Suspect sought in shootings

Fletcher's bouncer in serious condition

By Beth Kozakewicz and Kyle Pendleton Lantern staff writer

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Charles Lynch, 18, charging him with two counts of felonious assault in connection with a shooting early Saturday morning in front of AKA Fletchers, Detective Rodger Hamilton said.

Roy Nichols, 22, 126 E. Lane Ave., a bouncer at Fletchers, and Robert Giuliani,18, a Westerville South High School senior, were wounded by gunshots, Columbus police said.

Nichols, a former OSU football player, was shot in the abdomen and another bullet grazed his left leg, police said.

Giuliani, who was shot in the right foot while walking south on High Street, was taken to University Hospitals in good condition and was treated and released, police said.

Giuliani said Monday evening he is currently at home and recovering "just fine." Nichols was shot near the entrance of the bar at 1570 N High St., about 1 a.m. shortly after three men had been escorted from the bar by other bouncers, police said.

"As I approached Fletcher's, my friends and I saw three men being escorted from the bar when one man took a swing at the bouncer," Approximately 10 witnesses an eyewitness said. AKA Fletchers would not comment on the incident.

Evewitnesses said the events happened quickly. They said the gun flashed three bursts light with each shot fired and then they saw smoke.

"Nichols clutched his leg and shouted 'Help me please, I've been shot'," another eyewitness "At that point, I didn't want to stick around.'

Another bouncer ran into the street and stopped a patrol car driving by, eyewitnesses said.

It is unknown if Lynch is an OSU student, but he is not listed in the 1991-92 student directory.

Detectives have talked with one other suspect in the incident, but have not filed charges against him or the third man involved, police said.

This incident has caused some bar patrons and managers to take action to prevent violence such as this incident.

A Park Alley spokesman confirmed that customers were frisked upon entry into the bar Sunday evening. The frisking was due to the shooting, the spokesman said, and was unable to say if it will continue.

City and OSU health officials have not yet determined what caused 39 students to seek emergency treatment at OSU Hospitals starting Thursday night with symptoms that appear to be food poisoning or an outbreak of a virus.

By Friday afternoon, 60 students had sought treatment at OSU Hospitals or the Wilce Student Health Center for nausea, vomiting and diarrhea, but none were admitted.

Ken Phillips, a hospital administrative associate, said Monday there were no new updates regarding the status of the investigation or the total number of students treated.

Dr. Cecil R. Smith Jr., chief of Environmental & Occupational Health and Safety, said it could take several days to find the cause of the problem.

In addition, food is not prepared centrally, but is cooked at each individual commons. He added that 450 food service staff members ate the meals, and none were treated.

"The food service operation here is excellent," Smith said. Hall said there has been no outbreak of food poisoning in the 15 years he has been with Residence and Dining Halls.

witch debated

Once again OSU administrators are debating the possibility of changing the university's academic calendar from quarters to semesters. The Office of Academic Affairs sent out a form on Dec. 12 to OSU faculty asking them to vote on whether they preferred maintaining the quarter system or switching to semesters. Semester conversion would mean changing the three-quarter, 10-week schedule to a two-semester, 15-week schedule. Responsibilities of the faculty and the students would remain the same totaled over an entire year.

The number of credit hours would remain proportional to the number of hours spent in class.

In the semester system, the amount of classes offered would be reduced, and the average class size would rise, according to a report from the Ad Hoc Calendar Committee.

The committee was formed in January 1991 to research OSU's current academic calendar and consider the advantages and disadvantages of an alternate academic calendar.

The committee's findings were inconclusive; instead of supporting conversion to a semester calendar, it recommended that more research should be done to discuss the proposal's advantages and disadvantages.

Charles Corbato, associate provost

Corbato said there are some advantages to the semester system.

"Spreading a course out will give the students and faculty room to breathe. The pace of teaching and the pace of learning is more relaxed on the semester curriculum," Corbato

Two types of semesters are being considered: a constant format model and a constant content model.

In the constant format model, the average number of class meetings in a week would remain unchanged and the material covered would increase by 50 percent, resulting in the average number of courses for students and teachers decreasing by 33 percent in a year.

In the constant content model, the average number of class meetings for a course in a week would decrease by 33 percent (reducing the credits) and the material covered would remain the same, resulting in students having to take 50 percent more courses at any given time on the average.

The committee's findings cited oc-currences from other institutions that have implemented similar changes where there was a need for 10 percent to 15 percent additional classroom space.

Elizabeth Sharkey, a senior who transferred from the University of Hawaii, said, "Semesters are a more relaxed atmosphere. You have more time to learn the information."

"Quarters are more intense; they try to pack as much information as they can into 10 weeks," she said. It appears the debate to switch to semesters will continue.

A French Airbus A-320 carrying 96 people crashed in snow and fog, on a wooded ridge, in eastern France Monday night. At least 11 survivors, including a young girl, were found in the wreckage after a four-hour search.

The girl, about 2 or 3, emerged without serious injury from the crash of the state-run Air Inter flight, and at least one of the six crew also survived, police said.

Efforts were under way to remove injured people from the wreckage, police said early Tuesday.

Students support tuition cap

By Mark Houser

When it comes to solving Ohio's current budget crunch, the state's college students are not willing to pay more than their fair share, according to the Ohio Student Association, a student lobbying group.

The OSA Board of Presidents, made up of representatives of the heads of student governments of Ohio's 13 state universities, met Sunday in the Ohio Union to discuss students' perspectives on current regarding higher education.

The group's discussion centered mainly on the Ohio Board of Regents' proposed elimination of the state tuition cap, aspects of the plan to reauthorize the federal Higher Education Act of 1965, and gaining additional rights for student trustees.

In what seemed to be the most important issue of the day, the board voted unanimously to oppose the Board of Regents' recommendation and instead to support retaining the tuition cap at its present level of 7 percent.

The cap represents the highest legal rate for yearly tuition increases at state institutions.

The Board of Regents, a regulatory and governing body of Ohio higher education, proposed removing the cap so that state universities could raise higher revenues to combat budget cuts. The board also decided not to support current plans in the reauthorization of the Higher Education Act to transform the current system of Guaranteed Student Loans into a Direct Student

Proponents see this action as streamlining a tedious and costly system by eliminating the independent role of lending institutions and instead loaning directly from the federal government to the individual universities. Preliminary estimates of annual savings have been as high as $1

On the other hand, opponents of the DSL program feel that the startup costs and administrative work would place too great a burden on the universities, especially the smaller ones. Some smaller universities in Ohio have already announced that they will be unable to offer student loans if a DSL program is instituted.

OSU closer to debate

By Mark Houser

Ohio State is one step closer to hosting a presidential debate during the upcoming campaign season, says the Washington-based Commission on Presidential Debates.

The field of eight potential host sites has been narrowed to five, and Ohio State is one of these, said Janet Brown, executive director of the commission. There are three debates to be scheduled: two between the Democratic and Republican presidential candidates, and one between the vice presidential candidates.

During a campus tour in November of last year, Brown had indicated she was considering two potential sites on the OSU campus: the Ohio Union
Ballrooms and Mershon Audito-

Ballrooms and Mershon Auditorium.

The final selection has yet to be made and will depend on the ability of each potential host site to accept the terms of a draft contract. One issue raised in the draft contract is the actual site availability on the proposed dates of the debates, which have yet to be officially set.

The other four sites eligible to host the debates are the University of California at Irvine, Michigan State University, the College of William and Mary, and the Kennedy Library in Washington, D.C.

By Tony Reynolds

The Lantern is taking its newspaper design into the 21st century with an AP Digital Darkroom, one of the newest technological advances in the industry.

According to Ray Catalino, business manager of the Lantern, this technology is so new that the Lantern is one of the first college newspapers in the country to use it.

The AP Digital Darkroom, better known as the Leafdesk, is a system which enables The Associated Press to send photographs via satellite to the Lantern newsroom where they are received and stored in a computer. These photos can be manipulated and then printed in the newspaper the next day.
"We take that photo and convert it to a half-tone copy, which is used for printing," Catalino said.

AP is a subscription wire service that sends stories and photos to its subscriber newspapers all over the country. This service enables newspapers to receive stories and photos from other regions of the country that are otherwise inaccessible to reporters.

With the old system, stories and photos were sent to newspapers with a method that worked similar to a fax machine, except photos were sent continuously, said Michael Alwood, photo editor of the Lantern.

With the new system, photos can be sent electronically to a computer, where it is the satel where it is the sent electronically to a computer, where it is the sent electronically to a computer, where it is the satel where it sent electronically to a computer, where they are stored.

The Leafdesk can store up to 200 photographs for the photo editor of the Lantern to choose from for use in the next day's newspaper, Alwood said. Catalino said the Leafdesk at Ohio State is unique because it is one of the few to be installed in a university and because of the technology required to

Michael Alwood/the Lanter

The AP satellite dish is lifted onto the mounting pole.

Kevin Hudson, a technician with AP, said the system is usually installed with the satellite on the roof of the building where it is located.

But because of construction at Ohio State and design problems, the satellite for the Lantern's system was installed on West Campus at the Satellite Communications Facility, 1318 Kinnear

Unlike other Leafdesk installations, this one also required fiber optic cables to transmit signals from West Campus to the Lantern, Catalino said.

In this transmission, an intricate system of computers and electronics takes a signal from a satellite and converts the pulse signal to a light signal. This signal is then sent over fiber optic cables to the Lantern newsroom and is converted back to a pulse signal so that it can be read by the Leafdesk computer.

Some of the system's advantages are the amount of time saved by the photoeditor and money saved on expensive photo supplies and chemicals, said Catalino. He added that it also gives students an opportunity to get state-of-the-art experience while still in school. Alwood said he can make better photo selections because the pictures are displayed on the Leafdesk computer screen before they are printed.

"Sometimes the same picture would be printed three, four or five times using the old system," Alwood said. "Photo paper is expensive. You know how much waste that was?"

Charlie Hayes, a photographer for The Columbus Dispatch, said the Leafdesk the Dispatch recently purchased is saving the paper time.

"I think it's wonderful. We don't have to make as many prints as we used to, so we save a lot of money," he said.

The program opened with a block of videos called the "Oskar Fischinger Tribute." Each video in this section presented the idea that shapes and vibrant colors can be expressive of music.

"Scopitones: A Stylistic Survey," was the next block of videos. These were very 60s in style and presented such songs as "If I Had a Hammer," by Debbie Reynolds and "A Whiter Shade of Pale" by Procol Harum, which was obviously an old video because the singers' lips didn't move to the music.

"Boots," by Nancy Sinatra, a well-known song with the chorus,
"these boots are made for walkin," was very 1960s. The women in the video wore knee-high boots and very mini skirts. The way they danced resembled people doing aerobics.

"Scopitones and Sexual Representation" was the next block videos representing the way society viewed women in the mid-60s. "Queen of the House," by Jody Miller, was a video about how women in the sixties did the cooking, cleaning and child bearing while the husband worked.

"Experimental Film Visionaries," was the last block of videos, which presented odd representations for songs such as "Cosmic Ray" by Ray Charles. This video showed naked women jumping and shaking throughout the video. Also in this section was "All My Life," by Ella Fitzgerald and "Pluto" by Moby

This program was better than the others in the five-part series because the videos were more relevant to the time that the program was documenting. By knowing the categories in which each video was placed, it was easy to see the meaning in the songs.

The videos in this program showed how society was radical and open to change during the 60s. The program showed how music can portray the emotions of the people from the time periods they were

Bucks withstand Iowa's second-half surge 85-81

Just two little foul shots.

No, make that two huge foul shots. The ones that iced an 85-81 Ohio State (11-2, 3-1 Big Ten) victory over visiting Iowa (9-5, 1-3), Sunday afternoon in front of a crowd of 13,276 in St. John Arena.

With 11 seconds left in the game, OSU senior Chris Jent stepped to the line after being fouled by Iowa's Chris Street.

Jent's first shot hobbled around the rim before falling, putting the Buckeyes ahead by three. His next shot hit nothing but net, and gave the Bucks the lead 85-81, and the win.

gave the Bucks the lead 85-81, and the win.

"I don't think there could be any more extra pressure than 11 seconds left, at the line, two points up, and you have two shots," Jent said. "I don't think you're thinking those kinds of things (though). All you're thinking about is shooting the ball and trying to get it to go in the basket."

"I was not concerned at all (with Jent at the line)," said OSU Coach Randy Ayers.

Jent is averaging 82 percent from the line.

Jent is averaging 82 percent from the line, and shot two of two Sunday. He also chipped in 16 points and 8 rebounds.

After shooting under 40 percent in the first half of their last three games, Ohio State came out strong against Iowa shooting nearly 59 percent from the floor in the first half.

The Buckeyes led by as many as 16 points at 47-31 and 49-33. First, when Jackson hit two free throws with 1:40 remaining in the first half, and again when Jackson fed OSU guard Mark Baker for a lay up. Jackson added 21 points, five rebounds and six assists for the Bucks Marking his first start as a Buckeye Lawrence Funderburke scored 12 points and pulled down a team high 13 rebounds in his 30 minutes of play. Funderburke started in place of Jamaal Brown. Ayers benched Brown after he had missed a class during the past week.

Funderburke's performances have proved that he can work well with the Buckeyes, even exceeding coach Ayers' expectations.

"Oh, he's way ahead (of my expectations," Ayers said. "You're talking about a kid that sat out for two years, goes in there in his fourth game, and gets 13 rebounds against a great rebounding team. Iowa, if you look at their history, has always rebounded the ball wall."

Reds shortstop signs $25.6 million contract

Cincinnati Reds made shortstop Barry Larkin the fifth-highest paid player in the major leagues Sunday, signing him to a five-year contract worth $25.6 million.

worth $25.6 million.

Larkin, 27, a four-time All-Star, becomes the highest-paid shortstop in history. Larkin made $2.1 million last year and filed a $4.2 million arbitration request on Friday.

Larkin had thought there was a "very good possibility" he'd leave his hometown as a free agent after the 1992 season. He openly questioned the team's commitment to winning after it finished fifth in the National League West last season and League West last season and wondered whether he'd be offered a salary comparable to the best in baseball.

He changed his mind when the Reds acquired starting pitchers Tim Belcher and Greg Swindell in off-season trades and made a good season trades and made a good opening contract offer.

"Throughout the years, I've been kind of vocal about questioning the commitment to winning here," Larkin said. "The things that happened this off-season definitely showed me that this team does want to win. This is the kind of situation I want to be in."

The Reds made him by far the Big victory starts season

for men's volleyball team

"It was absolutely critical that we kept Barry Larkin," general manager Bob Quinn said. "You shudder at the thought of going through 1992 with perhaps the best player on your club being in a lameduck situation. That would not have boded well for 1992 or beyond."

Larkin's average annual salary of boded well for 1992 or beyond."

Larkin's average annual salary of $5.12 million trails only New York Mets outfielder Bobby Bonilla ($5.8 million), Toronto pitcher Jack Morris ($5,425,000), Boston pitcher Roger Clemens ($5,380,250) and Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden ($5.15 million). The only other player with a $5 million contract is New York Yankees outfielder Danny Tartabull ($5.1 million).

Larkin has been voted the team's Most Valuable Player the last two seasons and was coming off a season when he batted .302 and tied the club record for a shortstop with 20 homers. But he was surprised when the Reds made a generous opening

The contract includes a $1.5 million signing bonus and a base salary of $4 million this year, $5.4 million in 1993, $4 million in 1994, $5.4 million in 1995 and $5.3 million in 1996. Larkin also could make an additional $250,000 a year through bonuses for National League MVP, All-Star, Silver Slugger and Gold Glove.

Dibble made $500,000 last year. This year, the first time he was eligible for arbitration, he had asked for $1.8 million. The Reds had offered $1 million.

Dibble was 3-5 with a 3.17 ERA last season. He appeared in 67 games and had a career-high 31 saves, allowing 67 hits and 32 runs in 82 1-3 innings while striking out 124.

But it was a troubled year for Dibble, 28. He was perfect in 23 save opportunities with a 1.30 ERA before the All-Star break. After that, he was 8-for-13 with a 4.87 ERA.

National League president Bill White suspended him for three games for throwing at Houston Astros batter Eric Yelding, and four games for hitting a fan with a ball he threw into the stands at Riverfront threw into the stands at Riverfront Stadium. Dibble later said he would get counseling to control his temper.

The student was issued a misdemeanor citation and the license is being held for evidence.

It is commonplace to check the articles of a wallet when one is turned in to the police, said Richard Harp, deputy chief of OSU Police.

Student's purse snatched

An OSU student had her purse snatched while walking across the South Oval on Jan. 14. The woman's purse contained her driver's license, some bank cards and her birth certificate, according to the police report.

The student was walking north on South Oval Drive at about 6.45 a.m., just south of Haggerty Hall, when a man grabbed her purse. The robber then fled down College Road, according to the police report.

The robber then got into a dark-colored mini-van parked just south of Haggerty Hall on College Road.

Harp said there are no suspects or leads on the van, but they are investigating.

Environmental activism promoted

By Mark Houser

OSU students will have the opportunity to learn more about how they can work to improve their environment at a presentation tonight at the Ohio Union.

Joe Heimlich, a professor of environmental studies at Ohio State, will speak on "Activism for the Non-activist" at 7:30 p.m. in the Conference Theater. The discussion is co-sponsored by the Schottenstein Chabad House, the OSU Greens and the Student Environmental Action Coalition

According to Rabbi Ari Kaltmann, co-director of activities at the Schottenstein

Chabad House, a local Jewish center, the presentation is intended to foster an understanding of and appreciation for the environment.

"God gave us this world, and rather in the control of the control than abusing it, we should give it the respect it deserves," Kaltmann said. John Brown, a member of the OSU

John Brown, a member of the USU Greens, expressed hope that students would attend the discussion. "Students should show up so they can learn to play a part in affecting ecology to a positive end," he said.

Esther Kaltmann, also co-director of activities at the Chabad House, says the idea of protecting the environment is an important concept in Judaism.

The presentation follows Monday's Jewish celebration of the holiday Tu B'shuat, a separate new year's festival for trees. On this holiday, Jewish people customarily have a party where they eat many different kinds of fruit, in celebration of the role of trees as providers and gifts of God.

Rabbi Kaltmann hopes that his organization's co-sponsorship of the presentation with the other two groups will promote a sense of unity in the

He said the worst thing about his job is having to come in at 7 a.m., but other than that he had to strain to say something negative. He prefers to look on the bright side.

Democrats have eight on ballot

(AP) - Ohio Democrats could have as many as eight presidential contenders on their May 5 primary ballot, but the Republicans said Monday they expect President Bush to be unopposed in theirs.

Spokesmen for both parties based their projections on early steps that candidates or their surrogates must take to qualify national convention delegate slates for statewide primary ballots.

Democratic spokesman David Duffey said all of the five Democratic candidates running in the Feb. 18 New Hampshire primary complied with a requirement to designate Ohio delegate coordinators.

So had perennial candidates
Eugene McCarthy and Lyndon LaRouche, as well as Charles Woods, identified by Duffey as the owner of several radio stations in Alabama.

Others could come forward later with statements of intent from delegate candidates who have the consent of presidential candidates to run on their behalf in all or selected congressional districts,

The deadline for Democratic district delegate candidates is Jan.

Republicans have no such requirement, but all slates must file petitions by a Feb. 20 deadline.

Rex Elsas, executive director of the Ohio Republican Party, noted that the state party already has endorsed President Bush for re-
