Glenn urges audience to get involved

By Gretchen W. Schneider
Lantern staff writer

GLENN

Astronaut and former Sen. John Glenn and Ohio Secretary of State J. Kenneth Blackwell addressed 229 high school students at Ohio State about the importance of citizenship and voting especially in regards to the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11.

Students representing eight central Ohio high schools filled the Michael E. Moritz College of Law Auditorium for a Youth Summit as a part of the Kids Voting 2000 program sponsored by the John Glenn Institute.

Although the focus of the day was the importance of voting and getting involved with politics, Glenn and Blackwell used most of their time to talk about the terrorist attacks and the effects they have on students.

Glenn began his speech by saying the world had changed a lot in the past couple weeks.

"What has changed is hatred: pure, unadulterated hatred," Glenn said. "That is inconceivable, almost as inconceivable that people could turn an aircraft into what turned out to be horizontal missiles."

He then asked the audience again not to castigate anyone because they are Muslim. This mentality is not common in the Islamic faith, Glenn assured the audience.

"This is a radical offshoot of Islam, and we just have to learn how to deal with it," Glenn said.

He expressed his disgust with American evangelical clerics who claimed the attacks were carried out because God had withdrawn his protection on the United States. Glenn said the God he believed in didn't dictate people leaping from buildings and thousands being killed in an attack.

With his experience in the senate on the intelligence committee, Glenn explained there are five different groups around the world of which Osama bin Laden is seen as a guru.

"He was sort of the one who led their thought," Glenn said. "If he were gone, it wouldn't mean that other people would not be there too."

The former senator quoted bin Laden when he held up the Qur'an and said: "You cannot defeat the heretic with the book of law. You have to show them the fist."

According to Glenn, bin Laden, was behind the attacks in Nairobi on two U.S. Embassies, the attacks on the Marine Corps, which resulted in the deaths of 241 marines, Dar es Salaam, the USS Cole, the World Trade Center and the Pentagon attacks. He also assured this was not the end of these attacks and it would be difficult to stamp out.

"Well it is very difficult to counter that sort of thing," Glenn said. "We've never been up against an enemy like this."

Glenn then switched gears by saying something good could come out of this. He noted the audience was part of what is being called the "Me Generation." He pointed out the students often ask, "What's in it for me?"

"Maybe that became too much of an obsession, that if there was ever a wake up call it came on Sept. 11 in New York as we watched all that unfold on TV," Glenn said.

He encouraged students to come together at this time of crisis and become the "We Generation." He told students this was a time to rekindle their interests. He said they were going to have to take a lot of action in politics and their willingness to serve.

"This is something we are all going to have to focus on together," Glenn said.

Glenn encouraged students to be involved somehow. For some, he said going into politics might be the answer. For others he maintained the importance of keeping informed on current events. He told students to vote for those whom represent their interests.

"This country is diminished when one single person does not vote," Glenn said.

Campus businesses busted

Officials crack down, underage drinking citations increase

By Ben Finley
Lantern staff writer

At least 18 out of 24 campus area bars, tailgate booths and stores were cited for selling alcoholic beverages to people under the age of 21, during a citywide sweep for Columbus area liquor violations from Sept. 4-8, said Lt. Mike Spiert of the Franklin County Sheriff's Office.

Columbus Police working with the Franklin County Stop Teenagers' Opportunity to Purchase program cited 44 establishments with liquor permits and arrested 59 people for underage drinking in Columbus with many of the of the establishments located near the Ohio State campus, said Julie Ehrhart, spokeswoman for the Ohio Department of Safety Investigative Unit.

After the university district experienced riots last spring, many people suspected students were attracted to large off-campus parties because there were not enough bars to go to anymore. With so many citations being delivered on Sept. 8, is it possible even more bar owners will be forced to shut off their taps and close their doors?

"It is entirely possible that there could be some suspensions in the upcoming months," said Chuck SanFilippo, executive director of the State of Ohio Liquor Control Commission. "If anybody has had three violations in two years that is a suspension for sure. That is mandated by law."

It may take several months for many of the establishments to receive their penalties and sentences, SanFilippo said.

Underage drinking and liquor citations are nothing new to the campus area and Columbus, but the number of underage sales cases that the Franklin County Commission has received in the last five months is increasing, said SanFilippo. The commission has heard 152 underage sales cases involving 144 different permit holders, he said.

Most of the arrests and citations in the campus area occurred on Saturday beginning at 10:12 a.m. at the tailgates on Lane Avenue before the OSU football game against Akron.

Citations and arrests continued involving many campus institutions, including Panini's, The Cornerstone, Chipotle, Not Al's Too, Buffalo Wild Wings (formerly known as BW-3's), Larry's, Quarters, and The Northberg. Several underage drinking charges and arrests were also made on various campus streets, alleys and parking lots, according to a news release from the Ohio Department of Public Safety.

Spiert said police came to campus on Sept. 8 to make a statement for the rest of the football season.

"At the first football game we knew all the students weren't there, but our focus isn't necessarily on the students but on the providers of alcohol in that area," Spiert said. "We wanted to let businesses and everybody with a liquor permit know we will be there checking and making sure they are complying with the law."

Larry's Bar at 2040 N. High St., which had not had a violation since 1967, was cited for not requesting the ID of a person ordering an alcoholic beverage, said Becky Brooke, a bartender at Larry's. That person turned out to be an underage informant for the Ohio Department of Liquor Control.

The bartender who made the sale to an underage person was fined $500 and the bar itself was fined $1,600 by the Liquor Control Department, Brooke said.

"The fact that we have to be afraid that we might go to jail if we don't do our jobs is asinine,"

Brooke said. "We shouldn't have to be everybody's parents."

Larry's is strictly 21-and-over, yet they are having problems with underage people sneaking into the bar and having drinks bought for them; it is difficult to stop when the bar is very busy and they cannot see everyone who comes into the bar, Brooke said.

"We don't want underage drinking to go on and we don't want the bar to get shut down," Brooke said. "You don't think about it when you are 19 that people will lose their jobs and lose their business. I wish younger people understand that if they come in here and people get busted, this place will be shut down. And we have been here for 65 years."

The penalty for selling alcohol to a person under the age of 21 is a first-degree misdemeanor, which is up to $1,000 fine and six months in jail, said Julie Ehrhart, spokeswoman for Ohio Liquor Control Investigative Unit. Establishments with violations are judged on a case-to-case basis where first offenses can bring anywhere from a one-day suspension or $100 fine to 10-day suspension or $1,000 fine. With the second offense the fine and suspension doubles. Three violations in two years is an automatic suspension, SanFilippo said.

The Buffalo Wild Wings at 7 E. Woodruff Ave. was also cited for serving to someone underage, however, the bartender involved does not remember the incident that liquor control described when they came 45 minutes later to make the citation, said manager Tarsa Favata.

The Department of Liquor Control uses underage confidential informants who are paid to go into an establishment and order an alcoholic beverage using their real IDs, Ehrhart said.

Vandals target local Pakistani/Indian restaurant

By Ben Finley
Lantern staff writer

Someone threw a brick through the window of The Taj Mahal restaurant, located at 2247 N. High St. late Thursday night, said J.L. Kumar, who owns the Taj Mahal with his family.

No one was in the restaurant, which serves Indian and Pakistani cuisine, at the time of the incident.

The FBI is investigating the crime, Columbus Division of Police said. The Columbus FBI office was unavailable for comment.

"Unless the evidence directly supports that it is a hate crime or we find a suspect, then it cannot be regarded as a hate crime," said Columbus Police spokesman Sgt. Earl Smith. "It is a little different because it is an ethnic restaurant."

No suspects have been found, and the odds of finding one are slim, Smith said.

"We have a lot of acts of random violence in the city of Columbus, so it is difficult to say exactly what the motivation was of this crime," Smith said.

Kumar would not comment on whether the incident was related to the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

Someone mentioned that the restaurant sign has the word "Pakistani" on it and could be a possible motivation, Kumar said.

"There is no difference, food-wise, between Pakistan and India," Kumar said. "It was one country before 1947. And after that, the culture, the food, the religion were the same."

The culprits caused $3,000 to $4,000 in damages, Kumar said. The damage included the sign, a window pane, a couple of table tops and some glasses, he said.

"I don't know what happened," Kumar said. "I can't believe anybody would do this in the campus area. We have never had any problems."

Kumar noticed the damage when he came to work Friday morning. He called the police and his insurance company, he said. His landlord fixed the window and sign the next day, Kumar said.

The Taj Mahal was open for business that morning and the incident will not stop him from remaining in business, Kumar said.

Taj Mahal opened in 1984 and was the first Indian restaurant to open in Columbus, Kumar said.

Microwave malfunction cooks Baker Hall West

By Melissa Goldfein
Lantern staff writer

Four fire trucks called to extinguish a fire at 1:57 p.m. on Friday that broke out in Baker Hall West, in a resident's first floor room.

The resident, cooking a Chef Boyardee product in his microfridge, turned around to see the microwave's control panel engulfed in flames. A resident hall staff member used a fire extinguisher to douse the flames until fire officials could arrive.

"Probably 300 students evacuated," said Ohio State police officer Scott Tipton. "Somebody had the presence of mind to shut the fire doors. The smoke and fire damage was limited to one room — the microwave actually."

Matt Kremens, a freshman in industrial design, was in his room on the first floor of Baker Hall West when the fire broke out. As he and his roommate were exiting the building, the hallways were thick with smoke, Kremens said. He saw no flames, he said.

The students who occupy the room went home for the weekend, which allowed the resident hall staff a chance to clean the smoke damage and get the bed linens dry cleaned, said Steven Kremer, director of Residence Life. Kremer also said the university is going to have experts look at the microfridge units to determine the problem and contact the manufacturer because the appliance is in every dorm room on campus.

Katie McDevitt, a freshman in fine arts and a fourth floor resident, said when she returned to her room after the evacuation the only thing that appeared out of the ordinary was that the first floor smelled of cleaning solution.

The cause of the fire appears to be an electrical short. Other than the damage to the room, the hallway carpet was scorched as firemen removed charred debris, said fire Chief Mark Devine.

"They said they sent someone in but the bartender doesn't remember the person, and they (liquor control) never showed the person to our bartender or anything," Favata said.

Buffalo Wild Wings was last cited sometime this past winter, Favata said.

The Northberg Tavern located at 2084 N. High St., which was also cited for underage drinking in the Sept. 8. sweep, changed its policy into a 21-and-over bar last week. Bar manager Russ Crane would not comment on the citation but said the decision was made during the last school year.

"We decided to make The Northberg 21-and-over because a lot of the south campus bars were closing, and many 18-to-20-year-olds were flocking to The Northberg," Crane said. "It was a proactive measure against underage drinking at The Northberg."

Crane said that people who were under 21 were only 10 percent of The Northberg's attendance and would not affect the bar's business.

"A liquor license is not a right. It is a privilege," SanFillippo said. "If you get a liquor license it is your responsibility to make sure no one underage is drinking at your establishment, period, whether they buy it there or someone there gets it and gives it to them."

Panini's Assistant Manager Greg Gould would not comment on the bars recent liquor citation, but said in an earlier interview that one out of seven underage patrons have beers taken by bartenders on any given night during the school year.

"The fun of underage drinking is that you are not supposed to be doing it," Gould said. "It is a thrill. And I don't think you are ever going to deter a young kid trying to find a thrill."

"I would have hoped with all the publicity and efforts we've made in the campus area that on the first football game of the season we would not have been able to go to 18 places, all permit holders and have an underage person purchase beer," Spiert said. "But it happened, and we were shocked."

The STOP program is funded by a grant from Franklin County and began in April 2001. The program will last for a year and will then be assessed before another grant is applied for, Spiert said.

"Based on what the program looks like now, I think it is a needed investigative tool," Spiert said.

First residence hall set to transform Lima campus

By Amy Sudlow
Lantern staff writer

One building, with a maximum projected cost totaling more than $9 million, will change the Lima Campus of Ohio State forever.

Construction on a new residence hall for the campus could begin as early as Summer 2002, said Diane Whitbeck, assistant vice president for Student Affairs. Officials say the new on-campus housing is a necessary addition, and the facility is anticipated to open by 2003.

The addition of student housing will transform the campus into a 24-hour, seven-days-a-week operation. Lima is preparing to make the necessary changes to have students on campus full time.

"Right now we're geared to a limited day. We will have to restructure the food service. We have a cafeteria that provides breakfast and lunch, so we will have to expand the menu. We are going to have to have medical and personal counseling available," said Garlene Smithson, director of enrollment services at the Lima Campus.

She added that student activities and athletics will also be expanded.

"It's being built for the campus' need to provide for students who want residence hall experience," Smithson said. "We're excited that we are going to be able to expand the OSU family."

The facility will house an estimated additional 150 to 250 students. The student population at Lima is about 1,320 students, Smithson said.

The maximum cost of the project is $9.3 million. A total of $7.3 million will be provided by university bond proceeds, with debt service paid by Housing, Food Services and Event Centers.

However, the project is still in its infancy. Officials have a preliminary site in mind, but the exact site of the housing is yet to be determined.

"The location will be determined when we have an architect on board," Smithson said.

"We've just gotten approval to hire an architect," said Violet Meek, dean and director of the Lima Campus. "(Residence halls) will allow us to serve students from a broader region. There has been an interest in a residence hall for a long while."

This interest prompted a closer look at the need of housing. A market study was performed and the study recommended that on-campus housing be built at Lima, Whitbeck said.

It is yet to be decided exactly what the residence hall will feature, but plans include four-person suites with bathrooms and kitchens, common living areas, a main lobby, a recreation room, a computer center, classrooms, support offices and apartments, parking and laundry.

Whitbeck said a lot of details have yet to be worked out.

"We're still very much in the planning process," Whitbeck said.

Other issues, such as security, will be looked at as well, Meek said.

As a commuter campus, Lima has limitations that on-campus housing will undoubtedly help to alleviate. Just driving to campus can be burdensome for students.

Many students have to drive 45 minutes or more one way on two-lane roads, and during the winter driving can be treacherous, Meek said.

Living on site will not only make the journey to class more simple, but it could possibly boost students' grades as well.

"Research and national studies have shown that students do better who live in residence halls," Whitbeck said.

the stage, apologizing for having to depart early. Ironically, the astronaut had to drive back to Washington because his plane was grounded in Washington, D.C.

Blackwell pointed out that America is the oldest, strongest and most vibrant democracy in history. He said the number of people who live under a democracy has risen from 2 million people 225 years ago to nearly 2.3 billion people today.

"America is more than a nation. America is an idea and an ideal that has survived the ugliest moments of human history."

He pointed out there were people of several ethnic and religious backgrounds killed in the Sept. 11 attacks.

"America was not attacked because of our differences," Blackwell said. "Americans were attacked because they were American. They saw all of us, even in our differences and our plurality, as representing a way of life and an ideal that was the antithesis of their world view."

According to Blackwell, who served on the U.S. 2000 Census Margining Board, America is the first nation in history to have a member from every other nation in the world represented in it.

"Our diversity is the source of our strength, our innovation, our creativity and our power," Blackwell said. "That is what frightens the enemies of democracy. We give them victory every time one of us is paralyzed by fear."

Wait will end soon for verdict on College of Nursing success

By R.H. Aly
Lantern staff writer

Finally, nursing faculty and students will have the evaluation results of the College of Nursing's entire new curriculum by the end of the autumn quarter.

The new curriculum began two years ago with the introduction of the sophomore classes, Linda Bernhardt, associate dean of undergraduate education and associate professor, said.

So far all seems to be well, although some students, especially seniors, seem to have some complaints.

"The faculty never seems to know what is going on," Carrie Sutton, a senior in nursing, said. "The curriculum is still in its testing phase and kinks are appearing throughout the program."

"They change a lot," Melissa Dunbar, a senior in nursing, said. "There doesn't seem to be any continuity."

The professors teaching the senior classes are optimistic about the curriculum.

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't think this program was going to be successful," Deborah Steward, assistant professor with the College of Nursing said. Steward is teaching one of the new senior classes, 501, High Acuity.

"The major difference in the class is that students will choose their own clinical sites," Steward said. "The students can really begin to put an emphasis on where they want to go after graduation because they can choose their own area."

Steward said another difference is that the clinical schedules for the students are more flexible.

In the old curriculum, students had a fixed schedule. Now, they can go whenever they want.

According to Bininger, the class is a combination of two courses, and Ohio State is the first to try to teach the course in 10 weeks.

"We are making history," she said.

Make some bucks, stop OSU crime

By Amy Sudlow
Lantern staff writer

The university neighborhood has joined the Central Ohio Crime Stoppers Program to create an affiliate program, University Area Crime Stoppers.

The Crime Stoppers hope to heighten consciousness about crimes in the neighborhood and to help safeguard the community.

"The primary goal is to improve public safety," said Steve Sterrett, Campus Partners spokesman.

"The University Area Crime Stoppers make awareness of what's going on," said Todd McDaniels, vice president of the University Area Crime Stoppers Board of Trustees.

The Crime Stoppers serve as a link between law enforcement, the media and the general public. A "Crime of the Month" will be published in The Lantern with a description of the crime. A phone number will be included for those with information about the crime.

Anyone with information about a crime can call the tipster line anonymously. The caller will be given a tipster identification number and can call back to see if there has been an arrest or conviction.

After a conviction, the Crime Stoppers board will vote on the amount of the reward for the tipster.

"The reward can be up to $500," said Lt. Denny Hollern of University Police.

The rewards will be paid in cash and the identity of the tipster will remain confidential.

The funds for the rewards come from a variety of sources. Local business owners, landlords and individuals donate money. The Central Ohio Crime Stoppers has donated $500, Sterrett said.

The Crime Stoppers cover the university campus and the off-campus area of the University District. Crimes that are profiled will be those which mainly affect the university neighborhood.

Auto break-ins, vandalism, Dumpster fires, simple thefts, graffiti and simple assaults are examples of crimes that the program targets, Hollern said.

Besides being tipsters, students are encouraged to take part in the program in a variety of other ways.

"We are looking for students to be involved as volunteers," Hollern said.

Rickenbacker air wing prepares for possible mobilization

By Diane Richey
Lantern staff writer

The 121st Air Refueling Wing of the Ohio Air National Guard received notification Saturday of the authorization of 424 unit members and 18 aircraft for possible mobilization, said Capt. Denise Varner, spokeswoman for the wing, which is stationed at Rickenbacker.

The authorization is a part of President Bush's request for a partial mobilization of the National Guard and Reserve.

"Nobody knows when, where or if we will be going," Varner said. "It's basically a warning to be ready."

To protect the privacy of members of the wing and their families, those interviewed could not give their last names.

When Michael, an Ohio State freshman and airman first class, initially saw the footage of the Sept. 11 attacks, he was in shock.

"Being deployed has been in the back of my mind," he said. "You kind of get ready for it."

Although his family and members of his church have voiced concern for him, Michael has confidence in the president.

"Bush is really going to prove his leadership," said Michael, who has completed more than a year of his commitment to the Guard.

Although the National Guard benefit of 100 percent tuition reimbursement first caught the attention of Crystal, a Miami University sophomore who also holds the rank of senior airman, she realized free tuition alone could not get her through boot camp.

"I love my country," Crystal said. "I'm a patriot, and that had to be the reason (to join). Freedom is not free."

Crystal has mixed feelings about the possible mobilization.

"My feelings are ...," she paused. "Who isn't scared? It's scary, but you got to learn to take the fear behind you and forget about it. You have got to do what you got to do, because that's what you are there for."

Crystal, who has been a member of the Air National Guard for a year, said she could never regret joining the Guard.

"Bush is an incredible president. He's had a strong leadership role throughout the whole thing," she said. "He's trying to hold back the tears. He's going to do what has to be done."

Being able to talk to family and friends about the terrorist attacks has helped her, but Crystal's family and friends are still concerned for her.

"My parents let it be my decision (to join), so they're completely behind me," she said. "All you can do is be compassionate and try to make them understand."

Ed, a staff sergeant who has been in the military for 12 years, is anxious but ready to serve his country.

"I was at first, of course, shocked and appalled (about the attacks), but then that turns to anger," Ed said. "You have to take a moment to think how you should and could react."

Those at Rickenbacker constantly prepare for an order like this, and have not done anything special or extraordinary to ready themselves, he said.

"We're just doing our normal job," Ed said. "When X happens, you do Y and Z."

The 121st Air Refueling Wing's primary responsibility is to provide aerial refueling to the U.S. Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps and allied aircraft. This wing has supported many missions, including Operation Desert Storm. It has 1,400 members and is commanded by Brig. General A.J. Feucht.

The National Guard and Reserve most recently experienced partial mobilization in January 1991 for Operation Desert Storm, when more than 230,000 members were called. The Ohio National Guard has approximately 15,000 members throughout the state.

OUR VIEW

Campus Security
OSU police must tighten reigns

In light of the Sept. 11 attacks, the entire nation including the Ohio State community has been put on alert. People are now more concerned with safety than they have ever been before, so much so that we as a nation are willing to endure longer waits at airports, football games and other events in order to ensure security. However, students have to deal with safety issues closer to home.

Last week, the university's surrounding area was hit with two armed robberies. Two students were injured by gunshot wounds. And what is the university and Columbus police doing about protecting the students and residents that live in the campus area? Nothing.

In fact, police said they are not adding extra officers to patrol OSU neighborhoods, but are using other techniques to protect residents. They would not explain what those "techniques" are.

What do police and university officials suggest to make students feel more safe? Students are being advised to remember the locations of university telephones on and around campus, to use the OSU escort service and to be aware of their surroundings. So basically we should rely on the blue lights on campus and unarmed escorts to come to our rescue if an armed robber tries to mug us.

That doesn't make any sense. Crime in the area on and surrounding the campus makes up 9 percent of all the crime in the city of Columbus this year up until June, according to the Columbus Police Web site. That's a considerable amount of crime, especially taking into account the size of the university planning district with a population of 54,000 as compared to the 711,470 population size of the city of Columbus, according to statistics from Census 2000.

The university, campus police and Columbus police need to do more to keep this area safe. They have done so much to deter rioting, underage drinking and campus parties that it seems like their focus is against students, not those who prey on them.

Because of recent disturbances related to outdoor parties, strict law enforcement will continue in campus neighborhoods on Friday and Saturday nights, police said in a statement. A special Neighborhood Patrol has been set up where teams of university and Columbus police officers patrol campus neighborhoods to inform students and other residents of laws concerning public safety and parties. It seems so odd that police are willing to increase enforcement against partying students but cannot increase enforcement after two students are wounded by gunshots.

City and university officials need to take a long, hard look at the safety of students at all times. If increasing enforcement is possible on the weekends, then police can expand the Neighborhood Patrol throughout the week. Instead of laying all of the responsibility on the students, the university and police need to do a better job to keep the OSU community safe.

A Legacy of War
Bush must rise to the occasion

A war fought in the age of 24-hour news programs and instantaneous high-speed updates is all about perception. For the President of the United States, the key to launching a successful armed conflict is to control that perception. The success or failure of a leader's legacy and chances for re-election have, for many years, been determined by the ultimate outcome of the war and by the critical perception throughout the conflict that the United States would emerge victorious.

Thus, in times of grave discord, a unified endorsement from the American people has varied greatly throughout history. While our involvement in World War II solidified Franklin D. Roosevelt's revered presidency, the Vietnam War left palpable blows on the terms of Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon.

Today we once again find ourselves on the brink of a new and perilous journey. The terrorist attack of Sept. 11 marked a defining moment for our sitting president — the beginning of his own war-torn legacy. His execution of and his ability to lead our country during this difficult time will have lasting effects on not only the outcome of this horrendous ordeal, but on the outcome of his political future as well. So far most Americans and much of the world have rallied around President George W. Bush. His popularity is soaring — with support from both sides of the aisle. This is important. In a war, Bush must project a variety of attributes — strength, compassion and determination, to name just a few — in order to reassure our allies and incite deadly fear in our enemies.

During the difficult times ahead, we urge our president to continue to act decisively and with the best interests of Americans as the guiding force behind his crucial decisions. For a rookie leader, heavily criticized by the political left and engulfed by widespread concerns throughout the country about his sincerity and interest in the well-being of average citizens, Bush must continue to rise to the occasion.

When Americans lose their lives on national television and the pictures are broadcast on the Internet, our concerted faith in the president will surely be tested. Then more than ever, Bush's handling of the situation is key. To defend democracy and protect those doing the defending. To listen to opposing points of view and to reach a conclusion that represents the best of a variety of informed sources. To preserve our country's spirit, hitting those who hit us and defending those who didn't.

Non-violent position not un-American Barbara Lee stood alone for what she thought was best for her country. Now she's being called un-American and communist. She's received thousands of angry phone calls and e-mails. A bodyguard leads her around at work. Lee, a Democratic congresswoman from California, cast the lone vote in the U.S. House of Representatives against a resolution that authorized President Bush to use military force against anyone associated with the Sept. 11 attack on America.

Lee told The Washington Post that she considers herself to be a very patriotic person, but she thought Congress needed to keep a check on Bush's military power. She's not against taking action; she just wants the country to use a little restraint.

The response to her lone vote is the typical way some people react to those who aren't in favor of a crushing military attack against another country in the wake of Sept. 11's attack.

I've heard people throw around the term "un-American" in heated debates for the past few days.

If being against crushing thousands of innocent people is un-American, what does that make me? I was born in America. I vote and pay taxes. No one can argue that I don't exercise my freedom of speech on a regular basis.

Sept. 11, thousands of innocent Americans and hundreds of international citizens perished in the worst terrorist attack we've ever seen. People, myself included, are upset and angered, and rightly so. Americans have called for vengeance and focused their attention on Osama bin Laden, who is being harbored by the Taliban government in Afghanistan.

But terrorists aren't a government or a country. A country is made up of people who may or may not agree with the actions of their government or the terrorists who live there.

When I look at Sept. 11's attacks, I see thousands of innocent people dying because terrorists disliked the actions of the American government. When I look at Afghanistan, I see thousands of innocents who may die because we dislike the actions of the terrorists. I think Martin Luther King Jr. said it best, "An eye for an eye leaves everyone blind." Don't get me wrong, I think we need to strategically work to find the terrorists who did this and punish and stop them. The thousands of victims and their families and friends deserve to not have their deaths go unnoticed.

But I can't support blasting Afghanistan into oblivion. I obviously don't agree with the notion that the United States should, as conservative Fox News pundit Bill O'Reilly put it, "bomb the Afghan infrastructure to rubble," if the Taliban doesn't immediately give us bin Laden.

Wouldn't that look pretty inhumane and senseless to the rest of the world? I can't imagine the slaughter of a nation would make America very popular with other terrorist groups — unless they're looking for a target.

As an American, I have the right to my government does and speak out against it. The government hasn't done anything in this matter that I disagree with yet, but I fear it may soon.

Yes, I hope the United States can spare the lives of innocent people from another country. But that doesn't make me a communist. I've spent the past week reveling in my Americans. I cried as I sang "God Bless America" with thousands of my peers last Friday.

Label me un-American if you like. Go ahead, call me unpatriotic if it makes you feel better. But for the first time in my life, I truly understand what it means to be an American. And that's something name-calling can't take away from me.

Take a drink; soda vs. pop debate rages

One thing that has been said many times in the last two weeks by many politicians is that, right now, there are no political parties.

The usual bitter partisan tactics employed by both Republicans and Democrats have been replaced by a tone of conciliation and a show of unity. We've seen and heard things that would have been unbelievable before. President Bush embraces Tom Daschle at his speech to Congress. Hillary Clinton praises Rudy Giuliani for his grace in tragedy. Members of Congress sing "God Bless America" together on the steps of the Capitol.

Whether it's just for the cameras or a genuine change in feelings toward one another, we'll never really know. One thing is for certain, however.

It will never last. At heart, we are a divisive country. The United States has a two-party system. It was designed that way, by our forefathers, because anything else would have just been too darned complicated.

You're a conservative or a liberal. You're for big government or small government. You're pro-life or pro-choice. You're for guns or against them. There's no middle ground. Anyone who tries to take an in-between position or even hints at compromise is labeled a weakling and a waffler.

But even though there is no fiery debate in Washington, D.C., right now, a long lasting debate continues to rage among Americans in all walks of life.

Is it soda or is it pop? What you call your soft drink defines you as a person. For some, it's nearly as important as their religion or political affiliation.

One is likely to find less polarized debate when discussing issues such as prayer in school or the death penalty. Simply put, no one can seem to find any common ground on this important issue. Soda-maniacs and popaholics both are absolutely 100 percent sure that they are right.

Traditionally, soda drinkers tend to be from the Northeast or California. Meanwhile, those who use pop to quench their thirst have origins in the Midwest. A Web site dedicated to facilitating debate on this issue, titled "The Great Pop vs. Soda Controversy," (www.ugcs.caltech.edu/~almccoon/pop_soda/), seems to support this conclusion. However, much like Ross Perot in the 1992 presidential election, a third party seems to be adding an unexpected wrinkle to the proceedings.

For them, Coke is it. Labeling your soft drink "coke," no matter if it is actually Coke or Pepsi or even a clear beverage such as Sprite, is a popular trend in the South and the lower portions of the Midwest. These people, who apparently have little respect for copyrighted trademarks, grabbed a surprising chunk of the soft drink electorate.

Out of a total of 16,303 votes from U.S. and Canadian residents, soda had 6,822 votes (41.9 percent), pop had 6,314 votes (38.7 percent) and Coke had 2,489 votes (15.3 percent). 678 voters (4.2 percent) chose other, with wide ranging responses including: tonic, drink, soda water, fizz, lollywater and cola. Many of the other voters compromised and used the term "soda-pop."

Soda may have North America won over, but Ohio residents still like their pop. Pop crushed soda like a proverbial foot smashing a can, with an 82 to 12 percent victory.

So what does this all mean in the long run? We must all realize that no matter how much we like to call our soft drink what we call it, we must respect the diversity of beverage viewpoints. No matter if you like your soda or your pop, it's all the same tasty beverage in the end.

Can't we all just get along?

Variety of ideas necessary for discussions, democracy

Kudos to Rebecca Meyer for her insightful column in Wednesday's edition and kudos to The Lantern for their willingness to print a somewhat "unpopular" view in this time of crisis.

In a time when the country is calling for total unity in the face of terrorism, I think it is necessary to reflect on what it is that makes our country so strong: democracy, and in a sense, disagreement.

I shudder to imagine what the consequences may have been had our leaders not debated or disagreed about the action to take during the Cuban missile crisis or the Vietnam War. So while I may not agree completely with Meyer's view, I do thank her for having the courage to write it. And while some people believe that any dissenting stance against war will divide our country and make it weaker, I believe that it will only assert our freedom and democracy in the face of oppressive terror.

Celeb telethon: Tribute should be praised and not criticized

Who is J. Houser Zerkle to judge the hearts and minds of those artists that coming together Friday to pay tribute? Further, even if we were to assume that his childish assumption that everybody is in it only for his or her own benefit and to bolster his/her own ego were true, who cares?

I think we would all agree that monetary relief for the victims of the Sept. 11 attacks is sorely needed and that any means, legal and moral, should be employed to provide it. So if the entertainment industry's stars and starlets achieve just that (and I'm sure the funds collected will be considerable), more power to them!

This is simply not the time to get hung up on what should spur people on to make donations. Most of us are self-motivated enough that we have contributed in some way or other by now, others may need a little shove. So what if it's a celebrity that's doing the shoving?

New war must be fought over freedom, not race or religion

Over the weeks, months and years to come, our strong union will be planning a method by which we can bring our enemies to justice, or bring justice to our enemies.

As President Bush explained in his speech Thursday, we are beginning the process of fighting evil, and good will prevail. Unfortunately, some have classified this war as a religious war, or a Christian Jihad, when in fact this does not involve religion, race, ethnicity or culture.

In this war, freedom represents good and fear represents evil. This is not a crusade of the religious sense, but a fight to defend the good of civilization and mankind.

The United States is not classifying itself as a divine agent of goodness, as Geordie Hamilton suggested in a recent letter to the editor.

Recent wars have included the United States' participation in halting the actions of Hitler, attempting to cease the practices of Marxism and communism and succeeding in most cases, preventing the spread of these philosophical ideals and blocking expansionistic efforts of Arab nations in the Middle East. In all previous scenarios, the war was against an idea or person considered to be evil.

With much success, the United States has defeated those evils. Those who love freedom consider these defeats to be good, but they are not considered to specifically be Christian, Catholic, Muslim, Hindu or even Divine.

These actions and achievements are considered good in a world where much evil is present. In all wars, a predominant goal is in mind. This may include religious quests, although in the present situation this is not the focus of the strife for the United States. It is only countries in the Middle East, such as Afghanistan and Iraq, threatening to declare Holy War against the United States.

Our country, with many various peoples and religions, is not declaring a Christian Jihad. Many people in our country are not Christian; there are atheists, Muslims, Hindus, Buddhists and many other religions and beliefs; however, all of these people are Americans and they all love and value freedom as much as the next.

By implying that our nation is declaring a Christian Jihad, as some have claimed, we are unfairly demoting the other religions in our country, and the people who practice them, most of whom support military action against terrorism.

The goal of this new war is to defend freedom, not a specific religion, as all religions may partake of and participate in the freedoms we value.

Through the process of fighting any war, innocent people may be killed or injured.

The terrorists who attacked our country make no distinction between military men and women and civilian men, women and children. To these evil people, it is appropriate to kill innocent people in an attempt to frighten and threaten the governments and people of the world. It is often mentioned that the people in the Middle East, including in Afghanistan, should rise above their governments and defeat them in order to live a more free and peaceful existence.

Unfortunately, it is not always as easy as it may seem. Some governments enjoy oppressing their populations into great poverty, not affording the citizens the necessary means to overthrow governments such as the Taliban. This may allow the political and economic line to be drawn, but the moral line is drawn elsewhere. Many of the people in these poor and war-torn countries support terrorism, encourage and aide people such as bin Laden and the Al-Qaida, they protest if the government of their country assists the United States, and they cheer and celebrate in the streets when our world has been attacked and thousands of innocent lives have been lost.

These people must not be separated from the terrorists themselves, and in many respects, this is representative of the people inhabiting Afghanistan and other countries which may receive military blows from the United States. Although they may not have the strength, finances nor means necessary to overthrow their governments, they do not have the requirement placed upon them to celebrate and support terrorism, evil and destructive acts against non-aggressive nations. It is evident that both evil and innocent people are included in villages, towns and cities throughout the Middle East. Our government will likely take every care to see the fewest number of innocent civilians die or be wounded. However, the past attempts at diplomatic, economic and financial pressures have not distinguished the flames of hateful passion the terrorists and their governments and supporters feel toward the United States and the rest of the civilized world.

The Taliban continues to oppress its people, leaving the innocent citizens without a manner to express themselves freely. Other governments similar to the Taliban exist, and the United States has condemned the Taliban and other such governments for their actions.

They are aiding and abetting murder, according to President Bush, and by doing so, they are committing murder. The final remaining option to stop such horrific and evil actions, after many years of other unsuccessful peaceful efforts on the part of the civilized world, is forceful military action.

Our country respects Muslims, and people of other religions, throughout the world. The government and people of the United States are not fighting a Holy War or a Christian Jihad against Muslims or any other religion.

Should one choose to coin any descriptive phrase for these actions, perhaps this new war could appropriately be considered The War for Freedom.

Confronted by a terrorist evil, we will rise to the occasion so that freedom and good may prevail.

Time of terror forces United States to change, learn to think on a global scale

Many recent newspaper articles and media comments on the tragic events in New York and Washington, D.C. have stated that we are now engaged in world war, that we might even be on the verge of World War III. Such a concept of war implies a defined opponent and territory, an enemy and a target. I believe, however, we understand better our circumstances if, rather than thinking of world war, we think of global war.

War can now be waged from any place, at any time, by any means, by anyone. Likewise, instant information and communication and standardized production can occur virtually and instantly anywhere. The phenomenon of globalization has brought about the exchange of products and services around the globe. Yet a searing lament in the message of this exchange has been its glaring inequality. The tensions of imbalance have been producing tragedies in regions of the world for some time.

Protection and the waging of peace will come only as we consciously, resolutely and steadily achieve a reduction of the tensions of inequality through a balancing of the goods of the world for all the peoples and cultures of the world.

Fertilizer explosion rocks French city, at least 29 confirmed dead

By Franck Demay
Associated Press

TOULOUSE, France — As hope faded that more survivors would be found from a devastating explosion at a chemical fertilizer plant, environmental leaders called for a halt to the production of dangerous chemicals near residential areas yesterday.

Rescue workers sawed through metal girders and cleared away concrete slabs, searching for 10 to 20 people still missing. The confirmed death toll from Friday's blast stood at 29.

About 650 people remained hospitalized, with 30 in critical condition. The AZF plant is about 3 miles from the center of Toulouse, France's fourth-largest city, which has a population of about 1 million people.

"We can't have such an accumulation of dangerous substances near big cities," Philippe Flament, a leader of Greenpeace in Toulouse, said yesterday. He said environmental groups have urged city leaders to halt production of potentially dangerous chemicals at two other plants in the same industrial area.

The plant produced ammonium nitrate, which can be used as fertilizer or in explosives. It is the same chemical used in the 1995 bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City.

Questions still remained about the cause of the blast.

Le Monde newspaper, in its edition yesterday, quoted a French Environment Ministry official as saying a preliminary investigation suggested the explosion was an accident.

"According to initial data from regional environmental officials, a storage silo containing between 200 and 300 tons of ammonium nitrate exploded," said Laurent Moche, head of the Technological Risk Office at the Environment Ministry.

But Brice Lalonde, a former environment minister, said on

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Two firemen help an injured worker out of a chemical fertilizer plant after an explosion at the plant in Toulouse, southern France, Friday.

France-Info radio that "there is something fishy" about the explanation that the blast was an accident.

"The theory that this was an accident is very implausible," said Lalonde, president of the political party Generation Ecology. "Ammonium nitrate is a product that we've known about for more than a century ... we know all of the precautions to take to prevent it from exploding."

"We really need to ask ourselves a lot of questions," he said. When the blast occurred, many Toulouse residents feared it was a terror attack.

Noel Mamere, a Green party member from the nearby Gironde region, on Saturday faulted plant owner TotalFinaElf, the French chemicals and petroleum giant, saying it "neglected matters of security ... in order to lower costs."

TotalFinaElf on Saturday set aside $1.4 million to help victims of the blast.

Israel delays truce talks with Palestinians

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Despite a decline in Mideast violence, Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon called off long-awaited truce talks yesterday and said Yasser Arafat must bring a complete halt to Palestinian attacks before any discussions can begin.

Angry Palestinians called the move "irresponsible," saying it undermined efforts by the United States and other foreign governments to calm tensions in a region wracked by a year of fighting.

Arafat, the Palestinian leader, declared a cease-fire last Tuesday, and Israel immediately announced a halt to offensive military operations. Since then, one Palestinian and one Israeli have been killed. The sides have exchanged fire on several occasions, and Palestinian militants have fired mortars in the Gaza Strip, but the level of violence has dropped.

However, Sharon is insisting on a full 48 hours without any unrest.

"These meetings can take place once there will be full cessation of terror and hostilities," he said. "We did not ask too much."

In a speech last night, Sharon raised a topic he has rarely broached — the possibility of a Palestinian state.

Sharon said Israel wanted to give the Palestinians the opportunity to form a state, but it would require genuine peace between the two sides.

"We are not fighting the Palestinians, we are fighting terror," Sharon said at a speech at Latrun in central Israel. "Israel wants to give the Palestinians what no one else gave them before, the possibility of forming a state."

Sharon has never given details of what he would be willing to offer the Palestinians. He has often said that long-term interim agreements are the best that can be achieved at present, and no final peace deal is possible for years, or even decades. The Palestinians have said they don't believe Sharon is serious about negotiating a full-fledged peace agreement that would include Palestinian statehood.

Arafat and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres have been trying to arrange a meeting for a month, and had planned to meet yesterday. But Sharon called off the meeting, increasing friction between the hard-line Sharon and the dovish Peres, who has pushed for a series of talks with Arafat.

Peres skipped yesterday's Israeli Cabinet session, apparently to protest the cancellation of his meeting with Arafat, Israeli media reported.

Israeli media also said Peres was considering resigning his post, a move that could threaten the stability of Sharon's government.

Sharon's Cabinet appeared divided on whether Arafat had done enough to end the violence by Palestinians.

Exiled Afghanistan king pledges help

ROME (AP) — Afghanistan's exiled king stands ready to help his country form a transitional government if the Taliban are overthrown, a U.N. envoy said yesterday after meeting the ousted monarch.

Former King Mohammad Zahir Shah, 86, has no ambitions to return to his homeland as monarch, but "could play an important role in the future of Afghanistan," said Francesc Vendrell, the U.N. chief's personal representative for Afghanistan.

"He has told me of his wish to be of help to the Afghan people," he said.

Vendrell and Zahir met privately for nearly an hour at the royal exile's luxurious villa in a high-security gated community on the northern edge of Rome.

Zahir also plans to meet soon with a delegation from his country's anti-Taliban Northern Alliance. The delegation's arrival in Rome was delayed and it was unclear when the meeting would take place.

Vendrell said he, too, hoped to meet with the delegation.

The flurry of contacts came as the United States was preparing to retaliate militarily for the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

Osama bin Laden, the Saudi millionaire named as the prime suspect in the U.S. attacks, moved to Afghanistan as a "guest" of the Taliban. Washington has warned the Taliban they will be targeted if they don't hand over bin Laden.

The crisis has focused new attention on Zahir, who has lived in Rome since his 1973 overthrow. Zahir, who was stabbed in a 1991 assassination attempt at his villa, keeps a low profile and is rarely seen in public.

The king, dressed in a gray suit with a scarf elegantly knotted at his neck, did not speak to reporters after his meeting with Vendrell, but his son, Mirwais Shah did.

He said the royal family believes the terrorists who attacked the United States "must pay for what they did" but is worried about the Afghan people.

"The U.S. has to do what it has to do, but we are very worried about the innocents," he said.

His comments echoed those of his father in an interview published yesterday in the Rome daily La Repubblica.

In the interview, Zahir defended the Afghan people. Despite decades of conflict, Afghans never resorted to terrorism, he said.

"I hope that the punishment for the acts of terrorism committed by foreigners in my country will not involve the Afghan people," he said.

The king has long dreamed of convening a grand national assembly of Afghan leaders, including tribal elders, clerics, intellectuals and landowners and the idea appears to be gaining support.

Vendrell and the king's aides say Zahir might serve as a unifying, "grandfatherly" figure in Afghanistan's transition to peaceful self-government.

"In our homeland, his memory is still very alive," said Nasser Zia, ambassador in Rome for the government ousted by the Taliban in 1996, said in an interview with Il Messaggero newspaper.

Envoys of the United States, Iran, Germany and Italy have been meeting quietly since December to try to find a peaceful solution to the Afghan conflict. One of their key proposals is to convene the assembly, called a loya jirga. Vendrell met with envoys of the four nations Friday in Geneva.

Zahir's 40-year reign ended with a coup by his nephew, which opened Afghanistan to three decades of conflict that have left it devastated.

Prehistoric grave site in Ohio still a mystery

COLUMBUS (AP) — Archaeologists are still trying to figure out what they found more than a year ago when they unearthed prehistoric graves at the state corrections training academy near Orient in Pickaway County.

"It's pretty amazing," said Stephen Biehl, a former Ohio Historical Society field archaeologist in charge of the dig. "We're seeing here some mortuary practices never seen before in Ohio."

The dig uncovered the remains of adults, adolescents and children that had been dismembered and distributed across 12 burial pits. The sex of the individuals has not been established.

"From what we've seen so far, it was a place of interment for around 20 individuals in a fairly small area," said Cheryl Johnston, the society's project chief for the site.

"There's lots of weird stuff like two people in one grave pit with no heads. There's also the skeleton of a child placed on a set of adult arms which seem to be cradling it, but the rest of the adult is not there. Nobody's seen this kind of thing before," she said.

Some skeletons have no skulls, some skulls have no bodies and body parts don't always seem to match up.

Buried with the bones were about 50 artifacts including a trophy ax, beads, antler-bone points, shells, grinding tools, and bear and rodent teeth used for ornamentation.

"There's lots of weird stuff like two people in one grave pit with no heads."

—Cheryl Johnston
Ohio Historical Society

The most unusual burial has arms from two bodies arranged on each side of an ax, as if caught by death in the act of exchanging a baton.

"We were just astounded when we uncovered these particular burials with these arm features," Biehl said.

Johnston is doing doctoral work at Ohio State University on how prehistoric people reflected their cultures in their mortuary practices. She presented her preliminary findings on the site at the Society for American Archaeology meeting in April in New Orleans.

Grave sites for the Hopewell, the prehistoric people who occupied Ohio about 2,000 years ago, have contained only trophy skulls that might be souvenirs of war or ancestor worship.

The skulls or bones of ancestors might have been kept as family heirlooms and buried later with their descendants, she said.

"I don't think it represents that they were being grotesque or brutal to their people. I think it was more like a respectful way to be left for the afterlife," Biehl said.

Martha Otto, curator of archaeology at the historical society, said artifacts found at the site indicate the graves date to the era before the Hopewell existed.

The trophy ax, made of soft limestone with a flattened bit, is an extremely rare relic used for ceremony rather than work or fighting. This may be the first ax of its kind found in Ohio, Otto said.

"The interesting thing about this site is the time period it seems to represent and the distinctive artifacts," she said. "And it also shows how archaeological sites are being found these days, strictly by accident."

Archaeologists were called to the site in late 1999 after Mount Sterling Police Chief Chris Carty found loose bones along an embankment being dug out for the training academy's shooting range.

Johnston has spent the past year preparing and cataloging the material. A survey of the area will be done this fall using a ground-penetrating scanner, but Johnston doesn't know whether there will be further excavations.

"We're not sure we shouldn't save it for people 200 years from now with better instruments," she said. "It's that important a site."

Missed kicks, opportunities do Bucks in Ohio State quarterback Steve Bellisari scrambles through the UCLA defense during the first quarter of the game Saturday at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif. On the day, Bellisari completed five of 23 passes for 45 yards and two interceptions.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Coach Tressel: Welcome to OSU

Dear Coach,

Right now you are probably being welcomed back to Columbus by fans that are calling for quarterback Steve Bellisari's head and for you to take it without hesitation.

You knew this day would come. The day when you lost (God forbid) in a fashion which was not deemed suitable by fans, or fanatics. The hard reality has finally hit home. Hope you are prepared.

The loss hurts, it has to because I know that no one wanted to score an offensive touchdown more than you.

No one wanted more than one out of 14 first downs than you. No one wanted to take at least one out of seven UCLA fumbles to the house than you. No one wanted to average more than 2.9 yards a play than you.

No one wanted to win that game more than you.

Don't worry, better days are ahead, but for now you have to come back and take the medicine given to those who were here before you.

I know what you're thinking, "Boy it doesn't take them long, does it?"

It took them about 60 minutes. To a Buckeye fan, 60 minutes of missed field goals, a missed extra point and first and goals with no points was all it took.

I am not originally from Columbus. I can't explain how these people rationalize things. They want results at any cost, and most of the time it is more than a head coach can bear.

Welcome to a place that fired a coach with a 25-9-2 record, but a 2-10-1 record against one team

Defense does its job in loss

By Dave O'Neil
Lantern sports editor

PASADENA, Calif. — It's tough to blame Ohio State defensive tackle Tim Anderson for being a little upset and a little sad following Saturday's loss to UCLA.

The OSU defense performed admirably, giving up only 13 points and 61 yards rushing. The effort was futile, though, as the offense scored zero points in the 13-6 loss.

UCLA Heisman Trophy hopeful running back DeShaun Foster ran the ball for 66 yards on 29 carries. The 66 yards and 2.3 yards per rush were Foster's lowest totals since 1999.

After Foster had his way with the OSU defense in the first quarter, running 11 times for 45 yards, he totaled only 21 yards on 18 carries the rest of the way.

OSU defensive end Will Smith credited small adjustments to stopping Foster.

"He's a great running back, we just played great defense today," he said. "After the first quarter we just did some simple stuff. We just had to stay in our gaps."

Like Anderson though, Smith was disappointed.

"We just thought we got to keep giving them (the offense) the ball and eventually they will make some plays," Smith said.

The Buckeye offense made no such plays.

Forcing four turnovers, two of which came inside the UCLA 15-yard line resulted in zero Buckeye points.

OSU coach Jim Tressel also praised the defensive effort.

"I'm proud that the guys kept fighting. Despite the fact we didn't move the football, they kept coming up with ways to keep us in the game — the special teams and the defense," he said.

The special teams Tressel speaks of is the punting game.

OSU punter Andy Groom, arguably the Buckeyes most valuable player of the day, consistently kept the Bruins in poor starting field possession. He averaged 46.8 yards on his six punts, which included two inside the 20-yard line and a 61 yarder.

The Buckeyes' sole touchdown also came on a punt play. With 3 minutes and 31 seconds left in the first quarter, OSU safety Mike Doss raced up the middle untouched and blocked a UCLA punt into the end zone where OSU wide receiver Ricky Bryant landed on it for six points.

The game's only offensive drive worth merit was the game's first. UCLA took the opening kickoff and methodically went down field, scoring on the 14th play of the drive when UCLA quarterback Cory Paus connected with wide receiver Ryan Smith in the corner of the endzone for a 24-yard TD pass.

OSU safety Donnie Nickey took the blame on the touchdown.

"That was my guy," he said. "I got beat."

Fittingly, the play came on third down. On the drive, the Bruins converted all five third down conversations. From that point on though, the Bruins faltered on third down, converting only one of their next 10 attempts.

The Bruins, however, were able to capitalize on their success during the first drive.

"They caught us in a blitz on that touchdown," Tressel said.

UCLA wide receiver Tab Perry would prove to be a thorn in the side of the Buckeyes in the Rose Bowl on Saturday.

Of his four catches, three went for first downs and two came on third down, none bigger than his 17-yard catch on third and 13 with three minutes to go.

OSU linebacker Matt Wilhelm led the defensive charge with 10 tackles and two tackles for loss.

In addition to his blocked punt, Mike Doss had seven tackles and a fumble recovery.

Bucks look to learn from mistakes after poor showing in loss to UCLA, 13-6

By Dave O'Neil
Lantern sports editor

PASADENA, Calif. — Like in the season opener against Akron, Ohio State kicker Josh Huston started the game with a booming kick-off through the end zone for a touchback.

Sadly for the OSU kicking game, the similarities stopped there.

An anemic offensive performance, combined with three missed kicks by Buckeye kickers proved too much for the Buckeye defense to overcome Saturday, in its 13-6 loss to UCLA in front of 73,723 fans at the Rose Bowl.

"We're in a growth mode. We will be in a growth mode for some time," OSU coach Jim Tressel said of the game. "We knew there was going to be a point in time when this new family would have some tough times."

On the offensive side of the ball, the tough times were plentiful.

Tressel described the offensive performance as "really out of sorts," and without any sort of rhythm.

Gaining eight first downs during the 60-minute affair, throwing for only 45 yards and converting one of 14 third down chances did not bode well for the Buckeyes.

At the center of OSU's non-attack was quarterback Steve Bellisari. On the day the senior quarterback completed five of 23 passes for 45 yards and two interceptions. Only one of his five completions was for more than 10 yards. An 11-yard connection with wide receiver Michael Jenkins in the first quarter was also the lone OSU first down through the air.

Tressel, however, refused to put the brunt of the blame on Bellisari.

"I think there were some things Steve did that we asked of him," he said. "But there were some things he could have done better, obviously."

Tressel attributed the two interceptions to Bellisari's inability to sufficiently read the defense.

"In all the decisions we make, our goal is to see what's there before we make a decision. And I'm not sure we saw what was there," he said.

Bellisari's teammates also were cautious to criticize him.

"I think Steve played a real hard game. I think he laid it out for us," OSU running back Jamar Martin said. "He did what he needed to do as a captain — go out and just do whatever he can do to help his team win and I think he did that."

Fellow Buckeye running back

Jonathan Wells also centered concern on the overall performance of the offense, saying the offense didn't have a good day and didn't execute.

"The effort was there. We just didn't execute," he said. "You can have a lot of effort out there, but if you don't execute, it (doesn't) mean anything."

OSU center LeCharles Bentley echoed Wells' sentiments.

"Yeah, (we didn't get our job done) it's true. It's an obvious fact. It hurts but you can't hide from it," Bentley said. "It's not a good feeling."

Both Wells and Bentley said it will be tough, but not impossible to find any positives for the offense from Saturday's game.

"Every game should be a building block, and we took our lumps and bruises in this game, but we learned from it," Bentley said.

Still, both were nowhere near pleased with the outcome.

"The job the defense did was outstanding, and we didn't put any points on the board for them," Wells said. "That's gotta fall on our shoulders."

The few times the offense was able to put anything together, the kicking game failed them.

Trailing 7-6 at the onset of the second quarter, OSU kicker Mike Nugent, who had already missed an extra point wide right, pushed a 28-yard field goal to the right that would have given the Buckeyes the lead.

Down 10-6 midway through the third quarter, the Buckeyes replaced Nugent with another freshman kicker, Josh Huston. This time, the kicker missed wide left.

The three missed kicks could have totaled seven points, which proved to be the margin of victory for UCLA.

"They're young kickers," Tressel said. "I've been around a lot of real good kickers in my life and when all of them were young, they had their moments."

Tressel also added that the kickers make their kicks in practice.

On the year, during games, OSU is 0-3 on field goals attempts.

Again, Buckeye players said the loss was a team effort and the kicking game had an equal part of the loss as everyone else.

"I told them just keep going, keep your head up," the senior Wells said. "They made mistakes, we made mistakes offensively and we just didn't get it done."

Tressel said the keys to winning came down to three things: special teams, playing relentless defense and not making mistakes on offense.

"And well, we didn't get there. That's what you got to do on the road and we didn't do it," he said.

UCLA student tickets are $10, compared to the $18 price-tag at an OSU home game. In addition, UCLA students can buy one guest ticket to each game for $20.

Sports town?

The Home Turf Sports Bar, located at Gate 9, Terminal 1, at Los Angeles International Airport turned off the Southern Cal/Oregon game with 40 seconds to go, with Oregon, down by one point and driving for the winning score. No wonder Southern Cal hasn't been too good lately. Sports bars in their own hometown turn them off when on the verge of a giant upset.

Not of relation, sir

Country singer Lila McCann belted out the national anthem prior to the game. She is of no relation to UCLA backup quarterback Ryan McCann.

No. 8, MVP

UCLA fans in the southwest corner of the endzone chanted "defense" when the Bruins entered the locker room after the game, saving their big applause for UCLA linebacker Robert Thomas. Thomas had nine tackles on the day, five of which were for a loss. Several OSU fans commented that the UCLA fans should have been cheering more loudly for OSU's No. 8.

UCLA's win against OSU was their fourth against the Buckeyes and first ever home victory over OSU when the Buckeyes were not ranked No. 1.

UCLA's second best quarterback

OSU quarterback Steve Bellisari completed his only pass to a Buckeye that resulted in a first down on OSU's first possession. He completed two passes to UCLA Bruins that resulted in first downs for the Bruins. Both were interceptions.

The great divide

UCLA completed five passes longer than 20 yards. OSU's longest pass play, and sole completion longer than 10 yards was an 11-yard completion to wide receiver Michael Jenkins.

Third down blues

The Buckeyes only third down conversion came on their fifth attempt of the game. A two-yard run by Sammy Maldonado on third down and two. They did not convert on their last nine attempts. For the game, the Buckeyes averaged 28 inches per third down play. Do the math.

Leadership?

OSU quarterback Steve Bellisari did not answer questions following the game. OSU safety Donnie Nickey did, and took sole blame for the game's only offensive touchdown.

UCLA running back DeShaun Foster, No. 26, breaks a tackle thrown by Ohio State's Tim Anderson, No. 54.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern cannot accept advertising that advocates sedition or other illegal actions, violates normal standards of morality and taste, or attacks an individual race, nationality, ethnic group, religion or sex. In cases of doubt, the proffered copy, illustrations and layout will be submitted by the Lantern Business Manager to the School of Journalism & Communication Publications Committee and judged by a majority vote of the members. Decisions of this committee are final. Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.

- Copy will be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for published special early deadlines.
- All advertisements are required to occupy at least as many inches in height as they do columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered full column (21 inches) and charged accordingly.
- The Lantern reserves the right to reject any advertisement that promotes illegal activity or activity detrimental or damaging to the university and its educational mission. It further reserves the right to revise any advertisement which is deemed objectionable for any reason.
- Make-good/adjustments will be considered only for those advertisements where errors occur in the following: business/group name, address, or phone number; item price; date, time, or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement, and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered to the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify, otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
- Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.
- A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
- No proof will be furnished on any advertisement received after deadline, or for ads smaller than seven (7) column inches.
- If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and subject to a refund fee.
- Advertisers are encouraged to avoid making misleading claims or using art or words that impugn or degrade sex, race, age, national origin, creed or color.
- The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until credit rating with the Lantern is established. CERTIFIED check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a rate-holder ad meeting contract minimums, for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser notifies the Lantern office prior to publication.
- Advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees, and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of advertiser's advertisement.
- Advertisers in the Ohio State Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.
- All mail-order advertisers are required to submit sample/proof-of-product prior to publication.

Please note that advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

was what mattered.

Welcome to the beast that is Ohio State football.

The fact that the offense scored zero points during a nationally televised game. The fact ABC announcer Keith Jackson noticed and commented on how poorly the offense was playing.

I think you see where I am going with this.

In seeking reaction to the debacle on Saturday I heard fans say "I hope Bellisari gets hurt" to "What is Tressel thinking? Why did we fire Cooper for this?"

The fact is, no matter how many good things you had to say about the university, the fans and their willingness to grow (please take a moment and chuckle), you still have to win.

No matter how much you were seen, the different events you attended, the new traditions and what some call "attention to detail" you began, you still can't put a quarterback on the field that completes five of 23 passes for 45 yards.

The offensive line is weak, no doubt. But when your quarterback scrambles, tell him to throw it out of bounds instead of to the other team.

Bellisari knew he was awful, walking out of the Rose Bowl Saturday without speaking to reporters, leaving his numbers to do all the talking.

And the conversation was not a pleasant one.

The fact that most of UCLA's defense was around last year when they gave up a school-record 386 points last season, makes this zero that much more empty.

Fans here don't care how nice you are. They don't care what you like, what your hobbies are or what kind class and grace you bring to this team.

They simply want the 'W' no matter which way you get it.

The silver lining in all this mess is that your defense played like men.

Holding Deshaun Foster to 66 yards rushing is simply wonderful. The Heisman hopeful, averaging 150 yards a game, took it on the chin Saturday.

The bad news: Jonathan Wells had 47 yards.

I hope you can filter through all the criticism and get back to your true love. The good thing is you always have that one wild card in November. That game is the cure-it-all pill for fans.

For right now, any cure will do.

OSU women's soccer team loses twice over weekend

By Elizabeth Bookwalter
Lantern sports writer

The Ohio State women's soccer team opened the Big Ten portion of its schedule with a 1-0 loss to the Minnesota Golden Gophers Friday at Jesse Owens Memorial Stadium. The loss moves the Buckeyes to 3-3 overall and 0-1 in the Big Ten. Minnesota capitalized on its only opportunity in the 64th minute to end its three-game losing streak.

"The fans who came out saw an exciting game," said Lori Walker, OSU women's soccer coach. "I am very proud of my team. They showed tremendous heart."

The Buckeyes had plenty of opportunities to take a lead in the game by getting 21 shots off, 13 of which came in the first half. Minnesota goalkeeper Julie Eibensteiner finished the game with eight saves to maintain the shutout.

"We have to be able to finish our chances which we had plenty of tonight," Walker said. "We had 21 shots to their one. We have got to put the ball in the back of the net."

Throughout the first half OSU could not take advantage of its scoring chances. Junior forward Lindsay Eckles led the charge by taking four shots in the half. Eckles finished the game with five shots, four of which were on goal. Senior midfielder er Emily Thorpe added four more shots.

The Golden Gophers took advantage of its lone scoring chance when sophomore forward Rachel Roth took Minnesota's only corner kick and played the ball in front of the net. After the ball bounced off several players senior forward Allison Rackley took a pass from Roth to put the ball past OSU keeper Jen Heaney.

OSU also could not capitalize on 16 corner kick chances.

The final 26 minutes were like the first 64. Ohio State controlled the ball but was unable to score to equalize the score.

"Tonight we played as well as we could," said OSU defender Jen Miller. "We had a lot of chances to take the lead and we couldn't capitalize and they took one shot and scored. Even though we lost I think we gained confidence."

Yesterday, the OSU offense struggled again, getting shut out by Kentucky, in a non-conference matchup in Lexington, Ky.

Kentucky won the game 2-0, getting a goal in each half.

The loss was the Buckeyes fourth in-a-row and third consecutive shutout.

OSU was able to land only five shots on goal, while Kentucky was able to get nine shots off.

OSU keeper Jen Heaney kept the Buckeyes in the game, saving four Wildcat shots.

Crew can't stand 'quake' in playoff opening loss

By Travis Sawchik
Lantern sports writer

The Columbus Crew has battled adversity all season. After Saturday night's loss to the San Jose Earthquakes the Crew will be doing the same in the postseason.

The Earthquakes came out very aggressive, scoring three first half goals. Two of the goals came courtesy of Landon Donovan and that effort would be more than enough as they defeated the Crew 3-1 in front of 20,833 visitors at Crew Stadium.

The win gives San Jose three points; a tie is worth one point. To advance to the second round five points are required, meaning another Crew loss or tie Wednesday at San Jose will end its season.

Crew coach Greg Andrulis was not pleased.

"It has to be awful coaching. We thought we had a good week of preparation but it obviously sucked," Andrulis said. "I'm not surprised (of the San Jose outburst) they're a team that gets after it and there's no reason for our team to be surprised and now that we got the (expletive) kicked out of us maybe we can get back to business."

Earthquake coach Frank Yallop was feeling lucky.

"I felt we needed to come in here and try to get an early goal. We managed to get the early goal and kind of had them off guard," Yallop said. "I still felt the Columbus Crew had a number of chances and on another day they can go in. (We are) still happy with the points but it's not close to being over."

Crew forward Jeff Cunningham thought the team may have been affected by the long layoff.

"There is no other reason why we would give up three goals in the first half. One goal is OK; (we) lost focus for a minute, but we made three critical mistakes within (the first half); that's not normal," Cunningham said.

In the fifth minute of the match the Earthquakes' Donovan leaked out and scored on a long pass from Troy Dayak. It was his first career playoff goal putting the Earthquakes up 1-0.

Mid-fielder Manny Lagos would then score what proved to be the winning goal in minute 31 increasing the San Jose lead to 2-0. For good measure Donovan would add his second goal of the game putting the Earthquakes up 3-0 in minute 46 right before halftime.

Both goals were assisted by Manny Lagos.

San Jose's first half offensive flurry ended with a 3-0 lead, leaving the Crew shocked as they headed to the locker room.

The Crew showed signs of life in the second half as they outshot San Jose 13-2 but were only able to come up with one score.

In the 54th minute Robert Warzycha scored the Crew's lone goal off a penalty kick, cutting the deficit to 3-1, where it would stay.

Warzycha would just miss another goal in the 63rd minute off the right post, a minute later Dante Washington missed off the crossbar.

San Jose goal keeper Joe Cannon made a diving save on a Brian West strike late in the game, disrupting the final of three excellent scoring chances for the Crew.

Cannon had four saves in the night.

After the Crew started the season 1-2-3 Greg Andrulis replaced Tom Fitzgerald as head coach. Since then the Crew has gone 12-5-3, a remarkable turnaround that will need to be duplicated in the postseason.

"We showed a lot (of) character. I think all year we've done our best when our back is against the wall and you can see the imprint right now," Andrulis said.

THE LANTERN

DJ shows students his 'electronic jungle'

AUDRA SOWASH/THE LANTERN
The late night party at the Wexner Center Friday night included DJ Soul Slinger. Tom Rem jams to the music.

By Paul Landefeld
Lantern arts writer

Ohio State made another attempt to draw freshmen away from the campus party scene Friday as the Wexner Center for the Arts and the Student Affairs Late Night Initiative sponsored the jungle beats of DJ Soul Slinger.

Although there was a slight chance of rain, the outdoor event went on without a hitch as students crowded underneath and around the orange and green lit tent. To attract students further, Boss Dogs and Starbucks were on hand to offer free hotdogs and coffee respectively.

A Brazilian native, Carlos Slinger, AKA DJ Soul Slinger, said a lot of what makes his music isn't just what comes out of the speakers.

"Anybody can produce this type of music. All you need is a little soul and a computer with software. That's it. Everything else is just soul and love," Slinger said.

He described his type of music as a form of electronic jungle. "Electronic has been in the world for the last thirty to forty years. Only now is it becoming very popular and accessible," he said. Slinger, a New York City resident, has been spinning since 1985.

Slinger is one of the originators who helped bring jungle music into the United States. He said this was another very successful visit to Ohio, and he is looking forward to do something similar again. "I love Ohio," Slinger said.

Shortly after 10 p.m. the music began and the crowd, which was diverse to say the least, immediately felt the wave of excitement. The diversity of the crowd included people wearing AC/DC T-shirts, some who wore khakis and those whose clothes that were at least four sizes too big. There was an even mixture of all ages ranging from freshman to graduate students.

Simon Kellman, who also goes by DJ Catnap, said this was a good move by Ohio State. "I've lived in the city for two years now and they have a great jungle scene here, but for them to bring out Soul Slinger ... that is like a different level."

"The city is doing the right thing, not only for the students, but for the kids on the street as well," Kellman said. "The vibe here is so much better than most of the big raves that go on around here even though it is being put on by the school."

Mitchell Hines, an undecided freshman said he only came because of his roommate but had a good time nonetheless. "There is a lot of free coffee, T-shirts and I'm having a lot of fun," Hines said.

Hines also believes the university should put on similar activities. "I think parties like this are good because other campus parties just have beer and alcohol, Hines said. "I think parties like this are a good way to keep freshmen from going to them."

Kristen McClurg, a junior in business, also thinks these types of events are a good alternative for students. "It is good the university is finding something that people are interested in and giving them an alternative to the party scene," McClurg said.

Collins dazzles Columbus

By Mike Gehrig
Lantern staff writer

One of America's top trance DJs lived up to her reputation with an extraordinary performance Friday night.

URB magazine's "Best Female Artist of the Year" (along with Lauryn Hill) in 1999, Sandra Collins, rewarded a small but energetic crowd at Pulse Niteclub and Lounge, 55 E. Main St., spinning a set of her trademark dark, deep trance with a bit of progressive house mixed in.

Collins, a DJ who is used to playing at packed clubs all over the world, delivered the type of performance that would be expected from someone who resides at the top of their field.

She was not discouraged by the size of the crowd, instead Collins responded strongly to the enthusiasm from a group of people which gathered just to see her play.

The small size of the crowd allowed for the show to have a more intimate feeling and it gave both the performer and the audience a better chance of feeling a connection with each other.

Putting a tiny American flag up in the DJ booth, Collins started her set slowly and warmed up the crowd with a few low tempo trance songs. A half hour into her set she really began to get things moving. The whole club went silent as she stopped the music for a few seconds.

Collins looked out into the dark interior of the club as all those within were bathed in blue and black lights. She then pointed out at the now cheering crowd, building up the excitement level among those gathered, before playing her next record.

The next moment the speakers roared again and Collins showed why she has been dubbed "The Trance Goddess." Cranking up the volume, Collins drew people onto the dance floor with her music. It soon seemed everyone in the club fell under a spell which she was weaving.

As the evening progressed, Collins continued to increase the intensity level in the music before slowing things down and allowing the crowd a second to catch their breath. She did this several times, and after each slow point in the music she would turn up the tempo a bit, eliciting more cheers from the crowd.

After building the intensity and energy in her music over the first hour, Collins took it to the next level during the final part of her set. Every song she played had a faster pace and now there were no pauses in the songs. Both Collins and the crowd began to feed off the energy generated by the music while Collins seamlessly blended together one song after another, amazing the crowd.

Due to time constraints, Collins was forced to finish her set earlier than she wanted to, but she closed it out with a stunning extended remix of the club classic "Papau New Guinea," by Future Sound of London. The crowd cheered loudly, thanking her for her visit.

Collins delivered one of the best sets of music Columbus has seen in a while, and it is a shame that so few people got to see it. Those who did, left the club knowing they had seen something special.

This was Collins' first visit to Columbus. She has released two albums, "Lost in Time" (1997) and "Tranceport 3" (2000) and has an upcoming release under the Cream label.

In 1998, the Global DJ Awards chose Collins as "Best Trance DJ of the Year." She has also held residencies at some of America's top clubs, including New York city's Twilo Nightclub and Chicago's Crobar Nightclub, in the last few years.

'Bitch' appeal hard to pinpoint

By Bridget Dinneen
Lantern arts writer

Ani DiFranco's record label, Righteous Babe Records, has revealed its latest find with the release of feminist duo Bitch and Animal's CD "Eternally Hard".

Bitch and Animal met in 1994 in Chicago and immediately recognized each other as kindred spirits. They started writing songs and performing their unique music for devoted audiences all over the East Coast. They found crowds responded well to their stage names, so they dropped their own and began living life as Bitch and Animal.

As they gained popularity and continued touring, they caught the eye (and ear) of indie music queen Ani DiFranco. After cutting their first independent album, "What's That Smell?" they began a world-wide tour opening for DiFranco, attaining an even bigger following of fans. In May 2000, they launched, after a yearlong production, their Righteous Babe debut.

In an interview about the making of "Eternally Hard," Bitch discussed some of DiFranco's unconventional production methods.

"At one point we were doing a take of 'Passports.' I was having a hard time hitting the vulnerability of that song," Bitch said. "So Ani made us all get naked and do more takes."

Scanning the song titles on the back of the CD, titles like "Best Cock on the Block" and "Sparkly Queen Areola" stand out right away. Two impressions immediately come to mind; either this is a CD of uber-feminist women doing some intense male bashing, or it's sophomore lesbian pop catering to the Howard Stern crowd. Well, first impressions are not always accurate.

Their style is hard to pinpoint — their self-described "tribal chick hoedown funk poetry with a political wedge and bass line edge" is a mixture of singing, speaking and some pretty impressive human beat-box action courtesy of Animal.

"Best Cock on the Block," quickly establishes Bitch and Animal as a daring, lovely mixture of comedy, sarcasm and anger. The song has a funky beat and explains the title of the CD. "Eternally Hard" refers to

—Bitch
one-half of Bitch and Animal the benefits of the store-bought faux version of male genitalia — that's right, they are singing about the d-word that rhymes with 'tilde.' Make no mistake, there is no penis envy lurking beneath these sarcastic lyrics.

Not all the songs on the CD deal with sexual accessories. Bitch and Animal sing of environmental and political frustrations in the song "Pissed" and profess their love of marijuana in the song "Ganja," a goofy parody of a song usually reserved for Catholic mass.

While a lot of the music plays upon the wicked wit of Bitch and Animal, some of the songs have the charming honesty of real-life experience. "Boy Girl Wonder" ponders the frustration of liking someone who isn't really available, while "Passports" exposes all the facets of loneliness.

The wide variety of sounds and lyrics are one of the great strengths of "Eternally Hard." "Scrap Metal" and "Blah Do Blay" will make listeners want to get up and dance, while songs such as "Traffic" and "Miss Me My Dear" are perfect for wallowing in the mess of love gone bad.

Ani DiFranco fans will definitely hear her influence in the disks music and lyrics, but Bitch and Animal's sound is still unique. Occasionally, Animal's backup vocals are overwhelming as she screams, moans and whispers along with the music. Overall though, Bitch and Animal produce music that is energetic and spirited.

Bitch and Animal's image and lyrics might seem a bit intimidating for some, but once one gets past this they will discover smart and funny lyrics delivered with a creative blend of instruments — bass, African drums and ukulele, just to name a few.

One does not have to be a card-carrying member of the lesbian community to appreciate this music — it sounds great, and it has songs that everyone can relate to. This CD will inspire both laughter and thought.
