Illegal recruiters target of proposed House bill

By Pete Swingle
Lantern staff writer

A bill aimed at halting "ruthless" agents from "disreputable recruitment of collegiate athletes" in Ohio was recently introduced in the state House of Representatives.

The bill would require professional sports agents who recruit in Ohio to be licensed by the state's Department of Commerce. The bill lists rules for agents to follow and sets penalties to be faced by those who break them.

"This bill is aimed at the crooks and ruthless ones (agents) operating in Ohio," Rep. John P. Stozich, R-Findlay, said Tuesday.

"We have a serious problem with disreputable recruitment of collegiate athletes," a press statement by Stozich, sponsor of the bill, states. "This problem was all too well accentuated in the recent dismissal of Cris Carter from the OSU football team," the statement says.

Stozich, on the phone, said his bill would not harm reputable agents, but the "disreputable ones are never punished, and they should be. The player is punished, Coach (Earle) Bruce is punished, the school is punished, but the agent responsible is not."

The bill would penalize agents for:

- inducing a student athlete to agree to a contract with a sports agent or professional team before the athlete's college eligibility ends.

- offering anything of value to a college or university employee for the referral of a student athlete to the agent.

- falsifying documents when applying for an agent's license.

- committing fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation in persuading a person to sign or verbally agree to a contract with an agent or professional team.

Penalties set by the bill would forfeit a $25,000 security bond the agent must post when applying for a license, impose a fine of up to $10,000 for each offense, require the agent to compensate the injured person, and revoke or suspend the agent's license.

Stozich said he gave the bill high priority after OSU's record-holding receiver Cris Carter lost his senior year football eligibility for taking money from agents.

"Research on the bill began three months ago," Stozich said. "While the Legislative Service Commission was drafting it, the news of Carter's loss of eligibility came out. The person working on the bill called to ask when I wanted it. I said, 'yesterday.'"

Task force seeks grants without needed support

By Pete Swingle
Lantern staff writer

A Franklin County narcotics task force being organized will have to apply for grant money without the necessary support to meet state guidelines.

Franklin County Sheriff Earl O. Smith, whose support is needed according to the guidelines, said he will not give the task force his support because he isn't convinced the budget will allow the task force to do its job.

"When I saw the budget, I said, 'Count me out,'" Smith said. "It won't come close to meeting my needs."

"Supposedly they're going after the big dealers in the county. When the budget's broken down, it will only provide $50,000 in buy money. I need more than that."

Buy money are the funds offered to dealers as payment for a drug purchase, Smith said.

"Major dealers ask $60,000 for two kilograms of marijuana," he said, "but they only are willing to deal in four kilo amounts. It doesn't take much math to figure more money is needed."

The Governor's Office of Criminal Justice Services guidelines list documented support of the sheriff's office, the county prosecutor and chiefs of police of the largest municipalities as necessary for grant applications.

Smith and William Curlis, executive administrator at the county prosecutor's office, said the guidelines don't have the force of a law. Therefore, the guidelines are not a criteria for the grant money.

The grant application is now being prepared said task force chairman, Westerville Police Chief Ronald Shaw. It must be submitted Friday.

The Columbus Branch of the NAACP challenged the task force's legality without the participation of Smith.

"We see the task force as a positive move as long as there is someone to go to who will be accountable," said Karen Hicks, third vice president for the NAACP's Columbus branch. "Right now we're trying to confirm who the accountable one will be."

Shaw said the task force will answer to the governor's office, the federal government, and each participating police agency will answer to its mayor and city council.

Curlis said County Prosecutor Michael Miller has sent his support to the task force organizers.

"Thirty-five agencies, counting federal and state agencies, have joined," Shaw said. "The Drug Enforcement Agency, State Department of Taxation, and State Liquor Control, along with the Franklin County commissioners, are all involved."

The task force meets a growing need, Shaw said. "For the first time, we're going to have total cooperation of agencies involved in Franklin County."

Move puts dean one step closer to goal

By Heather Loughley
Lantern staff writer

Seventeen years ago, Mitchel D. Livingston set a goal — to become a college president.

The 43-year-old dean of student life has decided he wants to reach that goal by age 50.

Taking the job as vice president for student affairs at the State University of New York at Albany was "the most logical step," in that process, Livingston said. "It's an absolutely perfect personal and professional opportunity for me and my wife and family."

Perfect aside from the fact that he has to leave Ohio State.

"I love Ohio State, but in order to advance my career, it's necessary for me to move out if I want to move up," he said.

Reaching a college presidency through student affairs is not a traditional route, but as Livingston states, "I'm not a traditional person."

Self-described as the university's severest critic, he is especially vocal regarding minority student retention and the university's performance in diversifying its students, faculty and staff.

"There's a hell of a retention problem at this university, especially among minorities," said Livingston, who chairs the OSU's committee on student retention.

It's necessary for me to move out if I want to move up.

— Mitchel Livingston

He said he believes President Edward H. Jennings is committed to diversifying Ohio State. "But the question is, do we have the appropriate financial commitment and the appropriate strategies in place to make that happen. Right now, we don't have either of those."

A 10-year decline in black enrollment at Ohio State points to the need to attack the problem in a different way, he said.

"Society must learn how to serve all of its citizens. You can't push them off to second-class schools," he said.

The commitment that the State University of New York has made to recruit and retain minorities was a big factor in Livingston's decision.

He said the president at Albany university, Vincent O'Leary, adopted a policy of recruiting no less than 20 percent minority members for each entering class.

In two years, the university has gone from having three percent minority enrollment to 12 percent, Livingston said. He said he expects the trend to continue for the next three years until the minority percentage is above 20 percent.

He said the problem at Ohio State may get worse before it gets better because Ohio has been identified by out-of-state recruiters as fair and easy territory to enlist minority students.

Livingston became the first dean of student life when the position was created in 1980. He was involved with the reorganization of the Office of Student Life and its five service areas: organizations and activities, minority student services, women's services, commuter student affairs, and development.

He is also a faculty member of the College of Education and has been able to research and publish while being dean.

He said prior to 1980, the office was "an unorganized array of agencies that provided different services to constituencies. Now it has an organizational family."

His office has been very active in affirmative action, receiving at least five grants from the university for programs such as tutoring services and minority services.

At New York, he will be in charge of admissions, financial aid, records and registration, residential life and minority affairs.

He said he likes the vitality of the university in Albany, one-third of which is formed by graduate students.

"Student affairs are interrelated to academic affairs, and those expectations are much more clearly defined there than they are here," he said.

Russell Spillman, the vice provost for student affairs, said he will "sorely miss Mitchel. It's a great opportunity for him. He's made many contributions to the university, in particular student life. He worked very hard this past year in a leadership role in trying to develop the retention studies. We're deeply grateful for the many things he's done for us."

Spillman will be in charge of a national search for a replacement for Livingston, who leaves Ohio State Sept. 30.

Leveling plans rile residents

By Stephen Tompos
Lantern staff writer

A local apartment builder has stirred controversy with his plans to level seven houses in the campus area.

Steve Soler, campus area property owner, said he plans to tear down seven houses to build apartments for students.

The University Area Commission is against Soler's redeveloping because commissioners fear he will drive away permanent residents — something the commission has been striving to prevent, said Cleve Ricksecker, university commissioner.

"Regardless of what kind of architectural design Steve Soler uses, he puts up housing that can only be used for five or six students," said Ricksecker.

Faculty can now bring university suits before jury

By Todd Whited
Lantern staff writer

The Ohio Supreme Court has ruled that OSU professors can sue the university when a jury is to decide on the outcome.

The 4-3 decision handed down July 22 says cases involving contract disputes with state entities can be handled in the Court of Common Pleas before a jury.

Prior to this decision, Ohio Court of Claims heard all lawsuits brought against state entities.

The advantage to having the trial in the Court of Common Pleas is that a jury will hear the case, whereas a trial heard in the Court of Claims is heard only by judges, said Michael Webb, press agent for Ohio Attorney General Anthony J. Celebrezze.

Ohio State's charter says the university can be sued, and a former assistant professor of history of art took advantage of this clause.

Shirley Schwarz was an OSU staff member from 1976 to 1983. She was notified in 1982 that she would not be granted tenure and her employment would end, said Douglas Baker, Schwarz's attorney.

Schwarz filed suit against the Board of Trustees in August of 1983 saying it had breached her employment contract and denied her due process of law, Baker said.

Ohio State successfully filed to dismiss the case on the grounds that the Court of Common Pleas could not hear the case, since the case was brought against a state entity before a jury, he said.

Baker then appealed the case in February 1986 to the Ohio Court of Appeals, which reversed the decision.

Ohio State, in turn, appealed to the Ohio Supreme Court in March.

Schwarz argued that since she should have been granted tenure, which is a property right, the case should be heard in the common pleas court in front of a jury, Baker said.

He said Schwarz felt she should have been granted tenure because she worked the amount of time required.

Schwarz had worked as an assistant professor at another university for three years prior to coming to Ohio State, so Baker said her probationary period should have been reduced to four years.

The probationary period for a professor, or the time necessary for tenure, is usually seven years, he said.

"She should have been granted tenure by default. She exceeded her probationary period without receiving tenure," Baker said.

He said the Court of Common Pleas will hear the original case against the university, although he could not say when.

OSU attorneys were not available for comment.

Support sought for arena issue in next election

By Molly Glor
Lantern staff writer

In an effort to put the Columbus arena and convention center on the ballot for the second time, center supporters are pushing for public approval with open hearings.

The first of three public hearings was held Tuesday on the proposed Columbus arena and convention center.

The hearing gave William Habig, planning commission director, and attorney Gregory Lashutka, chairman of the Columbus Center Civic Committee, an opportunity to explain the new center proposal to the Franklin County commissioners and a public audience.

Plans for a Columbus arena and convention center, previously called the New World Center, were revised after voters rejected a proposal in May 1986 for a 10-year, 0.5 percent county sales tax to construct a building with 65,000 seats and 300,000 square feet of exhibit space. The tax also would have subsidized the Central Ohio Transit Authority.

The revised plan includes a proposed 8-year, 0.25 percent county sales tax to build a $149 million convention center. The plan calls for a 300,000-square-foot convention center and a separate 20,000-seat arena on the site of the Ohio Center 16-acre parking lot.

If the commissioners approve the issue, the tax proposal may be placed on the November 3 ballot.

At the hearing, area residents expressed concern about the center creating increased traffic and parking problems.

Sherrill Massey, an Italian Village resident, said the convention center would increase problems already created by the Ohio State campus and Short North traffic.

She said unlike occasional weekend events such as an OSU football game, the center would cause constant traffic making the roads impassable for village residents.

Lashutka said the issue has been raised before. He said the new design is much better than the plan committee members decided on in January, because it takes traffic flow into consideration.

Center planners said the proposal includes 7,000 downtown parking spaces. These spaces are within 1,500 feet of the proposed center.

Another Italian Village resident, Ronald Fauver, didn't agree with planners that people would use the spaces.

"The spaces are 1,000 feet away from the center, you may be able to fool the commissioners, but you can't fool tired feet," Fauver said.

Another issue discussed at the meeting was the location of the convention center and arena.

Areas in question included the OSU campus and the Ohio State Fairgrounds.

"Other sites have been considered," Lashutka said, but the other areas are inconsistent with the needs of the arena and convention center.

The next hearing will be August 6 at 5 p.m. in the Columbus City Council Chambers.

AGENTS: Illegal recruiting aim of law

Stozich said he and an aide called California, Texas, Michigan and the NCAA while researching the bill.

"California had something which only involved licensing, Texas had a little bit more established, and Michigan had three or four bills in the works. This bill (Ohio's) incorporates all of those," he said. "The NCAA has been very positive, and yesterday, Iowa called and wants a copy (of Ohio's bill)."

"This may be the beginning of a flow of water that will find its way into every state," he said, referring to the legislative trend.

Ohio State declared Carter ineligible July 15 after finding the All-American receiver had signed a contract and got a $6,800 loan from New York-based agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom.

Two University of Pittsburgh football players, running back Charles Gladman and defensive back Teryl Austin, were suspended last month amid suspicions they signed contracts with Walters and Bloom.

According to the bill, introduced July 23, when an agent or firm applies for a license, they would pay an annual $25 fee, provide business and biographical information, and provide for a $25,000 security bond.

Licenses must be renewed each year.

The director of the Department of Commerce would be charged with reviewing the conduct of the licensed agents and enforcing the rules with disciplinary action, if warranted by an agent's conduct.

Rod Anderson, legislation liaison for the Department of Commerce, said the agency had received a copy of the bill Tuesday, but had not studied it yet.

"I imagine if we have suggestions or revisions, they will be more technical in nature," Anderson said. "The main questions we'll have are questions of scope; questions like, 'How many people (agents) will this involve? How many contracts will we have to review?'"

Answers to these questions will determine the cost of enforcing the law, Anderson said.

During committee testimony, Stozich said he expects Earle Bruce, Athletic Director Richard M. Bay, and NCAA officials to be called as witnesses and asked to add their points of view to how the bill can best address the problem.

He said he soon will be in contact with House Speaker Vern Riffe, D-New Boston, hoping to persuade him to assign the bill to a committee sometime in August.

Bay said he was not yet aware of the bill and will withhold his judgment until he has seen it.

He noted, however, that the NCAA already requires agents to register with the athletic organization, but has no penalties attached to its policy.

"The bill sounds well-intentioned, but is it symbolic or substantive? The question is, 'Does it have teeth in it?'" he said.

HOUSE: Building plans prompt protest

designed, they can't accommodate family style living, prohibiting use by anyone but students, Ricksecker said.

"It makes people who have been living in a neighborhood real nervous," he said.

But Soler sees it differently. "I don't understand them (university commissioners) because they don't want anything new and they want to tell people how to remodel homes," he said.

The seven proposed buildings fit into the neighborhood atmosphere more so than Soler's previous ones, but their psychological impact on residents is still the same, Ricksecker said.

"I don't build junk," Soler said. "Where do they get off on telling me, in a free society, that I can't tear down my own property as long as I follow all of the rules of the law?"

Two of the seven houses Soler plans to level are made of brick and the rest are wood. The houses are at 85 and 124 W. Norwich Ave., 134 W. Northwood Ave., 98 E. Woodruff Ave., 89 W. 8th Ave., 62 E. 13th Ave. and 5 E. Northwood and a garage with a small building on the same property.

Columbus City Council adopted regulations in June that impose new guidelines for developers to follow when building in the campus area. The university commission proposed the guidelines.

"He (Soler) will build structures that meet the new standards," Ricksecker said.

Although the commission has voted to oppose these particular demolition permits, city council has no jurisdiction in the process, said Councilwoman Cynthia Cecil Lazarus.

"A concern with Soler is how he has handled some demolitions in the past year," she said.

Ricksecker said unlike other developers in the area, Soler hasn't compensated or acknowledged the permanent population in the area.

"They seem to be more against somebody making money, and I don't go along with that, so that's why they are trying to get me," Soler said.

Soler said he feels the situation is ironic because the University Area Commission didn't take the historical value into account when the old Big Bear Store across from St. John Arena was torn down and replaced with a 12-story building. "I could have never pulled something like that," he said.

The three main problems with all builders are permanent residence, visual clutter and neighborhood stability, Ricksecker said.

MINE-SWEEPING HELICOPTERS SENT TO GULF — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger has ordered the Navy to send eight mine-sweeping helicopters to the Persian Gulf, where they will operate off a helicopter carrier, Pentagon officials disclosed Wednesday.

The order was issued Tuesday night and the departure of the copters from Norfolk, Va., aboard Air Force C-5 transport planes is "imminent," the sources said.

REAGAN APPEALS TO SENATE FOR APPROVAL OF BORK — President Reagan called on the Senate to confirm Robert Bork to the Supreme Court before its fall term begins in October, saying "no man in America and few in our history" have been as qualified to serve on the high court.

In remarks to the National Law Enforcement Council, Reagan likened Bork's intellect to that of justices Oliver Wendell Holmes, Louis D. Brandeis, Felix Frankfurter and Potter Stewart.

"If I could appoint a whole Supreme Court of Felix Frankfurters, I would," he said. "And I've taken a step with Robert Bork."

It was the most impassioned appeal Reagan has yet made on behalf of his selection to succeed Associate Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., who retired last month because of age and health reasons.

SIX CONVICTED IN CHERNOBYL INCIDENT — Six former officials and technicians at the Chernobyl power plant were convicted today of causing history's worst nuclear accident and sentenced to terms of up to 10 years in labor camp.

Judge Raimond Brize, who issued the verdict, cited "an atmosphere of lack of control and lack of responsibility at the station. ... People played cards and dominoes and wrote letters while they were on shift."

He said that in the past several years, there were 71 violations of safety regulations at the plant, 27 of which went unreported.

Thirty-one people were killed when an explosion and fire tore through Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor on April 26, 1986.

REPORT SAYS CONTRAS VIOLATE HUMAN RIGHTS — Contra rebel forces have executed prisoners, forcibly recruited soldiers and killed civilians, according to the first report of a human rights association that Congress mandated as a condition of U.S. aid.

The report goes into a dozen incidents, including the deaths of eight Sandinista prisoners and eight civilians, the forced recruitment of four Mennonites, and the recruitment of 53 people by a since-arrested commander who the association said conscripted Nicaraguan Indians through "psychological pressure."

The report, obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press, also mentions ongoing investigations into other cases involving allegations of kidnappings and attacks on civilians including the deaths of children and unarmed individuals.

MEESE CRITICIZED IN IRAN-CONTRA HEARINGS — A key lawmaker today told Attorney General Edwin Meese III he has a "great deal of trouble" with the Justice Department's brief inquiry into the Iran-Contra affair last fall, but said it is "grossly unfair" to suggest that Meese was involved in a cover-up.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., made his comments in the opening moments of Meese's second day in the witness chair at the nationally televised Iran-Contra hearings.

Rudman, vice chairman of the Senate investigating committee, has been a vocal critic of the job Meese did after President Reagan asked him last November to determine the facts of the affair, in which profits from secret U.S. arms sale to Iran were diverted to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Rudman's statement that it was unfair to suggest that Meese participated in a cover-up appeared to respond to such a charge leveled earlier by a Democratic member of the House investigative panel.

City Council funds police skill training

By Stephen Tompos
Lantern staff writer

Ohio State plans on teaching Columbus police public management skills and Columbus City Council is helping to pay for it.

Ohio State's Management Advancement Program will work with the police to gain management certificates since Columbus City Council authorized funds Monday for membership to the program.

The Management Advancement Program is a series of seminars put on by the School of Public Administration, a graduate professional school, for a one year membership fee of $5,520, said Terry Leach of the Department of Public Safety.

The program offers the seminars for all levels of public management, said Arthur Flesch, program manager.

Most management training programs are geared toward the private sector, and the Management Advancement Program coordinators want to offer training for those working with the public, he said.

The public workers have different responsibilities in servicing the community, Flesch said.

The program works with federal, state, local, municipal and non-profit agencies, he said. "We have around 70 agencies that work with us throughout the year."

The police, fire, public service and refuge collection, engineering, construction and health departments also send people to work with the program, Flesch said.

Flesch said program coordinators want to "anchor" relationships with departments' low level managers for a more effective training.

Starting its fifth year in August, the management program will offer 46 two-day, and six week-long management certification programs, he said.

"They have a smorgasbord of training that can be customized to meet their organizational needs," Flesch said. "That is the flexibility of the program."

He said the role playing, skill development exercises and the cases in the seminars are all modeled after public sector experiences.

The program is structured so people learn as much from each other and their experiences as they would from a formal program, Flesch said.

Ohio State opens Florida branch office

By Jennifer Onesto
Lantern staff writer

Ohio State is the first state-funded university in the country to have an out-of-state office to develop support for awareness of its academics, research and student programs.

The Florida Regional Office, located in Naples, will be directed by Craig S. Mueller, formerly associate executive director for university relations.

"The opening of this office marks the beginning of a new era for The Ohio State University," said Thomas L. Tobin, vice president for communication and development.

"For the first time, we will have a staff member permanently based outside Ohio representing the interests of the university," Tobin said. "We look forward to the opportunity to enhance relationships with our many alumni and friends in Florida and the southeast, as well as to build new ties for Ohio State in this part of the country."

During the three weeks the office has been in operation, Mueller has established communications with the more than 9,000 alumni that reside in Florida.

"We are a state-assisted and not a state-supported university," said Barbara M. Real, director for regional campaigns. "That is why we are getting much more involved in raising support from the private sector."

Real said the university chose to establish the first office in Florida because of its high alumni concentration.

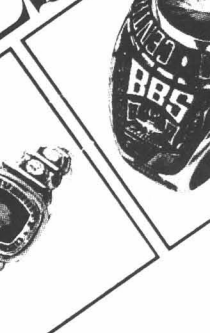

Mueller said the university will also recruit students from Florida to Ohio State.

"Many of the alumni groups in Florida are already talking about beginning fund-raising projects to sponsor merit scholarship students from their particular area," Mueller said.

There are plans for opening offices within the next year in New York City, Southern California and Chicago.

ELIGIBILITY: Guidelines useful

Proposition 48 sends a valuable message to all high school athletes who will now realize if they strive to attain the glory of being involved in college athletics, they must make the grade off the field as well as on.

Class AAA basketball player of the year Treg Lee of Cleveland St. Joseph, Columbus Wehrle High School basketball star Eli Brewster, football recruits Jeff Graham of Kettering Alter and Vince Clark of the Cincinnati Academy of Physical Education are all part of the list of OSU athletes sidelined by Proposition 48.

This year Proposition 48 requires incoming freshman athletes to have completed a core of classes including three units of English, two units of math, two units of social studies, two units of either natural or physical sciences and two additional core classes.

The athletes are also expected to meet minimum ACT or SAT requirements based on their grade-point averages in the core of classes.

If an athlete is ruled ineligible by Proposition 48 at Ohio State, a year of eligibility is lost and the athlete must attain at least a 1.8 grade point average during the freshman year in order to be ruled eligible for the next year.

The NCAA has no minimum requirements for athletes ruled ineligible by Proposition 48, these are set by the various universities.

While it's unfortunate so many bright athletic futures are being put on hold by these requirements, they are needed to insure that high school athletes don't consider college as just a stepping stone to the pros.

AGENTS: Protect athletes

With the recent troubles of college athletes' dealings with agents, a bill introduced to the Ohio House of Representatives by Rep. John P. Stozich aims at penalizing the real culprits in all of this, the agents who try to entice college athletes to sign contracts before their college eligibility is exhausted.

Stozich has introduced a bill requiring agents who recruit in Ohio to be licensed with the Ohio Department of Commerce.

The bill would require athlete agents to pay $25 a year for a license and would also require them to post a $25,000 security bond that could be forfeited if any illegalities occur.

Agents violating the provisions of the bill could also lose their licenses, be forced to pay restitution to injured parties or be forced to pay a civil fine of up to $10,000 for each offense.

It is ironic that so far with all the recent attention being focused on college athletes and their dealings with agents, the only ones being punished are the athletes and their universities' athletic programs.

Some type of legislation needs to be enacted that would impose penalties on the agents who are out to further their own careers while jeopardizing others.

While the athletes are also to blame, they shouldn't be the only ones forced to face the consequences.

If this legislation is enacted, agents will have some rules to play by, too.

Columbus living depresses writer

I have a friend who is the picture of frustration right now.

See, he wants to be a famous writer. He wants his books and stories to come out in hardback and paperback, with the paperback editions containing all of those great reviews like: "RIVETING!..."--New York Post. The reason for his depression runs very simple and very deep.

He's from Columbus, Ohio. He's convinced he can't be a terrific writer because he lives in this town. When he gets moody about it, he likes to drink beer and stare at ceiling fans, so I try to join him and console him while we both stare at the spinning fans.

Just the other day, he was saying to me, "What did Jack Kerouac do?"

"I think he traveled the country doing whatever he could to get by."

"Right," he replied. "And Hemingway went to war and Europe."

"I think the war was in Europe."

"Yeah, whatever. And Fitzgerald traveled the globe. Camus lived in France. Steinbeck grew up in poor California towns."

"Emily Dickinson never left her house," I offered.

He shot me a cruel look as he downed his beer. "So where does that leave me?" he said. "What a curse. I'm from Columbus, OHIIYAH. You cannot be a great writer without going through great experiences. No matter how good your imagination or your empathy is, it won't work. There are no great experiences to be had in Columbus. All you can do is go to the zoo.

Jim Oliphant
Lantern
Columnist

"Look at my childhood. Was I poor? No. My father didn't beat my mother. We didn't live in a tenement. We lived in a nice three-story white house. We were always comfortable. I played little league baseball. I ate at backyard barbecues. I went to football games. At night, I could order pizzas and stay up watching MTV."

"You were preppie," I said. "Really, you still are."

He recoiled in horror. "Do you know what that makes me? Do you know how damning that is. Who's my role model now, George Plimpton?"

His eyes reddened. "All I've ever heard is how lucky I was to grow up in a nice, safe suburban environment in a nice, safe midwestern town. Well, Jim, it's ruined me. How can I rise above this? How can I pull myself up from the Golden Ghetto?"

"You have a problem. Think of this. Are you a Communist?"

He sighed. "No. I'm not even really liberal."

"Are you a heavy drug user?"

"No. Even Asprigum gives me a headache."

"Schizophrenic?" No.

"Bisexual?" No.

"Heavy-drinking wife beater?" No.

He stood up and turned his back to me. His head bowed. "Jim, I don't know what it's like to go hungry. I don't know what it's like to be poor. Or to be oppressed. Or to be unloved. And I can't tell you what it's like to lose a loved one."

"How about some of those rotten dates you've had?" I interjected.

He ignored me. "From where does greatness spring? From where is great drama born? From the heart. But for it to come, the heart must be a little bruised and slightly ragged. I don't have that, Jim. My heart is fine. I don't know what it's like to need, to want. It's not a blessing that I want to write. It's a damnation. My background dictates I wear a yellow tie and get a job with Merrill Lynch and I hate that."

He whipped the beer bottle against the wall. The shattering glass echoed throughout the room.

"Hey, what the hell are ya doing?" a voice from the back screamed.

"Screw you, earthworm!" my friend yelled.

"Great, you can write about bar fights," I said with disgust. "Go home, get some rest. Stop thinking for a moment."

He nodded, but before he left, he turned to me with anguished eyes.

"I'm a victim. Trapped by my environment," he said. "It was predetermined the day I was born in a nice hospital. I never had a chance to be great, Jim. Never." Then, he was out the door and into the darkness.

I finished my beer, thinking if I should have told him the secret. No, I decided, if he hasn't figured out it's not where you come from but how you keep track of what's around you that's important, then he really never will be a great writer. Some people see a million stories on the bus ride to work. Others don't see one when it's whispered in their ears.

He'd better get that yellow tie ready.

Americans need world enlightenment

How much do people in the United States think about the rest of the world?

When we aid revolutions in Nicaragua and Angola, do we actually think about how it is affecting the people of those nations?

When we support a corrupt Vietnamese regime in the name of democracy, do we consider the consequences that will be felt by the people of that region of the world?

There is a great deal of ignorance by Americans concerning the rest of the world. Many do not realize what is happening when we make a foreign policy move. For example, many relegate the Middle East to being a region of "mad Arabs" who have no concept of reality.

The term to describe this tendency is ethnocentrism. Ethnocentrism defined means the practice of regarding one's own race or culture as superior to other races and cultures. It is something that Americans have a problem with.

Ever since the end of World War II, the United States has been the dominant country in the world with the highest standards of economic,

Garrett Keim
Lantern
Columnist

social and political systems. We are the idyllic democracy, superior to all others.

And after living here for nearly 23 years, I believe that. I have seen a fair share of the world (Europe and India) and I feel that our system is the best; it offers the most freedom to its citizenry. Ours is an unparalleled nation.

But this should not mean that we have a right to feel our system is the only system to have. Our system is most effective in a first world, post-industrialized nation moving toward a white-collar, service oriented economy. But that doesn't mean our economic and political systems are the best possible for a third-world nation with a pre-industrial economy with very different social standards.

By trying to impose democracy, we often stunt a country's growth and evolution. We do have a duty to try and offer a country our legitimate help economically, militarily and socially. However, when we take their welfare into our hands and attempt to make them accept our beliefs and ways of life, we become little more than a bully, an American Inquisition forcing our beliefs upon a nation.

A perfect example of our ignorance of the world is President Lyndon B. Johnson. During the Vietnam war, Johnson offered a dam to North Vietnamese leader Ho Chi Minh in an attempt to get Ho to the bargaining table. Johnson was confident that Ho wouldn't turn down an offer such as a dam; Johnson had no clue as to what the North Vietnamese were fighting for. He was our president.

Our current leader, President Reagan, also has a knack for alienating our allies and completely misjudging foreign policy. In Lebanon, he had no idea of what he was dealing with; in the Philippines, we couldn't have backed a person worse than Marcos; in Bitburg, Germany, Reagan only put a wreath on Waffen SS graves; and of course there are the contras.

Of all the people of our nation, the president should be most aware of the complexities of our world and the diversity between different nations. A president with limited imagination or a closed mind does little more than offend or hurt nation after nation, possibly without even realizing it.

Americans must be taught more about other nations and should take it upon themselves to learn more about the world in general. It would save much embarrassment.

A foreign language should be a mandatory requirement in grade school, when a child is most receptive. It does not necessarily have to be a European language, either. They are not the only other nations on the planet besides us.

It's a big world out there. Take some time and learn about it.

Schlichter merits more than criticism

Leave him alone. Art Schlichter was in the news about a year ago when it became public that he had a relapse from a gambling addiction.

Gambling is an addiction just like drugs or alcohol. Schlichter will always be an addict. Just as alcoholics may be able to control their addiction, they are never totally cured.

Since then Schlichter has sought professional treatment and made the effort to get on with his life.

I thought all of the bad publicity was behind him.

I thought people had stopped making jokes like "Oh, even Art Schlichter wouldn't take those odds."

I thought people would remember Art Schlichter for all of the good things he had done for Ohio State football.

I thought wrong. I was browsing through a bookstore last week and came across the June issue of "Volleyball Monthly." The cover caught my attention because it dealt with the NCAA championships

Stephanie M. Ewert
Lantern

which were held in May. I was the trainer for the men's volleyball team here at Ohio State and we were in the championships so I wanted to read what the story had to say.

What I read on the second page of the five-page article outraged me.

The author, Jon Hastings, who by the way is also the editor of the magazine, said in reference to Ohio State's semi-final game against the top-ranked UCLA Bruins, "Not even Art Schlichter (sic) would have put down odds for the Buckeyes in this one."

Talk about fury, I flew off the handle. Being in the journalism field myself I could not believe what I read.

First of all, Hastings broke the number one rule of journalism. He misspelled a name. In this case, Schlichter. I understand it is a difficult spelling but I learned it by heart when I was in the eighth grade and Art was a freshman at Ohio State. Hastings should have double-checked the spelling, especially in using Schlichter's name in a downgrading reference.

Secondly, is it necessary to use this statement in a volleyball article? Doesn't the writer have any morals? Did he give any consideration to how this would affect the Schlichter family? Probably not, I doubt if they even know there is such a magazine, so maybe Hastings felt safe. Hastings knew he could not get sued for libel because Schlichter is a public figure and his problem is public knowledge.

Whether he is a public figure or not, I think Schlichter has paid his dues and deserves the opportunity to get on with his life without people constantly referring to his gambling addiction. If writers make reference to Schlichter in this way then they could say, "even Dwight Gooden wouldn't use this cocaine," another unfair comment. He too has paid his dues.

Yes, Schlichter made a mistake and it was public knowledge. He had the football world in his hands and then he got in trouble. Do we turn on him because of this? Are we as writers supposed to slam him every opportunity we get?

I say no. He deserves to be remembered for the good things he did for Ohio State football and we don't need to bring up his addiction at every opportunity.

Maybe my naivete is showing and this will never happen. I can only hope that Art Schlichter will be remembered by others as I remember him, a good person who made a mistake but is doing all he can to correct it.

Phone "friendship" sold, 88 cents a minute

Would you pay $52.80 an hour for some companionship?

Would you pay someone that much money to ease the boredom, ease the loneliness, that afflicts all of us at least once in a while?

Well, there are people in Columbus betting a lot of money that you will. And these people aren't just the prostitutes plying their trade on High Street.

No, these people are deemed legitimate enough to gain air time for ads on at least one popular rock radio station.

These people say they're selling, for a mere 88 cents a minute, a party happening kind of thing. They're selling, for just $52.80 an hour, the promise that you'll never be lonely or bored again. They're offering "friendship" over the phone.

What they're really doing is trading on everyone's need to talk to someone once in a while, everyone's need to feel wanted and needed, to feel part of a group. They're selling a chance to call a toll number and talk to someone whose job it is to answer the phone.

David White
Reader Representative

These people are taking normal, healthy human needs and twisting them into something else: Yes, we'll be your friend. Yes, we'll listen to you. Yes, you'll feel wanted and needed and important. All for $52.80 an hour. All for just 88 cents a minute. All for a charge on your monthly phone bill. Funny how that all sounds so familiar.

For centuries, other people have been trading on the healthy, normal human needs for love and physical affection and exploiting those needs by selling sex.

No tenderness. No caring. No loving. No giving. No sharing. Just sex. Sex with all kinds of sauces and flavors, sure. Sex with all kinds of variations, too. Just order off the menu! Then pay your bill and get out. Now. Your time's up.

Prostitutes often aren't allowed to advertise on the airwaves or in the papers because media owners have the right to exclude some advertisers. Some owners don't allow handgun ads, for instance. Others don't allow ads for X-rated movies.

And many don't allow ads from prostitutes who sell companionship in person.

But apparently some radio station owners think it's okay to take advertising money from people selling companionship over the phone for $52.80 an hour.

True, you can't catch some incurable disease such as herpes or AIDS just by talking on the phone. And you're safe from getting ripped off by pimps or prostitutes after you're done.

But on the phone with some people, you're still trading money for companionship.

You're not really needed. You're not really wanted. You're not really invited to a party happening kind of thing.

You're just getting used. Just bring your wallet, pay your phone bill and hang up. And thank you very much.

And to radio station owners across the country, including at least one in Columbus, that's okay.

Too bad. Because there really are ways for people to gain friends and be friends. True friends. People who care about each other not because they're paid to, but because they want to. Because they care.

People can start by meeting others at Larkins Hall or at the laundromat. By talking to people walking out of the same class with the same instructor and the same homework.

By working with people who share common interests at the student newspaper, the intramural sports teams, the choir, the chess club, political groups, Circle K or countless other clubs. By worshipping with people.

And people can find themselves loved and needed by others by giving their time and talent as a Big Brother or Big Sister, by visiting people at nursing homes or hospitals, by working with the Red Cross, Salvation Army or similar groups.

People meet other people when they give of themselves, not from their pocketbooks.

You meet children. Old people. And men and women your own age with your own interests, people who just might want to build deeper friendships, too. Friendships filled with tenderness. With caring. With loving. With giving. And with sharing.

It won't be cheap and artificial. And it won't cost 88 cents a minute.

OSU Bible Studies finds Bloom County offensive

I am writing concerning the Bloom County comic strips which have appeared recently in the Lantern. These episodes have portrayed evangelical Christians as hypocritical, unintelligent, unloving followers of money-hungry, deceitful TV evangelists. Berke Breathed has done more than satirize the not-so-recent PTL revelations and associated personalities; he has insulted the character and intelligence of a group of people who comprise a large percentage of his readers.

I realize that this style of satire is not uncommon in the Bloom County comic strip. I am also aware, however, that the Lantern and the Ohio State University have in the past, been very conscientious in not printing material which promotes prejudice against minorities and religious groups of people. A large number of OSU students, staff, and faculty are members of evangelical Christian churches and organizations. It is inappropriate that the university should print material which blatantly insults this segment of the campus society. Berke Breathed's material has violated professional standards of printed satire, and he has slandered the integrity of the Christian community.

Letters

In conclusion, I ask the Lantern staff to remove the Bloom County comic strip from its publication as long as the episodes continue to pointedly debate the character of evangelical Christians.

Editorial shallow

Your editorial on "Kuwait: Protection needed" was extremely shallow and narrow-minded to say the least. The U.S. government is combining the worst aspects of our oil addiction with gunboat diplomacy. Let's look at some disturbing trends:

- In 1986, imports from OPEC doubled.
- The Department of Energy protects projects that OPEC imports may amount to 50 percent of our total consumption by the 1990s.

If we are willing to send warships to the Persian Gulf to protect the supply of oil (to meet our wasteful energy consumption), does it make sense at the same time to:

- Abandon support of gas mileage standards for automobiles?
- Slash budgets and abolish incentives for conservation and renewable energy development?
- Roll back programs aimed at increasing efficiency for heating and cooling of old and new buildings?

The above actions taken by the current federal administration effectively dismantled energy programs that were designed to reduce reliance on oil. None of these were part of your version of "protection needed."

I earnestly ask you to bring these realities, rather than cheap editorials, to our campus community.

Good luck, Cris

In response to articles concerning Cris Carter in the Lantern on July 23.

The NFL shouldn't have to wait in this case. It doesn't matter who's to blame. Cris Carter used up his eligibility at Ohio State. He is no longer affiliated with the NCAA or this university unless he wants to pay for his own education. That's his penalty for breaking the rules of a scholarship athlete.

Cris has brought plenty of success, fame and fortune to Ohio State. It could have easily been Michigan. He owes us nothing. We owe him at the very least a best wishes NFL-ASAP.

Music is 'the life' for Dead Milkmen

By Donald L. Crouse
Lantern staff writer

Enigmatic recording artists, The Dead Milkmen, thrilled an audience of about 500 people at the Newport Music Hall Tuesday night with their satirical brand of music, sending fans slam dancing through the audience and diving off the stage.

Doug Shemanski, a senior from Worthington, said he has gone to all of the band's Columbus shows since his brother played one of their records three years ago.

"I go because it's a good time," he said. "I like them because they have fun with their music."

Dave Blood, the group's 30-year-old bass player who holds a master's in economics said, "I'd like to be doing this for the rest of my life. But if it stops being fun, I won't be doing it. I'll quit."

Dean Clean, drummer for the group, said the key to their success is not taking themselves too seriously.

"We've been together for about four years with all the original members," Clean said. "We've all been to college and we all have degrees. Mine is in commercial art. We could do whatever we want, we just enjoy what we're doing."

The group started as a garage band, after they tried and rejected other forms of employment.

Blood said, "After I graduated, I was a janitor. I had a certificate for it and everything, but it just wasn't fun."

On stage in the background, Rodney Anonymous, vocalist for the group, waved a magazine over his head, pranced around and sang his own version of Cyndi Lauper's, "Girls Just Wanna Have Fun," drawing laughs from everyone.

"Music is for people who don't want to have real jobs; who don't want to work," Anonymous said. "I got up at noon today, watched 'Family Affair,' and threw up in the sink. Does that sound like fun, or what?"

Actually, what the Dead Milkmen do is exhausting work. After a 30-city tour which lasts only six weeks, they will go back to Philadelphia for 10 days, then on tour again.

"We play a different city just about every night," Blood said. "The days we do have off are spent driving seven or eight hours to where our next show is. I have a girlfriend in New York who I see once every couple of months. We don't have time for a social life when we're touring."

"Everybody thinks all musicians do is party," Clean said. "We're only two weeks into this tour and I'm already exhausted. We get to bed around 4 a.m. and are up around 9 a.m. and we're all

Snow White great; Benji disappointing

★★★★ SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS, STARRING SNOW WHITE, DOPEY, DOC, GRUMPY, SNEEZY, BASHFUL, SLEEPY, HAPPY AND THE WICKED WITCH. A WALT DISNEY ANIMATED FEATURE.

★ BENJI THE HUNTED, STARRING BENJI. WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY JOE CAMP.

When Walt Disney released "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" in 1937, he took a big gamble. He mortgaged everything to raise money for a film that "everyone" told him would be a sure-fire loser. "Everyone" thought that "no one" would want to sit for 80 minutes through an animated movie. Well, as we all know now, "everyone" was wrong. "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" was the first feature-length animated film ever made. That made it unique in 1937. Now it holds another distinction. It is the only film from 1937 that is now playing in theaters across America. The Disney studio has pulled out all the stops to celebrate the 50th anniversary of its release. And why not? It may very well be the best film of 1937, or 1987, for that matter.

If you grew up in America, no doubt "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is one of your first movie-going memories. With the possible exception of "The Wizard of Oz," probably no film is more implanted in our national subconscious at such an early age.

So since nearly all of you have seen it, I guess I do not need to remind you how great the songs "Heigh Ho," "Someday My Prince Will Come" and "Whistle While You Work" are.

And I am probably being presumptuous to lecture you as to how great an achievement it is for an 80-minute movie to have seven dwarfs so individualized that each stands out as a unique character.

You probably do not need to be told that almost every frame of this movie is so ravishing and the detail work so magnificent that each is a work of visual art in itself.

There is certainly no need for me to say that the humor, the action, the sentiment and the thrills make this a pleasure to watch from beginning to end.

And judging by the suspiciously high number of unaccompanied adults at the kiddie matinee I attended, I know I do not need to point out that you are never too old to see "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" one more time.

Do I? As if to give an illustration as to how far the mighty have fallen, Disney's 1987 release for the kids is "Benji the Hunted." Fifty years from now they will not be re-releasing this dog back into the theaters.

On the plus side, the photography is outstanding, the animals are cute and the film does not give off that aroma of cynicism that characterizes too much of entertainment made for children these days. But that is about it.

On the minus side, the film is, at almost two hours, hellishly long to sit through. The story is too slender, and the pace too dawdling. The four-year-old who went with me to this movie was demanding to go home after about an hour. She was not alone in that sentiment.

The film's biggest problem is that too much of the story is told visually and not enough by dialogue. The children in the audience were constantly asking the adults what was going on.

Now telling a story through visual means is an honorable idea, but even the best filmmakers have problems when they try to do it. And believe me, Frank Camp is not one of the world's best filmmakers.

Even on the rudimentary level of story logic, the movie does not make sense. For example, Benji is washed out to sea at the beginning of the movie, but everybody is looking for him in the forest.

So whether or not you actually have a kid to go with you, the kiddie matinee of the summer is definitely "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

The Lantern film critic rates movies on the following scale:

★ Poor ★★ Fair
★★★ Good ★★★★ Excellent

SCIOTO DOWNS

*Photos and story
by Kim Durk*

Homer Logan, from Columbus, washes his horse, "Have a Happy Note". All the horses are washed Horse groomer Tom Spence holds "Bardot" in the paddock while the jockey puts on the horse's harness before racing.

Scioto Downs, 6000 S. High St., has been host to thousands of horse races since its grand opening in 1959.

When the track opened it was the most expensive sporting facility in the country. It was also one of 12 structures nominated for The Outstanding Civil Engineering Achievement Award, finishing second to the St. Lawrence Seaway.

The track is open seven days a week from 6 to 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and until 11 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. There are nine races every night with about nine horses in each race. Although the track opens at 6 p.m., post time is not until 7:30 when the first race begins.

"We're one of the few tracks growing right now," said Phil Pikelny, public relations director for Scioto Downs. The peak of success for the track was in 1975 and the low was in 1982. The track has been gaining strength since then and is one of the best in the country, Pikelny said.

The lowest amount of money a person can bet on any race is $2. A horse can be bet on to win, to place or to show for that amount. A bet on a horse to win or place would cost $4, and to win, place or show would cost $6.

There are four Trifecta races a night, where a bet is placed on three horses coming in first, second and third, straight or boxed. There are two Perfecta races in which a bet is placed on the correct order of the top two finishers. There is one Quinella, where a bet is placed on the top two finishers in any order.

Last year, $180,338, the largest amount ever won on a bet at Scioto Downs, was the result of the correct picks on a Superbet. The Superbet, which is no longer in existence, consisted of correctly betting on two Perfectas and a Trifecta in three consecutive races.

Admission is $1 for Grandstand seats and $2 for the Clubhouse. There is also a $1 parking fee.

After the horses have been washed and groomed the jockeys and trainers head out of the paddock towards the track to warm up the horses for the race.

A jockey and horse warm up for the sixth race.

A trainer leads a horse back into the paddock after the race. Generally a horse runs only one race a week, however a jockey may ride in several.

Newton to house research

By Kathryn Monda
Lantern staff writer

The rooms are gutted out in the basement of Newton hall and the constructors are just starting to put up new walls.

It is hard to believe that within the next six months, this empty basement will become a center for leading nursing research, said Judy Kleen, administrative manager for the College of Nursing.

"It reminds me of a dentist's office," said Kleen, whose office is above the construction. "There is a drilling sensation at my feet. However, we are willing to be inconvenienced until the facility is completed."

The renovation of the research center began June 25. Ohio State received a $460,000 grant from the state's capital improvement budget to fund the project, Kleen said.

The renovation will add four laboratories and four offices to the center, said Kathleen Stone, associate professor of the College of Nursing and director of the center.

"As it is now, the College of Nursing is a leader in nursing research," Stone said. "This gives us the opportunity to expand our research potential."

Stone said the expansion will help in recruiting more faculty members who have earned doctorate degrees.

Researchers have temporary facilities within Newton Hall until the construction is completed. As many as three people share an office and one classroom is being used as an exercise laboratory, she said.

Planning for the project began in 1984, Kleen said. Much of the time since then has been spent going through the various channels.

Central Ohio's first moonlight golf tournament is scheduled to tee off at 9:30 p.m. Friday at the OSU Gray golf course.

The six-hole Werewolf Open is being played to raise money for the Creative Living II program, a residential community at Ohio State for severely physically disabled young adults who are employed or attend an educational or vocational training program.

At least 120 players are expected to attend the golf match. They will use flashlights to tee off, putt and drive around the course.

Golfers will be hitting translucent golf balls, designed to glow in the dark, with green cyalume light sticks.

The entry fee for the benefit, sponsored by Wolfe Associates, is $75 per person and $125 for married couples.

"People can still register for the tournament through Thursday afternoon, but our spots are filling fast," said Thomas Taneff, co-director of the tournament.

Title game highlights lacrosse star's career

By Stephanie M. Ewert
Lantern staff writer

Although he had been a high school All-American, Terry Gilmore feared he had overmatched himself when he opted to play for Ohio State. When he finished his career as a Buckeye in 1979, those fears had been laid to rest. He left as an collegiate All-American owning five school records and a piece of the conference title.

During his junior year in 1978, Gilmore, now in oil field sales in Houston, led the Buckeyes with 80 points to win the Midwest Lacrosse Association title. That same year, the Upper Arlington native was named Honorable Mention All-American, the first Buckeye lacrosse player to receive All-American status in more than 10 years.

"Terry was the guy that if you needed something done you would get him the ball and he would take care of it," said Bill Wolford, a teammate of Gilmore from junior high school through college. "He was really the major offensive firepower."

Preseason polls in 1978 favored Ohio Wesleyan University to win the conference. Ohio State was expected to contend with Denison University and Bowling Green State University for runners-up honors.

The matchup between the Buckeyes and Ohio Wesleyan was "the big one," Wolford said. Ohio State entered the game with a 6-1 record, having lost on a spring trip to Washington and Lee University, who later went on to the Division-I playoffs.

Gilmore said the Buckeyes got off to a good start against the Bishops, leading 8-5 at halftime. "We thought we had them on the ropes," the Buckeyes career-scoring leader said. "But we knew that Wesleyan could score a million goals in a row."

A quick goal by the Buckeyes to start the second half convinced the team that the famed Bishops could be taken, said Gilmore, who had two goals and three assists in the game.

The 16-10 defeat of the Bishops was the first Buckeye win over Ohio Wesleyan in about 10 years, and gave the Buckeyes control of their own destiny, Wolford said.

"We kind of walked gingerly from there, going into two overtime games against Denison and Bowling Green," Wolford said.

In order to win the title outright, the Buckeyes had to defeat the Falcons in the final game of the season. Winning the opening face-off in overtime, the Buckeyes knew they had to get the ball to Gilmore, Wolford said.

Gilmore said he reluctantly accepted the reliance the team had on him to score.

"We flipped the ball around a little bit," Gilmore said, "and they threw it to me and then everybody started running away."

Gilmore said he told them to come back and work the ball around but they told him to take the shot. The midfielder took what he called "a terrible shot" and scored his fourth goal of the game, giving the Buckeyes the title.

The Buckeyes ended the season with a 14-1 record. Gilmore ended the season with 49 assists, a Buckeye record, and 31 goals.

Gilmore said spring sport athletes tend to have a better junior year than a senior year because they are not preoccupied with graduating and finding a job. Evidently, Gilmore is the exception to his own theory.

In 1979, Gilmore set a season record for most points (90). He also set the record for the most points in a game with 13. The Buckeyes leader in career goals was also chosen to participate in the North-South All-Star lacrosse game, a game that showcases the country's best senior players. It was, ironically, in that game that Gilmore was held scoreless for the first time in two years.

A mechanical engineering major, Gilmore said lacrosse is the best thing that has happened to him. "It helped me grow both mentally and physically and it probably kept me in school," he said.

Rogan charged in girl's assault

Associated Press

URBANA — Ohio State defensive back Greg Rogan is to appear in Urbana Municipal Court next week to face charges of assault and criminal damaging as a result of an encounter with two teen-age girls in Urbana Friday night.

City police issued a summons to Rogan Monday, based on a report filed Saturday by a 17-year-old Urbana girl. She said Rogan hit her in the face, causing her nose to bleed and kicked and hit her car hard enough to cause dents in it.

She stated in the report that Rogan was "extremely upset and appeared to be high."

This is the third encounter with local police in less than a year for the 21-year-old Rogan, an OSU senior and graduate of Urbana High School.

Police say the latest report states that the girl and a 17-year-old female friend were driving from a store parking lot when Rogan and a companion came to their car. She said her friend and Rogan began arguing.

"He got mad and leaned in the car and hit me in the face," she stated in the police report. The girl's property damage report states that as she drove away, Rogan kicked her car twice and hit the top, putting three dents in it.

Police Chief Bill Lingrell said the criminal damage report involved an automobile, but added, "Generally, our policy is that we don't discuss cases pending in court."

Ohio State football coach Earle Bruce said he had been unable to contact Rogan and had no comment on the charges.

Champaign County Municipal Judge Joseph Valore suspended Rogan's driving rights in October for two years after Rogan was charged with drunken driving. The charge was reduced to reckless driving after a jury could not reach a verdict.

Rogan was arrested Aug. 17, 1986, by the State Highway Patrol, which charged he was driving 94 mph in a 55-mph zone on Ohio 29 in Champaign County and refused to take a breath-alcohol test.

Bay denies interest in University of Virginia job

By Stephanie M. Ewert
Lantern staff writer

"I never was a candidate, never have been and I won't be."

That was OSU Athletic Director Richard M. Bay's response Wednesday to an article in the Columbus Dispatch that linked him to the athletic director position at the University of Virginia.

Bay said he sent a letter suggesting the university talk to a certain candidate, whose name he would not mention. Bay said he did this on his own initiative before anyone contacted him from Virginia. "That was the end of it," he said.

A week later, Robert M. O'Neil, president of the University of Virginia, called Bay to thank him for the recommendation. He also asked if they could discuss it more at the NCAA Convention, more at the NCAA Convention, held in late June.

"I asked him, 'Do you mean more about my nominee or the position?'" Bay said. O'Neil asked Bay if he would be interested in the position. Bay said he was not, but would be willing to talk to O'Neil about the person he nominated. "That's all we did," Bay said.

Bay said he does not know who is talking to whom at Virginia. "It's really unfair to say my name is on the list," he said. Bay said if his name is on a list of candidates, he had no part in it.

Bay said he has never initiated contact with anyone about another job while at Ohio State. "I'm not job hunting," he said.

However, Bay mentioned he does receive calls from time to time about various jobs. "Aside from the Maryland job, I have not been a candidate for any job since I've been here," he said.

Bay was a candidate for athletic director at the University of Maryland position in April, a situation he said was more serious because of the contractual elements. He later pulled his name from the list of contenders.

Bay said he was disappointed in the way the local media handled the situation.

"There wasn't anything to it and it should have been, if mentioned at all, buried on the third page," he said. "To put a headline to say I'm linked to the Virginia job, I thought was unfair and totally misleading."

Virginia officials refused to comment on whether Bay was a candidate for the open position.

Bay was re-appointed to his position at Ohio State July 1.

Chairman opts for film over farm

By Darryl J. Feldmeyer
Lantern staff writer

The new chairman of the Department of Photography and Cinema said he chose academia as an alternative to farming.

Charles Harpole, who began his duties as chairman July 6, spent his first 18 years on a farm in Henderson, Ky. He was formerly an associate professor of Arts and Humanities at the University of Texas.

"I was sort of lured into academia by a series of really excellent teachers at the high school and college levels," Harpole said. "I had some high school teachers in particular who really encouraged me."

Harpole said he was attracted by OSU's faculty. "I've always thought of (Ohio State) as a leading institution," he said. "It's a powerful university with an on-going program that promises a lot of growth in an area that I really like."

Harpole said it's beneficial to have the photography and cinema disciplines in a combined department. This allows students to study cinema history and criticism, as well as the process by which images are recorded, he said.

"There's a real interdisciplinary sense. Students are not forced into one tiny area by artificial boundaries," he said.

"It's a problem that appears... at other institutions which have a conservatory approach, where a student would just find out how to run the medium," Harpole said. "He'd find out the mechanics of it and then start making things, and seldom deal with the medium historically or theoretically."

Harpole said the interdisciplinary curriculum grew when the department moved in 1985 from the College of Engineering to the College of the Arts.

George Crepeau, the acting chairman before Harpole's appointment, is now the acting associate dean of the College of the Arts. He said the department was originally a part of the College of Engineering because photography is a technical field which relies on complex equipment.

"A knowledge of that equipment and its ever-growing complexity as it affects the art or the aesthetics of the discipline is certainly necessary," he said.

Crepeau said, however, that the emergence of photography as an art form led to a departmental consensus to move to the College of the Arts.

"It was no longer just a support service for the engineering disciplines," he said.

Harpole said students have overlapping needs. "There are lots of art students... who are looking to mix their media. They need training in video making. We need to make way for the students to move between the various departments with as much ease as possible."

Harpole is writing a 10-volume history of cinema chronologically divided into periods. The first three volumes are scheduled for release next year.

"This will be the first English-language history of American film to be written in the detail which 10 volumes allow," he said.

Among the contributors to the history is Eileen Bowser, the curator of film at the New York Museum of Modern Art.

Harpole would like to make a videotape to accompany the history, using film clips from each period to illustrate the concepts discussed. He said he may have trouble, however, securing permission to use clips from various distributors.
