THE STUDENT VOICE OF OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

Search ongoing for dean qualities

By Annie Schoening Lantern staff writer

The Search Committee for the Executive Dean of the Colleges of the Arts and Sciences will hold open forums this week for faculty, staff and students.

"The main goal of the search committee's activities is to gather information from all the constituencies - faculty, staff and students - in the arts and sciences colleges that will help us in the search to find an outstanding person to be the next executive dean," said committee chairman Patrick Osmer, also department chairman of astronomy.

Osmer will deliver updates to the University Senate and comment on relevant aspects of the executive dean search, said Susan Fisher, search committee member and secretary for the University Senate. Osmer will also brief President Karen A. Holbrook as things move along, Fisher said.

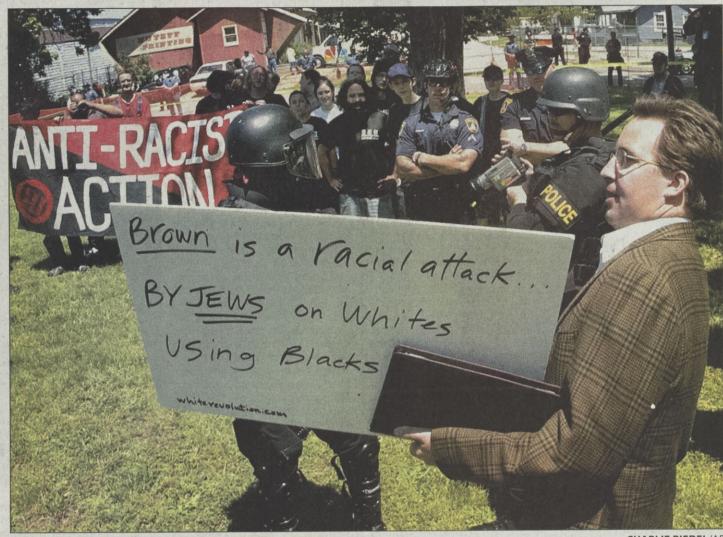

According to Holbrook and former provost Ed Ray's May 2003 White Paper — which outlined the plans for the Federation of the Colleges of Arts and Sciences — a responsibility of the executive dean is "maintaining the appropriate balance between autonomy and the integration" of the five deans that comprise the arts and sciences

The executive dean is appointed to a five-year renewable term, subject to acceptable annual reviews by the provost and a satisfactory formal performance review in the fourth year and will report to the provost.

Current executive dean Michael Hogan is leaving July 1 to become provost for the University of Iowa. He served one year amid criticism from college faculty and (U-WIRE) CHAMPAIGN, III. gives the April afternoon a pleasant feel and the slight whisper of wind lingering at the Barnhart Farm presents ideal conditions for the task at hand. Donald Barnhart gives the final instructions to the volunteers who are about to witness a prairie burn, a fire that cleanses the prairie of weeds and allows for more growth of the native plants.

Barnhart, 39, is the driving force behind the Barnhart Grove Prairie Restoration, a project devoted to the restoration of approximately 80 acres of his straw-colored remnants of last family's 160-acre farm to its natural prairie state. Barnhart represents the community working to reestablish the prairie, which has all but vanished from the state of Illinois.

prairie once covered the landscape of Illinois, but today less than 1/100th of 1 percent of original prairie exists in the state, said Mary Kay Solecki, a botanist for the Illinois Nature Preserves Commission and a member on the board of directors of the restoration project. The destruction of the prairie has left only about 2,500 acres of high quality prairie, usually found in cemeteries, along railroad tracks or in areas that were not suitable for farming.

'I look at it as a lost natural history," Barnhart said. "It's been destroyed literally, plowed under by farming and agriculture.'

Barnhart began planting prairie plants on the farm with his father in 1987. He says that under the Conservation Reserve Program, which provided governmental assistance for members of the agricultural community, they were able to set aside 30 acres of land that was to be planted with prairie. About 15 acres were planted in the original restoration.

In 1998, Conservation 2000, a state program, set aside funding for areas that would be permanently designated as nature preserves. The program gave the family 14 years to re-establish 80 acres of native prairie grasses and flowers.

"The hardest thing about restoring a prairie for us is controlling the weeds that come up when you plant the prairie," Barnhart said. you are trying to establish, and it is very frustrating."

carried out between the end of October and April 15.

The place I wanted to start off with is hard to burn because it has never been burned before Bright sunshine fills the cloudless and hasn't had that much blue sky, a 67-degree temperature growth," Barnhart told the group as they set off through a cornfield toward the prairie.

Winter is the best time to plant prairie seeds because they need cold temperatures to germinate, Barnhart said. Once the prairie is planted, it pretty much should be left alone, with the exception of the burn, Barnhart said.

Barnhart plans to burn three different sections of the prairie. The volunteers holding the drip torches move up to the edge of the first section and light the season's prairie plants. Orange flames begin to dance up out of the 75 to 100 different species of prairie plants that cover a good portion of the Barnhart Farm.

Prairie burning is an important Twenty-two million acres of process that maintains the home of many animals that depend on the prairie to survive. Pheasants, Franklin's ground squirrels, upland sandpipers, leaf hoppers, moths and butterflies are just a small sampling of the animals and insects that call the prairie home.

'If the prairie disappears," Solecki said, "animals that depend on the grasslands begin to disappear also.'

Tall goldenrod, big bluestem and Indian grass are three of the most common grasses that dominate the prairie landscape here on the Barnhart farm. Right now the grasses are crinkly to the touch and yellow in color, but will become a vibrant green in a few short months. Stiff goldenrod is mixed in with the more common grasses and produces beautiful yellow flowers when it is in bloom. Mixed with the tall grasses is bee balm, part of the mint family. The plant, with a square stem, has leaves that smell of mint when they are crushed between fingers.

The Barnhart Prairie is home to a variety of different plants, and it does not take a welltrained eye to notice the diversity the area offers. But many people still look at a prairie and only see weeds, Solecki said.

Prairies have a lot of texture to them and variety in their ppearance," Solecki said. "It's not

Race for the Cure

Rain no obstacle for runners

The rain that started late Friday night and carried into Saturday morning did not stop thousands of people from coming out for a charity event.

Lane Avenue was filled with men, women, children, college students, middle-agers and senior citizens, all who were there for a 5K run/walk. The Komen Columbus Race for the Cure raised money for breast cancer research and initiatives. Some participants were breast cancer survivors and wore pink shirts demonstrating their achievements. Others ran in honor of someone fighting breast cancer or sadly died. The runners had pink papers safety-pinned to the back of their T-shirts stating the name of their friend, relative, teacher or co-worker. Still, thousands more ran with no specific person in mind, but rather instead just to be a part of the cause.

As the rain continued to pour, volunteers counted down the start of the race and others clicked on the timers. Music blared all around the course, which wound around the Ohio State campus. Among the musical guests was the OSU Marching Band. Despite the weather, about 20 members of TBDBITL set up with their instruments and played some of the marching band's greatest hits.

The 2004 Race for the Cure was a time where all of Columbus showed its dedication to finding a cure for the hundreds of thousands of people in the United States who have suffered from breast cancer. And they did it by pushing weather issues aside. Even those who registered days in advance showed up to show their support. The $25 registration fee had already been given to the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation, but people still wanted to be there to participate and strengthen the sign of their support.

So many were needed to make the race a success including police, firemen, OSU, all the runners and walkers, the various sponsors, the survivors, volunteers and those who headed the efforts. The signs of dedication and excitement surrounding the event made it seem as if it was a 70-degree day with the sun shining brightly. Congratulaotions on the success, Columbus.

"I'm sick and tired of

Case remembered

Desegregation remains a problem

Today is the 50th anniversary of the landmark Supreme Court case, Brown v. Board of Education. The case was brought up on behalf of Linda Brown, who was forced to bus five miles to school despite the presence of a school four blocks away because the closer school prevented blacks from attending. Brown v. Board of Education overturned the previous Supreme Court precedent of separate but equal set by Plessy v. Ferguson, saying that separate schools were inherently unequal.

In the 50 years since Brown v. Board of Education, great strides have been made in the civil rights movement, for which the case was an important catalyst. Events as the Montgomery bus boycott, the Greensboro lunch counter sitin and the freedom riders were directly inspired by the success of NAACP lawyers in the Brown case. Thanks to this case, buses, restaurants, hospitals and other bastions of the separate but equal" doctrine were desegregated.

Schools, however, have had a harder time integrating. Initially, great efforts were made to desegregate schools. Busing programs were initiated to bring black and white students together in schools that previously segregated. President Eisenhower was forced to send National Guard troops to Little Rock High School in 1957 to protect the first black students at the high school when attempts were made to block

In the years since the decision, though, things have slid perilously close to the way they were. Today's segregation happens not because of specific laws, but through various socio-economic policies enacted by various levels of government and parents who worry that the presence of black and other minority students will be detrimental to their chil-

In 1991, the Supreme Court allowed for neighborhood schools to be created, a decision that further encouraged de facto segregation of schools based on neighborhoods, which tend to be divided by racial as well as socio-economic back-

Meanwhile, white students have been fleeing public schools much like white families have been fleeing the cities. The percentage of white students attending public schools has dropped seven percent in the last decade to 60 percent, according to the National Center for Education Statistics.

Ohio has several examples of areas where desegregation has taken a back seat. A Cleveland Plain Dealer article found that 66.1 percent of Cleveland's minority students attend schools populated almost entirely by minorities. The Cincinnati Enquirer reported that two-thirds of all schools in the Cincinnati and northern Kentucky area were either 90 percent black or 90 percent white. In Columbus, over half of Columbus City Schools' 136 buildings are either 80 percent white or 80 percent non-white.

Issues with schools resegregating point to a problem bigger than the schools themselves. They point to a society that unfairly funds public schools via property taxes, ensuring those living in less well-to-do areas will get less money than those living in the suburbs. Since most suburbs tend to be white-dominated and many cities are populated primarily by minorities, efforts to sabotage the equality of these schools are not just harmful to children — they encourage the continued marginalization of minorities.

Fund-raise for schools

kay, here's the plan: Since no one can come up with a way to fund public education in Ohio, I think it's high time to bring in the big

Support for video slot machines is too fickle, showing that most people don't want private sources to fill in where the government has failed. The plans for a Cleveland casino that would send 30 percent of its profits to the public schools there have also been met with considerable unease and opposition.

And the DeRolph legislation that found the system of funding public schools to be unconstitutional has left many in the state shaking their heads in disbelief - and others, including Gov. Bob Taft, playing the old "If I pretend it's not there, it'll go away" game.

So let's turn to those who know how to make money — a group of business -savvy citizens who have made a life out of accumulating cold, hard cash. If any one group knows how to set financial goals, exceed them and then redraw the boundaries for money raising, it is President Bush's team of campaign financers.

At the heart of this team are the "Pioguillians someers" on those who have raised at least $100,000 — and the "Rangers" — who see that a karbala s have raised at least $200,000. Almost exclusively men and women who know the games of economics like the back of their hands, they are the fundamental units of the indisputable king of campaign funding. It is a force to be reckoned with: dedicated campaigners who have raised, according to The Washington Post, over $296.3 million since 1998.

That's not only a record — it's a modern-day miracle.

"This is the most impressive, organized, focused and disciplined fund-raising operation I have ever been involved in," said Dirk Van Dongen, president of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors, who has been raising money for GOP candidates since 1980, to the Post. "They have done just about everything right.

What would even a third of that kind of skrilla do for the schools in Columbus where administrators have struggled to comply with the No Child Left Behind Act without the necessary funding? Or for those in Cleveland, where according to The Cleveland Jewish News, recent cuts have forced schools to dismissed 873 employees and not replace more than 500 who leave or retire?

I'd ask President Bush himself for a billion or so — just 2 percent of his newest request of Congress for the Iraq war—but he might get into trouble if he gave it over to something so boring as a bunch of public schools. Unfortunately, there's just something really un-sexy about trying to help out children in the United States instead of going to the Middle East and trying to bring people to whom you have no obligation new concepts of freedom.

So let's recruit his financial and public relations wizards instead. We don't need all of them — just a few placed in strategic places aroun d Ohio. With the desperate pleas of local school boards, we might even be able to land Donald L. Evans, a pioneer in 2000, to take some time off from his position at the Commerce Department. Though nearly half of past pioneers have been appointed to administrative positions, with any luck, we could get one of those who haven't.

While Bush can offer the ambassadorial posts and the promise of influence on his policy, the job would allow the right financial advisor to the experience of a lively, kind people and a tour of the state's well, its pristine farmland and bustling capital city. Offered, too, are all the emotional joys of being part of a cause as worthy as helping a whole lot of schools in a little bit of trouble.

We could even offer the candidates a great tax write-off, not that they really ow are we to make sense of the present situation in Iraq? With new reports and images of prisoner abuse popping up on an almost-daily basis, citizen support for the war appears to be eroding. Meanwhile, the price tag is skyrocketing. Many elected officials and media outlets have called for the resignation of Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld as a means of quelling the outrage over the mistreatment of Iraqi prisoners at Abu Graihb. President George W. Bush, however, is standing by Rumsfeld.

The images of Iraqi detainees — some stripped naked, some with black hoods covering their heads, some surrounded by menacing guard dogs — have generated moral fury from both U.S. and international audiences. A grizzly reply soon followed in a shocking video broadcast on the Internet. A group of men beheaded an American citizen, claiming it was in response to the mistreatment of Iraqis at Abu Graihb.

It seems hard to imagine how individuals could resort to such reprehensible behavior. While the beheading of Nicholas Berg was certainly awful, we are in many ways more stunned by the appalling actions of our own soldiers, some of whom are seen smiling and laughing at bound, naked and fearful captives. There is no doubt that photographing such abuse only furthered the humiliation suffered by the

We cringe and look away, only to look again in utter bewilderment. How could Imagine the games of childhood — sandlot baseball, capture the flag, or cops and robbers. Teams were chosen, and the games went forward as a competition between two sides. Disagreements over strikes and balls or the rules of the game could quickly turn best friends into sworn enemies, at least for the duration of the game.

Though we are certainly not playing tee-ball in Iraq, the Bush administration has repeatedly portrayed this war as a battle between two opposing sides — good and evil. Bush's "bring it on" swagger has certainly lessened in recent months, but the message remains the same — we are waging a war against the "evil-doers" and "freedom haters" in the Middle East, and we will do whatever it takes to succeed in bringing democracy to the region.

So, Mr. President, which side are the Abu Graihb prisoners on? If we have detained them in a time of war, it seems doubtful that they are on our side. And if they are not "for us," aren't they then 'against us?" In many ways, the tactics used in an effort to obtain information from detainees seem to fit well with our determination to defeat the enemy at any cost. How can there be such outrage from an administration that has cast the battle in such clear terms as right and wrong?

It seems rather obvious that at least part of the blame for what has happened in these prisons goes right to the top of the chain of command. As the commander in chief, Bush has oversimplified our mission as one that is 100 percent correct and just. Is it so surprising, then, that those at the lower end of the chain — American prison guards - seemed to have little reservation about mistreating those on the side of evil?

The events of the last few weeks have blurred the lines between good and evil. Thinking back to the sandlot, imagine the scene where a player is hurt during the course of the game. The lines of battle dissolve in support of an injured competitor. Fans respectfully applaud when an opposing player limps off the field under the help of medical personnel. The images from Abu Graihb have similarly brought us together with the Arabic community in a unified response of disgust.

Perhaps now we can finally see that this war is much more complex than a battle between the forces of good and evil. That our worst enemies are still human is a fact of which the pictures from Abu Graihb so shockingly remind us.

YOUR VIEWS COTA increased, not decreased ser-

I am writing in response to the Friday editorial, "Go party bus: COTA cuts require alternative plan." The editorial board outlined suggestions to deal with recent cuts in COTA service to the campus area, and proposed that the $9 fee that currently goes towards COTA should be devoted to CABS service that would duplicate existing COTA routes.

The reductions to the #2 and #84 routes are actually very minor. Students who ride the #2 probably won't notice the reduced frequency. Other routes that service the campus have not changed at all, including the popular #18 and the #52 that runs to the airport.

More importantly, the #7 route is now expanded into the heart of campus and up to north campus. This was reported in Tuesday's Lantern article, "Busing to go in a few new directions." Through this expansion, COTA has restored service to the north and south campus areas that were taken away when CABS ended its North and South Residential routes.

In fact, COTA has actually increased service to the OSU campus. Because of the service change on May 3, the annual number of service hours devoted to the campus area have increased from 34,525 to 37,485. This increase comes at a time when COTA is reducing service all over Columbus and Franklin County.

CABS is solely funded through parking permit fees, and with the many parking needs on campus, there is a limit to the amount of parking funds available to direct bus services on campus.

To deal with this, the editorial suggests that "OSU administration should terminate its contract with COTA and start a series of new CABS routes." OSU-only off-campus transportation that duplicates COTA service sends this message: Ohio State students consider themselves separate from the community-atlarge; they'll take a bus to Giant Eagle, but not the bus that everyone else in Columbus uses. I hope this is not the message students want to send to their neighbors.

The editorial also suggested a "night-life bus" which could "take students to all of the necessary places to drink and have a good time." For the last five years, the #20 Brewery District route provided the exact service suggested in the editorial, starting at north campus on High Street and going south to the Brewery District during the latenight/early-morning hours.

The #20 route had consistently low ridership in the five years of its existence, and with student government's support, the route was cut on May 3. Since then neither OSU nor COTA has received a surge of complaints or requests that the route be reinstated.

To the students at Ohio State: Columbus is the 31st largest city is the country, with 1.5 million residents. I encourage you to learn how to use public transportation. It is an important part of urban life, taking people from home to work and to special events. It helps reduce parking demand, traffic, and fuel consumption. It is also an important life skill, just like doing laundry or shopping for groceries.

Sept. 11 families to testify in NYC

By Sara Kugler Associated Press

NEW YORK — Families who never stopped imagining their loved ones' last moments inside the burning World Trade Center are preparing to watch the most vivid reconstruction yet of that horrific day.

The Sept. 11 Commission comes to Manhattan tomorrow, convening just miles from ground zero to examine the emergency response to the disaster. The hearings will include video footage of the attack and detailed witness testimony.

"If it's really bad, I'll walk out or put my head down," said Judith Jackson Reiss, whose son, Joshua, died in the north tower.

heart-wrenching testimony in its 10 public hearings. But this week's testimony is likely to be the most agonizing yet. Some footage is said to include the sound of bodies falling from the towers.

Speakers include former Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, his fire and police commissioners and Port Authority officials who were inside the 110-story skyscrapers Sept. 11.

Monica Gabrielle, who lost her husband Richard, said disturbing witness reports and images are necessary for a thorough investigation.

Gabrielle and many of the victims' relatives planning to attend said they regularly avoid images of the trade center attack on television and in photographs, but will watch during the hearing.

"It will tear all the family members apart, but you know what? I feel like I'm dead anyway," said Sally Regenhard, whose son, Christian, was among the 343 firefighters killed. "My heart was murdered on 9/11, so it's just going to give me more fuel to call for change.'

have been mostly limited to Washington, D.C., and covered topics like intelligence and counterterrorism.

The number of families in the audience swelled in March when former White House counterterror chief Richard Clarke appeared before the panel, followed by national security adviser Condoleezza Rice weeks later.

Regenhard, who has been regularly involved with the commission hearings, has been rallying less-active relatives of victims for this week's hearing.

Their attendance is crucial, she said, because it is "the first and last meaningful examination of what happened right here in this city.

Reiss, whose son was 23 years old, is traveling to the The panel has heard some city from Yardley, Pa., where It is not a trip she likes to make. After Sept. 11, her love for the city was displaced by grief for her child and anxiety about traveling through tunnels and bridges.

"I'm coming in because I have to do something; I have to hear this," she said.

Reiss and other victims' relatives are particularly interested in hearing Giuliani, who is scheduled to testify on the second day of the hearing, in part about whether U.S. officials gave him intelligence about possible terrorist threats to New York buildings.

Many who lost loved ones recall watching Giuliani on television in the weeks after Sept. 11, when they were still in shock. They remember him warmly, as a force of stability through the chaos, but this week they want an unflinching look at the city's handling of the disaster.

"He was admirable, and I hope that when he testifies he does the same," Reiss said.

Among other things, they hope to hear about radio and communications failures between the fire and police departments, evacuation proceago. The Mississippi reservist had to bring along Army paperwork proving his combat service because the Veterans Affairs Department still lacks a computer system that tracks a new applicant's service record.

More than a half-century ago, soldiers who fought in World War II showed similar paper documents to ensure they got medical care.

With thousands more veterans expected to seek benefits and health care, the VA faces its biggest challenge since the early 1990s. Officials are well aware of

"I believe the agency will be defined for generations by how well we take care of these returning troops," Veterans Affairs Secretary Anthony Principi, a Lawmakers have pressed the combat-decorated Vietnam veteran, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

The lack of a 21st-century computer operation is a black eye. The Defense Department has compiled a computerized roster of Iraq and Afghanistan veterans for the VA, but the list has many discrepancies, officials said.

Nonetheless, some returning veterans who expected long delays in qualifying for medical treatment say they were surprised how quickly they entered the VA system.

Sabrina Sue, a reservist from New York City, was told by a veteran of the first Gulf War to expect a year's wait to see a doctor for a service-connected thyroid condition. She waited only two weeks.

"I was amazed," said the supply specialist with the 340th Military Police Company, who also is entering a VA educational

Also impressed by his first VA experience was 1st Sgt. Gerry Mosley. He was injured with Buckels when the two members of the Army's 296th Transportation Co. freed the jammed air brakes of a truck in their convoy and jumped to the ground as mortars exploded around them.

"They're just awesome representatives," Mosley said.

To address the backlog of cases that delayed disability pay for veterans, the VA has hired 1,500 workers and formed special teams to reduce the March, 2002, peak wait of 233 days for an initial disability ruling. Today, the wait averages 171 days.

The agency also has extended hours at medical facilities, added examination rooms and hired or moved employees to reduce the backlog of veterans waiting for doctor's appointments. There were 176,000 veterans waiting for their first doctor's visit in July 2002, a number reduced to 3,242 currently.

"It was incredibly hot out off to a slow start," Wurtzman said. "We've been working extremely hard in the gym on conditioning, and I think today it really paid off."

Minutes after Wurtzman wrapped up his match, Dennis Mertens finished off Geoff Boyd on court No. 6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 to put the pieces in place for Klingemann's clinching win.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. - North Carolina's 10-1 second-half burst sent the Ohio State men's lacrosse team to its second straight defeat in the first round of the NCAA championships as the Tar Heels beat the Buckeyes 13-6.

The crowd of 1,529 at Fetzer Field saw a game that did not match the heat of the temperature outside until late.

No . 6 North Carolina (10-4 overall) was able to slow the pace of the game down and for long periods prevented No. 8 OSU (12-4, 5-0 Great Western Lacrosse League) from getting possession, as the Tar Heels had 49 shots compared to OSU's 27.

OSU at Fetzer Field. The victories ended a five-game NCAA losing streak for Carolina.

"They played a great game. Two weeks in a row they ran away from us in the fourth quarter," OSU coach Joe Breschi said. "Ît's a credit to them."

For the second straight week North Carolina beat OSU to the ground balls by a considerable margin, 31-21. Underneath a hot Southern sun the Buckeye defense spent most of the game fighting off the near-constant North Carolina attack.

"They possess the ball a lot," senior defenseman Greg Bice said. "Every time we made a run, they shut us down. That's what great teams do."

North Carolina was able to keep dominated faceoffs by a 15-6 margin. North Carolina came into the game at fourth in the country in faceoffs and with Kevin Frew dominating at the "X," it was easy to see why. Frew took every faceoff for the Tar Heels and won 71 percent of them against the combined efforts of OSU's Josh Lesko, John Dauro, Brian Yontz, Nick Williams, Ben Wolff and Bice. After the game, Bice said Frew was one of the best faceoff winners he had ever seen.

"They were throwing a lot of guys against me, so I think no one was able to get into a rhythm against me," Frew said. "Basically my wing-play was phenomenal today, holding players out and letting me get the ball.

The considerable number of Buckeye fans who made the trip could leave with something to smile about as This marks the second straight senior goaltender Tony Russo charged week that the Tar Heels have beaten out of this crease with two minutes left and raced almost the length of the field before putting the shot past North Carolina goaltender Paul Spellman. It was Russo's first goal of his career and came in his final game as a Buckeye.

"I always told (our offensive coach) I want a goal by the time I graduate, and he said that you're going to score when you least expect it," Russo said. We were down 13-5 and you know what? I thought, I don't expect to score here — so I just took the ball and stuck (the shot.)"

The first half was an even affair as OSU went goal-for-goal with Carolina, each team scoring two in the first quarter and adding one in the second.

Senior Anthony Gilardi opened the possession time after time as it scoring when he got the first of his two points by scoring with 6:59 to go in the deserves an asterisk

I can't help it, maybe I was raised this way. Maybe I watched PBS's the 'History of Baseball' one too many times. Or maybe I've read one too many books about Shoeless

Maybe it's one, all or a combination of those things which makes me proud to say I think Barry Bonds should have an asterisk by his name like Roger Marris received when he broke Babe Ruth's home run record back in 1961.

Why an asterisk, you may ask. If Marris got one for having a longer season to assuage Ruth's record, then Bonds should have one for the science behind his muscles, a longer season to showcase them, and he still hasn't taken a leak to prove anyone wrong.

If the Major League Baseball Players Association had its way, no one would ever get in trouble for steroids. League rules prohibit testing, or test only for specific drugs, allowing other performance enhancers to sneak through the randomized testing systems now in place. I can remember when it all started. In 1998 when Mark McGuire was set to break Marris's record and all of a sudden he had Sammy "I didn't know it was corked" Sosa and Bonds trying to keep up with him. I remember suddenly feeling like baseball was back to receiving the top billing it used to warrant.

I remember tuning in every night with my dad to watch and see history being chased, bringing back the nostalgia of an old man's childhood and bringing together families like mine all across the country by allowing generations to share in The Great American past time.

I remember Big Mac telling everyone he was using a healthy work out routine, a nutritionist and, oh yes, Androstenedione and Creatine. Is Bonds on this same program? After all, Big Mac retired, got his red Corvette, held the record for a year and possibly gave the sports supplement market a giant heave into the $1 billion a year industry it is today.

However, this goes beyond supplements. Greg Anderson, Bond's personal trainer, is the target of the grand jury investigating BALCO Laboratories for his involvement with BALCO owner Victor Conte and suspected distribution of performance enhancing drugs.

The home run is so beloved a feat that the players association won't force its players to test. Perhaps if it were truly interested in its players' health and well being it would think about the long term effects that have haunted athletes.

I'm not trying to take anything away from the talent and skill it takes as a batter to accomplish what Bonds has.

His home runs of mammoth distances have become commonplace and a reason he is more likely to take a walk than a dog owner. He's struck fear into opposing pitchers. He also has a batting average over .500 when he's hitting in his home stadium this season.

Bonds is approaching yet another record after surpassing his god-father Willie Mays for No. 3 on the all-time home run list. He holds the record for most home runs in a seasons set in 2001 with 73. Even if Bonds is - or ever was guilty of juicing up on steroids, the fact of the matter is that he still has to put the bat on the ball for a chance at a hit, let alone a home run.

Last, Bonds has been around the league ever since his debut with the Pittsburgh Pirates on May 30, 1986. If not for his longevity Bonds would never have had a shot at the record books. He

A handful of older movies aimed at teenagers continued to dominate the top 10.

Lindsay Lohan's high school comedy "Mean Girls" continued its strong run with $10.1 million for third place, dropping only 26 percent in its third week. "13 Going on 30" fell only 28 percent to earn $4.2 million for sixth place. Even the Olsen twins bomb "New York Minute" fell by a relatively small 37 percent to earn $3.7 million in seventh place.

Most movies this time of year see earnings drop 50 percent or more each week.

These are very minimal drops, which right now is young girls," said Paul Dergarabedian, president of box-office tracker Exhibitor Relations Co. "There are teen which movie they go to see.'

'Troy," which boasted hunky stars Pitt, Orlando Bloom and Eric Bana.

The film's audience was split equally between male and female viewers, according to Dan Fellman, head of distribution for Warner Bros., which released the movie.

Males liked it because of the action shows that the most consistent audience and epic adventure of the movie. The females liked it because of Brad, Orlando and Eric," he said.

Meanwhile, the Dracula, Wolf Man guys in the theaters, too. But I'll bet you and Frankenstein action-adventure "Van it's the female in the couple deciding Helsing" saw 61 percent of its audience turn to dust in its second week, falling to That may also have been a factor with No. 2 with $20.1 million for a cumulative show a profit.

total of $84.5 million, according to studio estimates Sunday.

5/14/04

Despite the apparently strong earnings for "Troy" and "Van Helsing," their massive budgets and the intensity of the summer movie competition suggest they will have a hard time earning their money back in North American theaters.

"Troy" cost a reported $175 million to $200 million to produce, while "Van Helsing" was in the $160 million range. Add to each about $50 million in marketing costs, and they will likely rely on international ticket sales and home video releases to

Warner Bros. expressed satisfaction with "Troy" earnings, saying its debut compared favorably with 2000's R-rated "Gladiator," which earned $34.8 million in its opening weekend and rode strong word-of-mouth praise to a $187.6 million total, even before winning the Oscar for best picture.

The only other new movie to open in wide release was Jamie Foxx's antiromantic comedy "Breakin' All the Rules," in which he played the author of a manual on how to leave your lover. It ranked in fourth place with

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern will not publish illegal advertising or the advertising of illegal products or services. The Lantern reserves the right to reject advertising that denigrates individuals, groups or organizations based on race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, religion, mental or physical capacity, veteran's status, age or sexual orientation. The Lantern Business Manager will refer questionable advertising to the Publications Committee of the School of Journalism and Communication. The committee will recommend a decision on whether to publish the advertising to the Director of the school.

Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.

Copy must be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for special publications whose deadlines will be announced.

An advertisement is required to occupy at least as many inches in height as columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered a "full column" (21 inches) advertisement and charged accordingly.

Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the adver tisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager with in 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.

Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.

A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.

No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than seven column inches.

If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee. The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers. 10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad-

11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication

12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise

13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University 14. A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication.

15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

wouldn't be one of the greatest hitters of all time had he not stayed healthy enough to compete year in and year out. You can ask Griffey Jr. about that.

An 18-year career, a career slugging percentage over .600, a career batting average just shy of .300 and hundreds of intentional walks later maybe the asterisk isn't needed at all. In fact maybe all he really deserves is a round of applause, a "thanks for the memories" highlight reel and a bust in a certain Cooperstown Museum.

Barry, please, please, please take The Test. Your career numbers may speak for themselves and win over an avid fan like me, but without a piece of proof saying that you've done everything 'the right way', you will forever be a statistical enigma.

Caravati blistered the ball and remained one of the nation's hottest hitters as he went 11-for-14 (.786) in the series and drove in six runs.

Shortstop Brett Garrard, catcher Derek Kinnear and left-hander Josh Newman were honored on Senior Day and went out with an 8-4 victory. Garrard responded by going 3-for-5, including two doubles, and drove in a run while Kinnear went 1-for-3 and collected two RBIs. Caravati went 4-for-4 and junior southpaw Brett Hatcher tossed two scoreless innings of relief and did not allow a hit to earn his third victory.

"It was a big day, it was one that I wanted to perform well on and really wanted to go out on top during my last home series. We were able to do that," Garrard said.

"To be standing out there and look up and see everybody here, it just kind of hit me," Kinnear said. "It's a great feeling to know that I've been here for five years and contributed to this team."

Newman was the tough-luck loser in game one of the series as he threw a complete game and allowed just two earned runs. The Buckeyes committed a season-high four errors in the 4-1 loss. Wildcat pitcher J.A. Happ also threw a complete game and allowed just one earned run en route to his fifth victory of the season.

first quarter. North Carolina scored two goals in the next three minutes to jump in front, but sophomore midfielder Josh Wittenberg scored for OSU to tie the game up with two minutes left.

In the second quarter junior Buckeye attacker Kyle Olson scored the first of his two goals. OSU traded goals with the Tar Heels, and the teams went to the locker rooms tied at three.

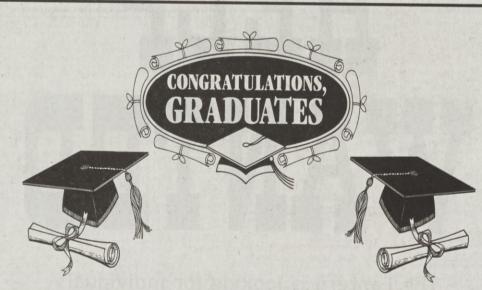

Despite sophomore attacker Craig Nolan giving the Buckeyes the lead early in the second half, the Tar Heels proceeded to pound the OSU cage and scored ten second-half goals.

The Tar Heels were led by attacker Mike McCall who had three goals. Ryan Blair and Jed Prossner each added two of their own.

In the fourth quarter, Olson scored to keep the game at a reasonable two-goal margin, but that was as close as OSU would come. The Tar Heels scored seven straight goals to put the game away.

Breschi, who has led OSU two straight NCAA appearances — the only ones in history — put the eason in perspective.

"I give a lot of credit to our seniors and all the guys," he said. "We played so hard, so well in the face of adversity, and we've had a great
