State of the Union address

Clinton speaks to country, leery GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Delivering his State of the Union address to a skeptical Republican Congress, President Clinton traced the themes of his re-election campaign Tuesday night and confronted the GOP on the budget, demanding they "never — ever" shut the government again.

Democrats rose with loud cheers but Republicans sat in stony silence at Clinton's challenge. GOP lawmakers — particularly the rebellious House freshmen — had been coached by party elders to be on good behavior and not boo Clinton, as some did last year.

The speech was brief by Clinton standards, 61 minutes, less than last year's record 81-minute marathon.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole — front-runner for the GOP presidential nomination — made the Republican response, outlining differences with Clinton and assailing the president as "the chief obstacle to a balanced budget." He called the president "the rear-guard of the welfare state."

Dole said Clinton was "careening dangerously off course" in welfare, education, Medicare and taxes. "We will challenge President Clinton again and again to walk the talk he talks so well," Dole vowed.

Clinton proposed several new initiatives, among them $1,000 college scholarships for the top 5 percent of graduates from every high school, and turning the FBI loose on youth gangs.

With Republicans controlling the legislative agenda, Clinton's proposals are unlikely to see the light of day, especially in an election year.

The House chamber overflowed with Senate and House members, Clinton's Cabinet, the Supreme Court justices in their black robes and ambassadors from around the world. House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Clinton's yearlong nemesis, sat immediately behind the president, applauding politely on some occasions, and sitting in stern silence when the president criticized Congress.

And criticize he did.

"I challenge all of you in this chamber," Clinton said, "never — ever" shut the government again. He said it was time to "finish the job" and pass a balanced budget plan that he could sign.

"The era of big government is over," Clinton said, twice, as if to capture a campaign slogan.

Republicans liked that, and answered with applause. Democrats hailed Clinton's next sentence: "But we cannot go back to the time when our citizens were left to fend for themselves."

Clinton began his remarks expressing pride in U.S. peacekeepers in Bosnia.

He said the state of the union was "strong" and cited economic and falling crime rates to make the case. In all, Clinton was interrupted 78 times by applause.

With tempers rubbed raw by months of battle, Republicans accused Clinton of standing in the way of balancing the budget, cutting taxes, reforming welfare and giving parents more control over schools.

Clinton's speech provided a clear counterpoint to the Republican agenda. He challenged their stands on welfare reform, tax cuts, the minimum wage, health insurance, Medicare and Medicaid, environmental cleanup, crime-fighting and foreign policy.

The budget crisis loomed paramount over the House chamber. The next budget deadline comes at midnight Friday with the expiration of a temporary spending measure that has kept much of the government open.

"I am convinced we will balance the budget," Clinton said, adding, "Now is the time to finish the job." He said both sides should lock in agreed-upon budget savings and continue negotiating the differences.

Clinton said they shouldn't stop there. "On behalf of all Americans, I challenge Congress to preserve the full faith and credit of the United States, to honor our obligations as we have for 220 years, to rise above partisanship and pass a straightforward extension of the debt limit."

Other proposals:

- Tax incentives for businesses that clean up abandoned properties.

- Expansion of a federally funded college work-study program to 1 million students, up from 700,000 now. He also called for all schools to be linked together through the information superhighway.

- Legislation protecting workers' pensions and insure health care benefits for employees when they change jobs or have pre-existing conditions.

- A challenge to Hollywood producers to provide entertainment their own children would enjoy. Clinton also urged a TV ratings system much like the movies. He invited entertainment leaders to the White House to work on ways to clean up television programming.

Ex-prof charged with theft at Vatican

By Annette Herr and Kristina Jameson

A former Ohio State professor has been indicted by a federal grand jury.

Retired art history professor Anthony Melnikas, 68, was brought up Tuesday on charges of two counts of unlawfully receiving and possessing stolen property, and two counts of smuggling stolen property into the United States.

The charges came in connection with the theft of three 600-year-old manuscript pages from the Vatican Library. The pages were discovered missing last May.

To be charged with possession of stolen property, the value of the property must be more than $5,000.

An actual amount will not be determined unless Melnikas is sentenced, said Edmund A. Sargus, Jr., a U.S. attorney who announced the charges.

Melnikas retired from OSU in June 1995. After his retirement, he sought emeritus status, which would have allowed him to continue teaching after retirement.

"He has requested emeritus status and has not been granted it," said Donald Harris, dean of the College of Arts. "He no longer has anything to do with the university."

However, Melnikas' future regarding emeritus status has not yet been determined, Harris said.

"I'll have to cross that bridge at that time," Harris said.

Melnikas will be summoned to federal court within the next 10 days for an arraignment, Sargus said.

The United States, Vatican City and Italy are involved in this investigation. In cases like this, one county usually takes the lead in prosecuting suspects, Sargus said. At this point, Italian officials have not expressed an interest in prosecuting Melnikas, however, they do maintain an open file, Sargus said. Vatican City usually handles criminal proceedings through Italy, Sargus said.

Campus Partners

Report responds to public queries

By Brad Davis and Angela Miller
Lantern staff writers

Campus Partners released a report Monday, responding to citizens' comments regarding the group's university-area renovation plans.

The organization collected comments from the public in November and had consultants review them, said Joe Williams, director of real estate for Campus Partners.

The responses were compiled in a document titled the "Summary of Public Comment and Proposed Revisions," Williams said.

Campus Partners for Community Urban Redevelopment, Inc. was established in January 1995, as a result of the University Area Improvement Task Force. This task force was developed in 1994 by Columbus Mayor Greg Lashutka and Ohio State President E. Gordon Gee.

The organization's stated priorities are to develop a comprehensive neighborhood redevelopment program and an implementation program, and to actively promote positive programs for the neighborhood.

Williams mailed the 75-page report to those who commented, and copies of it will be available at Grade A Notes, Kinko's and local libraries, he said.

Among those who offered comments regarding the proposal were local property owners, business owners and students.

John Mercer, a property owner in Northland, said something drastic needs to be done with the university area, but he doesn't believe everything Campus Partners is proposing.

"The bar section (of High Street) is dreadful, but we can't just do away with it," Mercer said.

Mercer is afraid the proposal may be taking too much on at one time, he said.

OSU student Kim Shropshire, an undecided freshman, said she agreed with everything the group recommended.

"I think (South Campus) is ugly, dirty and gross," she said.

Shropshire said she hasn't read the whole plan, but she likes that Campus Partners is listening to students' views through their open forums.

Campus Partners was pleased with the public's feedback, Williams said.

"Although not every opinion can be accommodated, public input is essential to this process," he said.

Whether complimentary or critical, most comments made good points, he said.

Campus Partners is still accepting comments from anyone concerned with the proposals, although they will not be responded to in a document form, Williams said.

The next draft with these revisions should be finished by March, followed by another public comment session, Williams said.

The final plan is scheduled to be completed by early May, he said.

Whitewater prosecutors want cooperation

WASHINGTON (AP) — In summoning Hillary Rodham Clinton before a grand jury, prosecutors sent a blunt message: Everybody, at every level, is to cooperate with our investigation of Whitewater and related matters.

"The legal and political issues, for better or worse, are inextricably intertwined," one expert observer said of the development.

Prosecutors will ask Mrs. Clinton on Friday whether she or anyone else inside the White House tried to hide the records after they were subpoenaed by investigators two years ago.

The documents, unexpectedly discovered in the White House family residence, outline Mrs. Clinton's work for a failing Arkansas savings and loan owned by the president's and her Whitewater business partners.

"The only reason for Mrs. Clinton's appearance is that this grand jury will consider possible obstruction of justice charges against somebody at some point," said Stephen Gillers, a New York University law professor.

"Mrs. Clinton, along with others, may have information that may illuminate whether those charges should be brought and against whom," Gillers added.

In subpoenaing Mrs. Clinton before the grand jury, Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr departed from his past practice of going to the White House to question the first lady under oath but away from a grand jury.

"One of the legal messages it sends is that everyone, no matter how high in the pecking order, is subject to the rule of law," said Ira Robbins, an American University law professor.

Still, politics hovers over the whole event. Democrats are quick to note that Starr is a tried and true Republican with future political aspirations, and that the GOP has been trying to embarrass the first lady.

Republicans, meanwhile, suggest that the mere fact that she had to be subpoenaed shows the potentially serious legal trouble the White House finds itself in.

USG moves to bigger Ohio Union office

By Annette Herr
Lantern staff writer

Ohio State students looking for the USG office will no longer have to take the elevator to the third floor.

USG is now located in the northwest corner of the Ohio Union on the second floor.

USG began moving from room 306 to room 201 Saturday, and expects to finish the move Thursday night, said USG President Kevin Sheriff.

"These offices are a lot more professional," Sheriff said.

On Jan. 10, USG voted unanimously in favor of the move.

"I think everyone's very happy now," Sheriff said. "It gives us a lot more room to do a lot more work."

Other USG members have become more involved with the organization because of the move, he said.

"I really like it because the office is a lot bigger," said Erin Moore, a first-year intern to the vice president.

So far, the move has not cost USG any money.

"We came across some free furniture," Sheriff said. "We're not spending any student money."

The university would like to see all major student governments located in the wing where the new USG office is located, said Becky Parker, director of Ohio Unions.

"We're trying to create a leadership wing," Parker said.

OSU research park gets money

By Tyler Day
Lantern staff writer

Ohio State wants to decrease reliance on federal funds by beefing up external funding for its research park on west campus.

The research park, located on Kinnear Road, was developed in 1984 to attract private companies interested in research and development.

Edward Hayes, vice president of research, said the goal is to develop a program which will "align the university so it is much more competitive for external funding."

The OSU Research Park was supposed to rival "triangle park," a successful research park in North Carolina. "Triangle park" is anchored by Duke University, North Carolina State and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

OSU's park failed because it lacked marketing and ties with the city and state, Hayes said. He said more cooperation with the city and state is necessary.

The plan to revitalize the park is already getting support and $50,000 from both Columbus and Ohio. OSU is also giving $50,000, which will come from royalties generated by existing patents, to develop a corporation that will run the park and prepare a development plan for it.

The office of Technology Transfer, in charge of the transfer of research to industry, earned about $400,000 last year on patent licensing agreements. A better focused research park could increase the number of invention disclosures per year and therefore raise the number of patents received by the university, he said. Hayes said he expects the amount earned from license agreements to at least double during the next five years.

OSU has looked at other university-focused research parks to determine what makes them effective, Hayes said.

The number of new tenants and jobs created, as well as the research support coming back to the university will be used to evaluate the success of the park. Last year, $18 million of support from industry was received. That yearly amount is expected to double over the next five to ten years.

"We hope tenants will select the park because of the proximity of the university," said Ralph Metzger, director of the office for industrial research and development.

The opportunities for tenants to consult with faculty members and the research capacity of the university will help business in the park, Metzger said. He also said the facility will employ students.

There will probably be changes in the park, including renovation of buildings and improving their appearance from the road, Metzger said.

Tyson Hankins, a senior majoring in criminology and the only student on the panel, listens as a Vice Provost Emeritus Frank W. Hale, Jr. speaks at a panel discussion on affirmative action.

Panel dicusses affirmative action

By Jennie F. Huey
Lantern staff writer

A six-member panel met Tuesday night at the Frank W. Hale Jr. Black Cultural Center to discuss the definition, history, and future of affirmative action.

Panelists stressed the importance of the continuation of affirmative action at Ohio State and in the United States.

William Nelson Jr., professor in black studies and political science; Mrs. Ruth Gresham, manager of Off-Campus Student Services; Leroy Pernell, vice provost of Minority Affairs; Vincene Verdun, associate professor in the college of law and Tyson Hankins, a senior majoring in criminology made up the panel moderated by Frank Hale Jr., vice provost emeritus of Minority Affairs.

"We must challenge a proposition that says 30 years of affirmative action will offset 400 years of slavery and legal segregation," Hale said.

White Americans take for granted benefits they reap from simply being white, Nelson said.

"The constitution was a blue print for white affirmative action...slavery was an affirmative action for white folks," Nelson said.

The dangers and pitfalls of a debate on affirmative action were also addressed. By concentrating the debate on proposed cuts or the elimination of affirmative action programs more important issues are forgotten, Pernell said.

"The real issue was not the attack on affirmative action, rather the attack on us," Pernell said. "The issue is racism and we often forget the root of the debate."

"The issue is racism and we often forget the root of the debate."

— Leroy Pernell, vice provost of Minority Affairs

Pernell described racism as a cancer and affirmative action as chemotherapy.

"Racism is a disease and affirmative action is only the treatment and not a complete treatment," Pernell said. "Would you take away chemotherapy when a patient is still sick? Would you take it away just because the disease says I don't want it anymore?"

Woman allowed transplant despite disability

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A woman with Down syndrome who was initially refused a heart-lung transplant because doctors didn't think she was smart enough to handle the after effects underwent the desperately needed operation Tuesday.

Sandra Jensen, 35, is believed to be the first seriously retarded person in the United States to receive a major transplant.

She was listed in critical but stable condition — routine for transplant recipients — after the five-hour operation, which came after Stanford Medical Center reversed course.

"I'm ecstatic. This is a miracle," said Dr. William Bronston, a state rehabilitation administrator and friend who helped lead the fight for Jensen's transplant. "The struggle to get Sandra on the transplant list was really a struggle to get everyone in the country on the list."

Jensen, a high school graduate who has worked on behalf of people with Down syndrome, has lived on her own for several years. She has acted as a spokeswoman for the mentally disabled in California and attended President Bush's signing of the Americans with Disabilities Act in 1990.

The Sacramento woman had congenital heart problems that became critical a year ago.

O.J. grilled, avoids eye contact with Goldman's dad

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson endured a second day of questioning under oath Tuesday, avoiding eye contact with the father of Ronald Goldman as attorneys grilled him about the murders of Goldman and Nicole Brown Simpson.

During a break after almost five hours, Fred Goldman was confident about the pace and nature of the questioning of Simpson by Goldman's attorney Daniel Petrocelli.

"All of our expectations and hopes are being met. ... It's gone exceptionally well,"

Goldman said.

Goldman said Simpson did not look him in the eye.

"Today, I think it's being avoided by him. I can't tell you why. He's attempting to avoid it," Goldman said.

Attorneys had said they would spend the second day of the deposition going over the day Nicole Brown Simpson and Goldman were stabbed to death. On Monday, they asked Simpson about the Bronco chase and a letter he wrote the day he was arrested on murder charges.

"We've waited a long time to have an opportunity to ask the hard questions," Fred Goldman told reporters as he arrived at Petrocelli's office Tuesday. "I think out of it will come some very interesting things."

The videotaped deposition is for the wrongful death lawsuits filed against Simpson by Goldman's family and the estate of Nicole Brown Simpson. The civil trial is to begin in April in Santa Monica.

Although the deposition is private, attorneys can release the transcript later if they choose.

John Kelly, the attorney for Ms. Simpson's estate, came out of the building for an early afternoon break. About 10 camera crews pressed up against the glass window of a newsstand to watch Kelly purchase two candy bars.

Asked what Simpson was eating, Kelly said, "I don't think he has much of an appetite today."

Attorney Michael Brewer, who represents Goldman's mother, Sharon Rufo, said lawyers would focus on Simpson's whereabouts when Ms. Simpson and Goldman were slashed to death outside Ms. Simpson's condominium.

Lawyers also expected to ask about Simpson's alibi and his relationship with his ex-wife, Brewer said.

During Monday's testimony, Brewer said Simpson was inconsistent on several "fairly major issues."

But Simpson attorney F. Lee Bailey told CBS "... that's the opinion of an adversary, if it's a sincere opinion, which I question. I wouldn't give it much weight."

House tacks abortion issue to shutdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republicans rallied Tuesday behind a plan to avert a new federal shutdown this weekend, but insisted on tacking on abortion restrictions that Senate GOP leaders were refusing to accept.

Starting at a new round of partial agency closures Saturday unless action is taken, the unpredictable House GOP rank-and-file signaled its support for a leadership proposal to finance programs through March 1. Though the measure would not target any of President Clinton's top priorities, it would reflect the Republican budget-cutting ideology by eliminating a dozen minor programs and reining spending on most agencies.

"I want to see progress toward a balanced budget," said freshman Rep. Todd Tiahrt, R-Kan., expressing a sentiment many of his colleagues share. "Anything that's not progress toward a balanced budget, I'm opposed to."

The decision reflects a desire to avoid a third confrontation with Clinton over shutting federal agencies, which have previously cost Republicans public support. With their budget-balancing talks with Clinton all but dead, it also illustrates an effort by the GOP to avoid a do-nothing Congress label by trying to enact pieces of their budget agenda one at a time.

Democrats did their best to stoke public dissatisfaction with Republicans over past federal shutdowns and their festering confrontation with the administration over averting a jolting government default.

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., told reporters that letting government agencies close was "playing with matches. If we fail to deal with the debt limit, we're playing with dynamite."

Leaders of both chambers were hoping for passage as early as Thursday of legislation heading off a shutdown, but failed to agree to a compromise when they clashed over one provision.

According to participants who spoke on condition of anonymity, House Republicans were demanding language blocking U.S. aid for overseas abortion programs until Congress authorizes such spending in separate legislation — an event considered unlikely. The more moderate Senate GOP was resisting. The two sides planned to meet again Wednesday.

The deadlock underlined the power anti-abortion forces wield in the House, and the Senate's stronger abortion-rights views. If authorized, the government envisions spending less than $400 million for international abortion programs over the next two years.

The House proposal for keeping the government open would ratchet up pressure on the administration in two ways lawmakers have not used before. It would curb travel by Cabinet secretaries, a clear shot at controversial trips taken by Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary and Commerce Secretary Ron Brown.

And it would, for the first time since the budget standoff with Clinton began in October, let federal workers be furloughed even though money has been provided for their agencies. Until now, civil servants have been idled only when their agencies were without funds.

Son fights to stop father's assisted suicide

PETOSKEY, Mich. (AP) — A man trying to keep his Alzheimer's-stricken father away from Dr. Jack Kevorkian won custody of the ailing 69-year-old in a court battle against his own mother.

Probate Judge Fred Mulhauser ruled in favor of Chip Klooster, who feared his mother and siblings were arranging for his father, Gerald Klooster, to kill himself.

"Chip Klooster was apparently the only person who felt bold enough to act," the judge said. "Through his efforts, it is not too dramatic to say that his father's life may have been spared."

Legal experts said it may be the first time someone has gone to court to prevent an assisted suicide by a relative.

Mulhauser ruled that returning Gerald Klooster to his Castro Valley, Calif., home would be dangerous because his wife, Ruth, could pursue her "determined plan" to persuade him to kill himself. The judge extended a temporary order issued in December that gave custody of the elderly man to Chip Klooster.

The judge rejected a request by Gerald Klooster's daughter Kristin Hamstra to return her father to California, where she would act as his conservator.

Gerald Klooster sat quietly through the hearing and showed no reaction. He has been described as mentally incompetent, but his attorney, Scott Eckhold, said the man has some sense that the family is fighting over him.

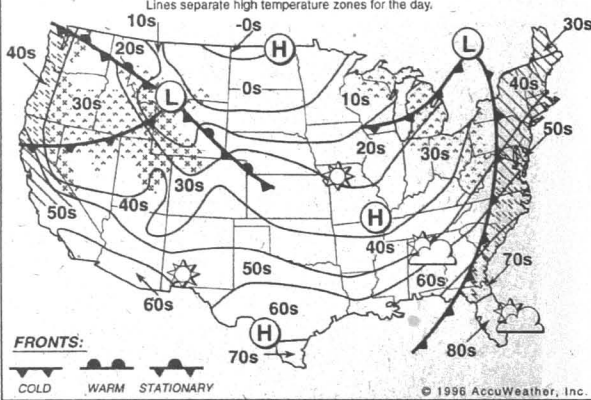

The elder Klooster retired as an obstetrician and gynecologist after he was diagnosed with Alzheimer's six years ago.

Chip Klooster said he learned last summer that his mother had joined the Hemlock Society, which supports physician-assisted suicide for terminally ill people who want it, and that she had spoken with Kevorkian.

In November, Chip Klooster went down to Florida, where his parents were visiting friends, distracted his mother with a phone call and spirited his father away to Michigan.

Basketball Bucks back on road; hope to stall Fighting Illini

By Jason Paquet
Lantern sports writer

When the Buckeyes (8-6, 1-4) head back out on the road for Wednesday's match up against the Fighting Illini (12-6, 1-5) they'll be building on the lessons they learned on their first Big Ten road trip.

"We have to start the game off strong and not let Illinois get to a 10-point lead over us like Indiana," said freshman guard Neshaun Coleman.

Not letting teams run away from them in the opening minutes is part of what coach Randy Ayers has been trying to teach his young team for most of the season; which is to get after a team for a full game.

"That's his main goal; to stay after a team for the full 40 minutes and play hard defense and execute our offense and try to get our quickness going," Coleman said.

The Illini, off to their worst start in the Big Ten since Lou Henson became coach 22 years ago, has tumbled out of the Top 25 since losing 5 of their last 6 games and is languishing in the Big Ten's basement.

Illinois snapped a five game losing streak in the Big Ten Saturday when guard Kiwane Garris hit both of his free throws with five seconds left to seal a 71-67 victory over the Boilermakers.

Garris is fueling the Illini offense with 14.3 points per game and a .857-percentage from the free throw line.

"We're going to do some things on Garris to try to take the ball out of his hands," Ayers said.

Right behind Garris on offense is 6-6 forward Jerry Hester and 6-6 guard Richard Keene, who are averaging 11.4 and 11.0

points, respectively. Keene is also the Illini's top three-point threat with 43 out of 102 made.

Despite Illinois's uplifting win over the Boilermakers, Coleman is confident about the Buckeye's chances in Champaign.

"Anybody can get beat on any given time. We just want to go in there and play our game and do what we know what we have to do," he said.

Year looks bright for gymnasts

By David Fong
Lantern sports editor

If there would appear to be a certain swagger in their step or an air of confidence around the men's gymnastics practice room, it can all be attributed to one thing—ability.

Ohio State has plenty of it.

"We have a real good team this year," said coach Peter Kormann. "For us, winning the Big Ten is obviously a goal, but we also realistically feel that we can win an NCAA title."

With the talent the Buckeyes have loaded and ready to fire this season, it is nearly impossible to argue with him.

But let the record show that the Buckeyes may not just be the best in the Big Ten or even the best in the nation—they want to prove they possess some of the best talent on the planet.

"We could have two guys from this year's squad on our Olympic team," said Kormann, who will be the head coach this summer in Atlanta. "Drew Durbin and Blaine Wilson both have an excellent shot at making the Olympic team."

But Durbin and Wilson will not even be the only ones who are leading a squad that could very well be the best in the nation.

To wit—the Buckeyes can also count on some strong performances from senior Dave Eckert and freshmen Michael Morgan and Tim Elsner, who came out of high school ranked No. 1 and 2 in the nation amongst prep athletes, respectively.

"Our team is strong from top to bottom," Kormann said. "We have a lot more depth than we did last year in every event, which is why I think we are a better team than we were last year," Kormann said.

Which is pretty impressive, when you consider last year's squad finished fourth at the NCAA championships.

"We want to win the NCAA title," Durbin said. "We know we have to work hard, but this team has a lot of ability."

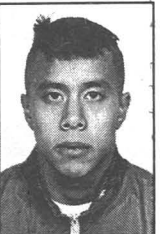

But aren't they worried they may be setting their goals a little too high?

"Not at all," Wilson said. "We know what kind of talent we have here, and we need to work up to our potential, and winning an NCAA title will be a big part of that."

The Buckeyes will have already proven what kind of punishment they are capable of inflicting. Last week at the Windy City Championships, a meet in which much of the Big Ten participated, the Buckeyes had little trouble taking first, and Durbin had little trouble winning the all-around.

"It was a really good meet for us," Kormann said. "We were able to beat most of the Big Ten competition there, so it was a good competition for us."

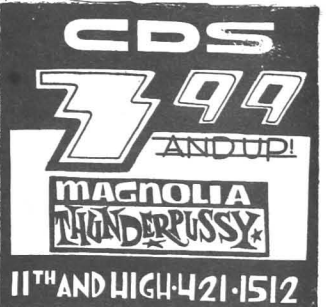

And it may have just been the first step towards bigger and better things for them—which may help explain the confidence level a little bit.

OSU tennis player moonlights as wrestler

By David Fong
Lantern sports editor

It may be perhaps the unholy marriage in sports history.

Deion Sanders' and Bo Jackson's forays into two-sport stardom may have nothing on this one.

Ohio State men's tennis player Jason Homorody has been moonlighting quite a bit recently. When he isn't delivering forehand smashes as Jason Homorody, he has been delivering forearm smashes as Jason "Nature Boy" Hayes.

In his spare time, Homorody is the world's champion of the Championship Wrestling Association, a local professional wrestling organization that appears on ACTV-21. The show will appear today at 4:00 p.m. In addition, Homorody and the rest of the CWA will be holding a party at Drake Union in which they will view the latest edition and sign autographs.

"I have always been a big wrestling fan," Homorody said. "Ever since I was little, I watched it on television."

And so when high school friend and fellow OSU student Kevin Noesner came calling, Homorody was ready, willing, and able to put on a show.

"Originally, it was a comedy show, but then we changed over to a wrestling show, since we were all wrestling fans," Homorody said.

Despite the switch, sometimes it has been hard to tell which one was comedy and which one was wrestling.

OSU tennis player Jason "Nature Boy" Homorody (Hayes) delivers a flying double-axe handle to his opponent.

"It is, without a doubt, one of the strangest things I have ever seen," said men's tennis coach John Daly. "I think everyone should have to be subjected to watching that show at least once."

Despite the high-risk nature of Homorody's other sport, Daly says he is not concerned with injury.

"I don't worry about him," Daly said. "But of course that isn't because it isn't real."

Homorody agreed.

"We practice all of our moves, so I'm not worried about getting hurt," he said. "But my dad is. He is always telling me I am going to break my neck doing piledrivers."

In fact, his pro wrestling career has actually helped him on the court.

"My man is 'The Nature Boy,' and like he says, 'To be the man, you have to beat the man,' and that is the attitude I try to take out on the court with me," Homorody said.

He has had to deal with a little bit of teasing from his teammates.

"They probably all think I am a total weirdo," Homorody said. "I put a tape of our show in on the way to Tennessee. Everyone on the team rips on me, but how many of them have ever been a world champion for over three years like I have?"

What we think...

State of the Union leaves us as uncomfortable as before

In the eloquent manner traditional of State of the Union addresses, President Clinton spoke to the nation in a clear preamble of his 1996 presidential campaign, directly challenging the Republicans on points of welfare reform, health care costs, taxes, welfare reform and foreign policy, among others.

As Americans watched the president speak, most poignant in our minds was some type of explanation as to why the budget deficit crisis has not yet been solved. Question: How can Clinton or Congress possibly justify bipartisan disputes and bickering at the expense and pain of the American people?

Clinton had a well-presented theme to his speech: togetherness.

He said that the nation must work together to ensure the American dream, to make better lives for ourselves and for our children, and to preserve old-fashioned family values.

He also said that the government must have togetherness to solve difficult problems such as the deficit.

Well where was this attitude up until now?

Congress and the President need to stop bickering. Their disagreements have put the careers, lives and families of thousands of Americans in severe jeopardy. These are not the actions of a government that wants to preserve values and togetherness. It is a government that cares more about poll results, reelection, and selfish needs.

Let us remind you politicians (and future politicians) out there that a government of the people is supposed to work for the people and by the people. They are not supposed to jerk the people around.

But we can't help but feel this way as we listen to yet another warm and fuzzy political speech, at the same time considering all the domestic problems facing this country today.

Clinton does make a very good point—he says that America was built on challenges, not promises.

This is probably the most open and meaningful statement made all night. We face many, many challenges as Americans, and our children will face even more. We must not allow ourselves to completely commit our faith to politicians who promise to make amends, to balance the budget, and to help us get jobs.

We might as well admit to ourselves that it is up to us—it is our own personal responsibility to make the kinds of changes in society that government seems to be unable to figure out. These include practicing better social and family values, getting an education, and making life work for us, whether the system works for us or not.

Dallas' Jones is epitome of selfish sports

I'd like to seize the opportunity this week to offer my summation on the state of our society. I think this is the perfect time to do so because this is not only the week of the annual State of the Union, but also Super Bowl week.

I have always seen sports as a reflection of society in many respects, and I think this year's Super Bowl match up is a perfect example of that theory. To hear most people tell it, the Dallas Cowboys can order their Championship rings today. Which annoys me because the Cowboys, in my opinion, represent everything that is wrong with professional sports and, by reflection, our society.

Let's start at the top with Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, who epitomizes the me-first attitude which was so prominent in the 1980's. Jones never outgrew the era or the attitude. He has thumbed his nose at the league and his fellow owners with deals that are clearly against the bylaws and with others that are within the letter of the law but against it in spirit.

He is clearly the most visible owner in the game if we don't count Art Modell, who is nefarious for entirely different reasons. No, Jones has made himself a celebrity through his ownership of the team. He uses every opportunity to get his insincere smile on the evening news. I don't think it is by coincidence that the Cowboy team mascot looks like Jones. If you've never seen the mascot, or don't believe me, look for him at the Super Bowl.

Jones' check-book management style has assembled a team of prima donnas who share his Me, Me, Me, credo. At the top of the list is the Crown Prince of Posing, The Earl of Egotism, The Potentate of Pomposity: "Neon" Deion Sanders, who, it would seem, believes that even his jogging out to the huddle should be occasion for a standing ovation.

No play involving Sanders is ever over until he completes the histrionics. He is either taunting his opponent, posing for Leroy Neiman or auditioning for the next installment of "Dance Fever."

Sanders represents the attitude adopted by many with money, position or fame who believe those qualities entitle them to special treatment. And it seems as though Sanders and his teammates receive that special treatment, at least from the league officials.

I have not made a scientific study and it could be my imagination, but it seems to me like the majority of close or questionable calls during games go in favor of the Cowboys. I am not the only one with this impression, many people have shared with me that same opinion.

On the other side are the Pittsburgh Steelers, who the odds makers and prognosticators have given virtually no chance of winning Sunday. If we think of the Cowboys as being the guys in the Armani suits, then think of the Steelers as the Steelers are a faceless bunch of work-a-day type guys who get no respect.

I'm no Steeler fan, but I sure hope the Dickies guys will pound the pants off the guys in the Armani suits come Sunday.

But I'm not getting my hopes up because, as it is in society, the guys with the Armani suits and the money and the fame and the bravado will probably have everything going their way, even the judgment calls of the officials. And by games end, they will be posing on the sidelines with Jones and the mascot and signing endorsement deals with Disney World and PepsiCo.

While the blue-collar guys will be on the sidelines tired, demoralized and muddy with nothing to show for their effort but the pride that goes with having gotten that far.

And that, I'm afraid, is the way I sum up the state of our society. Those with all the advantages end up on top. I would enjoy being proven wrong.

Moms too often blamed for bad upbringing

Gloria Steinem has an effective technique to point out people's sexist ideas. I have realized what a skill that is and she is much better at it than I.

Steinem will make a comment that would be typically made about one sex and reverse the gender. The point is made with a hint of humor and is usually very effective.

In my column last week on a man-tax, I attempted the same maneuver. Crime is disproportionately committed by men. According to statistics released by the U.S. Department of Justice from 1991, 94 percent of state prison inmates were male.

The recidivism rate, or reconviction rate, is much higher for men than for women. Men are 98 percent of the violent criminals who are reconvicted.

A number of men wrote to tell me how sexist and appalling I appeared to them. A few doubted the validity of my statistics and taught me a lesson. Thank you.

Steve Miller, one of my loyal readers, saw the absurdity of my column. He wrote that we should instill in men a "high moral code." I agree.

Women have historically been expected to be morally superior to men and to pass those morals on to her children. During the temperance/suffrage movement, this high moral code was used to influence legislation. It backfired.

Society blames women for the crimes of their children. Almost every time a child is seen in trouble the first response is to ask where the mother is.

Dennis Mathias asked the question, "Who does most of the child-rearing during the formative years?" Mothers.

There has been a recent sensationalized case of a mother who was chained to her daughter who had been truant from school and committed petty crimes.

The judge decided that the mother and daughter should remain chained together to force the mother to keep an eye on the daughter.

Where was her father? Here was a girl being chained to her mother who was convicted of being a horrible parent, but there was no mention in the media of her father.

Not only are fathers increasingly absent from the lives of their children, they are financially unavailable for the upbringing of their children.

Census figures for 1985 show that $11 billion was owed in child support, but only $4 billion was paid. Taxpayers picked up the slack.

Taxpayers also have to pay to force fathers to pay child support. Where is the individual responsibility?

Piroz Foroutan made a wonderful point. Stereotypes work both ways. "[T]he same sexual stereotypes which prevent females from realizing their full potential, encourage males to be aggressive, competitive and the bread winners of their respective families."

These stereotypes become cemented during adolescence. Girls are attracted to boys who are winners, in control, self-sufficient, and physically strong. Boys depend on girls to approve of their being that way, especially if the girls are the opposite of the male characteristics.

One of the things that I try to get across is that before legislative changes can be effective in society, society has to change to be willing to accept them.

Feminists can discuss the problems with sexism forever, but until the majority of society realizes how sexism affects everything that people are involved with, nothing will change.

This discussion must be rational, and must not be finger pointing. The problems with society are not the fault of one race, sex, religion. They are the problems of the people who refuse to see the need for change and work for it.

Despite the failure at my humor attempt, the absurdity came through. This caused me to have respect for my detractors. Hopefully they can also see the absurdity in the status quo.

For a more in-depth investigation into the masculinization of crime, I encourage you to read Men Are Not Cost-Effective by June Stephenson.

LACK OF FOCUS

MORALE AND PRODUCTIVITY INCREASED 15% WITH THE INTRODUCTION OF ROCK'EM SOCK'EM CO-WORKERS TO THE EMPLOYEE LOUNGE.

Hey you.

I hear you're thinking about getting a dog. Everyone seems to have one, and now you want one. Lend me a moment and consider my words about owning a pet.

Let me start with a little story about a black dog. Last spring, I always walked past this house where a dog sat out front. It never was wearing any kind of restraining device and it would follow me down the street and bark. I would pretend not to notice it, hurry by, and hope that it didn't tag along.

A few weeks ago, when classes started, I saw the black dog again. I hadn't walked down that street for awhile, and I had forgotten about the wandering canine. Sure enough, there it stood on the snowy sidewalk in front of its house. As it crept up to sniff me I noticed that it was limping; when it turned around I saw why. The black dog only had three legs. It cautiously made its way to the curb, once nearly falling, and crossed the busy street.

I'm really not concerned about the circumstances behind the amputation. The fact is the dog is missing a leg. I'm sure that its surgery cost money, so the owner must care for it in some way. Why does the dog still roam free? It is not a leap of faith for me to believe that the black dog will someday be mangled by the wheels of a car. If the owner cared enough to pay for the surgery, how will he feel when the dog is run over and killed?

This type of irresponsible dog owner lives on every campus street. Take a walk around and you'll see the proof. It is a sad thing to see a skinny puppy picking through a dirty dumpster, looking for food, so that it can survive another day. People are so excited to get a dog, but the initial charm soon wears off; the pet is discarded like a Christmas toy that a child has lost interest in.

I don't want to give you, a potential dog owner, the usual lecture that a parent might recite. All that stuff about feeding and walking the dog is quite typical and I'm sure you've considered it. I want you to realize the responsibility that a dog owner must take on.

College students live a dynamic life; they are always doing something. You have classes, work, friends, and a number of other things going on in your world. Dogs are social animals and need to be around people; they don't enjoy being alone all day while the owner goes about her business.

If you think I'm wrong, you have never seen how excited a dog gets when its "master" comes home. You can start to feel guilty about leaving the dog at home, and if it spends excessive amounts of time alone, then you deserve that feeling.

Life at OSU is split into quarters and between those quarters there are breaks. Have you thought about what you will do with the dog during those times? When you get a pet, you are not making a commitment that can be broken off after ten weeks of classes; it is your duty to care for your animal for the rest of its life.

There is one other fact that I'd like you to consider: your college days are limited. Yes, it might take you five or six years to get your degree, but someday you will be leading a different life. Are you planning to pursue a career that is time consuming? Do you want to travel the world or join the Peace Corps after you graduate? Keep in mind that your dog will probably still be around when you're done with school and you will still be responsible for it.

I'm not anti-dog ownership; I have a German Sheppard. I just care about dogs and it is unfair for them to be thrown into the mean streets because a young person made a bad decision. Please make the right choice; don't get a dog that you can't be responsible for.

Writer gives views on feminist jargon

The time has come for this country to embrace the truths so finely expressed in Cinnamon Cooper Jan. 19 column.

Not only should men pay for the costs of crime, but Hispanics for bilingual education, women for breast cancer research, and the poor for anti-poverty measures.

For far too long, the fiction of "general welfare" has allowed the government to deprive ethnic, sexual and economic groups of money that could be used to address problems that are of concern to them.

In order to ensure our future, the concept of American identity, like that of individual identity, must forever be outcast.

More on the feminist rage...

It was 11:30 a.m. on Friday, and my roommate and I just got back from lunch. I was looking forward to eating a peaceful meal while reading the Lantern. My peace was disturbed, however, when I read Cinnamon Cooper's column.

I honestly couldn't believe what I was reading. Having men pay for the cost of crime? This couldn't be right.

But as I finished reading the selection, I realized that it was true—Cooper was suggesting that men pay for the cost of crime.

This is insanity! Men paying a tax because of their gender?

If a man were to suggest a similar tax against women or anyone else, he would instantly be labeled a sexist.

Why stop at gender taxes? Why not have racial taxes? Why not tax all the different ethnic groups according to the amount of crime they commit?

Clearly this is wrong. It is just as wrong as taxing people according to gender.

I honestly think that we weren't the only people angered by this blatant proposal of sexual discrimination, but I hope we have spoken for us all.

OSU should lower credit requirement

This letter is in reference to the movement to reduce the amount of credit hours required for graduation. What is clear is that:

a) The university is dishonestly robbing students of their time and money by the current requirements;

b) Substantial support exists within the student population and administration that this need be fixed, and;

c) This reduction in hours should go into effect for incoming and currently enrolled students, for we came here under the impression we could graduate in four years taking a normal course load.

What is not clear is:

a) why this requirement exists, b) what can be done to remedy it, and c) why students should pay more money to get what we rightfully deserve—a four year bachelor's degree.

As for the decreased revenue caused by such a plan, why not take back the $28 million the university gave away to Campus Partners to destroy the traditional campus we all have come to love?

isfaction and pride in something that gives me shame as a U.S. citizen—the massive collection of human energy and destructive machinery that is the U.S. military.

A huge percentage of the government budget from one of the richest nations in the world undoubtedly can produce "awe," "fear," and "shaking in their boots" from the rest of the world when concentrated on military power. Does that define superiority as a country? The government's lack of accomplishments in good housing, health care, and pride in neighborhoods (as opposed to pride in the government's military) in terms of US citizens, suggests otherwise.

I think we need to acknowledge military actions for what they are, and that includes violence and killing.

Desert Storm may have been "a big pick-me-up" for those who were disappointed in what (Graupmann suggests) was a lack of recent military actions, but it also was a destructive episode in which people and places were ruined.

It saddens me that it happened and the idea that the USA is now "the big kid on the block" is not consoling to me at all.

I would find more national pride in healthy cities, children and forests.

In your study of military history, please don't let all of the guns, airplanes and strategies dazzle you to the point where you forget the lives and places involved. I think I still believe a military can be honorable and I ask you to work toward that.

Crime 'how-to' books key for writers

NEW YORK (AP) — Sharon Villines' world is filled with crime.

She has waxed poetic on poisons, delved into art theft and money laundering and scrutinized grisly autopsy photographs.

And she's done it all for the sake of a good read.

Her writers' newsletter, "Deadly Serious," has included such tidbits as how bodies look after their bones have been donated to science (like "bags full of wet noodles," she quotes an author as saying), a handy phone number for an association of sadomasochists and tips on writing about crime in academia ("the best murders on campus involve faculty").

In the world of mystery fiction, where plots can hinge on a few blood spatters or a misplaced rifle cartridge, the search for accuracy has produced a micro-industry on criminal technique — dozens of how-to books, newsletters and lectures aimed at making sure writers don't foul up any good murders.

Need a lexicon of con artist slang, an hour-by-hour description of how corpses rot or detailed instructions on stealing cars? The answers are out there.

"Readers want believability," said Villines, a professor who works with visual artists at the State University of New York's Empire State College in Manhattan. "If it's too vague, then it doesn't make it credible."

Villines, whose bimonthly newsletter has a circulation of about 500, is only a sliver of an industry that feeds the appetite of crime writers looking for a little realism — as well as readers who just seem to enjoy studying the details of death.

From Los Angeles detectives who lecture screenwriters on police jargon to an Ohio publishing house that has sold 36,000 copies of "Cause of Death: A Writers Guide to Death, Murder & Forensic Medicine," the business has boomed in the last few years.

The boom has gone hand-in-hand with one in mystery fiction in general. These days, along with the stereotypical hard-bitten gumshoes, there are mystery solving environmentalists, feminist detectives and gay investigators.

There is also an increasingly knowledgeable readership, suckled on true-crime books, Court TV and hour after hour of the O.J. Simpson trial.

And they are not a crowd to be crossed.

Many writers have faced the wrath of angry readers, shot down for inaccurate portrayals of gun silencers, improper use of poisons and poor police techniques.

"The readers care," said S.J. Rozan, whose fictional young private investigator, Lydia Chin, scours the streets of New York's Chinatown, ferreting out crime and struggling with her feelings over her gruff-talking sometime partner, Bill Smith. "The readers really care."

"You'll hear from them if you get it wrong and it will poison the story for them in some ways," she said.

So some writers have turned to how-to's, the Cliff Notes of crime.

Looming over the industry, a veritable encyclopedia of crime, death and police technique, is the Howdunit series, a dozen or so primers that span the criminal mind. Total sales of the books are pushing 190,000 copies.

There's "Deadly Doses: A Writer's Guide to Poisons," "Armed and Dangerous, A Writers Guide to Weapons" and "Modus Operandi: A Writer's Guide to How Criminals Work," among others.

The books offer a sometimes surreal look into the lives of cops and criminals, blithely discussing sucking chest wounds, serial killers and autopsy fluids. There are detailed discussions on how to write search warrants, the proper way to pick locks and the best diversions for shoplifting teams.

Such information does open up the possibility that the books could be used as guides for more nefarious purposes, a possibility that has occurred to the books' publisher, Writer's Digest Books.

"That's something we've kept in mind throughout," said Jack Heffron, an editor of the series, but, "simply providing the information isn't a license to do it."

And anyway, he said, the books compile information that is available elsewhere, if someone knows where to look. Editors are also told to make sure the books steer clear of step-by-step instructions that could lead a reader down the road to ruin.

In "Modus Operandi," Mauro V. Corvasce and Joseph

R. Paglino, two New Jersey detectives, give pointers on smashing into small, locked safes. It's not information that most people need in daily life, but for crime writers, it may be just the tip to push along a good plot.

"It could be Proust," said John Douglas, part-owner of Partners & Crime, a mystery bookstore in New York's Greenwich Village, "but if they're going to write a thriller, they have to get their facts straight."

GOD'S WORD

Psalm 32:1-2 Blessed is he whose transgressions are forgiven, whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man whose sin the LORD does not count against him and in whose spirit is no deceit. (NIV)

Isaiah 1:18 Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.

Eph 2:13-14 But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us.

2 Cor 5:17 Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.

2 Cor 6:17 Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you.

OSU opera singer returns to Columbus to perform 'Salome' with local company

By Tricia Janusz
Lantern arts writer

"Great story, great play, great opera," said Daniel Neer, freelance singer and Ohio State graduate, of Richard Strauss' one-act opera "Salome." "If you haven't seen an opera before this, this is the one. It is as raw as you can possibly get. More raw than Melrose Place, more raw than Pulp Fiction."

It also features a former Buckeye, Neer.

Neer, originally from Dublin, received an undergraduate degree from OSU in 1989 in music performance and voice. After OSU, he studied two years at the England Royal Academy of music and then two years at the University of Michigan but said he is still an avid Buckeye fan.

Neer's career started in high school where he performed in a few plays, but he wasn't exposed to the opera scene until his freshman year at OSU.

"I sang with Opera/Columbus in the chorus as a freshman," Neer said. "I saw what it was like and had a chance to watch professionals work. I liked the style and the life of it."

Neer thanks Opera/Columbus for always considering local talent.

"I have been lucky and had really consistent work since graduation," Neer said. "There are four or five local performers in this opera and that is a lot for one show."

The story of "Salome," written by Oscar Wilde, was originally written in French. Strauss composed the score and translated it almost line for line into German. Set in approximately 30 A.D., "Salome" covers the biblical tale of a sublime night in the palace of Herod Antipas.

Neer, who will perform the role of the 2nd Nazarene in this production, said there are many reasons why this show is appealing and original.

"It is as raw as you can possibly get. More raw than 'Pulp Fiction.'"

— Daniel Neer, OSU grad and opera singer

"The music was written in this century, which is very recent," he said. "Also, the time lapse of the performance is exactly the same as real time. The story takes place in an hour and 40 minutes and that is how long the show lasts, no intermission."

Opera/Columbus is presenting "Salome" at the Palace Theatre Thursday through Saturday. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Opera/Columbus box office, 461-0022 or Ticketmaster, 431-3600.

YOU ARE INVITED TO SHARE YOUR OSU EXPERIENCE

With The Ohio State University Board of Trustees

The Board of Trustees for The Ohio State University is a group of alumni, students, and community leaders responsible for making policy and planning decisions on behalf of the University. In order to be most effective in their role, they need to hear from members of the University community -- especially STUDENTS!

On Friday, February 2, a portion of the Board meeting will be devoted to hearing about the experiences of OSU students. If you have something you want the trustees to know about, this is an excellent time to share it. The Board is interested in knowing about what areas you think are in need of improvement, as well as those areas that currently exemplify excellence. Students will be selected to talk with the Board about one or more of their experiences at the University. You could be one of those students selected!

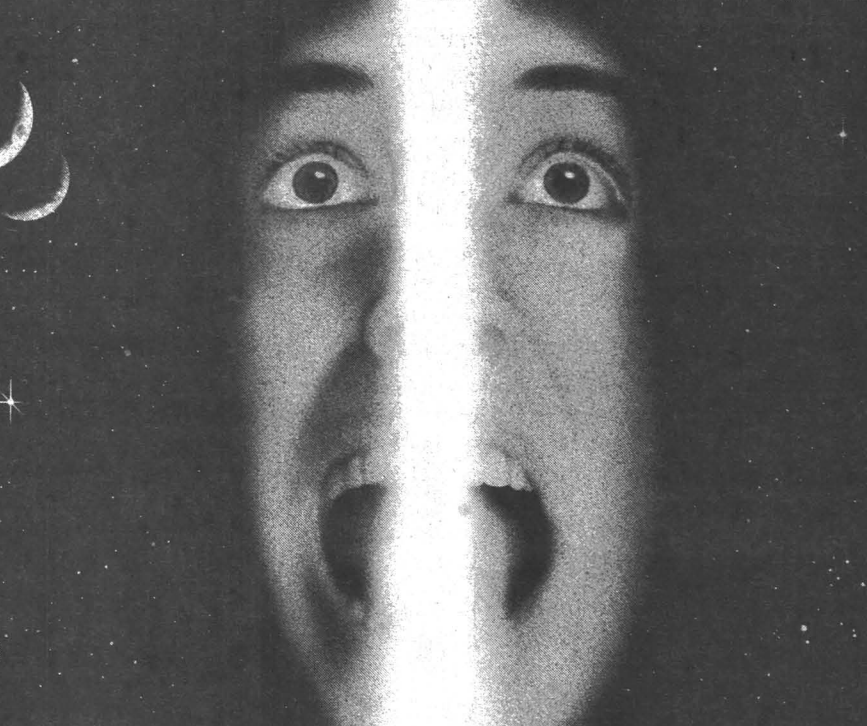

Please stop by one of the following locations and pick up a form to summarize the experience(s) you would like to share with the Board:

Ohio Union Room 237 Reservation Desk
The Undergraduate Student Government Office
The Council on Graduate Students Office
The Interprofessional Council Office
The Student Affairs Office
The Board of Trustees Office
Residence Halls around campus

Your completed form must be submitted no later than Friday, January 26, at 4:30 p.m., to the Ohio Unions Reservation Desk, in room 237 Ohio Union. Five students will be selected from these submissions, and notified no later than Monday, January 29, to confirm their participation at the Board meeting.

Don't miss this opportunity to have your voice heard and your experience known. The quality of the student experience at the University is a primary concern of the Board of Trustees.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern cannot accept advertising that advocates sedition or other illegal actions, violates normal standards of morality and taste, or attacks an individual race, nationality, ethnic group, religion or sex. In cases of doubt, the proffered copy, illustrations and layout will be submitted by the Lantern Business Manager to the School of Journalism Publications Committee and judged by a majority vote of the members. Decisions of this committee are final.

Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required; this information is for our records only and not available to the public.

- Copy will be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for published special early deadlines.
- All advertisements are required to occupy at least as many inches in height as they do columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered full column (21 inches) and charged accordingly.
- The Lantern reserves the right to reject any advertisement that promotes illegal activity or activity detrimental or damaging to the university and its educational mission. It further reserves the right to revise any advertisement which is deemed objectionable for any reason.
- Make-good/adjustments will be considered only for those advertisements where errors occur in the following: business/group name, address, or phone number; item price; date, time, or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement, and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered to the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify, otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
- Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.
- A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
- No proof will be furnished on any advertisement received after deadline, or for ads smaller than seven (7) column inches.
- If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and subject to a refund fee.
- Advertisers are encouraged to avoid making misleading claims or using art or words that impugn or degrade sex, race, age, national origin, creed or color.
- The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until credit rating with the Lantern is established. CERTIFIED check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a rate-holder ad meeting contract minimums, for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser notifies the Lantern office prior to publication.
- Advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees, and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of advertiser's advertisement.
- Advertisers in the Ohio State Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.
- All mail-order advertisers are required to submit sample/proof-of-product prior to publication.

Please note that advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

HOROSCOPES by Linda Black

HOROSCOPES
By Linda C. Black

The moon has gone into Sagittarius, and the sun's still in Capricorn. Capricorn represents business, and Sagittarius loves to travel. So it's a great day to expand your business to another area, or get a job overseas! If you need a way to get there, check out the cruise lines. You may be able to work your way across. It's a good day for comedy, with one exception. A quiet, imaginative person may not have much sense of humor. So curtail the slapstick.

Aries (March 21-April 19). You may get something you need by looking further away. Meanwhile, somebody closer may be in love with you. To avoid hurt feelings, don't discuss the matter at all. Something you hear from a public figure may be untrue. Check it out before passing it along.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). It may be difficult to close a deal today, if money's involved. It may be easier to get a commitment to take action tomorrow. Tonight, be very supportive to your true love. That one may have a problem you don't know about yet. Together, you can work it out.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Don't expect anything to go as planned today. It's not necessarily bad, just confusing. Set up a schedule with plenty of room to make changes! If you're too argumentative with your date tonight, you might never get to know the person inside.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Contact a friend you haven't seen in a while. If you're lucky, which you should be, an old memory will tilt the scales in your favor. Don't let an aggressive partner pressure you into doing something you don't want to do. Just say no, and mean it!

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). You're in the mood to play, but there's a stack of chores, and you may run into problems. So you can't afford to take a two-hour lunch. Get together with your friend tonight, instead. An athletic workout would be good for you both, and bonding.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Help a partner get organized today and you'll get a lot more accomplished. Your home may be a mad house tonight. You may want solitude, but friends may drop over anyway. Don't let them keep you up past your bedtime, if you've got a busy day tomorrow.

Today's Birthday Clean out any skeletons in your closets this year, starting now. Secrets will be revealed, maybe even by you! Carefully research a big purchase in February, to find any hidden flaws. In March, start toward a new goal with your sweetheart. It could mean going back to school. Buy real estate in April or May. Travel in September. Make a big decision in November, and then take a private vacation. A burden will have been lifted.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). If you're casually flirting with somebody at work, be careful. To you, it's fun. But to the other person, it may be the real thing! Call your brother or sister tonight and get all the latest gossip. You may finally put a puzzle together.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). A calculated risk could work out well for you today. An outright gamble probably won't. Save your money instead. Don't plan anything for tonight that you can't change! Your date may not want to do what you thought, so be flexible.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Although this is a good time to start your world cruise, it may not be quite possible. The stark reality may be that you have to pay the rent, instead. If so, keep planning, and saving your money. A roommate will be tense tonight, so be very nice.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Practice being adaptable today. It's a skill that will come in very handy. A romantic poem tonight may not be your fault. You can help solve it, though. Forget an old quarrel and your friendship could blossom all over again.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You may feel like somebody is leaning over your shoulder, watching, not pleased. This condition is going to change, soon. So do whatever the old group wants! (If it's legal and non-fattening, of course!) Buy something significant for your sweetie tonight.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). If you're under pressure to do something you don't feel very good about, stall. If you need more practice, ask an older person for tutoring. An insult this morning may not be intentional. The jerk may have been thoughtless, but is probably not evil.
