Grants supply funds for area poor families, mentorships

By Stephen Heaphy Lantern staff writer

President Bush announced more than $88 million in grants from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services for two separate programs aimed at helping Americans in need Aug. 10. The grant programs, which target community-based organizations, will give two Columbus-based organizations almost $1 million combined.

The slightly larger of the two grant programs is aimed at providing mentors to children of prisoners. The program is a three-year, $150 million project designed to help local organizations recruit and train mentors who can help the children develop into successful adults. This year the program awarded $45.6 million to 221 organizations across the United States.

Harry Wilson, associate commissioner of Family and Youth Services Bureau at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, said the children of prisoners are at an especially high risk. In fact, they are seven times more likely to go to prison than children who do not have a parent in prison.

Wilson said the new program, which started a few years ago, was originally for $10 million a year but was increased to around $50 million this year as part of Bush's agenda of compassion. With the new money the program hopes to target about 33,000 children.

Wilson said the program has tight guidelines and oversight concerning the organizations to which it rewards money. Mentors must spend at least a year with the child and no less than one-and-a-half hours per week with them.

"We want to make sure that we are getting a good return on the money we are spending," Wilson said. "We want to be able to go to Congress in three years and show them how successful the program is." As part of the program, the Colum-

The College of Human Ecology designed the Habitat for Humanity house at the Ohio State Fair with Universal Design concepts. Universal Design dictates all environments and products should be accessible to all people.

By Beth Knieriemen Lantern staff writer

Habitat for Humanity built a again this year, and Ohio State's College of Human Ecology faculty members made it better.

Universal Design is a worldwide concept saying all environments and products should be made accessible for all people. OSU faculty members designed the building in accordance with those concepts.

"Universal Design includes features that make things accessible for all ages and abilities," said Janet Ciccone, spokeswoman for the College of Human Ecology. "It is a concept that is important nationwide, but isn't very wellknown.'

Dr. Susan Zavotka, associate professor from the department of consumer sciences, Dr. Christine Price, extension state specialist in gerontology, and Dr. Margaret Teaford, assistant professor of occupational therapy, along with interior design students, Katie Whitman and Courtney Burnett, met with Bob Perryman, director importance of Universal Design and decided what features needed to be included in the house.

The features in Universal house at the Ohio State Fair once Design are for all people," Zavotka said. "It makes sense.

"OSU, Lowe's, and Habitat all worked together on this project," Zavotka said. There were several Universal Design features used in the Habitat for Humanity house, including a landscaped, no-step entry to the home, 36-inch-wide doorways, lever door handles, rocker electrical switches, ceiling lights in every room, night lights, grab bars in the bathroom, a handheld adjustable showerhead, multilevel shelving in closets, front controls on appliances and many other features.

The group from OSU put information around the Habitat house, signifying the Universal Design aspects, and also gave tours and talked to people coming through the house about univer-

"All homes should be constructed following Universal Design principles," Zavotka said. "If it is built right the first time it is easier for everyone to use. A small of Habitat for Humanity of child can be more independent, Columbus. They discussed the an elderly person can live easier."

"Doorways that are 36 inches wide would work for everyone," Zavotka said. No matter what size they were, if they were in a wheelchair, or if someone was moving furniture, it is easier to use. Simple design modifications can greatly improve the accessibility of a house and make everyday life much easier for all people.

Ohio State Extension compiled a list of Universal Design features to be included in all homes.

The list included first-floor bedrooms, baths, kitchens, living areas, and laundries; handrails on both sides of all stairways; walk-in or roll-in showers; grab bars in shower and tub areas; accessible storage, user-friendly lighting; easy-grip controls such as lever faucets and door handles, Dshaped pulls, rocker panel light switches, and larger-sized controls. There should also be accessible work surfaces and appliances, safe flooring, and safety devices in

'Universal Design helps make life easier on everyone involved," said Mary Baughman, a junior in Human Development and Family Science. "It's not just for the handicapped, the elderly, or children — it helps everyone.

Time to grow up

Possible closure of Toys "R" Us

Children probably will not want to be Toys "R" Us kids anymore after the chain stops selling toys.

Last week the $11 billion toy store chain, a symbol of the 1980's booming economy and "spend money to make money" mentality, announced it was considering leaving the national toy business it worked so hard to all-but-monopolize.

After eliminating competitors such as Children's Palace and Kiddie City, Toys "R" Us was the undisputed champion of the toy sales arena throughout the '90s — until Wal-Mart

Wal-Mart's prices and convenience enabled it to inch in on Toys "R" Us territory, rapidly making the specialty giant a relic of the previous decade.

Today Wal-Mart and Target both have market shares greater than that of Toys "R" Us, and the toy juggernaut announced it might sell its toy business and try to capitalize on its Babies "R" Us division, which reportedly last year made $2 billion — as opposed to Toys "R" Us' earnings of $119 mil-

Wal-Mart has successfully undercut business after business — dangerous enough in a system built on competition — but Toys "R" Us, a fellow corporate juggernaut, is an indirect competitor (Target and K-Mart are direct). This could be an omen to Wal-Mart's many competitors — if Wal-Mart can run even established, specialized leaders out of the game, then the company is impossible to predict

Wal-Mart's overall smaller selection and lower prices are paying off, but they could end up further hurting the market they now rule in a situation that could repeat itself with each competing giant it slays.

Smaller toymakers, which often cower in fear of the "big boys," might be more hurt by the closing than by Wal-Mart's market muscle. Kathleen McHugh, executive director for the American Specialty Toy Retailing Association, said fewer retailers could mean fewer interesting toys because of less revenue and development, and she said Toys "R" Us provided a large amount of revenue to toy manufacturers.

The end of the Toys "R" Us era could also be disappointing from a more personal perspective for the college generation. Many younger adults have fond childhood memories of the chain. The sheer wonder of seeing a toy Valhalla with every toy a child could dream of — popular toy lines had entire aisles devoted to them — will be lost on future generations. A trip to today's Wal-Mart will yield the sight of a few square feet of space per property, a saddening sight to those who remember the seemingly neverending Transformers/GI Joe, Barbie and World of Nintendo aisles.

"I don't wanna grow up - I'm a Wal-Mart kid?" It just doesn't have the same ring.

'Ask Pres' unfair

Opposition voices not heard

It takes a slick politician to duck the responsibility of holding press conferences open to everyone. In his frequent "Ask President Bush" events, President

Bush has managed to do exactly that. On his campaign trail, President Bush has special sessions where he speaks to the public. These take place after a speech and staged interviews with specific guests. In these sessions, the president is surrounded by staunch supporters who do not ask questions that generate controversial answers.

Last Friday in Beaverton, Oregon, none of the 16 audience members who asked questions questioned the president on his decisions while in office. Questions, rather, often come in the form of praise. A transcript from Friday shows an exchange between the president and a member of the audience, who simply asks him what type of aircraft he flew and thanks him for serving his country

In his three-and-a-half years as commander in chief, Bush has endured 13 solo press conferences, according to the Washington Post. As of last week he has had 12 of these "Ask President Bush" events.

It doesn't take a long search to realize that Bush does not relish speaking to the press. Calendars for next year featuring "Bush-isms" have already been printed and are available in stores. Members of the press seem to take pleasure in printing the latest slip of the president's

But this cannot and should not deter the president from speaking publicly and being accountable. By simply surrounding himself with 'yes' men who are already supporters of his presidency Bush is ignoring the rest of the coun-

Bush does not have to defend himself against his record while in office. Bush does not have to answer to difficult questions about the war in Iraq. Bush does not have to deal with anything slightly controversial during

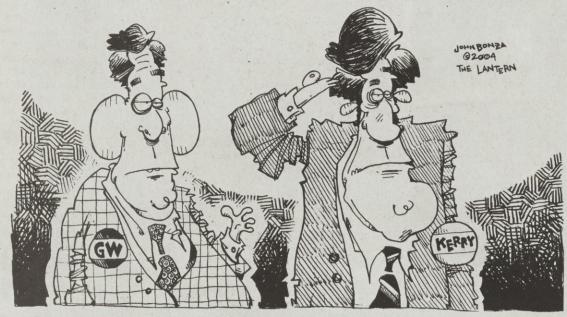

So what good does this do for the American public? Mainly, it provides good clips and positive feelings for a campaign that is in the thick of a battle with rival John Kerry and solidifies the president's hold on his core sup-

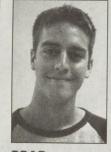

Letting only supporters into an event such as this is a disservice to the American public. The president needs to speak to people who agree with him and disagree with him alike.

Bush needs to give everyone a fair chance to speak. The president is accountable to the entire country; not just his staunch supporters. He should start acting like it.

inspired torrents of discussion feel his authorial presence. Concering its political content, less has been said about its craftsmanship and how Michael Moore uses filmmaking as an agent by which to express his politics. "Fahrenheit" is polarizing because of the visceral potency of Moore's style it's not just what he says that is compelling, but how he says it.

Because Moore is such a skilled filmtidy category of "documentary filmmaker." Those critics have replaced the term "documentary" with "polemic" when classifying "Fahrenheit," as if "documentary" could only refer to sedate, PBS programs rendering the migration patterns of ducks. But people should make no mistake about it: Moore, along with Errol Morris and other Avid-happy filmmakers of his ilk, is a documentary filmmaker.

Still, this faux-dichotomy of "documentary" versus "polemic" shows why some people love "Fahrenheit" and why others hate it. Many arguing the efficacy of Moore's method responds not to individual scenes - which are distilled and irrefutable — but to Moore's editing, which creates collision between scenes. Critics are troubled by the stitching in his quiltwork, by how he fits smaller truths

Dear President Holbrook: Another month has passed since I sent you an e-mail last spring seeking an answer to the

I informed you of this in early July, but this time received no response from Yonushonis, nor from you

As for the "Cats-On-Meth" research, lead researcher Lawrence Mathes has stated for the record that cats will again be used starting in year 4 or 5 of the project. This is

From 2000 to 2002, this research consumed the lives of 42 cats. Its purpose is to reveal why AIDS patients who use the illegal drug methamphetamine are less healthy than those who don't. The cats were infected by the researchers with the fatal feline immunodefi-ciency virus (FIV), injected with heavy doses of meth, and put through performance tests, such as walking planks that become progressively narrower. Throughout the research, the cats underwent spinal taps taken at the base of the skull, up to three per day. Then they were brain-probed and finally euthanized and dissected.

As you know, the public furor over this research reached a fever pitch just before you began your tenure with Ohio State, even reaching the pages of TIME magazine ("A win for the kitties") that summer when the lead researcher quit and the research was suspended.

It was resumed under your watch, however, and was made acceptable to the public by your announcement that a new lead researcher (Mathes) would be using tissue cultures instead of

No one was willing to take a shot: pump-fakes and passes for almost the entire 24-second shot clock before Allen Iverson would summon the courage to clang another shot off the rim. Iverson did better than Richard Jefferson who missed almost completely every time he threw one up. This makes me wonder how these players can even play in the

The NBA has created a type of basketball that involves more athletic skill than simple basketball skills. The NBA players have orchestrated their style of play to involve more fancy lay-ups and gravitydefying dunks and puts less emphasis on shooting the ball. OUAB: Less Kutcher, more Depp please

Twice a year, both in the fall and in the spring, a movie is shown on a big screen on the oval. In recent years they've shown "The Matrix," "Ocean's Eleven," and "The Sandlot", which are all good, entertaining movies. Last spring, however, The Butterfly Effect was played on the south oval. I hadn't actually seen it yet, so I decided to head over and watch it with a few friends. After some careful contemplation, we came to the conclusion that it was an absolutely atrocious film with few, if any, redeeming qualities.

I would like to propose some Johnny Depp flicks. He is an excellent actor and he has participated in some awesome movies. "Blow," 'Edward Scissorhands," and "What's Eating Gilbert Grape" are just a few of the sweet films that he has been in. I won't even mention the obvious box office smash from 2003. My point is: let's see more Johnny Depp and less Ashton Kutcher.

Young receivers ready for breakout season

By Edward Mauler Lantern sports writer

Like the geese in Ohio this summer, former Ohio State wideouts Michael Jenkins and Drew Carter will be settling in the south this fall. Jenkins will be catching Michael Vick's passes in Atlanta while Carter will be running routes for the NFC Champion Carolina Panthers.

OSU lost 14 players to the NFL draft in April — a record number of draftees from one school since the format 11 years ago. Atlanta selected Jenkins in the first round — Carolina drafted Carter in the fifth round despite a surgically-repaired knee. are going to be good players this Jenkins and Carter's absence will leave a void in the wide receiver nest at OSU, opening doors for current Carter's shadow may be a daunting Ohio Stadium.

First-year wide receivers coach Darrell Hazell said the loss of Jenkins and Carter was significant, and the time is now for the new group of wide-outs to show their stuff.

"Those guys are special guys, everything. They told us from the starters to the draft.

that step up. We have a very good group of young receivers right now. They are eager and anxious to get on Hazell said he looks forward to seeing Santonio Holmes shine this year. Holmes finished last season strong — catching a combined five touchdown passes during the Michigan game and the Fiesta Bowl against Kansas State.

'Santonio is obviously the leader draft was switched to a seven-round of the group — he has the most field experience," Hazell said. "But, Roy Hall, John Hollins, Devin Jordan, Tony Gonzalez and Bam (Childress) year, and I'm looking forward to it." Stepping out of Jenkins' and they're not NFL guys for no reason," very beginning to help out the he said. "But, we always have guys younger guys and never put yourself younger guys and never put yourself above anyone on the team.

Holmes said his personal goal for this year is to emerge as a team leader, and he humbly hummed the tune that so many other of Tressel's players have echoed before: personal achievements should not undermine team achievements.

I'm just ready for the season to get kicked off and whatever happens at the beginning or during the course of the season is going to take place," Holmes said. "The last year we had the out-right Big Ten championship was 1984. We have to make a statement this year going into the season. We are looking first and foremost to win the Big Ten championship, and my goal is to help be a leader on the

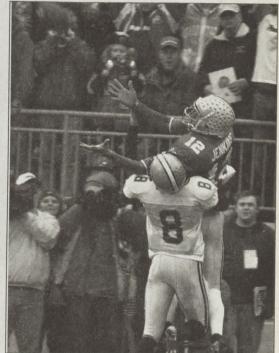

While the offense may be one of the biggest question marks for the 2004 version of the Buckeyes with the loss of two-year starting quarterback Craig Krenzel, tight end Ben Hartsock and three offensive linemen to the NFL draft — the defense also has holes to fill with the loss of several we're just looking for some guys to Defensive linemen Will Smith, Tim Anderson and Darrion Scott will all now play on Sundays this season. Defensive backs Chris Gamble and Will Allen along with linebacker Robert Reynolds will be joining them on NFL sidelines this fall.

The Buckeyes need to reload the silver-bullet defense that stymied Heisman hopefuls and dominated the vaunted Miami Hurricane offense during the 2002 National Championship game the past two

Defensive coordinator Mark Snyder said despite losing nearly half of the defense's starters from last year, the defense has the talent and the depth to fill the shoes of last year's vanished starters.

'All those guys are signed and making a lot of money right now," Snyder said about the former Buckeyes-turned-NFL players. "I think folks should know that those were some pretty good players, special players. We are working hard. We got a lot of guys reps in the spring. We should have depth this year;

Cover band plays with the mind

By Eric Atienza Lantern arts writer

Barrister Hall in the Brewery District was filled Friday with smooth soul grooves and old-time funk rhythms as Conspiracy performed its take on classic hits all night long. The 10-piece Columbus band barely fit on the stage, and the huge sound it created overflowed and spilled out into the night's air.

The band channeled a '60s and '70s Motown sound and covered hits by some of the biggest acts of the time. Songs ranged from "Brick House" by the Commodores to "Ain't No Sunshine When She's Gone" by Marvin Gaye.

The band's sets were played seamlessly— one song blended perfectly into the next. The three horns — trumpet, trombone and saxophone - played velvet jazz melodies over toe-tapping, headbobbing drums with enough skill to make even the most rhythmically challenged listener move to the music.

Two guitarists played a combination of staccato reggae major chords and lilting jazz riffs that perfectly complemented each other and the music.

Three singers — two women and one man - traded lead vocals and pulled threads of love, loss, sadness and ecstasy together to create a patchwork of emotion that covered and warmed the packed bar on the unexpectedly cool summer

The diversity in the vocals stretched from a deep voice mirroring Lauren Hill to a fullranged style echoing Whitney Houston. The male lead showed influences that included Isaac Hayes and Marvin Gaye. When combined with the two female leads came close to creating aural perfection.

Built into the classic songs, Conspiracy covered were sections that allowed jamming and individual solos worthy of any great jam or jazz band. Each horn solo stretched the bounds of what the instrument could play, and the sax player even switched instruments and blasted out a fantastic piece on his flute.

The guitar solos were reminis-cent of any solo Eric Clapton or B.B. King might play—simple notes strung together in ways that grabbed the ear, the mind and the heart and never let go.

One of the finest solos of the night came from the bass player, who was dressed in an ivory-colored suit complete with tie and pocket handkerchief. He played a style of funkdriven five-string slap bass that would make Flea of Red Hot Chili Peppers stand up and take notice.

Conspiracy brought elements from a time of music now long gone to the Brewery District. For one night, they revived a sound that many movements in music have borrowed from - but none has fully been able to replicate.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern will not publish illegal advertising or the advertising of illegal products or services. The Lantern reserves the right to reject advertising that denigrates individuals, groups or organizations based on race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, religion mental or physical capacity, veteran's status, age or sexual orientation. The Lantern Business Manager will refer questionable advertising to the Publications Committee of the School of Journalism and Communication. The committee will recommend a decision on whether to publish the advertising to the Director of the school.

- 1. Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.
- Copy must be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for special publications whose deadlines will be announced.
- 3. An advertisement is required to occupy at least as many inches in height as columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered a "full column" (21 inches) advertisement and charged accordingly.
- Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
- Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion
- A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
- No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than
- If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee.
- The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- 10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- 11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication.
- 12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise-
- 13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.
- 14. A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication.
- 15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.
