OSU players indicted by grand jury

By Melanie Watkins
Lantern editor

Two Ohio State football players will not appear in court for their preliminary hearings today. The alleged robbery case was turned over to the grand jury, which indicted the two Buckeyes yesterday.

The charges for Louis Irizarry and Ira Bell-Guilford were two counts of second-degree robbery and receiving stolen property, according to local media. As of late yesterday afternoon, both were out of jail on bond.

On May 1, Irizarry and Guilford allegedly assaulted Kenneth Whitwell, another OSU student, and stole his wallet, according to a complaint filed with Franklin County courts. The incident happened near College Road and West 19th Avenue. Following the incident, both Irizarry and Guilford were arrested around 3 a.m. after being found near a car which was described to police by Whitwell and another witness.

Guilford posted bond May 3 and was released the same day. Irizarry, however, was not able to post bond until Friday. While both players were given the same bond amount of $25,000 at their May 3 arraignment hearing, Irizarry was held on a potential probation violation.

In October, Irizarry was charged with assault after a residence hall incident. He later pleaded guilty to charges in January and was put on a one-year probation. Irizarry also spent three days in prison for the charges.

According to court records, Irizarry had a revocation of probation hearing on May 4, at which time Franklin County Judge James E. Green ordered the football player to be held without bond after being found in violation of his probation. Another hearing was held Friday and a different decision was ruled. Irizarry was given a $2,000 bond for the probation violation and still had to pay the $25,000 bond for the robbery charges in order to be released.

Coach Jim Tressel released a statement that said the players were suspended indefinitely from the OSU football program following the arrests. Nothing has been said by the coach since then, but OSU Athletics Director Andy Geiger alluded both Irizarry, a tight end, and Guilford, a running back, will not return to the team again.

OSU President Karen A. Holbrook said she will be watching to see how the athletic department deals with the potential problem. As far as the academic side is concerned, Holbrook said the players will go through the same process as any other student who allegedly committed a similar crime.

"It can happen with any group of students," Holbrook said. "Unfortunately, the athletes are the most visible on campus."

Radiation Safety deems student's material 'clean'

By Trevor Knoblich

When radioactive materials are present on the Ohio State campus, the Office of Environmental Health and Safety monitors their use.

The Radiation Safety staff oversees 600 laboratories, according to the EHS Web site. Strict regulations govern how radioactive materials are to be used and stored. These regulations stem from radiation licenses from the Ohio Department of Health, as well as university policy.

A typical license allows radioactive materials to be used in a laboratory, said Bob Peterson, radiation safety officer at OSU.

If such materials are used outside of a lab, Radiation Safety carefully checks to make sure there is no violation of the radiation safety standards.

"We have the duty to investigate any type of call that we get," Peterson said. "There's always someone on call."

Such an investigation occurred in mid-April, after an anonymous caller told OSU police a graduate student in nuclear engineering was experimenting with radioactive chemicals in a residence hall room.

University Police and a Radiation Safety officer contacted the student in question and asked to see the room later that day. The student was cooperative, Peterson said.

"We handled it like we would handle anything else," Peterson said. "We acted promptly."

According to Peterson all of the materials found in the student's room were legally acquired, including rock samples collected from trips to the West.

According to a report filed with the EHS office, the student was using household

German Village spans spectrum of dining venues, entertainment

By Chauntelle Folds

With spring already at hand and summer quickly approaching, many students are looking for new places to go and a change from the typical weekend fare of movies and clubs. Luckily for those students, there are many destinations throughout Columbus that provide an alternative to the campus scene.

Located near the bars of the Brewery District, German Village occupies 233 acres and is bound by Livingston Avenue, Pearl Street and Grant Street. The area prides itself on its heritage, history and culture.

During the 1800s, German immigrants infused the area and settled, founding the community.

Although anti-German sentiments during both World Wars forced out many inhabitants and destroyed the neighborhood, the community swung back in the 1960s from slum status to become one of the largest privately owned historic communities in America. "We think German Village is the most charming destination in Central Ohio; a neighborhood that is historic, but thriving in contemporary," said Katharine Moore, executive director of the German Village Meeting Haus.

German Village is known for its cobblestone streets and antonymic mix of old architecture and new traditions. The quiet quaintness of the area is a stark contrast from the traffic and congestion of downtown.

"We have swimming pools and coffee shops and all kinds of things tucked into the brick streets and historic homes," Moore said.

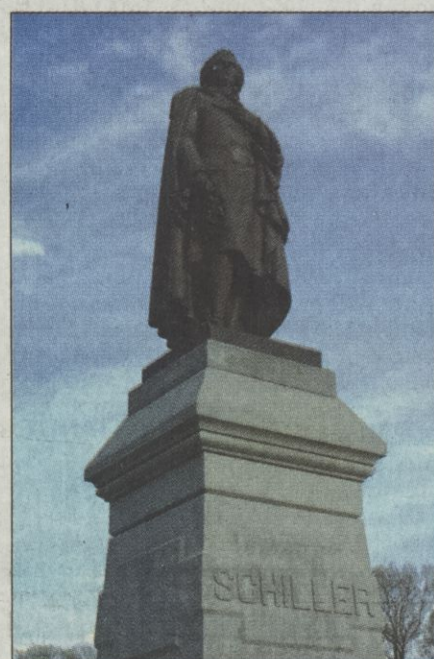

Third Street has been described as the gateway of German Village and is lined with shops and stores, as well as the Official Meeting Haus. The Meeting Haus is the historical center of the village where a person can learn the history of the area and grab a handy map which highlights all the shops and restaurants.

Restaurants are big businesses in the village.

The food ranges from high-class to bars and delicatessens in flavors which span Germany, America, Italy, Spain and France.

"Come to eat in German Village, because there's anything your heart desires," Moore said.

Job hunt success rests in linking up with experts, professionals

By Arlyne Farris
Lantern staff writer

Networking is the most underestimated job hunting strategy.

Professionals say networking through personal contacts is the best way to find a job. Since the number of unemployed Americans has reached 8.4 million people, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, job seekers need to amend their networking know-how.

"Seventy percent of people who find jobs successfully did it through networking," said Amy Thaci, director of Career Services for the College of Arts and Sciences at Ohio State. "Start networking with people that you know, like family and faculty. Look to people that you know. See if they have any contacts that can lead you into something."

Margie Frazer, recruitment and development editor at the Cleveland Plain Dealer, said job seekers should find a mentor. A professional willing to help job seekers in their quest may be the most valuable networking contact, Frazer said.

"Job seekers should get a mentor to learn how to prepare for a professional position," Frazer said. "If you know anyone in the field, talk to them and get advice on how you can build your career."

Job fairs and professional meetings allow job seekers to meet employers,

COTA has altered some of its bus routes in the campus area in hopes of providing better service to its Ohio State riders.

The most significant change involves the No. 7-Neil/Whittier route. The No. 7's territory was adjusted as a result of feedback from local riders, said Jim Daley, spokesman for COTA.

"As a result of student requests, we added direct service to Thurber Village," Daley said. "We extended the No. 7's service to include that area."

Daley said he thought CABS' changes in service led to the requests for COTA service to the area.

"The No. 7's changes were driven by CABS dropping service in the South Campus area," he said.

In addition to Thurber Village, the No. 7 will also travel north on Neil Avenue onto north campus, Daley said.

"Now students have a choice between walking to Neil Avenue or High Street to catch the bus," Daley said.

ADAM GODFREY/THE LANTERN

People make their way toward the bus after the quick and heavy rainfall yesterday.

In addition to the change in the No. 7's route, two other campus-area routes have been reduced in their service. The No. 84-OSU/Lennox route will come to stops every 30 minutes on Thursdays and Fridays instead of the previous 20-minute frequency, and service for the route will begin one hour later on Saturdays and Sundays. Also, the No. 2-East Main/North High Street route will run with reduced frequency on weekdays and Saturdays.

Daley said the reductions to the No. 84 and No. 2 routes were necessary to extend the No. 7 route.

"We were trying to find some minor time that we could add to make a major difference somewhere else," Daley said.

Daley also said the changes in the routes reflect the needs of their riders.

"We made changes reflecting our ridership. We interviewed students

Union may get $100 million rebirth

By Mandy Zatynski
Lantern campus editor

The university is seeking approval from the Board of Trustees for an estimated $100 million project that would replace and renovate current space and ultimately add about 50,000 square feet to the Ohio Union.

The construction was prompted by the inadequacy of the union. There are about 750 registered student organizations, but Tracy Stuck, director of the Ohio Union, told trustees yesterday that office space is only available for 60 groups. On any given evening, occupancy rates of student meeting space is 97 percent, said Stuck, director of the Ohio Union.

"We serve as the hub for student activities on campus," she said.

According to the report presented to the trustees Friday, the Ohio Union sees about 13,000 visitors daily — an increase of about 150 percent since last year.

Comparisons with Ohio State's benchmark institutions and Big Ten competitors show other universities are also modifying their outdated student unions.

"Of our 11 benchmark institutions, eight have or are building new unions," Stuck said. "And of the Big Ten, the Ohio Union is the second-smallest."

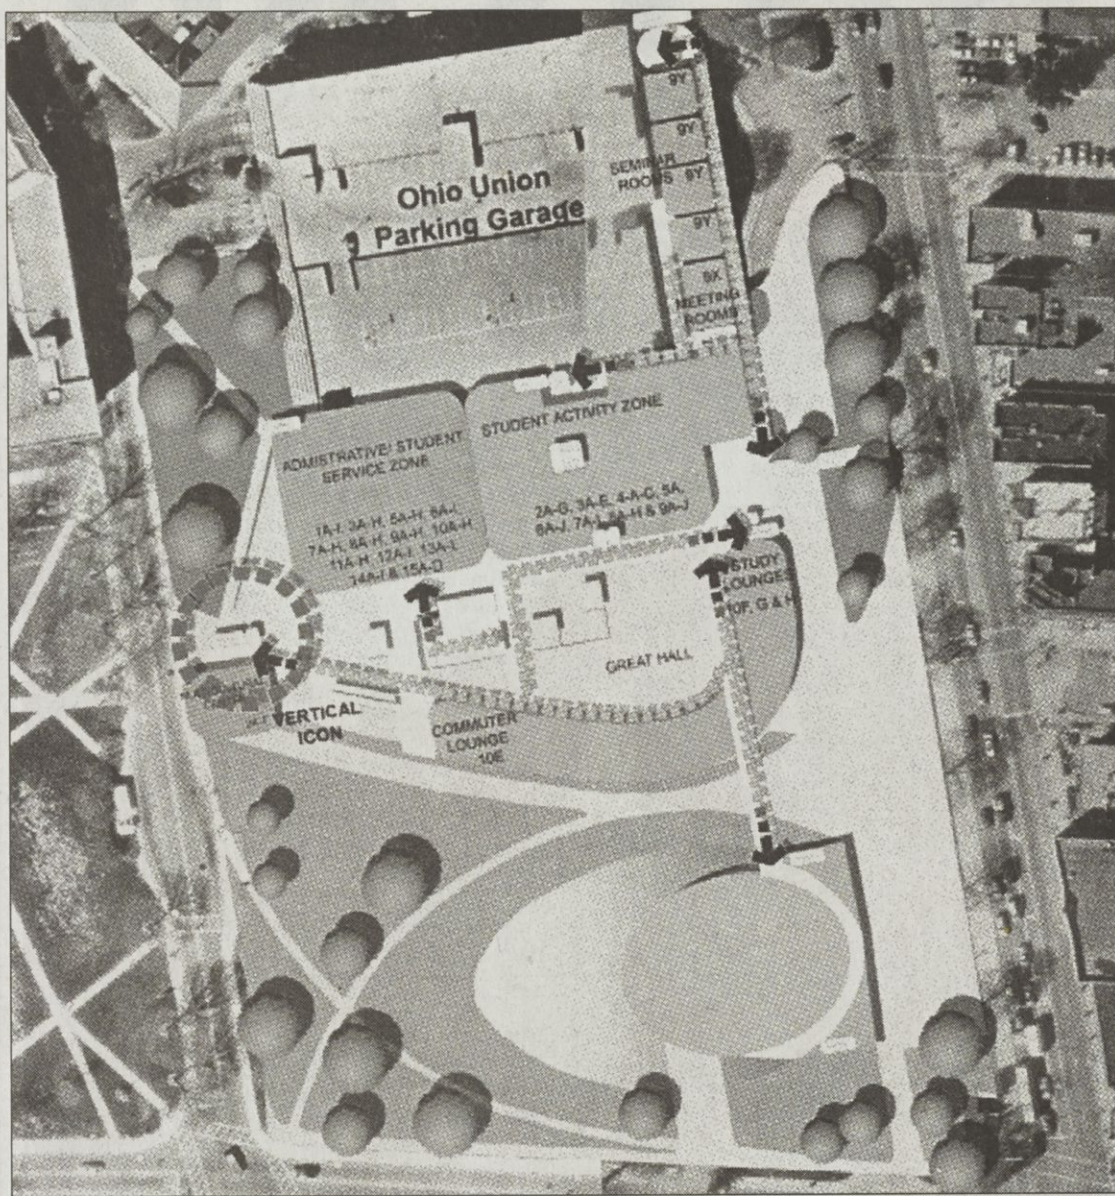

The Ohio Union measures 220,000 square feet, and the recommendations call for a new union that totals almost 274,000 square feet.

Brailsford & Dunlavy, a facility planning company, conducted various feasibility studies for OSU since October 2002 and determined renovation of the facility is not the most advantageous route. At a preliminary cost of $57 million, Stuck said renovations would not be an effective allocation of the money.

"Do we remodel what we have currently for $57 million? The building is in such bad condition, you wouldn't notice (the changes)," she said. "But you'll see a tremendous amount of change with $100 million."

The proposed project would replace the Ohio Union, as well as add a performance space that could also be converted into an outdoor venue.

"The plan is, really, very strong," said President Karen A. Holbrook. "It really is going to be really neat."

The Academic and Student Affairs/Fiscal Affairs Committees offered this diagram for the new Ohio Union to the Ohio State Board of Trustees Friday.

The construction will take about 18 to 24 months, and the tentative opening is scheduled for fiscal year 2008. No one will have access to the Ohio Union for the duration of the project.

"There will be no student union in the meantime, but the Gateway Center should be completed," William Hall, vice president of Student Affairs, told trustees Friday.

The Gateway Center and both recreational facilities on west campus and central campus serve as complements, not competitors, to the new Ohio Union and will be open and accessible to students, Stuck said.

"They are all complementary parts of a package that will greatly enhance facilities for co-curricular activities," said Ruth Gerstner, spokeswoman for Student Affairs.

The project will coincide with the renovations of the William Oxley Thompson Main Library, scheduled for closure and construction from 2005 until 2008, which will result in additional elimination of student study and meeting space.

"Is it going to be inconvenient? Yes," Holbrook said. "Almost every campus (in the nation) is in the same construction mode as Ohio State is."

Gerstner said the libraries in the new Physics Research Building and the Knowlton School of Architecture should be finished, allowing for more student study space.

Stuck said additional space for students will be investigated more after approval from the trustees is met.

"We're looking for swing space — that's definitely something the university will have to address," she said. "But we haven't had our project approved."

The presentation to the trustees in June will authorize the hiring of engineers and construction managers, Hall said.

The project will also require a mandatory fee between $30 and $45, but students won't be charged until the new Ohio Union opens in 2008, said William Shkurti, senior vice president for Business and Finance.

More details on financial sources will be provided at the June meeting, he said.

New fraternity fit for gays, bisexuals

By Lindsay Jacobs
Lantern staff writer

Delta Lambda Phi has officially joined the ranks of those that can be deemed full fraternities by both the National Board and Ohio State. The organization, which received its charter, said it is excited to provide a greek organization for gay and bisexual young men at OSU.

"I think we provide a more supportive environment for gay and bisexual men who might feel at odds about joining another greek organization for fear of harassment," said Garth Wall, president of Delta Lambda Phi.

Wall, a sophomore in biology, has been involved with Delta Lambda Phi since January of 2003. He has also worked for this charter since its colonization in May of 2003.

"A lot of hard work went into getting our charter," Wall said.

Some of the work consisted of three new member classes, including a founding class. The group also had to show it could meet the requirements of both the national organization and OSU Greek Life.

"It was very much a learning experience," Wall said.

OSU Greek Life is also excited about the inclusion of this fraternity at the university.

"Delta Lambda Phi has become very active within the community and especially within the newly formed Multicultural Greek Council. They have been an integral part in creating the foundation of this new council," said Steffani Pealer, senior coordinator of Greek Life.

Pealer also feels the fraternity has a lot to add to the OSU Greek Life experience.

"(The fraternity) will add diversity and inclusiveness. They are a group of dynamic men who believe in the well-being of all individuals. They have the passion to make the fraternity experience for their members and future members to be life-changing," Pealer said. "Any individual interested in this fraternity would find a group of men striving to achieve excellence in all they do and to become better men throughout the process."

There have been many people involved to make sure Delta Lambda Phi received its charter this spring. One of those people is Timothy Ortyl, a senior in political science and sociology, and the vice president and sergeant-at-arms of Delta Lambda Phi.

"I feel a great sense of relief and accomplishment. Making sure that we received our charter this spring has been one of the top priorities in my life for the past year, and we all worked very hard to ensure it happened," Ortyl said.

The fraternity said it hopes to be pillars in both the OSU and Columbus communities for acceptance and brotherhood.

"We have done some community service work with the Columbus AIDS Task Force and the Human Rights Campaign, and we look forward to working more closely with both of them in the future," Ortyl said.

While some may believe Delta Lambda Phi to be only a gay and bisexual fraternity, Wall said any and all are welcome to join.

"Progressive-minded heterosexual men are also welcome in our organization and encouraged to join," Wall said.

For further information regarding Delta Lambda Phi, contact Wall at wall.98@osu.edu.

HIGHER EDUCATION BRIEFS

Final exams, less sleep cause stress

(THE DAILY ILLINI) CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — As finals approach, students are studying more and sleeping less. According to the National Sleep Foundation, a nonprofit organization developed to improve public health and safety through sleep education, the average college student needs between seven and eight hours of sleep per night.

"The mind and body work together, so feeling more rested is going to help (a person) feel like they can concentrate better and focus on particular tasks. That's probably why they recommend you get a set amount of sleep each night — so you can remain focused and concentrated," said Jennifer Carson, wellness promotion specialist at McKinley Health Center.

Carson said a link has been established between levels of stress and how they affect a person's sleeping patterns; final exam week is a time when many students have a change in their sleeping patterns.

For those who have trouble sleeping because of high stress levels, Carson suggested journaling.

"For someone who tends to be a worrier, get those things down on paper instead of just thinking about everything," she said. "Managing your time and stress (level) can help with establishing a better sleep pattern."

Coalition asks for legal marijuana

(THE MICHIGAN DAILY) ANN ARBOR, Mich. — After collecting almost 7,000 signatures in support of decriminalizing marijuana for medical use, members of the Washtenaw Coalition for Compassionate Care marched from the Arbor Brewing Company to the city clerk's office Friday to turn in the petition.

With the help of the university's chapter of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, the coalition has collected almost twice the 4,170 valid signatures legally required by the city.

They may see the medicinal marijuana initiative on the ballot in November if the city clerk's office approves the petition.

The petition asks voters to support amendments to the Ann Arbor charter that would prohibit the city from fining residents for possessing marijuana when it is recommended by a physician and used for medical treatment. The petition also asks that fines for marijuana use be capped at $100.

On a larger scale, the initiative faces opposition from those who fear the drug may become too accessible to minors and those using it for non medicinal purposes.

Death row inmate may be innocent

(THE DAILY NORTHWESTERN) EVANSTON, Ill. — Northwestern's Center on Wrongful Convictions has helped an attorney discover new evidence to defend an Indiana death row inmate who officials from the center said is innocent.

Earlier this month, the center secured an affidavit from a psychiatrist who treated the star witness against Darnell Williams, who was convicted for the 1986 double murder of Henrietta and John Reese.

A psychiatrist at Hartgrove Psychiatric Hospital said Derrick Bryant, witness to the killings, implicated Williams' co-defendant, Edwin Taylor, as the shooter.

During the trial, Taylor made an agreement with prosecutors to testify against Williams. In return, his charges were dropped.

Williams' attorney, Juliet Yackel, said Williams requested Bryant's psychiatric records 17 years ago. After Bryant's death more than a decade ago, Yackel obtained the psychiatric records in March when his family signed a waiver releasing them.

Testing also showed that blood found on the shorts Williams was wearing did not match either of the Reese's blood. The Center on Wrongful Convictions also filed an amicus brief in support of that testing.

Science majors mix with business

(KNIGHT RIDDER NEWSPAPERS)

— The Professional Science Master's degree seeks to become the link between the laboratory and office worlds by mixing graduate-level science or math with business, law and communications courses, creating a highly trained professional. The degree is tailored to science and math graduates in need of real-world business and communication skills.

The program differs depending on the institution, but it must meet the following qualifications — it must be two years in duration, all science courses must be graduate level, an internship or equivalent must be incorporated and a set of advisers in business and the faculty must meet regularly to speak about the needs of the PSM.

"In the science and tech sectors, the PSM is a better fit than the MBA because it typically offers more technical content than the MBA, more business basics than the science Ph.D. and more information technology than both," said Sheila Tobias, Harvard graduate and the PSM program's outreach coordinator.

As the economy rebounds, there will be high demand for science-trained professionals but a shortage of potential hires, mostly because few students in the United States major in the sciences.

Awards advance sciences

By Joshua Foster
Lantern staff writer

Six Ohio State faculty members have been awarded the Faculty Career Development Award, which is given to young researchers who have a dual focus in education and research.

The National Science Foundation gives out the CAREER award to encourage more and new unique research.

"Each program area has some money to give out to outstanding faculty members. This purpose of this grant is to provide two components to the recipient," said Lloyd Douglas, program director of mathematical science at the NSF. "The first component is a research perspective, and the second is to help continue an educational focus at their institution."

Combined, these faculty members have received approximately $2.6 million from the CAREER award. This money will be given to them over the next five years to help them with their various research projects. Each award winner from OSU comes from a diverse field of study.

"I'm totally delighted to be given such a great award," said Chris Brew, assistant professor of linguistics. "Now I have the funding and the opportunity to do long-term research in my field, and I am very excited about that."

Brew, who received $500,000 for his linguistics project, will be using computers to help learn the meaning of new words found in text. These computers will be looking for patterns to indicate how definitions are used.

Srinivasan Parthasarathy, assistant professor of computer sciences and engineering, also received $500,000 from the CAREER award for his research. Parthasarathy's research aims to develop efficient techniques for data mining in regards to modeling the shape and structure of molecules and larger objects. Mining could help discover clues to the evolution of defects in certain materials.

Four of the recipients were funded the award's minimum of $400,000 for their different projects. Hesham El-Gamal, assistant professor of electrical and computer engineering, will search for new schemes to enable high-quality, multi-antenna wireless data transmission. Fernando Teixeira, assistant professor of electrical and computer engineering, will try to develop new techniques for using microwaves and millimeter waves. Han-Wei Shen, assistant professor of computer sciences and engineering, will design algorithms for the management and tracking of data generated from high resolution computer simulations. Diane Foster, assistant professor of civil and environmental engineering and geodetic science, will obtain field observations for the movement of sand over sea floor ripples.

"This is a terrific honor. I am so glad to be doing this and getting an award for the research I have been doing," Foster said. "What's nice about this award is that we must integrate research we have done into an educational background."

Each recipient of the award is required to open up some sort of academic perspective in his or her field to the university either in developing a lecture series, creating new classes or bringing in more graduate students to help in their research. The CAREER award aims to give OSU new academic programs. Foster is trying to create a lecture series, which she hopes will run through a whole year.

"With the grant money, I can employ more (graduate) students to help with my project in the long term," Brew said. "On top of that, three new classes will be made. One of them will be a math GEC, and the other two will be about codes and code-breaking and computers and translation. Each of those will be at the 300 or 500 level."

This award has been given to teachers and scholars since 1996. OSU has had 37 winners of this award since its existence. Other winners of the career award will be notified throughout the year by the NSF.

The NSF funds research and education in science and engineering through grants, contracts and cooperative agreements. The NSF accounts for about 20 percent of the support to academic institutions for basic research.

NETWORKING FROM PAGE 1

Yurich, a recruiter at National City Corporation. "It also increases networking opportunities and it allows students to acquire more information in a designated field or major."

Jo Donaldson, recruiter for Roger C. Perry, said students should begin networking early in their college careers and utilize contacts they have made at internships.

"At the very latest, students should start in their senior year," Donaldson said. "It is important to make connections at internships. Students forget that internships serve more than a monetary importance. Internships can lead to experience, exposure and professional contacts."

When networking, job seekers should maintain a level of professionalism by having appropriate ways of being contacted.

"Have a grown-up e-mail address and voice mail greeting; sound professional," Frazer said.

Job seekers should think creatively about where to find networking contacts. Thaci said professional associations are an excellent way to meet professionals in a particular field.

"The best way to get involved is in a professional association, perhaps a student group on campus that has a national connection," Thaci said. "Attend professional meetings in the city, get on companies' Web sites. There may be a listing of job postings or dates of job fairs in the future."

Job seekers should not be afraid to ask for help in their job search. Most professionals are flattered to be asked for assistance and advice.

"The way to make the most of a professional contact is to not ignore it," said Lenore Shrieves, vice president of Human Resources for SBC Advertising. "If you get a contact name from a parent or neighbor, make a call and schedule an informational interview. Make sure to say who referred you by name."

Informational interviews in a specific area of interest can provide useful information to a job seeker.

"Call someone who is in the field for an informational interview who can give you leads, ideas and review your resume," Shrieves said.

Mary Cusick, senior vice president of Corporate Communications at Bob Evans Farms said research and preparation are important when acquiring informational interviews.

"Informational interviews are worth the time and effort because they give job seekers a chance to practice a professional interview," Cusick said. "Prepare for an informational interview by looking up information on the company. Reflect your resourcefulness and interest."

Joining a professional organization associated with a specific field while in college is a strategic networking tool.

"Network with professionals at college and in the community," Cusick said. "Professional student societies on campus are a good way to network. Stay in contact with professionals and alumni. Most likely they will be willing to meet with you and and found that the reduction in frequency of No. 84 would not affect their use of it," Daley said. "We have seen more students riding the No. 7 to get to class than the other routes."

Jenny Hunt, spokeswoman for COTA, said riders who use the No. 84 on the days that its frequency has been reduced use it to get places other than the campus area. "They use it not just for recreational purposes, but also to get to work," Hunt said.

Student reaction to the changes was moderate. In particular, students who use the No. 84 on the weekends said while the reduction in frequency is less convenient, it does not represent a significant change.

"It hasn't really affected me," said Laura Mankowski, a sophomore in theater who uses the No. 84 route. "It just pushes things back, and you have to plan for it."

Katie Moore, a freshman in pre-pharmacy, said the changes could affect riders who are not aware some routes are now different.

"The change hasn't affected me so far, but it would have today," Moore said. "We would have missed the bus if we didn't get here five minutes early."

Daley said COTA has begun to try to get the word out about the changes.

"We hung out about 4,500 door hangers about the changes at OSU. We put one on every door we could find," Daley said.

Moore said despite the changes, COTA's bus service is still convenient for her.

"I don't have a car, so I take the COTA buses everywhere — downtown, to the movies and to Target," she said.

According to a COTA statement, OSU passengers represent 10 percent of total COTA riders on the average weekday during the school year.

chemicals, such as ammonia, to refine uranium from the rock samples and determine how much of the element was present. The report also stated that several tests, including Geiger readings and radiation "wipes," showed there was no contamination in the room.

Peterson called the method "crude," but said it was not a violation of OSU's radiation license because it was done with ordinary materials.

"(The student) was just doing things that would not require a license," Peterson said.

He said the rock samples contained less than 1 percent of uranium, and the results of the tests were well under a level that would require a clean-up, even in a laboratory.

"There was no risk to (the student) or anybody else in the dormitory," Peterson said.

A Radiation Safety officer advised the student to remove radioactive materials from the room, according to the report.

Peterson said a copy of the report was filed with the University Police, as well as student housing.

Robert Barnett, assistant director of Facilities Management in the Student Affairs office, said the case was a "non-issue."

"(The student) got rid of everything," Barnett said.

He would not comment on whether or not the student had been asked to move off campus.

An investigation outside of a laboratory is rare, Peterson said, noting this was the first time he had to do such an investigation in his nine years at the university.

He also said most labs on campus do not work with dangerous levels of radiation.

Trustees' Report to the Campus

Vol. XLVI No. 8 Actions by the Board of Trustees on May 7, 2004. Trustees' Report contains actions or reports presented at the recent meetings of the Board or its committees. Prepared by the staff of the Office of University Communications, this report is an unofficial account and may not cover all agenda items. Official minutes are available through the Secretary of the Board, 210 Bricker Hall.

In brief, the trustees:

- Heard a report on tuition increases
- Were updated on proposal to replace student union
- Approved the establishment of two named endowed professorships and 25 new named endowed funds, totaling more than $16 million in gifts to the university. The board also accepted 261 new research grants and contracts, totaling nearly $29 million awarded to the university during March.

Trustees hear report on tuition increase Technology upgrades, course & section additions benefit students

COLUMBUS - Ohio State will continue academic and technology improvements, adding courses and sections in highly desired majors and increasing financial aid with funds received from a proposed increase in tuition and mandatory recreation and activity fees of 13.4 percent, which the university's Board of Trustees approved today (5/7).

"The university is focusing on improving academic services for students, while seeking to replace lost state support and absorb increases in financial aid, utilities and compensation and benefits," said Barbara R. Snyder, executive vice president and provost. "We have made great strides over the past several years in recruiting and retaining the best faculty and staff and increasing the opportunity for interaction between students and regular faculty, as well as upgrading learning technology and adding learning opportunities for students outside the classroom. With this increase, that progress will continue."

Snyder said the focus on the student experience is consistent with the Academic Plan and the current Leadership Agenda, which identifies distinctive educational experiences and opportunities for undergraduates as a central value.

William J. Shkurti, senior vice president for business and finance, said that costs to maintain existing services - financial aid, utility costs, employee benefits and health insurance and pay for faculty, staff and students - are increasing at a rate of between 5 and 6 percent a year. In addition, state support as a percent of the university's general funds budget has declined from 43.3 percent in 2001 to an estimated 33.1 percent in 2005.

"We have diversified revenues, by increasing our private fund-raising and increasing our outside research funding. We also have reduced costs and improved operating efficiencies and will continue to do so," Shkurti said. "But further unplanned reductions will harm our students, and we refuse to compromise on the quality of our instruction."

Shkurti said that, even with the increase, Ohio State remains at a resource disadvantage versus comparable universities, while tuition and fees will rank fifth in public universities in Ohio. On average, Ohio State receives $912 less in total state support and tuition than benchmark universities and other Big Ten public universities. With 30,000 undergraduate students on the Columbus campus, that means a difference of $27.4 million less with which to educate students.

Under the proposal, Columbus campus resident undergraduate tuition and fees will increase by the amount permitted by the state fee cap, which is 12.9 percent. While the increase includes a $15 per quarter student activity fee, it does not include a mandatory $12 per quarter recreation fee, which will eventually rise to $72 a quarter after construction is completed on the new center in 2005. That brings total tuition and mandatory fees to an increase of 13.4 percent.

For students admitted summer 2003 and after - new students and continuing students - full-time tuition and general fees will be $7,506 for a three-quarter academic year, an increase of $855. Of the $855 increase, $352 will go toward sustaining academic programs, $245 will go toward replacing lost state support, $159 will help fund additional financial aid, and $99 will support new technology enhancements. When the recreation fee is added, the total is $7,542.

For continuing students in the middle tier - those admitted between summer 2002 and spring 2003 - the increase will be $843, to $7,410, and $7,446 with the recreation fee. Students admitted before summer 2002 will pay an additional $774, or $6,792, or $6,828 with the additional fee.

Resident graduate fees for the Columbus campus also will increase 13.4 percent, including the activity and recreation fees, and differential fees for graduate and professional students will increase from between 6 percent and 14.5 percent, depending on the college and program. Regional campus residential undergraduate fees will not be determined until next month.

"The most important thing is that need-based financial aid will be increased proportionately to offset these tuition and fee increases for lower income students," Shkurti told trustees, "so that the University will be able to continue its strong commitment to diversity, which serves our education mission."

In fiscal year 2004, 21 percent of all undergraduates received some form of grants, excluding loans, from the university. For the upcoming fiscal year, the university's financial aid costs are expected to increase 23 percent.

University hopes to replace aging student union

Request for approval of $100 million project to come before trustees in June

COLUMBUS - The Ohio State University is one step away from replacing an outdated Ohio Union with a modern facility. Approval by the university's Board of Trustees would open the door to begin an 18 to 24-month design and planning phase, followed by a two-year construction phase. The proposed $100 million facility could be open by fall 2008.

"The current Ohio Union has reached the end of the road," William H. Hall, vice president for student affairs told trustees today (5/7). "Three feasibility studies in the past 10 years have reached the same conclusion - that it is time to quit trying to patch and renovate this building and to build a new one that will meet the needs of today and the coming decades."

The first of its kind at a public university in the country, the Ohio Union was a model facility when it opened in 1950. It was considered the ideal student union until 15 to 20 years ago when deferred maintenance issues began catching up with the aging facility, said Tracy Stuck, Ohio Union director.

Stuck said the current structure is operating with many of the original mechanicals installed in 1950 that do not provide adequate heating, ventilation, air conditioning or plumbing; the building offers limited accessibility for people with disabilities; and technology is inadequate at best.

The presentation Friday (5/7) to the trustees by Hall and Stuck was the culmination of the latest feasibility study that included Ohio Union staff and representatives from the University Architect's Office and three student governments (Undergraduate Student Government, Council of Graduate Students and Inter-Professional Council). The study began in October 2002 and involved discussions with students, faculty and staff to determine their needs.

A vote by trustees is expected to take place at the June board meeting.

Student support for the project is very high, Stuck said. At its Feb. 18 Senate meeting, USG voted 43-3 in support of a resolution calling for a new Ohio Union. The resolution supported the reconstruction of the existing Ohio Union and a student fee to support the project, as well as a call to the University to make the new Ohio Union a top fundraising priority in the upcoming campaign.

Mike Goodman, USG president, said the new union represents the university's commitment to the student experience.

"You are not going to be able to find another university that can compete with the student experience Ohio State will be offering once the Ohio Union, student recreation center and South Campus Gateway projects are complete," Goodman said.

Gateway, a planned mixed-use development that will include retail, restaurant, entertainment and office space, apartments and a parking garage, is the signature project in Campus Partners, the non-profit urban redevelopment corporation established by the university to revitalize High Street and the neighborhoods near campus. It is scheduled to open sometime in 2005.

Goodman said the current union does not provide nearly enough meeting and office space for the 750 student organizations at Ohio State, nor does it provide sufficient opportunities for enhanced student/faculty interaction.

Stuck said funding for the project will be comprised of the approximately $20 million currently in an Ohio Union renovation fund, private donations and naming rights to areas of the building, and a student fee - expected to be in the $30 to $45 range per quarter - that will be assessed when the building is opened.

She said a new Ohio Union supports the core elements of the Academic Plan: to enhance and better serve the student body, to create a diverse university community and to enhance the quality of the teaching and learning environment.

It also will enhance student recruitment and student services. Each year more than 8,500 students and families attend an array of admissions, orientation, and honors and scholars events at the Ohio Union. With an outdated building, Ohio State is at a competitive disadvantage for recruitment, outreach and engagement, Stuck said.

Of the university's 11 benchmark institutions, she said eight are planning, building or have recently opened a new union. Four institutions in Ohio are building or recently have built new student unions - the University of Akron, Bowling Green State University, the University of Cincinnati and Ohio State University.

The new facility would offer flexible space for the changing needs of students, staff and faculty and would include wireless technology, distance learning studios and meeting rooms throughout, as well as a 24-hour restaurant and modern ballrooms. Expanded student services being discussed include satellite offices of financial aid, the registrar and Buck ID; a post office; bank/ATM; convenience store; art gallery; and baby-sitting services. The conceptual design moves the Ohio Union closer to the parking garage, creating green space on the south side of the current building. It includes a conference theater that would open up into an outdoor amphitheater.

Proposed features would include a lecture hall/theater, a commuter lounge with wireless Internet technology, recreational activities that were once offered in the present facility, and a redesigned Multicultural Center that would become a focal point of the new facility.

"One of the most exciting features of the new design is the two-story Multicultural Center," Hall said. "Its design will facilitate use by all students, its prominence will demonstrate the importance of multiculturalism at Ohio State, and its placement facing the Oval will symbolize the connection between academics and student affairs that is at the heart of the Multicultural Center."

"The new Ohio Union building will reflect the multi-disciplinary richness of Ohio State by providing programs and places that connect students, faculty, alumni and the community," Stuck said.

Fine dining

G. Michael's Italian-American Bistro & Bar, 595 S. Third St., is acclaimed throughout the city as one of the best restaurants in Columbus. This dinner-only restaurant has a seasonal menu which has grown from its Italian roots into a more American array. All food is prepared daily, and President G. Michael Reams said the chef loves to experiment. Overall, the restaurant specializes in fish dishes.

Reams said the restaurant is very customer-conscious because it is independently owned, and they treat their customers individually — not like a number, which is the case at many chain restaurants.

The restaurant offers many extras, such as a jazz pianist on Wednesdays, a six-table courtyard and valet parking. There is also a full bar. Reservations are recommended, especially on weekends.

Reams' tip to the college guy: "If you want to surprise and impress a date, bring her here."

One of the other most acclaimed restaurants in German Village, and in Columbus in general, is Barcelona, 263 East Whittier St. This restaurant is known for the variety of its cuisine, which includes a mix of Italian, Spanish and French dishes, with a focus on vegetables and seafood. With an ever-changing seasonal menu, usually one item changes every two weeks. It is best known for its paella, a rice-based Spanish dish, and calamari.

Despite being considered one of the best restaurants in Columbus, Barcelona has broken free of the taboo surrounding fine dining etiquette by embracing casual dress.

"You can come in with (anything from) jeans and a Polo to tuxes; everyone is comfortable," said owner Scott Heimlich.

He said he wants to dispel the notions of restaurants being stuffy or only for special occasions.

"We don't want the restaurant to be intimidating," Heimlich said.

Barcelona offers all the luxuries of fine dining without the pretense. The casual contemporary atmosphere is infused with a jazz guitarist on Sundays and Tuesdays, and on Fridays it hosts a live DJ. The bar offers its own tapas menu of appetizers, and according to Heimlich, many people combine tapas to make meals and share with friends. Barcelona's tropical and fully enclosed patio has been ranked one of the best patios in Columbus and is highly demanded in the summer.

Heimlich said that the restaurant has something for everyone.

"Everyone finds their niche; we can please everyone," he said.

Low-cost dining

For an authentic German meal, Schmidt's Restaurant and Sausage Haus, 240 E. Kossuth St., is the place to go. After 117 years of business, Schmidt's has become a household name in Ohio. Originally in the meat distribution business, Schmidt's is known as the creator of the original Bahama Mama, which has become a summertime favorite for picnics and barbecues. Schmidt's is also known for their wienersnitzel and cream puffs.

As part of the authentic German dining experience, the female servers wear dirndls — traditional dresses. On Wednesdays and Saturdays during the summer, a live band plays traditional German music.

Customer Joan Vosbury said the restaurant is very authentic, and although it is known for Bahama Mamas, it also has a great buffet. And, of course, Schmidt's offers a variety of German beers.

Across the street from Schmidt's Restaurant is Schmidt's Fudge Haus und Gifts, 220 E. Kossuth St., where tourists come to watch owner Tim Dick make homemade fudge, which is cooked in kettles and rolled on a marble table.

The Haus hosts 20 flavors of fudge, which are a favorite of Martha Stewart.

"She loves it," Dick said. "It's very quaint."

The store is also home to football-shaped Tressel truffles, and part of the proceeds of the confection's go toward the German Village Society in honor of Tressel's mother.

Besides fudge and frankfurters, German Village is home to restaurants like Roosters, Max & Erma's, numerous bars and pubs, as well as delicatessens.

Attractions

One of German Village's best and most widely known features is the Book Loft, 631 S. Third St. It is unique because it differs in many ways from traditional bookstores.

"There's no other bookstore like us in town. Most of the other bookstores can be copied; we can't," said owner Carl Jacobsma.

Its library-like design includes four cozy levels, filled to the brim with discounted books. Discounts are the store's main attraction.

"We were the first bookstore in Columbus to discount across the board, and we're the only one left that does," Jacobsma said.

All books are at least 5 to 10 percent off, with hardback bestsellers at 30 percent off. They even offer coupons online for additional discounts.

Although it is a discount store, the Book Loft differs from other discount bookstores because all of their books are new. They have classics discounted up to 50 percent, a variety of uncommon titles and an array of bestsellers.

The store's staff is knowledgeable and will not only point a person to the right book, but also to the best places in the village. They offer their own village maps and are willing to help.

"We like to run the operation like a mom-and-pop business, not like a corporation," Jacobsma said.

The store's atmosphere is also appealing. It has a beautiful outdoor courtyard and two coffee shops nearby.

The best atmosphere, though, can be found at Schiller Park.

Originally named Stewart's Grove, the name was changed in 1891 to Schiller Park in honor of the German poet and philosopher, Friedrich von Schiller. A bronze statue in its likeness — shipped from Germany — stands in the park.

The 23-acre park combines beauty and recreation. It is home to Schiller Recreation Center, under the supervision of Columbus Recreation and Parks, as well as the vivid Huntington Gardens.

The park is a relaxing place for all, and people come from the neighborhood and other surrounding areas to jog or walk.

The park is also the stage for the Actor's Theatre, a company which performs classical theater. In the summer, people flock to Shakespeare in the Park — free performances of Shakespearean plays. This summer's productions include "Hamlet," "Shakespeare In Love" and "The Comedy of Errors."

Besides good food and a beautiful atmosphere, German Village is also home to unique gifts and specialty shops.

Helen Winnemore's Contemporary Craft Gallery, 150 E. Kossuth St., has been in the neighborhood for 35 years and holds a large array of handcrafted gifts.

"Since everything's hand-made, it's all very unique, so it's wonderful if you're looking for a gift for someone who's really hard to buy for," said manager Abra Campbell.

The store features items from artisans in all 50 states, and its biggest draw is jewelry. There are 40 drawers of jewelry alone, and Campbell said the popularity is in the mid-range prices.

The store also features pottery and suncatchers, among other items. Campbell said all the merchandise is both fun and functional.

"They are things that people can actually use, not something that just sits and looks pretty," Campbell said.

Events

Because German Village is an amicable community founded on German roots, there are many events held throughout the year.

German Village will hold its annual Village Valuables & Bier Garten, a huge village-wide garage/yard sale, Saturday. The Meeting Haus will be serving bratwursts and beer as thou-

Colorado innovates vouchers

By Steven K. Paulson
Associated Press

DENVER — Gov. Bill Owens signed Colorado's first-in-the-nation college voucher plan into law yesterday, calling it a landmark step that will empower thousands of students.

Owens said the vouchers send a message to high schoolers that college is not out of reach and state money is available to help them.

"Quality education isn't about institutions, it's about the future of our students," he said. "It's a new day for higher education funding in America, and I'm proud to say that it's dawning in Colorado."

Stipends will be available to all Colorado undergraduate students who qualify for in-state tuition.

Every year, the legislature would set the value of the stipend based on the state budget. For next fall, the amount is set at $2,400 for students attending a public institution in Colorado, and $1,200 for low-income students attending three private institutions: Regis University, which is a Catholic institution, the University of Denver and Colorado College. The money can go to religious schools, as long as they are not "pervasively sectarian."

The National Conference of State Legislatures said no other state has attempted a voucher program on such a scale.

Students might not get the full $2,400 this year because of budget problems, state lawmakers have said. They said the amount will have to be cut to $1,600 unless voters ease fiscal restraints embedded in the state constitution or agree to use millions of dollars Colorado gets from the national settlement with the tobacco industry.

Without one of those steps, higher education and Medicaid will be on the chopping block when lawmakers have to cut an estimated $254 million next year, said Rep. Brad Young.

Owens is considering whether to call a special session for lawmakers to address the fiscal restraints. The legislature failed to come up with a plan to present to voters this November.

Owens said Colorado has spent about $700 million on higher education each year, giving the money directly to the colleges.

"The institutions will now compete for students because state aid now arrives on campus with the student," he said. "The more students you attract, the better your institution can do."

Opponents of the voucher program complained that giving state funds to private colleges would draw money away from state institutions and could be challenged in court.

Owens and others, however, said vouchers would encourage more students to go to college.

Ryan McMaken, director of the Colorado Student Association, which represents about 60,000 college students, said the program does not put more money into higher education. But he said attaching a dollar figure to each student will make it harder to cut higher education.

"This does put us on a better footing. This is half of the solution, making people aware the money is there," he said.

A Chechen man prays at the fresh grave of slain Moscow-backed leader, President Akhmad Kadyrov, in the Tsentoroi settlement that is home to Kadyrov's clan, in southeastern Chechnya yesterday. Kadyrov was killed Sunday in a bomb blast at a stadium in the Chechen capital of Grozny where he was attending Victory Day observances.

Bomb slays Chechen president

By Yuri Bagrov
Associated Press

VLADIKAVKAZ, Russia — Chechen President Akhmad Kadyrov was buried yesterday in a traditional ceremony in his home village, a day after the Moscow-backed leader was killed by a bomb blast that put in jeopardy Russia's efforts to stabilize the war-ravaged region. Thousands of mourners flocked to Tsentoroi, the settlement in southeastern Chechnya that is home to the Kadyrov clan. Hundreds of people gathered around pallbearers carrying Kadyrov's body, covered by a white woolen shroud.

The blast ripped through a stadium grandstand where Kadyrov and other dignitaries were sitting during Victory Day celebrations Sunday in the Chechen capital, Grozny, marking the anniversary of the Nazi defeat in World War II.

Six people were killed and 57 wounded, Chechnya's Deputy Minister of Emergency Situations, Akhmed Dzheirhanov, said.

The Grozny emergency medical center had reported Sunday that 24 people were killed and 46 wounded, but Dzheirhanov said rescuers from the center had counted some of the wounded as dead. He did not confirm Russian media reports of a seventh death overnight.

Nobody claimed responsibility, but suspicion inevitably fell on separatist rebels, who are fighting Russian soldiers, as well as Chechen police and security forces employed by the regional government and what was Kadyrov's administration.

Former rebel military leader and Chechen president Aslan Maskhadov condemned the bombing, according to a separatist Web site that quoted him as saying he suspected it was planned by Russian security services "to liquidate the marionette government."

The bombing underlined the difficulties Russia faces in controlling the violence in Chechnya despite a massive troop presence. It was expected to spark new violence between Kadyrov's camp and his enemies, who had long pledged to eliminate him.

The U.N. Security Council and Secretary-General Kofi Annan yesterday denounced the "terrorist attack" and offered condolences to the victims and their families, as well as the Russian government.

"Such acts can never be justified," a council statement said. "They can only delay the return to peace and justice in Chechnya."

The top federal prosecutor in southern Russia, Sergei Fridinsky, suggested that those responsible for the explosion had help from someone with access to the stadium because of the level of security.

"An outsider could not have come and set off an explosive device," he said in televised comments, adding investigators would question people involved in security for the event.

Funerals were held elsewhere for other victims, including Khusein Isayev, the head of Chechnya's State Council and Reuters photographer Adlan Khasanov.

Among the wounded was the top Russian military commander in Chechnya, Col.-Gen. Valery Baranov, who had a leg amputated. Baranov was conscious and in "satisfactory" condition, Russia's regional representative Vladimir Yakovlev said.

Fridinsky said no suspects had been identified or detained. Russian media had reported Sunday that five people were detained.

The blast was caused by an explosive device made out of two artillery shells, one of which did not detonate, and a third device made of plastic explosives was found nearby, he said.

The bomb, which Fridinsky said was put in place some time ago, was planted under the seats where Kadyrov and other dignitaries were watching the ceremonies.

Wexner awards fashion designer

By Stacey Runion
Lantern Arts Writer

Fashion comes to Columbus today to celebrate the creativity and beyond-explanation designs of Issey Miyake, the nationally renowned clothing designer, who will receive the 11th Wexner Prize.

Beginning in 1992 Leslie Wexner, chairman of the Wexner Center Foundation Board of Trustees and founder of Limited Brands, has presented a $50,000 prize to a major contemporary artist who has in some way gone beyond the art world's boundaries and has continuously created innovative and leading work within his or her field.

Miyake is the first to receive this honorable award within the clothing design field. Among the past recipients of the Wexner Prize is theater director Peter Brook, composer, musician, and choreographer John Cage, filmmaker Martin Scorsese and Renzo Piano, an architect.

Miyake was chosen as an artist who exemplifies not only talent, but the ability to create new and revolutionizing work time and time again.

"He goes beyond the traditional boundaries of design in both the product design and his style of contemporary art, and that is why he deserves this prize," said Karen Simonian, communications manager for the Wexner Center for the Arts.

Miyake graduated from the Tama Art University in Tokyo with a degree in graphic arts and soon thereafter went to Paris to continue his studies. The now-famous designer first began his brilliance in Paris when he decided to make clothing for 'people in the streets,' following the student riots he observed in the late 1960s.

Throughout the 1970s, Miyake established his own studio after returning to Tokyo, where he soon began designing the unexpected.

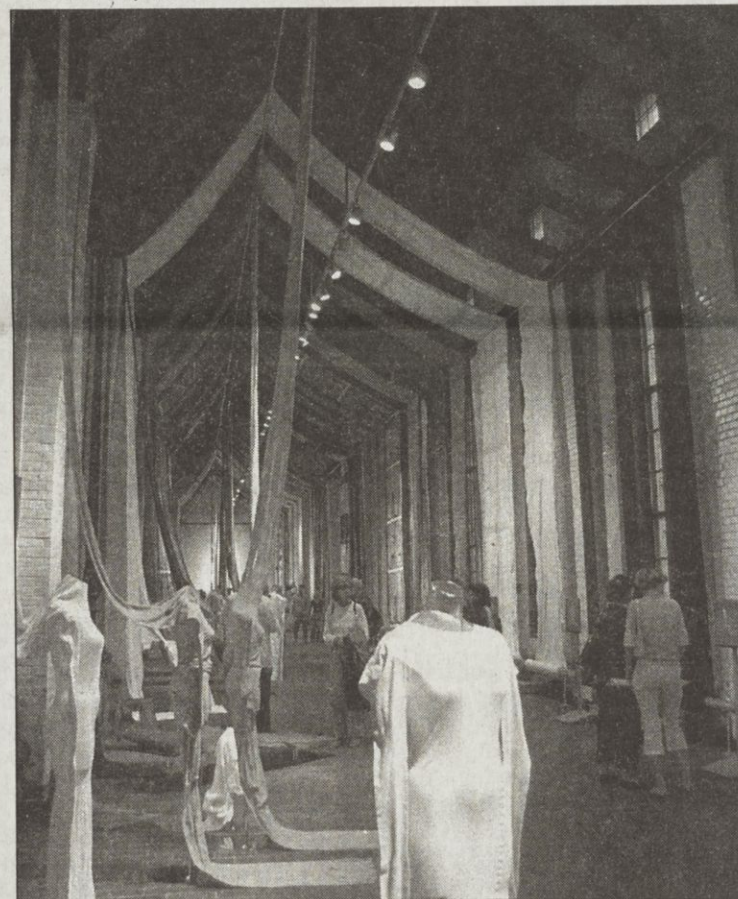

"His work is constantly innovative, and he's always exploring new ways to express his ideas," said Gayle Strege, curator of textiles and clothing's historic collection department at Ohio State. "He doesn't seem confined to what clothing 'should' be."

"Miyake is timeless," said Charles Kleibacker, adjunct curator of design at the Columbus Museum of Art and past designer in residence at OSU. "He thinks about the people and not the icon or the fame."

Video games enter adulthood

Mature titles raise problems with exposing violence to young players

By Chris Hatala
Lantern staff writer

Video games have officially reached mainstream status, bringing in sums of money annually that rival the film industry, according to an Entertainment Software Association report.

Gaming is no longer a fringe activity or just a "kid's thing." Overall, today's software places more emphasis on violence and realistic presentation. Hobby magazines contain smaller fonts, more intelligent writing and more in-depth coverage, but improved technology has created obstacles most developers may never have imagined.

Although only 12 percent of the games sold last year carried the "Mature" rating — equivalent to an R-rated movie — the issue of violence in gaming continues to attract more and more attention from media, parent groups and politicians across the country. Ultra-violent games, like Grand Theft Auto III, have been the subjects of multiple lawsuits and have faced accusations of contributing to what Sen. Joe Lieberman, D-Conn., has called an overall "culture of violence."

Matt Eastin, an assistant professor at Ohio State in the department of journalism and communication, has been conducting studies on the possible effects of video game violence for four years. He said there are two main models of thought regarding the issue.

The first — the General Affect Aggression Model — suggests that games do have some effect on their players.

"The more a person sees themselves as the aggressor, the more likely they are to have a presence in the game," Eastin said.

This level of presence and immersion in the fantasy world would make it more likely for a person to automatically react violently in real life, he said.

"The second idea is that violence in gaming is a means to an end: to win the game," Eastin said.

He said he believes violent gaming has short-term effects, but more time needs to pass before conclusions can be reached about long-term problems, especially for children.

John Sherry, an assistant professor at Purdue University, conducted a meta-analysis of all the research done so far on gaming violence, published in July 2001's Human Communication Research Journal.

"Despite over 30 studies, researchers cannot agree if violent-content video games have an effect on aggression," he said. "The literature on video game effects is littered with mixed findings from studies that use a wide range of games, treatment exposure times and subject pools, obscuring clear conclusions."

The technology surge of the 1990s — the use of digitized graphics and polygons to depict photo-realistic events — and the lack of definitive evidence regarding gaming's effects have caused critics to point out the implications gaming could have for players.

In the early '90s, two games in particular — "Mortal Kombat" and "Night Trap" — attracted the attention of Lieberman. He said video games' display of digitized people engaged in violent acts contributed to "an unacceptable level of violence in society," a comment he made at a Senate press conference held to discuss these games in December 1993.

Capitol Hill has not unilaterally attacked the industry. Amanda Flaig, spokeswoman for Sen. Mike DeWine, R-Ohio, said although family values are a concern for DeWine, examining issues in video games is not at the top of his agenda.

Also, Congress has defeated several bills calling for the restriction of gaming. A bill proposed by Joe Baca (D-Calif.) would have made it a federal crime to sell "adult video games" to minors, but it died in House hearings in 2002 and again in 2003.

However, the actions of some politicians actively involved in the fight against video games have left many in the electronic industry scratching their heads in confusion.

According to Baca's Web site, "Dead or Alive XTreme Beach

Volleyball" — a game featuring scantily clad female players — "allows players to create female characters with full control over breast size and the option to have (them) appear topless," but none of these options actually exist in the game.

The media was also quick to blame the Columbine school shootings partly on "Doom," a PC game more than five years old at the time of the killings.

In 2002, St. Louis Judge Stephen Limbough reviewed a prosecution-prepared videotape of four games, all of which were more than four years old. One, "Resident Evil," was incorrectly identified by the court and its reports as "The Resident of Evil Creek." The case was to decide whether or not parental consent would have to be granted for children to purchase M-rated games.

Limbough's decision said the city could regulate video games because they were not free speech protected by the First Amendment.

"No laws restrict the sale of movies, music or books, even though some of these products may not be suitable for children. There is no basis for treating video games any differently than other forms of popular entertainment," Limbough said to CNN/Money in response to Washington's proposed laws to regulate game sales.

With studies funded by parties as varied as scientists, the gaming industry and Lieberman continue

STEPHEN

Confessions of a true teenage paranoiac

I do not fear failure, nor do I fear mediocrity. I do not fear premature death or what will remain of me when I'm tossed into the metaphysical question mark of the afterlife. I do, however, fear serial killers standing outside my front door, ready to break in at any given moment of my peaceful slumber.

A week ago I was walking over to a friend's house on Lane Avenue around midnight. Being a generally ill at ease person, I decided to bring my CD player with me so I had something to sing along to while I walked through the dark streets and alleys of off-campus Columbus.

Whilst sauntering and singing along shakily to Kathleen Edwards, I looked cagily around me — watching the streetlights, taking up surveillance of dark corners, cars and trash cans.

In the dead of the Monday night silence, I suddenly heard a cowbell or what one could only conceive was the sound of empty metal being struck. It could have easily been a cowbell or even a falling pot hitting the ground.

However, before I even considered any of these options, my first thought was — and I'd like to emphasize the primacy of this thought over other possibilities, "Oh. It's the Cowbell Killer."

Before I thought "What was that?" or even "Huh. That was strange." The first idea that came to mind was a man walking around Lane Avenue circa 12:11 a.m. banging a cowbell every now and then just to warn his victims that he was around and that yes, he was coming.

It is exactly this kind of thinking that plagues my evenings and disturbs my attempts to sleep in peace every night of the week.

I have no idea when this kind of paranoia completely overtook my brain, but I've never been known for being a particularly levelheaded person. I'm the oversensitive friend of yours who always asks, "What's that supposed to mean?"

I'm the suspicious stranger who wonders if the reason you took the last napkin from the dispenser is because you purposefully didn't want me, Steve Lynch, to have it.

It wasn't until I moved off-campus that my paranoia began to include knives and chainsaws. In the first few weeks of living in my off-campus house I lied awake for hours, with windows wide open, wondering what that dull thump was, where the screeching came from, and what the shadow by the garage was.

By October my brain had begun modulating this sensory data into more terrifying pictures. When my roommate closed his window late one evening, I was convinced that a robber had entered our house.

He opened our ground floor window, crawled in, was stealing our GameCube ("I haven't even beat 'The Legend of Zelda' yet, the charlatan!" I thought to myself), and was preparing to come up the stairs to kill me.

It seems the best plan I could muster to combat the intruder was to put up an away message that said, "I think there's someone in my house that doesn't live here."

Forget waking my roommates up or even possibly investigating the situation. My passive alert to the online community was all I needed to fight the good fight.

Situations like those previously stated occur frequently. If I lie in bed and hear a scratching outside, I assume it's a gigantic cat alerting me to his presence before he pounces down the door and bounds up the stairs to my room.

A thump on the roof means an assassin ninja has jumped from the apartment building next door onto our roof; it's only a matter of time before he swings through my bedroom window.

The sound of bottle breaking in the alley is an enraged murderer preparing his jagged tool of destruction meant for my termination. In the convoluted folds of my brain, any sound has a sinister beginning and I am destined for every bad end.

ADAM GODFREY/THE LANTERN

First baseman Paul Farinacci tries to tag out Penn State's Brett Showalter as he slides back into the base.

Series split keeps OSU in hunt

By Chris Galoski
Lantern sports writer

Freshman catcher Adam Schneider's two-out, three-run double in the bottom of the third inning not only put the Ohio State baseball team ahead of Penn State 4-3, but it may have saved the team's season.

"It was a pitch up and out, and I drove it into right," Schneider said after the Buckeyes' 9-4 victory. "Thank God it worked."

The Buckeyes (27-19, 15-9 Big Ten) sit in a second-place tie with Penn State (26-20, 15-9) in the Big Ten and are just a half game behind Minnesota after splitting the four-game series.

Junior right-hander Mike Madson pitched eight innings en route to his seventh victory of the season.

"(The win) keeps us in contention for a Big Ten championship," OSU coach Bob Todd said. "We've still got eight more (conference) games to play, which is an awful lot of games when you look at baseball. But every win right now — especially in the conference — is big."

The Buckeyes desperately needed the win after the Nittany Lions swept a doubleheader Sunday. PSU right-hander Sean Stidfole threw a complete-game shutout to help the Lions to a 1-0 victory in game one snapping the Buckeyes' seven-game winning streak.

"Our team works off hitter's counts a lot — 2-0, 3-1 — getting our fastball," junior left fielder Steve Caravati said. "If they go head of us 0-2 with two breaking balls early in the count, that puts us at a disadvantage big-time."

The loss ruined a five-scoreless-inning effort by 2003 Big Ten Pitcher of the year, junior southpaw Scott Lewis. "I could've been sharper," Lewis said. "I got away with a lot of pitches. I think my curveball still isn't where it needs to be."

OSU dropped the nightcap of the doubleheader 6-3. PSU catcher Matt Harter belted a two-run home run off junior left-hander Trent Luyster in the top of the third inning to put the Lions comfortably ahead 5-0. The loss was Luyster's first since he faced Eastern Michigan on March 31 and snapped his four-game winning streak. One of the lone bright spots for the scarlet and gray was junior first baseman Paul Farinacci, who went 3-for-3 with two doubles and an RBI.

The Buckeyes opened the series with a 3-1 victory behind senior southpaw Josh Newman's eight strong innings of work. Newman earned his seventh victory by striking out eight batters and allowing an unearned run. Freshman right fielder Jacob Howell put the Buckeyes ahead 1-0 as he blasted the first pitch he saw from Lion right-hander Jim Farrell over the right field wall.

"He threw me an inside breaking ball and I just got my hands through and just yanked it," Howell said.

The win was the 800th in Todd's career.

"I think championships and whatever happens from a team perspective is so much more important than individual awards. I'm focused on trying to get this team to win another championship," Todd said.

Buckeyes hope to avenge loss

By Matthew Keves

Despite being ranked sixth in the country heading into the last week of the season, the Ohio State men's lacrosse team (12-3) will make a return trip to Chapel Hill Saturday. They will play No. 8 seed North Carolina (9-4) in the first round of the men's NCAA lacrosse championship.

The game will be the second in less than a week between these two teams. The Buckeyes will try to avenge last Saturday's 12-6 loss to UNC, a defeat that may have cost them a first-round home game.

"I felt before the UNC game we were probably going to get a home game," coach Joe Breschi said. "But now we have a great opportunity to play a team we've already scouted and know pretty well, and get some revenge for the loss last weekend."

While the Buckeyes were hoping for a home game, they are still confident in their abilities to advance through the bracket.

"We were certainly hoping to get a home game in the first round so our fans could come watch," senior defenseman Greg Bice said. "But we knew we'd get a tough game, and now that we know who we're playing we can start preparing."

If the Buckeyes are able to defeat the Tar Heels, they will most likely face Johns Hopkins, the top seed in the tournament and No. 1 team in the country.

However, the Buckeyes showed their ability to beat tough opponents when they defeated Navy earlier this season. The Midshipmen are seeded second in the tournament.

"First, we need to worry about UNC, but as far as that next game, we feel we've shown that we can play with any team in the country," senior midfielder Shaun Lyons said.

Several members of the conference-winning team were awarded by the Great Western Lacrosse League for their stellar play throughout the season.

Bice and goalie Tony Russo shared GWLL Player of the Year honors while Breschi was named Coach of the Year.

"It's a great honor to win because it's proof of how great the team played this season," Russo said. "I'm happy that Greg (Bice) and I can share it and it'll be nice to share it with the team because there are so many guys who also deserve recognition for their great seasons."

Lyons and senior attacker Anthony Gilardi joined Bice and Russo on the All-GWLL first team.

The second team consisted of two more Buckeyes: junior midfielder Tom Randisi and junior defenseman Peter Frantz.

Track ousts weak competition

By Joshua Keeran
Lantern sports writer

With the 2004 Big Ten Outdoor Track and Field Championships only a few days away, the Ohio State Track and Field team closed out the regular season Saturday with their final meet.

The final tune up for the Buckeyes took place in northeast Ohio as the University of Akron played host to the Campbell/Wright Open.

OSU was well-represented at the meet, with several Buckeyes showing their scarlet-and-gray pride by dominating events they were expected to win because of the weak competition at the event.

"The team's performance was good, but the competition wasn't good," OSU coach Russ Rogers said. "We were just hoping the team would have fun and relax before the Big Ten Championships."

Coming into the meet, no female Buckeye had ever launched the shot put farther than 53 feet. This fact was obliterated, as sophomore Amarachi Ukabam broke the school record by nearly a foot with her throw of 53-11 1/4. Ukabam also came in runner-up in the discus with a throw of 174 feet.

In the hammer throw event, junior Keturah Lofton broke her own Big Ten and school record by two inches with a mark of 200-3, which was strong enough for a second-place finish in the event.

Lofton was not through placing in the top 10 for the evening, as she also finished seventh in the discus 143-10 and third in the shot put with a hurl of 45-3.

On the men's side, seven-time All-American senior Dan Taylor finished in the top five in the shot put, discus and hammer throw.

Taylor's mark of 66-9 1/4 in the shot put earned him first place in the event. He also placed third in the discus with a throw of 184-2, and his 218-3 throw of the hammer landed him a fifth-place finish.

"Dan competed well, but Dan can compete well on any condition," Rogers said. "The biggest surprise was George Hoover in the javelin."

Hoover was the feel-good story of the meet, posting a season-best mark of 209-1 in the javelin throw.

"It's my best throw since coming back from surgery," Hoover said.

Hoover's performance on Saturday is somewhat of a medical miracle — he is returning back to form after undergoing Tommy John surgery.

Hoover was a Big Ten champion in 2000 and 2001 before injuries cost him all of the 2002 season and part of his 2003 season. He will get his chance at a third Big Ten title this weekend.

"A lot of us on the team are seniors, so we'd like to all give our best performances and collectively have a good championship," Hoover said. "Hopefully we can go out in style."

The women runners were led by senior Molly Logan as she became a regional qualifier after taking first place in the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 13.34.

"My performance was good this weekend because last weekend I didn't finish my race," Logan said. "My goal was just to finish the race to see where I am at and to set myself up for the Big Tens."

Next up for the OSU track and field team is the 2004 Big Ten Outdoor Championships, which will take place this weekend in West Lafayette, Ind.

"We would like to get eight first places, which we are capable of doing. Up front we really look good," Rogers said. "We have to get the fourth-, fifth- and sixth-place finishers to come through. If they come through, we will be in good shape."

Rebel's slow start pays off

By Terry Kinney
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Stacy Andrews fell in love with drawing long before football.

He played in only five games in college, but the Cincinnati Bengals saw him as a sleeper in the draft, picked him in the fourth round and hope to make an NFL tackle out of the 342-pound art major from Mississippi.

"When I was real young, I loved to draw. I drew every day," Andrews said Saturday at the Bengals minicamp for rookies. "It was just something I wanted to do."

In high school, Andrews was a track and basketball star, but shunned football. He thought he could get a basketball scholarship, but got offers only from small schools. Mississippi offered him a track scholarship.

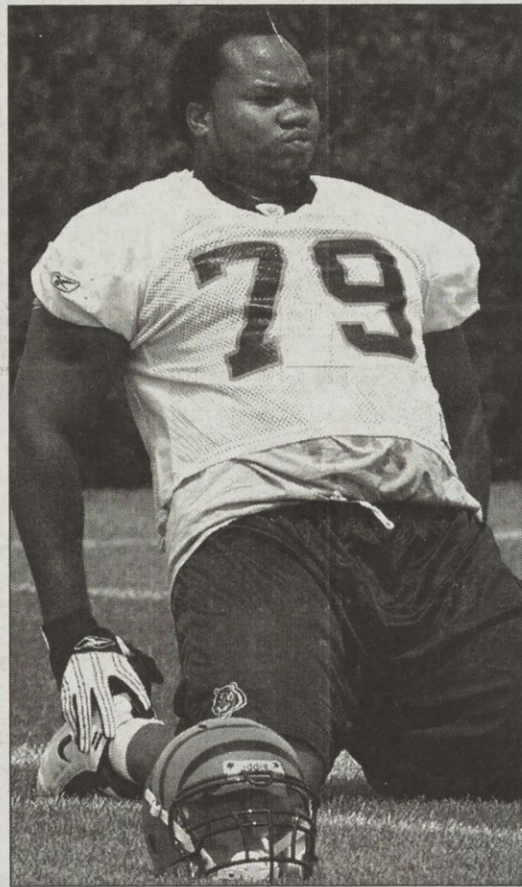

Before leaving Ole Miss, he had set three school records, including a discus throw of 188 feet, 5 inches. All the while, offensive line coach John Latina tried to get Andrews to try football.

"When I first got here five years ago — his first year — I walked into the weight room and naturally thought he was a football player," Latina said Saturday by phone from Oxford, Miss. "I walked up to him, introduced myself and told him I thought I might be his line coach. He said he was there because of track."

Not discouraged, Latina continued to prod Andrews. "Every time I saw him, I'd tease him about coming out. He'd laugh," Latina said. "Finally he stopped laughing and decided to come out."

Andrews' younger brother, a two-time All-American tackle at Arkansas, helped influence his decision.

"I was talking to my brother Shawn about it and I finally just made up my mind to go ahead and do it," Andrews said.

WEXNER FROM PAGE 7

Some of Miyake's best-known work includes the 1993 Pleats Please line, which provided a modern look for a universal market. The Pleats Please, however, was just the beginning of his creative surge.

Today, Miyake's fans are raving about A Piece Of Cloth, which includes no cutting or sewing in the fabric. A-POC was designed to encourage wearers to individually cut and design the fabric as they wish, forming an easy-to-wear ensemble that suits their own personal liking. A-POC has become Miyake's most successful line both in pricing and within his own designing goals.

"A-POC unleashes the freedom of imagination," Miyake said in the July 2002 edition of Newsweek Magazine. "It's for people who are curious, who have inner energy — the energy of life and living."

To most, Miyake's work is inexplicable and viewed as simply impossible, but once again, Miyake has impressed the world, using technology to go above the everyday standard.

Miyake has been an influential designer for nearly three decades now, overindulging in the endless brilliant ideas he has materialized. From snaps, pleats and no seams, he has repeatedly amazed artists around the world.

"Miyake has helped introduce fashion as an actual art form," Kleibacker said. "The man knows talent and has created just that."

These brilliant fashion design lines by Miyake, including his Pleats Please, can be purchased at stores in the Columbus area such as Leal in the Arlington area and Saks Fifth Avenue, located in the Polaris Fashion Place.

"Each recipient of the Wexner Prize has been an established artist who represents everything the Wexner Center stands for," Simonian said. "Miyake has proved to everyone everywhere that he is a bold thinker through his inventions, new fabrics and use of technology."

On Sunday, Harold Koda, author and curator-in-charge of the Costume Institute at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, gave a welcoming talk on Miyake entitled "Issey Miyake: Subverting Fashion." The Wexner Center will hold a private award ceremony for Miyake as he visits today.

The Wexner Center gallery will be hosting an opportunity for all to see Miyake's work through photos, some works on display and a video presentation. The gallery will be open to the public on weekdays starting today through May 28.

to provide different points-of-view regarding game violence and its effects.

"There may be a long-term correlation between the preference for violent games and verbally responding in an aggressive manner," according to a study by Jeanne Funk, professor of psychology at the University of Toledo.

However, Eastin said long-term experiments — to be completed in the future — will paint a clearer picture of how games affect their players.

Shigeru Miyamoto, programmer and creator of Nintendo's Mario and Zelda series, is one of the industry's leading thinkers regarding where the industry is headed and what makes for innovative entertainment. At last year's Level X, a show Nintendo annually uses to display its newest ideas and products, Miyamoto emphasized the need for simplicity and fresh ideas in gaming in an age where graphic-technology and violence are reaching their zenith.

"I believe interactiveness is everything. I would like to create something for anyone and everyone to play; something that will make people say, 'Games are for everyone,'" Miyamoto said.

LYNCH FROM PAGE 7

No matter how distraught, upset, or exhausted I am, my vigilance to capture any change in the aural landscape never wavers. I will immediately fumble for my glasses, stare wide-eyed out my bedroom window, and peel back the blinds for minutes on end if I sense any impending danger.

You better believe that I have a detailed, multifarious plan of action for any possible siege into my house or bedroom. These plots to snuff me out will never be culminated, believe you me.

I suppose that the lessons I learned over the past few months about off-campus survival don't only involve fiscal responsibility and self-sufficiency.

Rather, keen observation and alert listening skills used to detect the subtly evil forces in the lurking nightscape will get you much farther than paying your electric bill on time ever will.

Stephen Lynch is a senior in English. He can be reached for comment at lynch.195@osu.edu, or by scratching softly on his bedroom window.
