Bordering colleges offer Ohio discounts

By Dana Shoop Lantern staff writer

Out-of-state universities have a good tactic for luring Ohio students: In-state tuition prices.

Certain border-state universities in Kentucky, Michigan and West Virginia have made arrangements for Ohio students to attend their university at in-state costs comparable to Ohio State's tuition.

According to the Ohio Board of Regents, the purpose of the university tuition agreement is to ensure students the accessibility to cross the border in a metropolitan area. The percentage of students who can transfer from neighboring states and Ohio changes on a yearly basis. For example, Ohio students transferring to Michigan should be proportionate to the amount of Michigan students transferring to Ohio at in-state costs.

Northern Kentucky University, where tuition and fees are $2,256 each academic year, has a partnership with the University of Cincinnati. Students from Brown, Butler, Clermont, Hamilton or Warren counties who have received their first bachelor's degree can go to NKU at in-state tuition prices.

In addition, any student can receive in-state tuition at NKU by the Transfer Student Reciprocity Agreement, said Chris Cole, interim director of media and communications relations at NKU. One requirement of the agreement is that a student must transfer with at least 60 semester hours or 90 quarter hours from a regionally accredited institution. Each reciprocity institution has its own rules and can be found by contacting the university.

All Ohio residents can take advantage of in-state tuition at Eastern Michigan University, where tuition and fees are $4,373.25.

In the Fall of 2000, EMU had 1,300 undergraduates and an additional 100-200 graduate students from Ohio.

"I'm sure there will be some impact in our numbers from the tuition increase at OSU, but not a lot," said Ward Mullens, manager of news services in the Office of Publication at EMU.

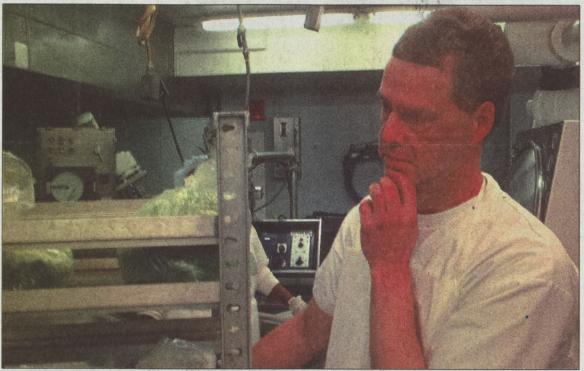

Although the application process is finished, a new stress may begin for students unaware of the possible OSU tuition increase. OSU proposed a 34 percent increase for new students for the 2002-2003 school year.

Tuition would jump to $6,417. "I think it should have been announced much earlier," said M. Sims, a junior and senior guidance counselor at Walnut Ridge High School in Columbus.

Disappointment was felt by many of the counselors for the lack of information they were given about the tuition increases. Many of their students rely on their financial package to determine what school they will attend. The tuition increase may encourage graduating seniors considering OSU to look elsewhere.

"It was not a fair decision to wait until now to announce the tuition increases. OSU reps visited in September and October, and we got all the information about OSU, but nothing about a 34 percent increase.

Cooks at the Ohio State University Hospitals begin their day at 5 a.m.

Medical 'treat'ment Cooks prepare meals for patients by moonlight

By Jackie Waldman Lantern staff writer

For most people, 5 a.m. is a time to enjoy the comfort of their beds, the solace of their dreams and the deep sleep they all crave.

It is that time of morning before the endless battle over getting out of bed or hitting the snooze button

While there are a few more hours of sleep to go for those who get up for work or class, some have already started their workday and have been awake for hours. Some of these hard-working, early-risers are the cooks at the Ohio State University Hospitals.

As dead as campus feels around the wee hours of the morning, the kitchen of the hospital is as lively as ever, as the people there begin preparing food for all the patients and staff throughout the hospital.

Brad Menke is one of nine cooks and has worked in the kitchen for 15 years. After arriving at 6:30 a.m., one of his first jobs is sanitizing all the pots and making sure the kitchenware are clean for the the food is brought out, I take a look at the different recipes, and I then know what to make," Menke

Menke helps prepare about 1,800 meals per day.

He said the best part about orking in the kitchen is being able to cook and prepare the soups and sauces by himself.

Ed Hoon, assistant director of the cafeteria, has worked for the OSU hospital for three years and said it is like a feeding frenzy. "Right here in the main kitchen

what is needed is a complex

"We get food deliveries everyday and all the inventory is generated in our computer system. We watch our inventory very closely and are able to know when we need more of anything," Hoon said. "Our deliveries come in shelving units called skids. We receive about 18 skids a day of all different types of food. Each of those skids particular refrigerators where they are kept."

Hoon said patients come and go, so they work on a seven-day patient rotation, repeating the same menu every week.

Hoon has been in the food business since he was 14 years old. Before coming to OSU, he had trained to be a cook in Switzerland and owned a restaurant in Medina, Ohio, called the Montville Inn.

You need to know the back of the house first before you can manage," Hoon said. "It's an important part of the process

Once a week, the entire management staff picks a unit of the hospital and personally brings treats such as cookies and cappuccino to the patients.

"We do this for the patients because it gives you that reality check. It reminds us of why we're here and gives us a chance to see the faces we're feeding," Hoon said.

Cynthia Carpenter, another early riser, has cooked for the OSU hospital for 22 years. By 5 a.m. Carpenter is preparing breakfast for the next several days.

Before handling the hot cereal, hash browns, bacon and sausage, Carpenter started as a food service worker and then became the salad cook. Now as the breakfast and vegetable cook, she enjoys handling different types of food on a daily basis.

"The only part I don't like about my job is the fact that it's so stress ful sometimes," Carpenter said.

Most agreed that the most hectic period is between 11 a.m. and 1

"We make a lot of food for a lot of people," Hoon said. "The very best part, however, is this staff. They are extremely dedicated and the end result is rewarding."

Bus life fares well for COTA driver

By Shelley Davis Lantern staff writer

Taking fares, chit-chatting with passengers and avoiding collisions with cars that cut in front of him is all part of a day's work for COTA bus driver Earnie Salmons.

Salmons has been driving for COTA for 11 years and was named driver of the year in 1999.

"One day is never the same as another. Some people think it would be the most boring thing in the world to drive a bus, and it can be if you let it," Salmons said. "But it can also be the most exciting. You don't know who you're going to pick up.

"My job is getting people to work and school on time, and their work schedule is just as important as mine. They're depending on me to get them there on time," he said.

Salmons clocks into work at 12:17 p.m., and he has 10 minutes to check the bus over before he leaves on his route. He checks the tire pressure, windshield wipers, brake lights, windows, mirrors, air conditioning and doors.

Salmons drives bus number 83, which runs from the Kingsdale Shopping Center to Northern Lights shopping center. No. 83 used to run from Northern Lights through Hilliard, but service to Hilliard has Salmons greeted John Goettman, a passenger who hasn't used buses much since the service was cut off.

"I haven't seen you since the Hilliard days. I hate that that happened, but it wasn't no decision of mine," Salmons said.

Salmons said he believes COTA needs to offer service to everyone, vice to outlying areas of the city is not very efficient right now.

"In a city, you should be able to go almost anywhere you need to go using mass transit," he said. "Hopefully, they'll get the money they need soon and start getting the service back again."

His bus is one of the newer, smaller models, but he said he feels more comfortable driving the older

"The bigger the better, I say. I feel more safe in the biggest bus I can have," he said. Salmons leaves the station two minutes late. COTA drivers are allowed to run up to five minutes late, but they can't arrive at stops even one minute early.

COTA salaries start out at about $19 an hour, which is 60 percent of the top salary available to drivers. said Jessica Rubinstein, spokes woman for COTA.

Drivers can reach the top salary after five years of driving.

Drivers begin driving what is called the "extra board." After finishing their route for the night, they check the board to find what their start time is for the next morning.

"When you first start out, you do anything they throw at you. I never imagined how rough it was to first start out in transportation,"

Salmons said. He is the first to admit having a job in transportation is rough when it comes to raising a family. He and his wife divorced when his oldest son himself since this summer. Salmons said public transportation is under-used in Columbus, for several reasons.

"People are in love with their cars. Even if they're riding the bus. they're talking about how they're going to buy a car. I think it's a part of the 'American Dream,' that feeling of independence," he said. "People should explore other avenues of transportation, though. I think they'll find that they'll really get to love riding buses. You can go shopping for the day, and not have to worry about traffic at all.'

Agriculture suffers heavy budget decreases

By Jennifer Davis

With state economies worsening and rampant budget cuts being made in higher education, many departments and services at Ohio State are struggling. But perhaps none have been impacted quite as hard as one of OSU's oldest programs, the Agricultural Extension

The extension program recently received a 6 percent decrease in budget from the state, said Keith Smith, director of the OSU extension program. Smith said the university is raising tuition to buffer the decrease, but the program does not benefit from these increas-

Instead, the program will have to look at other options to supplement their budget.

'We have instated a budget committee to look at ways to cut costs and to look at ways to generate new revenue," Smith said. "That's basically the only way to make up for the 6 percent decrease from the government." Depending on what the committee decides, this could mean the program will need to begin charging user fees above what is currently in place or curtailing certain programs. The program is funded by a number of different sources, including federal, state and county funds. Smith said a small portion of the program's income comes from user fees, but on average, participants pay between $10-$20 for the duplication of materials, registration fees, etc.

Smith stresses the majority of individuals who work for the program are volunteers, and thus, participants do not pay for their time. Smith said he does not foresee overcoming the cuts in funding as an easy issue to resolve, especially when coupled with the 5 percent increase in faculty and staff salaries President William "Brit" Kirwan had proposed for next year.

"We're not sure where the money for those (the salary increases) are going to come from," Smith said. "We've been very frugal with our budget and have never spent more than 80 percent of it on staff, so we have some 'wiggle' room."

Despite the small amount of space for negotiation of funds, the program is still holding jobs in an effort to free up money. Smith said there are 20 open field positions and 10 or 15 state positions which are not being filled because the program has been placed on a hiring freeze. OSU is not the only university whose extension program is feeling the pinch of budget cuts. According to The Chronicle of Higher Education, many land grant universities such as Iowa State University and the University of Minnesota are beginning to charge

From that time, a group of University Senators have been trying to come up with different solutions on how to amend the exceptions clause. So far, three methods are being researched.

One way is to do away with the entire exceptions clause, Fisher said.

Another way is to add a general exceptions clause in a separate part of the chapter, she said. The provost would have the discretion to choose,

Corroding buildings in need of makeover

By Jill Goodwin Lantern staff writer

While the Ohio Stadium expanded and a new business college was erected, some buildings at Ohio State remain archaic and continue to deteriorate. But a $2 million endowment for OSU physical facilities may change all that, if it is approved by the Board of Trustees in March.

"There are currently 98 buildings across campus older than 50 years and in need of renovation," said Jim Stevens, associate vice president of physical facilities. "There needs to be a scheduled maintenance plan."

The issue has been raised by physical facilities for a number of years, yet little has been done to correct it.

"Enough is enough," Stevens said. OSU has $624 million worth of maintenance needs which were deferred due to lack of funding. With the new plan, money will be set aside so every 50 years, existing campus buildings will be renovated and funds will be present to build new facilities.

A facility condition index, which measures the ratio of deferred maintenance to the value of the campus, rated OSU at a 16 percent average. The rating was below that of the national average of 10.25 percent and the Midwest average of 12.58 percent.

Self-sufficient buildings, such as the Horseshoe or the Ohio State University Hospital, are able to raise funds from within necessary for renovation. Other buildings have corroded without the necessary fund-

Money from the state to build new facilities is not affected by budget cuts. However, day-to-day maintenance and up-keep are affected, and money must be set aside, Shkurti said. Physical facilities recently lost $800,000 in funding because of budget cuts, and next year an additional $3 million is expected to be lost. As a result, about 40 janitorial positions had to be cut or left unfilled. University President William "Brit" Kirwan is expected to report

strike, not conflict

Lantern staff writer

Nearly two years have passed since the Communication Workers of America Local 4501 signed a new contract with Ohio State's administration, ending their work strike, but both sides agree there are still many things that need to be resolved.

"Things are about the same," said one CWA housekeeper who wished to remain anonymous. "There was a little raise, but they're taking it right away. They need to start paying us some more Larry Lewellen, vice president of Human Resources, acknowledged there are several issues of contention between the university and the union that need to be dealt with. Still, Lewellen said he thinks there have been some positive steps.

"Things aren't perfect by any means, but we feel we've made progress," Lewellen said. "In our belief, we're all in it together." Although university employees were granted the $2 per hour pay increase and hospital employees received a $1.90 per hour raise, the raises' impact has been hindered by several factors, according to CWA President Richard Murráy. Increases in parking fees for OSU employees and the switch to a new, more expensive insurance company are a few of the issues which need to be addressed, Murráy said.

The state of the national economy has not made it any easier for the 1,862 CWA workers at OSU. "With the economy, it's kind of difficult," Murray said. "We're not reaching for a lot of money. We want to keep our heads above attempt to avoid another work stoppage. "We did not start early enough before," Lewellen said. In addition to another salary increase, Murráy said CWA will seek reform in dispute resolution and the appeals processes.

"We want a process that is more equal," Murráy said. As to how the university's recent budget cuts will affect CWA jobs and future negotiations, Murráy said he believes the university should set aside some of its discretionary funding in order to fulfill its promise to provide competitive wages to all its employ-

Contract resolves | Political challenges drive trustee's service

By Carrie Marie Lymanstall

As the dignified woman crossed a busy High Street walking toward the Statehouse, not even the cold and blustery February wind seemed to hinder her in the least from pressing forward just as she had done all her life.

Jo Ann Davidson, freshman member of the Board of Trustees at Ohio State and former Speaker of the Ohio House of Representatives has led a life marked by a myriad of accomplishments in the realm of public service in Ohio.

Davidson served in the Ohio House of Representatives for 20 years. Davidson also served as Speaker of the House from 1995 until 2001, and was the first woman to hold the position in Ohio's nearly 200-year history. Last May she was appointed by Gov. Bob Taft to serve a nine-year term as a university trustee at OSU.

Davidson said her strong ties to OSU and past experiences with undergraduates have enabled her to understand issues facing today's college students.

"I think that today's college students are under so much more pressure now than ever before to continue their education past a bachelor's degree. I rarely ever talk to a student who doesn't tell me that they plan on getting a master's degree or a law degree," Davidson said.

"The world is so different from the world I grew up in," Davidson said. "It used to be that if you had a high school education, you could easily find a job with a company that you could plan on retiring with, but that's not the way things work today. A college education wasn't a necessity in earlier times, but it's definitely a growing necessity today.'

The world was much different when Davidson, a native of Findlay, Ohio, first entered the political arena in the 1960s. It was an almost exclusively male-dominated area.

After graduating from Findlay High School, Davidson first got her feet wet in public service working for the Findlay Chamber of Commerce, a role that enabled her to become acquainted with local politi-

Davidson said the greatest challenge she faced as a woman in politics was proving she could do the job as well as a man could.

There was always the extra challenge of people wondering if I had the capability to do the job. I always had to continue to prove myself," she said.

Former legislators and co-workers said intelligence and compassion have enabled her to be a successful leader in the political arena.

"She's one of the smartest people that I know. She is detail-oriented and has an excellent sense of humor," said Linda Dotson, Davidson's assistant for more than 20 years. "I'm convinced that she has a photographic memory.

The thing that makes Jo Ann such a great leader is that she has compassion for people and reaches out to make sure that people who want to be involved can be involved," said State Sen. Bill Harris, R-Ashland, who worked with

Davidson said her family helped shape her leadership qualities early

"I credit my competitiveness to growing up with three older brothers," Davidson said.

Competitive nature runs in the family genes. One of her older brothers was the head basketball coach at Michigan State University. He coached during the same era as legendary OSU coach Fred Taylor.

"The only time I didn't root for the Buckeyes in my life was when they played Michigan State in bas-ketball when my brother was the head coach," Davidson said. "But this year, I'll definitely be rooting for the Buckeyes when they play the Spartans."

Her competitive nature also helped her run presidential campaigns in Ohio for Gerald Ford and Bob Dole. The experience she gained from these campaigns should come in handy this election year as she heads Taft's re-election campaign for governor.

The advice Davidson offers to women interested in politics is to get involved in public service as early as possible. She also said the most rewarding aspect of a life in politics and public service is being Fame in 1991.

able to see the difference that can be made in people's lives.

You can work with a company and go about your job and feel some satisfaction, but there's nothing like the feeling you get in public service that you have been able to make a contribution that has a meaningful impact on people's lives," Davidson said. "All the money in the world can't replace that."

Harris said he credits Davidson for his decision to enter the sphere of public service.

When I was considering running for office, I called her and asked her if I could really make a difference. She said, You absolutely can - if you are willing to work hard enough,' and she was right. You can make a difference," Harris

Davidson credits her experiences on the Ohio Chamber of Commerce and in the Ohio House for helping her prepare for her role on the Board of Trustees.

"During my time with the State Chamber of Commerce, Ohio began focusing more attention on education because the state was falling behind in the business world, Davidson said. "Additionally, gained a lot of insight during my time in the legislature because served on the Finance Committee and dealt with education budgets a

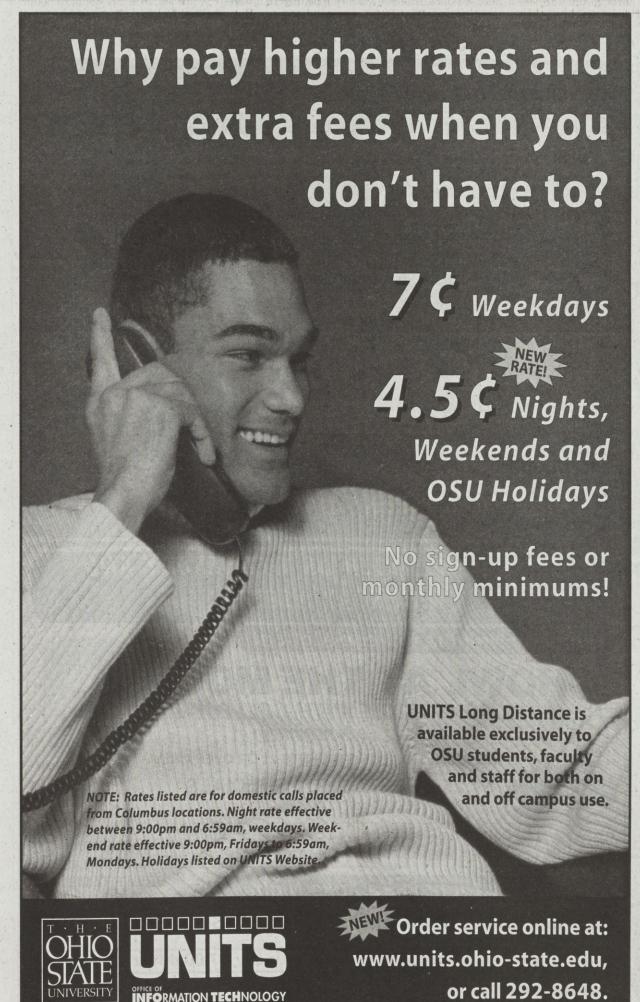

Along with her position at OSU, Davidson also serves on the Board of Trustees at the University of Findlay and Franklin University.

Davidson had strong ties to OSU prior to her appointment to the board. She was a member of the Board of Directors at the John Glenn Institute for Public Service and Public Policy, and one of her two daughters earned her master's degree at OSU.

Davidson runs JAD & Associates, a consulting group she founded which advises on issues concerning public policy and campaigning.

In her few scraps of leisure time, she said she can be found enjoying any sort of outdoor activity such as hiking. The grandmother of four even took a whitewater-rafting trip

Davidson holds honorary degrees from Ohio University, Capital University, the University of Findlay and OSU. Other awards the Reynoldsburg resident has received include being named Governing magazine's Public Official of the Year in 1999 and being inducted into the Ohio Women's Hall of

Scientists participate in Winter Olympics

A group of bioengineers at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City will be taking part in the 2002 Winter Olympics, according to Health Scout News.

The scientists are taking part in the games by using nerve cells to create tiny, living Olympic

We used a variety of techniques, some of which are derived from the semiconductor industry to make printed circuit boards, as well as technology derived from the tissue-engineering field," said Patrick Tresco, director of the Keck Center for Tissue Engineering at the university.

The scientists spent several weeks creating and photographing the nerve cell Olympic Rings, which were only about oneeighth of an inch long.

This kind of bioengineering may some day be used to reconnect damaged nerves in people who have traumatic brain or spinal cord injuries. It might also be used to transplant nerve cells into the brains of people suffering from Alzheimer's, Parkinson's or other diseases.

Man develops HIV from heart surgery

A 51-year old Texas ranch hand has reportedly become the first American to contract HIV from donated blood since strict measures were put in place three years ago, according to the Associated Press.

David Autrey was infected with HIV through a blood transfusion given at Scott & White Hospital in Temple, Texas, during emergency heart bypass surgery in August 2000.

The South Texas Blood and Tissue Center reported all of the tainted blood had been located, and Autrey was the only person who received it.

Despite sophisticated new technology to prevent such accidents, officials said there is a potential flaw in detecting the virus from people who donated blood soon after being exposed to Autrey told the San Antonio Express-News the HIV (drug) cocktail he must take is "no fun, and his life has been devastated by the virus.

Chocolate cravings not an addiction

Although research found chocolate is the single mostcraved food in America, chocolate is not addictive, according to HealthScout News

Addiction, defined clinically, must lead to tolerance, meaning a person must consume more and more to have the same effect or suffer withdrawal symptoms, said David Zald, professor of psychology at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn.

"People don't develop a tolerance for chocolate or become jittery and anxious when they don't eat it," Zald said.

Neurologists believe addictive drugs such as nicotine or heroin change the mechanism of the brain over time, leading to addiction. Studying that mechanism is difficult because by the time the brains of addicts are studied, the changes have already occurred.

If researchers can understand how the brain processes things that are rewarding, like chocolate, then maybe they can understand how the brain processes addiction, Zald said.

Quitting as easy as laughing, study says

Smoking is no laughing matter, but studies show laughing gas may help smokers kick the habit for good, according to msnhealth.com.

Research shows a dose of nitrous oxide taken on the day a smoker decides to quit may succeed in breaking the addiction, according to Dr. Jesse H. Haven of the Anchor Health Center in Naples, Fla.

In a study of 25 smokers, half were given oxygen and half were given nitrous oxide on the day they planned to quit smoking. Over three days, those who inhaled the nitrous oxide reduced the number of cigarettes smoked per day by 85 percent. During the same period, 40 percent of the participants stopped smoking altogether. After six months, many who quit originally stayed cigarette-free.

Laughing gas is not encour-' aged since treatment such as nicotine replacement is known to work. Laughing gas also may not be successful because of its high potential for placebo effect.

Health warnings for ephedra users

New health warnings have been issued for ephedra, according to usnews.com.

Study says kissing does a body good

Recent studies offer even more reasons to pucker up to your sweetheart this Valentine's Day. Research shows kissing can improve immunity and relieve stress while toning the body, reported msnhealth.com.

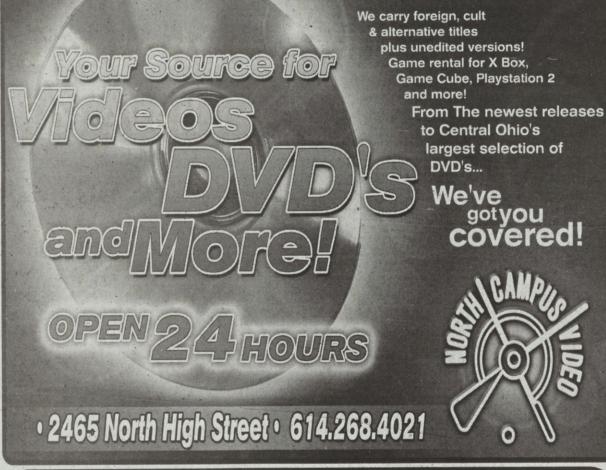

'Kissing may boost your immune system since there's much germ-sharing when we lock lips," said Helen Fisher, researcher in romantic love and professor of anthropology at Rutgers University, Newark, N.J.

Kissing is also beneficial to dental health, according to Mathew Messina, DDS, a private practice dentist in Fairview Park, Ohio. The extra saliva washes bacteria off teeth, preventing the buildup of oral plaque.

Research proved kissing is as good for the mind as the body. The sensual experience of kissing is meditative and eases stress in the brain. Another benefit: French kissing provides a great workout for facial muscles, keeping one looking younger and happier.

Israeli tanks raid Palestinian cities

By Ibrahim Barzak Associated Press

BEIT HANOUN, Gaza Strip — Israeli troops raided three Palestinian towns and a refugee camp yesterday in the most extensive military operation in the Gaza Strip in 16 months of fighting, launched in reprisal for Palestinian rocket fire on Israel.

Four armed Palestinians and a civilian were killed. Tanks withdrew from two towns and the refugee camp after several hours, but troops set up positions in the third town, Beit Hanoun, pitching tents in a girls' high school and the town square. In house-to-house searches, troops arrested at least 27 suspected Islamic Ali Shabat, 41, a farmer, said he witnessed the arrest of two neighbors. During a two-hour search of the neighbor's house, women and children were forced to stand in pouring rain, Shabat said.

After daybreak, Palestinian gunmen battled Israeli troops firing tank-mounted machine guns. Several dozen Palestinian youngsters who were throwing stones at the tanks were in the line of fire. One youngster was wound-

Israeli Cabinet Minister Ephraim Sneh said soldiers would remain in Palestinian-controlled areas of Gaza for days, until rocket factories had been found, and that the military would carry out more large-scale, long-term raids if rocket fire persists.

"This is a threat we cannot tolerate," Sneh, an ex-general, told Israel Army Radio.

The Israeli incursions were in response to the firing of two homemade rockets by the Islamic militant group

Hamas at southern Israel on Sunday. The rockets, called the Qassam-2, landed in open fields and caused no injuries. However, Israel is concerned that the Qassam-2, which has a range of three to five miles and is very inaccurate, can reach Israeli population centers.

Palestinian officials warned that the Israeli incursions would lead to further escalation.

The United States must put an end to this Israeli policy," said Nabil Abu Rdeneh, an adviser to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

Hamas leader Mahmoud Zahar threatened revenge, telling Al-Manar television that Hamas would continue firing Qassam-2 rockets.

"Hamas does not differentiate between settlements in the Palestinian territories and cities in the so-called Israel," he said. The Islamic militant group does not accept the presence of the Jewish state. The Israeli military closed the Gaza Strip to journalists trying to cover the incursions.

Meanwhile, the Palestinian security chief in the West Bank pledged his loyalty to Arafat yesterday, a day after witnesses said the Palestinian leader threatened him at gunpoint during a heated argument.

Arafat was shaking at the time and the pistol fell from his hand, said a Palestinian official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

One Palestinian official said on condition of anonymity that Arafat accused Jibril Rajoub of failing to prevent the release of militants from Palestinian prisons

The Israeli operation began around midnight Tuesday, when dozens of tanks and armored personnel carriers drove into the towns of Beit Hanoun, Beit Lahiya and Deir al-Balah, as well as the Jebalya refugee camp.

Soldiers still face danger U.S. military faces enemy fire at Kandahar airport

By Jonathan Ewing Associated Press

KANDAHAR, Afghanistan -Attackers opened fire late yesterday on U.S. positions alongside the American base at Kandahar airport, the Army said. There were no U.S. casualties in that attack, but in a separate incident at another base, a U.S. soldier was crushed to death by falling equipment.

Details on the shooting incident were sketchy, but there were no casualties on either side, said Maj. Ralph Mills, spokesman for the U.S. Central Command in Tampa, Mills said officials didn't know exactly who fired, but were calling it "probing fire," for now. That usually means shooters trying to find a weak point in the perimeter.

Seven people were detained by American troops, and three more who were seen near the airfield escaped in a vehicle, Mills said.

U.S. troops shot illumination rounds, then returned fire in the direction of the shooting with machine guns. They also send up helicopters to try and assess where the firing was coming from.

The Army soldier, based at Bagram airfield 40 miles north of the capital, Kabul, died of injuries detection. They also can be used to caused when the heavy piece of equipment he was working on fell on him, Mills said. He was taken to a local medical facility for emergency surgery, where doctors pronounced him dead, Mills said.

The soldier's name was being withheld until his family has been notified, Mills said, adding he had no other details.

Eight other U.S. soldiers were injured Tuesday evening when their Air Force transport plane crashed, U.S. officials said.

None of the eight aboard that MC-130P transport plane that went down in a remote part of Afghanistan sustained life-threatening injuries, and seven could still walk, said Maj. Brad Lowell, another Central Command spokesman.

The cause of the crash was not known, although it did not appear to be the result of hostile fire, Central Command said.

Lowell would not say what mission the plane was on or where. But the $75 million propeller-driven aircraft, nicknamed the "Combat Shadow" by the Air Force, are used to refuel helicopters flown by special operations troops, and operate mainly at night to avoid drop leaflets and small teams of special operations soldiers. U.S. special forces and CIA operatives are leading the hunt in Afghanistan for fugitives from the former Taliban regime and the al-

Qaida terror network. Air crashes and other mishaps have so far proved far more deadly to U.S. forces than enemy fire during the four-month U.S.-led war. In the worst accident, a KC-130 refueling aircraft crashed Jan. 9 in neighboring Pakistan, killing seven Marines. On Jan. 20, a CH-53E Super Stallion helicopter crashed south of Bagram, killing two of seven Marines aboard.

Afghan authorities are negotiating the surrender of some 15 Taliban leaders, who may include former Cabinet ministers, an Afghan official said. They could provide information to help the hunt for fugitive Taliban leader Mullah Mohammed Omar and al-Qaida chief Osama bin Laden.

The 15 Taliban figures are negotiating indirectly with representatives of Gul Agha, governor of southern Kandahar province, said his spokesman, Khalid Pashtun.

Pashtun said the surrender may take up to four weeks.

Case will affect 800 death row inmates

By Jackie Hallifax Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. fate of nearly 800 death row inmates in Florida and eight other states may rest on the outcome of a U.S. Supreme Court case that could have the most dramatic effect in 30 years on the way states apply the death penalty.

The high court agreed last month to hear a case from Arizona that asks whether a judge instead of a jury can decide whether a convicted killer deserves the death penalty.

The court's decision, expected by summer, could affect sentences already handed down in nine states where judges choose between a death sentence and life in prison for a convicted killer.

In Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana and Nebraska, juries have no role in sentencing those they con- have a judge make the final call, or vict in capital cases. In Florida, Alabama, Delaware and Indiana, juries make recommendations but judges make the decision.

"It goes to the very heart of what we mean by the right to a jury trial, and we have argued it forever," said Denise Young, a lawyer in Tucson, Ariz., who represents death row Defenders of the sentencing laws at issue have argued that judges can be better than juries at applying the law without passion. Having a judge make the choice may lead to fewer death sentences, or sentences better able to withstand scrutiny on appeal, some prosecutors have said. Florida leads the nine states with 372 inmates on death row, followed by Alabama with 184, Arizona with 128 and Colorado with 39.

The court could rule broadly on whether it is ever appropriate to confine its ruling to the situation in Arizona and the four other states with nearly identical laws.

Since the Supreme Court agreed on Jan. 11 to hear the challenge to Arizona's law, it has granted stays of execution to two Florida inmates whose lawyers had cited the pending Arizona case. That has led some lawyers to suggest that the Supreme Court believes that Florida's law are constitutionally suspect, too.

Under Florida's law, a judge can impose the death penalty even if a jury recommends a life sentence.

Exactly what would happen if the death penalty laws in the nine states were invalidated is not clear. Some lawyers have speculated that the death row inmates' sentences could be commuted to life in prison. Or the inmates might be resentenced, with some receiving a death sentence all over again.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — A Ukrainian immigrant accused in the bloody slayings of six family members was found hanged in his jail cell early yesterday, the sheriff's department said. His attorney called the death suspicious, and officials said they were investigating.

Nikolay Soltys had been undergoing mental evaluations after allegedly using a knife to kill his pregnant wife, 3-year-old son and four other relatives in August.

"I'm baffled how this could have happened, given that he was in isolation" with surveillance cameras trained on his cell, said Soltys' attorney, Tommy Clinkenbeard.

The cameras didn't record, Clinkenbeard said, so someone would have had to been watching the monitor to see his death. He said Soltys used a rope made of cloth, possibly from his bed sheet or part of the cast he was wearing, and a plastic

"It's very suspicious," Clinkenbeard said. "There's something wrong here.

Following a 20-minute meeting with Sacramento County Sheriff Lou Blanas and jail officials, Clinkenbeard said that Soltys' body would be taken to a neighboring county for an autopsy and the cell was being treated as a crime scene. Blanas' department runs the jail.

Blanas said the area of the cell where the rope was tied was out of view of the camera. Jail staff had last checked on Soltys an hour before he was discovered, he said. The case is being investigated as an "unattended death."

Soltys had appeared in court Monday in a wheelchair, the result of jumping off a jail balcony in December. Jail officials said he had inexplicably jumped from the second floor after he was ordered back to his

Bush talks tough to Saddam

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Bush left open the option of a military attack on Iraq to oust Saddam Hussein yesterday. Bush said the Iraqi president "needs to understand I am serious."

A senior U.S. official told The Associated Press that Bush's top advisers and agencies of the government had been directed to develop and refine a full range of options.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the recommendations would then be circulated within the government and sent to the White House so Bush could make a final decision.

Jackets plan to use break wisely

By Jonathan D. Chu Lantern sports writer

Bring on the sun.

After the completion of last night's action, the NHL is on break for the next 12 days due to the 19th Winter Olympics taking place in Salt Lake City, Utah, and the abundance of NHL players suiting up for their national teams.

For those players not representing their countries during the Olympics, this break will be a vacation away from the game.

For the Columbus Blue Jackets (15-33-8-2), who do not have a player participating in the Olympics, this break could be a chance for the team to regroup and perhaps take advantage of teams who have multiple players in the games. Detroit leads the league with 10 Olympians on their roster.

"It's good for us," coach Dave King said regarding the extended break. "Everybody's going to get five, six days

With the extended break, most Jackets players will go their separate ways, but the team is due back a week from today for a mini-camp.

"We don't have anybody involved in the Olympics, so our team comes back. We have everybody here for that five days. That's something some teams won't have because they'll have players missing. Hopefully it'll help us get ready for the second phase of the season," King said after the Jackets' game Tuesday night — a 3-3 tie against Minnesota.

King hopes the second phase will be an improvement on the Jackets' last ten games, of which the team has won only two.

In their last game before the Olympic break, the Jackets lost three leads and settled for the tie against

In Tuesday's tie, the Jackets welcomed back rookie defenseman Rostislav Klesla to the lineup.

Klesla, returning from a shoulder injury that caused him to miss seven games, commemorated his comeback by scoring the first goal of the game for Sanderson to earn. The forward scored on a one-timer late in the first period to give the Jackets a 2-1 lead.

The last Columbus goal was scored by defenseman Deron Quint, which gave the Jackets their final lead of the game. That lead was later relinquished with less than three minutes left in the third period on a Sergei Zholtok goal, his second of the game that sent both teams into overtime and resulted in the tie.

"It was a disappointing tie for us.

We should have won," Sanderson said. With that tie, Columbus has two weeks off until their next game, which

Klesla, who like MacLean will spend the break watching hockey, will travel north of the border to Ontario, Canada.

"I'm going to stay a couple days here and go back to Brampton to see a few games and see the guys," Klesla said, referring to his former Ontario Hockey League team, the Brampton Battalion.

But not all the Jackets will travel alone during their break.

Jackets forwards Sanderson and Mike Sillinger will travel to the Bahamas for vacation.

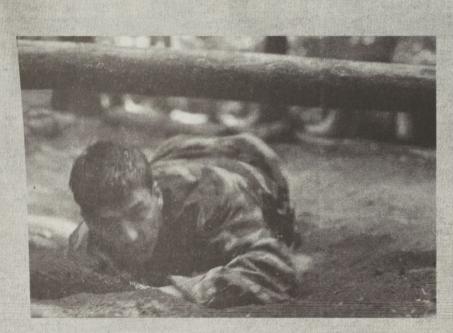

"For everyone, it'll be a nice mental break," Sanderson said. "We're going to come back well-rested."

Practicing 24 hours a week and lifting twice a week can make a stronger person. But for a group of athletes at Ohio State, it also made them better cheerleaders.

The OSU cheerleading squad finished sixth at the 2002 College Cheer & Dance Team Championships held January 9-13. The Buckeyes were the top among Big Ten teams competing in the event.

Adviser Judy Bunting said these results occurred because of yearlong training.

"Everything we do is to make us better cheerleaders," Bunting said. "After tryouts in the spring, we start working a little bit, then we come back in August and work really hard before classes start.'

Although the Buckeyes finished sixth in 2000 and second in 2001, their top goal is not winning the event, Bunting said.

"I think the goal is to hit your routine. You can't control subjective judging, but if you hit your routine and you feel good about how you did, everything else doesn't matter," she said. "Anything else that happens after that is just icing on the Barr's schedule does not slow Cheerleading for OSU is a fulltime commitment, but it is well worth the effort, Bunting said.

"How many people get to cheer in front of 19,000 at the Schottenstein Center or in front of 100,000 at the Horseshoe? The people you get to meet and the memories that you have from doing this make it a great place to cheer," Bunting said.

Co-captain Jennifer Barr, a senior in English, has cheered for the Buckeyes for four years and has many memories. Barr was especially proud of this year's squad and the sixth place finish.

"Of the 16 people that competed, more than half had never competed for Ohio State cheerleading," Barr said. "With that in mind, having placed second last year, and having that extra pressure, we did well."

Barr said she is happy to be past the hard part of the year — the month of November.

"Once school starts, we have football games, volleyball games, then hockey and basketball starts. Right there in November, it all down much in the winter since she is a coach for Dublin High School.

"A lot of us coach right now because it's the easiest thing we can do as far as having a job and making our own schedule," she said. Co-captain Tim Pike, a senior in criminology, said he works at cheerleading camps and clinics in the summer to help pay for school, since cheerleaders do not receive full scholarships.

"The university sponsors our clothes, but we were at nationals beating teams that receive full scholarships," Pike said. "It's really hard for us to compete, even though we do year after year, with these teams that pretty much get paid to

Pike has cheered for the Buckeyes for four years, but has not decided if he will be on the squad again next season. If he is, Pike will be the first five-year cheerleader at OSU in a long time, he said. The 2002 College Cheer & Dance Team Championships are scheduled to air on ESPN2 at 6 p.m. on Feb. 24.

Health Volunteers Needed For A Study of HIV Medicines

Volunteers will be tested and must not have HIV infection. Persons with high cholesterol or kidney stones will not be able to participate.

Study participants will take different combinations of FDA approved drugs which are used to treat HIV infection. Treatment will last 3-4 weeks.

A total of 5 visits (3 visits are 13 hours each) are required. Participants will be paid a total of $600 upon study completion.

WANT TRUE LOVE? MEET THE ONE WHO WON'T LEAVE IN THE MORNING.

Has your heart been broken?
Are you tired of unfaithful relationships?

"At first, sex was exciting. Then I started feeling funny about myself, and then I started feeling funny about my partner. We argued and fought and finally we broke up. Now we are enemies." This is what Dr. Henry Brandt (Collegiate Challenge Magazine) describes as the morning-after syndrome; a predictable pattern he hears when people come to him for counsel.

Is the intimacy you want in your relationships actually there? Or do very real fears of disease or unwanted pregnancy linger and nag at your peace of mind. Do you know that the "safe-sex" myth is no substitute for the love you really desire?

This Valentine's Day find out about love from the One who wrote the Book on it; someone who promises never to leave you, to satisfy your deepest needs and desires and to teach you what it means to love and how to trust. He will never break your heart.

We have found the One who said, "No greater love has anyone than he who lays down his life for a friend," to be the source of love that lasts forever. It is love that will guide and protect; love to achieve fidelity in any relationship. It is the love of Jesus, the Chosen One, the Lamb of God.

Laughter, death: What more could one ask for?

In the midst of the real-life conflict between the Bosnians and Serbians, three men find themselves trapped between the two fronts, with neither side letting up the attack on the other.

What a per-fect place for a comedy.

Man's Land," the new film from direc-Danis Tanovic, plays out like a Coen brothers movie; laughter amongst death and chaos.

Ciki (Branko deal Djuric) is the first to end up in the trench when his group of Bosnian relief soldiers are lost in a fog, putting them between the two fronts, in the area known as no man's land. Serbian soldiers shoot the rest of his group, leaving only the reel

Nino (Rene Bitorajac) enters the trench next, crawling out with another Serbian soldier to make sure all were dead. The live Ciki proceeds to shoot both soldiers, killing the one and just wounding Nino, but not before the pair placed a bouncing mine beneath Ciki's not-so-dead friend Cera (Filip Sovagovic), which will explode if he moves.

This is where the twisted humor of Tanovic (also the writer) really takes over. After Ciki first shot Nino, he asks Nino, "Who started the war?" which forces Nino to claim responsibility for the Serbians. But when Ciki runs to help his living friend, Nino gets the gun, points it straight at Ciki and asks, "Now, who started the war?"

In order to save themselves, Nino and Ciki both signal their respective sides, forcing both to then call the United Nations for help (which also signals the press who listen to the same radio frequency).

It's now up to the French members of the United Nations to save the trio while negotiating a temporary cease-fire through the language barrier — the UN guys speak only

Glass art continues to shine despite break-up

In addition to glass art, Riley Hawk also features some ceramic and wood pieces. The previous show featured work by Steve Jensen, known for his wood sculptures.

Riley Hawk is featuring a show by Bennett Bean that will run through Feb. 28. Bean's show consists of ceramic vessels, some of which were cut and pieced together to form new Richardson thought Bean's ceramics parallel the glass art that was being featured at the gallery. He said he liked how the space could be changed to suit the buyer's taste.

The piece is easy to look at because there are only four people on stage Miller said. There is a coolness to it and it is dark and inviting. It moves quick at times and then slow at others but it is always involving.

A native New Yorker, Miller earned a master's degree in dance at OSU in the 1970s. She has been creating dances for more than 20 years and started the Bebe Miller Company in 1985.

She returned to Columbus just last year as a professor and visiting artist.

She likes the stability of being a professor and that it still allows her time to do her work, Miller said. It has become harder for her company to get funding and gigs so being a professor has become a good fit for her. She is entering into a new phase of mentorship and wants to be there for future generations.

Working with students, she created the works "Prey" and "Tiny Sisters."

"The Hendrix Project" and "Hid-

French and English, most of the Bosnian and Serbian soldiers speak neither — but can they reach the feuding three before they kill each Rene Bitorajac plays the part of the naive Serbian soldier Nino perfectly, reminiscent of Steve Buscemi's performance in the Coen brothers "The Big Lebowski." Having only appeared in a handful of films prior to "No Man's Land," he acts like a seasoned pro, exploding in his own scenes, without overpowering anyone else's performance.

Clad in his Rolling Stones T-shirt, Branko Djuric also appears to have fallen out of a Coen brothers movie, combining the playfulness of George Clooney in "O Brother, Where Art Thou?" with the cool brutality of Peter Stormare in "Fargo."

Bitorajac and Djuric (with a little help from Sovagovic) act as a Bosnian Three Stooges, smacking each other around whenever possible, but with the balance of power constantly changing, as if they were just engaged in a sick game of "Who's on First?" The pair are so similar, they even discover they dated the same girl before the war actually began.

The direction and writing from Tanovic couldn't be better. With this being his second feature film, he's quick to spurn the cheap style of mainstream Hollywood war movies like the Ridley Scott style of "Black Hawk Down" - opting instead for a more "Life is Beautiful" style; a twisted friendship story surrounded by violence, without ever being about the violence.

The film triumphed at the 2001 Golden Globe Awards, winning the best foreign language film award, despite being up against romantic French favorite "Amelie." The two square off again at the 2001 Academy Awards, with the Bosnian film set up to trounce the competition once again, sending Tanovic home with a new golden friend named

Music for the heart

By Ravenn Moore Lantern arts writer

The Ohio State Jazz Ensemble will celebrate Valentine's Day with a concert full of romantic numbers prepared for all to enjoy.

"This concert is a special Valentine's Day, offering and I am hoping people who haven't made other plans will come," said' Ted McDaniel, director of OSU Jazz Ensemble.

The concert will be held at 8 p.m. today in Weigel Auditorium.

The particular theme emphasizes the holiday we're celebrating by performing pieces such as "My Funny Valentine," "Angel Eyes" and "Love for Sale," McDaniel

"There will be regular jazz tunes particular to the fact it's Valentine's Day," McDaniel said.

The Jazz Ensemble is one of the only ensembles at OSU to have performed on European trips. Internationally the ensemble also known as a "big band" because of its size, has performed at venues such as the Montreux International Jazz Festival and the Brienz Jazz Festival in Switzerland and the Vienna Jazz Festivals in both Austria and France.

Ensemble performs throughout the United States and has received major awards.

The "big band" is composed of 18 to 19 members, both music majors and non-music majors, who audition for the band at the beginning of each quarter.

McDaniel said he encourages couples and non-couples to come to the performance.

This concert is a treat for the OSU community considering the ensemble usually performs on Fridays but decided to move the date up to accommodate the holiday.

Admission for the event is $3 for students, $5 for student couples, $5 for general admission and $8 for general admission couples.

All are invited and encouraged to spend the evening with the ensemble, McDaniel said.

"I knew Mac when he was a photographer and I have always found his work interesting," he said.

He has many pieces at home, in his garden and at his place of work, he said. His pieces at work are often the first subject brought up when meeting with new clients. Most people inquire about who the artist is, but generally how much they like the various pieces. Another recent addition to Worthington's gallery is Kenna Brooks, Worthington's new gallery director. Brooks brings a newfound stability to the gallery with her constant presence. Before Brooks was named galerie director, Worthington utilized art students to manage the gallery

Making the gallery's hours dependent on the student's constantly changing schedules often made the gallery difficult to approach, Brooks said. Not only is she able to be there on a regular basis to better serve Worthington's customers, but now a better rapport is developed with new customers.

'I know what certain customers like, I learn their tastes," she said.

Brooks said that it is easy to work with Worthington because of his business sense. He is able to function on the creative level, but at the same time does what is best for preserving an artistic force.

"Mac is both an artist and a businessman," she said. Worthington's work can be found as far west as San Francisco, as far east as Germany, with stops in-between such as Chicago, New York and Washington, D.C., to name only a few.

Whatever makes Worthington such a success, whether it is his undeniable talent, attention to detail, willingness to work with customers or his business savvy, Worthington's worldwide popularity translates into Worthington being a local treasure.

museums across the country. The gallery features an ongoing display of Chihuly. Cindy Riley, co-owner, said he was one of the first contemporary glass artists in this coun-

Chihuly has created a variety of blown-glass forms. Especially impressive are his compilation pieces that consist of many individual glass sculptures wired together to form one large sculpture. "Ries is the type of artist who makes you want to reach out and touch the work," said John Lampros of Riley Hawk Galley. "It's amazing."

Morris' work seems culturally influenced. His blown glass pieces are very in tune with nature and have a hint of ritual significance.

Ries creates reductive optical crystal sculptures that are ground, cut and polished to a smooth surface. Lighting and angles play a large part in the effect of Ries' work. Depending on how one looks at the sculpture, different optical patterns seem to magically appear inside the glass.

Tom Riley said the gallery works to recognize the up and coming artists, such as Dante Mar-coni, Martin Black, Duncan McClellan, Paul Schweider, Pohl Manknowles and Petrovic-Rus-

"We sell great art by living artists that customers can afford," Tom Riley said. "We offer good form with museum quality at attainable prices." "The collectors began to see the advice we have given them is valid," Tom Riley said. "It's Scanlon said. "They have more and more inter-collection. Most people cannot go out and buy a Picasso or a Monet. The art that Riley Hawk sells can be affordable.

"New art is attainable," Cindy Riley said. "Old masterpieces are too expensive and far away."

Cindy Riley said she often becomes close friends with frequent customers because of close customer interaction. These close relationships also help when the owners make selections for their shows. Tom Riley said he knows his collectors and what they want.

Tom Riley said continuity of representation is also important. The gallery features annual shows by certain artists. This allows the collector to grow along with the artist.

Riley Hawk first opened in Columbus 15 years ago. Originally, Tom Riley opened the gallery for his daughter and her husband, Tom and Sherrie Hawk, to run. When Riley Hawk first opened, Short North was just beginning to develop into the cultural area it is today. The Rileys have since also opened galleries in Cleveland and Washington. Tom and Cindy Riley run the gallery in Washington, and Tom Riley said they have a very good person managing the Cleveland store. Cindy Riley said the gallery's longevity has helped in its success. In the beginning, Tom Riley had to go to artists and convince them to be represented by Riley Hawk. As the gallery built up a reputation, artists began to come to the gallery instead and ask to be featured. Riley Hawk now has a reputation of having a large selection of contemporary glass by artists nationwide. Unfortunately all good things must come to an

Last week it was made public that the Hawks and Rileys would no longer be working together. The Hawks are hoping to open a separate gallery

Tom and Cindy Riley will relocate from Washington to Columbus to run the Short North gallery. For now the gallery name will remain the same, but it will eventually be changed.

Riley Hawk Gallery encourages art enthusiasts of all kinds to visit the gallery and check out the latest in contemporary glass art. It is located their homes. This is a fairly new concept in art at 642 N. High St.
