The Graduate Employees and Students Organization, a local group comprised of Ohio State graduate students, has teamed up with the Ohio Federation of Teachers to encourage collective bargaining for graduate students' benefits packages.

"We are looking to unionize the graduate student body in order for us to gain better pay, benefits and hours," said Matthew Williams, a second-year graduate student in geology and member of the Graduate Employees and Students Organization.

Williams said there is no regulation for these benefits for Ohio students, leaving the decision making to the universities.

Rep. Fred Strahorn, D-Ohio, is sponsoring House Bill 249, which calls to include a removal of an exception that limits gradu-ate students' rights in collective bargaining. "Ohio is the only state that allows collective bargaining for full-time faculty and not for part-time faculty," Strahorn said.

Strahorn said these rights will bring higher-quality faculty to Ohio universities, a stepping stone to achieve Ohio's economic goals.

"I believe this can be a benefit for all involved," Williams said.

Williams said OSU has some of the best graduate programs in the nation, but having better benefits and pay for graduate students who are teaching and completing research will give the university an opportunity to have a premier program overall.

"By offering a competitive benefits package, OSU will be an attractive place for any student in any field," Williams said. "Students will say, 'Why wouldn't I want to be there?"

James Tackett, a member of the Ohio Federation of Teachers, said graduate students deserve improved compensation and working conditions.

"Part-time faculty serve with distinction. Properly utilized, they bring knowledge and professional perspective gained from their related work that is beneficial to students," Tackett said in a statement.

He said the OSU administration has made motions toward improving health benefits to their graduate students by reducing health care costs beginning in 2005.

According to OSU's Office of Human Resources, the monthly stipend for graduate associates will increase by $100 for the 2004-2005 school year and insurance coverage will increase by 64 percent.

'If Ohio State wants to attract and retain the best and brightest graduate students, then we must create a supportive environment for them and demonstrate that we value their teaching, research and administrative roles," said executive vice president and provost Barbara Snyder in a statement.

'Increasing the minimum stipend and health care subsidies are important ways we can do this," she said.

Middle East politics surround student groups

By Adam Konvalinka Lantern staff writer

Violence continues in the Middle East between Israelis and Palestinians, and Ohio State students continue to take sides and debate the issues.

In the past week, 45 Palestinians have been killed and dozens of homes demolished in the Rafah refugee camp, located in the Gaza Strip. Israel launched the military offensive in response to the death of 13 Israeli soldiers killed in Gaza earlier this month. Israeli forces were searching for tunnels Palestinians use to smuggle weapons which span the Egypt-Gaza border . The Israeli military said three tunnels were destroyed, and 10 wanted men were detained for questioning during the operations in Rafah.

Members of the pro-Palestinian OSU group Committee for Justice in Palestine dispute Israel's reasons for the incursion into Gaza.

'Our primary goal is to educate the OSU population about the injustices committed under Israel's illegal occupation," said Nahla Saleh, a graduate student in global education and spokeswoman for the committee.

tunnels was merely an excuse for the military operations.

"I don't think the tunnels are the issue," she said. "There are a fired warning shots at an abanlot of measures taken that have doned building to disperse a nothing to do with security. It's a form of collective punishment."

Saleh said the demolition of camps has left thousands of Palestinians homeless.

logical warfare. Most of these are innocent people," she said. "To facilitate peace, you can not continually disrupt daily life."

Dori Zofan, a senior in Hebrew and also a member of Chlabad, a Jewish religious and cultural organization, said he believes the incursion was necessary.

Some people claim Israel is the problem, but Israel cannot live in peace without security," he said. "Israelis are constantly worried about getting blown up. They have to go through airport-style security just to go to the movies, mall or other public buildings."

Zofan said Israel takes measures to avoid civilian casualties, and he said terrorist groups with their headquarters in apartments and neighborhoods are to blame for civilian casualities.

'Israel has to do something (in response to Palestinian attacks)," he said. "Israel goes in with troops, putting soldiers at risk just to minimize the risk to civilians that could result from an air assault."

The United Nations Security Council passed a resolution criticizing Israel's actions in Gaza May 19. The United States, which usually vetoes resolutions criticizing Saleh said Israel's search for Israel, abstained on the vote.

A unilateral peace plan proposed by Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon calls for an Israeli withdrawl from the Gaza Strip. The recent violence and international criticism of Israel's methods has increased support for the plan within the Israeli government.

Kara Silverman, a junior in geography and president of the Israeli Action Committee, a branch of Hillel, is in favor of the plan. The committee works to educate the OSU community about reasons to support Israel and how to achieve peace in the region.

"I'm excited about it. It's high past time to get out of there," she said. "It would be a great step toward helping the Palestinians, but I do worry about security if there is a pull-out."

The Committee for Justice in Palestine hosted a speech by Ali Abunimah, the founder of www.electronicintifada.net, a Palestinian media association, last Thursday.

Abunimah said he believes a line cannot be drawn to separate Palestinians and Israelis - a onestate solution is the only answer.

'If there was a line that could be drawn that 51 percent of Israelis would accept, 95 percent of Palestinians would reject it, and vice-versa," he said.

The U.S. war in Iraq is another issue impacting the Israeli/Palestinian conflict.

"(Because of the war), Israeli's military has been able to get away with a lot of stuff," said Joseph Levine, OSU professor of philosophy and faculty advisor for the Committee for Justice in Palestine. "A lot of the military's actions are going under the radar."

Levine said the war with Iraq might help create a peace plan.

'It's hard to tell how this will affect the situation in the long run," he said. "Attention on Middle East issues (as a result of the war in Iraq) might change support for Israel.'

Silverman said the war in Iraq is part of a larger clash of civilizations between western democracies and Islamic fundamentalism that includes the conflict in Palestine

"It's an important indicator of what's happening in the region," she said. "There is a fundamental difference in thought between western style democracies and Islamic fundamentalism."

Palestinians are particularly upset by President Bush's statements in a letter written to Sharon earlier this month. The letter denies the right of return to Israel for Palestinian refugees and says major Jewish settlements in the West Bank will remain under Israeli control after a final peace accord.

"A lot of these issues were already decided by Bush and Israel," Levine said. "There is no reason for Israel to dismantle settlements or consider the right of return as long as they have U.S. support."

Silverman said she believes the United States has an important role to play as a mediator.

"The U.S. is an important mediator," she said. "I feel the U.S. is necessary to police the situation and make sure any agreements that are made are followed."

Supporters of the Israeli position and supporters of the Palestinians disagree strongly on the issues, but their relationship remains respectful.

"The relationship is definitely civil," Saleh said. "We make attempts to reach out to them, go to their speaker events and try to keep a dialogue open."

Silverman said the current dialogue between her group and Committee for Justice in Palestine is practically non-existent, but the potential is there.

Feminist devoted to OSU

By Joshua Foster Lantern staff writer

College is a time in which most people start to form their identity. But for Nikki Smolter, her calling in life came at the ripe age of twelve

At twelve years old, Smolter helped her father campaign for a good friend running for a local office in Pittsburgh, her hometown. She went around town with her father, putting up yard signs and watching her father talk to people to get them to vote in the election.

"She did the political thing at a very young age and got an early taste of what is was like to be involved," said Presley Smolter, father of Nikki Smolter. "We just went around campaigning on a grassroots level, standing side-byside as we put up signs. It was a great experience for her, even though my friend did not win in the election."

Smolter, a junior in women's studies and criminology, has continued her contributions to the Ohio State community. She has been active on campus since her freshman year. Smolter has been a member of Undergraduate Student Government, been a part of the Association of Women Students, been involved in the Images of You conference, co-produced winter quarter's Vagina Monologues and worked as a resident adviser in Stradley Hall.

"I love to do projects and programs all around campus. I do anything that I think can benefit humanity," she said.

Nikki Smolter identifies as an adamant feminist and is very invested in the women's movement. She has started the first women's studies honors society at OSU, Triota, and is proud of her participation in the Vagina Monologues "Giving women a voice that is done in the Vagina Monologues is important," she said. "Some embarrassed or shy. Hearing people reaffirm and validate experiences is a very powerful thing."

Nikki Smolter not only acted in the productions, but was also in scheduling events.

county commissioner. She also is a resident manager in Canfield Hall and will continue the job next

"Sometimes I feel that this job is becoming my life, but I love it. It gives me a chance to help so many people. I have learned that every person is so amazing in their own way," she said.

However, not all of the time Nikki Smolter has committed to the community has gone off without a hitch. In last year's USG presidential election, she ran for vice president on the ticket with Chris Peters. A day before voting was to begin, Smolter dropped out of the race. She said it was the worst and the best moment she has had at OSU.

"It was a great experience because I pushed myself really took her sisters to their practices hard and put myself in the spotlight, which I don't normally do. It was a big risk that I normally do not take," Nikki Smolter said. However, it brought out a different side of me I had never seen before. All in all, I would have changed some things about the campaign, but I don't regret doing it.

She said some residents in her building were very upset with her and some ill feelings surrounded her in her RA job because Peters was also on her staff. Nikki Smolter said she will never run for any kind of office again.

It was part accident, part fate ing, but only desserts. that led Nikki Smolter to be a Buckeye. One week before she planned on going to see the OSU campus, her father was involved in a near-fatal car accident. It was then that she decided to attend a school close to her family.

'She didn't have a good feeling of what to do in the situation. All her friends went to Penn State, and she wanted to grow more. I was laid up in the hospital, and she wanted to be close to her family to help them," Presley Smolter said. "That's just the kind of person that Nikki is. She is wise beyond her women might have felt alone, years and is always willing to help people out in their time of need."

During that time, Nikki many ways, her father said. She mind to."

and games. She also handled her own loans for college.

"She really was like the other parent for the family during that summer before she left for college," Presley Smolter said.

Whenever Nikki Smolter gets a free moment, she reads. Last summer, she read at least 35 books and will read during any spare moment she has.

"I love reading and just, in general, learning. I just can't seem to learn enough. There is always something new to know and something new to see," she said.

Nikki Smolter also enjoys cook-

'Nikki is the best baker. She is all about getting women out of the kitchen, but she absolutely loves cooking," Ulseth said.

Nikki Smolter's friends and family said she always downplays how much good she has done for other people.

"Nikki has always been headstrong, intelligent and responsible. Most people at home know little about her accomplishments because she is quiet about them. But they should know that she has done so much to help others and is not selfish at all," Presley Smolter said. "She is just like me in so many ways, but better. With determination like hers, she can Smolter took care of her family in accomplish anything she sets her

Sunday liquor sales right for times

Liquor sales could no longer be limited to six days a week as a new bill proposes allowing Sunday liquor agencies in certain areas. While restaurants, bars and certain vendors are allowed to sell liquor, grocery stores and state liquor stores have been prohibited from selling anything except beer and wine. Under Senate Bill 164, alcohol purchases would be permitted from 1 p.m.-midnight on Sundays.

Prohibition of Sunday liquor sales has existed since 1933 when a federal law passed certain alcohol restrictions including times of sales. Long before liquor legislation was enacted, Christian groups such as the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the National Prohibition Party pushed to prevent liquor availability, as it went against Christian doctorine, and one of God's commandments designating Sunday as a day of rest.

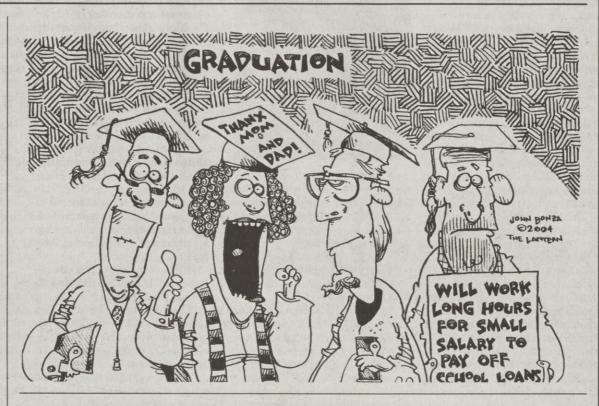

But tradition is about to change with the government allowing states to decide whether Sunday liquor sales are permissible. Ohio officials are supportive of the new bill.

Because even the Sabbath does not mean the same as it used to 50 years ago, legislation needs to be passed to update esoteric laws that have no validity except historical presidence. People are already allowed to purchase beer and wine, which can have the same effect as liquor depending on the quantity. Liquor is already available in restaurants and bars, and the new bill simply allows people to drink at home.

This is also good news for grocery stores as Sunday is one of the busiest shopping days of the week. Allow-ing stores the option to sell alcohol is a convenience to customers, who are using their weekend to shop or have parties. For some people, the weekend is when they drink. The government's place is not to pass moral judgement, therefore, liquor availability should be an option.

Meanwhile, on a state level, about $12 million will be added to the budget through sales tax. The money gen-erated could address several funding problems plaguing Ohio, while freeing people's rights to drink. The bill by no means sends a certain message regarding alcohol consumption or condones alcohol abuse, but it updates an old law that has little impact or control on how and when people drink anyway. Cheers.

Beer: a campus culture

of the Internet, and according to recent statistics, we are a culture of drinkers, partiers and often times, alcohol abusers. Note that the term "we" is used to describe college campuses and students as a whole and is intended as a broad generalization for recent campus trends.

According to the Core Institute in a study taken in 2001 of 54,444 students from 131 two- and four-year United States colleges, 64.6 percent of underage students and 65.1 percent of on-campus residents consume alcohol. Another shocking statistic is, according to an Associated Press article published in 2002, 1,400 college students are killed each year in an alcohol-related accident. This statistic should "change the views of people who see drinking on campus as little more than a rite of passage," Washington researchers and several university officials said.

There has been a huge shift from alcohol as a novelty to alcohol as a scheduled event, a lifestyle and a way of life. Social drinking and casual partaking in said beverages is stereotypically associated with the campus atmosphere. But with things like pre-gaming and power hours, weekends are starting earlier and college in general is starting to portray the belief drinking is necessary to have fun on and off campus.

There have been numerous clichéd articles about binge drinking, underage drinking and dangerous behavior in and around college campuses regarding irresponsible drinking habits. These are all important and equally valid concerns, but the issue that provides more insight to these problems re are a fast-food generation, ting ready for the venture out into public. raised on MTV and products But apparently no outfit is complete without bonging a few beers and taking back a few shots. Once this has been completed, ladies put on some new lipstick, guys put on a little cologne, and they all stumble on their way.

These are not new habits to say the least, but they are definitely growing habits. The above statement is an exaggeration and a generalization to make a point that, according to recent trends, it's an increasing feeling by many college students that you simply cannot have fun without getting trashed first.

For years, the issue of drinking has been approached as a "problem" that requires a solution," and for years, this has been the only way to look at the issue. Binge drinking and underage drinking have become less of a problem, or at least less of a set of isolate situations, and more of a culture and a lifestyle for some college students.

The hardest part of this whole issue is trying to understand exactly why some students feel that in order to have fun or deal with life they must be under the influence, to which I provide no answers, because frankly I just don't know. I don't understand the culture behind alcohol abuse, and that's what I'm calling it, because it's getting out of hand.

People need to remember and need to be reminded that for one, there are many opportunities to have fun drinking responsibly or alcohol free. Second, there are many students who are trying to break through the partying-college-student stereotype and portray the students and the campus as a group of people moving in the right direction ... away from alcohol abuse.

I am no angel, and I never claimed to be,

YOUR VIEWS Holiday means respect

While many Americans commonly regard Memorial Day as the official start of summer, we need to remember its true purpose as a holiday.

This sacred day is set aside for pride, honor, remembrance, and most importantly, respect in one's nation. In this time of desperation and turmoil for our country, we must exhibit respect and reverence for those who died defending our homeland.

Unfortunately, our country is slowly losing sight of the true purpose of this holiday.

Memorial Day is truly a unique and special holiday to America because it is a day reserved for civilians to show their appreciation to those who sacrificed their lives for the protection and preservation of America's freedoms. However, throughout the years, it seems as though the holiday has lost its meaning to become a day of barbecues and bonfires rather than one of remembrance and appreciation. I certainly would not dismiss or disregard the typical festivities we all know and love. In fact, these gatherings are an essential part inremembering and appreciating those who have served our country so faithfully and selflessly, but we must keep in mind the original intent of this day.

With thousands of troops overseas, this holiday is particularly relevant in 2004 and more important than ever. Everyday people are called to fight for us and die as a result. Unfortunately, we will never be able to personally thank all of these soldiers, and therefore it is more than appropriate that we dedicate one day of the year to commemorate these noble people for their extraordinary service. Indeed, their level of patriotism is a true testament to their character and dedication, without which we might be denied many of the everyday luxuries we take for granted.

Moreover, those who have lost loved ones in this current war in Iraq will experience a type of loss most of us never will and to continue casually brushing this day off without truly appreciating that sacrifice would be to dismiss their grief.

Like Christmas and Easter, it seems as though Memorial Day is becoming a holiday that is no longer an accurate representation of its original purpose. Most holidays in America have lost their meaning and significance and have become excuses for parties and presents, and what a shame it would be if Memorial Day turns into one of them.

Ten years ago Oregon passed a voter-initiated law that allowed doctors to administer lethal overdoses to terminally ill patients with less than six months to live. Universally lauded by advocates of state-assisted suicide, the law has recently been under attack by the Bush administration. Attorney General John Ashcroft has attempted to undermine the so-called Death With Dignity Act, arguing the medicine used is in violation the Controlled Substance Act.

A U.S. Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday in a split decision that Ashcroft overstepped his bounds by trying to block the law, finding that the federal government has no jurisdiction on medical practices - an arena that is traditionally left to the states.

This is the second time the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has rebuked a challenge to the law since Ashcroft was appointed attorney general, and the court most likely won't hear it again. The language of the court decision was unusually narrow in its prohibition of federal interference, and while Ashcroft could hypothetically still appeal to the Supreme Court, experts believe the court is unlikely to hear the case.

While this is a victory for states rights, it is also a step in the right direction. At least two other states have considered a similar law — Hawaii and Vermont — but have pulled back the legislation for various reasons. Oregon's law was landmark, and now the responsibility now falls to voters and lawmakers in other states to follow suit.

Death With Dignity Act was developed to ensure the existence a humane way for the terminally ill to end pain. The law includes provisions that require the concurrence of two doctors that the patient is dying but retains the capacity to decide to take the drugs themselves. These safeguards protect against abuse of the program.

Essentially, Ashcroft's attempts to derail this legislation were house-of-cards arguments that had little to do with the case itself. His misapplication of the Controlled Substance Act — intended to prevent medical drug trafficking — is disturbing, to say the least.

When Oregon passed the law in 1994, Ashcroft — then Missouri senator — petitioned former Attorney General Janet Renos' to speak out against state-assisted suicide, a request she declined. In 2001, Ashcroft tried unsuccessfully to overturn the same law. It is obvious his politics have been central to this battle, and his attempted misuse of the Controlled Substance Act paints him in a very poor light.

State assisted-suicide laws allow an individual to decide on his or her own right to die, a request so modest as to seem self-evident. Opponents of such laws find themselves on shaky ground — both legally and morally. Having the federal government decide such a personal decision would be wrong, and the 9th circuit was right to uphold the law.

Born again after college

Tith two weeks to go to graduation, the light at the end of the real world birth canal is beginning to make itself known. I get to take my taxpayer-loaned diploma all the way to the top — touting college-acquired abilities in photography and journalism nightly while bussing tables at the nearest Max and Crapplebee's. That is, if I can show the greasy lunch manager that I'm fit and qualified to join the restaurant's elite staff. Then, and only then, will I acquire the ability to participate in the expanding economy by applying my 60 or so dollars of daily wage

I feel a cause for concern though. Unless I can afford a one-way ticket out of the United States., I can foresee federal debt collectors threatening labor camp internment if I even think about uttering the word "default" in regards to my student loans. The $100 per month will be in addition to newly acquired expenses such as health and car insurance, as well as solo survival sans parental assistance.

So I've began pondering how I will prolong my existence in tandem with basic human needs such as food, water and shelter. The first bet is to continue the practice of acquired skills. I'll try the press, I'll try photography. High-demand positions that pay jack, not that I'm cynical or anything. But I'd be happy either way with those. Come on, share my idealist vision of an exciting career in image production. Just don't give that bum on the street a hard time because I, I mean, he means well when he offers to take your Polaroid for a $1.50. After all, being a professional just means you get paid for it.

Pessimistically, I've felt forced to prepare fallback plans such as busing or waiting tables. College taught me to think beyond traditional molds though, and in that spirit I've considered alternative methods of subsistence outside of extremes ranging from cubicle to welfare.

First I plan on approaching a number of the world's conglomerate companies and let them know I'm open to letting them sponsor my life. I understand the broadness of that statement, but I'm willing to appear in advertisements or sport whatever logos they'd like me to don. Naming rights aren't off the table either, I just hope they have a witty ad exec. who'll conjure up a snappy name like Johnson & Johnson James or Ian Altria Group, Inc. You know, something catchy.

I haven't ruled lab rat out as a possibility either. I donated plasma during my first two years at Ohio State, so I've seen the worst of medicine's perverted variations. And shoot, pumping myself full of various forms of cheap alcohol for five years didn't kill me, so the latest experimental eye drops and laxatives should only improve my resiliency.

The issue of shelter — how to maintain and afford it - is a large source of concern. In Columbus it's one thing — cheap living is fairly easy to come by. In a life outside this beloved cut-rate city it might be myself - and whoever answers my classified ad — sharing rent, utilities and good times inside my — hopefully still mobile — 1987 Volkswagen Scirocco.

If that doesn't work out though, I'm sure I could just keep it as a one-bedroom. I think I — and my lady friends — would appreciate the privacy it would afford for our intimate moments, and I wouldn't have to worry about anyone but myself forgetting to do the dishes in the river or leaving clothes all over the front seat.

A big part of my post-college concerns I think center on just that - the idea of postcollege. I feel like the morose pregnant woman who carried this little bundle of joy around inside her for a comfortable amount of time and lost it to the evils of birth. Sure, he caused mood swings and morning sickness, sleep deprivation and psychosis, but what am I going to do now that my little guy is out of the womb and on his own? Get depressed and knocked up by college all over again?

Well, I refuse to be that kind of whore, er, girl, I mean guy. No I feel I could be best suited being on the giving end of this post-partum college anxiety/depression maelstrom. Therefore, I propose get knocked up just one more time and give graduate school a shot. Once I've had her, I'll hop into the system of impregnating ideals into young minds by teaching them useless tools of the real world such as journalism or photography.

As Americans, we owe a certain respect and gratitude to those who fought and are still fighting for our basic freedoms. At the very least, we can take a moment to wholeheartedly appreciate and reflect on all that has been done for us. In fact, it is vital that we take time from our hot dogs and sing-a-longs this Memorial Day to pay our respects to the red, white and blue.

Track preps Hated rival defeats Buckeyes for regional

By Cornelis Trouw Lantern sports writer

Members of Ohio State's track and field team will try to run, jump and throw their way into the national spotlight when they compete in the NCAA Mideast Regionals today and tomorrow in Baton Rouge, La.

The Buckeyes will send 19 athletes to compete in the event which is a prelude to the NCAA championships. Coach Russ Rogers said that he thinks several members of his team have a chance to win their events at the regional meet.

'I think Dan Taylor can win the shot put and the hammer for sure," Rogers said. "Joel Brown can win the hurdles. Aaron Fisher definitely has a chance to win the steeplechase. Amarachi (Ukabam) can win the shot put, and Rosalind (Goodwin) can win the triple jump.

Rogers said he is especially hopeful for senior hurdler Molly Logan. Rogers said a win in Louisiana could launch Logan into bigger things

"The one I really want to win is Molly (Logan)," Rogers said. "She's got the ability to do it, but she doesn't put in the effort. I think if she were to win one, it would change her whole attitude about it. She might train a little harder and win at (the NCAA championships).'

Logan, who ran the 100 meter hurdles in 13.06 seconds on April 17, said she hopes to run even faster this weekend.

"My goal is to break 13 seconds in the hurdles," Logan said. "There's a possibility I can win. The girl that's the top seed - I beat her last year, and hopefully that can happen again." OSU will be well-represented in the women's jumping events. Juniors Shayla Moore, a 2003 All-American in the triple jump, and Goodwin, the 2004 Big Ten outdoor champ in the same event, will compete at the regional. Goodwin, who qualified in both the triple jump and the high jump, said she is fatigued from her showing at the Big Ten championships but is ready to compete again.

'I'm a little tired, but it's definitely something to build on and definitely something I want to build on," Goodwin said. "My adrenaline doesn't kick in until I get to the runway. Everything up to that point is a matter of getting all of the little things down."

Goodwin also said a trip to the national NCAA Championships in Austin, Texas would be an impressive accomplishment.

"There's pretty good competition in our region, so my main goal is to get into the top five and get

MINNEAPOLIS — The Ohio State baseball team suffered a frustrating 10-4 loss to the much-despised Michigan Wolverines yesterday in its first game of the Big Ten tournament in Minneapolis, Minn.

Michigan (34-24, 19-13 Big Ten) scored all 10 of its runs in the first two innings, including six in the first. Wolverine catcher Jeff Kunkel drove in a run with a single in the first and crushed a three-run homer over the left field wall in the second off Buckeye junior right-hander Mike Madsen to put UM ahead, 10-0.

"I was leaving a lot of balls up," Madsen said. "When I wasn't leaving them up, I was leaving them out (over the plate). I was leaving them all over."

Madsen was charged with nine earned runs and eight hits in 12/3 innings of work in just his fourth loss of the season.

'It can be done; we did it last year," Kinnear said. "I think everybody knows that we can do it. We southpaw and co-captain Josh Newwall so we'll come out ready to play."

In the conference tournament's 23-year history, no team has ever won the title three years in a row.

With the loss, Todd's career record against Michigan fell to 47-32. The Buckeyes would have hosted the double-elimination tournament in Columbus had they captured two of the three games against Minnesota (35-20, 21-10) in last weekend's series at Siebert Field. The final game of the series was rained out, but the Golden Gophers had already clinched the Big Ten title with their 2-1 series victory. OSU settled for the No. 2 seed, which also has its perks. The top two seeds received a bye in Wednesday's first round of the six-team tournament.

The Buckeyes meet the No. 4 Michigan State Spartans in a surviveor-go-home battle today at 12:05 p.m. OSU took three of the four games against the Spartans (33-25, 19-13) this season in East Lansing. Senior play well with our backs against the man (7-6, 4.10) will be on the mound for the Buckeyes.

ADAM JARDY Rec Sports wrecks sports

I have been itching to write this column for quite some time. All I have been waiting for is an excuse — a reason why I could voice my feelings on this subject. I sat and waited for the perfect time

The time has come.

My disdain for the management of the Ohio State Department of Recreational Sports has reached an all-time high. There have been incidents in the past that have made me view their organization with disdain, but it has now evolved far beyond mere scorn.

I play many intramural sports. If you read my columns regularly, you have probably picked up on the fact that I play intramural ice hockey. What you may not know is that during the spring I also play soccer and softball, as well as other sports throughout the year.

Let me preface this story by saying that I have never played on particularly outstanding softball teams. Until tournament play this season, we had won a total of one game in the past three years, so when we put together a run in the tournament this season by winning three consecutive games and advancing to the championship game, it was a remarkable feat. We were like the Cleveland Indians in the greatest baseball movie of all time, "Major League."

After winning Tuesday night, we were told to check the Web site in the next day to find out when the championship game would be. The rumor was the game would be held sometime next week. It was a shocking surprise when they finally posted the brackets around 5 p.m., announcing that our game was to take place that same evening at 9 p.m.

Luckily, we managed to round everyone up on such at short notice. People cut class and left golf courses to play for the most prized of all sports awards — an intramural championship T-shirt.

But it was not meant to be. Bucknutty (that's our team name) ended up on the short a massive bl other team trounced us, and won fair and square. Or did they? Midway through the third inning which lasted nearly 15 minutes and yielded doubledigit runs for our opponent, it was discovered that they were using an illegal bat. According to the first meeting of the year for softball, if a team is caught using an illegal bat before a game it is not allowed to use it. If it is caught using one during a game, however, it has to forfeit that game. Apparently the officials were unaware of this rule. The bat was removed from the game and our demolition continued. I honestly don't know the final score. and I don't want to.

Top-seeded Roger Federer of Switzerland stretches to return the ball to Nicolas Kiefer of Germany during their second-round match in the French Open tennis tournament at the Roland Garros Stadium in Paris yesterday.

By Steven Wine Associated Press

PARIS — Serena Williams drew both jeers and cheers yesterday at the French Open as she rallied twice to beat 17-year-old Russian Maria Kirilenko 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

The second-seeded Williams won the final four games to reach the third round.

Williams was booed and reduced to tears last year at Roland Garros when she lost a tumultuous semifinal to Justine Henin-Hardenne. The crowd was less hostile this time, but scattered whistles and boos were directed at the American late in the match.

Other fans shouted in support of her, and when she closed out the victory, there was more cheering than hooting as she blew kisses to the fans.

"They got a good match," Williams said. "I really don't hear the crowd too much — at least today I didn't. I was focused on keeping a ball in, which seemed to be a huge task."

On the men's side, defending champion Juan Carlos Ferrero lost to Russian Igor Andreev 6-4, 6-2, 6-3. Ferrero, seeded fourth, nearly withdrew before the tournament because of bruised ribs, but he played after receiving painkiller injections.

Henin-Hardenne, the defending women's champ, lost Wednesday in the upset-filled tournament.

Kirilenko, who was ranked 100th and playing at Roland Garros for the first time, showed poise from the start against Williams. The slender, agile Russian chased down balls all over the court, matched Williams' aggressive shotmaking and was more consistent for much of the match.

"I think she was very nervous today," Kirilenko said. "She played ... not good."

By the seventh game, Williams was screaming at herself. In the third set, when she fell behind 4-2, she threw her racket. She regrouped and didn't lose another game.

"I think I made like a thousand mistakes," said Williams, the 2002 champion. "I'm going to be on the practice court all day tomorrow.

Venus Williams and Jennifer Capriati also advanced to the third round, which is better than any American man did.

The No. 4-seeded Williams survived a sluggish start to beat Jelena Kostanic 6-3, 6-3, and No. 7 Capriati, who won the tournament in 2001, defeated Kveta Peschke 7-5, 6-3.

After Andy Roddick's loss Wednesday, no U.S. men reached the third round for the first time in 31 years. Capriati, the Williams sisters and Lindsay Davenport give the United States four top-10 women still in the tournament.

'I guess it's up to us to keep America alive

Maybe we should have used illegal gloves.

This is not my first incident with Recreational Sports. If a student does not compete for a team during the regular season they are not allowed to play in the tournament. During flag football last fall, one of my teammates played one regular season game with us, but it happened to be a game where the players were not required to sign in.

When the playoffs rolled around, that same player participated in our first-round victory. But when they checked the roster and saw that he hadn't signed in during the season, our victory was taken away from us.

This makes two times in one school year that I have lost games in tournaments due to failures in management by the Department of Recreational Sports. I hate losing, but I can accept it when a team flat-out beats mine. When victory is taken away because of negligence on the part of management, I feel that I have a reason to be upset.

I do realize that Recreational Sports does some things very well and plays an important role on this campus. Ohio State has one of the finest intramural programs in the country, and without it my dreams of athletic

Honors dancers get chance to shine at concert

By Stacey Runion Lantern Arts Writer

While many students will be studying for upcoming finals or celebrating because summer is around the corner, the seniors of the Ohio State Department of Dance are preparing for their big time to shine.

The annual Springboard: Senior Honors Dance Concert will take place through Sunday in Sullivant Hall Theatre as part of the Spring Student Arts Festival. Performances will vary in style and music and will be created by each senior, for which they will receive a final grade.

"For (seniors), this is a required project for graduation that we receive class credit for," said Melissa Thompson, senior in dance and choreographer for a piece. "It's an independent study that focuses on this upcoming performance and prepares us for it through critiques, suggestions and progress.

This will be the first time that many of the dance seniors will be performing or choreographing their very own work and ideas. It is also the first year the concert will display work by each senior in the graduating class. In years past, certain students were chosen to perform and not all were able to give a final concert for the public.

"These seniors make up the worked really hard, and we want-ed to show that so we extended the performances so that all of the seniors could show their work."

For many seniors, this has been a different journey; learning to work with others and portray what they want and how they want it to be performed on stage.

"This is a first for a lot of us to do a lot of new things," Thompson said. "It's been challenging to learn to depend on each other for both our strengths and weaknesses."

Although this is mostly a modern, contemporary dance performance, both music and dance will vary. Many styles — jazz, folk, classical, electronic, and popular music — will accompany the different pieces.

Each piece tells a story, allowing each senior to individually express their talent, skill and creativity throughout their education in the dance department.

"It's going to be very exciting to actually make it happen for the students and to see a combination of what they have learned in the four years they have been here at OSU," Covey said.

The students have been working consistently through practices and rehearsals since winter quarter, some even earlier. # Novel explores family life in war era

By lan Story Lantern staff writer

With the war in Iraq endlessly raging on, publishing houses have released a multitude of books attempting to explain the causes of the war and help the reader get an insider's view of those who wage war.

There has been Richard Clarke's "Against All Enemies," a scornful account of the Bush administration's handling of the events leading up to the Sept. 11 attacks and its plan to go into Iraq. There is also Bob Woodward's "Plan of Attack," which aims to chart the progress of Bush and his war council, through interviews, as they develop a strategy to invade the desert nation.

But few books available right now explain the conflict of any war as clearly and brilliantly as Kate Wenner's "Dancing with Einstein." It is an engrossing tale about Marea, a young woman on the brink of 30, returning home after wandering the world for seven years. Her father Jonas died in car accident when she was 12. He was a nuclear physicist for the Manhattan Project; ironically, Marea was born the day America dropped the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima, subsequently ending World War II.

Marea has yet to come to terms with her father's involvement in building the most destructive tool of war the world has ever seen. Complicating matters harsh political freedom-seeking lesbian Nina Wolf, more is Marea's mother Virginia, a practicing Quaker old world Angela Iris and the seductive pseudo-Junand pacifist. She condemns her husband's association with the men who built the bomb and fears her father was directly responsible for the deaths of thousands of innocent Japanese. the same time adding a lighter side to the story is Marea's surrogate grandfather, the world's famous physicist Albert Einstein. Ashamed to be hailed as the father of the atomic bomb, Einstein sides with Virginia in arguments over Jonas' constant participation in bomb building.

escaped from Austria as a teenager just weeks before his parents were murdered brutally at the hands of an invading Nazi Germany army. Jonas' efforts serve, in his mind, as protection of his family from another evil regime and possibly his own despair. But the efforts to protect his family have also contributed to the alienation from them as well.

The book is split between Marea as a 30-year-old woman and Marea as a young girl, dreaming of nuclear annihilation at the hands of her father. It opens in 1975 upon Marea's return to New York City where she had left seven years earlier to vagabond aimlessly around the world. She quickly finds an apartment in Greenwich Village and a job at an organic bakery, Dawn's Early Rising. She spends her days riding the subway cars and dreaming of her past travels.

Through intense conversations with Andrew, Marea decides it is time to purge herself of her haunted past. She is compelled to find the truth about her father's death and reconcile with the mother who has pushed her away.

The removal of these internal conflicts and Marea's strange and soulful return to stability will come through the help of four therapists. The narrative of Marea's life is told from the comforts of four different easy chairs. All four espouse different paths to peace (by-the-book psychoanalyst Colin Ross, fear of the Soviet Union and communism. Jonas reader is exposed to the truest nature of Einstein, a man with a heart bigger than his well-known mind. The most interesting aspect of their relationship is Marea's perception of the mythic Einstein as just an ordinary man, all the while possessing an almost god-like reverence of her father. She worships her father the same way others fall to the feet of Einstein, yet she confides in Einstein her growing fears and apprehensions of war.

Her devotion to her father weakens with every biting word exchanged between Jonas and Virginia. Einstein becomes the blanket under which Marea lies for protection from the war of words in the Hoffman house.

The book glides flawlessly between 1975 and the 50's. Marea's therapy however is stunted when all four therapists halt sessions for the month of August and Andrew shuts down the bakery. Upon this hiatus, Marea reluctantly pays a visit to her mother in Princeton, N.I

The estrangement of mother and daughter has never been put so grim or militaristic as it is in "Dancing with Einstein." Tension brims from every page while Marea returns home and finds a mother who is as belittling and inquisitive as ever. Marea aims to find the truth behind the frightening legacy her father has left them.

Marea discovers through a series of journal entries that Einstein served as her own father's replacement. the broken man that had become of her father. Castigated from both Virginia and his confidant Einstein, the strongest character-driven novels in recent years. It Jonas found himself pinned to a wall from which is a deep, enriching story of conflict between people there is no escape. He is losing Einstein and more "Dancing with Einstein" is a powerfully crafted importantly has lost his daughter, who he describes as the only true love in his life. Marea cries as she recollects the moment, the relationship between her father and Einstein crumbled. Heaped in a furious argument of God and war, Einstein had doubled over in pain. One year later Einstein was dead, with no notes of apology sent from either man. "Dancing with Einstein" is also a tale of the power instant upon awakening near a river in a Peruvian of parents. The undying ties one has to a mother or father and how a tragic event scars the once pristine memory of them. Marea's unresolved relationship with The interaction between the genius Einstein and her father prevents her from having meaningful com-War defense of America is heightened by his own the young Marea is startlingly heartwarming. Kate Wenner's "Dancing with Einstein" is one of who were meant to love each other. It is an exploration of history's impact on young minds. The threats of nuclear destruction conveyed in this work are timely and have substance. It speaks of war and the destruction of innocent lives that is seen every day on newscasts of burning Iraqi villages and dead soldiers. Dancing with Einstein is worthy of a second and third read. Wenner triumphs in writing a story of spiritual proportions; she gives new life to the mythic Einstein. The story is touching, immense and completely believable.

Marea is a character that will not be easily forgotten Provoking the ethical debate even further but at once the book is shut. She is acutely aware of the smaller, quieter moments in life. Marea recounts, through Wenner's deftly structured prose, moments of connectedness with the natural world, such as one jungle as hundreds of tiny butterflies danced around her bare toes.

The Lantern reserves the right to reject advertising that denigrates individuals, groups or organizations based on race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, religion, mental or physical capacity, veteran's status, age or sexual orientation. The Lantern Business Manager will refer questionable advertising to the Publications Committee of the School of Journalism and Communication. The committee will recommend a decision on whether to publish the advertising to the Director of the school.

- Copy must be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for special publications whose 2. deadlines will be announced.
- 3. An advertisement is required to occupy at least as many inches in height as columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered a "full column" (21 inches) advertisement and charged accordingly.
- 4. Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
- Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.
- A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
- No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than seven column inches.
- If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee.
- The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- 10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- 11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication.
- 12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise

LeBron gives back to home court

By Tom Withers Associated Press

AKRON - LeBron James isn't going to the Olympics this summer to be a cheerleader.

Although the Cleveland Cavaliers' star will be the youngest member of a U.S. basketball team stocked with superstars, James expects to be more than a role player.

"I gotta earn my stripes," the NBA's Rookie of the Year said. "I might start on the bench, but that doesn't mean I'm going to end up on the bench in Athens."

James was added to a fluctuating U.S. roster that could change further before the team heads to Greece. Tim Duncan, Allen Iverson and Stephon Marbury are among the players. who have committed while others like Shaquille O'Neal, Jermaine O'Neal, Tracy McGrady and Mike Bibby are on the fence

The new hardwood floor inside the Ed Davis Community Center now features a LeBron James logo at halfcourt and bears little resemblance to the rubber surface the 19year-old played on as a youngster.

"It wasn't that good," James said. "But going to go over there and come back with a back then it didn't matter. I'd play on any court, it didn't matter about traction or noth-James was back in his hometown ing like that. It's amazing how they switched from St. Vincent-St. Mary High School, family members and friends, James helped pull a giant ribbon off one of the baskets to officially open the facility.

The ribbon briefly got tangled up on the rim, a problem James quickly solved by jumping and yanking it free.

Surrounded by wide-eyed school children, James was then thrown a ball and asked to take a ceremonial first shot.

here," Capriati said.

L'Equipe, France's leading daily sports newspaper, ran a small headline yesterday saying "U.S. Go Home." Written in English, the headline accompanied a chart comparing American results with other countries.

"It's a different game out on the clay," Capriati said. "For most of the American guys, it's difficult out there for them. For women it's more of an all-court game."

jean, who's French but lives in Boca Raton, Fla. Grosjean, seeded 10th, was upset by Italian qualifier Potito Starace 7-6 (6), 6-3, 6-4.

Second-round winners on the men's side included topranked Roger Federer and three-time champion Gustavo Kuerten. They'll meet in the third round.

"I'll have to prepare really well," Federer said. "I'll have to try to be more aggressive than he is without overdoing things."

Federer, 34-3 this year, is seeking his first French Open title.

pointing season with a strong result in the regional.

"I'm trying to pull one good distance out this weekend because I've been struggling," Moore said. "I feel good about this weekend, and I'm just trying to get in the top five so I can go to nationals."

"All of this right now is mental. You have been training the whole season, but now you have to have your mind prepared to go to the next step. That's what I'm working on more than my jumps.

With only a few weeks left in the season, Rogers said it is hard to judge his team's performance on the whole. While some athletes reached their goals, others did not, he said. "I'm happy for certain athletes, but there are certain athletes that make you 🥡 unhappy. That's why you can never be happy as a coach," Rogers said.
