Faculty voice despair over financial disparity

ELIZABETH NIHISER/THE LANTERN
Bill Shkurti, senior vice president of Business and Finance, addresses faculty questions yesterday in Evans Laboratory.

By Dave Lieberman
Lantern staff writer

Frustrations over Ohio State's non-competitive salary levels erupted yesterday, at a Faculty Council open forum.

"I am certainly not the kind of faculty that will make this university great," said Raymond Montemayor, an associate professor of psychology. "But I, like hundreds of others, make this university work."

Montemayor said OSU's push to become a renowned university and attract top scholars to campus has left the rest of the faculty feeling disenfranchised and left behind.

"We see the distributions of salary, and we see the inequities in our teaching load. I think this all leads to a morale problem in this university," Montemayor said.

During a previous open forum, sponsored by Faculty Council, Provost Ed Ray and Senior Vice President for Business and Finance Bill Shkurti reviewed the university's position on increasing average salaries for OSU faculty. Both Ray and Shkurti reaffirmed their position of providing raises of 1 percent above the relative market, totaling to about a 5 to 6 percent annual raise, for the next three to four years.

"People who are performing satisfactory work will get salary increases to move them closer to their competitive peers," Ray said.

This new initiative comes after last year's minimal compensation package, which offered a flat $395 pay increase to any university employee performing satisfactory work.

"Last year was an unusually bad year, in part because the budget deteriorated so late in the budget cycle that we didn't have time to respond," Shkurti said. "As a result, we made a university-wide decision to take a hit in salaries for that particular year and re-establish it over this year and next year."

"We think by this time next year, regardless of how difficult the budget situation is, we will be back in a better position in terms of compensation," Shkurti added.

Despite this pledge, some faculty used the forum to express their strong discontent over pay inequities, both within departments and across the university. This is in response to OSU President William "Brit" Kirwan's call for variations in salary levels for faculty, based on the position of a faculty's field of study as compared to other universities and on individual, merit-based performance.

"The proposal for faculty compensation opens the door for differential compensation at the college level," said Doug Macbeth, a College of Education senator. "If you're in a poor-resource college, you could receive a 1 percent increase for a year of productive work. If you are in a more prestigious college, you could receive a 6, 7 or 8 percent increase."

Gerald Winer, Social and Behavioral Sciences senator and president of OSU's chapter of the American Association of University Professors, asserted there is money available for raises. But he said the extra funds are being used for other projects, citing the renovation of the Wexner Center, the construction of the University Gateway project and the launching of a new Biomedical Research initiative.

"When they (the administration) want money for their initiatives, they have it," Winer said.

Ray responded that funds for these initiatives are not being directed away from faculty salaries. With the new biomedical research initiative, he noted a vast majority of the funding would come from the state's tobacco settlement and outside research grants.

Winer also said the administration has given permission to colleges and departments to internally give some faculty — usually those with already high-end salaries — additional increases in pay. He said in his own department there was a sense of despair about receiving any substantial pay increases among the faculty who did not receive these raises.

Speaking directly to Ray and Shkurti, Winer said, "You guys can talk until the cows come home, but there is lots of inequity and lots of unfairness."

Responding to Winer, Shkurti noted OSU uses its resources in a similar way as other universities.

"If we only look at how the pie is being spent, we are just moving crumbs around," he said. "The larger issue is how do we bring more resources into the institution, including undergraduate tuition, state support, and diversifying our revenues through fundraising and bring in outside sources of funding."

Both Ray and Shkurti consistently reiterated they were doing everything they could to reallocate internal funds to provide additional revenue for salary increases over the coming year. This includes a 10 percent reduction — which could be as much as $10 million — in centrally-funded initiatives and programs.

Ray also said the administration has made competitive salary increases a priority for current university faculty, even if it means the institution will have to do more with less.

Ray sends message: passions important

By R.H. Aly
Lantern staff writer

Ohio State Provost Ed Ray advised students to follow their passions at a Presidential Luncheon yesterday at the Ohio Union.

"Figure out where your passions are, and then figure out how to get people to pay you for it," Ray said. "Too many pick the wrong path."

Ray told a group of 60 students from the John Glenn Living Learning Program, the Architecture Living Learning Program and USG first-year interns about his experience as an undergraduate student.

He started out majoring in chemistry, he said.

"Then I had an epiphany in chemistry lab," Ray said. "I realized that I didn't like chemistry, and I didn't want to be a doctor."

Afterwards, Ray changed his major to mathematics and went on to graduate school in economics.

Ray warned the students to rethink their leadership positions.

There are a lot of successful people who have friends, resources and are very well connected, he said. However, the reality is that these successful people cannot be good leaders.

"All of you examine your leadership positions and be honest about your drive," Ray said.

Students' ambitions shouldn't depend on wanting to promote themselves, he said. They shouldn't want to see their names in newspapers or have others construct monuments of themselves.

He has met few people who make extraordinary leaders, Ray said. They get more plaques and recognition than all of the other leaders, and they are embarrassed by the attention that they receive.

Ray did not want to dissuade students from being ambitious.

It's OK to want to be somebody important and to have ambition, he said. His mantra as a boy playing competitive sports was, "crush, crush, kill, kill."

Those who want to be leaders just need to be careful about where they are getting all their fuel from, Ray said. If all they care about is being recognized, ultimately they will become failures.

The provost's speech caused Elise Donaldson, a freshman in architecture, to remember why she has all of her ambitions.

"It reminded me that we need to think seriously about leadership and try to be a leader for the right reasons, not self-gratification," she said.

"He told it like it is," said Indrani Mitra, a freshman in genetics.

President William "Brit" Kirwan was supposed to be the guest speaker at the luncheon but couldn't make it because of a funeral he had to attend. Ray substituted for him.

Federal interest rate slashed to prevent recession

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve dropped a key interest rate to its lowest level in 40 years as it battled to prevent the "heightened uncertainty" following the terrorist attacks from sending the country into a deep recession.

The Fed yesterday slashed its federal funds rate, the key benchmark for overnight loans, by a half-point to 2 percent and signaled that it was prepared to continue cutting if conditions deteriorate further.

"The Fed is telling us they are really worried and they will likely move again at their December meeting," said David Seiders, chief economist at the National Association of Home Builders.

Wall Street rallied on the news, given that investors had been split over whether the Fed would move by a half-point or a quarter-point. The Dow Jones industrial average ended the day up 150.09 points at 9,591.12, its best close since the attacks and within 14 points of its Sept. 10 level. Other indexes posted gains as well, with the technology-heavy Nasdaq up 41.43 to 1,835.08.

The latest rate cut, the 10th this year, was taken against a backdrop of increasingly gloomy statistics indicating that the nation's longest economic expansion — more than a decade of uninterrupted growth — has ended.

The government reported last week that the gross domestic product declined at an annual rate of 0.4 percent in the July-September quarter. Many analysts believe the pace of the downturn will accelerate to a drop of 2 percent or more in the current quarter. A recession is traditionally defined as two consecutive quarters of falling GDP.

Job cuts in October alone totaled 415,000, the biggest one-month total in 21 years.

The concern is that the hundreds of thousands of job layoffs that have occurred since the Sept. 11 attacks will trigger a sharp reduction in consumer spending as more people become fearful of losing their own jobs, deepening and prolonging the recession.

The Fed's action, which pushed the funds rate down to its lowest point since September 1961, was quickly matched by commercial banks that reduced their prime lending rate by a half-point. The benchmark for millions of consumer and business loans was cut to 5 percent, its lowest level since June 1972.

"Heightened uncertainty and concerns about a deterioration in business conditions both here and abroad are dampening economic activity," the Fed said in a four-paragraph statement.

The Fed repeated the phrase it employs when it wants to hold out the possibility of further rate cuts, saying that in the near future "the risks are weighted mainly toward conditions that may generate economic weakness."

Many economists said the Fed could very well cut rates by another half-point at its last meeting of the year, on Dec. 11. That would push the funds rate down to 1.5 percent, a level last seen in July 1961, when John F. Kennedy was president.

Some analysts are worried that plunging consumer confidence and the fears generated by the terrorist attacks and anthrax shipments in the mail will overwhelm the Fed's rate cuts.

"The Fed is trying to arrest the slide in the economy and in consumer confidence, but it may be running out of ammunition," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist at Wells Fargo in Minneapolis.

Slow day at the polls

The polls stand empty at the three precincts stationed at the Ohio Union yesterday. By 2 p.m. only 35 voters had turned out at the three represented precincts. If students are residents of Ohio they can file a provisional ballot and vote during their four years on campus.

Election 2001 Roundup

New Ohio mayors pave way for change

(AP) — New mayors in three Ohio cities made history when election polls came to a close yesterday.

Both Cleveland and Dayton elected a female mayor for the first time and Toledo elected a black mayor for the first time.

In Dayton, a Democratic challenger who called herself a "super-underdog" ousted the only Republican mayor of Ohio's seven largest cities in a super-close race to become the city's first female mayor.

With 100 percent of precincts reporting unofficial results, State Sen. Rhine McLin beat two-term Mayor Mike Turner by 869 votes. McLin had 18,499 votes, or 51 percent, to Turner's 17,630, or 49 percent, in a city where Democrats outnumber Republicans by 2-to-1.

"I tell you, I'm going to be a working mayor," McLin said. "We are going to do the city proud. The people have reclaimed the city, and we are going to do a lot of good things."

Cuyahoga County Commissioner Jane Campbell defeated former Clinton administration appointee Raymond Pierce on Tuesday to become Cleveland's first female mayor.

In Toledo, State Rep. Jack Ford was elected the city's first black mayor after maintaining a healthy lead over his opponent throughout the night yesterday.

With 80 percent of precincts reporting unofficial results, Ford had 38,165 votes, or 61 percent, compared with 24,743, or 39 percent, for Ray Kest, treasurer of Lucas County.

In Cincinnati, a white incumbent mayor who was criticized for his handling of spring rioting won re-election yesterday over a black political novice in a city still trying to mend its racial divisions.

With 91 percent of precincts reporting, Mayor Charlie Luken had 44,348 votes, or 56 percent, to challenger Courtis Fuller's 34,192 votes, or 44 percent. It was the city's first direct mayoral election in 76 years. Luken will have a four-year term instead of two years and the authority to veto City Council legislation.

"I'm grateful to the voters for the vindication," Luken said yesterday night. "I congratulate Courtis Fuller for running a good race."

"Obviously, we've got a lot of work to do in this city," he said. "I'm just happy for tonight, after all I've been through for the past seven months. We'll get to the details tomorrow."

Fuller thanked his supporters for backing him in what he called a "walk of faith." Fuller said he had congratulated Luken on the victory.

OMEN sheds light on bioterrorism

By Brooke Theis
Lantern staff writer

The Ohio Medical Education Network and the Ohio State University Medical Center are presenting the program "Managing the Diseases of Bioterrorism" this week in the wake of the ongoing biological terrorism affecting the country.

"The purpose of our program is to provide physicians and other health care workers across the U.S. with vital information about the diagnosis, treatment and prevention of anthrax, small pox, bubonic plague and botulism," said Margherita Finelli, OMEN network manager.

"Most importantly, our goal is to provide a forum for the physicians where they can ask the questions about diseases that are of concern to them, and to provide the most up-to-date information to our viewing audience," Finelli said.

The program began yesterday and will run until tomorrow in audio format from noon-1:30 p.m. The program will be broadcast to 70 hospitals in 12 states of the Midwest. Each hospital logs into the OMEN phone bridge to listen to a pre-recorded lecture accompanied by a slide presentation downloaded from the OMEN Web site followed by a question and answer session with the panelists, Finelli said.

On Friday, the video version of the program will run on OMEN-TV to over 1,500 hospitals across the country.

The panelists for this week's program include: Dr. Richard Nelson, professor, vice chair and medical director of the department of emergency medicine at the OSU Medical Center; Dr. Julie Mangino, medical director of epidemiology and associate professor of clinical internal medicine in the division of infectious diseases at OSU and Dr. Forest Smith, state epidemiologist for the Ohio Department of Health.

Columbus was one of the first 10 cities in the country to establish a response system to prepare the city and the county for nuclear or biological attacks, Nelson said.

The primary reasons for the program, according to Mangino, is to increase awareness regarding the agents related to bioterrorism, when those agents should be suspected and what are the most up-to-date treatment recommendations.

"We have put together an algorithm for guidelines in dealing with suspicious powders and packages," Mangino said. "In addition too, what to do with patients who think they may have been exposed to a biologic agent."

"Lots of education is being done in the hospital on the symptoms and recognition of the diseases," she said.

Finelli said a representative from the Centers for Disease Control that will be on the panel, but due to the anthrax scares across the U.S. she is still waiting for them to identify the panelist.

Moderating the audio program will be Dr. Mark King, a physician in the department of radiology at OSU. Dr. Jim Allen, a pulmonologist at OSU, will moderate the teleconference.

OMEN Audio is in its 39th season and is North America's oldest-interactive physicians education network. It was created to provide physicians with the latest information in the world of medicine, as well as a link to expert faculty and interaction with other physicians across the United States.

The OMEN-TV network is in its 12th season and was created to provide a video version of OMEN audio programs to hospitals with satellite receivers. The video versions show case presentations with patient interviews and visits to the operating room, cath lab and doctor's office.

All OMEN programs are also accredited for nurses.

"OMEN Audio and OMEN-TV are designed to provide continuing medical education for primary care and family physicians, as well as continuing education for nurses and other health care workers," Finelli said. "We have had many requests from our hospital viewing sites for a program on this topic."

"Biologic terrorism is now a reality for Americans. We will discuss ways that cities can coordinate efforts in the event that a biologic attack occurs."

The TV program will be replayed at 8 p.m. today and Nov. 18 at 6 p.m. on Educable.

Cincinnati. But the racial divide will end in this city," Fuller said. "We have to put an end to it."

Around the nation

Democrats captured governorships in Virginia and New Jersey yesterday, breaking eight years of Republican control. In New York City, still reeling from the Sept. 11 attacks, the mayoral race was a cliffhanger.

In Virginia, Democrat Mark Warner, a wealthy entrepreneur who has never held elected office, led Republican Mark Earley, a former state attorney general, 52 percent to 47 percent in nearly complete returns.

In New Jersey, Democrat Jim McGreevey, a suburban mayor who narrowly lost a race for governor four years ago, rolled to a landslide victory over former Jersey City Mayor Bret Schundler.

Partial results in New York showed Democrat Mark Green and Republican Michael Bloomberg neck-and-neck in the race to succeed Rudolph Giuliani, a Republican barred from seeking a third term.

With 18 percent of precincts reporting, Bloomberg had a slight lead.

Green, the city's elected public advocate, spent about $12 million on his campaign, while Bloomberg, the billionaire owner of the Bloomberg financial information company, was expected to spend more than $50 million of his own money. That makes it the most expensive mayoral campaign in U.S. history, according to Common Cause, a citizen lobbying group.

Green's once-large lead in the polls faded after the popular Giuliani endorsed Bloomberg as the man to guide New York through the aftermath of the World Trade Center attack.

In Virginia, with 93 percent of the precincts reporting, Warner had 896,773 votes to 808,313 for Earley.

Earley was handicapped by Republican infighting over taxes and the state budget. Warner put $4.7 million of his own fortune into a campaign that has raised $18.2 million, a state record.

With the victories, there will be 21 Democratic governors, 27 Republicans and two independents.

Student dies during flag football game

By Jennifer Davis
Lantern staff writer

Zackary Zickefoose, a first year veterinary student from Belville, Ohio, died Friday while playing a flag football game.

According to the police report, medics from the Columbus Division of Fire responded to a 911 call made on a cell phone from Coffey Athletic Field. When medics arrived they found Zickefoose collapsed and in full cardiac arrest.

He was taken to the OSU Medical Center, where medical staff were unable to revive him and was pronounced dead at 4:30 p.m. Medical records show the preliminary cause of death to be cardiopulmonary arrest. The Franklin County Coroner could not be reached to obtain an official cause of death.

According to Kim Paschell of the Student Advocacy Center, Zickefoose was playing flag football with a group of students from the veterinary medicine college.

He is survived by his wife, Jennifer.

Services were held yesterday at the Ontario Free Methodist Church in Mansfield, Ohio.

OSU POLICE BLOTTER

Angry man breaks away from drinking

Oct. 28: A resident of the 6th floor of Morrison Tower returned from a party and was upset over a fight in which he had been involved.

According to University Police, when the man returned to his dormitory room, he threw a bottle of vodka and about 10 shot glasses down the hallway and in his room to release his frustrations. He was told to pick up the glass and stay in his room for the rest of the night.

Man with stun gun escorted out of lab

Oct. 31: A man in the Baker Systems computer lab was escorted out after making many of the students there feel unsafe.

The man had a lock-blade knife, a stun gun and a .44-caliber Magnum bullet in his possession and was making comments about protecting himself from the Masons and Jewish people.

University Police arrested the suspect, who later told police he was neither a student nor an employee at Ohio State.

Dispute over clothes leads to violent fight

Nov. 2: A fight between two groups of women began with a verbal disagreement at Roxy Nightclub and ended in the Stradley Hall parking lot, police said. The women were arguing about clothes that were taken from a previous apartment they had shared.

In the Stradley Hall parking lot, two of the women began physically fighting — one walking away with a swollen upper lip and cuts on her wrist, the other with fingernail cuts on her back and arms. The women have been told by police not to have future contact with each other.

Suspects caught in attempted burglary

Nov. 3: At 8:47 p.m., Columbus Police responded to a break-in call at 41 E. Patterson.

The woman living in the house heard noises of someone breaking into the house and ran upstairs to call police, said Dean Worthington, burglary squad detective.

Several police cars were dispatched to the house, where they caught two black males. The two suspects, who apparently were looking for cash and other sellable goods, were found hiding towards the back of the house and in the basement, Worthington said. He said, according to one of the suspects, there was no intention to cause any harm to the occupants — unlike the robbery that happened on East 13th Avenue in September.

Neighbor Mark Phelps, who was home at the time of the burglary, said he did not see or hear anything until the police arrived.

Police seek suspects in armed robberies

Nov. 5: According to University Police, an employee of the State Discount Store in the Ohio Union was robbed at gunpoint with a semi-automatic handgun. The suspect is a black male, about 22 years old and was wearing a ski mask over his face.

Another armed robbery occurred on Nov. 2 when two black men approached a student between Orton Hall and the Faculty Club, demanding his wallet and threatening him with a semi-automatic handgun. Contact police at 292-2121 with any information on the armed robberies.

Crime Stoppers comes to campus

University Area Crime Stoppers program has been set up to receive phone calls about crimes committed on campus and in the off-campus neighborhood. The program offers cash rewards for anonymous tips leading to the arrest or indictment of crime suspects.

University Area Crime Stoppers has issued its first Buckeye Crime Watch to try to find the people responsible for the graffiti on the windows of several businesses on High Street.

Anyone with information on these crimes can call University Area Crime Stoppers at 247-8477. A reward for information on the recent vandalism received by Nov. 31 leading to the arrest or indictment has been set at $500.

Philanthropist Bella Wexner leaves legacy

COLUMBUS (AP) — Bella Cabakoff Wexner, an active philanthropist who was the mother of The Limited founder and chairman Leslie H. Wexner, died Sunday in New York at age 93.

Wexner, who had been one of her son's chief business advisers, was an emeritus board member of The Limited at the time of her death.

She contributed to local, national and international charities that are targeted toward humanitarian and health causes.

In 1985, she donated $3 million to build the Wexner Center for Pediatric Research, which opened several years later at Children's Hospital.

In 1989, Bella Wexner and her son were the first to make a $1 million personal donation to the United Way of Central Ohio.

Bella Wexner moved to Columbus in 1912 with her parents. She had five brothers and sisters.

She had served on The Limited board since its inception in 1963, when her husband and son were the only other members. She was secretary, and her husband was chairman until his death at age 76 in 1975. Bella Wexner remained on the board for 34 years.

She also contributed to efforts such as Marburn Academy, a Columbus school for children with learning disabilities; the Golda Meir Club of Central Ohio, a fund-raising organization for the Jewish community; and Hadassah Hospital, a teaching facility in Jerusalem.

She also made significant contributions to the Columbus Jewish Foundation and the Columbus Museum of Art.

Buckeyethon to twirl into winter quarter

By Jennifer Marin
Lantern staff writer

Ohio State is sponsoring a dance marathon where participants will dance the night away for a good cause from Feb. 1 to Feb. 2.

Buckeyethon is the first annual 26-hour fund-raising dance marathon benefiting Columbus Children's Hospital.

Cole Everett, a sophomore in business, said the purpose of the dance marathon is to create a Buckeyethon endowment fund.

"The theme is called, 'Go Nuts for Kids,' and we will be partying with a purpose," Everett said. "The idea for starting this type of fund-raiser started when a group of us went to Penn State and saw their dance marathon. They have been doing this for 30 years and raised $3.6 million last year."

Everett said OSU hopes to raise more than $100,000 and beat Columbia University's first-year record of $105,000.

Buckeyethon officially begins at 7 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 1 and ends at 9 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 2, said Jill Meinhardt, co-chair of Buckeyethon.

"All four floors of the Ohio Union will host various activities for participants, sponsors, visitors and patients of Children's Hospital," Meinhardt said. "The actual marathon will be in the Ohio Union ballrooms."

Meinhardt said participants can be students and faculty who register as either an individual or group.

"Participants meet fund-raising expectations by obtaining pledges or donations, as well as, taking part in organized fund-raising activities such as canning," Meinhardt said.

Yoshie Narui, a junior in chemistry, said participants have to raise a minimum of $50.

OSU expects to have 800 participants.

Features at the dance include area DJs, radio stations, local celebrities, dance troupes and live bands. The event has local eateries looking to help as well.

"Chipotle has donated 1,000 burritos, and all the restaurants in the basement will be working and offering discounts," Everett said. "The local band Gravity 44 will probably be coming and maybe celebrities like Katie Holmes, Drew Carey and OSU's Jim Tressel," Everett said.

According to Meinhardt, dancers must remain on the dance floor for the entire 26 hours of the marathon, with occasional breaks scheduled.

Dancers will also have to abide by the rules of the Safety and Security Committee.

"We ensure that potential unsafe activities don't occur, like people getting on someone's shoulders while dancing," said Marc Gerano, a sophomore in finance and the head of the Safety and Security Committee. "We are also responsible for medical safety and making sure people take their prescriptions."

According to Meinhardt, before signing up, students should complete the medical liability form and make sure they are in good health.

"Marathon dancers should get a good night's rest, eat carbohydrates and drink plenty of water," Meinhardt said. "Caffeine and similar products are discouraged, and the use of them during the marathon is prohibited."

Everett said no watches or time pieces are to be worn by dancers because it makes time seem to go faster. Only the steering committee will know the time.

"This dance marathon hopes to become the premier winter quarter event," Gerano said. "We hope to set the script for what this event will be like in 10 years. This is something that will bring the whole community together."

Registration for Buckeyethon ends Nov. 17.

OUR VIEW

The Need to Know
War-time censorship problematic

Censorship of the press during wartime is not uncommon. In fact, reporters have often accepted some kind of censorship as a given, something normal in a time of war.

Media coverage in times of national and international crisis has always been a tricky issue because national security has to be weighed against the right of the public to know and the freedom of the press.

In today's struggle, however, not all coverage of military actions falls under the blanket of national security. The press does have a critical role to play in relaying the progress and setbacks of U.S. troops abroad to American citizens back home.

Unfortunately, in the wake of the military's retaliatory attacks on Afghanistan, the news media are finding it more challenging than ever to fulfill their obligation to tell the American people what the government is doing and how well it's doing it.

The U.S. censorship of the press during the war in the Persian Gulf was the most extensive of any war in our history. Throughout most of the six-month military buildup and air war, control of the American press was tight and effective.

In the wake of media frustration with the Pentagon's tight control over the flow of information during the Gulf War, journalists and the military agreed in 1992 to a declaration of principles, including understandings that "journalists will be provided access to all major military units" and that "open and independent reporting will be the principal means of coverage of U.S. military operations."

As the administration prepares this new war, journalists remain concerned they will have less information and less access to U.S. troops than ever before. Even the use of deliberate disinformation cannot and should not be ruled out.

The press should not become the mouthpiece of the government by reporting only what it is fed during Pentagon press briefings.

Wars are never sterile and without casualties. It is our job to help the public understand this.

Otherwise, we run the risk of promoting a national understanding of warfare as the equivalent of playing a Nintendo game.

We must not hide the facts necessary for our democracy to function.

Executive Secrecy
President must release records

For the past seven months, the Bush administration has deliberately prevented the National Archives from releasing 68,000 pages of former President Ronald Reagan's correspondence with his top presidential aides — correspondence that was due for release on George W. Bush's Inauguration Day.

Five days ago, President Bush signed an executive order allowing either the White House or former presidents to veto the release of their presidential papers. This abrupt and questionable decision has been heavily criticized by many historians and those in favor of allowing the public access to governmental documentation and records.

We were dismayed and discouraged to learn of Bush's apparent determination to undermine the legislation that was passed in good faith to preserve an open and honest government.

In the wake of Watergate, Congress passed, and Presidents Ford and Carter signed into law, a number of reforms designed to ensure government openness.

Among them was the Presidential Records Act, which allows an outgoing president to specify a period of time after he or she leaves office, up to 12 years. The legislation also charges the National Archives with "an affirmative duty to make such records available to the public as rapidly and completely as possible consistent with the provisions of this act."

Jan. 20, the day Bush took the oath of office, marked the end of Reagan's 12-year grace period. Yet the papers remain unreleased.

To justify his stalling, the White House cites Reagan's last minute executive order, which it claims authorizes such delays in order to check for documents that fall under the executive privilege exemption.

This is hardly a solid argument. An executive order designed to implement a law cannot authorize government officials to violate that law. After all, the PRA, passed by Congress and signed by the president, is, according to our Constitution, the "supreme law of the land." An executive order is not.

Otherwise, the president could essentially circumvent acts of Congress whenever he or she chooses. In this case, the law clearly says that the papers may be kept secret for a period not to exceed 12 years, absent a successful claim of executive privilege.

Some suggest President Bush is trying to protect former Reagan officials now serving in his administration from unnecessary embarrassment.

In fact, Bush may be worried less about the release of these records than about the release of future records. After all, the documents from Bush's father's presidency are scheduled for release in 2005. Perhaps the president is asserting a different kind of privilege altogether — not executive but familial.

Either way we hope the Bush administration rethinks this troublesome order or else comes face to face with an inevitable court ruling on its constitutionality that could just as easily be avoided.

Friends are like fries at bottom of bag

Don't stop 'til you get enough. As well as being a classic Michael Jackson tune, the sentence also serves as a lifestyle. And as is important to whatever you choose to call life — breathing, survival or continuing until the next Wednesday night at the Roxy — eating is the most the crucial aspect of day-to-day activity for most, aside from the anorexics one sees waiting in line for the Roxy.

When eating, it is important not to stop until you have gotten enough. For someone like me, who has never cooked a meal for himself, getting enough is like trying to buy beer at 1:01 a.m. in Columbus — problematic. Stopping is not the problem.

In the seven or eight "hip-to-be" square meals I eat/purchase a week, at least five involve a personal relationship with fries of the French variety.

Sometimes I lay the cardboard box of fries on the living room table, sometimes I eat straight from the bag. But whenever my hand rises from the cold white paper bag bringing forth a hopefully warm thin, white, potato-like structure, I can always count on good eats.

Just like at noon on Jan. 20, 1989, when Ronald Reagan's presidency ended, all great things sadly must come to an end. The cardboard box of fries becomes empty — much like Al Gore's glass case for presidential victory trophies.

A year minus 49 weeks from today, many of you will associate with your high school and rue the next return to campus.

In the car ride back to Columbus on Sunday you will contemplate how much you missed your high school friends, and how excited you will be to spend Christmas, ops, sorry communists, "winter" break with your friends.

A year ago today, President Bush pulled the shocker of the century and beat the aforementioned Gore in the 2000 presidential election.

Left for not by your professors, Lantern opinion editor and kids with beards who wear stocking hats in July, Bush came out of nowhere and upset the heavily-favored Gore.

So what do French fries, your high school friends and George W. Bush have in common?

friends in the human, non-instant message manner for the first time since late August. At first, it will undeniably be odd. Like the words Maverick sang to Charlie in "Top Gun," you will wonder if "you've lost that loving feeling" with your high school chums.

By the Saturday night after Thanksgiving all will be kosher. You will remember how great the hometown friends are morning when you must

Well, if you went to my high school, Poland Seminary in northeast Ohio, all are white, but the focus of this column is not to purport that fact.

When you were 7 or 8 and did well on a test your parents would take you for a reward in the form of a trip to a fast food restaurant. Happy Meal or not, it was a treat.

In college, things change. Fast food is no longer a treat; it becomes a way of life. But what forever remains a treat is the end of the meal. The moment before you throw away the bag and check to see if any fries remain in the bottom of the bag. If fries remain, a smile comes and you realize that everything is going to be OK.

Your high school friends are essentially the fries at the bottom of the bag — neglected, but always the best tasting. Sure, they made be a little chilly, and a little unloved, but upon sight of them a smile always follows.

George W. Bush is also the French fry at the bottom of the bag. People are prone to forget about him, but when the chips (in the non-British way of calling french fries "chips") are down, people will and have looked to him for reinforcement.

I hope he doesn't get eaten.

USG should focus funds on issues, not fraternities

Melissa Koch, the Undergraduate Student Government vice president, wishes to raise funds and set up scholarships for students who want to join a fraternity or sorority but cannot afford it.

That's really nice of her.

Now what will USG be doing to set up scholarships for the students who want to join the other 400 student organizations at Ohio State?

Now, before people get their greek panties in a twist, let me say I have nothing against the fraternities and sororities at OSU. They are selective, as they review potential members' grade point averages, accomplishments and commitments to community service. The same could be said about honoraries as well, but USG is not raising any money for students to join those.

If there are students who want to go greek, those scholars should be set up and distributed by the individual chapters, not a governing body which is supposed to be representative of the undergraduate students at OSU.

If her aim is to put more diversity in the houses along Frat Row, I could not agree with Koch more. At a university with a community totaling almost 50,000, diversity should naturally exist within our student organizations, fraternities and sororities.

If diversity is not present, people have the responsibility to make sure the doors to those houses are open to everyone. Someone needs to open those doors.

But this should not be a USG initiative. If she thinks the greek system at OSU is not diverse enough, Koch should go take her concerns to the Interfraternity Council or the Panhellenic Association. Surely they have some clout with the different fraternities and sororities at OSU. If they do not wish to diversify greek

Monica Torline

Koch is propelling the myth some students have that USG is just another organization overrun by the greeks.

The members of USG should spend their resources — their time and energy — on other things. Students don't expect USG to raise money for the 400 student organizations which are registered with Student Activities, and they shouldn't expect them to find ways to fund potential frat boys.

I think most students expect their government to deal with really important issues. Like other Ohio colleges and universities, OSU is facing gigantic cuts in state funding for higher education. USG should be worrying about whether student tuition will go up again. USG should be finding a way to support our underpaid faculty during University Senate meetings.

I'm not saying they haven't been doing all those things. I just think USG has bigger fish to fry than getting people into fraternities and sororities. That fish should be frying in the kitchens of the greek houses.

READERS' FORUM

Anti-war views can't be hushed

One need look no further than the headline of Tom S. Kelley's letter to the editor, "Support America, ignore protesters," to see the utter idiocy of his argument.

That someone who supports self-censorship by the press could be a political science major would be hilarious, if it wasn't so indicative of the extremely high levels of ignorance about United States foreign policy.

It's fascinating how since this "war on terrorism" began, anti-war points of view have been edited out of the mainstream press, except for the occasional segment aimed at ridiculing peaceful protesters. Kelley seems quite annoyed that The Lantern is not happily joining in the tidal wave of propaganda. However, I find it quite refreshing to hear alternate points of view, as understanding how others feel about the subject helps me to look at the situation differently and reevaluate what I believe. Though I suppose when one accepts the rhetoric of the government as pure fact, as Kelley has, reevaluation is not an option.

Kelley says terrorists will "try to violate our freedom no matter what." He fails to mention the current violation of our freedom by our own government's new "anti-terrorism" bill, which gives the FBI, CIA and other law enforcement agencies unprecedented access to personal information and allows extensive wire-tapping and access to private e-mail.

I find it rather disgusting that Kelley brings up the victims of Sept. 11 and their families as a support for killing more innocent people. The Afghan civilians are just as innocent as those Americans were, and they are already the ones paying the price, not the terrorists. Within the first few days of bombing, the U.S. destroyed the office of a United Nations-backed mine-clearing organization, killing four. Last week, we bombed a residential area, killing 13. Are these innocent people's lives worth less simply because they were not born in America? While there have been a number of instances of civilian deaths due to the bombings, not a single terrorist has been killed or captured. What exactly are we accomplishing?

The Taliban has offered to surrender Osama bin Laden to an independent nation so that he can be tried. Yet that is not enough, President Bush says. No negotiations, he says. Meanwhile innocent people die and millions of refugees face a frightening, uncertain future. Wasn't one of the main objectives of this war to get bin Laden? Now we are presented with the opportunity and we turn it down in favor of more marginally effective bombing. Why? Does the U.S. lack confidence in its evidence, or could it be that there are ulterior motives for this war?

I challenge Kelley and the rest of America's citizens to think freely and consider all the facts before blindly accepting the government's simplistic explanations. Thank you, Lantern staff, for continuing to publicize the views of all of Ohio State's student body. And thank you, Women In Black, for asking the questions that need to be asked.

Buckeyes deserve respect, not ridicule

I was fortunate to attend the Buckeye football game on Oct. 20. It was very upsetting (and that's putting it mildly) to hear some of the people (not true Buckeye fans) boo Bellisari and the team as they left the field at halftime.

I truly hope coach Tressell and the team know these people are the minority. I'm not saying Buckeye fans don't ever get frustrated or disappointed. But, we will never boo the team. So, shame on all of you. You are an embarrassment to Ohio State and all true Buckeye fans. The team has a lot more class than you'll ever have.

I'm proud to be a Buckeye fan and will support the coaches and team whether we win or lose. After all, they are only human.

We must respect working class, not run 'em over

There is a general trend these days in America concerning the treatment and view of the working class. People with skilled labor or even unskilled labor positions are viewed by the upper class, and what's worse, by college kids, as being stupid. This is just inherently ridiculous and downright ignorant.

Today in high schools across the nation, the students who elect to attend a vocational school are said to be taking the easy way out, to be too dumb to attend college.

This trend doesn't end after high school. College students treat members of the working class as substandard and even sub-human at times.

Far too often, I have heard students ridiculing factory workers, highway laborers and members of the service industry in casual conversation. Even to these peoples' faces. If these students would stop and think for a minute as to what they are saying and doing, they may have a bit more respect for those individuals.

It is not just students, either. Yuppie-type urban professionals think that they are contributing more to society and view the working class as peons.

Stop and think of that moronic reasoning. How did these young urban professionals get to work? In a car that was built by workers in a factory, driving on a road that was built and is maintained by the local laborers' union. Where do they work? In a giant office building that took thousands of electricians, carpenters, masons, laborers and other such individuals to even be erected, much less maintained.

This general trend of devaluing and disrespecting the working class often times has fatal results.

My father is a laborer — registered in the union — and works as a road construction foreman. My father has buried too many of his fellow workers, union members and in some cases friends because some yuppie refuses to respect the speed limit laws in a construction site.

For these diluted individuals who think that just because they have some sort of degree they are smarter than the working class, I ask them, can you change a fuel injector on that impossibly expensive Mercedes?

No, you probably can't.

Roll that around in your head next time you call a waiter a moron because the lobster bisque is too hot, or yell at a mechanic because he can't repair an engine that you drove without oil for 100 miles.

Stop and think for just a moment about where you came from, and who your family is and was. Perhaps your grandfather was someone who didn't go to college, who was a member of the working class. Then picture his face next time you see a man in a hard hat and jeans and think to yourself, "God, I'm glad I'm not stupid like him."

For clucking good food, make chicken run to Popeyes

I love me some Popeyes' Chicken," writes the ever-lucid Wise Diva, Patty Cunningham. Venerated advice columnist and fried-chicken enthusiast, the Wise Diva does the reading public a favor this week, whisking us away to the "Palace of Poultry," Popeyes Chicken & Biscuits, located at 3461 Cleveland Ave. East Side, West Side, regardless — you'd do well to put your backside in front of a steaming pile of this magnificent food.

In a world of KFC and Cluck-U, Popeyes Chicken is a bird of a different feather. Just thinking back on the mouth-watering spices, crunchy skin and juicy meat makes me want to drive back again. Let the world know that for dessert, while co-masticator Kate and I sampled Popeyes' pies, the Wise Diva was lured back again by the siren's song of fried chicken — eating her fourth and final piece of the best chicken I've ever had. I'm simply glad to have been so privileged as to be a part of it.

The biscuits were a letdown. I like my biscuits a little fluffy and these were simply so small that the majority of the biscuit consisted of the salty, crunchy crust. It's just disconcerting to find one's biscuits so closely resembling one's state government. Crusty and unyielding, if amazingly cheap.

evening. It's that good.

Kate offered up an explanation for the Diva's addiction. "The chicken is crispy, tender and minimally greasy." Looking back on the meal, in all honesty reader, it's the

For dessert you are offered a variety of Edward's Pies, each served by the slice in individual cardboard containers — packaging commensurate to the class displayed throughout the rest of the chain. Diners, rest easy in the knowledge that — like Skoal, conservative politics and liberal marriage laws — Edward's Pies are allegedly, "a Southern tradition." Just look at the box.

The pecan pie had a smooth texture and a great taste. Personally, I'm not a big fan of pecans, but I was surprised to find the pie possessed all the fine qualities it could hope to command at $1.09 apiece.

Kate found her lemon meringue didn't quite match the kind they serve back home. Still, she admits that all in all, it was a pleasant experience.

According to at least one Diva account, the collard greens "were singing." She continued saying, "I know they were Glory Greens. That company's greens are always spiced just right. Too bad there was no vinegar to add to them bad boys."

Like the Barenaked Ladies, the songs my green beans were singing sounded tired, unoriginal and lame. The beans were really soggy — precariously close to slipping into a liquid state given the slightest prodding.

The mashed potatoes were whipped soft, topped with spicy brown gravy. Potatoes mashed is a fine specimen — and a worthy companion to the fabulous fried fowl.

There was no smoking and plenty of seating in the dining area. The restaurant was handicapped-accessible. Service was a bit slower than other fast-food restaurants, and refills set you back a whole quarter. Stop by the company's Web site, www.popeyes.com, and print out the coupon before you drop in. A free medium drink with the purchase of a three-piece dinner is nothing to scoff at.

The Wise Diva noted that the black community, with regards to Popeyes Chicken, disregarded social class. She writes, "It doesn't matter. At Popeyes you'll find black folk from all walks of life with anything from BMWs to a Delta 88, 1978 Oldsmobile (with good rims) parked outside. Popeyes Chicken transcends the class dynamic."

In conclusion, if you're into chicken in "the Northing Tradition," that is you enjoy eating them, then roll those tires to your nearest Popeyes Chicken & Biscuits.

CLASSIFIEDS IN THIS SECTION

Top teams too easily punished by BCS

The Bowl Championship Series began during the 1998 college football season in order to establish, once and for all, an undisputed Division I-A National Champion. Up until that point, the best team in the nation had been decided by two separate groups — the coaches and the sports writers.

Edmund Brown

The lower divisions in collegiate football had long ago established a play-off system, similar to that used by the Ohio High School Athletic Association. The who's who of major college football chose otherwise, unwilling to do away with the tradition, pageantry and enormous amount of revenue generated by postseason bowl games.

Beginning with the 1999 Tostito's Fiesta Bowl, a match-up was designed between computer-generated No. 1 and No. 2 teams in the nation. The National Championship game then rotated between the Fiesta Bowl and three other BCS Bowl games: the Nokia Sugar Bowl, the FedEx Orange Bowl and this year's Rose Bowl, presented by AT&T.

Historically, the Rose Bowl was a battle between the Big Ten and Pac Ten champions, but for the first time since 1947, these two conferences will not meet in Pasadena, barring some sort of miracle where the No. 1 and No. 2 BCS teams come from the Big Ten and Pac Ten.

So much for tradition. In both the USA Today/ESPN Coaches Poll and the Associated Press Top 25, the Miami Hurricanes are the No. 1 team in the country. However, in the latest BCS rankings released Monday, the Hurricanes, with the nation's longest current winning streak, find themselves behind the undefeated Nebraska Cornhuskers, and are trailed closely by the Oklahoma Sooners, who have already suffered a 20-10 loss to the Huskers.

Miami suffers from what the people at the BCS like to call "the quality win component." This means that although everybody who's anybody believes the Hurricanes are the best team in the country, they don't play enough marquis opponents to satisfy the computer's statistical cravings.

Miami fans had taken some comfort in the fact that on Dec. 1 the Hurricanes would face Virginia Tech, who, until two weeks ago, was also undefeated. Two losses later, the Hokies find themselves out of the BCS standings, and Miami fans find themselves hoping for a repeat performance by Nebraska against Oklahoma in the Big 12 Championship game.

Most likely, the Cornhuskers will face Oklahoma once again in the Big 12 title game. If by chance Oklahoma were to defeat Nebraska for the Big 12 championship, the two would most likely meet again on Jan. 3 at the Rose Bowl, leaving an undefeated Miami out to dry. So much for an undisputed national champ.

Whoever may fall short of a BCS bowl bid will be losing out on a lot of greenbacks. This season, BCS participants will receive between $11.78 million and $14.67 million for simply participating in one of the four BCS bowl games.

Any team emerging as champion of one of the four original BCS conferences — the Big Ten, Pac Ten, Big 12 or SEC — gets the big bucks. If Miami were to receive an at-large bid, which is very probable, the university will take in more than $11 million. However, sadly for the University of Miami, they are discriminated against by the Bowl Championship Series simply for playing in the Big East.

At least Ohio State fans can take comfort in the fact that if and when the Buckeyes return to Big Ten dominance and national prominence, the university will have more money to blow on construction.

Bucks to focus on upcoming games, not bowls

With three tough games remaining on schedule, Buckeyes say they can't afford to look ahead

By Travis Sawchik
Lantern sports writer

The Big Ten this season has something in common with ABC's 1983 miniseries, "The Thorn Birds." They were both made for television.

If Ohio State (5-3, 3-2 Big Ten) wins its remaining three games, they will at least own a share of the 2001 Big Ten title. If OSU loses its remaining three games, they can watch the bowl season on their parents' 29-inch television.

"I think you can look at it a couple ways," OSU coach Jim Tressel said. "You can call it brutal because the teams we play are outstanding. Or you can say we are very fortunate because the teams that are ahead of us, we still have an opportunity to play. We happen to like the latter approach."

Those three teams are Purdue, Illinois and Michigan. And Michigan generally treats OSU like New Orleans Saints' offensive lineman Kyle Turley treats a New York Jets football helmet. The three teams have combined for a 18-5 record this season. The Buckeyes' five wins this year have come against opponents with a combined record of 15-28. The only win Ohio State has against a winning opponent was Northwestern, who since its loss to OSU on Oct. 6 has leveled out to 4-4.

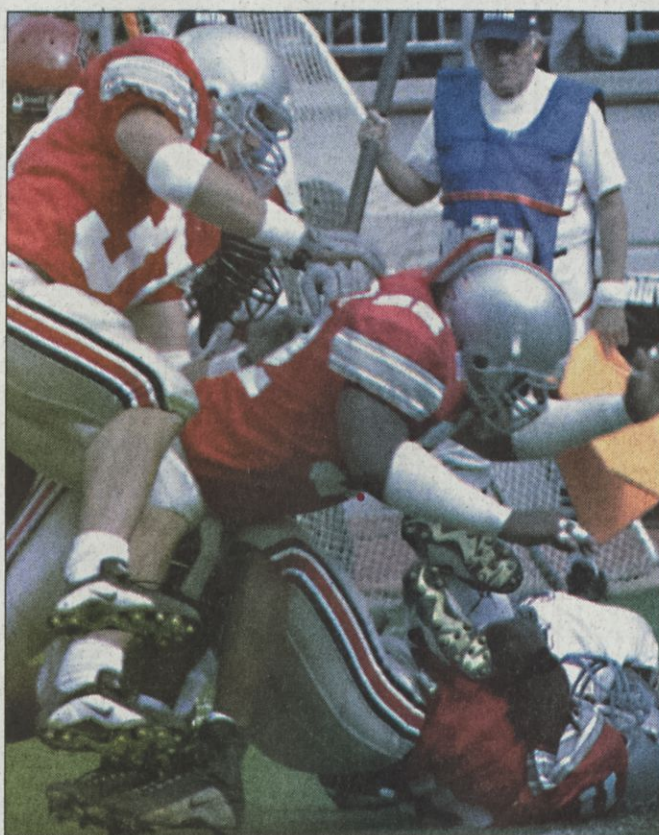

"November is what football is all about," Tressel said.

For the Buckeyes, the remainder of November will be about winning their sixth game and becoming bowl eligible. It will not be easy.

"We can't start thinking about the Big Ten title," OSU linebacker Joe Cooper said. "We have to take one game at a time. It's exciting to be back controlling our own destiny, but we have to make sure we really focus on that."

There are a few reasons for hope going into the home stretch, one of which was the best showing of the season by the OSU offense in the 31-28 win over Minnesota on Saturday.

"Do I think we're getting better? I think we are getting better," Tressel said. "He (Steve Bellisari) was pretty darn disciplined in his reads. I think the thing that stepped up his game more than anything is he has been the healthiest he has been. He has been limping around since the Akron game when at the bottom of a pile someone tried to break his ankle off."

While Bellisari played his best game of the season, other factors besides a healthy ankle were involved.

"It was exciting to see after the game the pride the offensive line had about the fact that we didn't get sacked," Tressel said. "That's a huge thing, a huge confidence builder. You can trace back Steve's enhanced performance; certainly a lot of help from his offensive line, receivers and (running backs), but I don't think we can sell short the fact that he had to do his part as well."

Jonathan Wells was also able to take pressure of the passing game with 152 rushing yards and Chris Vance made a circus touchdown catch, taking the ball away from a Minnesota defensive back that could have easily resulted in an interception.

But Tressel doesn't mind taking a few shots down field during a game.

"With the way people play defense in this day and age, when they are allowing themselves to play single coverage and play snug, you have to throw the ball vertical. What we say to our receivers is simply this — either we catch it or it's broken up we cannot allow a ball to be intercepted."

While the offense seems to be taking steps forward, the defense has been moving backwards the past few weeks.

"Most of the time you give up 28 points against a good football team, you may not win," Tressel said.

Penn State quarterback Zack Mills, Minnesota quarterback Asad Abdul-Khalik and running back Tellis Redmon have exposed the Buckeye defense with runs of 44, 52 and 65 yards.

"I think the big thing that we need to work on is to stop giving up the big plays," Cooper said. "I haven't seen too many teams just drive the ball down and get in the end zone. A lot of times we give up big plays which put them in scoring position, sometimes it is great plays by the offense, sometimes it is missed tackles."

Basketball Bucks take on 'World'

By Justin Powell
Lantern wire editor

In this time of world unity, it might be hard for some Ohio State fans to come out tonight and root against the opponent of the men's basketball team.

OSU takes on the One World All-Stars in an exhibition game — a game in which coach Jim O'Brien admitted winning is not the number one priority.

"We want to come out and play hard," O'Brien said. "We need to play well, play intelligently and play hard. If we do all those things, we have a real good shot at winning, but winning is not the most important thing."

"Obviously we're going to try to win, but more than anything we need to get guys in and get a feel for what's going on and see where that takes us."

Although winning may not be on the mind of the coach, it certainly is on the mind of some of the players.

"First of all, we want to win," said senior guard Boban Savovic. "The second thing is for us to just work on our game. We're preparing for our season, and I think this is going to be a good experience for our younger players to feel the crowd."

The younger players Savovic is referring to are one of the reasons there is some excitement surrounding the program. The group of freshmen on this year's team is easily rated the best recruiting class O'Brien has brought in during his four-year tenure in Columbus, according to most recruiting services.

The class consists of point guard Brandon Fuss-Cheatham, wing-forward Matt Sylvester and post-player Terence Dials. The player who most consider to be the Buckeyes' biggest prize, off-guard JaQuan Hart, will be academically ineligible to play until next year.

The three freshmen who can play for the Bucks this season will all get a chance to show their skills in front of the home crowd tonight.

"They're all ready to play," O'Brien said. "Some of the guys know what we're doing and have a better feel for what's going on, but that's to be expected with young kids — they're all still learning. But they're all willing, they play hard and they'll all get a shot."

One World All-Stars is a team made up of former college players who are looking to extend their playing days in any way possible. Freshman jitters will not be something they have to deal with.

But the competition seems to be the least concern for the Buckeyes as they head into action.

"We have no scouting report on them at all," said sophomore co-captain Zach Williams. "We are just going to go out there and play our game and see what happens."

The All-Stars roster features a starting lineup with at least one notable name, Shaheen Holloway, a former standout during his days as point guard for Seton Hall.

The starting five for the Buckeyes will likely consist of Savovic, Williams, senior center Will Dudley alongside guards Brian Brown and Brent Darby, a senior and junior, respectively.

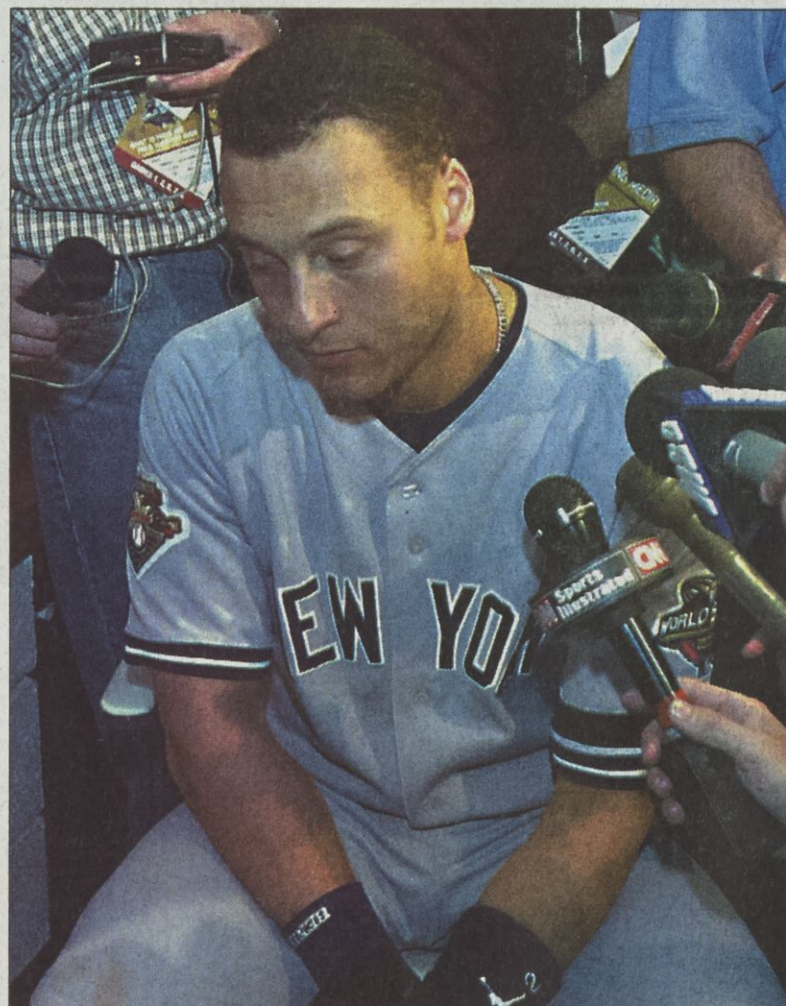

"We're just trying to figure out what the best combination of guys we can put on the floor is," O'Brien said. "That doesn't always mean on the offensive end, either."

One position worth watching for OSU fans will be down low. Someone will have large shoes to fill after the departure of Ken Johnson, who left the program as the Big Ten leader in career blocked shots.

The job this year is left to Dudley and 7-foot sophomore Velimir Radinovic.

"My biggest concern is how effective we are going to be around the basket," O'Brien said. "We put a lot of emphasis on our guards, and our guards are our best players, but if the big guys can do the little things, that will really help us this year."

Today's game will begin at 8:00 p.m. in the Schottenstein Center.

Field hockey Bucks draw UVA in round one

Ohio State vs. Ohio University, in Winston Salem, N.C.

The scenario is not as far-fetched as it would seem.

Yesterday, the NCAA released its pairings for the 2001 Division I field hockey tournament, and OSU and OU are in the same bracket.

On Saturday, OSU (15-4) will battle Virginia (13-7) in the opening round of the 16-team tournament. In the other first round match, OU will take on host-school Wake Forest.

OSU and Virginia have played once this year, with the Cavaliers coming out on top on Oct. 7 in Charlottesville, Va., 2-1.

Virginia, which lost in the semifinals of the ACC tournament to Maryland, was an at-large selection to the NCAA tournament.

The winners of the two opening round matches will play Sunday, with the winner of that contest advancing to the NCAA Final Four played at Kent State on Nov. 16.

MLB owners vote to eliminate two teams

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Baseball owners voted yesterday to eliminate two teams before the start of next season, but didn't specify which ones. They also said they wouldn't lock out players when the labor contract expires today.

The Montreal Expos, Minnesota Twins and Florida Marlins were the teams recently mentioned as the likeliest candidates, while Oakland and Tampa Bay were discussed earlier this year. This would be the first contraction by Major League Baseball since the National League shrank from 12 teams to eight following the 1899 season.

No baseball team has moved since the Washington Senators became the Texas Rangers in 1972.

"It makes no sense for major league baseball to be in markets that generate insufficient local revenues to justify the investment in the franchise," commissioner Bud Selig said. "The teams to be contracted have a long record of failing to generate enough revenues to operate a viable major league franchise."

Montreal is considered the front-runner to be cut. The Expos averaged just 7,648 fans per game at Olympic Stadium this year and no progress has been made toward a new ballpark. The team's owner, Jeffrey Loria, is a New York art dealer and has few ties to Quebec.

Selig said all 30 major league teams will continue to sell season tickets for 2002, even though he thinks two of them will not play.

"There are more than two candidates," he said. "We haven't picked the final teams."

"I'm not going to get into the numbers game," he said. "There were a lot of people in the game who were in favor of four-team contraction."

The move could set up a battle among cities to avoid contraction. Government assistance for new ballparks could get teams off the endangered list.

"I'm not going to deal in what-ifs," Selig said.

Selig said the possibility of moving teams has not been ruled out, but he added there aren't any acceptable cities to move to.

"Merely transferring existing problems to another ownership group or another city would only exacerbate the problem, not resolve it," he said.

Owners also said they wouldn't lock out players or freeze player signings when the collective bargaining agreement expires today.

Owners said they must negotiate the specifics of how to disperse the players on each eliminated team.

"We have every intention of doing it," he said.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern cannot accept advertising that advocates sedition or other illegal actions, violates normal standards of morality and taste, or attacks an individual race, nationality, ethnic group, religion or sex. In cases of doubt, the proffered copy, illustrations and layout will be submitted by the Lantern Business Manager to the School of Journalism & Communication Publications Committee and judged by a majority vote of the members. Decisions of this committee are final. Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.

- Copy will be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for published special early deadlines.
- All advertisements are required to occupy at least as many inches in height as they do columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered full column (21 inches) and charged accordingly.
- The Lantern reserves the right to reject any advertisement that promotes illegal activity or activity detrimental or damaging to the university and its educational mission. It further reserves the right to revise any advertisement which is deemed objectionable for any reason.
- Make-good/adjustments will be considered only for those advertisements where errors occur in the following: business/group name, address, or phone number; item price; date, time, or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement, and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered to the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify, otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
- Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.
- A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
- No proof will be furnished on any advertisement received after deadline, or for ads smaller than seven (7) column inches.
- If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and subject to a rebill fee.
- Advertisers are encouraged to avoid making misleading claims or using art or words that impugn or degrade sex, race, age, national origin, creed or color.
- The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until credit rating with the Lantern is established. CERTIFIED check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a rate-holder ad meeting contract minimums, for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser notifies the Lantern office prior to publication.
- Advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees, and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of advertiser's advertisement.
- Advertisers in the Ohio State Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.
- All mail-order advertisers are required to submit sample/proof-of-product prior to publication.

Please note that advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

Officials feel worst of anthrax is over

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Eight days after the last anthrax diagnosis, a top federal health official said yesterday the worst may be over.

But another attack, perhaps by some means other than the mail, can't be ruled out. And it's possible, although unlikely, that next month when thousands of people end their preventive antibiotics, a case or two might still pop up.

Could lingering contamination from the anthrax-tainted letters mailed to New York, Florida and Washington cause more infections?

"For this episode, we're out of the woods," Dr. Anthony Fauci of the National Institutes of Health told The Associated Press. "However, another letter could come in addressed to whomever, you or me, who knows?"

In Washington, thousands of pounds of mail addressed to government agencies have been piling up since an anthrax-tainted letter arrived at Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle's office Oct. 15. The Postal Service said yesterday it had begun sanitizing this mail and would start delivering it within 24 to 48 hours.

The Postal Service hired a second company to cleanse the mail by irradiating it. Facilities in Bridgeport, N.J. and Lima, Ohio, now are tackling that massive effort. Each site is expected to cleanse about 750,000 pieces of mail a day, most coming from Washington, New Jersey and New York, where anthrax contamination was confirmed in some post offices.

More post offices around the country were being tested for possible contamination. Closed post offices in New Jersey reopened yesterday, as did the Manhattan hospital that was closed when a worker died of inhaled anthrax.

Still facing cleanup is the Hart Senate Office Building where Daschle's office is located. Officials on yesterday abandoned plans to pump chlorine dioxide gas into the building amid fears it may not work, and now say the building will not reopen before Nov. 21.

Four people have died of inhaled anthrax since tainted letters were mailed in mid-September, and 13 others are fighting either the inhaled or milder skin form of the disease.

But it has been eight days since the last confirmed diagnosis — a good sign that the worst is over, Fauci said.

The most troublesome victim is Kathy Nguyen, the Manhattan hospital worker whose Oct. 31 death still has federal investigators baffled. Despite repeated testing, investigators have found no sign that she came in contact with anthrax-tainted mail, nor have they found any of the bacteria at her home, workplace or route to work.

The big fear is that she was the first victim of a new anthrax attack by some means other than mail.

But "every day that goes by without seeing another unexplained inhalational case makes it less and less likely" that happened, Fauci said.

Indeed, the other inhaled anthrax patients came down with symptoms four to six days after being exposed to the bacteria, said Dr. Bradley Perkins of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Tens of thousands of Americans are taking antibiotics for 60 days to prevent anthrax infection because they may have been exposed to the bacteria, which can incubate for up to two months before causing illness.

There's no guarantee that when all those people finish their drugs, a case or two of anthrax that the antibiotics didn't cure won't appear, Fauci said.

"It is very unlikely, though not impossible, that you will see late cases," he said. "Do I think it will happen in significant numbers? No. But if a case or two cropped up, I wouldn't be surprised."

Thus, all of those people must be alert to possible anthrax symptoms in the days after they quit the antibiotics, he said — something their doctors should have warned them about, and something the CDC is gearing up to monitor.

Because whoever mailed the anthrax-tainted letters clearly had a large amount of very potent bacteria, "I think they could have done a lot worse," Fauci said. "It's not unreasonable to assume that the people who have this material and have attacked us with letters might try a different modality."

Added Dr. D.A. Henderson, the government's top bioterrorism adviser: "It's critical we remain on alert, and certainly we all are. ... What might happen next is anybody's guess at this point."

Northern Lights misunderstood as 'terrorist thing'

By Audra Ang
Associated Press

The Northern Lights appeared with rare intensity in skies across the United States, treating onlookers as far south as Georgia and Alabama to a shimmering display of blue, red and green.

The ghostly streaks, also known as the aurora borealis, are rarely seen south of Canada and Alaska.

Monday night's display began around 8:50 p.m. EST, prompting alarmed calls to law enforcement authorities.

Sonoma County, Calif., emergency dispatcher Randy Muelheim said some callers thought it might be "a terrorist thing."

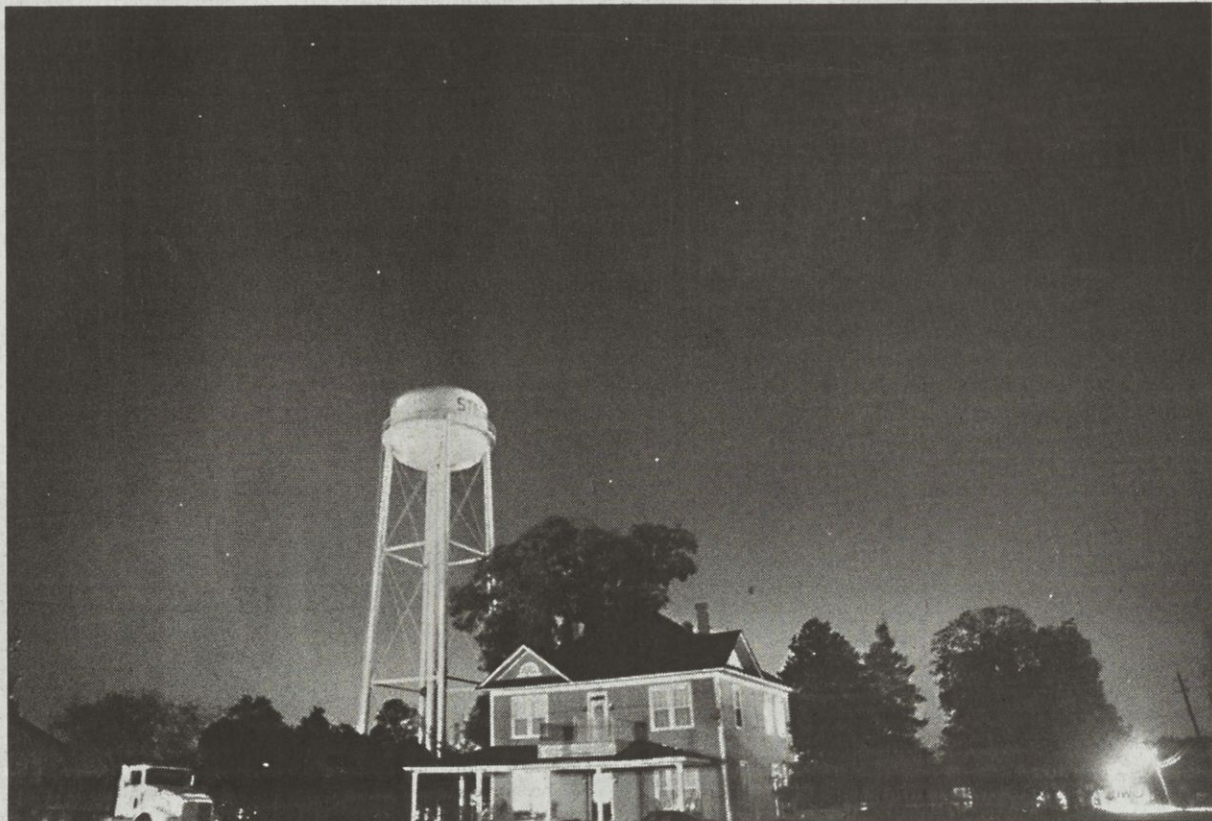

"Some thought we were being bombed," said Mike Melton, emergency management director for Colbert County, Ala. "I got concerned that it might have been an airplane going down."

The broad blue and green spiked band was tinged with brilliant red areas.

The sky was "almost like a fluorescent red," with the intensity of the light changing at intervals, said Rick Anderson of Stewartstown, W.Va. "What was really awesome was I looked through my back yard, where I could see the horizon, and it looked like rays coming from the ground up into the sky."

The Northern Lights occur when charged particles streaming away from the sun interact with different gases in Earth's atmosphere.

A large solar flare on Sunday

The aurora borealis or northern lights shine over the town of Stedman east of Fayetteville, N.C. The aurora was caused by a large solar flare over the weekend.

probably caused the lights to be visible farther south than usual, said Brian Murphy, director of Butler University's Holcomb Observatory in Indianapolis. The lights could return nightly through tomorrow but should weaken in intensity, he said. "It's incredible," said Dan Satterfield, WHNT-TV meteorologist in Huntsville, Ala. "The last time we saw a display of this kind was 15 or 16 years ago. It's one of the better ones I've ever seen, especially this far south." On the Web site spaceweather.com, photographers from California, Alaska, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Idaho, New Jersey and Georgia posted their pictures.

Cuba still out of order due to Hurricane Michelle

By Anita Snow
Associated Press

HAVANA — Hurricane Michelle destroyed at least 2,000 homes and damaged another 8,000 in central Cuba, officials said yesterday as they began totaling the damage from the weekend storm that killed five people nationwide.

Half of Cuba was blacked out for a second night, and millions of residents remained without power, gas or water. The government was working to rebuild the telecommunications network.

Civil defense officials said the first tallies of destroyed homes came from Matanzas province, which was worst hit by Sunday's storm.

"We were rebuilding the house," Jose Ramon Pedrozo said quietly as he tried to rescue a few wooden planks that once formed part of his modest home in Solis Viejo, a small town in Matanzas. "Now we're going to start all over."

The hurricane, which killed 12 people in Honduras, Nicaragua and Jamaica last week, lost some strength as it moved off of Cuba, and left Florida virtually untouched. Authorities had ordered the Florida Keys evacuated.

Michelle swept past the Bahamas capital of Nassau on Monday with 85 mph winds, flooding houses and cutting power. At 10 a.m. EST, the storm was centered about 400 miles southwest of Bermuda and was barely a hurricane with winds of 74 mph.

In Cuba, damages to telephone lines and microwave antennae that provide national long-distance service snarled communications between Havana and outlying regions.

Outgoing international telephone service was restored before dawn on Monday, but callers outside the country reported they were unable to call loved ones on the island.

"I'm very worried because we don't know what happened to them," Isabel Nunez, 55, of Elizabeth, N.J., said of her relatives in Cuba.

Although the power was shut off to prevent accidents during the storm, the government said extensive repairs must be made before it can be safely restored.

When the storm made landfall on Cuba's southern coast, its winds were estimated at 130 mph. Michelle caused at least 23 homes to collapse in Havana, on the northern shore, state television reported — and more were expected to crumble as they dried out in the sun.

The narrow streets in Solis Viejo and other towns in the central Cuban region were littered with palm branches and tiles blown off of buildings. Downed utility poles lay scattered in parks and front yards.

Officials evacuated about 750,000 people before the storm. Cuba's population is 11 million, with 2 million in Havana.

Conditions in many parts of Cuba were unknown because of the communications problems, making it difficult even for the government to assess the damage.
