Center for black culture dedicated today

OSU center to be dedicated to honor Frank W. Hale Jr.

By Lynn Echelberger
Lantern campus reporter

A new cultural center at Ohio State offering services to black students and organizations will be dedicated in a ceremony today from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Ohio Union ballrooms.

The Frank W. Hale Jr. Black Cultural Center, located at 153 W. 12th Ave. in Bradford Commons, will offer tours of the center from 5 to 7 p.m. following the opening ceremony.

Guest speaker William Parker, vice chancellor for minority affairs at the University of Kentucky, will be talking about the positive aspects he feels will result for all students from the cultural center.

Parker said the mood of the country and the credibility of Ohio State in pursuing this endeavor will cause multicultural results.

"Academia must take responsibility for enhancing human relations," he said.

The cultural center will lead to greater appreciation of other cultures, as the cultural center at the University of Kentucky did, Parker said.

"There is a misconception that cultural centers are divisive. It is the part of the university and the center to teach that it won't be," he said.

Teresa Drummond, director of the cultural center, said a cultural programming advisory board of undergraduate students will assess the needs of their peers. The center will also offer cultural programs like concerts, films and lectures.

Drummond said students will become well-rounded, which is most important. They will be on the working end, not just watching, she said.

Lawrence K. Williamson Jr., assistant director of the center, said the center has been open since July and students have been using it already.

He said the center is student-oriented with a dual purpose to be a place for study as well as a place to meet socially.

The center will provide computers, tutoring, and office space for OSU minority organizations, and also have a library and art gallery.

The center is named for Frank W. Hale, a forerunner in making the center a reality beginning in the early 1970's. Hale retired last year as vice provost for minority affairs at Ohio State.

Three Columbus architectural and engineering firms, Spencer and Spencer Inc., Moody-Nolan Ltd. and Professional Design Forum, donated their services to renovate the space in Bradford Commons.

Center to suit blacks' needs

By Crystal Sadler
Lantern campus reporter

Frank W. Hale, Jr., the former vice provost for minority affairs at Ohio State, describes the Black Cultural Center, dedicated in his name, as a "family room for black students."

Teresa Drummond, director of the center, said the goals of the center, located at 153 W. 12th Ave., are to provide meaningful interaction among faculty, professional staff and students, to promote ethnic awareness for students, and offer educational and cultural learning outside of the typical classroom environment.

The staff members at the center also want to foster cultural identity and pride in black students and advance African American culture in the arts.

"We are hopeful that the university community in general will see the richness of African American culture," said Linda Jackson, acting vice provost for minority affairs.

The center will emphasize the importance of historical documentation.

"We will be a leader in addressing black student needs," Drummond said. "It is important we stay up on current events and that we document events."

The center has office space for 28 student organizations. The organizations chosen had to submit applications. Undergraduate student leaders from these organizations will form a cultural program advisory board which will assist staff with programming activities at the center.

"The students on the advisory board will be the ambassadors of the center," Drummond said.

There are two conference areas, three administrative offices, and a multipurpose room called the Hall of Fame Room, which holds about 100 people, Drummond said.

There is a lounge that has a wide screen television, a small kitchen with vending service, and a darkroom. The two art galleries at both entrances showcase nationally and internationally renowned artwork. The center also houses a computer lab, study areas and a library, Drummond said.

All of the rooms at the center are named after prominent figures in black history, he said.

Within this year, the center should have access to the entire building. Currently the Meals-on-Wheels program uses the lower level of the building to feed elderly people in the community, Drummond said.

It will take approximately three years to complete the renovations on the rest of the building. After the renovations the center will have a dining room and a larger kitchen.

The center will be open on weekdays from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. and on weekends from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Two in custody for Rax burglary

By Spencer Schein
Lantern city reporter

A gun-toting man and woman were captured after allegedly robbing a campus-area Rax restaurant Monday night.

Romana Elizabeth Lewis and David Frank Moliney, both of 925 W. Town St., tied up four Rax employees with duct tape and took an undisclosed amount of money from the restaurant at 1652 Neil Ave. around 10:30 p.m. Monday before trying to escape, according to an OSU Police Department report.

Columbus police charged both with one count of aggravated burglary.

Moliney, 48, and Lewis, 23, entered the restaurant before the 10 p.m. closing time, then went into the men's restroom before coming out wearing black ski masks, Britt Lewis, Rax district manager, said.

OSU Police Deputy Chief Richard P. Harp said the two suspects had .22- and .25-caliber automatics, but was unsure which suspect held which gun.

They then tied up all the employees, except the manager, and placed them in the furnace room, the OSU police report said.

Columbus Division of Police reports said the store manager was then forced to hand over the money. The manager then was bound and placed with the other employees, police said.

The suspects left the restaurant from the front entrance and were immediately surrounded by police officers, reports said.

OSU police were notified of an armed robbery in progress, and were met by several Columbus police officers already on the scene. Officers were positioned on both sides of the building, the OSU report said.

Romana Lewis pointed her gun at two OSU and two Columbus police officers, Harp said.

"Based on the information we have now, gunshots were fired, but we do not know by whom. None of (OSU's) officers were involved in the firing of handguns," Harp said.

"I'm not going to release any information on whether gunshots were fired," Detective Craig Rees of the Columbus Division of Police said.

Romana Lewis then ran past the building and turned left into a brick wall, according to a police report. When she turned around, she was approached by an OSU police officer who told her to drop the weapon, reports said. She was then placed under arrest.

Columbus police officers apprehended Moliney on the steps leading to Neil Hall, 1634 Neil Ave., and placed him under arrest.

"Somebody passing by saw the people with the masks on and ran to the Domino's next door and called 911," Britt Lewis said.

Sgt. John Warren of the Columbus police said both suspects were being held at the Franklin County Jail, and will probably be indicted within five days.

Fewer drivers, low pay incentives cause bus delays

Students inconvenienced by long waits

By Tomoko Kotaka
Lantern campus reporter

University Transportation officials say a shortage in bus drivers and low pay incentives are causing long delays in bus service.

Sean Riga, a sophomore from Columbus majoring in aeronautical engineering, said he rides the free campus buses almost every day, and because of the shortage of bus drivers he has been late for class two or three times this quarter.

Riga sometimes waits up to 45 minutes for a bus to take him to class, he said.

Timothy Tucker, director of University Transportation, said the shortage of bus drivers is not a new development.

Having people out of commission because of emergencies, illness or vacation is always a problem and the lack of replacements are very evident this quarter, Tucker said.

However, he said the main reason for a shortage of drivers is because of lack of university funding.

The university establishes the department's budget and the department must adjust and try to adapt, he said.

Because of a limited budget, Tucker is finding it more difficult to hire new drivers.

He said the pay rate is not as enticing as it had once been relative to other jobs and students often have problems scheduling classes around work commitments.

When a vacancy occurs on a staff of about 34 full-time employees and about 80 students, including drivers, mechanics and administrators, it is difficult to fill, Tucker said.

"It can take up to three or four months to fill a vacancy," Tucker said. "On the training alone, we like to take three months."

Students may find fewer buses during the morning hours, Tucker said. The early shifts are the most difficult to find a replacement because most students have their classes in the morning, he said.

"We tell our people it's going to be tough, and many go above and beyond the call of duty when possible," Tucker said.

No matter how thin the drivers must spread themselves, the highest priority for University Transportation is the Handivan and Handibus service, Tucker said.

They are the free services that transport temporarily or permanently impaired students to their classes.

"This is our highest priority because these people have little or no choice on how they're getting to their next class," Tucker said. "The worst that could happen to someone trying to get around on main campus is they would have to walk. But they could still get to class."

Rhonda Ross, a sophomore from Canton majoring in computer and information systems, rides the buses about three times a week.

The buses are doing an adequate service, she said, but almost every day that she does ride the bus, she has to wait about 20 to 25 minutes.

However, Carlos Rodriguez, a pharmacy student from New York City, said the buses are not providing an adequate service, and there is a definite need for more buses.

"I've been late for a few classes waiting for a bus," Rodriguez said.

Schools tests for radon gas

By Debra Baker
Lantern staff writer

Starting this week, the Columbus Health Department will begin testing radon levels in Columbus public schools.

The tests, which should begin Thursday, are estimated to cost over $30,000.

"There will probably be federal regulations (requiring some sort of radon testing) coming down the road," Mari-jean Porterfield, public information officer for the Columbus Public School System, said.

"We just want to get ahead of the game," she said.

Every classroom and office located below ground level will be tested by March 1990.

"We want to ensure the safety of the students," Porterfield said.

Radon is a colorless, odorless gas created naturally through the breakdown of uranium. When radon accumulates to unsafe levels in enclosed areas, health risks, such as lung cancer, could develop.

According to Environmental Protection Agency protocol, four picocuries per liter is the highest desired reading for radon.

On the average, individual homes in the Columbus area have readings of nine to 11 picocuries per liter.

"Franklin County is known to be a radon hot spot," Porterfield said.

Tony Lowe, public health sanitarian, said that a screening will be done at all of the schools with the use of an electret, a radon measurement device.

Lowe said the screening takes two days and can be measured almost immediately.

"If high levels of radon are detected in the initial screening, then we will go back and do follow-up testing," he said.

Ten pilot schools have been selected for the initial sampling. The schools vary in age, construction methods and construction materials, Porterfield said.

"They (the pilot sites) were chosen to check different types of facilities across the board," she said.

"If radon is detected, the Columbus Health Department will advise us on a case by case

High Street to receive sturdier trees

By Muchun Yin
Lantern city reporter

Many of the trees along North High Street will be replaced, due to and in spite of people's repeated assaults on them, officials said Tuesday.

Beginning in November, members of Ohio's Civilian Conservation Corps will replace 67 of the present trees with new ones, said Brad Shimp, executive director of the University Community Business Association.

The University Community Business Association consists of OSU and campus-area businesses.

Working with OSU horticulture and grounds maintenance workers, the association has decided on a sturdier, taller summit ash tree to replace most of the weaker, smaller little-leaf linden trees currently growing along High Street, Shimp said.

"The idea is to put in trees with sturdier trunks and with branches seven to eight feet high," said Ben Brace, who works with the association.

Shimp said they will tie two or three steel bars around each tree to give it more protection and strength.

These steel bars are the same kind used in reinforced concrete, he said.

He said OSU students and university-area residents damaged the trees that were first put in.

"As you walk down High Street, you can see the stumps. The trees got pretty chewed up," said Brace, a special assistant to the vice-president for business administration at OSU.

Trees will be replaced from Chittenden Avenue to Lane Avenue, Shimp said.

Shimp said the tree-replanting project will cost an estimated $12,200.

Part of the funding for the project will come from a city-funded neighborhood beautification program, he said.

Last week, Columbus City Council approved spending $100,000 for the beautification program, sponsored by the city's parks and recreation department.

Under the program, non-profit groups throughout the city can apply for grants of up to $4,000, said city legislative aide Dan Flahive.

The program requires the groups to spend the money on flowers, shrubs and other greenery to be planted on city property, he said.

The business association applied for a $4,000 grant and will receive the money in early November, Flahive said.

Donations will cover the rest of the project's cost, Shimp said, but the business associations will probably need to ask the city for more money next spring to cover any remaining cost.

Although each tree requires $100 in labor costs, the conservation corps decided to donate its services, Shimp said.

He said the steel bars for reinforcement will cost over $1,000.

Shimp said another $1,000 will pay for fabric that will allow water to reach the tree but prevent weeds from cropping up.

November's replanting will be the first of two phases, he said.

Next spring, the business association will add 47 more trees to High Street, Shimp said.

Brace said part of the original design of the sidewalk in the North High Street area included bulletin board kiosks, trash containers and trees.

"Traditionally, trees soften the urban landscape," he said.

Florida legislators convene session

Special meeting on abortion draws thousands of demonstrators

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — State lawmakers Tuesday convened a special session on abortion that drew thousands of chanting demonstrators and national attention though the Legislature's Democratic leaders predicted no new restrictions.

Republican Gov. Bob Martinez called the 3½-day session soon after the U.S. Supreme Court in July upheld a Missouri law giving the state more authority to regulate abortions.

Martinez's proposals include banning public financing and use of public resources for abortions, expanding regulations for abortion clinics, requiring viability tests on the fetuses of women who are at least 20 weeks pregnant and requiring physicians to tell women seeking abortions about the development of their fetuses.

Both the House and Senate met for about a half-hour Tuesday and referred numerous bills, many of them abortion-related, to committees, which began work.

The Senate Health and Rehabilitative Services Committee took up four bills Tuesday afternoon, including proposals for a seven-day waiting period before an abortion, a ban on use of public funds, employees or facilities for abortions and testing for the viability of a fetus.

The House HRS committee, meanwhile, heard testimony but planned no action until later in the week.

Despite widespread criticism by Democrats that the session will accomplish nothing and may result in unconstitutional law, Martinez repeated his view that the entire package should be considered.

"Having a hearing on each of these bills is important to the people of Florida," Martinez said. "All of these, I think, deserve a good debate."

As uniformed police closely guarded the doors to the Senate and House chambers, pro-choice and anti-abortion demonstrators marched around the Capitol and chanted, putting forth their messages on their chests, in their songs and in the air.

The pro-choice side sang "America the Beautiful" and had a banner-trailing airplane saying "Keep Abortion Legal."

Anti-abortion protesters wore a T-shirt saying, "Spoken As a Former Fetus ... I'm Glad I'm Here."

No violence or arrests were reported, although there was plenty of jeering by both sides.

Tallahassee police spokesman Dewey Riou estimated that 8,000 people attended the demonstrations.

Inside, Senate President Bob Crawford and House Speaker Tom Gustafson, both Democrats, promised that both houses would give Martinez's proposals due consideration.

There had been talk of ending the session a few minutes after it begins, but Crawford said that wouldn't happen.

"I think they'll all be considered," he said of the abortion proposals. "We will abide by the rules of the Senate and I will enforce those rules fairly."

"If the effort is simply to restrict the ability to choose an abortion, that is not a generally well-received idea," Gustafson said. "The issue is can you really do anything in this area without violating privacy over and over and over again?"

Martinez repeated Tuesday that he was not backing off but suggested that negotiations with legislators were focusing on the new clinic rules.

"Right now there is a lot of conversation about everything," the governor said. "Our staff is leading discussions. We've got a full package out there. We're pushing all pieces of legislation."

situation," she said. "They will be advising us on the steps necessary to correct any high levels."

Lowe said that there are two common ways to correct high levels of radon. The first is to pressurize the building using ventilation systems and, sealing cracks and holes in the basement.

If that does not solve the problem, a sub-slab ventilation system is built into the ground that sucks up radon and emits it through the roof, Lowe said.

This almost always lowers the radon level, he said.

In 1987, a sample of five percent of the buildings on the OSU campus were tested, Jim Stevens, assistant vice president of physical facilities, said.

Since there were not high levels of radon in this sample, there was no need to check all of the buildings, Stevens said.

"It's an expensive process," he said.

Radon is a condition in the soil, he said. "If you haven't got it in the soil, it is probably not there."

Jim Brown, an employee of Baker Concrete of Hamilton, uses a bullfloat trowel to smooth freshly poured concrete on the Arps Hall driveway Friday.

Two OSU students were assaulted as they were walking south on College Road between West 11th and West 12th Avenues near Steeb Hall at 3:08 a.m. Saturday, OSU police said.

The two students were walking with another student when they were approached from behind by three males. One of the suspects struck the first victim, knocking him to the ground, reports said.

Another suspect struck the second victim three times to the head, which caused him to fall to the ground, campus police said.

The third victim ran away after he was charged by the second suspect.

The second victim told police that the first suspect held him down on the ground, searched his clothes for valuables and grabbed his neck and wrist for jewelry. Nothing was taken, police said.

The first victim was semi-conscious after landing on the ground and was unsure if the suspects had gone through his pockets, police said.

After the assault, one of the victims ran to an OSU police car where the officer had just completed a traffic stop between College Road and North High Street. The officer immediately called the OSU medics upon seeing the victim's facial injuries, campus police said.

The first victim was treated for a swollen, lacerated lower lip, and the second was treated for abrasions to the left side of his head. Both declined further treatment.

The suspects involved in the assaults are described as two black males, one wearing a red Adidas jacket and the other wearing a white jacket, reports said.

The third individual with the suspects was not involved in the assaults.

A large thick crust pizza was stolen from an Adriatico's delivery truck parked on West 12th Avenue at Baker Hall sometime between 2:10 a.m. and 2:14 a.m. Saturday, campus police said.

A witness told police he saw four males take the pizza as the driver was making a delivery, reports said. He then saw them fleeing on foot west on West 12th Avenue.

The pizza, half mushroom and half pepperoni, was valued at $9.95.

Ohio State plans new curriculum model for 1990

By Elizabeth Illes
Lantern campus reporter

Ohio State's curriculum model for Autumn 1990 is stronger in some areas than the National Endowment for the Humanities proposed core curriculum.

Joan Leitzel, associate provost of the academic affairs administration, said Ohio State's model incorporated more points than the endowment.

The endowment, a federal agency that supports education, research, and public programs in the humanities, released a report entitled "50 Hours" urging colleges and universities to revise curricula so undergraduates get a thorough body of knowledge.

Ohio State has exceeded the endowment's recommendations in science, Leitzel said. According to University Communications the endowment calls for 12 hours in natural sciences; Ohio State will require 20 to 25.

Ohio State's new curriculum is similar to the endowment's proposal in mathematics and foreign languages, but other areas in Ohio State's curriculum are stronger, University Communications said.

John McGrath, media relations officer for the endowment said, "It's hard to say how Ohio State's curriculum compares with ours because I don't know OSU's curriculum."

McGrath explained "50 Hours" as a report on core curricula that offers examples and includes a hypothetical core curriculum some schools may follow. A number of schools were surveyed and studied and a report of the best curricula was established, McGrath said.

McGrath said, "50 Hours" is not intended to be a model that all schools should adopt, but one which encourages discussion of the requirements of schools and how the requirements should be presented.

"If OSU has put together a strong core, I'm sure it's a development that the endowment would encourage," McGrath said.

Leitzel said the endowment asked for Ohio State's model and it was sent to them. She said there will not be a re-evaluation of Ohio State's curriculum due to the proposal by the endowment.

"Our process is quite far along and NEH recommendations are included," Leitzel said.

EDITORIALS

Censorship:

Helms proposal obscene

What does your congressman consider obscene? Do you care? You might if you were an artist who wanted to receive funding from the National Endowment for the Arts. If Jesse Helms could have his way not only would you, as an artist, have to worry about getting money, you would have to assess the content of your work. Assess the content of art work. Some individuals have trouble assessing the content of their local newspaper; analyzing the content of anyone's art work is impossible. This brings immediately to mind two pertinent questions: What is art? What is obscene? Jesse Helms is sure he can determine for the rest of the country what art the government should fund based on what he considers to be art and to be obscene. This would mean Helms alone possesses the wisdom to answer both of these profound questions that have perplexed civilizations throughout the history of the world and still remain unanswered.

For starters, Helms wants the National Endowment of the Arts to disallow funding to artists whose work he deems offensive. He has been partially successful.

The Senate gave final approval Saturday to a watered-down version of Helms' proposal to give officials the power to deny grants to artists whose works in which they might find some obscenity.

The National Endowment for the Arts was created in 1965 to support artists. It was created to not only support the type of art that adorns corporate headquarters but to give artists the financial ability to experiment with new avenues of expression.

Among its many purposes, art serves as a thought-provoking reflection of ourselves, our society and/or our world.

Because the reality of our world is not always pleasing, art might not always please its viewers.

While we can understand that some may consider certain art offensive, we can't condone forcing a uniform view of art on others.

The beauty of a democracy is that everyone is free to choose what is right for them. This includes what art one chooses to view.

In other words, no one is forced to look, read, listen or watch anything they don't want to.

If an individual found Andres Serrano's "Piss Christ" offensive one need not look at it; the same goes for Robert Mapplethorpe's photography.

Whether or not people in the federal government found these endowment-funded art works acceptable is not in sync with the original purpose of the NEA.

It is, in our view, unfortunate that the government has considered stifling the arts, instead of supporting them.

This is nothing more than a veiled form of censorship.

Between this and the flag-burning bill working its way through Congress, 1989 may be remembered as the start of the long, slow death of an individual's right to free expression in the United States.

This is the real obscenity.

PHASE 2 OF THE FBI INTELLIGENCE EFFORT...

Survey poor indicator of knowledge

I had just poured my first cup of coffee and picked up the paper when the headline stopped me — "Colleges failing, study says."

It seems that the Gallup Organization has done a survey of college seniors to find out how much they know about history and literature. The test consisted of 87 questions and was conducted for the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The results were surprising — of the 696 students tested, a whopping 55 percent failed. Another 20 percent did no better than a D.

As someone who has a degree in English (with a minor in history), I'm concerned. But far more significant is the fact that I'm a teacher — someone who shares the responsibility for the educational development of some future college seniors. And whenever I see an article that suggests I'm not doing my part, I tend to get involved.

SO I WENT hunting and came up with a copy of the report, complete with the actual test and the percentages of correct answers given for each question. My initial reaction was that the sample was small — only 696 students took part. To put that figure into perspective, consider that more than 3,500 students graduated from OSU last spring. And that doesn't include all the students who graduated elsewhere. In that context, 700 seems, well, insignificant.

Another factor that could be mentioned is the lack of certain demographics. Where, exactly, did all those students come from? What was their class standing? The study seems to assume that the quality of education and level of student interest is the same everywhere, an assumption that I would question.

But after all, the test purports to cover basic knowledge in the humanities, something that all of us are supposed to learn in those dreaded BERs. So to determine if the test was valid, I decided to take it myself.

IT'S A DISMAL admission, but I didn't do as well as I would have expected. In fact, my overall score ended up in the low-B range. I didn't know, for example, that Elizabeth ruled England during the defeat of the Spanish Armada. Or that Tocqueville wrote "Democracy in America." Or that "Antigone" is a Greek play about a woman who defies a king in order to honor her dead brother. Or that the Normans beat the English at the Battle of Hastings in 1066.

Does this mean there is a problem with higher education? Perhaps. Students should know, for example, that the Civil War was fought during the last half of the 19th century. That Shakespeare wrote "The Tempest." That Columbus reached the New World in 1492. But if someone who has spent years studying the humanities can do little better than 80 percent, what should we expect of students as a whole?

The report calls for a greater concentration of study in the humanities. The endowment recommends a core curriculum of 75 hours in areas such as cultures and civilizations, math, social and natural sciences, and foreign languages. But is this the answer?

Not really. Consider for a minute that these requirements have been in place here at OSU for the last six years. In looking over my own transcript, I noticed that I far surpassed what the endowment recommends. Yet I only scored 80 percent on the test.

I'M NOT suggesting that students be exempted from taking courses in the humanities. But I am suggesting that maybe things aren't as bad as the endowment makes them out to be. For example, 72 percent knew that The Scarlet Letter was about an unfaithful woman who had to observe the effects of her sin. 77 percent knew that Michiavelli, Michelangelo, and Leonardo were important figures during the Renaissance. 80 percent were familiar with Brown v. Board of Education. 94 percent knew that Thomas Jefferson was the primary author of the Declaration of Independence.

In reality, it seems that the endowment has devised a great trivia pursuit quiz, given it to a few selected college seniors, and concluded that higher education is in bad shape. According to their figures, students who have concentrated in the humanities only had an average of 73 percent on the test. As a result, can this really be considered an accurate assessment of where we stand?

When I was an undergraduate, I took a history course with a professor who told me that history is more than recalling names, dates and places. It had more to do with why the events took place, what they meant to those involved, and how they have brought us to where we are. And in the years since, I have realized how correct he was.

IT JUST SEEMS to me that a college education is more than simply scoring well on a multiple-guess test. More than knowing a number of obscure dates and places without having an idea of what they mean in the grand scheme of events. More than being able to match authors with books that a student hasn't read. It seems to me that the true value of education has something to do with how a student can apply the knowledge acquired over a period of years, and how that knowledge can be used for the advancement of mankind.

Trivial Pursuit can be fun, but I don't want to rely on it as a yardstick for measuring the state of higher education.

Bureaucrats act faster for swindlers

The phone rang at 1 a.m. The call was from a friend with whom we had dinner only a few hours earlier. His Southern drawl was tense.

"It's gettin' worse and I think you better haul butt, right now," he said. "They're going to order the island evacuated at 6 a.m. and traffic's gonna be a mess."

A fast wake-up coffee, clothes stuffed into suitcases, a last look from the condo balcony at the Atlantic Ocean, and we were in the car on our way to and through Charleston, S.C.

It was an eerie sight on the highway. Normally, in the middle of the night, there would be only the distant taillights of a truck or two.

BUT NOW it was like pre-dawn rush hour on Chicago's expressways. And few drivers heeded the posted speed limit.

Mighty Hugo was coming and they were, as my friend put it, hauling butt. Some peeled off for motels and hotels or homes of relatives and friends. Most just kept going.

Six hours later we were safely having breakfast in the sandy hills and tall pine region of North Carolina.

The rest of that day, I had second thoughts and regrets about ducking out of Charleston. I had never seen a hurricane and it would have been exciting, as well as something to write about.

Then at midnight Hugo roared in. Television showed the quiet island I had been on. It took the most severe hit. You probably saw scenes of the big boats that were tossed ashore. I had been staying a five-minute walk from the marina.

THAT ENDED my second thoughts and regrets. I still haven't seen a hurricane and I don't intend to.

For me, it was just the inconvenience of juggling vacation plans. But for most of those who lived or worked on that island, it was a total wipeout. Homes gone. Jobs gone. The island is still there, but not much that was on it.

The pity is that it hit those islands and Charleston, a city of charm and friendly hospitality.

While I wish no harm, it would have been better if Hugo had stayed at sea a bit longer and whammed into Washington, D.C.

Had it done so, the lumbering, bumbling bureaucracy known as the Federal Emergency Management Agency might have been a bit more nimble in doing its job.

THIS IS the outfit that we pay to provide various forms of help to victims of disasters.

This is also the outfit that South Carolina's Sen. Ernest Hollings called a "bunch of bureaucratic jackasses."

And with good cause. Although Washington is only a few hundred miles from Charleston, it took the bureaucrats a week to find their way down there and open an office. It took them several more days to open a few more.

Charleston asked for portable power generators. The reason should have been obvious. Vast areas were without electricity. Any boob could see that by turning on their TV sets.

Generators? The bureaucrats thumbed through their handbooks. Ah-ha! One cannot just ask Washington for portable power generators and expect to get them. You need generators? You must first prepare and submit a written assessment of the need for the generators.

PEOPLE WERE holding candles while wading knee deep in mud in their living rooms — if they still had living rooms — but the bureaucrats wanted a written assessment of the situation.

Those who needed federal loans to repair or rebuild homes or businesses found themselves wrapped like Christmas packages in red tape.

You need a loan because the rain is coming through your roof? Or half of your restaurant has been blown into the next county? Let us thumb through the handbook. Ah, it says that you should come back in a couple of weeks and fill out some forms. And then, if you are lucky, in several weeks more you might get the loan. Until then, well, you might put a pot over your head when the rain comes through the roof.

I keep thinking of the thin waitress who told me, "If this place goes, I'm out of work and I have about a week's pay to live on." What form does she fill out? Or the gas station guy on the wrong side of the bridge that was blown down. He said, "If it hits here, I don't know what I'm going to do." It hit there. And now he knows what he's going to do. He's going to fill out forms and wait and wait.

WELL, it's probably Charleston's own fault. When they saw that Hugo was heading their way, the state should have immediately incorporated Charleston and the surrounding area as a savings and loan association.

Then it should have called Washington and said: "We are what is laughingly called a thrift institution and we have just squandered all of our assets on wine, women and song. How about bailing us out?"

They'd have had help fast. The people in Washington are better at bailing out swindlers than basements.

Mike Royko writes for the Chicago Tribune.

The Lantern is an independent, student-written laboratory newspaper published Monday through Friday during the school year, Monday and Thursday during summer quarter (except finals week, legal holidays and university vacations) by the OSU School of Journalism.

The university administration has no influence over content; editorials reflect a majority opinion of the Lantern editorial staff. Viewpoints expressed in columns, cartoons and letters do not necessarily reflect those of the staff.

The newsroom is in the Journalism Building 271, 242 W. 18th Ave., Columbus, 43210. The business office, room 281, is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Noriega will go

On Oct. 6, Stephen Ohlemacher wrote an article about the recent insurrection against Manuel Noriega in Panama. As a concerned Panamanian I found this article to be offensive and consider it to be a disgrace to journalism; such an article should have only appeared on a tabloid like the National Enquirer.

The violence and violation of human rights in Panama continues, and this attempt to overthrow Noriega tells us that there are honest individuals in the Panamanian military. I am confident that attempts will continue until the dictator is gone. I hope these words get to the brave ones who stormed Noriega's headquarters and to all others who can do something to change our future.

As we know, Noriega's government is extremely incompetent, and his actions are jeopardizing the Torrijos-Carter treaty (giving control of the canal to Panama Dec. 31, 1999). He has betrayed the members of his political party as well as the rest of the people. He cares not about Panama and should step down and return power to the people.

What are we to do against a militarily strong government? The only solution that will work is to divide and conquer. Noriega has too much military power for an individual (controlling the National Guard, Army, Navy and Air Force). Military power in Panama should be divided to protect us against a government like ours and any future attempts at totalitarianism.

Noriega has a lot at stake (drugs, trade, power) by leaving the country, so he will not leave peacefully. His only way out will be by overthrowing him. I urge the rest of the military to consider the damage he is doing to our economy and the attacks he is waging against our own people. The intelligent minds in our own military should not be dominated by an illiterate despot like Noriega. Noriega does not have many loyalists as demonstrated by the last election (His candidate lost by 75 percent of the votes). The few soldiers who support him will stop following his orders if there is a strong insurrection against the dictator.

So let us liberate ourselves by not supporting Noriega. Rebel, then he will fall. Noriega's regime cannot do anything against the people if everyone works together. Let us remember that the people united will never be defeated. The situation in Panama will not change until the dictator is gone.

Hurricane reflected

I would like to publicly applaud Sonia Kelly's editorial entitled "Hugo Leaves Islander in a Storm," printed in your newspaper Sept. 25. Each sentence brought back memories of hurricane Gilbert which wreaked havoc in Jamaica just over a year ago. I survived Gilbert!

In a disaster of this nature, which affects an entire island, lack of communication between loved ones on the island or overseas can cause a great deal of anxious moments. Hence, the role of the media in transmitting information about the catastrophe is important to the psychological well-being of anxious relatives who solely depend on the bearers of news.

Almost everyone in Jamaica was affected by Hurricane Gilbert. From my experience, the first week of the hurricane found people trying to gather or protect what was left of their earthly possessions as well as consuming and sharing perishable food. The national focus was on restoring communication links, water and electricity, as well as providing shelter and food for the homeless. Groups islandwide, such as the Disaster Preparedness Committees, The Salvation Army, The Red Cross, Churches, and others efficiently distributed aid to the afflicted.

As was the case in the news coverage of Hurricane Hugo, the relatives of the victims of Hurricane Gilbert overseas glued themselves to their television sets in an effort to get as much news as possible about the situation at home. Sensational news reigned and the focus was on looting and scenes of the devastated ghetto areas which immediately gave people overseas the impression that the island was completely flattened. One of the persons interviewed had his front teeth missing (as if the hurricane took that, too) with such a deep dialect that his utterances were totally decipherable to the international community. How was this meant to help or even give people a glimpse of what had truly happened? The news terrified Jamaicans overseas who, in an effort to help, panicked, and packed barrels and boxes of both perishable and non-perishable food-stuff and shipped them off immediately to relatives and friends. Because of the closure of the airports and seaports, the backlog of cargo caused the perishable items to degenerate hence causing additional problems at the ports. So, my advice to the news media is to be helpful rather than sensational.

By week three, the full impact of the hurricane began to haunt the minds of the victims. No electricity, no water, no telephones; blocked roads, roofless houses, limited food and clothing; no contact with relatives overseas. This is when the real grief begins. To help people get back on their feet there must be a continuous chain of aid until normalcy is returned. This is the time aid is most needed.

This brings me to another point. Recently, the OSU Caribbean Association was accused for not being the FIRST organization to PUBLICLY declare that they were involved in hurricane relief to help our brothers and sisters. On behalf of the association I would only like to say, we are more concerned with DEEDS than we are with WORDS. We didn't see the need for an emergency meeting to plan contingency measures since we were assured that the Salvation Army, Red Cross and other relief agencies were well-equipped to deal with disasters, especially in the first few days.

Presently, with the help of Ms. Alice Grider, Associate Director of Residence Life, and with the co-operation of the hall directors, the OSU Caribbean Association has placed boxes at hall desks with accompanying fliers on campus to advertise our CLOTHING DRIVE, October 9-13, 1989. We kindly request donations of items of clothing, towels, bed linen, soap, flashlights and non-perishable foods as well as other useful articles. These will be collected from Residence Halls daily. This will be an on-going project. Our next area of focus will be departments. So far, the Sociology Department has made quite a substantial contribution and we hope other departments will follow suit. The donations will be given to the Salvation Army for distribution in the Caribbean islands affected by Hurricane Hugo. If any group or person(s) would like to assist or contact us, we meet in the Board Room, Ohio Union (third floor), 5-7 p.m. on Fridays, or the following persons can be contacted: Nadine Scott (Jones Tower), Elvis Fraser (Sociology Dept.) and Harvey Charles (292-9191).

We would like to state clearly that although this venture is targeted at the Caribbean islands affected by the hurricane, we do sympathize and grieve deeply with the other victims in Charleston and surrounding areas. We are also cognisant of the fact that Americans must reach out and help their fellow citizens first, but please don't let this overshadow the needs of the Caribbean islands. In Jamaica we would say, "Parson christen him pickney first." (It is natural to take care of your own first before reaching out to others.) So, REACH OUT TO CARIBBEAN ISLANDS AFFECTED BY HURRICANE HUGO.

Nadine A.T. Scott
President
OSU Caribbean Association.

Policy unfair

I am writing in response to the unfair and ludicrous policies of the Ohio State University Athletic Ticket office. I was shocked to find out, when I picked up my Oct. 4 issue of the Lantern, that I could no longer get basketball tickets.

I am not an apathetic student here at Ohio State. I am not involved with any of the student government organizations, etc. However, I do keep up with current affairs. Although I peruse the Lantern every morning, I seem to have overlooked the article which mentioned the upcoming ticket sale, if you can call it that.

Other organizations and their respective offices seem to place their notices of important and dated material in a much more conspicuous location. Perhaps I lost it somewhere amidst the half-page beer advertisements or around the Dial-a-Porn telephone numbers. Whatever the case, this announcement evaded my attention.

I also find a wide variety of junk from the university in my mailbox, most of which might serve a better purpose on the bottom of a bird cage. However, I found no notice of the basketball ticket sale. Would that have been so difficult? Were you afraid of causing a mad rush at the ticket office? It sounds as if that happens anyway. Why not remind the campus about a rather confusing issue?

I would like to direct the following comments to Paul Krebs, Athletic Ticket Director at Ohio State. Mr. Krebs, you seem to overlook the point that without students the House of Noise would more likely be the House of Yawns.

There will be 9,450 seats occupied by non-students. It is not the die-hard Ohio State basketball fans whom I am about to refer to. I think that any athletic team is more inspired and motivated by a packed crowd of rowdy, screaming, cheering, enthusiastic students donning scarlet and gray from head to toe, than a team who sees just a crowd of casual onlookers. I realize that the former attributes are not prerequisites for being a fan, but which kind is more intimidating to the visiting team while at the same time supporting the Buckeyes.

Also, Mr. Krebs, you stated that no other school sets aside all of the seats around the court for students. To be direct, so what? If all the other schools decide not to have a basketball team, would we all be confined to (forgive me for uttering these two words in the same sentence) studying on a Saturday night?

I came to Ohio State because I was under the impression that it was special. Different. A cut above the others. Wouldn't it just be a gut-wrenching tragedy if Ohio State was the only school to provide its students with ample seating for basketball games?

Some schools cannot give away tickets to their sporting events. Ohio State has an impressive number of supporters, and they are thanked by having one fourth of the seats discretely made available to them.

We all pay a ridiculous amount of money to attend Ohio State. Maybe that is why we expect to be able to enjoy some of its benefits. I and other tuition-paying students feel snubbed by the procedures and policies of you and your office. I do not feel that the Ohio State staff should cater to our every whim and desire. However, without us, there would be no university. Do you realize how many avid fans you are turning away from Ohio State sports? If you are satisfied by the meager 3,750 seats you so graciously make available to students, you stand alone.

You are conveying a very negative message to current and prospective students, Mr. Krebs. Try to appreciate the student fans and laud them. If you continue to show them you do not care whether or not they support their school, you may one day find that there will be no more fans. Perhaps then your advice will not be simply to get to the ticket office earlier.

Judging from your indifferent attitude, Mr. Krebs, you already have your tickets.

Nice move

Hearing for the first time from anyone the other day that WOSR would be moved from the Drake Union to the Ohio Union took me aback I must say. As a broadcast journalism student and a sincere member of Radio-Television News Directors Association, I strive for the most ethical things in the field of broadcast journalism. I guess when I thought that the largest university in the United States would have its own radio station where students could get experience before going out into the real world, I guess I was living in a dream world. It's nice to see WOSR moving somewhere even if they're not going to move the J-school. I guess the people who play their records will go on doing so even if nobody is listening to them (probably because nobody can hear them) doesn't really mean a whole lot in the great scheme of things. President Jennings said the other night on Channel 4 that control Of WOSU was in the hands of the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences and that Ohio State would be competitive in the years to come. Well what about us? What about being competitive right now?

Department of University Recreation & Intramural Sports

September Recreation Employees of the Month

Every month the Department of University Recreation and Intramural Sports recognizes one employee in each of its six recreation areas who demonstrates exemplary work qualities and who has made an extra effort to enhance the services and programs offered to the OSU community. We appreciate the hard work of the following individuals:

Area of Employment
Jesse Owens Recreation Centers
Aquatics
PLEP
FRIP Swim
Conditioning
Larkins Hall

Employee
Suzanne McWade
Margaret Violette
Susan Wisvari
Bruce Hoyt
Bryan Elliott
Karen Doerflein

Mouthguards Recommended

The Department of University Recreation and Intramural Sports, in conjunction with the OSU College of Dentistry, is recommending that all individuals participating in basketball, volleyball, soccer, flag football, wallyball, wrestling, innertube water polo, and softball strongly consider purchasing and wearing a mouthguard. It has been found that mouthguards are an effective preventive measure for concussions and soft and hard tissue damage.

The College of Dentistry is offering customized mouthguard fabrication for anyone participating in intramural activities. The cost is minimal - only $15.00 to protect your teeth, jaws, and smile. The fitting requires two appointments, and walk-ins are welcome. For an appointment, call the College of Dentistry at 292-2622 or check at the Registration Desk. Hours are Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday 9:00-11:30 a.m., 1:30-4:00 p.m. and Wednesday 1:30-4:00p.m., 5:30-8:00p.m.

Sport Club Connection: Buckeye Masters Swim Club

MISS YOUR OLD SWIM CLUB? Why not join BUCKEYE MASTERS? If you are at least 19 years old and affiliated with OSU (student, faculty, or staff), then you can become a part of our swim club. We offer practices for all ability levels, and have a full meet schedule planned if you enjoy competition. Even if you only want to become more fit, give us a try!

Autumn practice schedule:

Monday	8:00 p.m. - 9:30 p.m.	50 m. Pool
Wednesday	6:30 p.m. - 8:00 p.m.	Class Pool
Saturday	10:00 a.m. - 12:00 noon	50 m. Pool

For more information, see the Masters bulletin board inside the 50 m. Pool, or call Andy Cinoman (486-7626) or Laura Chase (457-0437).

Sport Club Connection: Women's Soccer Club

The Women's Soccer Club recently traveled to Ohio University where they ended the match with a 2-2 tie against the Bobcats. The two Buckeye goals were scored by sophomore Megan Castle and freshman Julie McClure. Nan LaDow, goalie for the club, displayed excellent goalkeeping skills throughout the contest.

Women's Swimming and Diving Meet

The Varsity Pool is the place to be on Thursday, October 12 for some exciting swim action. Spectators should be poolside by 6:00 p.m. to catch the first event. All women interested in participating need to register their teams PRIOR TO THE MEET in Room 106 Larkins. Unattached individuals may register at the meet. Each participant is limited to three events plus diving. Varsity swimmers are ineligible.

The following is a list of the evening's events:

100 yd. Medley Relay
50 yd. Backstroke
50 yd. Freestyle
50 yd. Butterfly
200 yd. Freestyle
100 yd. T-shirt Relay
100 yd. Individual Medley
50 yd. Breaststroke
100 yd. Freestyle Relay
Diving

For more information, pick up a flyer in Room 106 or call 292-7671 and ask for Danell Haines.

Sports Trivia Tryouts

It is not too late to try out for the OHIO STATE SPORTS TRIVIA BOWL TEAM. Entries are being taken in Room 106 Larkins Hall until tomorrow, Thursday, October 12. All entrants must be fulltime undergraduate students. A 75-question written test will be administered on Saturday, October 14 at 10:00 a.m. in Room 120 Larkins to narrow the field to the top eight contestants. Round-robin play at a later date will determine a three-person team plus an alternate. Team members will have the opportunity to represent Ohio State at the ESPN Sports Trivia Bowl. OSU IS THE DEFENDING ESPN SPORTS TRIVIA NATIONAL CHAMPION! If you think you can help us retain our title, sign up today!

Turkey Run!

All students interested in participating in the 1989 Turkey Run, a 1.65 mile cross country running event, need to register either prior to the race in Room 106 Larkins Hall or at the meet. The race will take place rain or shine on October 17. The starting time is 5:45p.m. All participants should meet outside the Exhibition Gym(Room 100) in Larkins so that you can be checked in with your current OSU Student ID Card. The first two male students and the first two female students to finish in the race will receive turkeys. All other finishers will have the opportunity to participate in a blind drawing for two more turkeys. The department urges all participants to train and to be in good physical condition for this event. Flyers with race details and a course map are available in Room 106 Larkins Hall. For more information, contact Danell Haines at 292-7671.

Sports Club Connection: Men's Rugby

The Men's Rugby Club has started off the season with two big wins. The club defeated Miami University 26-0 and the University of Cincinnati 31-0 in their first two matches of the season. If you are interested in playing rugby, or obtaining a schedule of the club's matches, contact the club president, Kent Garbee, at 291-0623 for more information.

Flag Football Officials Still Needed

Looking for a parttime job that's fun? You can still officiate flag football! If you are interested, call 292-7671 or stop by 106 Larkins Hall and speak with Max Floyd or Jeff Corley.

OSU computer animation on exhibit

By Aria Ala-U-Dini
Lantern arts reporter

Ohio State has pioneered computer generated animation since its inception nearly 25 years ago, but not many students are familiar with the art. Now students can get a glimpse of the art form at the university's first exhibit of computer art, being held at Hopkins Hall Gallery through October 20.

The students from the Department of Art Education's Advanced Computing Center for the Arts and Design (ACCAD) and the department's Amiga Labs are exhibiting some of their computer graphics and animation works. Currently there are about 30 graduate students enrolled in the computer generated graphics program.

According to the show's coordinator, Marsha McDevitt-Stredney, the exhibit is a collection of some of the best examples of computer generated graphics and animation.

"The works are a combination of images and animation from artists working with commercial software," she said.

"We're using computers as tools much like other artists use their medium as a tool," she said.

Much of the software the students are using was created at Ohio State, McDevitt-Stredney said.

According to one of the artists, computer generated graphics presents a new set of challenges because it is a three-dimensional drawing.

"When you're working with computer graphics, you don't just draw an image, you have to create it," Wilson Burrows, a graduate of the Art Education program said.

Burrows said it took him nearly one year to create a three-and-one-half minute computer generated animation piece he has on exhibit at the art show.

McDevitt-Stredney said the students are trying to take advantage of the quality that computer generated graphics provides while expressing their own ideas.

Henry Preston, a graduate student from Columbus said one reason he likes computer animation is that it gives the artist total creative freedom.

"The computer let's me do everything myself," he said.

Preston said working on traditional hand-drawn animation projects require teams of artists, but computer animation allows one artist to do the entire drawing.

"With the computer, you can even create the sounds yourself. It's a very powerful tool and you're going to see much more of it with people gaining more access to more powerful computers," Preston said.

Computer generated animation relies on the imperfections of the eye. Because eyes are unable to distinguish between images on a screen as they flash past it 30 times per second, all the pictures blend together and create a blur which is seen as a moving picture.

Charles Csuri, director of the Advanced Computing Center for the Arts and Design said he believes it is about time for Ohio State to put on a computer graphics art exhibit, since the field has such a wide variety of uses.

"I'd like to see more students become aware of what we're doing and see more participation in computer graphics as another way for creative expression," he said.

During a computer graphics competition held in Austria this summer, out of 1,100 entries Ohio State faculty and students were able to place three entries in the top six places.

"It seems to me that says something about what's here at Ohio State," Csuri said.

Author wanders 'Big Ten Country'

The ultimate Big Ten football fan, Bob Wood, has published his memoirs in a book titled "Big Ten Country."

Wood spent 10 weekends in 1988 exploring Big Ten campuses, stadiums, band practice sessions, bars, tailgate parties and restaurants. He found the best in each of these categories at the campuses he visited.

"Big Ten Country" offers a good overview of some of the oldest traditions and most exciting places to be at the Ohio State University. The writing style is reminiscent of a conversation between football fans as they watch a game together.

Wood's method of research for the book gave him first-hand experience with fans, players and officials at the colleges he visited. This allows readers that have never traveled to an away football game a chance to enjoy some of the game-day festivities at other colleges.

Some of the descriptions Wood used would be more representative of the tradition surrounding the game if the profanity would not have been included.

COVER TO COVER

Wood's descriptions of some of the people involved in the activities is also less than tasteful.

He was in Columbus for the Michigan at Ohio State game. He gives details of the days leading up to the game and some of the plays that made that meeting of the Big Ten's two biggest rivals a great one.

Wood arrived in Columbus on Wednesday before the game and left on Sunday. He also spent five days at the other campuses he visited. This gave him a chance to participate in some of the richest traditions at colleges across the country.

He writes of OSU traditions such as the Golden Pants Award and Senior Tackle Night. He also visited Buckeye Grove near the stadium.

Ohio Stadium was named the "Best Stadium in Big Ten Country" by Wood.

"Ohio Stadium drips character. Its architecture conjures up images of Rome and the gladiatorial times," Wood said.

Wood was also impressed with the Ohio State Marching Band. Script Ohio was judged to be the best of the football Saturday traditions.

A section of the chapter on Ohio State is dedicated to the dotting of the "i" and the sousaphone player who had earned the honor for that day.

Brutus Buckeye did not impress Wood.

"Brutus Buckeye and his stupid-looking nut-shaped head just kicked around," Wood said.

Wood began game day at 6:30 a.m. as he headed for High Street.

"High Street is a zoo! The loudest, craziest, wildest stretch of college taps in the Big Ten. Maybe the world," Wood said.

The Buckeye fans at Papa Joe's that morning supported Wood's thoughts on High Street. Kegs and Eggs was as wild as ever with a constant underroar of "Go Bucks!"

After leaving Papa Joe's, Wood made his way to the Varsity Club, the Holiday Inn and band practice at St. John's arena. He evaluates each of the stops in the book.

Holiday Inn was voted the best place for breakfast. The Varsity Club was voted best bar.

Wood gives highlights of the game and the come-back second quarter that Ohio State had. After the game he went to the Bo Schembechler press conference.

Schembechler reminisced about past Ohio State and Michigan meetings and how the game strategies have changed over the years.

In spite of the rough writing style the book is interesting to read and offers a good comparison of the colleges involved in the Big Ten.

Packers find success O'Leary pacing OSU volleyball team while Browns falter

BEREA (AP) — The Cleveland Browns have been watching with envy as the Green Bay Packers' passing game has come together during the past month.

The Browns' offensive plan was installed when Green Bay head coach Lindy Infante was their offensive coordinator. It has been tweaked a bit in the two years since Infante left, but the essence of Infante's passing attack remains in Cleveland's playbook.

"Our scheme is basically the same one Green Bay is using," Cleveland coach Bud Carson said. "I try to keep in touch with what's happening up there, and they're doing a heck of a job with it."

In three of his last four games, Green Bay's Don Majkowski has thrown for more than 300 yards. On Sunday, he passed for 313 yards and had the first four-touchdown passing game of his career. He completed passes to seven different receivers in the game, a trademark of Infante's plan.

Majkowski's 11 touchdown passes tie him for the NFL lead.

Cleveland's Bernie Kosar has thrown six touchdown passes and is averaging just over 200 yards a game — under 200, if you subtract his sacks.

Carson, though, doesn't blame Kosar, his receivers or even the offensive plan for the Browns' inability to score.

Until he threw two interceptions in Sunday's 13-10 loss in Houston, Kosar was the AFC's top-rated quarterback. He has completed 62 percent of his passes, and he has twice as many touchdown passes (six) as interceptions (three).

"We've got all the right numbers, the completion numbers and so forth," Carson said. "This passing scheme is a great passing scheme. But we need to develop the running part of it.

"I've said all year, what this scheme needs is, we have to have a little bit of backbone, a little bit of toughness running the football. I see that Cincinnati is a very dangerous running football team, and that more than anything is why Boomer Esiason is so successful. Look at the Los Angeles Rams. They're a two-dimensional team."

"That doesn't mean Carson expects Kosar to start handing off the ball on every play. Getting conservative would be a mistake, Carson said.

"I don't think you can win in this league just running the ball," he said. "But I think you have to be able to do it.

"We don't have (Dallas') Herschel Walker running through there at 220 pounds, breaking a lot of tackles. We cannot be the same type football team Cincinnati is, because we don't have the same type people."

Walk-on tryout time announced

The OSU men's basketball team will hold walk-on tryouts Monday, Oct. 16, 7-10 p.m. at St. John Arena.

Tryouts may be continued to Tuesday night if deemed necessary on Monday.

Interested students must come prepared to play on Monday night and also visit the men's basketball office (Room 213, St. John Arena) to fill out a medical form and a basic information form. The forms must be completed before the tryout.

The basketball office is open 9 a.m.-5 p.m. daily.

This week OSU volleyball player Holly O'Leary is the Lantern's OSU Athlete of the Week. O'Leary was a second team All-Big Ten player for the Buckeyes last season.

By Bryan Davis
Lantern sports reporter

To be a good volleyball player, you must know the fundamentals of the game. To be a great volleyball player, you must master them. Holly O'Leary is a great volleyball player.

After three years on the OSU women's volleyball team, O'Leary, a junior from Cincinnati, has shown why she is one of the main reasons that the Buckeyes have become a threat to win the Big Ten crown this season.

O'Leary leads the Lady Buckeyes with 309 kills and is 4th on the team with 189 digs. With a combined 35 kills against Big Ten rivals Michigan and Michigan State last weekend, O'Leary raised her kill-per-game average to 4.72, second in the Big Ten.

Her 950 career kills ranks her third on the all-time list for Ohio State and, with 16 matches left in the season, she has a good chance of moving into second.

Head Volleyball Coach Jim Stone has been impressed with O'Leary's performance since she began playing here in 1988.

"She doesn't have any real weaknesses," Stone said. "She hits well, blocks well, serves well and does a really good job all the way around."

O'Leary, who turns 20 on Oct. 16, graduated from Finneytown High School in Cincinnati where she was a 1987 All-Ohio selection and AA Player of the Year in volleyball. She attributes much of her success to her high school coaching.

"I had a really good coach in high school who really knew a lot about volleyball and was able to teach me the fundamentals," O'Leary said. "We were able to win our league championship three years in a row."

O'Leary said she started playing

OSU ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

volleyball in the 6th grade for her church. She also played in a CYO league and in junior high school.

"I played for a lot of years before coming here which helped me develop a lot," she said.

In addition to volleyball, O'Leary also competed in basketball and track where she won all-league honors.

O'Leary said she was recruited by a number of colleges including Indiana, Tennessee, Cincinnati, Miami of Ohio and Ohio State. However, she reduced her final two choices to Ohio State and Tennessee.

"Ohio State had more to offer me than Tennessee," O'Leary said. "I like the Ohio State (volleyball) philosophy and coaching. Also, I enjoy the chance to compete in the Big Ten."

Volleyball was not the only deciding factor in her choice of schools.

O'Leary, who is a business major and wants to enter human resources, marketing or sports management, said Ohio State's educational offerings also played a major role in her decision to attend here.

O'Leary said she feels there is a big difference between volleyball in high school and at the college level, she was able to adjust well to Coach Stone's philosophy.

"I got used to it quickly," she said. "Everyone on the team was working toward one goal and there was a lot of competition from other players which forced me to work harder."

"It took a while to get used to the fast pace of the game here," O'Leary said. "In high school, it was much slower and there were less complicated offenses."

O'Leary added that in high school, there were not many blockers to contend with because the teams were physically smaller. However, in college, the players are taller and blocking is a major part of the game.

Assistant Coach Steve Pickering recruited O'Leary when he was a coach at Tennessee before coming

John Garwig/the Lantern

OSU volleyball player Holly O'Leary to Ohio State in 1987. He feels O'Leary's strength is her all-around play both on offense and defense.

"Holly has really developed her game so that she has more than just one aspect to it," Pickering said. "She has always been able to hit the ball hard but now she has matured to the point where she knows when and when not to go for kills."

Stone said he believes her tremendous work ethic has made the player she is today.

"When she first arrived here, she was somebody who had a lot of general athletic talent," Stone said. "The fact that she has developed her skills to the level she has now is just a tribute to dedication and hard work."

O'Leary said she has been able to improve on all aspects of the game due to good coaching by Stone, Pickering and graduate assistant coach Patty Lopez.

"We concentrate on defense and ball control heavily in practice," O'Leary said. "If you don't have ball control, you can't really play the game effectively."

As a freshman in 1988, O'Leary played in all but one match and ended with 219 kills. Her sophomore year, she led the team with 422 kills and was fourth in digs with 285.

O'Leary was named to the second team All-Big Ten team after last season.

She said she is looking forward to the match on Friday, Oct. 13 when the Lady Buckeyes host the Minnesota Gophers at St. John Arena. The winner of the match will be in first place in the Big Ten.

Isaman capitalizes in return to football

OSU co-captain leading team after year off

By Brent LaLonde
Lantern sports reporter

By his own admission, OSU senior co-captain Derek Isaman is not very fast. And he is not very strong. And he is not very big.

Isaman, who is listed as being 6-foot-3 and 220 pounds in the OSU football media guide, is closer to 6-foot-1 and 205 pounds. And the fastest he has ever ran in the 40-yard dash is 4.8.

But Isaman, an inside linebacker from Fremont, had a team-high 17 tackles Saturday in the Buckeyes' 34-14 loss to Illinois and leads Ohio State with 39 tackles through four games.

"I am undersized," Isaman said. "But I am just looking for someone to hit."

Although he is small by major college football standards, Isaman has something that most football players don't — an uncanny ability to be around the football on almost every play. Ex-OSU linebacker Chris Spielman had the ability, but very few others do.

"He is a good athlete with good football intelligence," OSU linebackers coach Gary Blackney said.

OSU head coach John Cooper, who is in his 28th season of coaching, thinks it is just a matter of toughness.

"Derek is a real tough football player," Cooper said. "I have never been around anybody tougher."

After taking last year off in an attempt to make the U.S. Olympic boxing team, Isaman switched from an outside linebacker to an inside linebacker during spring drills. The year of absence has not had an affect on Isaman's play.

"Derek is very versatile and adapts well," Blackney said. "(The layoff) may have affected Derek during spring drills and the pre-season, but it hasn't appeared to affect him during the season."

Isaman began boxing when he was eight years old. His father Bill, a former amateur boxer, served as his coach.

In 1984 at the National Gold Gloves in St. Louis, Isaman lost by decision to Mike Tyson, who was disposing of amateur heavyweight opponents by knockout at the same rate he now disposes of professional heavyweights.

"I was the only one to go three rounds with him," Isaman said. "He was knocking everybody out."

As fresh as the fight against Tyson is imbedded Isaman's mind, the one fight he cannot forget is the split-decision loss to Michael Bent in the semi-finals of the U.S. Olympic Trials.

To this day, Isaman believes he won the fight, which would have placed him in the heavyweight finals against Ray Mercer.

Mercer went on to capture the gold medal in the Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

"I lost the decision 4-1," he said. "But two of the judges called it a draw and there can't be a draw in amateur boxing, so they gave the fight to Bent on criteria."

"They said he was more aggressive, but I took the fight to him all three rounds."

But in the end, Isaman does not regret taking the year away from football to pursue the Olympic dream.

"I didn't accomplish my ultimate goal," Isaman said. "But I accomplished what I wanted to do."

One thing that competing in boxing has accomplished for Isaman is that it has made him a better football player.

"The biggest thing is being able to accept the pain of the sport,"

Richard Stelts/the Lantern

OSU linebacker Derek Isaman (10), pictured behind linebacker Alonzo Spellman, leads the Buckeyes in tackles this year.

Bill Isaman said. "On the football field all the hitting hurts, but Derek can accept that and he puts the objective over the personal pain."

Isaman has been playing through a myriad of injuries this season, including an ankle sprain, thigh bruise, and shoulder and neck injuries.

But he doesn't miss any practices or games due to the injuries.

"He never complains or takes practices off," Blackney said. "But by watching the way he throws his body around, it is not surprising that he has those injuries."

Isaman's treatment of his injuries is basic.

"I take a lot of aspirin," he said.

Isaman plans to pursue a professional boxing career after the football season, but if he continues to play the way he has been this year he might get an opportunity to play in the National Football League.

Sanchez only returning starter for OSU women

By Jack Renz
Lantern sports reporter

Nancy Darsch File photo

After coming off a highly successful 1988-89 season as Big Ten co-champions, the OSU womens' basketball team must now adjust to having six new faces added to their roster.

The six new faces joining the team include sophomore Erica Floyd and freshmen Audrey Burcy, Nichole Keyton, Averill Roberts, Lisa Sebastian and Monica Taylor.

With an overall record of 24-6 and 16-2 in the Big Ten, the largest task for the Lady Buckeyes this season is replacing four starters that represented 65 percent of the total offense and 61 percent of the teams total rebounding.

Coach Nancy Darsch said the job of replacing players like Lisa Cline and Nikita Lowry, who averaged 19.7 and 19.1 points last season, will be hard to overcome.

"I really don't think you can replace people like that, you do the best you can with what you have," Darsch said. "I think we have some very exciting ball players on our team this season. It is just a matter of who will get the job done for us."

Darsch said her team is more balanced and well rounded this year.

"This season the team is faster and more diversified."

Darsch also said the Lady Buckeyes must learn to come together and doing this is going to take some time. She said all her players must be ready and willing to step in and take some responsibility for the team.

Darsch said that coming together is a growing process of getting to know each other and level, physically and emotionally," Darsch said. "The amount of physical contact, and the size of the players along with the quality of play is in an entirely different class."

Nicole Sanchez, a 6-1 senior who last season averaged 9.7 points and 4.5 rebounds per game is the only returning starter.

Darsch said Sanchez will definitely be one of the leaders on the team.

"She is like a coach on the floor," Darsch said. "She sees and analyzes things very well and has a good overview of the game. She is someone that I will turn to for input and opinion, to get the players perspective."

Darsch also feels that Sanchez will be the heart of the defense.

Coming off the bench this year is senior Mindy Smith, juniors Stacie Bruce, Cheryl Perozek and Vicki Pullie.

Darsch said she looks for these players to fight for playing time and improve their games this season.

"They all have had good games and they all have had impressive contests," she said. "Now they should be at the experience and maturity level where they should try to make every game their best game."

Darsch said she is going to keep her team's game plan simple due to all the new faces coming in. She said she was able to experiment with some new things when she coached the Women's Olympic Festival Basketball Team last summer.

"I think coaching the Olympic Festival team was a timely experience for me," Darsch said. "I was coaching 12 new faces and the emphasis had to be on teaching and explaining, something which I think is a strength of mine. It got me ready for this season in having the same approach for this team."

Darsch said she wouldn't make any predictions, but the goals for this season's team are going to be the same as they always have been.

"To win the Big Ten and be in the NCAA tournament," she said. "We are going after everybody on the schedule, because everybody is going to be coming after us."

learning to communicate as a team. She said the Lady Buckeyes must learn to respect each other on and off the court.

"It is going to require a lot of effort, from all of us," said Darsch. "Anytime you try to blend in six new personalities, it takes time to come together. Usually when you have growth you have pain involved, and there are definitely going to be some good times and some bad times."

Darsch said the need for these young players to gain experience is essential for this team to be successful and that the step between high school and college basketball is tremendous.

"It is a whole different intensity

Women's crew preparing for first regatta

By Missy Harris
Lantern sports reporter

The OSU Women's crew team heads full-steam into the fall season at the Head of the Muskingum Regatta in Marietta, Ohio.

The regatta will take place on Saturday, Oct. 22, and will be the first official competition of the fall season.

Last year the team was able to beat and compete well with established teams from Marietta College, the University of Cincinnati, the University of Charleston in West Virginia, the University of Tennessee and Lafayette University in Florida.

The team also went to the national championship for small colleges last year and hopes to go again this year. The Ohio State team is considered a small college team because it does not compete in elite regattas and it has a budget of $200,000 or less.

Paul Gordon, 21, president of crew club, said the budget for this year's men's and women's teams combined is around $200,000. About $1,700 comes from the university, he said. Each member pays between $700 and $800 annually, and the remaining funds come from fundraisers.

Training for the fall season consists of three hours of practice a night. Each practice includes a "land workout" of running and lifting weights, as well as a "water workout" of rowing and doing various drills.

Kerry O'Keefe, 21, a senior from Lima, majoring in political communications, said, "The coaches expect a lot more time and dedication from varsity members; it is more stressful this year. The hard work required to maintain a seat in the boat is uppermost in all of our minds."

Karen O'Keefe, 21, a senior from Lima, majoring in advertising, said, "Although we are a young varsity women's team, we hope to do well and gain some recognition for all of our hard work." Karen and Kerry are twin sisters.

Robin Kingma, 25, novice women's coach, said there is a larger than usual turnout this year. With the larger turnout she hopes to produce some very successful rowers, she said.

"I am pleased with the hard work and commitment already displayed this early in the season," Kingma said.

Rob Estice, 23, varsity women's coach, said he expects a lot from his members and they will have to work hard this fall to build the team back up because he only has three returning varsity members.

Several of the larger fall competitions include: the Head of the Muskingum, the Speakman Regatta on Oct. 28, which will be held at the Scioto River, and two rowing events in Philadelphia: the Frostbites Regatta on Nov. 18 and the Bill Braxton Regatta on Nov. 19.

Davis' pick appears correct after Shell debut

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Al Davis is correcting a mistake the only way he knows how — by digging deep into the tradition of the Los Angeles Raiders.

For one night, at least, Davis' decision to replace Mike Shanahan as coach with Art Shell appeared to be working.

The Raiders, despite a shaky overall effort, beat the New York Jets 14-7 Monday night, raising their record to 26-7-1 in prime time. Shell, the NFL's first black head coach in the modern era, is off to a good start thanks to two big plays — Eddie Anderson's 87-yard interception return and Mervyn Fernandez's 73-yard TD on a pass play.

"He is going to grow," Davis said of Shell, a Hall of Fame tackle for the Raiders who has spent half his 42 years with the team. "He is our guy ... we just want to give him all the support that we can."

The players certainly seem to support Shell, who was passed over for the job after the 1987 season, when Tom Flores quit.

"He is so much of the Raiders' team, the Raiders' mystique," Howie Long said. "He is the Raiders."

"It wasn't what he said so much as the psychological edge his presence gave us. We were playing for the guy who represented Raider tradition."

"He has a deep, tender belief in what it means to be a Raider," added Bob Golic, who joined the team as a free agent this season. "He leads by example."

Shell admitted as much. He said not to expect sideline histrionics, like those of John Madden. But he made it clear that, unlike Shanahan, an outsider hired off the Denver Broncos' staff, Art Shell understands the meaning of the Silver and Black.

He will make sure everyone involved with the Raiders understands it, too.

"I understood what Al was trying to do in 1988," Shell said of being passed over in favor of Shanahan. "I felt I could have done the job then, but maybe I was not quite as ready as I feel I am now."

"Al felt he needed new, bright ideas brought into the system from outside the organization."

That approach didn't work and, with the Raiders at 1-3, dropping three straight, Davis turned to Shell.

Shell set about simplifying things, getting back to basic, man-to-man matchups.

"He told us to keep it together, hang in there, play Raider tough," Long said, "and it would come to us."

"We were playing for the guy who represented the Raider tradition of tough, physical football, and a belief in one another. It wasn't the words he said. It was who was saying them."

The first black head coach in the NFL since Fritz Pollard in 1925 was saying them.

"The thing about relaxing and having fun — and I thought they had fun — was that they were a little anxious because I became the head coach. My being black is not an issue. If this was another organization, it might be. In this organization, there is no black and white."

Ohio State wrestlers eye NCAA berths

Buckeye grapplers prepare for season

By Thomas J. McHale
Lantern sports reporter

The Ohio State wrestling room in Larkins Hall has an NCAA logo on the wall. Buckeye wrestlers touch it, look at it, think about it.

It's not too early to think about the NCAA championships. It is only five months away and the season hasn't even begun.

"I expect a lot from all of the wrestlers," head coach Russ Hellickson said. "I think it's the best team I've ever coached in collegiate wrestling."

In a sport where the outcome of ten individual matches determine the team's score, expectations can direct a wrestling season.

"The demands for a top finish by the Ohio State wrestling program should be high."

His fourth year at Ohio State, Hellickson comes off an 18-10-2 record, the most wins ever in a single season by the Buckeyes. After finishing fourth in the Big Ten championships, five OSU wrestlers qualified for the NCAA tournament. As a team, they placed 43rd.

"It was a let down at the NCAA tournament last year, but with all the guys returning, I'm excited. The team is excited. We're two and three deep in some weight classes," Hellickson said.

The Buckeyes start their season on the road at the Southern Duals in Chattanooga, Tenn. on November 24. At this point, none of the spots are decided, but there is good speculation.

David Range III, a junior who was redshirted last year, will wrestle at the leadoff 118-pound spot. Range practiced and worked out with the team last year, competing in various open wrestling tournaments. Range will provide the Buckeyes with the solid starter they need.

"I'm ready to get back into collegiate competition. Ohio State could have five or six All-Americans," Range said. "I'm looking for a national championship myself."

With the return of Range to the team, sophomore Adam DiSabato put on some muscle to return his natural 126-pound weight class. Last year as a freshman, DiSabato qualified for the NCAA tournament and should only improve over last year.

The 134-pound spot remains solidly filled by Mark Marinelli. The junior comes off two straight NCAA appearances and two third place finishes in the Big Ten championships.

"I feel more confident this year," Marinelli said. "I'm thinking I can possibly have my best year."

Those are modest words when many consider Marinelli to be the top All-American candidate from Ohio State.

At 142-pounds, the Buckeyes have a spot which is yet to be decided. Junior Monty Dagley will try to regain the spot he has been out of two-and-a-half seasons due to a serious knee injury. Look for others to challenge.

Junior Ken Ramsey has the 150-pound weight class as his own. A third place finish last year at the Big Ten championships and a second place the year before has meant two trips to the NCAA tournament for Ramsey, a certain contender for All-American honors.

Two redshirt freshmen are the top picks to fill the 158-pound class. Aaron Schetter and Mike Schetter hope to stabilize an open spot in the Buckeye lineup.

Paul Reinbolt, a 167-pound senior, was Ohio State's most improved wrestler last year. This year, he should improve on the 20-16-2 record he posted. Experience will give Reinbolt confidence to keep the spot and lead the team.

Seven members of the 1989-90 OSU wrestling team have appeared in the NCAA tournament prior to this season. Pictured from left (front), are Adam DiSabato, Mark Marinelli, David Range III., (back) Paul Reinbolt, Eric Schultz, Matt Mynster and Ken Ramsey.

Another freshman redshirt, Dan Ritchie, looks to grab the 177-pound spot.

Last year, Matt Mynster went to the NCAA tournament after a fifth place finish in the Big Ten championships. The junior's 22-14-1 record last year should be improved upon.

Weighing in at 230, Eric Schultz is a bet to fill in the Buckeyes' heavyweight spot. Schultz, a senior, took last year off to get some bulk to compete with some of the larger heavyweights he will face.

"I'm looking forward to the season," he said. "We have a lot of experience and balance."

Hellickson believes Ohio State can place one of the top three teams in the Big Ten, along with Iowa and Minnesota.

"I don't know if people will agree with me but my expectations are to be in the top ten nationally when all is said and done," he said. "We are going to surprise some people when we compete."

When the season comes to a close in February and March, seven of the last eight matches are away from home, but that doesn't concern Hellickson.

"It doesn't matter where you wrestle," Hellickson said. "It's an individual competition...one-on-one."

That individual competition could give Ohio State their best wrestling team ever. Until then, the expectations of the individuals and the team rest in the NCAA logo on the wall.

Injuries hinder Cavs as preseason begins

RICHFIELD (AP) — The Cleveland Cavaliers were a physically beaten team when Michael Jordan knocked them out of the first round of the NBA playoffs last spring.

It's gone downhill from there.

Summer vacation only served to aggravate the Cavaliers' many injuries, leaving them with the prospect of starting an entirely new front court and a less-than-healthy back court during the first few weeks of the NBA season.

"It's unfortunate, because exhibition season is a time for the coach to experiment," Coach Lenny Wilkens said Tuesday. "If people are out too long, then you can't really see them."

Cleveland, which won a team-record 57 games last year, will start three new players on the front line when the season opens Nov. 3. Two of last year's starters, center Brad Daugherty and power forward Larry Nance, underwent off-season surgery and can't practice yet, and the third, small forward Mike Sanders, was signed by Indiana as a free agent.

The problems don't stop there. Tree Rollins would have started at center while Daugherty's foot heals, but Rollins separated his shoulder in a car wreck last spring and re-injured it when he fell in practice Monday night.

Paul Mokeski, acquired as a backup at center and forward, is bothered by back spasms, and rookie forward Winston Bennett has a severely bruised shin.

In the back court, point guard Mark Price can't shake off the stiffness and soreness from a groin pull that hampered him in the playoffs against Chicago last season, and No. 1 draft pick John Morton has a strained hamstring.

Wilkens, though, says he can still find five players to put on the court at any given time.

"The attitude is fine," he said. "The only time we talk about it (the injuries) is when we talk to (the media). That's when it becomes the center of attention."

"Certainly, players know who's hurt. But still, in camp I expect them to be out there working hard and doing the things I want them to do. We work with what we have. That's how we have to approach it."

Price is playing despite the soreness in his upper leg, and shooting guard Ron Harper is fine. If the season started today, they'd be joined in the starting lineup by forwards John Williams and Randolph Keys and center Chris Dudley.

That's a front court that averaged a combined 18.6 points a game last year, the bulk of it by Williams. Price and Harper averaged nearly 19 points each.

"Right now, we don't have much of a personality," Price said. "At the moment, we don't have any of our front-line starters. It will take time to find out what that personality is."

Though he claims he won't use injuries as an excuse, Wilkens is already trying to soften the expectations for his team.

"We may not win 57 games, but that shouldn't be the criteria of how good you are," he said. "There have been teams that haven't won that many that have gone on to win the championship. It'll be tougher for everybody to win as many games this year, because the league is going to be much improved."

Daugherty will be out for the next three or four weeks because the wound from his August surgery opened up this week, forcing him back into the hospital. Nance is out until December or January because of surgery in June for a frayed tendon in his ankle.

Rollins had his arm in a sling Tuesday but hopes to return to practice within a few days.

"Nobody's really mentioning that Brad and Larry aren't here," Rollins said. "We know this is the team we're going to have to play with. Every guy just has to dig down a little deeper. I have to block a few more shots. The point guard has to push the ball up a little harder."

"Then, either we'll be in a hole and those guys can come and save us, or if we're on top, they can come back and keep us there."

Clark, McGwire used to winning ways

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Winning is nothing new for Will Clark and Mark McGwire.

Starting Saturday night, much of the attention in the World Series between San Francisco and Oakland will be focused at first base, where the nation first got a good glimpse of Clark and McGwire when they played for the 1984 U.S. Olympic baseball team.

Clark went 9-for-21 (.429) with three homers and eight RBIs for the silver medalists.

"He was definitely the best player on the team," McGwire said. "But that wasn't all that surprising considering what he did in college."

Clark led Mississippi State into the College World Series in 1985 with 25 home runs and 75 RBIs in 65 games.

And he's been leading the San Francisco Giants to winning seasons since 1987.

Clark was the Giants' first pick in the June 1985 amateur draft, and has a .304 lifetime average in four major-league seasons.

In 1987, the Giants won the NL West division and on Monday, their first pennant since 1962.

Clark was the most valuable player of the series, going 13-for-20 with two homers and eight RBIs.

On Monday, he singled home two runs with the bases loaded with two outs in the eighth inning against Chicago to give the Giants the lead.

"This guy has supreme confidence in himself and you saw the best in this series," Giants manager Roger Craig said.

McGwire was a star at Southern California and was Oakland's first-round selection in the June 1984 draft.

He set a rookie record with 49 homers in 1987, and has hit 30 or more home runs in each of his first three major-league seasons. Teammate Jose Canseco is the only other major leaguer ever to accomplish that feat.

"I guess the comparisons between myself and Will are obvious since we came along at the same time and play in the Bay Area," McGwire said. "But that's not something the players think about. What good would that do?"

There are lots of interesting matchups for the fans in the World Series.

Kevin Mitchell led the majors with 47 homers this year, and Canseco was the leader in 1988 with 42.

"The guys in the A's clubhouse know what pressure is all about," Clark said. "Day in, day out, they deal with it and they do the job. They get it done."

"I'm not unlike a Kevin Mitchell, a Jose Canseco, a Mark McGwire. That's what they pay us to do."

The A's won the AL pennant last season, but lost in five games in the World Series to Los Angeles.

McGwire went 1-for-17 against the Dodgers, a home run. In the playoffs against Toronto, he was 7-for-18 with one homer and three RBIs.

"I think some of us learned you have to be a little more patient and not try to get it all done at once," McGwire said. "Sometimes a single can mean just as much as a home run."

Esiason trying to overcome injuries

CINCINNATI (AP) — Boomer Esiason passed the Cincinnati Bengals to the Super Bowl last season with a sore throwing shoulder. He is trying to lead them back this year on a gimpy ankle.

The NFL's most valuable player last season is been limping around this year on a sprained ankle that curtails his mobility, turns him into an easier target for rushers and makes dropping back to pass a pain. And the situation probably won't improve much until the season is over.

"I can feel myself hobbling, back there a little bit," Esiason said. "And every time I do that, there's like an electric bolt that goes through my ankle. It's not very comfortable to play with."

Last year, Esiason played through a sore left shoulder he developed near the end of the season. The sprained left ankle could hound him even more than the shoulder did.

The only way to get it healed is to rest it for a month. The Bengals cannot afford that — and Esiason doesn't want it.

"Everybody has a different threshold of pain and everybody plays with certain things," Esiason said. "I've played with injury, and I will continue to play with injury. It's one of the facts of being a football player. As long as nothing breaks, I'll be out there."

So the bad ankle will become his curse for 1989.

"Unless you give it that four-week rest or so, I don't think an ankle like that is going to get well," coach Sam Wyche said. "It will get well as soon as the season's over — he'll get off of it and give it plenty of rest and he'll be fine for next year."

"But this is what he's been handed for this season, it looks like."

He was handed the sore shoulder last season, but didn't miss a down. His streak of consecutive starts reached 61 games on Sept. 25, when he sprained the ankle in a game against Cleveland.

Esiason was on the sideline the next Sunday in Kansas City, but backup Turk Schonert also sprained an ankle on the Bengals' second possession. The result — Esiason hobbled to the rescue and a 21-17 victory.

His streak of consecutive starts technically ended even though he played most of the game.

His gutty performance impressed his teammates, many of whom were playing with strains and sprains as well.

"He's got to be one of the toughest quarterbacks in the NFL," offensive lineman Max Montoya said.

Esiason went the distance Sunday in a 26-16 victory over Pittsburgh, playing with his ankle wrapped in a special tape that hardens to support and protect the injury.

Potbellied pigs are popular pets

By Susan Westbrook
Lantern campus reporter

Add yet another animal to the never ending list of novelty pets. Vietnamese miniature potbellied pigs seem to be surfacing as the latest pet fad.

They are quick to learn, easily housebroken, leash trained and certainly unlike anything your neighbor owns.

Assistant professor of animal science Jerry Shurson receives a couple of requests per month for information about these pigs.

"It comes in waves," Shurson said.

Shurson's work is primarily with domestic swine, so he refers inquiries to the Columbus Zoo or to a breeder — although information about these pigs is scarce. Most of his information is gained through word of mouth as he hears of people who are buying or selling this breed.

Shurson's requests are primarily from hobby farmers, people who live outside of urban areas and are looking for novelty-type pets.

"Some are aware of the possible economic returns in breeding and selling the pigs as pets," Shurson said.

Frederika Wagner, who runs Flying W Farms in Piketon raises all sorts of exotic animals, but Vietnamese miniature potbellied pigs are the only type of pig that she raises.

"I never get my orders caught up," Wagner said. She has 12 sows, or female pigs, producing 20 pigs each per year and she always has a waiting list.

Wagner usually keeps one of the pigs as her pet, until someone sees it and wants to buy it.

Wagner sells the baby males for $500 to $1,000 and baby females for $1000 to $3000. However, a shorter nose and a more swayed back brings a higher price. Wagner presently has a pregnant sow, expected to produce 10 to 12 babies, priced at $10,000.

"They cost less to feed than a cat," Wagner said. They eat eight ounces of pig pellets daily. However Wagner sees no problem with feeding the pig whatever its owner eats.

"What's the fun of having a pig if you can't feed it from the table?" Wagner asked.

"A pigs dietary requirements are similar to ours. If you're eating a balanced diet, so are they," Wagner said.

Housebreaking a pig is easy. It is a pig's nature to use only one spot, whether that be a litter box or one corner of the yard. The pig will always return to the same spot.

"You manipulate the spot," Wagner said. A pig trains especially quickly to a litter box if it has the example of a cat to follow. It can also be taught to go to the door, just like a dog would, Wagner said.

At maturity the pig weighs 50 pounds, "about as much as a fat beagle hound," Wagner said. It will measure 12 to 14 inches at the shoulder.

Her advice to new owners is, "love them and spoil them rotten."

A domestic pig, by far is a cheaper purchase. A feeder pig — a young, 40 pound pig on its way to the feeder floors to be fattened to a market weight of 230 to 240 pounds — can be purchased for $30 to $40. However, the typical weight of a mature sow or boar is 400 to 600 pounds, and will stand three to three and a half feet tall, and measure five to six feet long, Shurson said.

Barbara Kastner, coordinator of outreach programs for the Columbus Zoo, is accompanied by Bernie, a six-month-old Vietnamese potbellied pig, on many of her visits to the elementary schools.

"The kids love him," she said.

Although Bernie is on loan from a breeder and will be returned at maturity, the zoo owns two Vietnamese potbellied pigs which are housed in the childrens' petting area.

Bernie is leash trained and follows Kastner just like a dog would. He is quick to train, although catching a frisbee is not one of his tricks. It is difficult to train a pig to do things with its mouth. It can be trained to do things with his body, such as climbing stairs, Kastner said.

"A pig is not loyal to people as dogs are," Kastner said. "A pig's main interest is food."

Bernie is trained by operant conditioning, by using a combination of food and sound. "It has to be a food reward that he really likes, like cookies," Kastner said. When Bernie accomplishes a trick, he is given the food treat and a clicker is sounded while the food is in his mouth.

Ted Strouth, chief of district operations for the health department said, a pig can be kept as a pet in Columbus as long as neighbors do not complain. However, if a complaint is registered a permit from the health commissioner must be obtained.

Area shelter seeks funds

By Terry Brown
Lantern campus reporter

OSU students can help Columbus' homeless by participating in the "Dumpster Dollar Drive" to keep the Open Shelter open.

The Open Shelter, Inc., located on State Street, has run out of operating funds. If the shelter does not raise $15,000 by Monday, Oct. 16, it will be closed during the day for two weeks, said Stu Nicholson, resource development director for the shelter.

On Oct. 12 and 13, ODU, the Open Shelter, WLVQ-FM and WSYX-TV plan to conduct a "Dumpster Dollar Drive" to help raise the necessary funds to keep the shelter open. At 4 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 12, WLVQ Promotions and Sports Director Mark "Munch" Bishop will be joined by Kent Beittel, executive director of the Open Shelter, Mary Beittel, Carol Luper of WSYX and special guest Kristin Huffman, Miss Ohio 1989, on the west lawn of the Ohio Union. They will spend 30 hours in a trash dumpster to raise funds for the Open Shelter.

Bishop said he hopes they raise $50,000 to $60,000, but he realizes a smaller amount would suit the shelter's purpose.

"The bottom line is, the shelter needs $5,000 right now to keep it open during the day," he said.

The Open Shelter has housed 95-100 adult males every night since Jan. 1, 1989, Nicholson said. It is also responsible for helping homeless people during the day.
