Undergraduate Student Government campaigning kicked off yesterday with the first of three debates. The informal debate was held in Independence Hall with a sparse crowd consisting mostly of campaign teams.

Over-funding of university research was a concern that all candidates agreed upon.

"More money should be focused on the undergraduate experience and not as much on research," said James Conway, vice presidential candidate on the Weiss-Conway

The direction of the funding was a focus for the candidates.

"I believe the issue that is underfunded is just the general classroom," said Aftab Pureval, presidential candidate.

He said he would like to see more money going toward smaller class sizes.

'Part of it is that research is not a bad thing," said Jarrod Weiss, presidential candidate. "It just needs to find that balance."

Kara Silverman, vice presidential candidate of the Jolley-Silverman ticket, said she ore concerned with what types of research the university is paying for.

"I feel that the money we give to research could be better spent other than just on science and math," Silverman said.

In addition to the direction of the research money, the Jolley-Silverman ticket was sympathetic toward a broader education.

"The fact of the matter is that research brings money into the university, so it's a necessary part of Ohio State's culture," said Ryan Jolley, presidential candidate. "However, the undergraduate education should not be sacrificed for that need for

The American Cancer Society announced last week that Amy Johnson, Ph.D., is a corecipient of the Levy Postdoctoral Fellowship for research conducted at the Department of Internal Medicine here at Ohio State.

According to Sheri Richardson, the communications director of Central Ohio for the ACS, Johnson was not alone in receiving a grant last week. Michelle VanLith of the University of Virginia Health System also received a grant for her work in analyzing proteins expressed by melanoma cells. These proteins may be able to be targeted during tumor therapy regimes.

Johnson's research also dealt with cancer, but of a different kind. While studying the mechanisms of new drugs to treat prostate cancer, Johnson noticed they might be able to be applied to other cancers as well.

"My research found that some of these drugs showed potential as therapies for other cancers including leukemia," she said. "I became more involved and motivated to continue research on this subject because I felt as though it would lead to saving lives."

Dr. Dave Lucas, lab director and research scientist, is working with Johnson in

OSU's president acts as member of countless boards, councils making her school seen

As she walked into a Pfahl Hall classroom to address the Board of Trustees in February, President Karen A. Holbrook stopped short at the doorway. From the other direction, a student approached the classroom at the same time. The student, recognizing the face in front of her, gestured for Holbrook to go first. Holbrook, a notebook under her arm, held the door open. "Oh, go ahead," she said smiling, and the open-mouthed student walked into

In the address, Holbrook told the Trustees she attended two events. The first was the Business Higher Education Forum, which included 36 university presidents, 38 national CEOs and six presidents of national foundations or higher education organizations. The second was Undergraduate Student Government President Mike Goodman's State of the University speech, attended primarily by students.

The two events signify the composite roles of the president of the second-largest university in the country: national player and campus

'I try to be as available as I can to students and faculty and spend as much time here as I can," Holbrook said in her Bricker Hall office. "But to be effective here, I also have to be a national player. It's very important that I am seen nationally, not for me or my career, but 'For Ohio State" seems to underscore every role she plays. Holbrook serves on the boards of several organizations in downtown Columbus, in order to "connect OSU to the community." She is frequently asked to speak on behalf of OSU at national conferences and meetings alongside high-profile figures.

Holbrook was one of 10 higher education presidents asked to join major national science writers and the press to talk about science in higher education at the New York Press Club in March. She called the event a "chance to talk about Ohio State and what we're doing."

"Actually," interjected Bill Murphy, vice president of University Relations, from across the room, "She chaired it."

Nodding quickly, Holbrook went on to another subject.

"The next (day after the Press Club), I moved onto a national meeting with Oak Ridge Laboratories," she said. "The president's science adviser was there, a number of folks from Congress, and Ray Orbach from the Department of Energy was there."

Many "heavy-duty players" in highperformance computing also attended the meeting. She was one of two presidents asked to talk about OSU's high-performance computing and to chair a committee representing universities to the National Council on Competitiveness in High-Performance Computing. She had also traveled to Washington D.C. in March, talking to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"İt's not me, but it's Ohio State that's out there as a leader in high-performance computing," she said. "Those are the things that are important."

For all of the external activities, Holbrook has supported several key internal movements. From her Strategic Reserve fund — money that is set aside at the president's discretion — she allocated $500,000 to promote whatever faculty wanted to do in the arts on a competitive basis. The most student-oriented allocation from the reserve fund was for the Student Activity Fee.

"I put it as a priority," she said. "My office paid a third so that we could get it going and let students have an opportunity to build what they want to do. By having the resources, it gives them a chance to do that."

A controversial development that arose quickly during her first months in office was the examination of the Arts and Sciences Federation. Holbrook said she feels good about the outcome.

"Since I didn't come in and start it but was going to have to finish it, I wanted to get as much information as possible," she said. "What I did over my spring break last year was read a stack of feedback ... from faculty, staff and students. And I really didn't do anything but take words from them and string it together and weave a story of what they said were strong points to write the Federation paper.

"I'm very pleased with the Federation. While it's still in its formative stage, the (Colleges of) Arts and Scipetitive," she said. ences will always be the core and the lifeblood for the undergraduate population. One of the most important things for others.

"It's not me, but it's Ohio State that's out there as a leader in high-performance computing."

that can happen on this campus is to keep the Federation alive and continually strengthen it."

Bill Hall, vice president for student affairs, said by supporting issues like the Arts and Sciences Federation and the Student Activity Fee, Holbrook shows a commitment to students.

'She's reached out to different student groups and not just USG," he said. "She met with the 40 students who attended the National Coalition Building Institution workshop. She's supported the integration of students and faculty and kept the Ohio Union an issue on the agenda.'

Whether the issue is internal or external, Holbrook said today's student wants more from their education, and universities should decide how to adapt.

(Students) want a different time frame, and they want a different lifestyle; and the smart universities are going to have to be bold and think of how you make programs much more adaptable to those kinds of students," she said. "We're going to have to partner in a greater way and in very bold ways. We're building partnerships with Battelle, and the two of us getting together to do far more is good.

Together with Case Western (Reserve University) and the University of Cincinnati, we've been talking about putting together the 'Three C Corridor' to collaborate from Cleveland to Columbus to Cincinnati to do things in bigger, bolder ways than we've done in the

How to be bolder was the topic of a speech Holbrook delivered winter quarter to the Commercial and Commerce Clubs, The organizations are "very private, mostly men and they meet in black tie." She spoke of the notion that to be successful in higher education, it will no longer be "business as usual."

Trustees' Report to the Campus

Vol. XLVI No.7 Actions by the Board of Trustees on April 2, 2004. Trustees' Report contains actions or reports presented at the recent meetings of the Board or its committees. repared by the staff of the Office of University Communications, this report is an unofficial account and may not cover all agenda items. Official minutes are available through the Secretary of the Board, 210 Bricker Hall.

In brief, the trustees: - Heard a report about how state budget cuts will affect the university - Were updated on plans for students housing

- Trustees approved the establishment of a new designated professorship and 13 new named endowed funds, totaling $476,127 in gifts to the university. The board also accepted 225 new research grants and contracts, totaling more than $20.5 million awarded to the university

Ohio State addresses new round of state budget cuts Budget ax will hit agriculture, medicine and research

during February.

COLUMBUS -- A new round of state budget cuts exempts Ohio State's instructional subsidy, but separately funded budget items are again on the chopping block. For some particularly hardhit units -- such as Cooperative Extension and the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center -- difficult choices lie ahead, William J. Shkurti, senior vice president for business and finance, told the university's board of trustees

Shkurti updated trustees on the impact of Gov. Bob Taft's announcement last month that the state budget for fiscal years 2004 and 2005 would be cut in order to address a budget deficit caused by a shortfall in anticipated revenues.

"We're relieved that the governor exempted the state share of instruction from these cuts," Shkurti said. "This action will be of tremendous benefit to Ohio State students and the future economic growth for the state. Still, many areas of the university face substantial cuts."

Ohio State receives $321 million in instructional subsidy, which makes up the lion's share of the state's support to higher education and helps to offset high student tuition and fees. Other areas of the university are funded by senarate line items in the state's two-year budget

A reduction of 4 percent for fiscal year 2004 mean the loss of $5.1 million to state-funded university line items. A 6 percent cut for the following fiscal year means the loss of $6.9 million. Over the two-year period, the cuts amount to the equivalent of 100 to 140 full-time positions across the university, Shkurti said. "Reduction plans are being prepared by the ffected units, and will be completed as part of the annual budget process," he told trustees.

Agriculture is the area that is most affected, Shkurti said, accounting for $3 million of the FY04 cuts and $3.7 million of the FY05 cuts. The budget for the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center at the university's Wooster campus will be cut $1.4 million and $2.1 million. Cooperative Extension programs in each of Ohio's 88 counties face cuts of more than $1.5 million each year.

The Medical Center faces cuts of nearly $570,000 and $850,000, mostly for clinical teaching. State cuts also will impact other medical areas, including family practice, geriatric medicine and primary care. Elsewhere at the university, cuts will be made to state support for such items as math and science teaching improvements, college readiness initiatives, computer science graduate education, and student support services. Other programs facing cuts are the Ohio Learning Center, Ohio Supercomputer Center, OARNet, Sea Grants, and the John Glenn Institute.

Funding for the state's higher education challenge grants, which Ohio State receives to support programs in research, job training and student access and success, will be cut by nearly $1 million and $1.4 million

Shkurti told trustees that the university will continue its strategy of diversifying its revenue and finding new ways to reduce its costs to help lessen reliance on state support.

Still looming on the horizon, Shkurti said, is a proposal to eliminate a temporary one-penny sales tax, which the Ohio General Assembly implemented last year in order to balance the state budget and continue to fund primary and secondary education and the state's public colleges and universities.

"As difficult as these new budget cuts are to us, the proposed repeal of the temporary sales tax is an even greater concern," Shkurti said. "Cuts to the core of our state support, including the state share of instruction, and further cuts to our line items lie ahead if repeal is successful. This would have a severe impact on all our instructional units and do permanent damage to future economic growth throughout the state."

Trustees hear student housing

University hopes to add 1,000 beds

in near future on Columbus campus COLUMBUS - Increasing student housing capacity overall and decreasing density inside residence halls are top priorities for The Ohio State University Office of Student Affairs, the university's Board of Trustees was told Friday (2/4). Trustees heard an update on student housing plans for the next few years from Vice President for Student Affairs William Hall and Associate Vice Presidents William Schwartz and Richard Hollingsworth, who discussed goals for undergraduate housing on the Columbus and Columbus in memory of Dr. Cyril R. (B.A., 1929; 'Agricultural Technical Institute in Wooster, regional campuses through 2008.

According to Schwartz, the university hopes to add 1,000 more beds to its student housing inventory. In addition to meeting demand from students for safe, convenient, supervised housing, university-operated student housing offers demonstrated academic benefits, Schwartz said, citing higher graduation rates, shorter time to completion of degree, higher grades, more involvement in university activities, greater contact with faculty, and greater value for diversity and respect for others.

Residence halls are self-supporting. Construction is financed by issuing bonds, which are retired with income generated by operation of the halls.

About 9,000 of the 36,000 undergraduates at the Columbus campus live in residence halls, with 2,000 of them in four-person rooms. Student Affairs is recommending conversion of several existing spaces to student housing to both increase capacity and decrease density. Schwartz said returning floors 4 through 14 of Lincoln Tower as well as all of Archer House to their original function as student residences and Center would generate between 758 and 838 new beds at a cost of about $25 million. This translates into about $30,000 per bed, compared with $65,000 a bed for new construction. Offices currently located in these spaces would move to other locations on or near the campus.

Hollingsworth outlined several strategies to improve housing in the social fraternity and sorority system. Leasing, purchasing and management arrangements between the university and the chapters have helped strengthen the Greek system by improving living standards, upgrading safety, supporting personal development and academic achievement, and stabilizing chapters' finances.

Ohio State leases and manages four fraternity houses and owns and manages one. As requested by Greek alumni boards, the goal is to lease two to four additional fraternity properties each year and to pursue purchase of one to four additional properties in the neighborhood.

Trustees were also briefed on the housing situations on the university's regional campuses. In the past two years, Ohio State has purchased apartments at the Newark and Mansfield campuses. Each of these 180-student complexes is operated by Student Affairs as university housing. Plans had been advanced to construct 200- to 300-bed complexes at Marion and Lima, but those plans are now on hold pending additional enrollment studies. Private developers have expressed interest in constructing housing to serve these campuses. In summary, Hall told the trustees that current plans focus on undergraduate and fraternity/sorority housing through enhancement of existing facilities. However, he said, there is widespread interest in longer-term plans to create other living-learning communities. For instance, the Moritz College of Law is planning a residential environment for its students in the new Gateway development, and a similar community for the Fisher College of Business is under investigation. There is interest in enhanced communities for graduate students, students with families, and faculty, staff and older adults who desire a life-long connection with the university.

Management of capital projects

update on the status of capital projects management initiatives requested by the board in April 2003. William Shkurti, senior vice president for business and finance, reported that 37 Ohio State projects with budgets greater than $200,000 were completed in calendar year 2003.

Of these, approximately 85 percent were completed on time and approximately 80 percent were completed on budget. Initiatives completed by the Office of Business and Finance over the past 12 months include quarterly reports on capital projects to the Board of Trustees, new controls on use of contingencies, implementation of a policy to control change orders and approval of a policy to control the university's debt capacity.

Compensation benchmarking study

Trustees heard the results of a compensation benchmarking study, which compared Ohio State's average faculty salaries with those of benchmark institutions for each of the past five years. The study also compared staff salaries to external markets and the state of Ohio, examined how Ohio State invests its salary dollars in terms of gender and ethnicity, and compared the cost of benefits at Ohio State with

Due to state funding cuts, the university has had to make significant budget reallocations in recent years, said Larry Lewellen, associate vice president for human resources. "Going forward, it will be a challenge to balance our compensation priority with other critical priorities." he said.

Lewellen reported that for 2003-04, Ohio State's average faculty salary is 1.7 percent below the benchmark average, but that two years ago, it was 6.1 percent below. "This is phenomenal progress over the past two years, due to the high commitment of the deans and vice presidents," he said.

A comparison of staff salaries to external markets for 2003-04 shows that Ohio State is well below market in almost all occupational groups, although every job category except skilled craft moved closer to the market rate than

Federation of the Colleges of the Arts and Sciences updated The board heard a report from Michael Hogan, executive dean of the Colleges of the Arts and Sciences, on progress made during the federation's first year. The Office of the Executive Dean has been formed by transferring existing staff and their salaries from the five colleges to the new office, and space will be remodeled in University Hall to enable the co-location of all five college offices. A new governance mechanism has been established that includes diversity and staff advisory committees and a faculty leadership committee, comprised of elected faculty members. Initiatives benefiting students both in and outside the classroom have been implemented, and faculty have been encouraged to explore opportunities to launch interdisciplinary courses. Future challenges will include pooling central services, eliminating administrative redundancies and increasing

Staff leadership activities highlighted

Trustees heard a report on the University Staff Advisory Committee (USAC), which represents the university's 15,000 staff members. Comprised of 30 members appointed by the president, USAC prepares the annual Staff Compensation and Benefits Report, convenes Town Meetings with the president, and organizes price of the property, owned by the City of the Pep Rally and the Hidden Benefits Fair, Columbus, is $91,425. The acquisition is among other activities. USAC maintains an necessary for construction of the planned active and participatory line of communication with the university community and provides a forum through which university staff can raise, discuss, and make recommendations on nonacademic issues and activities.

Student receives board recognition

Alvarez-Breckenridge, who was nominated by Dean Joan Herbers in the College of Biological Sciences. was admitted into the College of Medicine and Public Health's Early Admission Pathway program, which allows a select group of National Merit, National Achievement or National Hispanic Finalists to enter the College of Medicine after three years of undergraduate study. He is now preparing to pursue a combined M.D./Ph.D. degree. Alvarez-Breckenridge has been working in the Human Cancer Genetics Program since 1999 and is currently writing his honor's thesis on the role of a tumor suppressor gene in normal and cancerous cells. He has presented at the American Society of Human Geneticists and the American Association of Cancer Researchers national conferences. Alvarez-Breckenridge is a National Merit Scholar and a Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship recipient. He also is president of the Association of Ohio State Class Honoraries and the vice president of communications for the

of Graduate Teaching Associates

Susan Huntington, dean of the Graduate School, updated the trustees on the training and professional development of graduate teaching associates. Currently, Huntington said nearly all graduate teaching associates receive training before teaching classes, labs or discussions. Through training, the graduate students learn how to prepare a syllabus for class and to understand information on issues like intellectual property. The Faculty and TA Development program offers professional development to graduate students by providing seed grants to develop or enhance graduate teaching associate programs within departments or colleges. In addition, the Faculty and TA Development program also offers support and opportunities for senior graduate students to develop new, discipline-specific teaching support activities for others graduate teaching associates in their units.

CLEVELAND — A former investment broker was sentenced yesterday to 41/2 years in prison in a plea deal that requires his help in a state government corruption investigation.

Frank Gruttadauria, 46, pleaded guilty last week to state charges of bribery, racketeering, theft, money laundering, forgery and election-law violations. He could have faced more than 30 years in prison.

His plea deal requires his help in an ongoing grand jury investigation.

"Defending Democracy, Defeating Terrorism"

The Foundation for the Defense of Democracies is seeking qualified undergraduates to participate in the FDD Undergraduate Fellowship to learn how democracies defend themselves against terrorism.

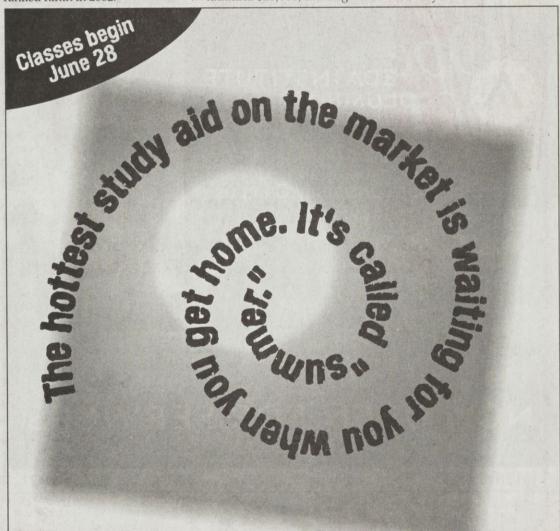

The year-long fellowship begins with a two-week course of study (July 31-August 14) at the Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies in Tel Aviv, Israel. An additional seminar takes place in Washington, D.C. over winter break.

The course of study in Tel Aviv features lectures from experts on terrorism from Israel, Jordan, India, Turkey and the United States. It also features visits to military bases, border zones and other security installations to learn the practical side of deterring terrorist attacks. The winter seminar features lectures and field trips that highlight America's leadership role in the war on terrorism.

All expenses are paid by FDD. Interested students can apply at www.defenddemocracy.org

FDD is a non-profit, non-partisan research institution that promotes informed debate about policies and positions that most effectively abolish international terrorism.

Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti -Secretary of State Colin Powell urged Haiti's leaders yesterday to ensure government posts are not given to leaders of the February insurrection who are criminals or human rights violators.

That was the message Powell intended to relay to Prime Minister Gerard Latortue and others during a visit of several hours, said a U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Powell was met at the capital's international airport by U.S. Ambassador James Foley and Latortue's foreign minister, Yvon Simeon.

The request by losing candidate Lien Chan was part of his two-pronged legal strategy to overturn President Chen Shuibian's narrow victory. Lien and his Nationalist Party claim the vote was marred by irregularities and a mysterious election-eve shooting that wounded Chen.

Lien's first step came last week when he petitioned the High Court to order a recount — a move the president endorsed. The two sides are negotiating the details of the retally, and were scheduled to discuss the process with the High as the presidential vote.

One of Lien's lawyers, Lee Fu-dan, added: "There were major violations of the law with this election, so we filed the petition according to the law.

Lee argued the president broke the law by holding a referendum on the same day as the presidential election. The referendum focused on rival China's missile threat and starting peace talks with the Communist neighbor.

The Nationalist candidate has also insinuated the president might have staged the shooting, although Lien hasn't provided any solid evidence. So far, no suspects have been identified.

Count on the Newport to leave a person with a sour taste in their mouth before the band can take the stage

This was the case Thursday when they hosted The Slip with Hairy Apes BMX.

A 50 percent markup at the door is inexcusable. If the show is $12, don't put $8 on the flyer. This is called a "bait and switch," a practice illegal virtually everywhere except at music venues, apparently.

It seems when Ticketmaster is involved laws no longer apply, and judging by the venue's recent endeavor, one can only hope the Newport isn't going to use the extra $4 on any more "remodeling."

An embarrassingly bad opening band, Hairy Apes BMX added to the unhappy arrival. Despite semi-obvious individual talent on their instruments, the group was so painful to watch, prayers were uttered in hopes each song was their last.

The Apes deserve no more

At last it was time for The Slip. There was a fair amount of anticipation for this show because the band has been recommended by various people over the last year.

During an autumn interview with guitar virtuoso Kaki King, she was asked whether she'd seen anything impressive during the summer festival season and The Slip was an automatic response.

Getting to see The Slip a whole bunch this summer was great. They're one of my favorite bands. I really love those guys and every time I see them they get better and better," King said. "They're bril-

Trueba films filled with energy

The Slip is energetic and enigmatic, as adept at building up crowds as it is at breaking down boundaries.

Self indulgence and pure enjoyment reveals the artistic motives of Oscar-winning director Fernando Trueba. The Department of Spanish and Portuguese held a retrospective fesfival of Trueba's films this weekend at the Arena Grand Theater.

"I made the movies for capricious reasons; for the pleasure of making them," Trueba said.

Forget flying, forever

Like many Ohio State students, I found myself spending a lot of time in airports and on planes over Spring Break. They say getting there is half the fun, but this definitely was not the case for me. I encountered cancelled flights, surly check-in attendants, thorough searches and turbulence.

Couple this with food that would not even pass quality control in the Commons, horrible movies and crying babies, and you've got a recipe for disaster.

Right off the bat my trip started to go sour. My flight to New York was cancelled. I was planning on staying there for a day then connecting to Paris. But the attendant at the check-in desk seemed to have other ideas

After a frustrating conversation in which I barely restrained myself from childish name calling, I had no flight to New York, no refund, and was planning on taking the Greyhound. Then I realized that it takes like 15 hours for the bus to get to New York so I called the travel agency and they got me a different flight.

I don't know if you know this, but if you change your flight at the last minute, they put a mark on your boarding pass that alerts the security guards to pull you aside and search you.

That was nice. I had a wonderful time taking off half of my clothing and explaining the contents of my backpack to three people. I must say they seemed pretty disappointed that they didn't find anything. As they pried through my stuff they had the look of children on Christmas who unwrap presents only to find socks.

This brings us to the plane itself. As a child, I had a plane phase, and was pretty confident that I would be a pilot someday. I may have been a bit delusional. I simply don't have the constitution for aviation. Almost immediately after take off, I experienced shooting pain in my ears, only slightly remedied by chomping on huge wads of gum. The pilot informed us that we were flying at 34,000 feet. I'm not really sure what I was supposed to do with this information. I guess it seemed like a reasonable cruising altitude, but it didn't help me to orient myself any better.

The Greyhound to Cleveland, my usual Spring Break travel option, may not be the most scenic thing in the world, but at least you have some idea of what's going on. Like, "Alright, Mansfield. Another hour or so.'

On a plane it's like, "Yeah more clouds. Î can assume that we are maybe heading in the right direc-

Another thing they don't have on the Greyhound is turbulence. I've heard people tell me that they enjoy it, that it reminds them of roller coasters. I myself don't see the attraction.

Being trapped in a tin box crammed with people as it flops and wobbles for two hours 34,000 feet above God knows where didn't really do it for me.

The crashing meal carts and the old women praying next to me did add a certain disaster movie ambiance to the whole thing, but that's all a little clichéd by now. Oddly, the steward's insistence that the plane was not in danger only made me freak out more.

That was getting there. On the way back I sort of knew what to expect. I think many of my problems may have had to do with the particular airline I flew with, so on the way back I opted to take a later flight on a different airline, and was given a voucher to

However, after the last leg of my trip, I'm not looking forward to getting on a plane any time

The flight back to Columbus from New York was on a little Leer jet and they seemed to be having problems getting the engine started for about an hour. The sounds that were produced during this time did not fill me with confidence in regards to the integrity of this aircraft.

Also, the temperature that day was about 65 degrees, and I was dressed for the 45 degree weather that was in Paris the day before.

Basically I was a mess, sweating under layer upon layer of dirty black clothing that I had been

SAN ANTONIO — The Connecticut Huskies really do have it all: the All-America center, the flashy guards, the coach who gets everything right, and now a national title, which they won with ease.

Led by 24 points from Emeka Okafor and 21 from Ben Gordon, the Huskies outclassed Georgia Tech 82-73 last night to win the championship many predicted they'd get from the very start of the season.

They looked like champions from beginning to end, running when they wanted, controlling the middle at other times, grabbing just about every loose ball and making the Yellow Jackets look ordinary.

UConn became the first team since the 1996 Kentucky Wildcats to win the title after being ranked first in the preseason. The Huskies wound up on top of the college basketball world, thanks to a tall, quick, deep and talented roster put together by coach Jim Calhoun.

It has not been smooth sailing in the early season for the Ohio State women's lacrosse team. A tough schedule played a role in the start of the season with a record of 3-6.

Sometimes it only takes one victory to turn things around, and with a 17-10 triumph over visiting Davidson this past Sunday, the Buckeyes might have done just that.

"It was critical (beating Davidson)," said OSU Coach Sue Stimmel. "They're typically the weakest team in the conference. We had to beat them."

The Buckeyes came out of the gate like a team possessed. Halfway through the first period OSU was cruising, on the good side of a 6-0 score.

"We stepped it up a notch against Davidson," said sophomore midfielder KC Carter.

Three of the first six goals came from the stick of junior midfielder Regina Oliver. Oliver would go on to score six points for the Buckeyes on four goals and two assists. It was Oliver's first game back after missing the last two matches because of injury.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern will not publish illegal advertising or the advertising of illegal products or services. The Lantern reserves the right to reject advertising that denigrates individuals, groups or organizations based on race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, religion, mental or physical capacity, veteran's status, age or sexual orientation. The Lantern Business Manager will refer questionable advertising to the Publications Committee of the School of Journalism and Communication. The committee will recommend a decision on whether to publish the advertising to the Director of the school.

1. Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.

Copy must be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for special publications whose

An advertisement is required to occupy at least as many inches in height as columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered a "full column" (21 inches) advertisement and charged accordingly.

Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.

Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.

A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline. No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than seven column inches.

If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee.

The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.

10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.

11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication.

12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise

13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.

14. A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication. 15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

Men's tennis serves Hoosiers 6-1 defeat

Buckeyes dominate singles competition after doubles courts No. 2 and 3 suffer match losses

> By Melanie Watkins Lantern editor

The sun was shining, but the temperature stayed mild because of the high winds coming from many directions. This caused the No. 18 Ohio State men's tennis team and its opponent, Indiana, to play a safer, slower game Saturday at the Stickney Tennis

"It was tough conditions, obviously, because of the wind," OSU freshman Chris Klingemann said. "Everyone is not going to play their best tennis in the wind. I didn't try to do any flashy things; I was just trying to play high-percentage tennis.'

The Buckeyes got off track at the start with doubles but were able to come back and win every singles match, finishing the comvictory, taking a 6-1. OSU stayed undefeated in the conference bles teams suffered its first loss and win," Tucker said.

Wurtzman — who recently reclaimed the No. 1 ITA singles ranking — eventually grabbed the match at court No. 1 but not without a struggle.

"(Wurtzman) was playing a tough player in breezy conditions," said OSU coach Ty Tucker. "He had to keep fighting to turn his game around because he was only playing with about 50-60 percent of his ability in the Wurtzman was broken on his first service game to give Indiana's Jakub Praibis a 2-0 first-set lead. In the next court, Atas also lost his first service game.

A turnaround did not come for Wurtzman until late in the second set. He was able to play even with Praibis in the beginning of the second set and broke the Hoosier late to even the fourth point.

Oberholzer-Gee indicated that with a strong foreign participation in file sharing, any law focusing on the United States is not likely to significantly alter the supply of music online.

Oberholzer-Gee said the study is unique and more accurate than previous studies that have relied only on surveys, because their study compiled download data directly from KaZaA, a popular file-sharing program. The data included direct computer oversight of 1.75 million downloads and CD sales statistics from the second half of 2002. He added that surveys do not always provide accurate data because it is impossible to know if participants respond truthfully. Because of the study's recent release, it has not yet been endorsed by additional researchers. However, the RIAA, a strong opponent of the study, released a response pointing out the lack of support for the study, and highlighting weaknesses.
