THE STUDENT VOICE OF OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

Clarett returns to team, will miss games

By Matt Duval Lantern editor

After missing more than 20 days of practice, Ohio State sophomore tailback Maurice Clarett joined his teammates on the practice field yes-terday after being reinstated to prac-

But while Clarett is allowed to work out with the team, he is still facing a multiple game suspension from the university and the NCAA for an exaggerated theft report after a car he was borrowing from a local dealership was burglarized.

OSU Director of Athletics Andy Geiger and the NCAA have yet to announce the specific number of games Clarett will miss, but Clarett's dad, Myke Clarett, told USA Today his son will miss six games. If Myke Clarett's statements are true, Maurice Clarett would be back on the field Oct. 18 for the Homecoming game against Iowa.

"It will be a total of six games but he could've lost everything," Myke Clarett said in the report. college eligibility and his scholarship. That was the goal."

Clarett's father said he heard the length of the suspension from a source on the university board of trustees. Contradicting Geiger, who said Clarett's suspension would be for "nonacademic" transgressions, Myke Clarett said his son would be suspended three games for academic reasons and three for the car.

Yesterday's report from Myke Clarett was just the end of a long and busy weekend for OSU and Maurice Clarett. After weeks of speculation, Geiger and OSU received a letter from the NCAA Thursday, listing all of the allegations against Clarett. Geiger then met with Clarett, his mother and attorney in a three-hour long meeting Friday morning.
Clarett emerged from the meeting smiling and playfully hiding behind his mother as reporters and cameras descended upon the star sophomore.

Five hours after their meeting concluded, the first definitive news

"We're relieved that it's finally over and that he was able to maintain his quent reinstatement came during quent reinstatement came during Geiger and coach Jim Tressel's press conference.

'Maurice is anxious to get back in the fold," Tressel said. "We are very satisfied with the process in every-thing. Our people did a great job playing their role."

Despite comments from Clarett family friend and NFL Hall of Famer Jim Brown, who said Clarett would explore his options with the Canadian Football League or the NFL, Tressel said Clarett seemed excited to rejoin the Buckeyes. "He gave me every indication that he wants to be back with his teammates," Tressel said. "Just to see his face, to see him smile a little Geiger was not allowed to discuss exactly what the NCAA found; however, he did say it was unfair to blame Clarett for everything.

'To load 100 percent of everything on him is a bit heavy," Geiger said.

The Buckeyes open up the 2003 season Saturday against Washington.

Ohio State tailback Maurice Clarett, right, and his mother Michelle are followed by reporters after leaving a meeting with Ohio State and NCAA officials Friday. Clarett faces a multiple game suspension from OSU and the NCAA. Official word on the length of the suspension may come later

A new army of white coats has arrived at Ohio State. On Aug. 13, 210 would-be doctors were officially sworn in to the College of Medicine and Public Health as medical Getting into medical school anywhere is not an easy task. Many steps have to be taken to get in.

"All medical students are required to take a year of physics, English, chemistry, organic chemistry, biology and math before they can even apply to medical school," said Rami Sartawi, 22, a recent OSU graduate and one of the new students enrolled. "From there, you have to take the Medical College Admissions Test as well."
The MCAT, like the ACT and SAT, is a standardized test that measures how prepared students are for medical school, Sartawi said. The eight-hour test consists of sections of verbal reasoning, writing, physical sciences and biology.

After the MCAT, there is a pretty lengthy application process involving primary and secondary applications," she said. "If the schools are interested, they schedule an interview with you. A few months later, you get a letter in the mail informing you of their decision."

Associate Dean for Admissions, Dr. Mark Notestine, said he agrees that it is a lengthy process. He said students are required to submit a Web-based application to the Association of American Medical Colleges Application Service. Students then submit a second application to Ohio State, which is accompanied by letters of recommendation from faculty members. Students are evalutated and possibly granted interviews.

At OSU, students are very carefully evaluated on a number of criteria including academic record, MCAT performance, letters of recommendation from faculty, motivation to medicine, clinical experience, research, leadership, service and interpersonal communication skills," Notestine said.

Narrowing down the applicants can take months.

"We received 3,292 primary applications. After a period of declining applications, we interviewed 724 of those applicants," Notestine said. "We made 369 offers of acceptance, and 210 students accepted."

Once a student has been accepted and enters medical school, life becomes a whole new ballgame.

"Just as OSU students experience a transition from high school to the university setting, there is a significant transition from their undergraduate or graduate studies to the medical school setting," said Dr. Fred Sanfilippo, Dean of the College of Medicine and Public Health. "Medical students cover large volumes of material at an accelerated pace - students are expected to be well-prepared, motivated, responsible learners."

Curriculum changes occur as well. Sanfilippo said students complete the first 12 weeks of the cur-

Ohio State enrollment for the summer continued its trend of steady growth, increasing slightly this summer.

According to the Office of the Registrar's Fifteen Day Enrollment reports and summer quarterly trend tables, OSU's total population at the Columbus campus for summer quarter was 19,759, up from 19,669 during summer quarter 2002. The undergraduate population had a small decrease, from 11,219 during summer quarter 2002 to 11,213 this

Linda Katunich, a coordinator within student enrollment, reporting and research services for the Office of the Registrar, said the undergraduate population has been holding steady for the last six years, usually falling within 11,100 and 11,400 undergraduate students attending in the summer.

Total enrollment projection figures for next summer have not been developed yet.

'We only project out one academic year (summer-spring) ahead of the current academic year and have not developed projections for next summer as of yet," said Karen Miller, a resource planning analyst for Institution Research and Planning.

The South Campus Housing Project will result in four buildings combined in order to create more room

"There was a huge demand for student housing," said Ruth Gerstner, spokeswoman for the Office of Student Affairs. "It is really a benefit for graduate and professional students because small efficiency apartments are provided as well.

While most campus residence halls were built in the 1960s, the developing south campus housing will provide a modern style building that offers room and board to graduate and professional students, as and non-traditional students.

Two scholar houses, along with the Worthington and Neil buildings, will provide almost 500 beds to students.

"The Worthington Building will house 128 students, both scholar houses will house 48 students each and the Neil Building will house 270 students," said Toni Greenslade-Smith, the associate director of student affairs.

By providing more housing for honor students, OSU is adding to its living-learning programs.

Living-learning programs offer living arrangements with students who have similar goals and give the opportunity to extend studies beyond the classroom and into daily living experiences

'Sobig' worm leaves computer users with headaches, full inboxes

In less than a month, latest worm has been sent through millions of e-mail messages

By Reid Kanaley Knight Ridder Newspapers

PHILADELPHIA — Brian Clarke fired up his laptop Thursday and got buried in an avalanche of 414 e-mail messages — most of them generated by this week's latest computer virus, the

"This has just been the biggest pain in the world," said Clarke, who travels the Mid-Atlantic region representing the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity on university campuses. "I like using e-mail, but this makes it ridiculous.

So, how big is Sobig? Since Aug. 18, the virus has sent itself millions of times over as an attachment to emails with subject lines such as "Details," "Wicked screensaver," and "That movie." Some email providers catch them, and some don't.

America Online on Thursday matched Wednesday's record, when 23 million copies of the virus were blocked before they reached AOL users' e-mail boxes, spokesman Nicholas Graham

"This is the most aggressive" virus, Jimmy Kuo, of the McAfee Security Anti-Virus Emergency Response Team, said Thursday. "This is truly way, way up there."

And e-mail-security company MessageLabs Inc. proclaimed Sobig the "fastest growing virus ever" in the gallery of online pestilences that includes the infamous LoveBug, Klez and Kournikova viruses, and last week's biggie, the Blaster

Because corporate networks were more likely to have anti-virus hardware and software in use, three home PCs were being infected for every business computer that got the virus, according to McAfee.

Junk e-mail, including unsolicited "spam" and virus-generated messages, are taking a rising toll on worker productivity, some experts say. Ferris Research, a marketing and technology research firm in San Francisco, said earlier this year that junk email will cost American companies $10 billion in 2003. But in light of proliferating viruses such as Sobig, "the $10-billion figure is actually very conservative," David Ferris said Thursday.

McAfee says 49 percent of Americans spend more than 40 minutes per week deleting spam, (U-WIRE) IOWA CITY, Iowa — University of Iowa freshman Kari Thorburn wiped several droplets of sweat away from her forehead in the 97-degree heat as she carried five textbooks that consumed $300 from her wallet.

"I still have three more to buy," she said as she walked out on Sunday. "Luckily, I found a few used books, but still, it was very expensive."

A few blocks away, UI senior Christie Lee clicked away on DogEars.net, an online textbook-trading service provided by the UI Student Government that allows UI students to contact each other via e-mail to trade used

Although the engineering major didn't find textbooks she needed for her classes, she said DogEars is a worthwhile investment.

"It's really easy to use, and I would recommend it to others because it seems like a good deal," she said. "Not many people seem to know about it, though.

George Herbert, the director of the University Book Store, said he believes, however, the effect of DogEars on the IMU facility is minimal, though it is difficult to

"Trading among students has gone on forever, and (DogEars.net) s just another way for students to do it," he said. "Whether they post it online or post it on a bulletin board, it's all the same."

1,360 registered users at the university have made 63 transactions through the Web site located at uiowa.dogears.net.

While the number of actual transactions may be relatively low compared with the amount of books available — 728 as of Sunday — UISG President Nate Green said he was pleased with DogEars' year-long run.

Now that the one-year trial period has expired, UISG will pay DogEars $1,000 in maintenance and upgrade fees for several new features.

Green said he has talked to several UI students about DogEars, and the feedback has been all positive.

Other campuses that use DogEars have expressed similar sentiments.

Tony Vassilev, a student at Columbia University in New York, created DogEars two years ago with Barnard College student Alexis Marquez.

At Columbia, Vassilev said, the students have saved approximately $64,000 in the cost of books since its launch and added that the numbers continue to rise.

The air we breathe on a day-today basis consists of about 19 to 21 percent oxygen, whereas the air dispensed in an oxygen bar contains anywhere from 87 to 95 percent oxygen.

Based on this, frequenters of oxygen bars claim the service boosts energy levels and improves endurance and concentration. They even said it takes the edge off headaches and hangovers.

Staci Chew, employee at the Lawrence bar Eight-One-Five, 815 New Hampshire St., which offers the service on Friday and Saturday nights, said she tried it a number of times. The bar has offered oxygen for a couple

NCAA rules should be reformed

University of Michigan defensive back Marlin Jackson, the preseason Big Ten defensive player of the year, pleaded guilty last week to aggravated assault after being accused of hitting fellow student Shanin Farokhrny in the eye with a bottle during a June house party. As part of the agreement, the prosecutor dropped a felonious assault charge, which carries a sentence of up to four years in prison.

It would seem as if the Wolverines would be without Jackson for a majority of the season. However, on Friday — the same day Clarett found out he would be suspended for "multiple games" by OSU and the NCAA — Jackson was suspended for only Michigan's season opener against Central Michigan.

Comparing the seriousness of Jackson's assault with the saga of Ohio State tailback Maurice Clarett and a borrowed car, it is obvious there needs to be changes in the sentencing rules for college athletes. The possibility of Jackson's suspension lasting longer is there, but the message now being sent is a terrible one. Clarett — who is guilty of falsifying a police report — will most likely have to miss the first six games of the Buckeyes' season, while Jackson — whose punch required Farokhrny to receive 17 stitches — will get an extra week of rest against an already-overmatched Chippewa squad.

The discrepancies in penalties should not come as a surprise, though. The NCAA has never dealt with suspension of athletes in criminal matters. Like in Jackson's case, the organization stood by and did nothing in 1995 when then-Nebraska runningback Lawrence Phillips was suspended for just six games after breaking into the apartment of a teammate and dragging his former girlfriend down a flight of stairs. The suspension was conveniently lifted just in time for the No. 1 Cornhuskers to play No. 2 Florida in the Fiesta Bowl for the national title.

How can Clarett's punishment for a small error in judgment be the same as Phillips' penalty for breaking-and-entering and physical assault? Or six times worse than Jackson's penalty for his house party brawl? By turning a blind eye to student-athletes' criminal matters, the NCAA puts more emphasis on police reports than other people.

When the NCAA was established in 1905, off-the-field violence by athletes was not a major concern; however, during the the last two decades, the rise in the number of criminal acts by athletes is staggering. The NCAA needs to follow the lead of its professional counterparts like the NBA and NFL, which suspend players for off-the-field criminal actions, such as assault and drug possession.

According to the NCAA's Web site, the organization's goals include preparing student-athletes for lifetime leadership. Clarett may have learned his lesson, but how can the NCAA expect Jackson to learn his? Sitting out one meaningless game is not going to better prepare lackson for future leadership.

better prepare Jackson for future leadership.

If the NCAA is truly concerned with preparing better leaders in not just the sports world, it is time for them to take responsibility in the criminal matters of student-athletes.

Stereotyping 101 UM course promotes wrong ideas

Isolation should not be taught in a college classroom, but a course titled "How to Be Gay: Male Homosexuality and Initiation" is scheduled to be taught at the University of Michigan

The professor for the class, David M. Halperin, claims the class does not teach students to be gay, but instead looks into the idea of homosexuality as more than a sexual practice or desire. The class looks into the idea that gay men feel the need to initiate themselves in "gay culture" through a specific taste in music, movies and other cultural forms, an idea Halperin says is shared by both straight and gay people. Halperin said the class will also focus on the role that initiation plays in the for-

This class will be a waste of taxpayer and student money. It will promote the idea that homosexuals should be isolated from society. The idea that a gay culture exists is an unfounded one. Homosexual men and women might enjoy certain activities, but straight men and women may enjoy these same activities. Every gay person does not enjoy the same activities.

Even if the class just examines the idea of a gay culture—rather than teaching about a certain one — offering the class isolates homosexuals from society, and universities should not promote the isolation of different groups from society. A class that focuses on where the idea of a single gay culture came from is not significant to the general culture, nor to homosexuals coming from different socio-economic and cultural backgrounds.

The role that initiation plays in the formation of a gay male identity is another topic that does not belong in the classroom. This sounds like it is Halperin's way of teaching gay men how to be initiated into gay culture — a society that does not even exist as a single, monolithic entity.

Society should not condem or look down on homosexuals. They should be looked at just the same as any other person. But teaching a college class that looks at the notion of where the idea of gay culture came from causes homosexuals to be separated from the rest of society and stereotyped.

While gay men should never shy away from expressing their self-identity, a class dealing with the role of gay identity formation in the way UM wants, makes it seem as if a young gay male must only act a certain way in order to be initiated into a secret society. The teaching of these ideas in a classroom will aid the idea that homosexuals should act only in certain ways, be isolated from society and treated differently.

Ashcroft pushing Patriot Act

ttorney General John Ashcroft recently kicked off a fourteen-city publicity campaign. The tour — which stopped in Cleveland on Wednesday — isn't for any political candidate, or even for any politician. It is in support of the much-debated Patriot Act. Apparently Ashcroft fears the measure — which greatly expanded the government's power to threaten civil liberties in the name of "fighting terrorism" — might be getting a bad rap.

But the speaking tour is extremely one-sided, essentially a beefed-up infomercial to try to capitalize on everybody's patriotic sense.

None of the stops included any forum for public debate or discussion. The speaking engagements were all carefully choreographed, with plans even going so far as to ensure that people such as police officers or veterans would always be behind Ashcroft during his speeches.

One reason behind the tour was to quell public misconceptions about the Patriot Act—like its supposed unpopularity. Ashcroft cited a poll that said Americans support the act by a two-to-one ratio. However, if a majority of Americans really supported the Patriot Act, there wouldn't be a need for the publicity

He also claimed the Patriot Act passed almost unanimously. However, as Sen.

Russ Feingold, D-Wis. — the lone vote against it — said, "this was not...the finest hour for the U. S. Senate. The debate on a bill that may have the most far-reaching consequences on the civil liberties of the American people in a generation was a non-debate." The Patriot Act passed quickly because it took advantage of the post-Sept. 11 patriotism, getting through without debate, and most likely without enough time for all legislators to have even read it.

Americans have been speaking out against the Patriot Act ever since it passed. More than 130 city and counties have passed laws repealing the act. Some even make it a crime to cooperate with it.

But Ashcroft is using the tour to tout the Patriot Act's impact on terrorism. It is difficult to tell how much effect the act has had, because the government inflates terrorist statistics. According to various media sources, here are some of the cases labeled as terrorism: people with mental illnesses, drunken airline passengers and rioting prison convicts. One "terrorist" incident involved a man walking into an FBI office and threatening to kill President Clinton, despite the fact that Clinton hasn't been president for several years.

The Patriot Act has already lead to an abuse of civil rights. During the period Dec. 16 to June 15, the Justice Department received 272 complaints of civil rights abuses in administering the Patriot Act. The department found many of those complaints to be credible, even though the inspector general dismissed some claims without even interviewing any of the parties involved.

John Ashcroft is a desperate man. He knows the recent, unquestioning support of the government is fading. His "patriotism" is being replaced with sensibility as time goes on. More communities are acting against the Patriot Act, and even Congress has taken action. The House of Representatives voted to deny funding for agencies that use warrants for secret searches — a product of the Patriot Act.

Ashcroft is also trying to help out his fellow republicans. His tour goes through three swing states in the 2004 presidential election. Some also think the tour is being used to defuse criticism from the democratic presidential contenders.

The Patriot Act is still a bad idea. It has the dangerous potential to be used against American citizens more than terrorists. Public dissent has been growing - and will continue to grow — as time goes on. Hopefully, the government will realize it went too far with the expansion of its powers. Ashcroft's tour is an insult to public intelligence. If he had any respect for voters, his tour would have included room for debate and for the opposing point of view.

New Middle East plan needed

MICHAEL REGULA is a senior is a senior in political science. He can be reached for comment at regula.14@osu.edu. ast week, the ceasefire between the Israelis and the Palestinians finally broke down after an encouraging seven-week truce. Thanks to an Aug. 19th suicide bombing that killed 20, the road map to peace is going back into the glove compartment, and the guns are coming back out.

And it's about time. Following the bombing, Israeli helicopter gunships fired and killed Hamas' third-most senior leader and his bodyguards late Wednesday in the Gaza Strip. A familiar scene unfolded in the days following. as Israeli bulldozers rolled back into the West Bank, and the military shot another handful of Hamas members. With the future of the road map now in the balance, it's tempting to ask a few questions, none more important than why Israel continues to pull its punches in favor of a hypocritical peace plan doomed to failure.

After watching the past repeat itself yet again last week in the form of an exploding bus, surely one must wonder when enough is enough. At what point will Prime Minister Sharon dismiss this ridiculous notion of a road map and take a cue from the actions of the United States. In some cases, peace cannot be reached over a handshake, and this is certainly one of those cases. Whoever thinks a "holy war" can be negotiated must be kidding. And whoever thinks Hamas attacks are not a religiously motivated war on Jews, the joke's on you.

While the United States finds a hard-line preemptive policy necessary to protect itself from terrorism, why is our government urging an entirely different strategy for Israel? Why are they listening? With the proven success of our own preemptive and proactive campaign against Al-Qaida, how can anyone expect Sharon to continue peacefully leading Israel down a doomet and the alexant time of the states.

It's past time the gloves come off, and these militants meet their fate. It's ridiculous for anybody — including the United States — to expect anything less. If a single bus exploded in Manhattan, rest assured Bush wouldn't find himself at any bargaining table. Sadly, Israeli leadership still plugs on after more than 70 such explosions in just the last three years.

As if it needs to be said, the road map for peace is on hold. However, it should be history. Israel needs to extend a long, strong arm because Abbas and the Palestinian Authority continue idling — while claiming to be hamstrung by their own terrorist factions — finding themselves between a bomb and hard place. It is quite clear though, that when it comes to controlling their own (including Hamas and the al-Aqsa Martyrs Brigade), they lack either the motivation or backbone to see this road map through. If we take their word for it, they are the power that doesn't have any — a big gun with no bullets. If we don't take their word for it, we are left to believe peace is the last thing they truly desire. Either way, it's impractical for Israel to continue the ongoing cycle with them, trading momentary peace for random terror.

On the other hand, it's hard to believe the majority of the Palestinian people themselves don't want the same things most Israelis do. It is easy, however, to understand they don't have the same ability as a society to mobilize their own destiny. That's why it's unforgivable the Palestinian Authority allow Hamas to be recognized as the only vehicle taking strong steps — knowing they will be followed by a society desperate for leadership. And while this may be the case, support for Hamas should not be seen as support for terror, but support for change — any change.

The bottom line is that a completely new approach is long over due, and change is exactly what is needed. The same old plan with a whole new name is sadly what we've been resigned to put our stock in for over a decade now. It's time to sell, and sell at all costs. Few are dictating terror, peril and fear to many on both sides of the conflict, and peace through peace has failed. Sometimes peace means war.

Family farms declining

While the thousands of visitors may have enjoyed the variety of entertainment and amusements, something at the 150th Ohio State Fair was missing.

Fairs — especially at the county level — have always been a show-case for local 4-Hers and their livestock. Fair time was the time when kids got to see the benefits of their hard work, work started from the birth of their animals. Farm kids would spend hours in the barn, feeding and preparing their animals for the upcoming fair season. Most families would show only at their county fair, but some would spend their entire summer traveling from fair to fair.

Sure, the Ohio State Fair still had plenty of animals, shown by hundreds of 4-Hers from across the state. But as I walked up and down the aisles in the swine and cattle barns, I couldn't help but feel that the age of the true livestock "projects" was gone. Gone are the days when 4-Hers got to see their project from beginning to end. Now, as I found out from talking to many of the kids and parents in the barns, many of the animals shown at the fair came from breeders specializing in fair projects. Many of the animals weren't born on the family farm; in fact, many of the families didn't even raise their own livestock.

If there was someone who shouldn't have been surprised by this development, it was me. In all but one of my years showing at the local county fair in Illinois, my family bought its animals from outside breeders. (Go figure, the only year I actually won something was the year we bred our own animals.) Both sides of my family made their living in the hog business, but just when I began 4-H, market prices for animals plummeted to single cents per pound. As the cost of living and maintaining a farm stayed the same and profits fell, my dad did what most farmers did — he got out of the business. From then on, we bought our animals from local

But this isn't a problem just for Illinois and Ohio — it's part of the national trend of the disappearing family farm. Just 10 to 15 years ago, family farms were still a major part of Americana. It was commonplace to drive through rural Midwest and see farms dot the landscape. These farms are still there, but take a closer look. Gone are the herds of cattle. Gone are the concrete lots full of hogs. Instead, all that stands are empty buildings and grazing areas overrun with uneaten wild grass.

The nation's dwindling economy may have hit family farms the hardest. No longer are families able to live on yearly harvests and livestock alone. Rising costs of feed and maintaining machinery have almost made family farms extinct. Only farms run or subsidized by corporations and big businesses are able to survive.

Growing up, I never wanted to follow the family business and take over the farm. My dad understood and encouraged me to pursue something else. He knew the downfalls of a farming-only income. He continues to farm land, but supplements his income with another job.

I find myself, now more than ever, respecting what he and other farmers do. They continue to farm not because of the income, but for their love of the farming life. As the U.S. economy continues to decline with no end in sight, the endangered family farm may not be too far from total extinction.

U.S. officials say no more troops are needed in Iraq

By Genaro C. Armas Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Top U.S. officials oppose sending more troops to Iraq, citing better intelligence and increased cooperation with Iraqis as keys to countering the rising number of terrorist attacks that have hampered rebuilding efforts.

L. Paul Bremer, the U.S. civilian chief in Iraq, and Gen. Richard Myers, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, also welcomed more assistance from other countries to help stabilize the situation. But they stopped short Sunday of relenting to foreign critics calling for some military control to be ceded to the United Nations.

Bremer told "Fox News Sunday" it was "hard for me to see how the U.N. itself can play a further military role because the U.N., in my experience, normally insists on commanding its own troops.

At least some U.N. control is a condition that France, India and other nations have insisted on before sending troops. Bremer said all military forces should remain under command of the U.S.-led coalition, although "the the reconstruction of Iraq.'

Questions about U.S. troop strength in Iraq have heightened since the truck bombing of U.N. headquarters in Baghdad last week that killed the United Nations' top envoy and at least 23 others.

About 150,000 American troops are in Iraq, along with 20,000 soldiers from Britain and other coalition countries. Roughly 50,000 Iraqis are working with the United States on security matters.

There were fresh signs of unrest Sunday after a bomb exploded outside the house of one of Iraq's more important Shiite clerics, killing three guards and injuring 10 others.
Also Sunday, the International

Committee of the Red Cross said it was scaling back its work force in Baghdad after receiving warnings that the organization might be a terror target.

Myers said on CBS' "Face the Nation" that Gen. John Abizaid, the U.S. military commander in Iraq, hasn't asked for more troops, but the Pentagon would consider any such request.

Bremer, interviewed on ABC's

U.N. clearly has a vital role to play in "This Week," also cited the need to reconfigure U.S. forces to make them more mobile as another way to stem the violence.

American officials believe militants from Saudi Arabia, Syria and Iran are infiltrating Iraq to attack Western interests. Last week, President Bush said more foreign "al-Qaida-type fighters" have moved in.

Myers told NBC's "Meet the Press" that the United States has not created a haven for terrorists, though he maintained that Iraq was a big part of the broader war on terrorism.

"And what the terrorists want to do is they want to have their way," the general said. "And that's just not going to be. It's more a question of wills right now."

Concerns over how big a role other countries should play in policing Iraq have also risen because of increased criticism about overall U.S. military strength. Besides Iraq, the United States has long-term commitments in — among other places — South Korea, Kosovo and Afghanistan, and recently deployed a small peacekeeping force to Police and people look at a vehicle damaged in a bomb blast at the Gateway of India, in Bombay, India, yesterday. The bombings killed at least 40 people and injured at least 150. The explosion came the same day as the release of a report of a disputed Hindu and Muslim religious site that has been linked to the previous Bombay blast.

Indian market bombed by unknown terrorist group

By Ramola Talwar Badam Associated Press

BOMBAY, India — Car bombs exploded at a crowded jewelry market and a historic landmark in Bombay yesterday, killing at least 44 people, wounding 150 others and shaking buildings in India's financial capital.

The bombs, hidden in the trunks of two taxis, blew up within five minutes of each other, police said. Several people were being interrogated, including one taxi driver.

Police were focusing their investigation on Muslim militant groups.

"There are many jehadi groups out, let loose by the enemy country," said Ranjit Sharma, a police commissioner. Jehadi groups are operated by Islamic militants.

The "enemy country" was a clear reference to Pakistan, India's longtime rival. Such an accusation could threaten to increase tension between the nuclear-armed neighbors, though Pakistani officials quickly denounced the attack as "wanton targeting of civilians."

Sharma specifically mentioned the Students Islamic Movement of India, or SIMI, a militant students' group outlawed in September 2001, and Lashkar-e-Tayyaba, one of more than a dozen Islamic rebel groups fighting Indian security forces in Kashmir since 1989, seeking independence for the divided Himalayan province or its merger with Muslim dominated Pakistan.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the lunchtime bombings, which came hours after the release of a long-anticipated archaeological report on a religious site in northern India claimed by both Hindus and Muslims. The dispute has been linked to previous bombings.

The attacks however, appeared aimed more at the city itself - the nation's financial heart - than at members of a particular religion. Stock prices plunged after the blast reports. The benchmark index of Bombay Stock Exchange, the Sensex, closed at 4,005, down 119 points or 3 percent.

One of the bombs exploded at the Gateway of India, a wellknown historic landmark and popular lunchtime eating spot frequented by both Hindus and Muslims. The other was at a crowded neighborhood of jewelry stores, where many shops are owned by Hindus but many of the artisans are Muslims.

"The explosions were aimed at targeting the economic activity of the city, as well as Bombay as a tourist destination," said Sushil Kumar Shinde, chief minister of Maharashtra, the state where Bombay is located.

"The blasts have thrown up a challenge to the resilience of this city," he said at a press conference, urging people not to panic.

Telephone lines were jammed and mobile phone services briefly crashed as panicked residents called family and friends. Police issued security alerts for Bombay and the Indian capital, New Delhi, calling policemen back from leave in case of further trouble.

Senator: U.S. aid needed in Israel

By Leigh Strope Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As violence escalates in the Middle East, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee says military involvement by the United States and its NATO allies might be required to bring stability to Israel and the Palestinians.

"If we're serious about having a situation of stability, a very direct action, I think, is going to be required," Sen. Dick Lugar, R-Ind., said Sunday on CNN's "Late Edition."

Israeli helicopters fired missiles at a group of armed men sitting near the Gaza City beach Sunday, killing four Hamas fighters, including a fugitive commander.

Hours earlier, Palestinian militants fired a new, longer-range rocket into Israel. The rocket, while Abbas and Dahlan supervise which landed about four miles the rest. Instead of giving up control from the city of Ashkelon, fell on a over armed men, Arafat has probeach just 30 feet from an unmanned lifeguard post, the Israeli army said.

"At some point the United States and its NATO allies and somebody is going to have to work with the Israelis and the Palestinians who want a state to get rid of the terrorists. I think it's just that simple," Lugar

International mediators want Yasser Arafat to relinquish control of security forces and allow Palestinian Prime Minister Mahmoud Abbas and the U.S.-backed security chief, Mohammed Dahlan, to clamp down on militants in response to a Hamas bus bombing that killed 21 people in Jerusalem last week.

Arafat continues to command several of the security branches, posed passing the supreme command to a loyalist, effectively sidelining Dahlan. The Bush administration "has to figure out who is going to go after the terrorists," Lugar said, adding that U.S. military involvement "has to be a potential possibility." A Democratic colleague agreed. "You have to have some military entity that is going to be able to control the terror. Otherwise, the situation is going to dissolve into nothingness," said Sen. Dianne Feinstein,

Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., who serves on the Armed Services Committee and is part of a congressional delegation to the region, said peace won't be a reality until the Palestinian security forces are united under Abbas.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — About 100 demonstrators prayed yesterday outside the Alabama Judicial Building, keeping up their opposition to a federal court order to remove a 5,300-pound stone representation of the Ten Commandments from the building's rotunda.

Attorneys prepared to ask a federal court in Mobile to block the removal of the Christian monument.

Demonstrators have said they know the monument, installed two years ago by Moore, could be moved today.

Federal courts have held that the monument violates the Constitution's ban on government promotion of a religious doctrine.

Moore, who contends it is his duty to acknowledge God in the public rotunda of the state government building, was suspended last week by a state judicial ethics panel for disobeying the order by U.S. District Judge Myron Thompson to move the monument.

Record gas prices should stabilize in coming weeks

Gasoline prices around the country jumped to record highs during the past two weeks as the nation's epic blackout temporarily shut down some refineries and a broken pipeline caused shortages in Arizona.

The shortages pushed average retail gasoline prices up more than 15 cents a gallon nationally, the biggest two-week hike since the Lundberg Survey began keeping records 50 years ago.

The survey of 8,000 service stations on Friday showed an average of all grades of gasoline reached $1.7484 a gallon, just short of the survey's all-time high weighted average of $1.7608 set last March 21, analyst Trilby Lundberg said

The refinery shutdowns, caused by the blackout in parts of the Northeast and Midwest, combined with the break in a major pipeline in Arizona to disrupt supplies, Lundberg said.

The reopening of the pipeline Sunday and the end of the blackout means gas prices should fall, she said. The customary September decline in demand and an influx of imported gasoline also should stabilize prices.

Self-serve regular gasoline showed an average weighted price of $1.7191 a gallon, with mid-grade at $1.8127 and premium grade at Phoenix had the highest leap in the nation during the two-week period, with prices jumping 60.42 cents a gallon for self-serve regular. On Aug. 22, self-serve regular averaged $2.1425, the highest price in the nation for that grade.

The lowest price for that grade was $1.4920 in Charleston, S.C. The trouble in Phoenix started when the pipeline ruptured July 30 because of corrosion. The line, which delivers gas from El Paso, Texas, was reopened Aug. 1 but shut down again on Aug. 8 after safety concerns surfaced.

The shortage came to a head last weekend when gas stations began running dry. At its worst, twothirds of metro gas stations were empty and some that remained open sold a gallon of gas for $3.99 and higher.

The pipeline went back into operation Sunday. Eighty-five percent of the Phoenix area's 700 or so stations had gas on Sunday, according to state officials, but prices remained high.

Companies' warnings ignored, may have caused massive blackout

By Liz Sidoti Associated Press

COLUMBUS — Two Ohio companies at the center of the investigation into the nation's worst blackout warned state regulators five months ago that their power systems could overload if the grid linking U.S. and Canadian utilities had problems.

FirstEnergy Corp. and American Electric Power said in longterm forecasts that they didn't expect any of their own transmission lines or substations to fail this summer.

But both companies said that widespread outages were possible if the spaghetti-like system that links eastern states and Canada experienced unexpected changes in electricity flows, power transfers between regions, unexpected demands and extreme weather.

"Together, these factors ... may lead to overload conditions, FirstEnergy said.

Those are just the sorts of power grid disturbances that swept across eight states and the province of Ontario, Canada, on Aug. 14, spreading the outage to 50 million

Akron-based FirstEnergy is at the center of a U.S.-Canada inquiry of what caused the outage. The most prominent theory is that a FirstEnergy power plant in Eastlake, Ohio, and some of its electricity transmission lines failed, including one that sagged into a tree.

The resulting surge of power in Ohio spread, rocketing across transmission lines in Indiana, Michigan, Ontario, and New York and setting off automatic power shutdowns.

The two Ohio power companies say the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio has heard the same grid overload warnings from them for years and there is nothing that state regulators could have done with that information to prevent the

It's a recognition of the fact that we are all interconnected and that there are strengths and weaknesses to that," Ralph DiNicola, a FirstEnergy spokesman, said yesterday.

The good is that being interconnected enhances reliability. The not-so-good is that what happens on adjacent systems could impact our system," DiNicola added.

Shana Gerber, a PUCO spokeswoman, said state regulators don't have the authority to help the utilities solve such reliability problems.

"All we can do is encourage these companies to participate in a regional transmission organization in which they can solve these issues internally," she said.

In Indiana, James P. Torgerson, chief executive of the Midwest Transmission System Operator, told state regulators yesterday that the grid manager has increased monitoring of FirstEnergy, adding data collection points to watch voltage flows on its lines.

Fighting between American troops, Iraqi loyalists continues

By Hrvoje Hranjski Associated Press

TIKRIT, Iraq — American forces captured seven men — two of them Saddam Hussein loyalists and five believed responsible for attacks on U.S. troops — during raids in the deposed leader's hometown, the military reported yesterday.

American troops operating near Hamurrabi, 60 miles south of Baghdad, also reported finding a huge arms cache that included 400 cases of anti-aircraft shells and 200 rocket-propelled grenade rounds, the U.S. military reported.

At the bombed U.N. headquarters in Baghdad, officials handed over to family members the bodies of seven Iraqis killed in the Aug. 19 terror suicide attack.

Nicolaas Rademeyer, U.N. field security officer, said the organization had been able to confirm 20 deaths with an unknown number of people missing. An Associated Press survey of hospitals found three other deaths in the attack, for a total of at least 23.

An American soldier told an AP reporter yesterday that the Republican Bridge over the Tigris River in central Baghdad had been closed for an hour Sunday night after U.S. forces discovered a bomb. He refused to give any other details.

Yesterday in Najaf, mourners buried three guards who were killed in a bomb attack Sunday on the house of Mohammed Saeed al-Hakim, one of Iraq's most important Muslim Shiite clerics.

The bomb, a gas cylinder wired to explode, was placed along the outside wall of the house. It blew up just after noon prayers. A number of al-Hakim's family members were wounded. He suffered cuts on his neck.

"Obviously terrorist groups who belong to the former regime are behind this incident," said Abdel-Aziz Hakim, a relative of the religious leader.

Milosevic denies involvement in genocide during Balkan war

By Anthony Deutsch Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — A former Bosnian Serb soldier who confessed to executing at least 100 Muslims from Srebrenica in 1995 testified at Slobodan Milosevic's war crimes trial yesterday that the massacres must have been ordered by higher ranking military officials.

The former Yugoslav president denied involvement in the killings and blamed mercenaries who he said had been paid in gold for work allegedly commissioned by French intelligence.

"Neither Serbia nor I have anything to do with these events in Srebrenica," Milosevic said.

Former soldier Drazen Erdemovic, 31, took the stand as prosecutors entered a final, critical stage of their case, in which they will try to prove allegations that Milosevic orchestrated the most heinous crime of the Balkan wars — genocide in Bosnia.

Erdemovic — who pleaded guilty to murder as part of a deal with prosecutors in 1996 and has served a fiveyear sentence — described how on July 11, 1995, his battalion summarily shot 1,000-1,200 people at a farm in the northeastern enclave Srebrenica.

He said that in spite of moral objections, he participated in the killing spree for four hours straight before being relieved.

"I was personally ordered to do it," Erdemovic said. "This could not have happened if it had not been allowed by the main staff" of the Bosnian Serb military command, he said

Testifying as a protected witness—out of the sight of the court's public gallery, and with his image blurred on a broadcast of the proceedings—Erdemovic said the operation was too extensive and organized to have been carried out without approval from regional commanders.

Erdemovic said he believed the orders came from a Lieutenant Colonel whose name he did not know, but he identified several other participants in the killings based on photographs and video footage shown in court by prosecutors.

In the next four months, prosecutors will attempt to link Milosevic to the murder of an estimated 7,500 Muslim boys and men from Srebrenica. They will also present evidence on the three-year siege of Sarajevo, Bosnia's capital.

After the fall of Srebrenica in July 1995, Serb forces rounded up some 30,000 refugees who had sought safety at a U.N. base. As Dutch peace-keepers looked on, the women were deported to Muslim-held territory, and the boys and men were transported on 50-60 buses to execution sites.

The prisoners, many blindfolded and bound at the wrists, were lined up in rows and shot, first with machine guns and later with single pistol shots to the head, Erdemovic said.

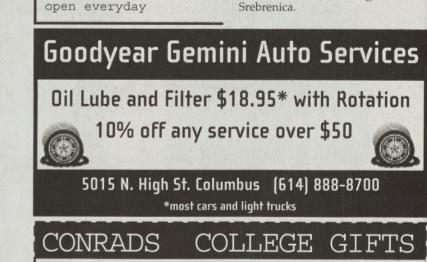

Prosecutors say the massacres were the result of Milosevic's alleged political aim of creating an ethnically pure Serbian state.

Milosevic, who denies all wrongdoing and rejects the authority of the court, is defending himself against 66 counts of war crimes in Kosovo, Croatia and Bosnia.

Erdemovic also testified in the genocide trial of Bosnian Serb Gen. Radislav Krstic, who was convicted in 2001 and given a 46-year sentence.

Two of the tribunal's most-wanted suspects — Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and wartime commander Ratko Mladic — have also been indicted for genocide in

Radiohead makes list of summer favorites

By Eric Christ Lantern arts editor

Already the days are getting shorter, and soon the leaves will begin to change hue and fall from the trees. The scent of summer barbecue will cease to fill the air, and football fans will bundle up for chilly Saturdays at Ohio Stadium.

But before bidding adieu to the dog days of summer, let us take a moment to look back on the summer months and the best (and in some cases worst) in arts and entertain-

Festivals and fairs were too numerous to mention, and the Ohio State Fair celebrated its 150th anniversary with fireworks and butter sculptures. Hollywood vomited out the usual summer dross we have come to love and expect, including, but not limited to, "Hulk," "The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen" and "Grind." America found itself in the grips of Potter fever once again when the fifth installment of JK Rowling's popular series was released.

The summer has a way of passing us by before it really feels like it has begun. As a result, I did not attend some of the events I had hoped to enjoy. These summer nights are made for music. Unsurprisingly, my pick for the season's best is an album. Radiohead's "Hail to the Thief," released in early June, was a perfect companion on road trips or in the disc changer on muggy afternoons. In interviews, Thom York denied the album's content had anything to do with the Bush administration and its policies following Sept. 11, 2001, but even a cursory glance at the lyrics would lead one to believe that York is not pleased with the state of world affairs, and much of this disproval is blatantly aimed at the president and his cronies. The album is a well-needed protest, but it is also filled with haunting rythmns and York's snarling vocals. Dense and, at times, hard to unravel, it is always interesting.

A good time is had by all at Andyman's

By Cyndy Witz Lantern arts writer

This was a good summer for Columbus art fanatics.

The greatest ballet dancer of all time, Mikhail Baryshnikov, graced us with his presence; 50 Cent, Jay-Z and Snoop Dog "Rocked the Mic" at the Germain Amphitheater; and "Chicago" and "Bowling for Columbine" were released on video.

Sometimes there's just nothing better than kicking back at a fun bar and having a drink while listening to some good live music, though. And that's why the best thing abut this summer was seeing Mrs. Children play Wednesday nights at Andyman's Treehouse in Grandview.

The bar itself is unlike any other off-campus. Drinks are cheap, there is outside seating and a pool table, cover charges are low and, to top it off, there's this giant tree that literally grows right through the roof of the bar.

Better than the bar was Wednes-

Lollapalooza leaves fans feeling satisfied

By Jason Brown Lantern staff writer

With summer being the season for music festivals, the decision of which one to drop upwards of $100 on can be tricky. For my money the choice was Lollapalooza, and it proved to be a wise selection.

The resurrection of the tour, which gave birth to most of the modern summer music festivals was a welcome site and well worth the $60 I paid to attend.

On a hot afternoon, the Donnas kicked off the action on the main stage to a mixed reaction. Many concertgoers were still busy investigating the numerous booths and side shows Lollapalooza had set up around the pavilion. Some of the second stage acts also seemed more tan-talizing than the all girl punk

Local country act is making waves

By Matt Duval Lantern editor

While Columbus may not be known for its local music as much as someplace like Athens, Georgia, this city's music scene has seen its fair share of local acts hit it big.

A staple of most Ohio State's student's music knowledge, O.A.R. has been criss-crossing the country this summer on the Sprite Liquid Mix Tour, performing with the likes of The Roots and N.E.R.D.

But probably the best "local boys do good" story has to be country megagroup Rascal Flatts. The group, comprised of Columbus natives and second cousins Jay DeMarcus and Gary LeVox, along with band mate Joe Don Rooney, have taken the country music industry by storm this summer. Thanks in large part to their nationwide tour with Brooks and Dunn's "Neon Cir-cus and Wild West Show" and the 2003 Academy of Country Music Top Vocal Group award, Rascal Flatts has become one of country music's most popular groups.

More than two years since the release of their first studio album, the trio came back to Columbus and the Germain Amphitheater with the "Neon Circus" on June 22. Despite sharing the marquee with veteran stars like Brad Paisley and Brooks and Dunn, it was clear to see that the fans, along with the group itself, have not forgotten where the seeds of Rascal Flatts were planted. The group showed the versatility of their newest and second-studio released album ",Melt," with ballads like "I

If a billing on country's largest tour wasn't enough this summer, Rascal Flatts earned some more recognition with their controversial video for "I Melt." The video for the song co-wrote by LeVox features a brief glimpse of Rooney's naked rear as he gets out of bed. It also features model Christina Auria, who plays Rooney's love interest in the video, in the shower. "I Melt" is the first video to show nudity on the cable station Country Music Television, while another country music video channel Great American Country has banned the video from being played on its station. Since the controversy, the song and album have continued to climb the charts, with the album reaching No. 1 on Billboard's country

Depp dazzles in summer pirate tale

By Chad Curts Lantern arts writer

The cinema is a place where and bustle of busy summer schedules. Only in this magical setting can our worries be drowned instead of our will. And it was in this setting where I found "Pirates of the Caribbean."

In a summer which has left many movie patrons wanting more, "Pirates of the Caribbean" is a tale of ghosts and swashbuckling, which helps to reclaim a little of the respect the Disney Corporation has lost over the past few years with some recent box office a level that can otherwise only be disappointments. With the success of this movie and "Finding Nemo," there is no doubt about Disney's staying-power.

The movie easily surpassed many face-down, floating flops like "Dumb and Dumberer: When Harry met Lloyd" and countless others, which can go we can escape from the hustle unnamed because of already unjustified overexposure.

The movie was visually mindblowing, with its wonderful attention to the computer animated images, like the ghosts changing their appearance in the moon's light. And along with those frightful images were the images of the spirit-filled pirate ship and other 18th century vessels, which gave the movie its sense of adventure. This is the magic that makes movies excel to reached in our dreams.

Johnny Depp gave another classic performance as the clever and often unpredictable Captain Jack Sparrow.

Depp alongside Orlando Bloom is a coupling, which reaches into your soul and pulls out a natural craving for adventure and the unknown.

Newcomer Keira Knightley played Bloom's love interest, Elizabeth Swann, capturing the hearts of her audience. Her beauty was immaculate, but it was her skill as an actress that will secure the future of her career.

The movie set the scene and the actors made the scene great. This was a movie that had everything one could desire: action and adventure, comedy and love.

The Ohio State women's soccer program will celebrate its 10-year anniversary of being a varsity sport at Jesse Owens Memorial Stadium

The event has been tabbed the Celebration of 10. Former members of the program have been asked to return to honor the event with the current team. Approximately 60 of the 85 alumnae are returning for the Buckeyes' home opener at 7:30 Friday night, against Îndiana State.

"This is a great stepping stone for this program," said co-chair of the organizational committee Amber Barnes. "It is going to be neat to go back and see people who started the program, and rekindle friendships from our past playing experience. Everyone we have contacted is extremely excited about the event."

The alumnae will be introduced at halftime of the game by the year in which they joined the program. Immediately following the game, there will be a tailgate party for the alumnae, along with current players and their families. The celebration doesn't stop there. It continues throughout Saturday with a brunch from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the Alumni House, followed by a tailgate party at 4 p.m. for the Buckeyes'

Coach Lori Walker said she hopes the Celebration of 10 will connect her current team with the history of the program, and give them a perspective on how playing soccer has given them added qualities in their lives.

"I hope that our current players can recognize the connection to tradition, the importance of everyone that has come before them; how they the alumnae - have already gone through what they are currently going through," Walker said. "Also, to recognize how far we've football home opener against come, and yet how far we still have put a name with a face.

Buckeye forward Lisa Grubb said it will be cool to get a chance to meet people who started the program and have been in it, so a tradition can be started similar to what other programs have.

"I'd like to talk to players who were first here, especially Jodie Stranges," Grubb said. "She was our first All-American to go through here.'

Stranges was a four-time letterwinner from 1994 to 1997. She has recently been named one of 11 new members to be inducted into the Ohio State Athletics Hall of Fame. The soccer family will honor her induction at the brunch on Saturday morning, but the official induction will take place Sept. 12 and 13 when the Buckeye football team plays North Carolina State at home. Stranges is the only player from women's soccer to be named an All-American. Only 54 women have been inducted to the hall of fame since 1993, in comparison to 204 men Stranges was unavailable for comment, but it is evident that current players have much respect for her.

"I have such an appreciation of what she did," Grubb said. "I've always heard of Jodie Stranges, and to get to know players like her as a person will be a great opportunity to

Ten year celebration for Buckeyes OSU men's soccer suffers loss to SMU

By Tom Symonds Lantern sports writer

The Ohio State men's soccer team met a familiar foe in Friday night's College Cup Preview Match.

The Buckeyes faced off against No. 5 Southern Methodist University at Crew Stadium. Two years ago, the men played to a 0-0 tie in the 2001 College Cup Preview Match in Crew Stadium. Friday night's contest was not as kind to the Buckeyes as they fell to the Mustangs 5-0.

"SMU is a great team," OSU coach John Bluem said. "This was a good test for us. I think our guys realize that if we want to get to the next level, we are going to need a lot more intensity."

The scoring began in the 19th minute as Ryan Latham beat OSU goalkeeper Raymond Burse to put the Mustangs up 1-0.

SMU struck again seven minutes later, when midfielder Kellan Zindel blasted a shot from 40 yards

The goal gave the Mustangs a 2-0 lead at halftime. In the first half SMU outshot the Buckeyes 7-3.

The Mustangs came out with the same intensity in the second half as they scored two goals in a span of 15 minutes to extend the lead to Zindel added his second goal of the night, which gave the Mustangs a 5-0 lead they would not relinquish.

The Buckeyes spoiled two golden opportunities to score midway through the second half as they failed to score on two break-away chances. At the end of the game, the Buckeyes were outshot 14-10.

SMU goalkeepers T.J. Tomasso and Erick Foss combined for three saves, as they posted their first shutout of the season.

"This game served as a big wake-up call," OSU senior defender Matt McCune said. "This was definitely a lesson to our older and younger players. We need to have a good week of pracout, catching Burse on his heels. tice and improve our game for Stadium.

OSU's 5-0 loss continued a three-game non winning streak in the College Cup Preview for the Buckeyes.

"Defensively they picked us apart," Bluem said. "I'm a little disappointed with our effort, and we need to refocus so we can rebound in our next game."

The men will open the 2003 season at the Cal State Fullerton Classic Aug. 29-31 in Fullerton, Calif. They will face Cal State Fullerton and the defending NCAA national champion UCLA

"I have been looking forward to this game since it has been on the schedule," senior midfielder A.J. Weber said. "It's going to be exciting to go out to California and play two tough teams."

The Buckeyes will not start Big Ten play until Sept. 28 when they take on Wisconsin. Shortly after the Badgers will be Penn State in a home match for the Buckeyes on Oct. 12 at Jesse Owens Memorial

OSU hopes to husk Washington

By Zachary Lint Lantern staff writer

The lights will be on, the stadium will be packed and the crowd will expect some questions to be answered when the Washington Huskies come to Ohio Stadium Saturday.

"Playing at night reminds everyone of high school," linebacker A.J. Hawk said. "We're looking forward to getting out there against Washington."

The Buckeyes first opponent is ranked No. 17 in the Associated Press college football poll. Washington's Heisman hopeful, Cody Pickett, who set a Pac-10 record with 4,459 yards passing last season, will be the first test of a young OSU defensive secondary. Pickett's primary target, Reggie Williams, a 6-feet-4-inch, 225 pound wide receiver, tallied 94 receptions for 1,454 yards and 11 touchdowns last season as a sophomore.

Washington is guided for the first year by Keith Gilbertson. He was the offensive coordinator for the past three years and took over as head coach after Rick Neuheisel was forced to leave in July.

Facing Gilbertson's offensive unit will be an experienced but different Buckeye defense. Senior co-captains Tim Anderson and Will Smith will anchor the line, with returning starter Darrion Scott and Simon Fraser or Mike Kudla as ends. Both Fraser and Kudla saw playing time last year and will fill the void left by Kenny Peterson.

The linebackers do not lack experience, but they do not return some of last year's starters. This year, lone returning starter Robert Reynolds will shift to the middle linebacker position with Hawk and Fred Pagac Jr., who are taking over at the outside linebacker spots.

The defense will be challenged by Washington's running and passing combination. The Huskies tend to pass more than keep it on the ground because of their base in the West Coast offense and Pickett's success throwing the ball. This type of offense proves to challenge defenses and spreads the field, allowing for its athletes to make big plays and pick apart the weakness of its opponent. The Huskies' offense, with all of its passing success, gained only 968 yards on the ground as a team last year.

the ground as a team last year.

With the Huskies passing attack, the secondary may be the most tested part of the Buckeye defense. Cornerbacks Dustin Fox and Chris Gamble return to their starting positions, but the middle of the field will see new faces for the first time in nearly four years because of the departure of four-year starters Donnie Nickey and Mike Doss.

IAN M. JAMES/THE LANTERN

The Buckeyes will start defending the national championship on Saturday after weeks of preseason practice.

One of the more interesting match-ups to watch will be Gamble lined up across from Williams in man-to-man coverage. Gamble proved he could stop the big receiver by keeping Miami's Andre Johnson relatively quiet in last year's national championship game.

Maurice Clarett will not be in the backfield, but the experienced Buckeye offense will look to assert itself without his rushing abilities.

A senior-based offensive line and host of experience at the skilled positions return. The Buckeyes plan to prove something this year that many of them felt they lacked last year.

"The offensive line had some injuries last year," starting tackle Shane Olivea said. "We had to shuffle guys around. This year we look forward to being more productive."

Washington may see help in stopping OSU's rush from linebacker Marquis Cooper, 'who led the team with 100 tackles a year ago, and transplanted strong safety Greg Carothers. The Washington defense is looking for Carothers to provide the type of versatility at linebacker that OSU found in Cie Grant when he moved from strong safety two years ago.

OSU quarterback Craig Krenzel may face added pressure from the Washington defense if Maurice Hall, Lydell Ross and Ira Gilford fail to prove they are capable of picking up the slack at tailback left by Clarett's absence.

Gamble at flanker and senior wide receiver Mike Jenkins will face Washington's proven pass defender Derrick Johnson and the rest of the Huskies secondary. Johnson, a junior, led the Huskies with five interceptions last year and ten deflected passes.

"Aug. 30 at 'the Shoe' ... under the lights ... 105,000 fans ... we're going to be ready to face a good team in the Huskies," Krenzel said.

OSU vs. Washington will be televised on ABC with kickoff slated for 8:10 p.m.

Fall Classes begin September 24th. Apply and Register On-line.

I enjoy watching students learn.
