Commerce Banquet

BANQUET — Wilbert E. Chope, left, president of Industrial Nucleonics in Columbus, was made an honorary member of Alpha Kappa Psi last night at the professional commerce fraternity's spring banquet in the Union. Initiated into the fraternity were: John Fleck, Com-3, Sherwyn Long, Com-3; Ronald Parkinson, Com-2; David Payne, Com-3; Dr. S. Earl Brown and Dr. Alfred J. Wright. A key was awarded to Louis Zimmers, Com-3, for having the highest point hour in the college.

Car Owners Participate In Destination Survey

By Grace Van Atta

All campus car owners are urged to participate today in an "origin and destination" survey.

Future traffic estimates will be based on the results. The key to the survey is a postcard which has been sent to all car owners in Franklin County and to students and faculty members who have their cars registered on campus.

"THE INFORMATION is to be used in making plans to handle traffic movement in designing and locating new streets and rehabilitating old ones," James W. Clark, campus planner, explained.

"It is important that everyone return the questionnaire postcards. Most of the postcards will arrive in today's mail," he explained, "but whether it was yesterday or it is tomorrow, people should remember to jot down the trips they make today."

The Ohio State Highway Department has requested that all drivers keep a record of all trips made on Tuesday. On the postcard they should note the starting point and destination and return it by mail.

FRANKLIN COUNTY officials, in conjunction with the Highway Department, will use the facts gathered from the survey to make estimates of traffic and traffic movements in the county for the period through 1980.

The University will also use these estimates in planning for future physical development of the campus, Clark said.

Pershing Rifles Honors Winners And Two Members

Pershing Rifles, Co A-1, honored outstanding members and winners in the P/R First Regimental Drill Meet at the second annual Recognition Banquet Friday night.

Company Commander, Marion H. Marshall, announced the new company commander, Gary R. Cooper, and first sergeant, Gary L. Marquison, preceded by the farewell address of Col. Kenneth A. Cunin, retiring Professor of Military Science.

Cleveland Flooded By Flash Storms

CLEVELAND — (P) — A deluge that poured up to three inches of rain on some areas in little more than an hour sent flash floods surging through parts of greater Cleveland yesterday. Damage was estimated in the millions of dollars.

No major casualties were reported, although 33 persons were treated for exposure at Lakeside Hospital.

A BUS-LOAD of persons escaped serious injury when a Cleveland Transit System bus was swept along Liberty Road by flood waters. The bus, which had just come off Cedar Road Hill was stopped by a utility pole.

Bus driver Thaddeus Ballew said the bus would have gone completely under water if the utility pole had not stopped it.

As it was, the passengers had to go under water getting out the door and onto the roof.

ANOTHER BUS, a Greyhound coming from Pittsburgh, was almost completely submerged by the waters in the University Circle area. The bus driver had to stop because of high water, and the water kept rising until it reached almost to the roof, where the passengers had taken refuge.

As the waters poured out of sewers, rivers rose, and the Chagrin River began spilling over into lowland areas early in the evening.

A STATE of emergency was declared in Eastlake and Shaker Heights. Nearly 1,000 basements in Shaker Heights were filled with water. Mayor Wilson G. Stapleton estimated damage to streets alone at $100,000. National Guardsmen were called out.

The heaviest downpour apparently was in University Heights, where a reported 3.9 inches fell between 1:30 and 2:45 p.m. At Cleveland Hopkins Airport the weather bureau measured a mere .79 inch for the day.

Phi Kappa Alpha Initiates 24 New Members Monday

Twenty-four University students and faculty in banking and finance became the first members of the local chapter of Phi Alpha Kappa last night.

Undergraduate student members are Gerald H. Dombek, Edmund L. Focktman, Jr., Ronald E. Freese, Carl C. Heister, Lowell H. Klosky, Leonard G. Knell, Charles D. Parkinson, Lanning P. Porterfield, Lloyd R. Stemen, Daniel C. Turoff and Sidney D. Williams, Jr.

GRADUATE student members are Marshall C. Downs, John Wallace, John T. Hackett and Azmi D. Mikhail.

Elvin F. Donaldson, George S. Goodell, John K. Pfahl, Frances Quantius, Leo D. Stone, N. Gilbert Riddle and Ronald S. Foster are faculty members. Foster is also advisor to the honorary.

Dr. Charles A. Dice and Dr. Henry C. Hoagland were made honorary members. Both retired from the faculty, Dr. Dice had been in charge of banking courses and Dr. Hoagland had been in charge of finance courses.

MINIMUM requirements for a business finance or banking major is a 2.5 general accumulative and, in the major, a 3.0 from a junior and a 2.75 from a senior.

Phi Alpha Kappa is presently organized on a local chapter basis. But plans are underway to organize it as a national honorary fraternity.

TOM HAMILTON

In Retrospect . . .

Ed. Note: Henry Berger, author of the following letter to the Editor, is a senior in the College of Arts. Although his letter exceeds the limit of 400 words, we thought it would be of general interest to the faculty and student body alike.

To the Editor:

It has been four years since I entered the Ohio State University, and like several more students I shall pass through its portals for the last time in my academic career on June 12. What has been the culmination of those years? What is the judgment that one such as myself who will shortly join the ranks of the alumni will pass on my total experience at this University?

The raison d'être of a university must lie in the imbueing of its students and faculty with an intellectual curiosity and in the search for knowledge. If the university fails to pursue these intellectual endeavors and to provide such a necessary environment attendant to its existence, then it fails in its primary purpose. The search for knowledge must exist on the theoretical and practical levels and should prepare the student for his intellectual role in society. Such a situation commands challenge and certainly does not preclude new and different ideas.

As It Was

Ohio State was seriously deficient in these respects when I first descended upon the Oval in September, 1955. An aura of stifled and cramped subliminal consciousness prevailed over the campus.

Academic freedom was seriously impaired. The University had been "safely" sheathed behind the sanctimonious Gag Rule, and even the halls of its crazy-quilt mixture of architectural monstrosities reeked of reaction. I discovered that I had not eluded the Junior Senator from Wisconsin when I left the quiet hills overlooking the Potomac and the "Foggy Bottom."

The heart of the University seemed to have its locus on the green fairways of Fifteenth and Indianola Aves. The Greeks were too good for the Independents, and the Independents looked with utter disdain upon the Greeks. Everyone despised the Administration which in turn smugly ignored the students. The auspicious Student Senate was one of many student organizations on the campus, and it was viewed by many as being a lesser of many such organizations.

There were other and more unsavory conditions which existed at Ohio State, such as the racial and religious discrimination in University-approved housing and in certain places which employed students for work. Faculty salaries were abysmally low, and certain questionable activities in athletic quarters were rewarded with a probation by the Big Ten Athletic Council. Yes, there was much to be disheartened about.

Some Changes

And now it is four years later. Has anything changed? Yes, there are still those who raise eyebrows at the word Socialist, and there is still racial and religious discrimination in certain quarters. Faculty salaries are still below par, and the Greek-Independent animosity is still present.

Mr. Jack Fullen still lives, according to one source, only to write the editorial page of the Ohio State Monthly and dances with glee as another alumnus writes to applaud Jack as the latter fires his spleen and unleashes his fury against the "sinners in the hands of an angry God." In all due respect, much of what Mr. Fullen chastises in his pugnacious fashion is vulnerable to such criticism.

Nevertheless, things have changed and for the better. The Gag Rule, for all its intents and purposes, is dead. Ohio State has suddenly realized that a political community does exist. Academic freedom has come a great distance toward full restoration, and though it took time, a Socialist Dissent Forum has become a reality.

Changes In Process

The center of campus is returning to its rightful place, and any student need only gaze upward at the skyscrapers on 11th Ave. to recognize that fact.

True, the Greek-Independent hostility is still present, but it is far less militant, and the two groups are discovering that there are far more problems which concern them both than separate them. This fact has been realized by a certain coterie of students who have recently formed the Committee of Fifty for Better Student Government.

This writer will never concede his basic belief that fraternities and sororities are undemocratic and do harm to the academic environment of a university. But he admits that Utopia is far off and that the solution now is to mitigate the evils of this system as much as possible.

The Student Senate is no longer one of many organizations. It is the student government on the campus. The fact that we have a lethargic electorate does not negate the fact that Student Senate does operate, has grown in stature and action, and is the most important and viable student organization on this campus. It has made important strides, but it has far to go toward achieving many desirable goals.

The abortive attempt of an independent third party on this campus did not prove to be entirely in vain. Much of the philosophy of the United Students Association was translated into action by the 1958-59 Student Senate, and many of the party's ideas were adopted by one of the two remaining political organizations.

The interantional student has come into his own at Ohio State, and anyone who visited the International Fair or attended the Model UN can only attest to the fact that "it can be done here, too."

No Sand Boxes

If there are fewer students who participate in the "Weeks" at Ohio State, it is because they are tired of the playboy activities and are more interested in what they are really here for—an education.

Mr. Ellison may fulminate in The Saturday Evening Post and make irresponsible statements about "entertainments and lectures weekly for the diversion of the student," but this writer applauds the cultural programs Ohio State provides and would challenge Mr. Ellison to match the educational and intellectual contributions of an Eleanor Roosevelt and a Richard Tucker, who, among others, will appear on the campus next year.

The Administration

Last, but not least, is the Administration. We have more than a change of faces. We have a president, who though he is human, by coincidence, and occasionally makes mistakes, has a real concern for the student and the student's problems, and what is most important, is willing to listen to the student's point of view. The Administration has proved itself to be efficient, but human and justly cautious, and progressive.

There is still criticism of the Administration, but the criticism is voiced because the students feel that they may be heard. Praise is forthcoming, also, and as a student who travels in varied circles, I may say there are few who emerge from the office of the Dean of Student Relations who do not have the highest respect and regard for its occupant.

I leave Ohio State, therefore, not only with my degree and a sense of personal intellectual accomplishment, but with a feeling that liberalism has planted fresh roots at the University, and that we are at last heading in the right direction. I trust that my optimism is not premature and that my hopes are not in vain. Let me rather affirm with Tennyson:

"Men, my brothers, men, the workers, ever reaping something new: That which they have done but earnest of the things that they shall do."

Henry W. Berger.

Editor's Mail Bag

Article Continues to Draw Comment; Magazine Advisor Voices Complaint

Dear Miss Harley:

In the LANTERN of May 26 you reprinted, substantially, Hollie West's fine and sensitive article, "The O.S.U. Blues," from the spring issue of Counterpoint, without first having obtained permission to do so. I am writing to protest this action.

I grant that Counterpoint is somewhat flattered to find its contents appreciated, even if appreciation comes in the form of having another journal help itself to those contents. I also grant that the article was slightly abridged and that its source was acknowledged. We might indeed have considered giving consent for the reprinting under these conditions, had we been asked, but we were not.

AS FAR AS I can learn, our editor was approached on the matter by someone from the LANTERN on the Sunday preceding. She told the LANTERN representative that they would have to ask me, as faculty advisor. This was not done, though I was available at least by telephone almost all day Monday.

I am not writing just from hurt feelings. My complaint is that Counterpoint is still on sale, and will be on sale again in the Summer Quarter. We need these sales. But we have been "scooped"—and any newspaper person should know the meaning of that. The LANTERN is wholly subsidized. Counterpoint is wholly a private enterprise, supported by the sale of copies and that alone. If people don't buy the magazine, we will cease to exist.

Mr. West is free to write for the LANTERN or anyone else he chooses to, and since Counterpoint is not copyright there is no legal recourse against anyone who appropriates its contents. But we feel that we have moral rights: we spent lots of money giving Mr. West the courtesy of a public forum for his ideas, and this while the LANTERN was still deep in its usual diet of trivia. So to speak, we "discovered" him.

ALL WE WANT is to sell enough copies, on the strength of his and other contributions, to make our expenses, and then for all we care the LANTERN can reprint the entire issue and distribute it by balloon over Franklin County.

The WOSU news program just before six on Tuesday evening discussed the article, attributing it (of course!) to the LANTERN. So, I am told, did WLW-C on television. I suppose the ultimate indignity for us on Counterpoint will be to see the editor of the LANTERN hanged in effigy by the local chapter of the White Citizen's Council.

Sincerely,
Charles B. Wheeler,
Faculty Advisor.

Ed. Note: Permission to publish the West article was granted by Beverlee Safier, editor of Counterpoint. Hollie West is a Lantern staffer. Counterpoint sales can't have been hurt by the publicity resulting from our printing of the article. We assume that you include the English department announcements in what you term a "diet of trivia."

Regretably, we did not say in our Editor's note that West's complete article could be read in Counterpoint, a magazine which appears to be growing in stature itself.

We are sorry if we have caused ill will where our intentions were but to help.

FACTORY FRESH

HOLLYWOOD—(UPI)—Peter Ustinov, who spent many days in California's Death Valley riding a white mule on the "Spartacus" location, insisted on a new mule when he returned to the studio for additional scenes.

"The factory recommends a change of mules every thousand miles," explained the British actor.

Praise . . .

To the Editor:

I have recently read Mr. West's splendid editorial on the position of the Negro at Ohio State in the May 26th issue of the Ohio State Morning Lantern and wanted to write at once to tell you how glad and grateful I am to see such a candid and sincere account in print.

A few copies found their way here to Ohio University where I am a student.

There is little time to write at the moment. Had there been time now, I wanted to discuss further some of the things he wrote of with such insight.

I hope there may be positive reactions from this editorial and hope I hear something more of it as time goes on. Again, my appreciation for such a direct and truthful article.

Your truly,
Allan Ward, Athens, Ohio.

Washington Building '59 'Murderers Row'

By Jack Wittenmeier
Sports Editor

Since Cincy GM Gabe Paul crippled the Redlegs' "slugging six" by dealing away Wally Post, Ted Kluszewski and "Smokey" Burgess, baseball fans have been searching for another modern-day "murderers row."

Until this season, the search has been futile. However, since opening day fans who sing the praises of the four-bagger have directed their attention to a surprising source—the Washington Senators.

A TRIO of young Goliaths have been swatting for distance in Griffith Park this spring, where just such an attraction is badly needed, attendance-wise.

The Washington club stood seventh in attendance with 169,538 customers in 17 home dates this season, almost 100,000 less patrons for the same number of games last season.

Redlegs Sign Two Players To Contracts

CINCINNATI—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds said today they have signed Herb Busch, a huge six-foot seven-inch right hand pitcher from the University of Virginia. Paul Florence, assistant general manager of the Reds, said Busch was paid a bonus but he did not disclose the amount.

The 21-year-old Busch, who weighs 230, lives at Short Hills, N. J., and Florence said he was sought by virtually all major league clubs.

Busch will report to the Cincinnati club after his college graduation this month. After workouts with the parent club he will be assigned to a Reds' farm club.

Busch was drafted by the New York Knickerbockers of the National Basketball Association but elected to cast his lot with baseball.

The Reds also announced they have signed Ray Vaughn, 21-year-old third baseman from Elizabethtown, Tenn. He was signed to a contract with the Cincinnati farm club at Savannah of the South Atlantic League. He attended Lincoln Memorial University.

SUMMER INTRAMURALS

The intramural department has announced activities for Summer Quarter. Regulation softball leagues will be set up for students, faculty and anyone else who is connected with the University.

There will also be a slo-pitch league (using a 12 inch ball) if enough interest is shown. The deadline for entries is noon, Thursday, June 25. Anyone interested should sign up in room 250 at the Natatorium. Further information can be obtained by calling or dropping into the Intramural Office.

Mixed swims have been scheduled for students and faculty during the warm summer months. The first swim will be held June 24 and every Wednesday after this date. Swimmers must show a privilege card for admittance.

However, the booming drives of the Nats "youth movement," Harmon Killebrew, Jim Lemon and Bob Allison, might start the turnstiles spinning at a record pace.

THE SENATORS, although slowly cooling off after an early season challenge, lead the junior loop in circuit smacks with 56.

Griffith Park has no special shortened foul lines for home team advantages and yet the powerful drives are still landing in the seats with rapid frequency.

Killebrew has been most successful in keeping fans alert in the outfield section with 17 blasts. The rookie third baseman, in his first full season as a regular, was labeled as a "flash-in-the-pan" when he started the season with a barrage of homers.

HOWEVER, THE balding, 23-year-old youngster hasn't slowed down yet and doesn't show any signs of doing so. A 200-pounder, Killebrew is also pacing the AL in RBI's with 37.

Jim Lemon, the guy who couldn't make it at Cleveland, is also swinging with authority for the Nats this season. The big rightfielder isn't far behind teammate Killebrew with 12 home runs and a .275 average.

Bob Allison, who patrols center field in Griffith Park, is another rookie who has blossomed in the nation's capital this season. A big, powerful slugger, Allison has nine homers and leads the Washington batters with a .290 average.

A shoulder injury has sidelined the Nat's former long ball slugger, Roy Sievers, who lead the league in homers in 1957.

Youth is on the side of the Washington Senators. With a few more years of playing experience, the Nats could develop into a possible pennant contender with fellows like Killebrew, Lemon and Allison losing baseballs at a record pace.

Athletes Halt Water Battle

The University of Illinois Tribe of Illini, varsity lettermen's organization, put a new emergency plan into effect last week to prevent a recurrence of water fights which have disrupted campus life several times in recent years.

As groups began to form last week on the Illini campus, 60 athletes, wearing "I" jackets arrived on the scene and went along with the crowd, turning off fire hydrants, confiscating wrenches and buckets from participants and urging the students to disperse.

Students officers from Interfraternity Council and Men's Independent Association worked with the Tribe members in handling the emergency.

Ghana Gov't. Slows Press

ACCRA, Ghana—(AP)—The Ghana Union of Printers and Newspaper Workers has called on the government to hold without trial journalists who publish articles which, in the government's opinion, undermine state security.

The Union, which includes some journalists, adopted the resolution Saturday. It also said only journalists who are members of the Union should be allowed to work on Ghana newspapers and that foreign newsmen entering Ghana to cover events should be required to apply for registration cards.

The Union declared there should be legislation "to insure that the press of Ghana becomes an instrument for the defense of the state."

Henry Thompson, Ghana press club secretary, said the proposals were preposterous. He added, "I am surprised by such actions of a body which, as far as the press club is concerned, has nothing to do with journalism in this country."

Oneida Lake is the largest lake entirely within the state of New York. It has 79.8 square miles.

Honesty Explains It . . .

70 Per Cent of American Families Buy 'On Credit'

CHICAGO—(UPI)—The United States is on a credit card jag the likes of which have never been seen—but it works fine because the plain fact is most people are honest.

An estimated 70 per cent of American families hold credit cards or have charge accounts of one kind or another. In modern America many's the man—and woman—who now carries cash only for tips and to buy the daily papers.

HOW DOES it work? A man who is up to his neck in the credit business, Carl Hobbet, general manager of the Credit Bureau of Cook County (Chicago) Inc., says 85 per cent of card holders pay their bills promptly.

Of the other 15 per cent, most are not crooked, he says—just "problem children" who over-estimate what they can afford. A mere three per cent of credit card users, Hobbet estimates, are deliberately dishonest.

Hobbet's firm employs 140 persons to keep its files up to date on two to three million credit applicants. They check Federal tax liens and municipal court judgments, and clip newspapers for character-revealing stories about drunken driving or refusal to testify before Congressional committees.

LAST YEAR the bureau investigated the records of 600,000 persons all over the country. If an applicant has established charge accounts, the procedure is comparatively simple.

Within minutes a credit bureau can report the date the applicant was investigated, his largest purchase and his "pay habits." The bureau relays these and other pertinent facts, and the subscribing organization then decides whether its credit requirements are satisfied.

Hobbet advises his clients not to explain why credit is refused, but to refer the applicant to the Credit Bureau "which is happy to go over the record with him. Sometimes we can straighten out why a bill hasn't been paid and reestablish credit," he said.

WEALTH IS NOT always a guarantee of good credit, he said.

Hobbet recalled an applicant with an annual income of $100,000 and a $50,000 home who was refused a charge account at an expensive Michigan Ave. store on the basis of the Credit Bureau's report. He arrived at Hobbet's office fuming and threatening suit.

"But he had to admit he had allowed his charge accounts to go unpaid for as long as 216 days," Hobbet said. "He said he wanted to make his wife worry about the bills."

PETROLEUM companies and organizations like the Diner's Club or American Express have the most rigid requirements, Hobbet said. Their credit cards amount to blank checks, he explained, with no security but the character of the applicant.

Occasionally a bad risk slips past the Credit Bureau's close scrutiny. One of the major oil companies now is trying to track down a card holder who ran up a bill of $20,000 in one month, Hobbet said.

Credit bureaus increasingly are going into the collection business for their clients, he continued, but the day of the traditional bullying bill collector is past.

THE AGENT smiles as he requests payment of an overdue bill.

"The average person wants to pay his bills," according to Hobbet. "We're collecting over $50,000 a month just by salesmanship—selling the family on the idea that it's character that counts."

Portugal Regime Said To Be Firm

LISBON — (UPI) — There is no reason to believe that the Portuguese regime is passing through a crisis or threatened with any break in its continuity even should Prime Minister Antonio De Oliveira Salazar decide to retire.

This was stated by Vice Premier Pedro Theotónio Pereira in an exclusive interview with United Press International.

He said the predictions by Gen. Humberto Delgado, opposition candidate for the presidency in the June, 1958, election, that the Salazar government was about to fall were "wishful thinking."

"THE PORTUGUESE government has all the necessary requisites to continue even if Dr. Salazar wanted one day to retire peacefully to his home," he said.

In a broad interview on Portuguese policy both at home and abroad, Pereira, whose cabinet title is Minister of the Presidency, made it clear that the Portuguese government was planning confidently for the future.

Pereira pointed out that the government is making a big industrialization effort while at the same time maintaining negotiations with other countries outside the European Common Market for some form of general tariff reduction agreement.

"THE PORTUGUESE government has always regarded with sympathy the creation of a free trade zone," he said.

In Africa also, he said, the government is making big plans for the future of its important territories there despite the troubled times through which other areas of that continent are passing.

He said, "We are deeply dedicated to developing our provinces and in this sense, we are looking with as much confidence as ever. This is the secret which has kept us there through the centuries."

QUESTIONED: ABOUT the recent conspiracy against the government, disclosed by Interior Minister Col. Arnaldo Schulz, Pereira dismissed it as a "plot which died at birth."

He said it resulted from agitation whipped up in the presidential election. He blamed the agitation on Gen. Belgando's "demoagogy extremes."

Pereira denied that there was any crisis between church and state in Portugal.

He cited the recent "marvelous manifestation of faith" at the inauguration of the statue to Christ the King as proof of the goodwill between spiritual and temporal leaders.

Talk Society Wants More Membership

Commerce college students are invited to join the College of Commerce and Administration Speaking Society.

This society will be composed of members of the college with good scholastic records who wish to take part. It will begin active work during next Autumn Quarter.

The purpose of the team will be to speak to high school groups throughout the state about the position of the business man and woman in our society and about the opportunities for those who choose business as a career.

The program puts great emphasis on the general college preparatory course for those high school students planning to enroll in a college of commerce. A general outline of courses required in college is also presented.

Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity organized such a speaking team last fall but plans are now being made for the enlargement of the team. Anyone interested in participating in the society should contact Dr. S. Earl Brown, room 138, Hagerty Hall. Dr. Brown will be faculty advisor for the group.

Pharmacy Magazine Started in 1942

'Spur' Edited By Students

By Carole Kennon

Although the term spur is more familiar in riding circles than pharmaceutical ones, the official magazine for the College of Pharmacy is titled, "The Spur."

Here's how it happened.

WHEN THE MAGAZINE first started in 1942 it was just a mimeographed edition, but it bore the imposing title of "The American Pharmaceutical Association Student Branch Journal." A year later, largely due to the efforts of Dr. David Hiner, who has since left the University to become dean of the College of Pharmacy at Utah, the magazine was made a more formal publication which was professionally printed. As the magazine has grown the name has become shorter.

In 1945 the title "The Spur" was first suggested. At that time the student branch of the American Pharmaceutical Association, which sponsors the magazine, had no insignia or symbol to bestow on its president in recognition of the honor and responsibility of this office.

The members of the student branch selected a small pin in the form of a spur to serve this purpose. The spur represents ambition, progressiveness and initiative in the president, and the name was transferred to the magazine to stand for the same ideals there.

NOW "THE SPUR" is issued three times a year to all students and alumni of the College of Pharmacy and members of the Ohio State Pharmaceutical Association.

"The objectives of the magazine have been shifting somewhat in recent years," says Dr. Arthur C. Lytle, faculty advisor for the publication. "We are trying to broaden the appeal and the value and make it more than a student publication. We would like it to be a means of communication to the alumni." With this in mind, alumni and professional news has been added to the articles about student and faculty affairs at the college.

"The Spur" is entirely supported by its own advertising, and most of the advertisers have been with it since it started.

Heading the magazine next year are Ronald Babington, Phar-2, editor; Karl Renner, Phar-1, assistant editor; Donald Hill, Phar-2, business manager, and Harlin Kiracofe, Phar-3, circulation manager.
