music, ranging from rock 'n' roll, to southern and cajun flavored music. They attribute much of their diversity to AM radio of the late 60s and early 70s. In this era many varieties of music were heard on the same stations, from Hank Williams and Elvis to Nancy Sinatra and Motown.

"That is one of the reasons we do what we do," said Neumann. "To us that was always rock 'n' roll, it was not just one person. Sam and I always respected good songwriters, we are more fans of songs than people."

One of the BoDeans' biggest goals is to grow in popularity and remain honest to their music and their fans.

Neumann believes that many bands like the Rolling Stones, a band he idolized while growing up, have sold out to commercialism and promotion. They have become millionaires while promoting beer and other products.

"I think we would like to build our audience as we go along with each record," Neumann said. "But I do not think about becoming a Springsteen or a U2. I think about playing our music to whoever is out there. I do not want to become just another product like bands tend to become."

The BoDeans credit much of their success to the fact that they are close friends, who can argue and yell at each other, and still know that they will be friends in the end.

"It is the very fact that we are friends before anything else that keeps us healthy," said Neumann. "We both know how badly we wanted to do this and we respect that, and that keeps us respecting each other."

"We know that we share a common dream... and that keeps us together."

San Francisco quake shakes up ratings war

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC won back first place in the Nielsen television ratings as the San Francisco Bay-area earthquake delayed the World Series and ABC's prospects for another victory.

The quake altered all three networks' schedule last week in one of the more inconsequential results of the disaster.

Instead of an anticipated second week on top, ABC fell to third place. The network was caught without alternative programming when its biggest night of the week, Tuesday, was pre-empted first by the World Series pregame show and then by coverage of the earthquake.

The quake hit just as ABC's coverage of the third game between the San Francisco Giants and the Oakland Athletics was beginning in San Francisco's Candlestick Park. The Tuesday night pregame show tied for 44th place. ABC had won the ratings race the previous week on the basis of the first two games, snapping NBC's record 68-week string of first-place finishes.

NBC's "Cheers" was first last week, closely followed by "The Cosby Show." ABC's highest-ranked show was its Monday Night Football game between the Los Angeles Rams and the Buffalo Bills, which was 10th.

NBC won the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey with a weekly primetime average of 14.1. CBS had a 12.6 and ABC 12.1. The ratings represent the percentage of the nation's 92.1 million households tuned into a program.

Here are the Top 10: NBC's "Cheers;" NBC's "The Cosby Show;" NBC's "A Different World;" NBC's "Golden Girls;" NBC's "Dear John" and CBS' "60 Minutes" tied for fifth; NBC's "Empty Nest;" NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" and the CBS movie "Do You Know the Muffin Man?" tied for eighth; and ABC's Monday Night NFL Football.

The World Series is not scheduled to resume until Friday, depending on weather and repairs to the ballpark.

The networks' special coverage of the earthquake was not ranked by Nielsen because it was unscheduled and not sponsored. The network evening news shows had nearly 5 million extra viewers, apparently because of the quake.

Quake victims facing aftershocks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Recovery advanced into its second week Wednesday for an earthquake-rattled region feeling an aftershock of numbers — a stronger Richter reading, a 50-50 chance of a new jolt and an infusion of relief money.

Eight people remain missing, and the death toll from the Oct. 17 temblor climbed to 63 with a coroner's discovery of a 39th victim from double-decked Interstate 880 in Oakland.

The State Office of Emergency Services reported Wednesday that 13,892 people have been left homeless, nearly double the previous figure.

The first damage claim against the state was filed by two motorists injured in the collapse.

The Senate approved a $3.45 billion quake relief package Wednesday. It expands a $2.85 billion House-approved measure by adding $600 million for Small Business Administration emergency loans. The legislation now goes back to the House.

Damage estimates have been set at $7.1 billion, making it the costliest natural disaster in U.S. history.

"We were hit by 10 times the amount explosive power of World War II, including the atomic bomb," said U.S. Rep. Nancy Pelosi, who represents San Francisco's hard-hit Marina district.

Santa Cruz County got a $356,460 check from state Controller Gray Davis on Tuesday. The check is 75 percent of the money the county already has spent on earthquake response.

Church bells tolled at 5:04 p.m., one week to the minute after the quake. It packed more punch than first thought, according to the U.S. Geological Survey, which upped the magnitude to 7.1 from 6.9 on the Richter scale after checking 18 seismic stations around the world.

A geologist warned that because of recent rain, huge sections of land in Santa Cruz County cracked by earthquake fissures are in danger of sliding this winter and burying hundreds of homes.

"What's happening today is frightening to geologists who have looked at it," Professor Gary Griggs of the University of California, Santa Cruz, told county supervisors Tuesday. "I think there's a cause for alarm, but not instant alarm until we've had more rain."

Jumpy residents also were told that there is a 50-50 chance of a 5.0 aftershock during the next two months, and there is an 11 percent shot of a 6.0 shock. A 5.0 Richter reading can cause considerable damage; 6.0 can be severe, especially to buildings already weakened.

An aftershock of 4.5 was registered at 6:27 p.m. Tuesday, the latest of about 3,500 aftershocks since Oct. 17.

"I'm still shook up. Every time I hear a noise I jump," said Ela Mae Douglas, owner of a soul food cafe near I-880.

And for all the death and destruction, Elizabeth Patrice Cupples celebrated her first week of life. She was born at 5:03 p.m. on Oct. 17 by Cesarean section, and doctors shielded her mother by leaning over the incision.

"You were born and the earth moved," said her father, James, who was at his wife's side in the delivery room of Santa Cruz Community Hospital.

In Oakland, crews were taking down sections of I-880. They fear that still-standing sections of the state's first elevated freeway could topple like dominoes onto the 1¼-mile stretch that crumpled.

Four sections remain inaccessible, and the search for more bodies was delayed until at least Thursday because the road is too shaky. Authorities have abandoned hope of finding anyone alive in the rubble.

"I'm not willing to speculate how many of those nine missing people may or may not be up there," said Lt. Kris Wraa, an Oakland police spokeswoman.

Officials said 135 people evacuated from homes near the highway Sunday may be allowed to return to their homes by Thursday.

In the damage claims, which could lead to a lawsuit, Hayward residents Milton Wade Jr. and Askia Y.M. Hurts, who were returning from a plumbing job in Wade's car on the freeway, asked the state to pay unspecified medical damages.

Workers, meanwhile, removed the section of the lower deck of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge on Tuesday. It will take at least a month to rebuild the five-lane, 50-foot pieces. The hole in the 53-year-old bridge is as gaping as the hole in the area's transportation system.

Without the bridge and key sections of devastated highways, transit officials have jury-rigged a jammed commuter system with extra trains, ferries and other alternatives.

Inconvenienced commuters abandoned their cars and took to public transportation in record numbers. The Bay Area Rapid Transit by 9 a.m. Tuesday set a weekday ridership record with 99,135, 4,300 more than the previous day.

Researcher studies investors' behavior

CINCINNATI (AP) — The instability of the stock market has helped focus attention on a need for investors to understand more about their personalities and what type of investments they are comfortable with, a psychologist said Wednesday.

Kathleen Gurney said she has pioneered a specialty of counseling investors and financial planners in how to match investors' personalities with their financial investment.

She said the counseling can help investors better understand which investments would be best for them, and can assist financial planners in better interpreting the needs of clients.

"It's hard for a client to come in and really tell you what drives their money management," said Ms. Gurney, a former University of Southern California professor of psychology research who now heads her own 6-year-old consulting company, Financial Psychology Corp.

Trained as a psychologist, she said she began taking financial planning courses at Southern California first for her own education. But then she became interested in the psychology of investors. She said her professors encouraged her, and she developed much of her own research after finding there was virtually no established research in that field.

The stock market crash of October 1987 has created more interest in the specialty, Ms. Gurney said.

"I think we tend to stereotype people according to where they live, how much money they have, their sex. But we found that there are different groups," she said.

She developed what she calls the Moneymax profile, a 28-question survey designed to elicit information about investors' personalities and financial preferences. It creates nine categories ranging from emotion-charged "hunters" to "money masters" — cool, calculated investors — to "high rollers" — devil-may-care investors.

She said she has sold some financial planners around the nation and in other countries on using her profiling system. She has also written a book, appeared on several television shows and travels around the world speaking on the psychology of investing.

"I show clients the personal side of money. I help them match their personal style with their investments," she said. "I help people close the gap between where they want to be with their money and where they are. Money is too important not to be taken seriously."

Ms. Gurney moved from Los Angeles in August after marrying a Cincinnati businessman.

OU police warn students

By Tricia Gibson
Lantern campus reporter

For years university students from Ohio and surrounding states have poured into Ohio University and the city of Athens for Halloween and a weekend of partying. "It's a spectacle worth seeing," Todd A. Quincy, a 23-year-old junior majoring in journalism from Hamilton, said.

He said he attended the celebration a year ago and plans on returning this year.

Athens Police Chief Richard Mayer, described the celebration in a different way.

"It's basically an illegal taking of the streets," he said.

Mayer said at one time the event was sanctioned by the university, but now it is not endorsed by the university or the city because of vandalism and other problems such as unruliness.

Although there are no planned Halloween events sponsored by the university, the administration is not being naive and assuming no one is coming, said Mary Lester, associate director of security for the Ohio University police department.

Normally two or three arrests are made on campus during a weekend, she said. However, as many as 60 were made in one night during last year's celebration.

Mayer said most arrests were made by Athens police. Last year 188 students were arrested during a two-day period.

Assault, disorderly conduct, intoxication and use of false identification were among the more serious charges, he said.

Students from Ohio University and Ohio State are those most frequently arrested, Mayer said.

"But, OSU students especially stick out because there are more (arrests of students) than any other university (outside of Athens)," he said.

Mayer said in years past there have been times in which arrests of OSU students have exceeded those of all other universities.

Athens Mayor Sara Hendricker, is encouraging students not to come to Athens for Halloween.

"I make no bones about it," she said. "I don't support it."

The Athens area media refer to it as the Midwest Mardi Gras, but it is actually a crowd of people standing around looking at each other, she said.

Hendricker said it promotes a negative image of the university and the community.

In an effort to discourage attendance, Hendricker has placed an advertisement in many university newspapers around Ohio, she said.

The ad does not relate directly to the Halloween weekend, but it addresses the university's parking problem, said Hendricker.

Those who wish to park on the university during the weekend must do so on a first come, first served basis, said Kathy Hart, an Ohio University police dispatcher.

Hart said she anticipates the use of extra towing crews to handle the influx of illegally parked cars.

Excessive tanning may lead to new compulsive disorder

By Cheryl Curry
Lantern campus reporter

People who always have to look tan and obsessively sunbathe or visit tanning salons could have a new disorder called tanorexia.

Tanorexia borrows its name from the eating disorder anorexia nervosa, an obsession with looking thin. People with tanorexia are obsessed with being tan.

"It's a distortion of body image and an obsession with tanning," said Mark Kalish, psychiatrist and clinical professor of the University of California, San Diego. "No matter how tan people get, they still see themselves as pale."

Kalish said tanorexia is often disregarded or ignored, but is serious because it can lead to skin cancer.

He has treated several patients with the disorder and said young adults and women are most susceptible because they are more likely to frequently use tanning beds.

"This is new to the extent that we haven't had tanning salons too long and a lot of people we see don't develop the symptoms from natural sun, just from tanning beds," said Kalish.

Kalish said the diagnosis of tanorexia has been exclusive to coastal regions but could become more commonly recognized in the Midwest. He said tanorexia exists here but goes untreated.

OSU psychiatrist Matig Mavissakalian said no patients have been treated for tanorexia at OSU but many have been treated for similar disorders linked to obsessions with appearance.

"It's probably part of a wider phenomenon of being obsessed about your looks and being preoccupied with looking good," said Mavissakalian.

Kalish and Mavissakalian agree the best treatment for those with tanorexia is group therapy. Kalish said he has also used the same medications used to treat depression and other obsessive complexes.

Excessive tanning can also be physically harmful, according to both experts.

Photoaging, a process that increases skin aging and causes sagging, wrinkling and loss of elasticity, has been linked to indoor tanning beds, according to Loretta Davis, OSU assistant professor of clinical medicine.

"The sun definitely increases someone's risk of cancer, with tanning booths it's hard to say because they haven't been around as long. Theoretically, the chances of getting cancer will probably be increased," said Davis.

Tanning beds can generate up to five times more radiation than the sun and increased exposure increases the risks, said Davis.

"Some people come in here every day all year long, others just come in once a week for relaxation," said Mike McGlynn, an Always Tan employee. "Anything to excess is bad, moderation is the key."

Good Beer Guide tells all; experts rate British brews

LONDON (AP) — If a beer tastes like a wet dog, beer lovers should know it, according to a new guide to British brews.

But if it has "a clean, crystal malt palate with more than a hint of Seville oranges about it," that, too, should be stated out loud without fear of sounding like a wine snob, says the Good Beer Guide.

The guide, published Monday by the Campaign for Real Ale, aims to go beyond the time-honored but undiscerning request for "a pint of bitter, please" and put a touch of class into the beer-drinking vocabulary.

Among terms appearing in the guide is "wet dog," as in: "Light, dry and hoppy, often with an excellent finish, but can suffer from a lack of any particular aroma, or smell a little sulphury like a wet dog."

That description is applied to a Kentish brew, one of 342 beers described in the guide.

Other terms include marzipan, rancid, spicy and worty.

Then there is "Tom Cat" — any brew with a "pungently urinous, skunky" flavor.

The campaign, which fights for regional brews against the inroads of the lager industry, says it didn't ask its tasters to go so far as to swill their samplings and spit them out, as wine tasters do.

But its tasters attended training sessions to educate their palates, and approached the job like wine experts, sniffing first and sometimes nibbling bread to refresh their taste buds when moving from one brew to another.

FBI works to identify abductors of deaf girl

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A deaf teen-age girl who walked into a school nervously seeking help was apparently kidnapped several years ago and moved around the country, possibly by satanists, an FBI agent said Wednesday.

"From some of the drawings she was able to provide, it is believed that some of the people she was with since her abduction may have been tied to the occult," FBI Agent Paul Cavanagh said.

Authorities have had a hard time gathering information from the frightened, confused girl, but she has given them drawings that include symbols associated with satanism and indicated she may have been abducted from a foster home in California, Cavanagh said.

The girl showed up Sept. 18 at William B. Jack Elementary School in Portland, identifying herself in sign language as Toby Cole.

"She just stopped at the counter. She walked in and signed a little bit," said Judi Fox, a teacher's aide who called in a teacher who speaks in sign language. The teacher realized the girl needed help and took her to the Governor Baxter School for the Deaf in nearby Falmouth, where authorities began questioning her.

"Over the next few weeks, Toby provided information which leads us to believe that she is possibly the victim of a kidnapping abduction," the FBI said in a statement issued by its Boston office.

"Toby has indicated that she is not sure Toby Cole is her real name, but is the name given to her by her abductors," the statement said. She stated she believes she is 15 years of age and possibly was born on Dec. 25, 1974. Toby seems to possess a good vocabulary and is far ahead of children in her age bracket in intelligence and communication skills.

Cavanagh said Wednesday from Boston that psychologists and child-care experts dealing with the girl have pieced together enough information to believe she was abducted from California about three years ago, then moved several times, possibly into Canada.

"She claims to have been abducted by a male out there who was driving a van at the time," Cavanagh said. He said authorities had no reason to doubt the girl's story, but had found no missing person reports matching her.

Authorities said the girl was in the care of the Maine Department of Human Services. "She's in a safe place in the state," Bouchard said. "She's comfortable. She's being taken care of."

Cavanagh said authorities believed the girl had been abused, but he did not think she had been emotionally able to undergo physical tests that would determine whether she had been sexually abused.

The FBI statement on the girl described her as a caucasian, about 5 feet tall and 105 pounds, with blond or light brown wavy hair and blue eyes.

Brave children honored for heroic deeds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 7-year-old boy who braved a smoke-filled house to carry a baby to safety and a 12-year-old girl who piloted a plane across the country to raise money to fight AIDS were among 10 youngsters honored Tuesday as heroes.

"Your only thoughts were of others. No greater gift can you give to mankind," retired Gen. P.X. Kelley, former commandant of the Marine Corps, told the youths, who were flown to Washington to meet their congressional representatives and tour the city.

The honorees were chosen from a field of 300 nominees.

Bree Meyer-Gilbride of Los Osos, Calif., started flying two years ago and said she decided to use a coast-to-coast trip as a way to raise money for either AIDS or leukemia.

"It came down to AIDS because it's deadlier and was striking so many more people," she said. Her mother and a flight instructor also made the trip.

Others honored were:

—Andrew D'Alesio, 9, Reynoldsburg, Ohio, honored posthumously for helping a friend who fell into a frozen pond back to solid ice. In doing so, he was trapped in the pond.

—Jeremy Teausaw, 12, Anchorage, Alaska, who drove a car for the first time to take a family friend who had suffered a stroke for medical help.

—Jacob Reihl, 9, Ottawa, Ill., who gave his sister his life jacket during a boating accident and swam for help.

—Andrew Kockler, 9, Nevada, Iowa, who sheltered a cousin from the cold until help arrived at a traffic accident.

—Billy McGrath, 11, Woburn, Mass., who jumped in front of a van to push his brother to safety.

—Andrew Garcia, 11, Albuquerque, N.M., honored posthumously for requesting his organs be donated to others shortly before being involved in a fatal car accident.

Gadhafi admits terrorism

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Libya's Moammar Gadhafi has admitted for the first time that he sponsored international terror but says he stopped when he discovered the terrorists were working for themselves and not for all Arabs.

He also told Cairo's state-owned weekly magazine Al-Mussawar, published Wednesday, wants no confrontation with the United States and would welcome a dialogue toward friendlier relations.

Al-Mussawar said the interview was conducted a week ago, a day after Gadhafi met with President Hosni Mubarak in Tobruk on Libya's Mediterranean coast to discuss improving relations after 16 years of friction.

Gadhafi spoke about a reversal in his policy toward terrorism in reply to a question suggesting that support of "groups that practice terror in the name of revolutionary violence" may have harmed Libya.

"At one point, we supported some of these groups without meticulously examining their aims and role," he told Al-Mussawar editor Makram Mohammed Ahmed, a Mubarak confidant.

"But when we discovered that these groups were causing more harm than benefit to the Arab cause, we halted our aid to them completely and withdrew our support."

Sounding apologetic, Gadhafi added: "We erroneously thought that these groups could be part of the (Arab) national liberation movement. But we found out that they were practicing terrorism for the sake of terrorism and for other objectives that had nothing to do with our national cause."

In the past, Gadhafi insisted he helped only national liberation movements.

"Let me tell you frankly that hijacking planes and killing civilians are acts of murder that have nothing to do with combat," Gadhafi said. "(Libya) should not be called to account for any of these acts, because we have withdrawn our support of such groups."

Gadhafi's sponsorship of international terror was the principal cause of his rift with the United States. In September 1987, U.S. officials presented to the United Nations a selected chronology specifying 60 cases of what they termed Libya's terrorism and support for various terrorist groups.

U.S. warplanes raided two Libyan cities, the capital Tripoli and the Mediterranean port of Benghazi, in April 1986, 10 days after Libya was blamed for masterminding the bombing of a discotheque in West Berlin frequented by U.S. servicemen.

In the interview, Gadhafi said he would welcome a dialogue with the Americans "anywhere they want on condition it is held in the public eye."

"I say very clearly: We do not believe that conflict with the United States is necessary. . . . We are prepared for relations based on mutual respect and common interests. We harbor no hatred for the American people, and we also believe that the American people have no such feeling for us."

He blamed former President Reagan's "muscle-flexing" for complications in American-Libyan relations and said he felt that President Bush's administration "will be more rational."

Soviet lawmakers vote places guaranteed seats in jeopardy

MOSCOW (AP) — Lawmakers Tuesday voted to deny the Communist Party its 100 guaranteed seats in the Soviet Congress, meaning President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and other top officials could be forced to seek popular election to the body.

The Supreme Soviet legislature's decision, if confirmed by its parent body, the Congress of People's Deputies, would mean all deputies would be elected from geographical districts.

The current system reserves only two-thirds of the congressional seats for deputies elected from geographical districts. The remaining one-third are sent from certain privileged social organizations, including the Communist Party.

The Supreme Soviet voted

254-85 to eliminate from a package of constitutional amendments a controversial article giving seats to the social organizations.

Gorbachev was not present at the vote. It was not clear whether the measure had gained his backing or represented another instance where the increasingly feisty legislature had imposed its own will.

Progressives complained that the existing system violated the principle of one man, one vote. They said members of these organizations had the opportunity to vote in each group as well as in their geographical district.

The decision does not restrict the Communist Party from running candidates for geographical seats. Currently, 80 percent of the 2,250 deputies are Communist Party members.

The next election for the Congress of People's Deputies is scheduled for 1994, although some deputies have talked about trying to move up the date.

The Supreme Soviet also decided Monday to allow the republics of the Soviet Union to make their own decisions on whether their presidents will be elected directly by the public or by their legislatures.

Although the Congress is supposed to handle final approval of constitutional amendments, the legislators speeded up their vote because a number of the republics are scheduled to adopt new election laws this week which depend on the national amendments, Tass said.

U.S.S.R cuts tank production in half

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union will cut its tank production in half for the next five years, building just 850 tanks annually, according to a report published on Wednesday.

The pledge for a further cut in Soviet tank production came from Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov during his meetings earlier this month with Defense Secretary Richard Cheney, according to unidentified defense officials cited by The Washington Post.

The Defense Intelligence Agency has estimated annual Soviet tank production at 3,500 in a total Warsaw Pact output of 4,200, but Soviet Marshal Sergei F. Akhromeyev told the House Armed Services Committee last July that the figure was really around 1,700. The newspaper said DIA recently reported a reduction in Soviet tank production.

If Yazov's pledge of an additional 50 percent reduction is realized, Soviet tank production would be about 850 per year. U.S. production is about 775 in a total North Atlantic Treaty Organization output of 925 a year, the newspaper said.

An unidentified senior defense official told the Post that the production cut may be part of the Soviets reconsidering what kinds of weapons are effective.

"While tank production is decreasing, production of artillery and armored personnel carriers is increasing," the official said.

U.S. five-point plan on Mideast met with Israeli reservations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens has accepted in principle a proposal by Secretary of State James A. Baker III for Palestinian negotiations, but with the proviso that the Palestine Liberation Organization be excluded and the agenda restricted, the Israeli Embassy said Tuesday.

The State Department welcomed Arens' letter to Baker and said it "reinforces what we believe — that they are engaged and that they are working really hard to try to bridge these gaps."

Baker's five-point proposal is designed to attract the support of the Arabs to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's plan for elections among the 1.4 million Palestinian Arabs who live on the West Bank and in Gaza.

Its key elements include assurances to Israel it would have to be "satisfied" with the composition of the Palestinian delegation and that a three-way meeting would be held in Washington afterward. The United States, Israel and Egypt, which is serving as a middle-man to the PLO, would attend.

Shamir, while touring the Golan Heights, called the recent stepped-up exchange with the Bush administration positive. "I don't see any large gap between our views and the proposals of the secretary of state," he told reporters. "But there are some differences."

Israel's Labor Party opposition stressed those differences and threatened to protest its government's stand by staging a walkout in parliament. "I don't see anything in Baker's proposal that needs to be changed," said Shimon Peres, the Labor leader who is also finance minister.

Margaret D. Tutwiler, the State Department spokeswoman, said of Arens' letter, delivered Monday night by Israeli Ambassador Moshe Arad: "Obviously, it is a signal, it is confirmation, it is evidence they are taking this seriously."

She said Baker had telephoned Arens on Tuesday, while the foreign minister was in Brussels, and had also talked to Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid by phone to Cairo.

"He is not overly pessimistic, he is not overly optimistic about this," Tutwiler said of Baker. "He is very realistic about this."

"We believe the Israelis are working hard to advance this process, and without saying they have accepted or rejected Baker's five points, it is obvious they are seriously exploring a way to bridge the gap to reach agreement on a framework," she said.

Asked if Baker was flexible on his five points, the spokeswoman replied: "Jim Baker is not an unreasonable person."

One of Arens' provisos is that Baker provides assurances that the PLO, whose charter calls for dismantling the Jewish state, would not participate in the Israeli-Palestinian talks, Ruth Yaron, the Israeli Embassy spokeswoman, said.

The second, she said, is that the meeting be restricted to arrangements for the election. The Palestinians elected on the West Bank and in Gaza would then negotiate with Israel a five-year plan for limited self-rule. At the end of that trial period, Israel, Egypt, Jordan and the Palestinians would work out an overall settlement.

East Germans may travel

Family members no longer have to stay behind

BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's leadership will propose a new law next month allowing all citizens to travel to the West and dropping requirements that family members stay behind as insurance, state-run media reported.

In another indication of possible reforms to come, new Communist Party chief Egon Krenz hinted Tuesday he is considering amnesty for people jailed on charges of trying to flee to the West.

Western sources estimate thousands are jailed on such charges.

About 12,000 East Germans defied a warning from Krenz and protested in the streets of the capital Tuesday after Parliament confirmed him as president. Police did not intervene.

After the ritual confirmation in the traditionally rubber-stamp chamber — some deputies voted "no" for the first time in the country's history — Krenz called for an end to street demonstrations by advocates of a more open society.

He also promised to investigate charges of police brutality during protests earlier this month and Communist authorities admitted, for the first time, that some police had used excessive force against peaceful activists.

Krenz was in charge of East Germany's police at the time.

The 52-year-old career politician replaced Erich Honecker last week as party leader, East Germany's supreme leadership post, and promised "a new course" for the country that young skilled workers have been leaving by the tens of thousands.

The state-run ADN news agency reported Tuesday that when the Communist Party's governing Central Committee begins its next session Nov. 8, it will consider reform proposals including a more liberal travel law.

ADN said the party's ruling Politburo would propose a system under which every citizen could get a passport and be allowed to travel "to all nations and West Berlin."

It said the Politburo would call for an end to the current requirements that family members stay behind as insurance that the travelers will return, and that current demands for "grounds" to travel should be dropped.

Since Hungary opened its Western border last month, more than 50,000 East Germans have fled to West Germany, which grants them automatic citizenship. Tens of thousands more have taken to the streets, saying they are staying to fight for reforms including free elections and speech.

ADN said the Politburo expressed the hope that the new travel law can be put into effect before the end of this year.

Krenz ran unopposed for the presidency and received 26 "no" votes in the 500-member Parliament, with another 26 deputies abstaining.

His election triggered the East Berlin demonstration, in which marchers demanding more democratic elections chanted "Egon, who asked us?" and "We are the competition."

The march was shown on East Germany's state-run television and reported by ADN with no hint of criticism. Witnesses estimated the number of marchers at 7,000, but ADN reported later that as many as 12,000 took part.

No violence was reported between protesters and police, who directed traffic to keep the march route clear.

More than 300,000 people had marched through the streets of Leipzig Monday night in the largest demonstration in the country's 40 years.

In his acceptance speech Tuesday, Krenz called for an end to street protests but also said he would look into the police brutality charges.

Communist Party leader Egon Krenz raises his fist to a cheering crowd in front of the Palace of the Republic in East Berlin Tuesday after he was elected new head of state by the parliament.

Bomb kills 4 at Colombian newspaper

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The State Council said Tuesday that Colombia will continue to extradite drug traffickers sought in the United States and will not negotiate with the cocaine cartels.

It said a decree issued Aug. 19 by President Virgilio Barco allowing extradition to the United States "has been applied and will continue to be applied." Barco issued the decree after assassins shot to death a leading presidential candidate.

Meanwhile, the bodyguard of a manager for the anti-drug crusading newspaper El Espectador was fatally shot Tuesday in western Medellín. Police said the victim, Pedro Luis Osorio, was a member of the Medellín police force.

Police said Osorio was walking to meet a female friend for lunch when two men approached him on a motorcycle and opened fire, a Medellín police spokesman said in a telephone interview. After killing the bodyguard, police said the assassins chased down and murdered his friend, Maria Ortega, five blocks away.

"It seems the murders were a result of a personal dispute," the spokesman said. "Drug traffickers had nothing to do with them."

She said the assassins fled and that police had made no arrests in connection with the killings.

The bodyguard had been assigned to protect Luis Bejarano, who replaced one of the two El Espectador managers killed by hired hitmen in Medellín on Oct. 10.

Hours after the assassinations, a man claiming to represent drug traffickers said in an anonymous phone call that the remaining 11 El Espectador workers in Medellín would be killed if the paper did not close the bureau in that city, which is the hub of the most powerful Colombian cocaine cartel.

El Tiempo, a Bogotá newspaper, published a message from the drug dealers Tuesday saying they had interpreted a Supreme Court ruling as declaring a Colombia-U.S. extradition treaty does exist but was not signed correctly.

That brought immediate speculation in the local news media that the court had struck down possible extraditions.

The State Council said that in applying the presidential decree on extradition it will remain within the constitutional bounds set by the Supreme Court in its latest ruling.

The council is composed of the president, the chief of police intelligence, the attorney general and the ministers of defense, interior and justice.

Referring to the drug traffickers' message in El Tiempo, the council said, "Organized crime is continuing its misinformation campaign."

In rejecting negotiations with the drug cartels the council said:

"The government has undertaken a policy of combating drug trafficking and its criminal organizations, and nowhere in this campaign is there room for either a dialogue or negotiations with traffickers."

"No proposal by either drug traffickers or their representatives will be accepted."

Trade confusion sweeps industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The aim was admirable: Scratch extraneous words from a tongue-twisting trade code.

But by deleting three, a government agency has mistakenly opened the nation's borders to cheap brooms — and U.S. makers fear their sturdy, corn-bristle sweepers may never stroke another dirty floor.

"It's thrown our industry into turmoil," says Tim Monahan of Arcola, Ill., president of Thomas Monahan Co., the world's largest supplier of corn-broom materials. "We've seen them gearing up heavily in Mexico."

"It's absolutely unbelievable," adds Bill Libman, who runs an Illinois corn-broom company founded by his grandfather in 1896.

The industry, which includes approximately 50 major producers making at least 20 million corn brooms a year, from whisk to floor models, says it's been dusted by the U.S. International Trade Commission.

In an effort to simplify language, the commission changed the section that put import restrictions and costly tariffs on brooms made "wholly or partly of broom corn."

The rules now apply only to brooms made "of broom corn."

The change got little attention until the Customs Service was recently asked to interpret the new code. Is a broom that is 28 percent to 43 percent corn bristle subject to the government's import limit?

The Customs Service said no.

Foreign producers now can stuff their brooms with cheap material such as grass or vegetable fibers, ship them to the United States and market them as dependable corn brooms — even though they are not the real thing, Monahan said Wednesday.

Foreign brooms "are selling for less than half," Libman said. "It's not a good product. It lasts for a month and you throw it out. The consumer doesn't know the difference."

A Washington attorney who represents Mexican broom exporters said the American makers "just don't want competition."

"It's just hysteria," attorney Leslie A. Glick said, dismissing claims that his clients make inferior brooms. "My clients call them natural-fiber brooms. The Mexican industry isn't that big."

A trade commission official acknowledged the mistake in a Oct. 13 letter to the Customs Service, which enforces tariff policy.

Man arrested outside Ohio Union

POLICE BEAT

Guy Kevin Bridgeforth, 27, of 1121 E. 12th Ave., was arrested by the OSU police for attempting to break into the Ohio Union early Saturday morning, reports said.

Bridgeforth, alias Guy Dirk, had been escorted out of a dance at the union by a Franklin County Sheriff's Deputy at 12:30 a.m. Saturday, police said.

OSU police officers who were on patrol noticed a man trying to re-enter the union through the west doors of the west ballroom, and after approaching him, they noticed he smelled of alcohol, had trouble walking, and was holding a Batman squeeze bottle which contained alcohol, reports said.

After having a record check done on Bridgeforth, they found out that he had five active warrants filed by the Columbus Division of Police for his arrest, police said. Three were for aggravated menacing, and two were for criminal damaging.

The officers charged him with one count each of disorderly conduct, criminal trespassing, and open container, and later took him to the Franklin County Jail, reports said.

Munchies missing

Snack foods were stolen from concession stand number 10 at the Ohio Stadium when it was broken into between 8 p.m. Saturday and 9:45 p.m. Monday, campus police said.

The stand located on the ground level inside the stadium, was locked on Saturday, and somebody forced their way inside, reports said. The stand is owned by Mariott Corporation Distributors.

Taken were $52.25 worth of candy bars, 17 bags of potato chips valued at $2.21, and eight boxes of Cracker Jack worth $2.32, on the table while working in the laboratory, and when they returned they noticed one purse and the money from the other one was missing, reports said.

The stolen purse, valued at $20, contained $160 in cash, various identification and credit cards, and a desk key to the Health Sciences Library, 376 W. 10th Ave. The other purse was missing $30, police said.

Beeper taken

A beeper was stolen from OSU Hospitals Clinic Room 3146 between 4:20 p.m. Monday and 8:15 a.m. Tuesday, police said.

A staff member told police that the beeper was in her desk, and that the office should have been locked, reports said. There were no signs of forced entry.

The beeper, possibly a Motorola, was valued at $256.

Parked car pillaged

An OSU student's purse was taken from her parked car on 12th Avenue in front of Baker Hall between 11:30 a.m. and 12 p.m. Sunday, police said.

She said the car had been left unlocked and unattended while she was gone, reports said.

Stolen was a black leather purse, valued at $80, a Mark Cross black leather wallet, valued at $150, a checkbook, valued at $15, a makeup case, valued at $65, a cigarette case, valued at $20, $65 in U.S. currency and $20 in Swedish and Danish currency.

Toledo mayor's new 'drug czar' plan questioned by police

TOLEDO (AP) — While Mayor Donna Owens pushes ahead with her proposal to create a city "drug czar," she appears to have neglected to discuss her idea with one key person: Toledo's police chief.

Chief Marti Felker said Wednesday he never was consulted about the mayor's plan to create the $45,000-a-year position.

Owens asked City Council on Tuesday to vote on a proposal directing city administrators to write a job description for the post. The appointee would lead the city's war against drugs, coordinating education and treatment programs as well as law enforcement efforts.

After a heated debate, the measure was sent to Council's community safety, environment and development committee for a hearing today.

"I've heard a lot of talk about the drug czar and I'm anxious to see what those duties are going to be," Felker said at a news conference.

When asked if he was worried that the position would infringe on his authority as police chief, Felker shook his head no.

"I could see where a drug czar would be beneficial from the standpoint of coordinating some of the treatment agencies, some of the groups out there that are trying to work on their own," Felker said.

"When it gets into a drug czar trying to dictate to either myself or to (Lucas County Prosecutor) Anthony Pizza of what cases to pursue and what not to pursue, we would have to sit down and have some lengthy discussions on that," the police chief said.

Several telephone messages left for Owens at her office were not returned Wednesday afternoon.

City Manager Philip Hawkey said he believed the drug policy coordinator might report directly to him because he or she would be responsible for coordinating anti-drug efforts in several departments.

Owens has said she proposed the appointment because of Toledo's growing drug problem.

But some Lucas County Democrats have suggested that Owens, a Republican, is looking for a campaign issue.

Owens is seeking her fourth two-year term Nov. 7. She's locked in a battle with Democrat John McHugh, who has accused her of being soft on crime.

Several polls have shown McHugh leading Owens by a substantial margin.

Felker said he expects the mayor to contact him about her proposal by today.

The police chief would not comment on whether he supports Owens' plan or whether it would work in Ohio's fourth-largest city.

"We'll cooperate with a drug czar. We'll cooperate with anybody who wants to work toward solving the drug problem," Felker said.

"But it's in the initial stages. It hasn't reached a point where we can say whether or not or it would work in Toledo."

Toledo refinery leak sends 26 to hospital

OREGON (AP) — A chemical leak at a suburban Toledo oil refinery sent 26 people to area hospitals, but just one remained hospitalized Wednesday, a company spokeswoman said.

Tuesday night's accident at the Sun Refining & Marketing Co. occurred when a pipe under repair emitted a mist containing hydrocarbons and a small amount of sulfuric acid, said spokeswoman Valerie Jurgens.

The chemical leaked for about five minutes before the line was shut down, she said.

Sulfuric acid can cause eye, ear and throat irritation.

Twenty-six people employed by the contractor were taken to four area hospitals, and 25 were treated and released, she said.

One worker, whose identity had not been released, was listed in fair condition at Riverside Hospital in Toledo Wednesday afternoon, the hospital said.

Ms. Jurgens said half of the refinery had been shut down at the time of the 11:15 p.m. accident for general maintenance and repair work. The operation was back to normal Wednesday, she said.

"At one of the plants where we were steaming out a line so we could work on it, there was an emission of steam and hydrocarbons and a small concentration of sulfuric acid," she said.

The refinery was investigating the accident, she said. A team from the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency also visited the site Wednesday to investigate, she said.

"There were no active materials going into the line," she said.

"We don't feel that it will have any long-term effects on the people."

Pennsylvania passes bill; restricts abortion policy

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The state House approved a strong abortion control bill that advances Pennsylvania toward becoming the first state to take advantage of new restrictions allowed by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The state Senate delayed discussion of the bill until after it returns from a two-week break for elections. The state's Democratic governor, Robert P. Casey, has said he supports new controls on abortion.

"Pennsylvania sent to the nation this message," said Rep. Stephen Freind, a Republican and sponsor of the anti-abortion proposal. "Pennsylvania is, Pennsylvania was and Pennsylvania always will be down the road pro-life."

In Lansing, Mich., meanwhile, the Republican-controlled Senate was to begin debate Wednesday on a bill requiring parental consent for abortion until a woman is 18 years old.

After nine hours of debate Tuesday, the Pennsylvania House voted 143-58 in favor of a bill that would ban abortions after the 24th week of pregnancy in most cases. It also would require a 24-hour waiting period before an abortion; require women to tell their husbands in most cases if they plan abortions; prohibit sex-selection abortion; and restrict, but not ban, the use of tissue from aborted fetuses in scientific research.

Anti-abortion lawmakers defeated several attempts to weaken the bill, which Democratic Rep. Karen Ritter, the Legislature's pro-choice leader, called "cruel and mean-spirited."

"This is a very sad day in this House and for the women of Pennsylvania," she said.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Pennsylvania called passage of the measure "an unconscionable tragedy."

"The state House of Representatives has done the women of Pennsylvania an unforgivable and unforgettable injustice," said Sue Frietsche of the ACLU.

Anti-abortion leaders were jubilant.

"It was a good vote in behalf of the women in this state and for unborn children," said Mary Bellevue of the Pennsylvania Pro-life Federation.

Pennsylvania's Legislature repeatedly had voted for abortion controls since the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision.

Anti-abortion efforts were renewed after the U.S. Supreme Court's July ruling that restored key sections of a Missouri law restricting the use of public money and facilities in performing abortions.

GOP leaders propose aid; Poland to receive millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans who want to blunt Democrats' efforts to seize the upper hand on U.S. aid to Eastern Europe are proposing their own three-year, $585 million program.

Meanwhile, President Bush struck back at critics of his aid program, saying in an interview with The New York Times that he's tired of complaints from "people who found Poland on the globe about three weeks ago."

The GOP plan for Poland and Hungary, assembled by Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and seven Republican colleagues, was a middle ground between Bush's $450 million proposal and an $837 million version passed by the House last week.

"We do not believe the test of American policy in Poland and Hungary is how many dollars we spend, but how we can best achieve our national goals in those two countries," Dole said in a statement.

The issue was scheduled to come to the Senate floor today.

In an interview published in today's editions of the Times, Bush said changes taking place in Eastern Europe are "absolutely extraordinary, but I'm not going to be stampeded into overreacting to any of this."

"Democrats on Capitol Hill have been calling me 'timid,'" Bush said. "I have other, better words, like 'cautious,' 'diplomatic,' 'prudent.'"

An outline of the bill calls the GOP approach "generous, but fiscally prudent, rejecting the notion that Poland will benefit from a bidding war between American political parties."

Democrats have criticized Bush's response to the sweeping changes in Eastern Europe and sought to demonstrate leadership by proposing a far more generous program.

Democrats' higher aid figures "make no economic sense at this point," Dole said, contending that private enterprise will take time to evolve from the two countries' centrally planned economies.

"Just pouring aid dollars into Poland and Hungary will not do the trick," Dole said.

The GOP proposal included some of the features of the House-passed legislation, which won strong bipartisan support.

It would provide $200 million as the U.S. share of a $1 billion international fund to stabilize Poland's economy and $112 million in immediate food aid for Poland. But instead of providing new money, it would require that the $200 million come out of the already tight foreign aid budget.

Another $125 million would be used to support new private business ventures, including joint ventures with Americans. The House bill calls for $200 million in private enterprise support.

The Republican alternative omits a $200 million guarantee fund the House version provides to underwrite sales to Poland by U.S. exporters.

The Senate GOP bill would make the aid specifically contingent on continuing transition toward democracy in the two countries and development of a free-enterprise economy.

Broadcasters to address drugs

(AP) — Television and radio stations across Ohio were urged Wednesday to set aside two hours on the same night in January to air programs about the problem of drug and alcohol abuse.

Plans for the event were outlined at a meeting of the Ohio Association of Broadcasters, whose governing board has endorsed the proposal.

"What we are going to attempt to do is to get all of the broadcasters in the state of Ohio to commit to a day, yet to be chosen, in January where we will attempt a massive (schedule) roadblock ... and every broadcaster will devote that block of time in addressing the drug and alcohol abuse problem," said John Llewellyn, vice president and general manager of WKYC-TV in Cleveland.

Llewellyn said the tentative time chosen would be from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Explosion cleanup continues

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — Crews began assembling heavy equipment today to clear tons of twisted, blackened rubble at a plastics plant, where a series of explosions and fire may have killed up to 25 workers, officials said.

Two bodies have been recovered.

Miles of charred strings of pipe from Monday's accident were piled haphazardly around the Phillips Petroleum Co. plant. Some buildings are gone, and eight giant reactors now look like huge, smashed tin cans.

"Any employee in that wreckage probably didn't survive," said Jere Smith, Phillips' director of public relations, looking at the scene.

Twenty-two workers remain missing and are believed to be entombed, he said. But late Tuesday, officials at the company's Bartlesville, Okla., headquarters released a list of 19 missing Phillips employees and said four contract workers also were missing. Officials could not immediately explain the discrepancy.

The plant's emergency alarm system had been tested and was problem-free hours before the explosions, said Greg Derrick, a Phillips spokesman in Bartlesville.

Smith said officials were mobilizing heavy cranes and bulldozers to remove the wreckage. The effort would proceed slowly as crews look for victims while removing debris, he said.

"The devastation in the plant is a whole lot more extensive than we thought," said Harris County Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen. "Some of the buildings are gone. There's nothing there. Others are crushed in, flattened."

Frantic relatives gathered and scanned lists of known survivors. Many held a vigil outside the complex, which produces 4.5 million pounds a day of plastics used in milk jugs and grocery sacks.

Mary De La Vergne, 38, found the name of her common-law husband, Cipriana Rodriguez, 43, on the list of missing workers.

"I had just taken him lunch," said De La Vergne, dressed in black. "I heard the explosion when I was going back home."

"I can only keep on hoping," she said, collapsing into tears.

The blast injured 124 workers, including 35 who remained hospitalized Tuesday. Up to six people were in critical condition.

Worker James Westerfield, 37, said he saw a "red fireball ... eating up everything in sight." He began running out, but stopped to carry an injured co-worker, Gary Bogle.

Westerfield shrugged as he looked at smoke rising from the plant on Tuesday, and said he deserved no special mention.

"There ain't no heroes out here," he said. "It was just everybody trying to help everybody else."

The plant exploded in a series of blasts Monday afternoon, sending metal and concrete debris flying as far as six miles. The blast bent nearby railroad warning signs. Twenty-five miles away, the ground shook.

Officials don't know what caused the explosions, which stemmed from a leaking chemical reactor. The federal Environmental Protection Agency and Occupational Safety and Health Administration also are investigating.

Authorities said it will be days and perhaps weeks before the missing workers are found.

The second victim was found Tuesday, but the body could not immediately be recovered because it was partly buried in mounds of concrete and steel beams. The first fatality was discovered Monday night, but officials have not yet identified either person.

The area where authorities believe most of the missing workers are entombed is a twisted jumble of rubble and debris.

"It's going to take extremely heavy equipment to remove the debris. ... We're going to have to bring in a bulldozer to make a road," the sheriff said.

Bush sticks to no new tax vow; funds sought for quake relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush excused his lateness for an award ceremony for math teachers by joking he was busy "trying to solve a few quadratic equations."

He said the exercise was "somewhat more difficult than balancing the budget."

Having pretty much given up on the notion of balancing the budget any time soon, administration officials are trying to juggle a slew of budget-policy equations to gloss over a continuing impasse with Congress.

Bush told the math and science teachers gathered in the Rose Garden on Tuesday that he gets much of his scientific understanding from the comic strips.

He cited a Gary Larson cartoon "where, after detailed calculations, Einstein discovers that time is actually money."

Time was money, in fact, in the federal response to the California earthquake.

Last week's devastating quake gave rise to weekend speculation that the administration was considering some form of tax surcharge or increase — most likely in the gasoline tax — to help pay for a federal relief effort expected to cost U.S. taxpayers around $3 billion.

After all, that's a big chunk, and where was the money to come from in an already overburdened federal budget?

The tax speculation was fueled by Bush's own repeated failure to rule out a tax increase when asked by reporters about the prospects during his tour of the San Francisco Bay area's earthquake damage.

However, it turned out that Bush — once again — could stick with the "no new taxes" vow of the 1988 campaign.

A quirk in the nation's budget laws allowed administration and congressional officials to "find" money for quake relief without having to face the issue of raising taxes.

Congress' inability to agree on a deficit-reduction package for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1 resulted in across-the-board cuts of $16.1 billion under the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law.

Pregnant woman killed; baby, father still critical

Presidency overshadowed by Iran-Contra questions

BOSTON (AP) — The wails of a siren over a car phone led police to a wounded pregnant woman and her unconscious husband, who had been abducted and shot. Hours later, the woman died but doctors delivered her baby.

Charles and Carol Stuart had been headed home from Brigham and Women's Hospital, where they'd attended a birthing class Monday night.

But they were abducted by a man who drove them to the city's Mission Hill district, then robbed and shot them, apparently thinking they were police officers because of the car's cellular phone, authorities said Tuesday.

Carol Stuart, a 33-year-old attorney, ended up back at the hospital she'd left hours earlier, and died there early Tuesday of a gunshot wound to the head.

Doctors performed an emergency Caesarean section to deliver her son while she clung to life.

The baby — whose parents had planned to call Christopher — was delivered one month before he was due, the hospital said. The infant was in intensive care early today, a nursing supervisor said.

Stuart, 29, the general manager of a fur store in Boston's Back Bay, was in critical condition today with a gunshot wound to the abdomen, a Boston City Hospital spokesman said.

Police have no suspects.

The gunman apparently thought the Stuarts were police officers after seeing the car phone, said Joseph Dunford, deputy police superintendent. Before shooting the couple, according to Dunford, the gunman said, "I think you're five-o," slang for police.

Charles Stuart battled for himself and his wife in the minutes after they were shot and left for dead, police said. But as he spoke to police on his telephone, he faded in and out of consciousness while his pregnant wife lay dying next to him.

He cried in pain and confusion. Not knowing where he was, he couldn't tell state police dispatcher Gary McLaughlin where to send help.

"Oh man, it hurts and my wife has stopped gurgling, she's stopped breathing," Stuart called out, according to a transcript released Tuesday by police.

Then there was silence.

"Chuck, can you hear me? Chuck, Chuck can you hear me, buddy," McLaughlin pleaded. "Pick up the phone, Chuck. Chuck? Come on Chuck, can you hear me, Chuck? Chuck, pick up the phone, I can hear you breathing there Chuck, come on, buddy."

Still, nothing.

McLaughlin instructed Stuart at one point to open his door or window to see if he could identify some landmark, so that help could find him.

But Stuart only replied: "I'm blanking out."

"You can't blank out on me, I need you man. Chuck? Chuck?"

In a desperate effort to home in on the car, police in cruisers were told to flick their sirens off and on, one by one. McLaughlin was able to tell which cruiser was near the Stuarts' car by listening to the sirens coming over the phone.

"Get my wife out," Stuart told the officers who found him.

The ambulance crew that came to the aid of the Stuarts had been riding with a camera crew from the CBS-TV series "Rescue 911," which tells real-life stories about rescue operations.

The crew videotaped Stuart regaining consciousness and talking about the attack as paramedics worked on him en route to Boston City Hospital, and was allowed into the emergency room, CBS spokesman Mike Silver said in New York.

Ted Kakas, an owner of the fur store where Stuart has worked for eight years, said the couple had just celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary. The child was the couple's first.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department said Wednesday that a court decision allowing former President Reagan's papers to be subpoenaed for an Iran-Contra trial "raised a serious question" about the institution of the presidency.

Comments by chief spokesman David Runkel appeared to signal that top Justice Department officials were studying the possibility of supporting Reagan in any challenge to subpoenas for notes and diaries for use as evidence by former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter.

Runkel emphasized that the department has not formulated a position on Tuesday's ruling by the trial judge in Poindexter's case and wouldn't do so without consulting with Reagan's private attorney, Theodore B. Olson.

But the spokesman said the ruling by U.S. District Judge Harold Greene "does raise a serious question about the institution of the presidency."

"The judge's decision would allow for the subpoenaing of material from President Reagan that dealt with discussions he had when he was president," Runkel said. "We intend to take a look at that."

Runkel refused to discuss in more specific detail the nature of the Justice Department's reaction to Greene's ruling.

Asked if the department was considering a claim the papers are protected by executive privilege, Runkel said only: "The possibilities are wide, I expect."

Olson did not immediately return a reporter's telephone call.

Poindexter is accused of obstructing various congressional inquiries into the Iran-Contra affair. He contends that Reagan's diaries and notes taken during their frequent meetings will show that the former president authorized many of his actions in the Iran-Contra affair.

Greene held that if such diaries and notes contain relevant information, Poindexter is entitled to subpoena them for use as evidence at the trial, set to begin Jan. 22.

Among other things, Poindexter contends that he and Reagan discussed a false chronology of the administration's arms sales to Iran that is the subject of four of the charges against the former national security adviser.

In his request for documents, Poindexter cited notes taken by the former president and others during his meetings with Reagan as well as presidential diaries.

Prosecutors for independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh were allowed to read and take notes from typewritten extracts of Reagan's diaries that were prepared by the White House.

The diaries remain in Reagan's custody and he claims they are his personal property, according to filings in the case.

Greene ruled that Poindexter's attorneys may issue subpoenas for documents kept by Reagan or at the National Archives. The subpoenas would be returnable by Nov. 23.

Under the Presidential Records and Materials Preservation Act, a former president may invoke executive privilege to prevent the archives from releasing certain papers. The law, however, does not extend this privilege to subpoenas for material needed as evidence in a criminal trial.

Moreover, the Supreme Court unanimously ruled in 1973 that then-President Nixon could not invoke executive privilege to withhold tape recordings of his Oval Office conversations for use as evidence in the Watergate prosecutions.

The high court ruled that although a president has an executive privilege over his papers, it cannot be invoked to prevent use of papers deemed relevant to a criminal trial.

1990 Democratic governor concerns Chairman Bennett

DAYTON (AP) — Ohio GOP Chairman Robert Bennett said Wednesday that electing a Democratic governor in 1990 could mean a return to the corrupt practices of the Celeste administration.

"The leading Democrats today for governor are the ones who by omission have participated in the ethical failure of the governor in leading this state," said Bennett.

At a news conference, Bennett displayed a chronology of alleged ethical problems that occurred during the tenure of Gov. Richare Celeste.

He said the problems include the indictment on bribery and other charges of James Rogers, former head of the Ohio Department of Youth Services, to millions of dollars of no-bid state contracts going to Celeste contributors.

"To the best of my knowledge, this is the longest list of corruption that has ever been compiled on any Ohio governor," Bennett said.

Celeste has been accused of channeling state contracts to his political contributors, dating back to the early days of his administration. The governor has never been accused of breaking any laws and has maintained he did not intentionally help his supporters.

Bennett said Celeste has "a lousy record" and that the governor has been traveling the state telling people that his record will continue if a Democrat is elected governor.

"After having looked at Governor Celeste's record, we think Ohioans should consider this not a promise, but a threat," Bennett said.

Calls to Celeste's office and the Ohio Democratic Party for comment were not immediately returned.

Bennett said the Celeste administration has spent nearly $2 billion more on education, increasing the bureaucracy by more than 40 percent. At the same time, he said, less money has been spent on teachers' salaries, and student achievement scores are declining.

"Dick Celeste has done next to nothing to solve our state's drug problem," Bennett added.

He also accused the Democrats of responding to economic problems by continually raising taxes.

"What you're talking about is a continuation of the Celeste administration," Bennett said. "(And) we're certainly going to be talking about the failures of the Celeste administration."

Crack busts yield few arrests

TOLEDO (AP) — A sweep of 39 suspected "crack houses" by federal and local law officers didn't yield as many drug-related arrests and cocaine as they would have liked, but police Wednesday still called the raids a success.

Capt. Thomas Vetter, head of the vice-metro unit, which coordinated the operation, said police seized $7,000 in drugs and arrested 37 people on a variety of charges. Nineteen were charged with drug-related offenses.

No arrests were made at 19 of the suspected crack houses, where the inexpensive but potent cocaine derivative is sold.

In addition, police seized $11,000 in cash, 13 guns and stolen food stamps, Vetter said.

"We would have liked to have had more arrests. But we knew going in with these type of crack houses that you don't generate a lot of numbers of arrests. You don't generate a lot of dope seizures. Most of the people have a small quantity of drugs on hand," Vetter said at a news conference.

About 105 law enforcement officials from various agencies took part in the two-day raids, which began Monday. At least 60 officers were from the FBI, U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency and the U.S. Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Chief Marti Felker denied that the raids were politically motivated.

Mayor Donna Owens, a Republican who is seeking her fourth two-year term in the Nov. 7 election, has made drug enforcement a major issue in her campaign against John McHugh, a Democrat. McHugh has accused Owens of being soft on crime.

Leonard wants out

MARIETTA (AP) — Lt. Gov. Paul Leonard says he's leaving politics in part because government has become "warped" by big-money campaign funding.

Leonard toured Washington County Monday and Tuesday, where he said he was free to talk about issues of importance to him — combating drug abuse, promoting economic development and reforming campaign election laws.

"Now that I'm in the last chapter of my political life, I can concentrate on single problems and make a difference," Leonard said.

Leonard, lieutenant governor since 1987, has announced he plans to return to the private sector when his term expires next year.

"The system now is completely warped . . . The profession of politics is now driven by money and not by good government," Leonard said. "Fund-raising has become a year-round daily activity in Columbus. . . It will soon be rare that a candidate for governor will ever come to a small city."

The Ohio constitution forbids Gov. Richard Celeste to run next year for a third consecutive term. Leonard predicted next year's gubernatorial race would top all previous records for spending.

While Leonard said he was leaving politics mainly to spend time with his new wife and family, he also wanted to distance himself from the political scene, where he said money and influence had corrupted the professional public servant.

"Asking for money is the most humiliating, degrading experience I've had in politics . . . the way we elect people in this country is warped," Leonard said. "There's very little planning for the next decade. Candidates are just concerned about the next election."

As a private citizen, Leonard said he hoped to speak out about how money was buying influence in Columbus.

"When you're running for something, the people look at you with a little bit of cynicism," Leonard said. "I find I can speak more forcefully about issues because I'm walking away from a political office."

Leonard toured Marietta Tuesday after speaking to students at Marietta College and in Marietta's Washington School about the problems of drugs in the country.

Lower mortgage rates increase homes sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes rose for the second consecutive month in September, climbing 4.3 percent to the highest level this year, a real estate trade group said today.

The National Association of Realtors credited lower mortgage rates for the spurt in home sales, which rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.63 million units.

The September increase followed a 4.5 percent rise in August and marked the third time in the last four months that rates have increased since hitting a low-point this year in May.

For a year, the Federal Reserve pushed interest rates higher to battle inflationary pressures. But since the spring, the central bank has been gradually easing its grip on mortgage pressures, allowing mortgage rates and a variety of other consumer and business loan rates to fall.

At the end of last week, fixed-rate mortgages had dipped back below 10 percent, averaging 9.92 percent, according to a weekly survey conducted by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. Last spring, mortgage rates hit a peak of 11.22 percent.

The national median price for an existing single-family home fell from August to September by $1,400 to $93,400. This was still 5.5 percent higher than a median priced home sold for a year ago. The median is the point at which half the homes sell for more and half for less.

Regionally, the sales advanced was paced by a 12.7 percent increase in the West, where homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 620,000 units in September.

Sales were up 3.7 percent in the South to an annual rate of 1.40 million units, while sales rose 1 percent in the Midwest to an annual rate of 990,000 units.

Sales were unchanged in the Northeast at 590,000 units. This is down 9.2 percent from a year ago. Home sales in the Northeast have been in a slump this year because surging home costs have priced many buyers out of the market.

The national sales pace of 3.63 million units was the fastest clip since homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.92 million units last December.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern cannot accept advertising that advocates sedition or other illegal actions, violates national standards of morality and taste, or attacks an individual race, nationality, ethnic group, religion or sex. In cases of doubt, the proffered copy, illustrations and layout will be submitted by the Lantern Business Manager to the School of Journalism Publications Committee and judged by a majority vote of the members. Decisions of this committee are final.

Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required; this information is for our records only and not available to the public.

The Ohio State Lantern does not restrict advertisers beyond the limits of responsible journalism and the rules imposed by the Ohio State University on all student publications.

a. Copy will be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for published special early deadlines.

b. All advertisements are required to occupy at least as many inches in height as they do columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered full column (21 inches) and charged accordingly.

c. The Lantern reserves the right to reject any advertisement that promotes illegal activity or activity detrimental or damaging to the university and its educational mission. It further reserves the right to revise any advertisement which is deemed objectionable for any reason.

d. Make-good/adjustments will be considered only for those advertisements where errors occur in the following: business/group name, address, or phone number; item price; date, time, or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement, and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered to the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify, otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.

e. Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.

f. A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.

g. No proof will be furnished on any advertisement received after deadline, or for ads smaller than seven (7) column inches.

h. If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and subject to a rebill fee.

i. Advertisers are encouraged to avoid making misleading claims or using art or words that impugn or degrade sex, race, age, national origin, creed or color.

j. The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until credit rating with the Lantern is established. CERTIFIED check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.

k. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a rate-holder ad meeting contract minimums, for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.

l. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser notifies the Lantern office prior to publication.

m. Advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees, and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of advertiser's advertisement.

n. Advertisers in the Ohio State Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.

o. All mail-order advertisers are required to submit sample/proof-of-product prior to publication.

Please note that advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

Bush officials worry Kremlin trying to weaken defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — While applauding the Soviet admissions of past mistakes, some Bush administration officials are concerned that the Kremlin may be engaged in a sophisticated campaign to weaken U.S. resolve on key foreign and defense policies.

The administration's public response Tuesday to the speech by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze was decidedly favorable, with spokesmen using words such as "extraordinary" and "striking" to describe the Soviet diplomat's statements.

In a speech Monday, Shevardnadze condemned the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979 and, in effect, said the United States was correct in contending that a controversial radar station in Siberia violated bilateral agreements.

But one U.S. official, speaking anonymously, said Shevardnadze's statements on Afghanistan may have been aimed at rallying U.S. public opinion against continued U.S. military involvement in Afghanistan.

The United States has been providing substantial assistance to the Afghan rebels and encouraging them not to enter peace negotiations with the pro-Moscow regime in Kabul.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler welcomed Shevardnadze's admission that the invasion had set the Soviet Union "against all of humanity" but she added that the Kremlin should do more to erase its mistakes.

Specifically, she encouraged the Soviets to transfer power from the "illegitimate" government in Afghanistan to a "government acceptable to all the Afghan people."

"The legacy of the Soviet invasion continues as long as the current Kabul regime retains power in the face of a determined effort by the Afghan people and the international community to see it removed," she said.

The Afghan war has continued to rage even though the Soviets completed their troop pullout eight months ago.

According to U.S. estimates, the Soviets have been airlifting $250 million to $300 million worth of arms a month to Kabul. Soviet military involvement in Afghanistan, among other regional conflicts, was perhaps the main area of disagreement during Shevardnadze's talks last month with Secretary of State James A. Baker III in Wyoming.

Tutwiler said: "We have long maintained that the radar is a violation of the ABM treaty. We therefore welcome Mr. Shevardnadze's statement just as we welcomed the Soviet decision in September to completely eliminate that radar."
