$3 million to OSU staff if decision upheld

By Debra Baker
Lantern city reporter

A former OSU professor and about 6,000 other university employees will collect more than $3 million in back pay from the Ohio State University if a recent judgment in the Ohio Court of Appeals is upheld.

Morris Ojalvo, a former engineering professor, has had a class action suit in the courts since 1982 to recover one month's pay raise he was denied during the 1981-1982 academic school year.

Ojalvo's suit was made on behalf of the members of the faculty, administrative and professional staff at Ohio State who did not receive the raise for November 1981, said Russell Kelm, Ojalvo's attorney.

Many people don't even realize that they were denied the raise, Kelm said.

The case originated in 1981 when OSU was late in getting its biennial budget approved and in making employee pay raise announcements, court documents state.

Notices of appointment were sent out indicating that the raises would start in November and include a cash supplement for October, but employees never received the one-month payment, Kelm said.

The question facing the court was whether or not the notice of appointment was in fact a binding contract.

In 1988, the Court of Claims said it was not, but the Sept. 14 trial in the Ohio Court of Appeals 10th Appellate District overturned that ruling.

The amount of damages was previously estimated at $1.6 million, but after seven years of litigation, accumulating 10 percent interest per year, that amount now exceeds $3 million, Kelm said.

The exact amount of damages will be determined by the Court of Claims if the judgment is not appealed, Kelm said. A procedure will be established where others can receive payment without taking further court action.

"It will probably be next year before the case is settled," Kelm said, and that is provided that the case is not appealed.

If the case is appealed it will go to the Ohio Supreme Court, said James Meeks, special assistant to the president for legal affairs.

"We were disappointed with the result, and we will seriously consider appealing," Meeks said.

"The interpretation of a notice of appointment as a contract has a serious impact," he said.

Normally a case is remanded to the Court of Claims to determine if damages are to be paid, Kelm said. This decision was unusual because they remanded the case to determine the exact amount of damages, Kelm said.

Ojalvo will receive only $210 plus interest if no appeal is made, but there are long-term effects for him, Kelm said.

The case not only amounted to his losing one month's pay, but it also influenced his retirement pay, which is determined by the last five years' pay. A small amount over the last five years would affect his lifetime supplement, Kelm said.

Ojalvo, who left the university in 1983, had no comment regarding the case.

Students angered by season ticket sales procedures

By Theresa Marvin
Lantern campus reporter

Many students are angry about their inability to purchase season tickets for OSU men's basketball this year because of a first day sell-out of student tickets.

One complaint is that new ticket sale procedures are not giving seniority to students who have been at Ohio State longer.

However, Paul Krebs, athletic ticket director for Ohio State, said there have been no changes in ticket sale procedures and attributes any problems to a greater interest in basketball games.

"It's the same way its been for the last four or five years, perhaps even longer," Krebs said.

Basketball ticket sales currently require that students pick up applications on a first-come, first-serve basis. Students must pay for the $42 for season tickets to get the application.

St. John Arena has a seating capacity of 13,200. Only 3,750 of these seats are reserved for students.

Krebs said after the allotted 3,750 applications are gone, no more are passed out.

According to an article in the Sept. 29 edition of the Lantern notifying students of upcoming ticket sales, the orders would be filled according to class rank. Krebs said the seating assignment is processed according to class rank, not the ticket applications.

"Demand for basketball tickets across the board has been tremendous," Krebs said. "There's not a whole lot we can do."

Krebs said the remainder of tickets are sold to faculty, staff and the general public, but could not say how many tickets are set aside for each of these groups.

He said more tickets aren't allotted to students because the demand is high from all these groups.

"You want to be in a situation where the tickets are in demand," Krebs said. "It's a good position to be in."

Some students are concerned about the low student allotment because they feel higher student attendance creates crowd enthusiasm.

Roy Norman, 21, a senior from Norwalk, is one of these students.

"It creates more of a fan atmosphere and generates more energy within the arena," Norman

Task force formed for Just Us issues

By Crystal Sadler
Lantern campus reporter

President Edward H. Jennings has formed a task force to study some of the concerns raised last spring by the black student organization Just Us.

The task force is comprised of three members of the black student organization Just Us; Shondra Davidson, Brian Harris and Rick Iverson. There is one faculty member, Mary Pegram and three administrators, Sue Blanshan, Lester Morrow and Robert Ransom also on the force.

The executive officer for Human Relations, Blanshan serves as the facilitator of the task force. Blanshan, appointed by President Jennings, selected the university officials on the task force.

"I tried to think of people who had solid research skills and whose concerns and values were in-line with Just Us members," she said. "I looked for people who feel a need for more diversity and recruitment at OSU. I also wanted some mix of faculty as well as administrators."

Blanshan said before the selections were finalized, descriptions of potential representatives were given to Just Us members for approval.

The task force's first meeting was Sept. 25. It plans to meet every two weeks throughout the year.

Ransom, an affirmative action research and information officer, said the task force will provide facts, programs, and solutions for the retention, recruitment, and graduation of black students at predominantly white colleges.

"We're not directly related to the demands although there is some overlapping," Ransom said, referring to the ten demands presented to President Jennings by Just Us in May 1989.

The first issues the representatives will look at include the retention, recruitment procedures, and graduation rates of black students at Ohio State. Members will compare the OSU statistics with other Big Ten schools.

The student members of the task force will research these issues by talking directly to students at other schools.

"We're going to talk to black student leaders at other Big Ten colleges and universities to ask them how they feel they are treated," Davidson, a sophomore from Columbus, said. "There are two sides to every story. We want to know from the students if they feel their universities are doing a good job of providing an atmosphere that will help black students feel comfortable enough to stay in school and graduate."

Just Us representatives will set deadlines for the research to be completed during the next meeting of the task force.

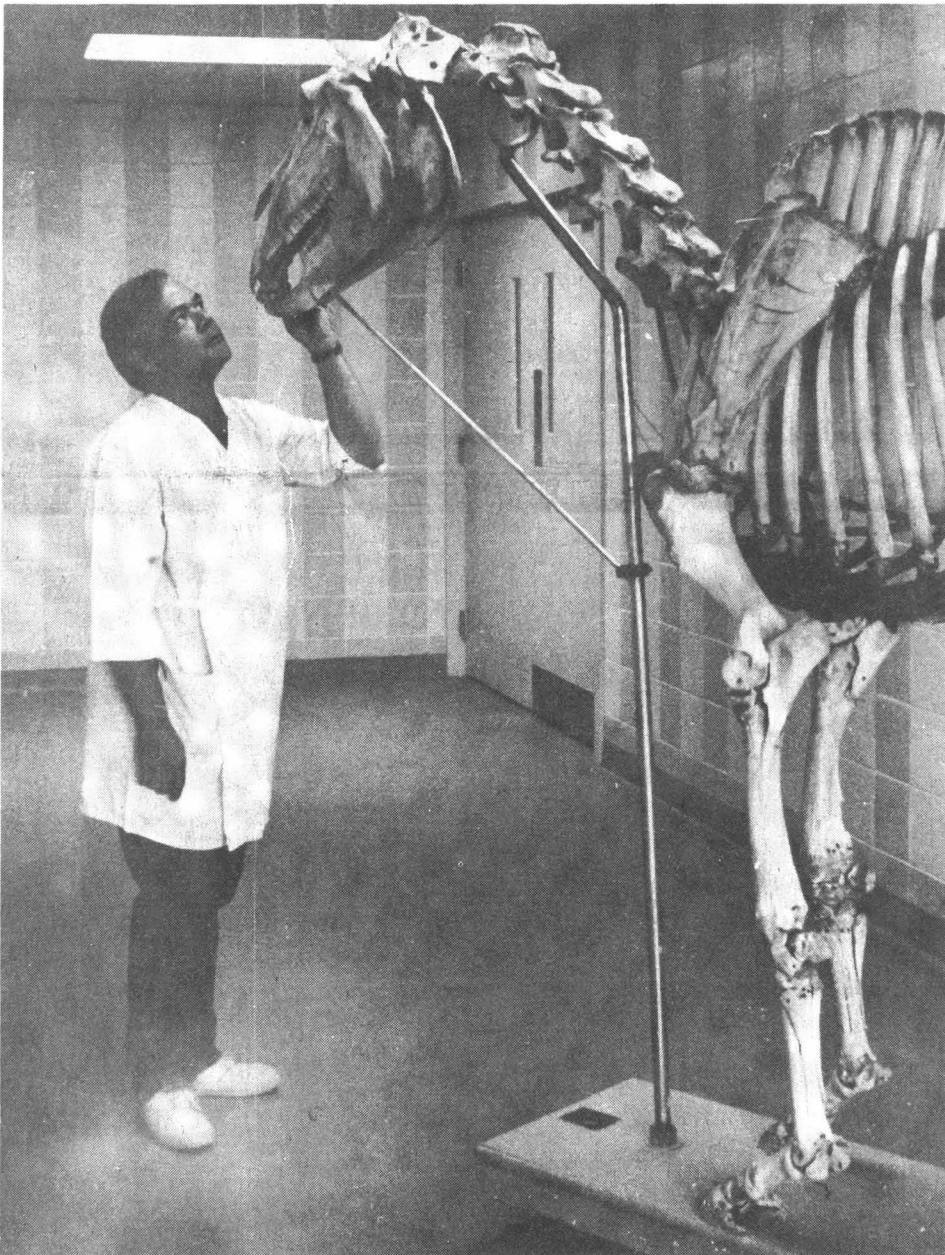

Iverson, a senior from Cleveland, said black students need to be aware of the retention and graduation problems.

"We need to educate ourselves because we have been miseducated for so long," Iverson said. "Once we know the truth, then it is that much harder for us to be manipulated or oppressed."

Task force member Pegram is an assistant professor in social work, Morrow is director for program development in the Office of Minority Affairs, and Harris is a second-year law student.

The task force will meet Monday, Oct. 9.

Jobs unfilled due to work-study delay

Referrals cause halt in work assignments

By David Sonderman
Lantern campus reporter

The work-study program at Ohio State is suffering a month-long delay in assigning students to jobs. This delay is leaving many student positions empty and unfinished work in university libraries.

College work-study is a federally funded program giving students an opportunity to work for the university and use the earnings to pay their living expenses. The students' eligibility is based on financial need.

Linda Poe, circulation supervisor of the Law Library, said there are a certain amount of hours to fill and no one to work them at the library.

She said the problem with getting work-study students is that they need to have a work referral card from the Work Study office, which takes more than a month to get. Without these cards, the students cannot be hired by the libraries.

Merilyn Rose, a counselor in the Financial Aid office, said there were several reasons for the backlog of referral cards. The Financial Aid office has recently installed a new computer phone system and during July and August, most of the staff time was spent getting the system ready for the fall. She said this time would usually be set aside for mailing the referral cards.

Another reason for the delay is the restructuring of the lines. Previously students had to wait at Financial Aid in a multiple-line system; now they must wait in one line. Rose said this eliminated a lot of waiting in line for students, but again took up a lot of staff time.

Jeanne Sauer, a personal aid adviser, said "(work-study) is a three-person office and two of the people are on medical leave."

Sauer said Rose actually works for the Financial Aid office and is helping the work-study office during the others' absence.

Poe said students who have worked for work-study in previous quarters already have a file made out with financial aid information, but these students are facing the same problem as new students.

Toni Morrison, personnel officer at the Main Library, said Work Study had called her last week to get a list of returning students, but has not heard from them since.

Rose said lists from the libraries and other facilities were requested to help expediate the job placement.

Morrison said she does have a few returning students working for her now, but she does not think she will be getting any new students.

Not all of the libraries are suffering from the delay.

Janet Brooks, student supervisor in the Journalism Library, said "This is the first time in a year that we have enough people."

But, she said she has no new students and one that she is trying to hire does not have an appointment with the Work Study office until Oct. 17.

"We are trying to accommodate as many students as possible and are even doubling up on our appointments," Rose said. All students have to make appointments to receive their referral cards, she said.

Brooks said most of the libraries are very dependent on the work-study students and it can be very difficult to fill their work schedules without them.

Rose said "There are more jobs than there are students."

The Health Science Library is another library not affected by the backlog.

Joanne Naour, a supervisor at the Health Science Library, said they seldom get work-study students and have a new student working for them now.

Poe said part of the problem is that the

Petition to move WOSR started

By Stacey Donovan
Lantern campus reporter

A petition has been started to get the WOSR radio station moved from Drake Union to the Journalism Building in hopes of a more convenient location and increased student involvement.

Sean Demaree, president of the Radio and Television News Directors' Association (RTNDA), said the petition was started at the Welcome Week Fair last Tuesday. He collected 100 signatures that day.

WOSR is a student-run radio station which transmits on the AM frequency, students now working for the station do not receive course credit.

Moving the station to the Journalism Building would mean that students working for the station would receive credit, Demaree said.

"I would like for it to be a vehicle for the students," he said.

However, Zach Bodish, general manager of the station, said he is against the move.

"It is not going to get moved to the Journalism Building," he said.

Bodish said he was never formally told about the petition and heard about it through word of mouth.

He said the radio station will be moving to the Ohio Union over Christmas break, and will be broadcasting from there starting winter quarter.

"I am in the dark to any journalism plans," Bodish said. "However, our plans to move to the Ohio Union have been out in the open since last spring quarter."

Walter Bunge, director of the School of Journalism, said the petition has been discussed, but it will need to be discussed further

Taft unconcerned about latest poll

By Aria Ala-U-Dini
Lantern city reporter

Republican gubernatorial candidate Robert A. Taft said Monday that he is not too concerned about last week's Columbus Dispatch survey which showed Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich as the front runner to win the party's endorsement in Franklin County.

"We will win this county," Taft said.

The Dispatch survey of 104 Franklin County Central Committee members showed they preferred Voinovich by a margin of nearly 6-to-1.

But Taft dismissed the findings and said it is too early in the elections to be picking winners.

"This race is just beginning," Taft said at the opening of his central Ohio election headquarters in Columbus. "I don't think anybody has a lock on the endorsement. It's extremely premature."

Taft's running mate is Franklin County Commissioner Dorothy Teater.

"My running mate is a strong vote-getter in Columbus . . . We're the strongest ticket to win in November," he said.

Taft, who in 1986 was Jim Rhodes' candidate as lieutenant governor, said he is confident he can sway a large number of committee members because they want to back a winning ticket.

"The endorsement which is really going to matter are the 97,000 voters in the county," he said.

The way Taft plans to win the county is through organizing a grass-roots campaign which he said is best suited to win this election.

Franklin County Republican Chairman Michael F. Colley said he also does not think the race is over.

"What we have is a count," Colley said. It is impossible to pick a winner based on the survey since the committee members haven't cast their votes yet, he said.

"What is true is the survey only reflects the feeling of the time," Colley said.

While a majority of the committee members now favor Voinovich, Colley said it does not mean he has clinched the county's endorsement, as the official voting is still three months away.

"The endorsement of the central committee is important for the governor's race," Colley said, but said he does consider it is as important as other races because the gubernatorial candidates will already get plenty of exposure to the public without it.

Taft said he believes the election is far from over, and when the smoke settles next February, he said he will be there to file for the election.

students need to work to get paid. The students may be accepted on Sept. 25, but will not receive their cards until Oct. 25. She said the university holds their paychecks for another month after working.

By the time some of the students get paid it could be near Thanksgiving.

"The Work Study program uses a bi-weekly pay period, the same as every other university payroll," Rose said.

One returning work-study student said her referral card was never mailed and she had to go to the office and pick it up. She said "If someone doesn't know what's going on (with the Work Study office), they are going to get pushed around."

Rose said, "We are not mailing referral cards any more. Students need to make appointments with the Work Study office to come in and get their referral cards."

said. "It stimulates the team and makes them feel like they are really being supported."

Norman, who waited about 45 minutes in line in an attempt to get tickets, said he felt there were other problems with the ticket sales.

"I don't think the application process was run very efficiently," he said. "I felt they could have at least put a sign up to say they had no more applications. This was uncourteous to students."

George Ade, athletic ticket manager for Purdue University, said 6,000 tickets are allotted to Purdue students, and that it has been this way for many years.

"The university is here for the students and so is the basketball team," he said. "We want as many students to be here as possible."

However, Ade said, often when the team is having a bad season student tickets don't sell out. Last year only 4,700 of these seats were filled by students.

The University of Iowa also designates 6,000 tickets for student sales. This policy was agreed to because student fees were used to help build their arena eight years ago.

"Students are a big part of your athletic program," Mike Naughton, director of the athletic ticket office at Iowa, said. "This is something that cannot be forgotten."

"Student attendance does cause enthusiasm, but so does attendance of other ticket-buying groups," Krebs said.

He said the other groups take their cue to cheer from the student body. "That's why we put the students on the court."

Krebs said OSU students probably have better seating than any other Big Ten school. "I don't know any other school that sets aside all the seats around the court for the students."

Krebs said all the students who submitted applications before 5:30 p.m. Monday have season tickets.

But this is not of any consolation to the many students who hoped to get the tickets which sold out after the first day.

"I understand them being upset," Krebs said. "But every student had an equal opportunity. Had they gotten here earlier they would have gotten tickets."

with the Student Activities Board.

Bunge said he is in favor of the petition as long as the Journalism building has the space for the station and enough financial support to make it a good station.

Demaree said students working at the station now would be allowed to keep their positions if the move is made.

If the station is moved to the Journalism Building, the format would be a little different, Demaree said. From 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

the station would have news programs, call-in shows or sports programs, he said.

The remaining time disc jockeys would be able to play music, Demaree said.

"WOSR has been accused of playing music that students don't want to hear," Maureen McClarnon, program director of WOSR, said.

She said the radio station plays alternative music, which includes folk, jazz, blues and other music that is not usually heard on Columbus radio stations.

McClarnon is afraid the music and the people involved in the station would change if the move takes place.

"I wouldn't want to see the station as something departmentally run," she said. "The spirit of the organization is important."

"The thought that the station would have to answer to someone else who does not understand our philosophy, and is not that familiar with the station is not something our members want," Bodish said.

He said the station is independent now and that they want to stay.

"We are a student-run organization and student organizations cannot be pirated away by a department unless that organization is willing to have this happen," Bodish said.

OSU aids instructor training

Project to improve the quality of education in Indonesia

By Michelle Buemi
Lantern campus reporter

Ohio State is involved in a $120 million, five-year project to aid in the training of quality instructors for universities in Indonesia.

The Second Indonesia University Development Project, which is financed by World Bank, is designed to help develop graduate and undergraduate programs to better the quality of education in Indonesia, the largest island nation in the world.

The Midwest Universities Consortium for International Affairs, a department within Ohio State, and seven other universities in the United States are involved in this international development project.

"We became the center for Indonesian affairs on campus," said Peter Bouton, director for Indonesian programs at the consortium.

He said the consortium office at 104 E. 15th Ave. coordinates the two academic aspects of the project; a technical assistance and visiting scholar program and an overseas, non-degree program.

ROLAND SEYMOUR, associate professor of botany, has already traveled to Indonesia as a visiting scholar twice and is planning a third trip to the Pacific island nation in December.

"We are trying to develop a program in mycology, which is the study of fungi, at the Bandung Institute of Technology," Seymour said. He said they are concerned with insect and pest problems in the silk worm, aquaculture and pea industries and coffee and rice plantations.

"It is the perspective held by a lot of people that in the next century, the Pacific nations will have strong economies."

—Peter Bouton

Also as part of the non-degree project, Seymour has had four Indonesian interns spend their summers studying here.

"They bring us their culture and give us a new way of looking at their agricultural problems," he said.

SARA SIMPSON, associate program coordinator, said ten Indonesian students have been at Ohio State for three-month periods and currently a student is here for 12 months studying in the department of food science and nutrition. Another student who will study biochemistry is expected to arrive in mid-October.

Simpson said Indonesian students travel to the United States and other countries to pursue research or training opportunities or for short-term programs such as conferences and workshops.

Complimentary to the Univerpartment.

Ikranagara said the language course will be beneficial because of the many people becoming involved in the Indonesian projects.

The projects contain a lot of exchange of personnel between our countries, she said.

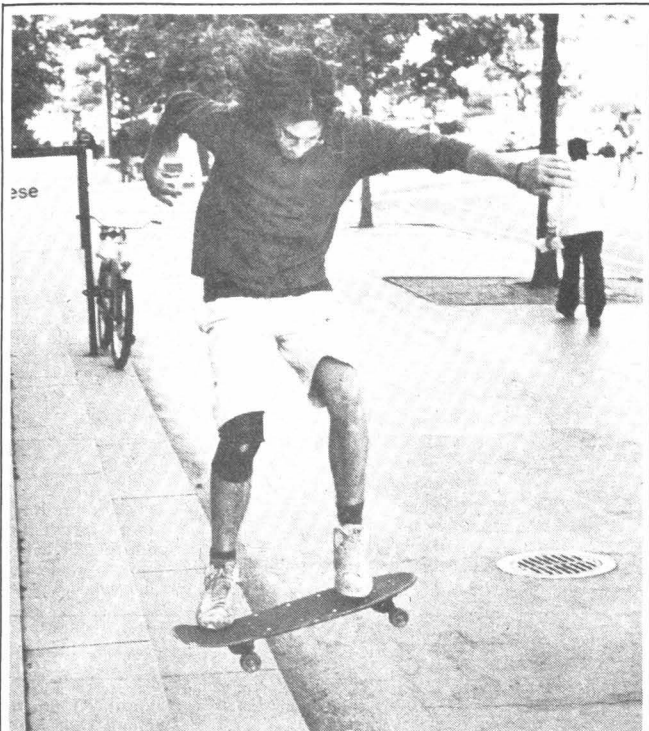

Bouton said the class would also be helpful because the 21st century is expected to be the age of strong Pacific nations, while this century had strong Atlantic nations.

"It is the perspective held by a lot of people that in the next century, the Pacific nations will have strong economies," he said.

Bouton said the United States will need to increase knowledge of those countries in order to deal with them more effectively.

STEPHEN SUMMERHILL, assistant vice provost for the international affairs department, said it is difficult to initiate new language programs.

"The toughest thing is to create new language programs because it involves long-term commitments by the department," he said. "We are trying to work towards that within East Asian Literature and Languages."

More students select honors math

By Elizabeth Illes
Lantern campus reporter

The Department of Mathematics at Ohio State is experiencing an enrollment increase in honors courses this year, especially honors Math 190.

Ron Solomon, honors committee chairman, said students are choosing the H190 course instead of a non-honors course such as Math 161.

Solomon said "Up to this year, math had an Honors 161 sequence, but math had difficulty identifying the correct audience of freshman for honors, so it was discontinued."

The mathematics department decided to place most students initially in Math 161 and use that course as a screening test for honors placement later, he said.

Judie Monson, an academic program counselor for mathematics, said the math department had trouble identifying students for the honors courses. She said the criteria used in evaluating students for the Honors 190 course is SAT scores of 700 or better, credit for calculus in high school which could be obtained by advanced placement credit and a calculus background.

Monson said the number of students receiving advanced placement credit in high school is increasing, which has had a direct effect in the enrollment of Honors 190.

The increase in the honors enrollment has had other influences, she said. The selective admissions policy at Ohio State helps to attract better prepared students to the school and increasing difficulty to finance an education at out-of-state private institutions is also bringing more students.

Alayne Parson, professor of mathematics, said most of the students who were in the discontinued H161 course are now enrolled in the H190 course.

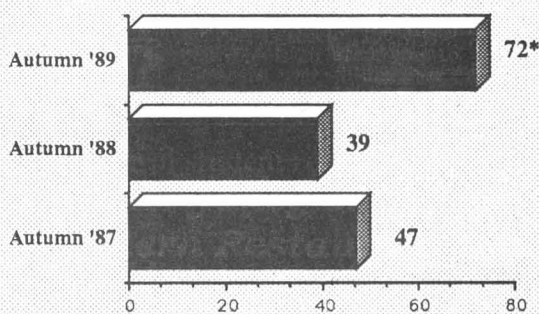

Parson said, "The course is designed for students who have had calculus before, and it is a very rigorous course." She said most students in H190 are engineering majors.

Monson said "The students in H190 have to enjoy mathematics, and be good at it." Some students were selecting the honors courses for the wrong reasons, she said. "The 'H' looked attractive to students and they liked the courses because of the small classes."

She said the students who do well in Math 161 have the option to enroll in H162 the following quarter. "Performance in 161 will allow a better measure of handling H162," Monson said.

Partisanship:

It's in the court

Here ye, here ye. Break out the banners and start the rhetoric. The U.S. Supreme Court is back in session.

By all accounts we can expect a replay of last term, including the biggest issue to divide a nation since slavery, abortion.

The Court has chosen to hear three abortion cases. Two involve minors and one involves abortion clinics.

Some other cases have to do with the right to die, religious meetings held in schools and federal judges' power.

All these cases could, in some way, affect any of us at any time. Attempting to dissect each one and determining its potential effect will be spared for those individuals and publications qualified to do so.

The aspect of this session of the Supreme Court that will ultimately prove noteworthy is increasing partisanship of the Court.

The purpose of the court is to interpret the law as it applies to today's issues. Surely our founders would scorn partisanship in the Supreme Court and presidents using the court for their political gains.

At what point will our current system be bogged down to a standstill by partisan politics?

One would think at least in the branch of government that was founded on balancing party politics this would not have to be the case.

Unfortunately for us it is. As citizens of the United States we should — now more than ever — take notice of what goes on in Washington and try to analyze for ourselves how we're being affected.

We can not forget our government should work for us.

Homeless:

Student effort applauded

Some college students in Cincinnati are learning the art of fighting for a cause long after the cause has been fashionable. They are spending several days fighting the elements to stir publicity for the plight of the homeless.

The students constructed makeshift cardboard structures Sunday on the Xavier University campus. Leaders said they did it to bring attention to the need for more low-income housing.

About 100 students plan to sleep in the shanty town through today, despite rain that has been pelting them since Sunday.

Some of the students plan to go to Washington on Friday to attend a rally, and participate in the Housing Now march on Saturday.

It is heartening to see today's students show social consciousness in a responsible manner. It is even more heartening to see these students offer solutions — more low-income housing — rather than just spouting at the mouth.

The homelessness problem, despite leaving the front pages, has not and will not go away soon.

The students, from Xavier, the University of Cincinnati, Miami University in Oxford and Thomas Moore College in Crestview Hills, Ky., also plan to lobby congressmen for legislation to help the homeless.

These types of actions help in at least two ways. The best thing that could happen would be for the students are successful in convincing the congressmen to do something. But the students will also help themselves by learning how government works.

We just hope they don't have to learn how slow our government can be in reacting to the wishes of the people.

Jessica brings talents to campus

Last week, Jessica Hahn brought her show to Columbus, making appearances at Waterbeds'n'Stuff, The Elephant Bar and the Street Scene here on campus.

The appearances were the brainchild of Stubby Doak, half of the morning radio team of Jones and Doak on WMGG-FM. According to Doak, "I knew Jessica's 30th birthday was coming up, and I just wondered what she was up to. We gave her a call, worked out the details and she agreed to come to Columbus."

Now I know the Hahn story is passe, but let's face it: she is a MEDIA EVENT. According to Ron Zeller, owner of the Street Scene, "We had people come in from as far away as Zanesville." Imagine that! Zanesville!

And why shouldn't they come? After all, how often do we get to see a woman who has nothing to recommend her except a tryst with a major religious figure and boobs the size of Texas cantaloupes? How often do we get to meet a woman who has appeared in Playboy not once, but twice? How often do those of us in the media get to ask burning questions like "So, what's Jim Bakker really like?" Inquiring minds want to know.

As a columnist who is always careful to do his research, I caught Jessica's appearance at the Street Scene on Thursday night. Essentially, her show consisted of autographing pictures, performing "Wild Thing" on stage, and generally hanging out, being a celebrity. The crowd was large — about 300 by Zeller's estimate.

I also managed to wake up early enough to catch Jessica's stint as guest DJ on the "Morning Deal" on WMGG. The show featured a call-in session. According to Robin Jones, the other half of the WMGG morning team, "The phone lines never stopped flashing. And the odd thing was that about 90 percent of the calls were positive, or at least sympathetic."

Poor Jessica! It must be tough being a celebrity. All those TV and radio appearances, the grueling modelling assignments for Playboy, the music videos, and all that MONEY! According to reports, an estimated $265,000 for spending roughly an hour with Bakker, $10,000 a pop for her Playboy pictorials, and personal-appearance fees since the story broke. As Doak noted, "Jessica was paid a fee for her appearance here in Columbus, but only one person at the station knows how much. And he isn't talking."

Something about this whole affair bothers me. It isn't that Jessica did it with Bakker — to be honest, I didn't even know who Bakker was before the story broke. And knowing about the sexual liasons of people I've never met doesn't really excite me — I really don't care what two people did in a Florida hotel room 10 years ago. And I'm not even upset that Jessica is raking in the cash.

No, I guess what really bothers me is that someone like Jessica would be presented to us as entertainment. In this long-running soap opera we call life, she has been marketed as an episode that appeals to the voyeuristic and prurient side of human nature. Let's face it, sex sells. And if it's sex with a religious figure, it takes a team of accountants to tally up the proceeds.

But Jessica wants to put all that behind her and go legit as, get this, a DJ. She's already done a turn at a station in Phoenix, and as Doak pointed out, the door is open for a career in radio. It doesn't matter that she has no training or skills that would qualify her for the job: she has name recognition. That seems to concern both Jones and Doak. "Opportunity is one thing," said Doak, "but talent is another."

Jones told me that Jessica has other aspirations, too. She also wants to be a writer, and she's currently seeking a publisher for her first literary effort — an account of her experiences with Bakker and the hubbub that resulted. That concerns me. But being the good sport that I am, I have some advice for Jessica. Learn how to type. To revise. To know the difference between a noun and a verb. To spell.

But Jessica is, after all, a celebrity, and celebrities don't have to actually know how to write. That's what ghost writers are for. And celebrities don't simply tell their story anymore — they negotiate for a mini-series or, better yet, a six-figure movie deal. That's what lawyers are for. And celebrities don't have to perform those mundane tasks the rest of us are saddled with, like pouring our own coffee or cutting our own meat. That's what personal managers are for.

The Jessica Hahn phenomenon will, of course, continue to proliferate. It's the American way. I guess that's the saddest aspect of all. Fame, it seems, comes in direct proportion to the depravity of our acts. I'm worried that history will remember someone like Jessica Hahn ahead of such minor figures as, say, Mother Theresa.

But it's hard to place blame in this matter. After all, Jones and Doak are just nice folks who don't take themselves too seriously. And Zeller is just a regular guy who is trying to run a business. While they might be accused of poor taste, the fact remains that they all know the value of publicity. "We did draw a good crowd, and there weren't any problems to speak of," Zeller said. And according to Jones, "The publicity for the station was good."

In reality, it seems that the ones to blame are those of us who actually go to see Jessica. I expected a few laughs but it didn't turn out that way. Instead I felt only pity for her. She's not all that attractive. Neither is she all that witty. In reality, Jessica Hahn is nothing more than a tart who is succeeding in cashing in on her sordid past. And those of us who go to see her are helping her do just that.

Perhaps the best advice of all came from Doak. As I was getting ready to leave the WMGG studio, Jones handed me a publicity shot of Jessica. Doak took it and, with a black magic marker, drew a circle around her face with a line running through the middle, just like on a traffic sign.

Just say no to Jessica Hahn.

Cubs' player shows feelings, talent

A white-haired man wrote me a nice letter that I'd like to share.

He wrote that he had been at an amateur baseball tournament in Quincy, Mass.

In the evening, he was sitting around with some of the sportswriters and baseball scouts who were swapping stories.

Then one of them brought out a copy of Baseball Digest and with a grin started reading an article.

It was my annual Cub quiz, which that magazine had reprinted. As Cub fans know, my quiz is about the futility of past Cub teams and is written strictly for laughs.

Most of the quizzes contain at least one question about a former Cub shortstop named Lennie Merullo.

Fans who go back to the 1940s will remember Merullo. He hit about .240 or so and usually led the league in errors. We Cub fans were not always kind to him with our boos and jeers.

This year's Merullo question went this way:

Q: Everyone used to laugh at the immortal Lennie Merullo because he made so many errors at shortstop. And they laughed at the way he hit. But in 1947, he led the Cubs in stolen bases. How many bases did he steal that year?

A: Four. They laughed at him for that, too.

Everyone at the gathering got a laugh out of it — except the white-haired man, who tried to grin, but couldn't.

After the evening broke up, the white-haired man sat down at his desk and wrote me this letter:

"Dear Mike,

"I suppose I should have laughed or smiled to cover my feelings when one of the baseball men at this tournament read your Cub quiz. Everyone enjoyed it thoroughly.

"But I'm writing because I thought you might like to know whatever became of your favorite Cub shortstop.

"I'm now 66 years old, the father of four wonderful grown sons, grandfather of three, and still married very happily to my girl-next-door sweetheart (nee: Jean Czarnetzki).

"And I've spent my entire years in baseball — a very much respected scout here in the New England area and on special assignments throughout the country.

"Mike, I never professed to have been a good major league shortstop with the Cubs. As you have put it, I was a no-hit, very erratic player. I've had to live with that.

"However, it was not from not working at it. I worked at it too hard. I was not relaxed. Too tense.

"I'm still a Cub fan and appreciate the opportunity they gave me and like to remember my major league experience as having played with some very good Cubs players and against some great players who broke in about the same time. (Roomed with Phil Cavaretta for eight years.)

"I once read a column of yours in which you remembered how frustrating it was to be a Cub fan when you were a kid because of the way Lennie Merullo played. Or something like that. Well, at least I've given you something to write about and something that gives the readers a smile or even a good laugh.

"Perhaps my contribution to baseball can be described as being able to understand and have a feel for the player who is having a bad day — as I have had many, and know the feeling.

"I'm enclosing a photo of me that I think you'll get a kick out of because it's the way I hit and played shortstop for the Cubs — with my eyes closed.

"Yours truly,

"Lennie Merullo."

I suppose I'm a typical baseball fan. We boo and yell at the players and give little thought to the fact that those are human beings out there on the field.

I didn't consider that when I tossed off a few funny lines about Lennie Merullo and other Cub old-timers.

Nor do most of us fans consider that anybody who makes it to the major leagues — even a .235 hitter who makes too many errors — is a remarkable athlete.

Millions of us played sandlot or high school or college ball. But only a tiny percentage of us made it to the majors. It takes great athletic ability.

So, I now take a vow — no more wise-guy remarks about Lennie in future Cub quiz columns.

And I'm going to put his gracious and gentlemanly letter in one of my scrapbooks along with the picture of him closing his eyes at the camera's flash.

Wait, I have to amend that. There will be one final brief quiz about Lennie Merullo. Here goes:

Q: In about 1946, the Brooklyn Dodgers had a powerhouse team, loaded with top players. They really enjoyed bullying our hapless Cubs. One day, in Ebbets Field, a fight broke out and both teams poured out on the field. One of the most belligerent Dodgers was Dixie Walker, one of the top hitters in the league, and a very tough guy. When the fighting ended, a Cub player had a set of bruised knuckles on his right hand. And Dixie Walker had some gaps where his front teeth used to be. Quick, name the Cub player who separated Dixie Walker from his front teeth and made us Cub fans proud.

A: The immortal Lennie Merullo, of course.

So don't tell me you never gave us anything to cheer about, pal.

Mike Royko writes for the Chicago Tribune.

SPORTS

Big Ten teams look to join league leaders

This is the first in a two-part series on the Big Ten.

By Brent LaLonde
Lantern sports reporter

10. Northwestern (0-3)

Head Coach: Francis Peay.
Last year: 2-8-1, 2-5-1 (tied for seventh).

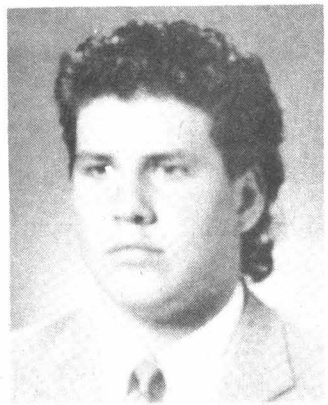

Northwestern won two games in the Big Ten last year. And for Northwestern standards, that was a pretty good year.

The Wildcats have not won more than two Big Ten games in one year since winning four in 1974.

This year will be about the same as last year for the Wildcats.

Tim O'Brien had assumed the quarterback role after playing a backup role last year. He has plenty of offensive weapons in junior running back Bob Christian and wide receiver Richard Buchanan.

Buchanan caught 41 passes for 514 yards as a sophomore last year, while Christian picked up 413 yards on 98 carries. Christian replaces Byron Sanders, who skipped his final year of eligibility to enter the NFL draft. Sanders is the older brother of Barry Sanders, last year's Heisman Trophy winner.

The Wildcats problems this year have been on defense.

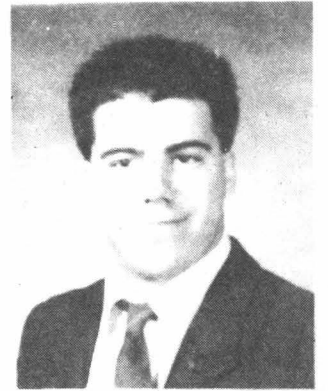

"We are not playing very well on defense this year," Peay said. "And we need to improve and hope our offense can maintain its momentum."

9. Wisconsin (1-2)

Head Coach: Don Morton.

Last year: 1-10, 1-7 (tied for ninth).

Wisconsin has already equaled its win total of 1988, but that was a 23-10 win over Toledo, a member of the Mid-American Conference.

Sean Wilson

File photo

So how good — or bad — are the Badgers this year? Probably not as bad as its 51-3 loss to Miami (Fla.), but just as bad as its 20-14 loss to California.

Redshirt Sean Wilson has emerged as the starting quarterback. He completed nine of 12 passes for 109 yards in the win over Toledo, but was versatile in the loss to California. O'Brien completed 13 of 30 passes for 130 yards and picked up 134 yards rushing on 29 carries. O'Brien has completed 27 of 54 passes for 293 yards and two touchdowns on the season.

Robert Williams, Damone Freeman, Jimmy Henderson, and Leon Hunt provide the Badgers with three quality running backs.

Dan Kissling, a senior outside linebacker, is the mainstay of the Badgers defense, but is expected to miss the Badgers conference opener against Michigan due to a sprained ankle.

8. Purdue (1-2)

Head Coach: Fred Akers.
Last year: 4-7, 3-5 (sixth).

In ten years as head coach at Texas, Fred Akers won 86 games. In two years at Purdue, Akers has won only seven.

So what has been the difference between the two schools?

One has been the talent factor at Purdue the last two years. When Akers took over for Leon Burnett, he did not inherit too much talent.

One talented player he did inherit was senior flanker Calvin Williams, who has caught 79 passes the last two years. Included in the totals are 37 catches for 379 yards and three touchdowns last year.

Throwing to Williams this year has been junior quarterback Steve Letnich, who won the starting job with a solid showing during spring drills.

The Boilermakers should start showing the results of one of the best recruiting classes in the nation two years ago.

Jarrett Scales is the leading rusher returning to the Boilermakers fold this year after gaining 362 yards on 115 carries.

7. Minnesota (2-1)

Head Coach: John Gutenkunst.

Last year: 2-7-2, 0-6-2 (tied for ninth).

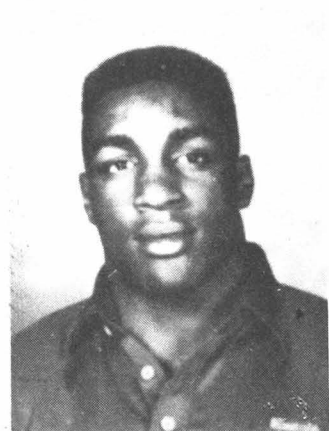

If Minnesota head coach John Gutenkunst had it his way, the Gophers would do the same thing offensively each game.

And that would be giving the ball to running back Darrell Thompson about 30 times a game.

"Darrell is certainly an excellent back," Gutenkunst said. "I am just glad he can run the ball 30 times a game."

Last year a myriad of injuries prevented Thompson from reaching his potential, but he still managed to pick up 947 yards on 210 carries. He gained 1,240 yards as a freshman and 1,229 as a sophomore.

Darrell Thompson

File photo

"Darrell is healthier now than he was all last year," Gutenkunst said.

On defense, senior linebacker Jon Leverenz is finally healthy. Or at least healthy enough to compete. After making 162 tackles as a sophomore, Leverenz injured his knee in the season-opener last year and missed the remainder of the season as well as spring practice.

"Leverenz is getting better every game," Gutenkunst said. "There is no fluid in the knee."

6. Iowa (2-1)

Head Coach: Hayden Fry.

Last year: 6-4-3, 4-1-3 (tied for third in Big Ten).

This time last year, Iowa had already had nine major operations on members of the football team. From ankles to knees to shoulders, the Hawkeyes were hurting.

The extraordinary amount of injuries was weird, but not as weird as the Hawkeyes' 6-4-3 record.

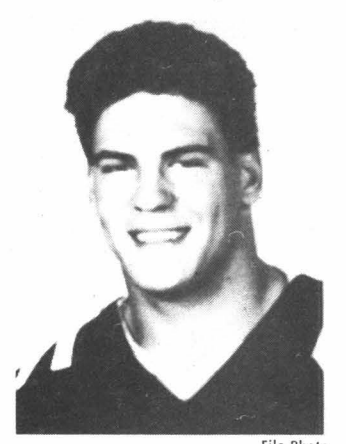

This season Iowa has remained healthy and is 2-1 heading into its Big Ten opener against Michigan State.

"We are real young, and we are growing," head coach Hayden Fry said. "I wish we had a couple more games to prepare for the Big Ten season."

Tony Stewart, who ran for 1,036 yards last season, returns to give Iowa an explosive running back, but he has gained just 153 yards in the Hawkeyes' first three games this year.

Matt Rodgers, a redshirt sophomore, has won the quarterback

Brad Quast

job over Tom Poholsky and Jim Hartlieb. Rodgers is the son of Boston Celtics head coach Jimmy Rodgers, who was a two-time basketball MVP at Iowa.

Brad Quast is an All-American candidate at linebacker.

Browns pleased with Denver win

Mack sentenced to six months

CLEVELAND (AP) — Despite the Cleveland Browns' dismal running game, coach Bud Carson praised the team for beating the Denver Broncos 16-13 Sunday on a field goal by Matt Bahr the last play of the game.

"There were a lot of people involved who allowed us to come back and win the game," Carson said. "It was a team victory, one we're fortunate to get. It's the kind of win you have to have to have a big season."

The Browns improved to 3-1 and are tied with Cincinnati for first place in the Central Division of the American Conference. The Browns did not practice Tuesday.

Quarterback Bernie Kosar, who rarely runs with the football, led the Browns in rushing Sunday with 33 yards on four carries, including a 23-yard run.

Browns running back Kevin Mack was sentenced to six months in prison Tuesday after pleading guilty to using cocaine.

Judge Richard McMonagle of Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court sentenced Mack to the Mansfield Reformatory, a facility southwest of Cleveland for first-time offenders younger than 30 years old, Cuyahoga County assistant prosecutor Frank Gasper said.

Mack, 26, must spend a minimum of 30 days in jail before he can apply for probation, Gasper said.

Mack was being held at the county jail Tuesday. Ohio law requires he be sent to the reformatory within five days of sentencing, said Louis Kulis, operations chief at the county sheriff's department.

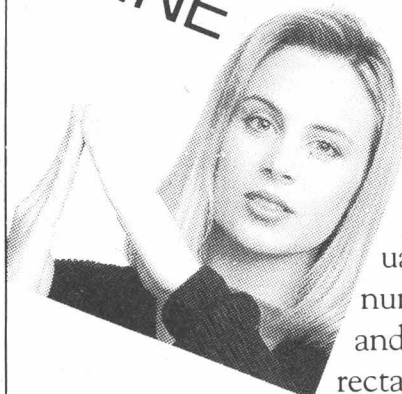

Mack was arrested June 28 while inside a car parked on a Cleveland street. Police said they found 11 packets of cocaine valued at $50 each inside the car.

Mack also was charged with cocaine trafficking, possession of criminal tools and using a motor vehicle for drug abuse, but those charges were dropped as part of Mack's guilty plea to drug use, Gasper said.

Bears take 2 game lead

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bears are right where they're accustomed to being, 4-0 a quarter of the way through the 1989 season, and two games ahead in the NFC Central, where they haven't been out of first place since the opening game of 1984.

The Philadelphia Eagles could be on their way out of the NFC East race, even this early in the season.

"I know a lot of people didn't expect us to be here," Bears coach Mike Ditka said after his team beat Philadelphia 27-13 Monday night for its fourth straight win.

"If you said that we'd be 4-0 after playing Cincinnati, Minnesota and Philadelphia this early, a lot of people would have been surprised."

The win over Philadelphia was accomplished by Mike Tomczak, who threw three touchdown passes, and a defense, led by Richard Dent, that had four sacks and four interceptions of Randall Cunningham.

Cunningham, held to 53 yards passing in the first half, finished with 32 of 62 for 401 yards but could not get the Eagles closer than 20-13 after they trailed 20-3 entering the final period.

The loss put the Eagles, who won the NFC East last season, in a tenuous position after entering the season as a consensus favorite to win the division.

They are 2-2, two games behind the New York Giants (4-0) and play the Giants Sunday at Philadelphia. It is a must game, because a division loss at home and Philadelphia would not only trail by three games but would be one game down to the Giants in the event of a tiebreaker.

Croghan leads cross country team

This week, senior cross country runner Mark Croghan is the "OSU Athlete of the Week."

By Jack Renz
Lantern sports reporter

For a guy who doesn't like running in the rain, Ohio State cross country runner Mark Croghan sure looks like he doesn't mind getting his feet wet.

Croghan, a senior from Greensburg majoring in business, has taken first place for his team and amongst his competition in the first two meets of the season — both in the rain.

Croghan's winning times in the two 8,000-meter races, 24:13 in the Penn State Invitational and 24:42.4 in the home meet against Stanford and Wright State, have put him on a the right track for the Big Ten Championships at the end of this month.

OSU ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

Croghan's two wins led to his recognition as the Big Ten Cross Country Athlete of the Month for September. Croghan feels he has as good a chance as anybody to win the Big Ten.

"If the weather conditions are preferable and it is a normal race, the low twenty-fours is the place that would put me in the thick of things," Croghan said.

Although he ran his first two meets in the rain and did very well, preferable weather conditions to Croghan means a hot dry day. He said that these are conditions other people don't like to run in and he uses it to his advantage.

"Mark is a great athlete," said assistant track and cross country coach Lee LaBadie. "You ask him to do something and he goes out and does it."

"Traditionally, if you can run 4:50 per mile for five miles, you will be one of the contenders," said LaBadie. "But, that can change with the weather and the conditions of the course."

Croghan said that he has been winning from the time he started running.

"I decided to run track in the seventh grade when I got tired of playing baseball," said Croghan. "I was looking for another sport to do in the spring."

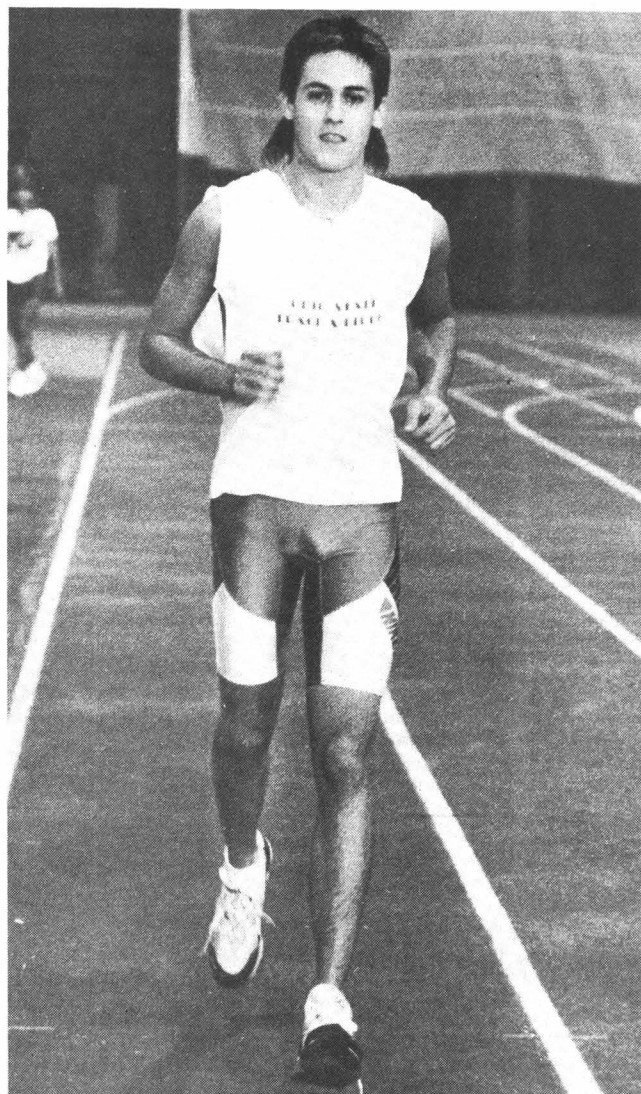

Croghan said in his first meet when the coach asked for volunteers to run the mile, he was the only person who agreed to do it. And after a second-place finish, he decided he liked running long distance.

When Croghan reached his freshman year, at Green High School he began running cross country, which proved to be quite successful. He made it to the state competition his freshman year at Green and returned to the state meet the next three seasons for his team.

"I was able to adjust to my place on the team at OSU because of the experience at the state competitions," said Croghan. "But the collegiate competition was tougher than what I was used to in high school."

Croghan adjusted fairly well to OSU; he is the only person to win the first meet of the year for the past three seasons.

Croghan has not only been a winner for the cross country team, he has proved his ability in a somewhat unusual event in outdoor track.

OSU cross country runner Mark Croghan

Nicole D'Alonzo/The Lantern

Last spring, Croghan took second in the steeplechase at the Big Ten Outdoor Track Championships. Croghan's second place in this unusual event, where a person must run over obstacles in the course, qualified him for the National championships in that event.

Although he missed receiving All-American status by one position, Croghan proved he was one of the top 10 runners in the nation by placing ninth in the championship race.

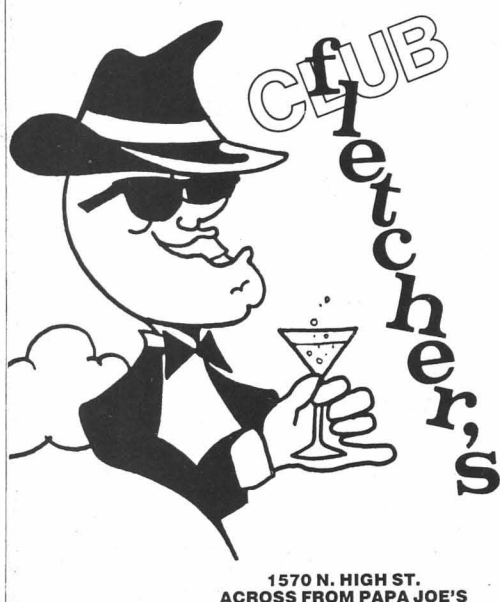

Croghan said this is his last cross country season, but he is looking forward to the indoor and outdoor season. He said the experience he has received has given him confidence in the big meets. He looks forward to spring and the possible return to the National Championships.

After graduation, Croghan said he definitely wants to continue to run.

"My main goal is to try to get to the top three in the country in the steeplechase by 1992, so that I could get to the Olympic Games. It's a dream, but it is something that is within reach," he said.

As for right now, all Croghan is worrying about is the rest of the cross country season and the meet coming up with Michigan State this Saturday.

Friends meet in NL playoffs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Roger Craig and Don Zimmer have learned a lot about winning by losing.

They have been friends for about 40 years, and that won't end just because their teams will meet in the National League playoffs starting Wednesday night at Wrigley Field.

"Don and I have been friends for a long time," Craig said. "And no matter who wins, we'll still be friends."

"If we're not in the World Series, I'll be rooting for the Chicago Cubs."

Craig has taken a San Francisco Giants team that lost 100 games in 1985 to two division championships in the last three years.

Their careers started out promising enough, members of the World Series champion Brooklyn Dodgers in 1955.

Craig, a rookie, started Game 5 of the World Series and beat the New York Yankees 5-3. He pitched six innings and allowed four hits before Clem Labine finished.

"That was the only champion Brooklyn ever had and I was there at the start of my career," Craig said. "It wasn't always that easy."

Zimmer, an infielder, played in four games of the 1955 Series, with two hits in nine at-bats.

"Don could hit," Craig said. "But he had a couple of serious head injuries that hurt his career."

In 1956, Zimmer was hit in the head by a pitch from Cincinnati's Hal Jeffcoat.

"I don't think about what might have been," Zimmer said. "I consider myself lucky that I have always been around baseball. I've been in this game for more than 40 years. That's not so bad."

Well, some of it wasn't exactly pretty.

In 1962, Zimmer and Craig crossed paths again as teammates with the expansion New York Mets.

The Mets lost 120 games, a major-league record. Craig lost 24 games and Zimmer was the Mets' opening-day third baseman. He lasted 14 games, hitting .077.

"I learned a lot in those years," said Craig, who improved to 5-22 in 1963. "You have to look for the positives, try to build on that."

"Sure the Mets were terrible in 1962, but within seven years they won the World Series."

Zimmer's first managerial job came with the San Diego Padres in 1972-73. He finished last each season, losing 103 games in 1973.

From there it was on to Boston and things were looking good in 1978.

But the Red Sox blew a 14-game lead over the Yankees in mid-July and lost a one-game playoff.

Zimmer and Craig are finally in a position where they can't lose.

Craig took over for Jim Davenport in late 1985 as the Giants finished 62-100. The next season, Craig turned them into winners and in 1987 the Giants came within one game of going to the World Series.

The Cubs were 77-85 last season and many observers predicted a last-place finish this year after a 9-23 record in spring training.

The last time the Giants won the Series was 1954, when the franchise was in New York. They haven't played in the World Series since losing to the New York Yankees in 1962.

The Cubs? They haven't won a World Series since 1908.

Giants have playoff experience

CHICAGO (AP) — Everyone talks about postseason experience, but is it really that valuable?

Some say yes, and if that's true, the San Francisco Giants hold a big edge in the National League playoffs. If not, the Chicago Cubs aren't in such bad shape.

"We're a more mature team than they are and that should help," Giants second baseman Robby Thompson said. "We've been in these situations before."

The experience-laden Giants will get another chance starting Wednesday night at Wrigley Field.

More than half of the San Francisco players have been in at least one playoff and many were with the team in 1987 when it lost in seven games to St. Louis. Several of the players have been in more.

Kevin Mitchell, for instance, also played for the 1986 World Series champion New York Mets. Candy Maldonado made it to the playoffs with Los Angeles in 1983 and 1985. Don Robinson helped Pittsburgh win the World Series in 1979 and Craig Lefferts and Terry Kennedy were with San Diego in the 1984 World Series.

Of the Cubs, only Luis Salazar has played in a World Series, in 1984 with the Padres. Only a few other Chicago players have ever reached the playoffs, and none have been on the winning side.

"I don't think that's going to hurt us," said Ryne Sandberg, who batted .368 in the Cubs' 1984 loss to San Diego. "Our younger guys have been in big situations this season and haven't been nervous."

Besides, what good is postseason experience if the experience wasn't that good?

Scott Garrelts, the Giants' starter in Game 1, gave up two runs on two hits and four walks in 2 2-3 innings of the 1987 series. Mitchell is just 12-for-46 with one home run in postseason play. Rick Reuschel was tagged for 15 hits and seven runs in 10 innings in 1987. Robinson has a career 5.40 earned-run average. Maldonado is a .179 lifetime hitter in postseason play and Thompson was only 2-for-20 in 1987.

Some of the current Giants have done much better. Lefferts has pitched 12 scoreless innings and is 2-0 with one save, and Will Clark hit .360 in the 1987 playoffs.

One of the best postseason performers is injured. Left-handed pitcher Dave Dravecky, sidelined by a broken pitching arm, gave up one earned run in 21 innings with San Diego in 1984 and the Giants in 1987.

With the exception of Sandberg, most of the Cubs' postseason performances have bordered on bad.

Rick Sutcliffe won the Cy Young Award in 1984, but is still remembered for losing the deciding Game 5 of the playoffs. Andre Dawson, in his only postseason appearance, went 3-for-20 with Montreal in 1981. Vance Law was just 2-for-11 with the Chicago White Sox in 1983.

"I'm looking forward to getting another chance in the playoffs," Dawson said. "Every player's goal is to win the World Series, and I've never gotten to play in one. Maybe this will be the year."

Young Turner network thrives on old movies

NEW YORK (AP) — Tonight's "Big Picture" is a Montgomery Clift film, "The Search," made in 1948. Then comes another post-war film, "Till the End of Time," a 1946 drama with Robert Mitchum and Dorothy McGuire.

The Late, Late Show of a local TV station? No.

It's tonight's prime-time fare on TNT — which on Tuesday celebrated its first cable-TV birthday with little hoopla, a record of solid growth and anticipation of more.

The brainchild and fourth network of cable wizard Ted Turner, Turner Network Television arrived on Oct. 3, 1989, its basic fare classic and maybe-not-so-classic films of yesteryear and big-budget, made-for-cable movies.

When it began amid considerable drumbeating and cable's first showing of "Gone With the Wind," TNT, a 24-hour-a-day operation, had 17 million subscribers. Now, it says, the figure is up to 33 million.

TNT isn't yet in the top 10 list of cable networks, a list led by mostly sports ESPN with more than 52 million subscribers. "We still have a way to go to catch up with the leaders," concedes Gerry Hogan, TNT's boss.

"But we feel there's plenty of growth left," adds Hogan, who as president of Turner Entertainment Networks is in charge of both TNT and TBS, the latter Turner's cable superstation in Atlanta. Turner's other networks are the all-news Cable News Network and Headline News.

TNT's made-for-cable movies now include miniseries such as the just-concluded three-part historical drama, "Captain Cooke," and last month's four-part "The Nightmare Years," based on CBS correspondent William Shirer's memoirs about Germany during Hitler's rise to power.

Early examples of TNT's "made-fors," as TV movies are called, included Charlton Heston in "A Man For All Seasons," and a drama with Farrah Fawcett as the celebrated news photographer Margaret Bourke-White.

Costing an average of $3 million each, the movies initially bowed on a one-a-month basis. The premieres this month went to a two-a-month basis, and, a spokeswoman says, will go up to three a month by October next year, and four each month in 1991.

Although TNT's target audience is in the 25-54 age range, the network does have younger-viewer fare in the morning and early evening — reruns of Jim Henson's acclaimed "The Muppet Show" series and "Fraggle Rock."

It also is edging into sports, with more than 70 National Basketball Association games slated for this winter. During the 1992 and 1994 Winter Olympics, TNT says, it will air 50 live hours from each Games under a $50 million deal Turner struck last month with CBS Sports.

But what Hogan calls "the heart and soul" of TNT is its huge library of MGM, RKO Studios and pre-1950 Warner Bros. films, more than 3,300 movies that range from "Casablanca" to "The Prisoner of Zenda."

"We run 250 films a month," says Hogan, who praises Lisa Mateas, TNT's scheduling director, as close to a genius in the way she schedules the movies, of which new prints have been made and sound tracks restored.

Sometimes, he says, she schedules two or three titles together to show stages of development of a particular player, such as Bette Davis, or to show a yesteryear star, such as Myrna Loy, to a new generation of film fans.

TNT may be a treasure trove for movie buffs. But the size of its average audience each night poses no major threat yet to the major networks.

Its much-publicized "Margaret Bourke-White" last April got TNT's highest ratings to date, a 5.1. That works out to just over 2.5 million homes, which is very good for cable, but relatively small potatoes by network standards.

Theater department holds open auditions

By Cheryl Cannon
Lantern arts reporter

The Department of Theater will be holding open auditions today through Friday for the 1989-1990 theater season, and is encouraging students of all majors to participate.

The Department of Theater needs students of other majors to audition to compensate for the lower number of theater majors due to Ohio State's discontinuation of the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree over a year ago.

Robert T. Wharton III, assistant professor of theater, said even though the auditions have always been open to all OSU students, theater majors were generally cast first.

"Only theater majors generally auditioned. Most of the time they were better than students in other areas," Wharton said.

Now that the fine arts degree is in the process of being phased out, students in other majors have a better chance to be cast for a role in one of the productions. Theater majors were required to act 12 quarters before the discontinuation of the degree. Now the requirement has been lowered to four quarters.

The chairperson for the Department of Theater, Firman H. Brown Jr., said, "Auditions in the theater department have always been open to all students."

He said there has been a misconception about auditions.

"From the beginning we have always welcomed everyone to audition for the theater roles," Brown said.

He said the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree will be phased out in two years.

There are still students in the fine arts program because they started the program before the degree was discontinued.

The fine arts degree was dropped because the Department of Theater felt the Bachelor of Arts degree was the most sound degree available, Brown said.

"We believe in liberal arts degrees," Brown said.

Kelly Kuntz, a sophomore from Toledo majoring in theater is considering changing majors from theater to another area primarily because the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree is being phased out. She still wants to put her acting experience and classes to good use and will possibly minor in theater.

"I am not going to audition for any of the roles. I am taking a break from theater to figure out what I want to do," Kuntz said.

Students can audition for more than 100 roles for the season's six performances.

The 1989-90 season productions include: "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Romance Language," "Scenes and Revelations," "Geniuses," and "Alaska Fire."

Auditions will be held at Thurner Theater, Drake Union or Mount Hall. Time and location vary depending on the production.

For more information, students should contact the Department of Theater.

OSU students' video sells bike adventure

By Elizabeth Florence
Lantern arts reporter

The Great Ohio 1989 Bicycle Adventure has traveled from the roads to the video store shelves.

Two OSU students, majoring in photography and cinema, have produced a video of the Great Ohio 1989 Bicycle Adventure. It is being used as a promotional tool to get other communities to bid as host cities for the tour next year, and have them share in the fun and festivities that are a part of the tour.

"This is a document for people who missed the tour," said Tom Barlow, director of the Great Ohio Bicycle Adventure. "This will make it possible to relive the excitement during the winter when it's cold and people can't get outside to ride."

Terence Concannon, who draws the comic strip "Product" that appears in the Lantern, and John Croyle, both photography and cinema majors, taped the entire seven day event, which took place this past June.

The video shows everything from the early morning, when pancakes are being flipped for the cyclists' breakfast, to riding through the countryside and the evenings spent at the shelter houses.

One cyclist yelled, "I'm not in this for the race, I'm in this for the food." Another cyclist said the toughest part of the journey is repacking everything back to the same way it was before.

The video also shows the stopping off into towns, hitching up tents, and being entertained to going back on the road again.

The video was taped early every morning during the tour, Concannon said. "We would catch people getting up for the days ride, the 6 a.m. die hards."

The video was taped from their van where they drove along taping the cyclists riding. When they arrived at a new camp site, they walked around to film the cyclist.

"Communities provided drinks and food and we would talk to people then," Concannon said.

"There is a rule in photography and cinema which is: Whatever can go wrong will," Concannon said. "But everything went extremely well."

Approximately 1,200 bicyclists from all over the world took part in the Great Ohio Bicycle Adventure and spent seven days touring Ohio. Each day, cyclists traveled about 50 miles on scenic roads while visiting Ohio's tourist attractions, parks, and historical sites.

Each evening, one of Ohio's communities provided the bicyclists with local food and entertainment. They stayed overnight in tents and woke up early to start another day on the road.

The video has already sold 100 copies in its first week of sales.

Dog-food ad pledges kinder, gentler feces

NEW YORK (AP) — There are just so many ways that you can sell dog food, but Ralston Purina has found another one.

In a full-page ad in Monday's New York Times, the St. Louis-based purveyor of Puppy Chow claimed that "If more dogs in New York ate Purina Hi Pro, it would seem like there were less dogs in New York."

Under that headline, there is a large picture of a disgusted businessman, standing on one foot while examining the bottom of his left shoe.

He is not looking for gum on his heel.

"Hi Pro's high digestibility means smaller, firmer stools," the ad states. "The more nutrients a dog digests, the less passes through his system — and onto our sidewalks."

This is not what a Times reader expects with breakfast. A call to Ralston Purina was referred to company spokesman Patrick Farrell; he said he needed to do some research before he could talk about the ad.

Normal dog foods have a digestibility rating of 70 percent — meaning 70 percent is absorbed and the rest passes through. Hi Pro's rating is 82 percent, so "less is coming out the other end," Farrell said.

Ralston Purina did no extensive field testing on New York streets before plunging ahead with its ad campaign, which consists of the ad in the Times and upcoming placards on telephone kiosks around the city.

Hi-Pro itself is not a new product; the company has been selling it for more than a decade.

"We don't think for a moment that we have the solution to the 'Oops, I stepped in it' problem in New York," the ad says. "But perhaps we can help a little — by making the pickups a little quicker and easier for dog owners. And even when the scofflaws won't pick up, the mess won't be quite as messy."

No television ads are planned.

Farrell said the company did not expect any flak from readers who might be offended by the ad and its depiction of an unfortunate pedestrian.

Book forecasts trends of 90s

DENVER (AP) — "Smart toilets" and car radar will usher in the high-tech advances coming in the 1990s, while bad service, loud rock music and Mexican beer will become passe, says "The American Forecaster 1990."

Other trends on the rise for 1990 are New Age radio, portraits commissioned for ego gratification and "wet" beer to serve on the rocks, says Kim Long, author of the yearly book.

White will be the fashionable color in clothing for women, who will favor shorter hair, he says. Men will grow their hair longer and wear wider ties, the Forecaster predicts.

"In the 1990s we will see phenomenal advances. A popular phrase some futurists are using is that life has the potential to move forward very rapidly because 80 percent of all the scientists and engineers who have ever lived are alive today," said Long.

"The corollary to that is that 80 percent of all the artists, crackpots and loonies who have ever lived are alive today. We will see some intriguing things happen in the 1990s," he said, including a wave of bizarre prognostications as the year 2000 approaches.

Long, 40, is a Denver free-lance author who began writing the Forecaster in 1983 and claims an 80 percent accuracy rate. He wrongly predicted a Dukakis presidency and the demise of television's "Dallas" and "Dynasty," but he estimated that half his material reflects inevitable consumer trends.

"Smart toilets" are made by a Japanese company to measure recent hospital outpatients' blood pressure, pulse, urine, temperature and body weight. Results are displayed on a built-in monitor. Long predicts gadget lovers will pay the $3,000 to have a conversation piece.

Bush, Salinas sign accords on trade, clean-up projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexican President Carlos Salinas De Gortari and President Bush on Tuesday pledged mutual trust and understanding on cross-boundary issues, agreeing to conduct trade negotiations and to clean up Mexico City and Tijuana pollution.

To mark Salinas' visit to Washington, the two governments signed seven agreements on trade, environment, investment, and tourism.

The agreements, Bush said in praising the "closeness" of U.S.-Mexico ties, "are concrete examples of how our administrations have worked closely together during the last 10 months. They show what can and must be done to make relations between our two great nations even closer than they are today."

Salinas also cheered for a close relationship, but said his primary goal in facilitating U.S. investment in Mexico was to "open up additional sources of employment in Mexico for Mexicans."

The agreements were generally non-specific, but two environmental pacts commit the nations to construct an international sewage treatment plant in California, just across the border from Tijuana. They also will conduct joint scientific and technical projects to fight air pollution in Mexico City.

The sewage problem has become a matter of increasing U.S.-Mexican tensions because Tijuana waste pollutes the waters and the beaches of San Diego.

The agreement provides that the new plant will provide secondary treatment and disposal of waste not currently treated in Tijuana.

Salinas, in remarks at the signing ceremony also acknowledged Mexico City is "the most polluted city in the world. . . . We want better air for the Mexicans, for their children and for children of their children in Mexico."

The two countries agreed to work on the problem of smog in the Mexican capital, through "technology transfers, scientific and technical advice, environmental monitoring, and environmental impact assessments by Mexican authorities, joint meetings and reviews, exchange of relevant personnel and exchanges of environmental information and data, coordination on national programs" and funding cooperation.

"We can strike lethal blows against drug trafficking to free our world from that lethal scourge."

— Carlos Salinas

A separate environmental agreement committed the two countries to address air pollution in urban border areas, beginning with El Paso, Texas and Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua in Mexico.

The agreement on trade, signed at the White House by Secretary of State James A. Baker III and his Mexican counterpart, Fernando Salana, was an agreement to negotiate toward "facilitating and enhancing" U.S.-Mexico trade relations.

In November, the two countries are to decide what trade issues are negotiable.

A separate agreement committed the countries to work on easing investment opportunity for U.S. firms in Mexico.

Salinas said that pact, "will further the investment processes so that Mexicans can find a job in Mexico. That is the central purpose of my visit to this country."

Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher will travel to Mexico in November to discuss the investment situation, officials said.

The Mexican president was with Bush when word arrived from U.S. military forces in Panama that gunshots had been heard near the military headquarters of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, said Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater. There were reports of a coup attempt.

Salinas and Bush were briefed on what details were available by National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft, said Fitzwater.

Bush in an outdoor White House welcoming ceremony for Salinas said the two countries must cooperate in efforts to bring about democracy in Panama as well as for fair elections in Nicaragua.

Bush said the United States and Mexico "must continue to strengthen our assault on the plague of drug use and trafficking. For we know that what threatens one nation in our hemisphere threatens us all."

"We can strike lethal blows against drug trafficking to free the world from that international scourge," Salinas added, vowing to fight jointly against illegal narcotics trafficking.

Salinas speaking through a translator called for more humane ways to deal with migration of Mexicans to the United States.

The administration and the Mexicans also signed a tourism agreement geared toward easing procedures to promote U.S. tourism in Mexico.

U.S. had no role in attempt to oust Noriega, Bush says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush declared Tuesday that the attempted coup against Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega was not "some American operation." Bush's spokesman said the government would continue seeking Noriega's ouster.

"Nothing's changed. Everything remains the same. We'll continue to press for Noriega's removal" and his arrest to stand trial in the United States on drug charges, said spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Late Tuesday, after a day of sorting out conflicting reports on the coup attempt, Fitzwater said U.S. officials had determined it had failed. Soon after, Noriega's officials claimed victory in Panama City.

Though the overthrow attempt, by members of the Panamanian Defense Forces, failed after a morning gun battle at the forces' headquarters, Fitzwater said the attempt "shows the opposition to Noriega within Panama. It shows there is a strong faction at least within the PDF (Panamanian Defense Forces) that felt he should be removed."

"We did not take any action that would have constituted direct involvement," said Fitzwater. "We had helicopters that were in the air observing and we had some troops around one of the cause-ways there to protect access and rights and so forth."

Bush himself told reporters emphatically, "There were rumors around that this was some American operation and I can tell you that is not true."

The chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee for not making it a U.S. operation — for not sending U.S. troops to help the insurgents.

"Here you have brave people in Panama . . . trying to rid themselves of a drug dealer and a thug who's taken over their country," said the chairman, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., after an hour-long classified briefing from CIA officials.

"And for the United States, with all of our strength and force and all of our belief in democracy, to stand by — two miles away as the crow flies — and do nothing, and allow these people to fail, personally I think is wrong."

Fitzwater said a State Department official, Bernard Aronson, informed Bush after the president met with the visiting Soviet defense minister that Noriega's forces appeared to be prevailing.

"He just said 'OK,' and went into another meeting," said Fitzwater.

Fitzwater acknowledged that the United States had some advance word that a coup attempt might be afoot but said he was unaware of Noriega's fate or even his whereabouts.

"We had some indications this sort of thing was in the works, but until it happens, you never know," Fitzwater said. He characterized the prior information as "rumblings."

About 50,000 Americans live in Panama, including more than 12,000 U.S. military personnel attached to the U.S. Southern Command.

At the State Department, deputy spokesman Richard Boucher said American citizens living in Panama were being asked to stay at home.

The U.S. Southern Command put its troops and civilians on the isthmus on Delta Alert, its highest level of readiness. American troops in combat gear took up positions 600 yards from the barracks in downtown Panama City.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said U.S. troops in Panama were not involved in any way in the disturbance. He added, "Our facilities down there are locked up; they are secure."

The American military personnel in Panama have been ordered to stay put and not to travel on roads outside the U.S.-owned facilities, Williams said.

Prague embassy forced to close; refugees wait outside hopefully PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — West Germany closed the doors of its jammed embassy today to hundreds of East German refugees gathered outside after some 4,000 streamed into the compound in hopes of following countrymen to the West.

In the West German capital of Bonn government officials said the Prague embassy was closed at the request of the Red Cross because of sanitation problems.

Hundreds of East Germans waited outside the embassy today and more were arriving each hour. Another 200 were estimated to have gathered at the West German embassy in Warsaw, Poland.

The new influx of refugees began after East Berlin grudgingly allowed a weekend rail exodus of 7,000 East Germans who had sought asylum at Bonn's missions in the Czechoslovak capital and Warsaw.

On Monday, East Germany's Communist leaders demanded in a formal protest that West Germany evict the new arrivals from its Prague embassy.

The anniversary celebration, which is to include a visit by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, comes amid perhaps East Germany's most embarrassing diplomatic crisis: the exodus of thousands of its citizens.

In another development, the Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda accused West Germany of interfering in East German affairs by allowing its embassies in Prague and Warsaw to grant asylum to refugees.

"Political leaders of West Germany have made naked attempts to interfere in the internal affairs of sovereign East Germany," Pravda said.

Before today's announcement, East Germany had said last weekend's exodus was a one-time occurrence and demanded that West Germany expel the thousands of other would-be emigrés who subsequently converged on the missions to follow their countrymen to West Germany.

After breaking the police lines at the Prague embassy, the East Germans scaled a 2-yard-high fence to join the approximately 4,500 refugees already inside embassy grounds.

Cleveland voters head to the polls

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland voters headed to the polls Tuesday during dreary weather to decide who will run for mayor in a Nov. 7 general election.

The five candidates in the non-partisan primary were City Council President George Forbes, Municipal Clerk of Court Benny Bonanno, Cuyahoga County Commissioner Tim Hagan, state Sen. Mike White and school board President Ralph J. Perk Jr.

Regardless of party affiliation, the top two vote-getters advance to the November election in their bid to succeed George Voinovich, who is seeking the 1990 Republican nomination for governor. Voinovich has been mayor since 1979.

Forbes, Bonanno, Hagan and White are Democrats, while Perk is Republican.

Voter turnout by noon was estimated to be about 13 percent of the city's total 290,000 registered voters, but it was expected to reach 40 percent by the time the polls closed at 7:30 p.m., said Laura Jones, spokeswoman for the Cuyahoga County Board of Elections.

"I would say it's low right now. I think the weather is having some kind of effect. It's kind of windy and cold and gray."

The board, citing emotion-charged campaigning, stationed 191 special inspectors at polling booths to ward against disturbances or harassment. However, Ms. Jones said there were no reports of such problems by midday.

"It's been very quiet as far as any disturbances," she said. "We had a couple of drunks come onto one of the precincts, and the police were called in and they were removed. Other than that, it's been pretty quiet."

The five candidates campaigned on issues of drugs, education and downtown development in this city of 536,000 people.

But crossfire between the candidates over racial prejudice, drug testing, temperament and other matters also captured public attention.

The 59-year-old Forbes, who was consistently mentioned as a likely finisher, has been on the City Council since 1963 and has been its president for 16 years.

Early in the campaign, Forbes accused Hagan of being a racist. He also called Hagan a pimp, in reference to Hagan's wealthy wife.

Forbes later apologized for the remarks.

Hurt wins marriage decision

New York (AP) — No common-law marriage exists between William Hurt and Sandra Jennings, a judge ruled today, precluding Hurt's former live-in lover from claiming a share of the actor's estimated $5 million-plus fortune.

State Supreme Court Justice Jacqueline Silberman said the live-in relationship was illicit when it began because Hurt was married, and did not become legitimate simply because "The Big Chill" star got divorced.

If the judge had determined the two were married under common law, Ms. Jennings could have pursued spousal support.

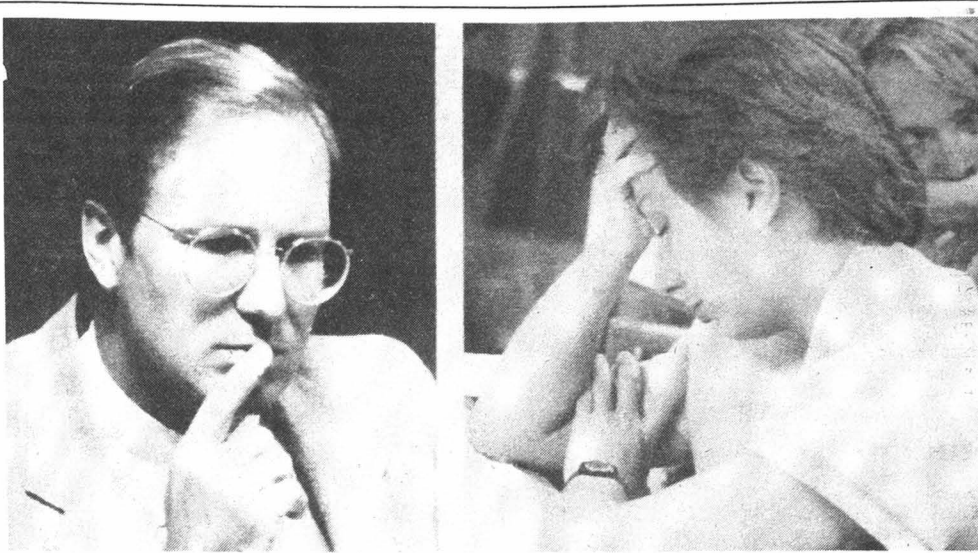

The decision did not deal with support for the couple's 6-year-old son, Alexander Devon Hurt.

Jennings' lawyer, A. Richard Golub, called the ruling a "joke" and said he would appeal. The judge is "so madly in love with this defendant, Bill Hurt, that we never could have gotten a fair shake," Golub asserted.

Jennings, a former dancer, sued Hurt for equitable distribution of his assets, estimated by Golub at $5 million to $7 million, after Hurt refused to increase financial support to her and their son.

Jennings, 32, based her suit on four of the 10 weeks she spent with Hurt in Beaufort, S.C., during the winter of 1982-83 while he was there filming "The Big Chill."

Common-law marriages were abolished in 1933 in New York

The judge in actor William Hurt's palimony trial ruled that the actor did not have a common-law marriage with his ex-lover, former ballerina

Man faces extradition for drugging pasta

CINCINNATI (AP) -- A former restaurant consultant faces an extradition hearing Wednesday in Italy on allegations he fled the United States to avoid charges that he fed women drug-laced spaghetti and then sexually abused them.

A Hamilton County grand jury indicted Nicola Iannone, 34, in April 1988 on charges of rape, gross sexual imposition, corrupting another with drugs and bond default. The events allegedly involved three women in two separate incidents occurring in 1987 and 1988 at Cincinnati-area apartments, authorities charged.

A man identified as Iannone was arrested in March in Milan, Italy, but is fighting extradition to the United States, Hamilton County prosecutors said.

Authorities say Iannone has been at large since he failed to appear for a hearing May 31, 1988, in Hamilton County Common Pleas Court. Judge Norbert Nadel revoked Iannone's $10,000 bond and ordered his arrest.

The FBI helped trace a man identified as Iannone to Milan, where he has been jailed pending Wednesday's hearing. Martin Pinales, a Cincinnati lawyer representing Iannone, said he planned to attend the hearing in magistrate's court to assist Iannone's Italian lawyer.

"The purpose of the hearing is to have an extradition. I'm fighting the extradition," Pinales said in an interview before his departure last week.

Iannone, a naturalized American citizen who was born in Italy, denies the charges. He is a former consultant to Italian restaurants in Cincinnati and Chicago.

Italy and the United States have an extradition treaty. It is up to the judge in the Italian court to decide whether Italy should extradite Iannone, U.S. officials said. The judge's decision may be subject to further appeals in Italian courts, U.S. Department of Justice spokesman Joe Krovisky said.

Even if the extradition is granted, the actual international transfer in such cases can take months, Krovisky said.

Chip Gerhardt, a spokesman for Hamilton County Prosecutor Arthur Ney Jr., said the Italian judge's decision could hinge on whether Italy has a law that recognizes an offense similar to the one Iannone is charged with in Cincinnati.

"If they determine they have the same type of offense in Italy, they will send him back. If not, they won't," Gerhardt said. "I would think they have a similar type of law. If not, you could get away with rape, basically."

Hamilton County forwarded its records in the Iannone case to the Justice Department's Office of International Affairs, which ensured that they were in order before the State Department sent them to the Italian government, officials said.

Under customary procedures, an official of the Italian government will represent the U.S. government and present its extradition request, Krovisky said.

The Hamilton County indictment alleges that Iannone fed drug-tainted spaghetti to two women and then sexually attacked and videotaped them while they were unconscious.

The indictment says a third woman made a similar charge against Iannone in a separate Cincinnati case. The incidents are said to have occurred in October 1987 and February 1988.

The indictment alleges that Iannone lured his victims with promises of a gourmet dinner and then gave them the drugged spaghetti to knock them out before fondling or otherwise sexually abusing them. Police said laboratory tests of the leftover pasta showed that it contained codeine and the prescription sedatives Valium and Elavil.

Man gets life for tossing bride overboard

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man convicted of murder for throwing his bride overboard during their honeymoon cruise in the Pacific was sentenced to life in prison.

Scott Robert Roston, 37, "cruelly killed his wife of nine days for no reason," U.S. District Judge James Ideman said Monday.

Roston at first told authorities a gust of wind blew his bride overboard, then blamed her death on Israeli intelligence agents.

The prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Kendra McNally, asked the judge for a 30-year term. But Ideman found the circumstances unusually brutal as he sentenced Roston to life in prison without parole — the maximum term allowed by law.

"It is this court's hope that this defendant never be released," Ideman said.

Roston, of Santa Monica, was convicted in March of second-degree murder for throwing Karen Waltz Roston, 26, from the cruise ship Stardancer as it steamed in the Pacific about 20 miles off the Mexican coast on Feb. 13, 1988.

Jurors rejected Roston's contention that agents murdered his wife in retaliation for a book he wrote.

Roston and his family emigrated to Israel in 1978. In his self-published book, "Nightmare in Israel," Roston claimed he was drugged and brutalized in an Israeli mental hospital after his arrest on a robbery charge.

The prosecution contended Roston was killed after a series of arguments with her husband — fights that allegedly ended in her being strangled on the jogging track of the ship on which they were honeymooning.

The prosecution said there was no premeditation involved in the killing, thus precluding a first-degree murder charge.

Roston's body was found 30 miles southwest of San Diego. An autopsy revealed she died of strangulation associated with drowning.

Bear attacks woman

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — An Ohio woman was seriously injured in a black bear attack, forcing authorities to put one of the animals to death for the first time in a decade, officials said.

Phyllis Murphy of Blanchester, Ohio, was visiting the Great Smoky Mountains National Park last Thursday when she suddenly came "eyeball to eyeball" with a 187-pound, male, black bear.

"I was at the creek looking at rocks and when I reared up, he did too. I hollered 'oh my God' and started to run. I slipped on a rock and he got me from behind. I know one thing, it sure had the strength. It didn't growl until it had me by the back of the neck and it was shaking me. It stunned me. I didn't know what to do," Murphy, 49, said Monday from her home in Ohio.

"My husband weighs over 200 pounds and he was jumping up and down on its back and it wouldn't let go. Some man got about a five-foot stick and hit it in the back of the head and it turned me loose," Murphy said.

Murphy is suffering from multiple puncture wounds to the neck, a broken shoulder bone and abrasions to her left side and neck.

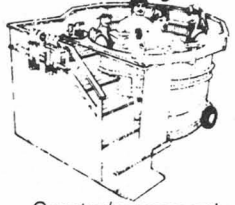

Karen Ballentine, a park spokeswoman, said the bear had caused trouble and shown aggressive behavior earlier this summer and it had been removed twice to remote areas of the Park.

The bear that attacked Murphy was a "panhandler that has a record," Ballentine said. Park policy is to dispose of the bear because of the bear's past history of aggressive behavior and the seriousness of the incident.

This was the 70th bear this year that has been captured in the park and removed to remote areas because of their contact with humans in picnic and parking areas.

Abortion coalition requests city help

TOLEDO (AP). — A coalition asked City Council on Tuesday to investigate how police handled an anti-abortion demonstration outside the Center for Choice last week.

A group, known as the Responsible Majority, said police did not do enough to ensure that people had access to the Toledo abortion clinic and surrounding businesses. The coalition includes representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Organization for Women and Planned Parenthood.

Police arrested 58 people, including many from outside the Toledo area, during Friday's protest.

Thirty-three protesters were arrested between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. However, police could not remove 25 protesters because they had either chained themselves to the gratings that cover the clinic's windows, or chained themselves together.

Police Chief Marti Felker said the department did not have the equipment to remove the locks. "The police assured us that they would take care of things and we were closed — that's the bottom line," said Carol Dunn, Center for Choice director.

"The police are there to keep the peace and that didn't happen. They should have started arresting people. Instead, they just let them sit there without taking action," she said.

Even though the coalition has asked Council to investigate, Ms. Dunn said she would meet with Felker this week to discuss the problem.

Center for Choice officials called the police shortly after 75 protesters — members of a group called Victim's Souls of the Unborn Christ — arrived in a U-Haul truck in front of the abortion clinic.

"This shameful display began at 1 p.m. and continued for 10 hours," said Phil Schmidt, coalition president. "These lawless thugs ignored police orders to disperse."

The protest was the largest anti-abortion demonstration ever in Toledo. The last protesters were not removed until about 11 p.m., when they provided keys to unlock their locks.

Felker said the police department properly handled the situation.

Felker also said he has ordered special cutting tools and tarps needed to remove the locks used by the protesters.

Clean air bill supported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clean air legislation is gaining momentum in the House, following a breakthrough agreement that would apply California's tough auto tailpipe standards to the whole country starting with 1994 models.

The 22-0 vote Monday in the House Energy and Commerce environment subcommittee came after two powerful lawmakers — Reps. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., and John D. Dingell, D-Mich. — shook hands and ended a bitter dispute over the auto standards.

Waxman, the champion of environmental groups, and Dingell, the auto industry's best friend in Congress, said Monday they would oppose any attempts to change the agreement. Their pact virtually ensures new, tough auto pollution controls because the Senate's clean air legislation is even stricter than the compromise.

The auto industry was quick to express its displeasure with the proposed exhaust standards. Harold A. Poling, chief operating officer for Ford Motor Co., said the standards "are not feasible and ... would improve air quality by less than 1 percent compared with the president's proposal."

Richard Ayres, chairman of the National Clean Air Coalition, called the vote "a genuine step forward" and "a signal to the industrial community and others that achieving clean air will take a commitment from all interests to do their part." The coalition includes environmental groups and their allies.

The California requirements, tougher than the rest of the country's, would be phased in beginning with 1994 models and be complete in the other 49 states by 1996 — at an average cost to consumers of nearly $100 per car, according to Environmental Protection Agency estimates.

The emissions disputes have helped keep clean air bills in a legislative bottleneck in past years, and threatened to torpedo President Bush's clean air bill, which the subcommittee vote amended.

The compromise followed extensive private negotiations over the past week that involved Dingell, Waxman and a number of House colleagues who said they were tired of a clean air stalemate that has lasted a decade. The last major clean air law changes were passed in 1977.

The Bush administration accepted the compromise reluctantly and expressed hope for quick progress on other portions of the bill in Waxman's subcommittee.

White House deputy press secretary Stephen Hart said the Dingell-Waxman provisions, though tighter than what the president proposed, are "really not too far away from ours."

Following the agreement, lawmakers differing over the makeup of Bush's proposed clean fuels program for autos intensified efforts to reach a compromise.

Also remaining are differences over sharing the cost of acid rain reduction; a "cap" on acid rain growth that could slow power plant expansion; and the extent of controls on virtually unregulated airborne toxic chemicals.

The Dingell-Waxman agreement is mainly designed to reduce ozone pollution. Motor vehicles account for nearly half of the nation's pollution from ozone, a highly reactive gas that is the prime ingredient of smog and which can cause breathing difficulties.

Ozone is produced by the reaction of hydrocarbons from unburned fuel with nitrogen oxides, another vehicle pollutant, in the presence of sunlight. Warm weather speeds the reaction.

Under the compromise, the EPA would have to decide by Dec. 31, 1999, whether to tighten the requirements further.

Texas horse betting returns

BRADY, Texas (AP) — Deep in the heart of Texas, down a country road and just past the First Baptist Church, five decades without pari-mutuel horse wagering in the state will end this week.

While workmen finish pouring the cement at G. Rollie White Downs, the track's employees are learning the lingo — daily double, trifecta, perfecta, exacta — words not applicable in Texas since 1937, when horse racing disappeared except for small tracks where the odd sawbuck was exchanged.

"We've gone like this for 90 days now, seven days a week," said John Hendley, the track's marketing director. "It's kind of like running a race against the clock and running a race against the other race tracks and everything else. But we're nearly there."

Texas voters approved pari-mutuel, or shared-purse, betting in 1987; about 5 percent of the bets will go into state coffers.

Manor Downs, a new track near Austin, won't be ready to open. So the first race in the state will take place Friday at the Class 2 track at Brady, population 5,925, where the heart-shaped weather-vane that sits atop the courthouse is sliced with an an arrow, marking the geographic heart of Texas.

Bigger, Class 1 tracks are envisioned for Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio, but those proposals haven't been licensed yet.

For now, state racing fans must travel to Brady, 175 miles southwest of Dallas and 120 miles northwest of Austin. Motels within 60 miles of Brady are booked, with enthusiasts arriving from El Paso, Amarillo and Houston. Track officials expect 4,500 patrons.

"Anybody that had any negative thoughts will realize after the first weekend what it's going to do for the town and the region," Hendley said.

But not everybody will be placing bets.

Less than one mile from the track, the Rev. Mike McKinney, pastor of First Baptist Church, is unhappy.

"We believe and we teach the Judeo-Christian work ethic — and that's not the work ethic," said McKinney. "Our church will be picking up on people who have lost and don't have what they need to get home."

The $1.5 million track is attracting entries from Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and New Mexico for its weekend thoroughbred and quarter-horse race schedule that runs through Jan. 28. So far, 1,300 applications have come in for the 550 stalls, said track official Ed Carrithers.

Local horsemen are raving about the prospects.

Racing began in Brady in 1929. A track here continued to operate after pari-mutuel betting was outlawed 52 years ago, but it was destroyed in a tornado around 1946.

Balking at contract

Boeing Company workers scream "strike, strike" Tuesday as their union president presents details of the aerospace manufacturer's 3-year proposed contract at the Kingdome in Seattle.

Cleveland workers earn more CLEVELAND (AP) Workers in Cleveland were paid more on average during 1988 than in any of 13 other urban areas in the state, a report released by the U.S. Department of Labor shows.

Average yearly earnings in Cleveland were pegged at $23,051, compared to a statewide average of $21,500. The average for 318 metropolitan statistical areas nationwide was $22,883.

Of the 13 areas listed in Ohio, the four cities with the highest average annual pay all were in the northern half of the state. Cleveland was followed by Lorain-Elyria at $22,645, Akron at $22,010 and Toledo at $21,984.

Dayton-Springfield held the fifth spot with an average annual pay of $21,978, followed by Cincinnati at $21,976.

Workers in the Steubenville-Weirton, W.Va., metropolitan statistical area earned $21,816 in 1988, an increase of 7.7 percent from the amount paid in 1987.

Pietro Scaffidi, analyst for the Ohio Bureau of Employment Services, attributed the growth to improvement in the steel industry and large amounts of construction work on highways and industries.

Steubenville-Weirton was followed by Lima, with an average annual pay of $21,706; Hamilton-Middletown, $21,565; Columbus, $21,301; Youngstown-Warren, $21,185; and Mansfield, $20,710.

Steve Kelly, economic development director for the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce, said he was not surprised by the 10th place ranking of the capital city.

He said such studies generally are biased against cities with a high percentage of white-collar workers, such as Columbus, and that the dollar amounts separating Columbus and Cleveland were slight.
