Patterson was arrested Friday after a jacket police believed to have been worn by the arson suspect was found in his old apartment.

He was charged with nine counts of aggravated arson, five counts of aggravated murder and three counts of attempted aggravated murder in connection with the April 13 fire at 64 E. 17th Ave.

County Prosecutor Ron O'Brien told WBNS-TV Patterson had once set fire to the mobile home his mother lived in when she kicked him out.

Since 1992, at the age of 10, Patterson has had a record of violent behavior. Franklin County Juvenile Court records show that at 13, Patterson was deemed a juvenile delinquent after he threw a rock at a car from an overpass on Rt. 315.

Patterson dropped out of Teays Valley High School in Ashville, Ohio, before completing his sophomore year.

In 2001, he was charged with This is not Patterson's first runin criminal damaging, criminal mis-

The fire claimed the lives of five college students. Kyle Raulin and Alan Schlessmen, both 21, were students at Ohio State and Christine Wilson, 19, Andrea Dennis, 20, and Erin DeMarco, 19, were sorority sisters from Ohio University in town to celebrate Schlessman's 21st

Delta Chi fraternity ousted until 2008

By Amy Wheeler Lantern staff writer

The Ohio State chapter of the Delta Chi Fraternity was closed on Thursday and will not be back for at least five years.

"They were charged with five violations of the Code of Student Conduct," said Ruth Gerstner, spokeswoman for the Office of Student Affairs. "These included haz-ing, endangering health and safety, and alcohol violations."

A panel of faculty, staff and stu-dents found the chapter guilty of _violating these rules, and their status as a student organization was revoked until autumn 2008, Gerstner said. The chapter has until Aug. 11 to repeal the decision.

"This is a very serious sanction and it is not taken lightly, but the university does not take hazing lightly either," Gerstner said. "When an organization like this has no status they are not recognized by the university, so they can't participate in university functions. They are basically a non-entity."

ALL'S FAIR IN LOVE AND BUMPER CARS

According to a press release from OSU, the allegations brought against the chapter included "providing alcohol to underage persons, creating situations that encouraged consumption of dangerous amounts of alcohol and 'ditching,' in which members were abducted, had their hands bound, were forced into vehicles and held in an off-campus location for a period of time."

This is the second time the chapter has been sanctioned for violating rules against hazing. Delta Chi was put on probation for a year in 2001 for hazing during winter quarter. Their probation expired in 2002, and during winter of 2003, they were found to have engaged in hazing again, Gerstner said.

"The thing that concerns us the most is that the group had put together a new member plan that said they would not be involved in this kind of thing," said Bill Hall, vice president of Student Affairs. "But we have found through investigations that they are. That is probably the most disturbing thing."

At OSU, it is made clear through training programs, meetings and contracts hazing is an unacceptable practice.

"We have annual meetings with fraternities and sororities about hazing," Hall said. "We go over the definition of hazing and what it means, and we spell out what they need to do to not be in violation of the hazing policies. It's made very clear that incidents of hazing are not tolerated by Ohio State or by the national chapters."

According to the OSU Code of Student Conduct, hazing is defined as "doing, requiring or encouraging any act, whether or not the act is voluntarily agreed upon, in conjunction with initiation or continued membership or participation in any group, that causes or creates a substantial risk of causing mental or physical harm or humiliation. Such acts may include, but are not limited to, use of alcohol, creation of excessive fatigue, and paddling, punching or kicking of any form."

OSU professor saves greyhounds from Third World racetracks, death

By Ben Nanamaker Lantern staff writer

A man was walking when he heard thrashing and screaming nearby. He stopped to investigate the noise, and found a greyhound hanging by a rope from a tree. The unknown man decided to cut the dog down and save it.

Bengy, a 14 year old hunting greyhound with a bad heart, was lucky. Although greyhound racing is on the decline in the United States and greyhound rescue efforts have been well publicized, things are different in Spain and other countries that still allow greyhound racing.

In Spain, many greyhounds are found dead, dumped in ditches and wells or hung from trees. Thanks to the efforts of two greyhound rescue groups and a veterinary professor at Ohio State, Bengy and another racing greyhound, Aro, were saved from a similar fate.

Guillermo Couto, a professor of hematology and oncology at OSU's veterinary hospital, has been helping rescue greyhounds for 12 to 13 years, working primarily with Greyhound Adoption of Ohio. He was initially inspired to adopt a greyhound because one's smile reminded him and his wife of a previous dog they had owned.

"I just love dogs and I'm a vet," he said. "The truth is, the way we got our first greyhound, Clyde, was that he smiled.

Couto and Greyhound Adoption of Ohio have started helping SOS Galgos, a greyhound rescue group based near Barcelona, with their attempts to save greyhounds in Spain. There is only one greyhound racing track left in Spain, in Barcelona, but some residents of southern and central Spain use greyhounds for hunting rabbits.

Couto first aided the SOS Galgos by helping them obtain medical supplies for their clinic, but was asked in July if he wanted to take a dog back to the United States. He ended up taking back Bengy and Aro and

Efforts to rescue dogs from Spain are geared towards bringing attention to the plight of Spanish greyhounds. "It's really not feasible to consider importing large numbers of dogs from Spain for the purpose of finding homes," Perko said. "The goal of bringing over the dogs we have from Spain is to heighten awareness in the United States of what happens to the

As if the joy of consuming un-human amounts of greasefused animal parts and by-products weren't enough, a connoisseur of calorie loading can now make an entire day of eating foods served on wooden rods.

Crossing the ever-growing beltway of the fairgrounds, one must start with a delightful appetizer. Deep-fried pickles, a personal favorite, combine the breaded goodness of a corn dog with the nutritive value of a pickle spear. The bite of dill mingles well with the sweetness of batter, resulting in a different treat.

If vegetables are not appealing, the ever-present cheese on a stick will help build strong bones, while minimizing trips to the bathroom. This deep-fried dairy delicacy goes down easy and fires up tastebuds.

Homebrewing is favorite local hobby

By Seth Teter Lantern staff writer

More than 10,000 years ago, in the land between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers, the Sumerians began a practice that is still at the center of weekend activities for many Ohio State students.

Although knocking back a pitcher of suds today is as easy as heading down the street to the local bar, brewing was part of the household chores during the Mid-dle Ages. Since its legalization in the 1970s, homebrewing has once again allowed beer buffs in the United States to refine their beermaking techniques and create their own original lagers and ales.

'I think people like the creativity of it," said Dale Novel, a clerk at Gentile's Wine Sellers.

Gentile's provides everything a prospective brewmaster needs to begin creating his first beer. For those just wetting their feet, or more appropriately wetting their tongue, kits that include all of the required ingredients to make a lager, ale or stout are available.

People come in and start with a beer kit, and then they begin modifying to make their own recipes," he said. "Once they are in, they tend to expand."

The first beer recipe, and perhaps the first drinking song, was etched in stone around 1800 B.C. "The Hymn to Ninkasi" gives praise to the Sumerian goddess of brewing and describes a way of making beer from fermented bread.

Beer was later brewed by monks who wanted a nutritious beverage to supplement meager meals during times of fasting. In the Middle Ages, a well-made, family-brewed beer was a point of pride. The best brewers went on to sell their product in the community.

"Historically, beer was made locally," said Jeannine Delwiche, assistant professor in the Department of Food, Agriculture and Environmental Science. "It wasn't until after prohibition that we got these mass distribution companies

German Village was home to several micro-breweries until the production of alcohol was outlawed in the 1920s.

The first national convention for the Prohibition Party was held in Columbus in 1872," said Beth Weinhardt, local history coordinator for the Westerville Public Library, which is home to the Anti-Saloon League Museum.

"The Anti-Saloon League viewed the saloon, not the drinker, as the problem. The brewers hated these people," she said.

Although prohibition was short lived, homebrewing was not legalized until the Carter presidency.

Beer is big business in the United States. According to the Beer Institute, the organization that represents the brewing industry before Congress, nearly 200 million barrels of malt beverages were produced in the United States in 2000.

Americans tend to like very light pilsners like Budweiser and Coors," Delwiche said. "Other countries would consider these gassy and weak in flavor."

In order to make beer, barley or wheat is kept in water until it sprouts. It is then kiln-dried and ground to remove the husk. In a

"Despite what may or may not have happened, I am told that Delta Chi cooperated very well with the university and the police," Horne said. "That is certainly commendable on their part. As a fraternity, Delta Chi has made a big effort to improve the Greek community and they have been a significant factor in promoting Greek life.

In the recent history of hazing in the Greek community of OSU, problems with this illegal practice are few. "There are not many instances of hazing because most Greek organizations are very responsible," Gerstner said. "Most members of the Greek community want to eliminate hazing and change the culture."

Since December 2000, there have been five fraternities and one sorority sanctioned under the Code of Student Conduct, and none of them had their status revoked, Gerstner said.

The Interfraternity Council also has not dealt with many hazing problems.

"Incidents of hazing are brought to the attention of the media quickly when they do happen," Horne said. "But I have been in office since early February and I haven't had to deal with hazing except for a few isolated incidents." A VC IIIIW

"The yeast will eventually consume all of the sugar or die in their own waste product, which is the alcohol," Novel said. "Beers that have a 9 to 12 percent alcohol content level are made with yeast that can tolerate high amounts of alcohol."

The fermentation time — up to two to three weeks - varies depending on the recipe, but once it is complete, the beer is ready to bottle. Corn sugar is added just before the beer is bottled, allowing the yeast to create carbonation once the container is sealed.

Youth duel way to fencing camp

By Emily Haynam Lantern sports writer

Ohio State's summer fencing camps attract fencers from all over the world because of its world-class coaching staff.

The best part about the camp is Coach Nazlymov," said Luz Kraujaalis, mother of camper Marina Kraujaalis from New York. "You get quality personal time every single day for intense quality work."

OSU head fencing coach Vladimir Nazlymov is the eleventh men's coach and third women's coach and is going into his fourth year at the helm of the Buckeyes.

Nazlymov spent eight years as the head coach for the Kansas City, Mo., School District before he came to OSU. In his fencing career, he was a three-time gold medalist, and won world championships; numerous coaching honors and multitudes of international fencing accolades.

Nazlymov's motives behind his camps are to show kids a good time and try to give youth from Central Ohio the opportunity to take up the sport of fencing

"I believe that what our program is doing is good for fencing in the United States," Nazlymov said. "People fly and drive from all over to come to this camp. We need to develop fencing programs here in communities like Upper Arlington.

Nazlymov is joined at camp by three of his assistant coaches from OSU, who all share in his enthusiasm to teach young people how to fence. Gia Abashidze, Terrence Laskar and Alexander Smerdin have a wealth of experience in fencing. The coaching staff has a combined 13 Olympic medals.

"I love the kids," Laskar said. "Talking to a young fencer and bringing up situations that I, myself, have been in, explaining it to them, and seeing the look in their eyes once they grasp a concept and understand what you are teaching them is what I stick around for."

There are three different weapons used in fencing, each of them acting almost as individual sports. The three weapons are the epee, foil and sabre.

Each weapon has a different set of rules to go along with it. The epee and the foil are both point weapons. A fencer can only score on another fencer by using the point of the weapon to touch designated areas on the body.

The epee can hit anywhere on the body to score, while the foil is in the chest area of the body. The sabre scores by using a slashing motion across an opponent's body.

The camp is broken down into three different sections that teach the style and technique required for an individual weapon.

Laskar said one of the most important things a kid can take from camp is the mental aspect of fencing.

"We want the kids to get a better understanding of the science behind the sport. It is a very mental and physical sport, but one of the most

Crew prepares to defend title; Metrostars first in competition

By Tom Symonds Lantern sports writer

The Columbus Crew enters the second half of the 2003 season hoping to end a two-game losing streak, which it sustained prior to the MLS All-star break.

The Crew will look to kick the streak against the New Jersey Metrostars at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at Crew Stadium. Prior to the All-star break, the Crew fell to the New England Revolution and the Los Angeles Galaxy.

'I think we will need a lot more consistency during the second half of the season if we are going to make a run at the postseason," midfielder Nelson Akwari said. "New Jersey has given us problems before, we need to enter tomorrow night's game with a very serious attitude.

The Crew vs. Metrostars matchup will be the first game in which the Crew begins defense of its 2002 Lamar Hunt U.S. Open Cup title.

"The Open Cup is a different type of game," Crew coach Greg Andrulis said. "We take this tournament very seriously and we are the defending champions. This season we just haven't gotten the results that we have wanted plus we have had to deal with a lot of injuries."

A win against the Metrostars would set the Crew to face off against A-League champion New England Rochester on Aug. 27.

It also could bring life to a team bitten by the injury bug throughout the 2003 season.

"Injuries have hurt us all year long," Andrulis said. "We've played well over the last few weeks, but we need to be the aggressors even though we are a few men down."

Despite the constant battle with injuries, the Crew should receive help from midfielder/forward Alex Pindea Chacon. Columbus acquired Pindea Chacon Thursday from the Los Angeles Galaxy, and he is expected to make his debut with Columbus tomorrow.

Prior to his tenure with the Galaxy, Pindea Chacon saw time in Miami. There, he was the MLS scoring champion and was named MVP in 2001.

The Crew also hope to see goalkeeper Jon Busch make his return to the lineup. Busch was activated this week after being sidelined for more than a month after an injury he sustained on June 21 against the San Jose Earthquakes.

Despite the recent additions, the Crew will be without defender Chad McCarty. McCarty will be forced to sit out of the contest because of a red card he received in last season's 2002 Open Cup Championship game against Los Angeles.

"We're coming into it to win," forward Jeff Cunningham said. "It's not that we haven't been playing well; we've just had some bad luck over the last few weeks. We've had several strong performances this season. We just haven't been able to put the ball in the back of the net. I think a win tomorrow night could really turn the season around.'

Detroit holds the power as it demolishes Pensacola in NFWA

By Emily Haynam Lantern sports writer

The Detroit Demolition got what it came for against the Pensacola Power Saturday in the 2003 National Women's Football Championship in Nashville, Tenn.

The Demolition defeated the Power, 28-21, for the second straight National Women's Football Association championship in as many years as the team has been in the league.

The NWFA was started August 2000 by sports and entertainment entrepreneur Catherine Masters. When the league started two years _ago, it had 21 teams. The league expanded in 2003 to six divisions with 37 teams. In 2004, the NWFA will be expanding with eight more teams across the country, and has landed a television contract with the new Football Network to try to get more exposure and attract new fans to the league.

The Demolition and the Power were both 10-0 coming into the championship. The Demolition, formerly the Detroit Danger, won last year and were looking to repeat as champions going into the game on Saturday night. The Power had lost to the Demolition in the semi-finals of last year's playoffs. It was no secret Pensacola was looking to avenge last year's loss to Detroit, and bring home its first NWFA championship.

More than 7,000 fans watched a thrilling game on Vanderbilt University's campus.

"There is nothing like winning it," said Demolition quarterback Kim Grodus. "I feel very fortunate, and very happy for our girls that we could

"We have a tendency to fall asleep and give up big plays," said Demolition coach Tony Blankenship. "When Pensacola came back, I told my team to stay together; that we were going to have to win the game one way or another."

Behind Grodus, the game's most valuable player, the Demolition went back to its strength and ran the ball up the gut of the Power defense, play after play. Grodus then scored the game-winning touchdown on second and goal with a quarterback sneak with 5:51 left in the game.

The Power was unable to get anything going on its next possession and was forced to punt.

The Demolition took possession of the ball with 3:18 left in the game and ran the ball until time expired.

The Demolition came out of the Northern Conference bracket of the playoffs en route to its victory over the Power. The Northern Conference bracket is where the Mid Atlantic Division Columbus Flames would have played if they had made it to the playoffs.

A few of the Flames' players attended the Championship game Saturday. "I thought it was a very good

OUR VIEWS

To go or not to go?

League's eligibility rules useless

With fall practices beginning this week for the Ohio State football team, the focus should be on how the Buckeyes will prepare to defend their 2002 national championship.

But thanks to allegations of academic misconduct and embellished reports of theft, the majority of the focus will be on one Buckeye alone — Maurice Clarett.

There is no doubting the sophomore tailback's athletic ability. When healthy last year, Clarett brought back images of former OSU greats like Eddie George, Keith Byars and Archie Griffin.

But coupling his ESPN: The Magazine feature last year along with this offseason's concerns with his amateur status, Clarett's devotion to the OSU football program has certainly come into question. His general apathy toward Buckeye fans and media sources nationwide have made many wonder if Clarett wants to be here at all.

Even if he wanted to leave, Clarett really has no choice. Due to National Football League guidelines, an underclassman cannot enter the rookie draft until three years after his high school graduation. Under these rules, Clarett must wait another two seasons before he can become the next great pro tailback.

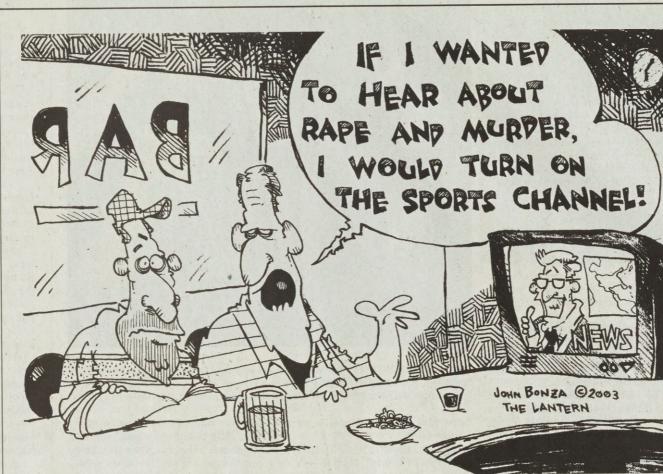

If Clarett wants to leave so bad, why should any NFL guideline stop him?

Many proponents of the NFL's policy points to the physical nature of professional football as the main reason why the current age limit had to be implemented. But if a player like Clarett is so much more physically mature than his counterparts, why shouldn't he be allowed to test his skills in the pro ranks?

The NFL doesn't have to worry about becoming like the NBA, which has seen a dramatic increase in the number of high school players who forego college altogether to enter the draft. Basketball is a game of skill, and no matter how short or thin a player is, if he can shoot the ball, he'll find his way onto a team.

On the other hand, football — which requires exceedingly strong, mature bodies to play — has inherent physical limits on who can play, unlike other professional sports. An athlete straight out of high school would never be able to cut it in the NFL; even if he wanted to try, no NFL team would waste a draft pick or money on that player.

Many who follow the sports world believe if Clarett — or any other underclassman not eligible for the draft — were to sue the NFL, he would win in a landslide.

So if it's not a crime, why is the government getting involved? The president and other politicians want to impose their religious values on others. When asked his opinion about gays, Bush replied, "I am mindful that we're all sinners, and I caution those who may try to take the speck out of the neighbor's eye when they've got a log in their own." That sure looks like an expression of religious morals to me. The president's powers do not extend to the religious domain. If I question his ability as a national ruler, there is no way I would ever consider him a spiritual authority.

Furthermore, banning gay marriage violates the separation of church and state. While there is no law specifically keeping the government from associating with religion, the First Amendment states, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." This is exactly what a law banning same-sex marriage would do, because it would make the religious beliefs of politicians into laws.

Legislation banning samesex marriage also would violate the Fourteenth Amendment — the same set of laws that prevent racial discrimination. Part of it reads, "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property."

Marriage laws have no legal standing behind them, and as a result, they are depriving the rights of a specific group. There is no clause a harmless administrative rule, but it's not. Consider this: According to USA Today, even states that prohibit cousins from marrying will recognize that same type of union from another state. It is extremely selective to make laws regarding the marriage of gays but not for marrying within the family.

The leader of our nation should not encourage discrimination. As the president, Bush has a responsibility to set an example by practicing tolerance and respect for others. While Bush did use part of his speech to encourage Americans to remain openminded, it doesn't make sense to make laws attacking certain groups. Tolerance cannot be applied selectively. Criminalizing gays will only stigmatize them, and thus encourage prejudice and violence against them.

Too, the president is not a spiritual leader. The government should not be imposing religious values. That would be an extremely dangerous precedent, and also would

Buckeye reputation tarnished by Clarett

There is one — and only one answer to the ills that star tailback Maurice Clarett is causing the Ohio State University: Suspend Clarett from the football squad permanently.

Having lived through the constant disappointment of the John Cooper era in Columbus, Clarett's actions bring back bad memories of what OSU football represented during the last six or seven years of Cooper's reign. The football team was not only an embarrassment to the athletic program — it was an embarrassment to the university and the entire city of Columbus.

I was then ashamed to be a Buckeye football fan. I could go on and on with examples of improper actions by Cooper's players actions on the field and in the community, involving academics and the media — but there is not enough time in the day for these embarrassing incidents to be listed, let alone read. Why did the OSU community

Why did the OSU community accept these actions for so long, you ask? Well, Cooper won games. A lot of games. 9-2, 10-2 and 11-1 were the typical records of his OSU squads in the mid-'90's. However, those records were tarnished because Cooper's Buckeyes could never win the big game. Sure, the games against Northwestern, Indiana, Rice, Pitt and San Diego State were all walks in the park, but the "team up north" and all bowl opponents were challenges Cooper failed miserably.

I guess the one thing bothering me most is that — with the hiring of Jim Tressel — I could finally be proud to support OSU football. Jim O'Brien brought the Buckeye basketball team out from the dark ages of the Randy Ayres era to a Final Four birth in just two years. The problems associated with the OSU basketball team disappeared upon the hiring of O'Brien, because he gathered up the team's bad apples and promptly gave them their walking papers. I was proud to be an OSU basketball fan from then on.

Tressel appeared to be doing the same thing with the football team. Their actions on the field after his hiring reflected their coach. They played hard and kept their mouths shut. Tressel also understood that the OSU-Michigan game was not "just another game," as Cooper preached to his players. He knew what beating an arch rival meant to the football program, the university, the alumni and even the state of Ohio. And in their very first attempt, Tressel's Buckeyes went up to Ann Harbor and defeated the Wolverines in the big house for the first time in 14 years - a feat never accomplished by Cooper. I was proud to be a Buckeye football fan. But get rid of Clarret. Keep the integrity in the Buckeye football program. Keep the pride in Tressel, the leader. Let's remember one thing, friends: Clarett needs OSU football more than OSU football needs Clarett. What's that you say? Clarett set the freshman rushing record? My answer to that would be asking you a question. Two-time Heisman winner Archie Griffin is second on that freshman rushing list. He is currently a 46-year-old associate athletics director. Do you know who else is in near the top of that list of great OSU freshmen rushers? Lydell Ross, currently a junior on the OSU football team. Be a man, Maurice. Have some pride in yourself, your family, your teammates, your coach, your school and your community. If you can have some pride in those things and stop embarrassing yourself by your immature actions, your potential is limitless. It's not you against the world. The world owes you nothing. Take advantage of the gifts you have, gifts that 99.99 percent of the population don't have. What goes around comes around, Maurice, and you can bet that your actions will catch up with you and will lead to your downfall. You may not believe it now, but it will happen.

But Clarett shouldn't have to wage a legal battle to play pro ball if he has his eyes set on the NFL rather than an OSU diploma. And he definitely shouldn't have to don the scarlet and gray for two more seasons if he doesn't truly want to let him test his hand in the black and orange of the Cincinnati Bengals.

Privacy under fire

Library records unfairly searched

The difficult balance between individual rights and national security has again come into question, this time in libraries across the country.

In a bizarre form of protest, librarians nationwide have been destroying their patrons' files every week instead of the usual several month period, to voice their opposition to a peculiar provision in the Patriot Act — the most stringent anti-terrorist legislation passed in the wake of Sept. 11.

The provision gives authorities the right to access private records about what people check out from libraries and buy from bookstores. In addition to granting the right to access records, the provision also denies libray staff members permission to tell the patron that the library has released records to the government. They are required to keep all information about proceedings secret.

While destroying records may not be the most appropriate or effective way to voice opposition to legislation as powerful as the Patriot Act, the government is needlessly violating the privacy of U.S. citizens by accessing their library records. What materials citizens check out of the nation's libraries is not something the government needs to know. Public libraries are a place where people should be able to obtain knowledge, without anyone else knowing what they are reading about.

Unlike other methods that the United States has utilized to prevent terrorist acts, the information the government receives from library records does not seem to be a tool that will make any great inroads in the war on terror. Authorities will not be able to apprehend someone just because a library patron has checked out a book on how to build a bomb. Reading about how to commit a crime is not a crime, nor is it even remotely likely that someone reading a book about questionable activities is a terrorist.

Thus, even the most conservative assessment of this controversial provision — another in a handful of contested sections of the Patriot Act — shows it has little value, as the sacrifice of personal freedom is great and the benefits to national security remain minimal.

Adviser Vicki Rishling Business Manager Ray Catalino in the amendment that depends on sexual preferences, so — theoretically the legality of this law is the same as one taking away privileges from minorities.

Existing laws already target gays unfairly. The 1996 Defense of Marriage Act allows states to ignore samesex marriages from other states. This may appear to be represent a backward step in open-mindedness.

We as a society should not allow the victimizing of groups because of who they are. I believe that at some point in the future, the prejudice against gays will be equated with racial discrimination. I am not gay, but I do believe people have the right to make their own decisions.

unlike the turbulent civilrights era, nobody seems to mind. For the first time in seven years, an African American is unable to teach black history at Oberlin High School here in Ohio. Because of a scheduling conflict, he was set to turn over his particular class to a another teacher, who happens to be a white teacher. This, of course, angered many of the black parents, who needed the auspices of the Oberlin Black Alliance for Progress to help them protest such an atrocity.

They — like so little of the nation — find the notion of a white man teaching black history to their children an act of defiance and injustice. They are demanding that a black teacher teach black history, just as David Duke is somewhere demanding that a white teacher teach regular American history. So not only is there now a need for separate classes, but now they need separate teachers. Pretty soon, they may find the need for the students themselves to remain separate. Why should a white kid learn black history if he could never understand it enough, even to teach it to a bunch of 14-year-old kids? Maybe we should just create separate schools, like in New York. In Manhattan last week, Mayor Bloomberg announced the opening of Harvey Milk High School, the borough's first gay public high school. Now, all of those gay, lesbian and transgendered teenagers sick of being harassed have a safe environment to learn in.

It's bad enough they feel the need to separate themselves, but now they have to do it with Manhattan tax dollars.

If every kid in high school who was made fun of got his or her own school, everyone would be home-schooled. And if that's the case, let's hope they aren't white, because their white parents wouldn't be qualified to teach black history.

The desire for minorities in this country to exclude themselves and turn back the progress of a generation is beyond my comprehension. I find myself confused why new generations fight so hard to destroy everything their forefathers struggled to realize. Different standards, different schools, different teachers — where does it end?

A nation once deemed a melting pot is becoming anything but. Instead of pushing forward and advocating for greater inclusion of African Americans in the curriculum of regular history classes, many blacks would rather have a separate class. Instead of pursuing better treatment of gays in high school classrooms, they would rather have their own school. As a nation of people who once fought so hard to bring all colors and creeds together under the guise of humanity, why are new generations doing more and more to separate themselves?

Instead of fighting for inclusion and equality, many minorities are now choosing another route. Newer generations have apparently found it too hard to carry the torch handed to them by their predecessors — their fathers and grandfathers, mothers and grandmothers who carried it with pride and pain hoping someday their children would see the finish line.

Instead of an inherited pride and a willingness to fight for equality and inclusion, this latest generation is apparently slowing down and giving up. Kevin Killeen Chicago, Ill. Class of 2000

YOUR VIEWS Construction taking its toll on students

When I was little, I had this recurring nightmare. I am walking to school in the morning. It's eerily quiet. No one drives by. It's just me and the pavement. I keep walking, and the closer I get to school, the more deserted the space gets. There are fewer and fewer trees and no houses.

I look down, and the road under my feet has just turned to dirt and gravel. Then, ever so slightly, the ground starts to shake, and there is a distant, low rumble.

As the rumble grows fiercer, it turns into a deafening roar. Behind me there are dozens of bulldozers, and they're following me. I start running, but it's no use. There's nothing I can do to get out of their way. Then, from out of nowhere, more bulldozers appear. They surround me far into the distance. Luckily, just as all hope is lost, I wake up in a pool of my own sweat.

Well, friends, sometimes our worst nightmares become reality. As I'm sure some of you have noticed, there's some construction happening on campus.

Forgive me for being shortsighted, but why is it imperative for all this mayhem to take place at once? Has someone changed the rules? When I was still young enough to have to take math, some instructor far wiser than myself tole me the shortest distance between any two points is a straight ine. But I can't get anywhere on campus by taking the most direct route.

I'll admit: At times, I'm lazy. Sometimes I don't have the energy to take Neil Avenue all the way to Ackerman Road just to get to Rt. 315. I mean, I'm sure the finished bridge will look lovey (actually, from the pictures I've seen, t's going to stick out like a sore thumb). God willing, it will even support the weight of my car. At the moment though, I really don't care.

Also, there are times when I don't want to have to travel the parking lot in front of Cunz Hall Magellan-style just to get to Larkins and, more importantly, the CABS stop on the other side of it. As if it isn't bad enough — and I feel it s — I read that in the coming spring, some crack team of landscapers will be doing a complete overhaul of the Oval. I'm afraid we'll all be taking the long way to get from the library to High Street. Yes, I weep not only for myself, but also for all the Frisbee throwers. Except for those with super human strength, there will be no playing catch this spring. I'm sure someday I will come back to this campus awestruck by all the beautiful improvements, but now all I can do is dread the coming spring, when I may have to burn more calories than I've ever deemed necessary.

Better OSU jobs may equal less trouble

During the '60s, citizens piped up with the phrase: "Are you part of the problem, or part of the solution?" Once this question was asked, the whole society churned with it. People grilled each other. Leaders were driven by public forums.

I thought about the question as a school kid, and the same question applies to the Ohio State University when it comes to crime, violence and student safety. Steven Keen's July 29 letter, "University district needs more focus," cuts to it directly. He suggests that despite its charitable efforts, rhetoric and blaming others, the university itself must be part of neighborhood rebuilding. One example of how OSU is part of the problem involves its workforce. For decades, scores of temporary workers and part-timers were employed by area businesses where full-time workers could have been hired. Businesses contracted out for goods and services as part of profitdriven policies and a means of reducing labor costs. Privatization, downsizing and layoffs were popular ways to increase business efficiency.

OSU has been a part of these trends. The impact of this workforce composition on the surrounding community is part of the problem. Budget dollars earmarked for compensation, adequate health benefits and full local employment might help heal an urban community long hurt by the drive to cheapen labor. Taxpayers and legislators might more willingly provide for an institution that made employment alternatives to urban decay part of its mission. OSU could easily sell secure jobs and solid compensation to curb a business tide that is a recognized part of alienation, violence and crime.

It's time OSU used its employment policy to help solve off-campus safety problems. The benefits for the community could be widespread.

NIDA's drug tests are a broken record

Your supposed research sounds like bst. Trust me — if I can sense it, so can many kids.

I know, for instance, the brain scan studies used by NIDA are bogus. They mean little - they cherry-picked their subjects, and they turned away people who used the drug hundreds of times but had normal scans.

The Dutch have found no ill effects in men using ecstasy. Norway has declared it a soft drug. If this drug was dangeous - as you propose it is - the effects would appear right now, not 10 or 20 years from now. You cannot just begin destroying brain cells and see no effect for 20 years. The same lies were told about LSD to my generation and have not faded. It is always the same bst from the idiots in our culture: memory loss, brain damage, birth defects

Do you not perceive that lying is counterproductive? Many of the kids have already tuned you out. It would be far better to do longitudinal studies on users of ecstasy to tease out the pharmacological effects and the toxicology profile of this compound. Most likely, it is less damaging than alcohol anyways, so the sky will not fall when we actually collect the truth.

The sad part is that our government and NIDA researchers now have so little credibility left, that they object to their own label being placed on their anti-drug advertising. It is that bad, and yet, hysterical witch hunters just can't help themselves. Now, wave after wave will come of the "newest research" proving the deadly nature of this compound. You guys do not have a clue about what is going on hence the word "linked" instead of 'causes.'

Too bad Dr. Koesters is not concerned that fear-mongering has destroyed the credibility of folks like him; who make radical declarations with little evidence in hand, besides politicized science. This is your credibility in a frying pan, Dr. Koesters.

Journalism is definitely linked to shoddy reporting on drug policy issues. I suspect a causal relationship, personally. Perhaps your "journalist" should seek the opinions of MAPS who has FDA approval to conduct research on MDMA to be used in short term psychotherapy.

Powell may call it quits

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State Colin Powell and his top deputy have told the White House they will not serve a second term if President Bush is re-elected, it was reported yesterday.

Officials at the White House and the State Department denied the the report in The Washington Post, saying no such conversation had taken place between Powell and national security adviser Condoleezza Rice. But the officials refused to speculate about whether Powell would serve in a second Bush term.

Powell and Deputy Secretary of State Richard L. Armitage planned to talk with Bush in Texas today and tomorrow for a long-planned series of meetings, White House spokesman Scott McClellan said.

He denied that Powell and Armitage ever told Rice they won't serve after 2005, saying no such conversation had taken place. Post reported yesterday that both men plan to step down in January 2005, even if Bush is re-elected.

Davis asks for election law review

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - Gov. Grav Davis asked the California Supreme Court yesterday to delay his Oct. 7 recall election until March and list his name on the ballot among the candidates seeking to replace him.

Voters will make two decisions in the recall election: whether to remove Davis, and whom to choose as his successor if he is recalled. Under California election law, the subject of the recall cannot be on the list of replacement candidates.

Davis' allies are hoping the court can be convinced such an arrangement is unconstitutional.

Attorneys for the Democratic governor's campaign committee, Californians Against the Costly Recall, told reporters in a conference call Sunday that voters who want to retain Davis as governor would have their equal protection rights violated if he is not listed as a replacement candidate.

members of the president's team and highly valued members, McClellan told reporters in Crawford, He side-

The pro-Davis forces want the election held March 2, the date of the state's presidential primary and the next regularly scheduled statewide election.

Recall supporters said the claims in the suit had "zero validity."

"This is Davis stall tactics to the inevitable," said Phil Paule, director of Rescue California, Recall Gray Davis, the committee that collected the bulk of the petition signatures to qualify the recall.

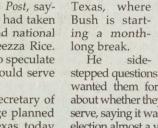

"The recall statute is very clear about the timing of recall elections after they've been certified," Paule said, adding: "If he is on the replacement list, that gives him an opportunity to lose twice in the same election."

In the latest sign of Democratic unease about Davis' chances in the recall, state Senate Democrats planned to meet yesterday afternoon to discuss backing a Democratic candidate to run as an alternative in case Davis loses, said aides to several Democratic senators.

Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., said yesterday that she is strongly opposed to the recall, but that Democrats should field another candidate if it appears Davis will lose his job.

CONCERT REVIEW Ween's performance lacks vitality, energy

By Damien Petranek Lantern arts writer

Walking into the PromoWest Ween concert on Friday night was like stepping into an asylumturned-museum. The lighting was soft, the air conditioned, and the fans were like patients with disorders — raising their middle fingers toward the ceiling and gesticulating wildly. It should have been a classic Ween show, but instead it was a classic example of a band growing old outlived by their own ideals.

At around 8 p.m. the brothers Dean and Gene Ween hit the stage. Is it just me, or is it too early to start a show with only one band at 8:00 p.m? Seeing Ween a few years ago used to mean an excursion into the wee hours of the morning, dizzy from secondhand smoke and wishing for another day off to go see them in a different city. Now, a Ween show is a little less bacchanal, if not for the fans, at least for the band, which used to pass around bottles of Jack Daniels during sets. Now it's merely a good imported beer that seems to suffice.

Not that I wish alcoholism on Ween, it's just that moderation never used to be in their vocabulary. A certain immodesty is what once defined the Ween sound. Now in the light of decades of abuse, the brothers Ween - who are not related or really named "Ween"- have lost their edge. Songs from the new album, "Quebec," like "Zoloft" were slow lounge numbers that didn't stand out from the classics of the Ween repertoire.

The sound was excellent when Ween hit the groove on greats like "Voodoo Lady," "Roses are Free" and "The Mollusk." Even better were the offensive numbers where Ween takes pot shots at targets like hippies, coke heads, the Irish and Italians. Not that Ween never belonged to any of when Ween mattered.

the above. They were all of the above, and their obscene lyrics only served as an indictment of themselves.

The triple — song encore was adequate with "Touch My Tooter" from 1992's "Pure" Guava my favorite Ween record — a standard version of the bootleg only "Booze me up and get me high" and their definitive rendition of Prince's "Shockadelica."

While the songs were played well and the mix was something akin to a roadtrip tape I once made, the show was anything but a milestone for Ween. The limitless creativity of Ween's past was stifled. The show lacked luster for a band that once was a beacon for originality, social commentary and parody. A band capable of mimicking any style from the last 40 years of pop music culture could barely imitate the unbridled energy of the old Ween on Friday night.

Seeing Ween for the first time in Cleveland in 1999, I was mystified. By 2003, I was more than happy to see them, but something had changed. One of the Ween brothers had married in the last few years, and the live show suffers from a general "settling down." No longer does Ween sacrifice itself for art by way of alcohol and drugs abuse. Gone are the days of young women climbing onstage to grind to the seductive rhythms of the Prince cover with two gangly white

As we filed out of PromoWest at an unthinkable 10:30 p.m., I was left wanting more. After about two hours of Ween, I was not satiated. The length of the show is not in question — Ween can rock out — but the content was lacking. Ween has become a smiling shell of their former selves for their current finger-flipping fans. At least I have the CDs and the memories from a time

Painter gets into OSU 68 years late

By Misty Alli Lantern staff writer

Sixty-eight years ago, Edward Wood traveled from Michigan to Ohio with the hopes of attending Ohio State, but his plans changed when tuition costs could not fit in his budget. Wood now attends Ohio State in the life of his artwork.

Wood's paintings can be found in the Hale Black Cultural Center. This is an accomplishment for Wood, who could not attend OSU straight out of high school.

Wood was born in 1917 in Pratt City, Alabama, but moved with his family to Port Huron, Michigan where he spent his childhood years. He attended Port Huron High School, completed require-ments early and graduated after two and a half years of enrollment.

One day after his senior prom, Wood moved in with his aunt in Columbus with the hope of enrolling at OSU.

"In that day, out-of-state tuition was $25, but that was a lot of money then. It was $15 if you were an in-state student," Wood said. "I couldn't afford that type of money back then."

Although Wood grew up in a large, industrious, middle class family, he couldn't afford to make that type of commitment financially, he said.

'My mother studied to be a seamstress, and my father was a blacksmith," Wood said. "We weren't poor or anything, but when you live in a time where gas is only 11 cents or at the most, 16 cents a gallon, you understand how much $25 is."

Wood received his income at a local ice cream parlor where he later became the manager.

Columbus had a lot more to offer than work. Wood found friends and a girlfriend to occupy his time.

"I fell in love and married in 1941. Only six months went by into my marriage and I enlisted in the Armed forces," he said. Wood served as a support sergeant, and when World War II ended, he returned to Columbus for the sake of his wife and family.

Wood enrolled at Franklin University, but left shortly after he found a business opportunity open to him in real estate.

Although my parents always taught me the value of an education, the real estate business was hot and heavy at that time. I had to jump in right then," he said.

While working full-time as a realtor, Wood became acquainted with Emerson Burkhart, one of Ohio's leading 20th century artists. Emerson would later become Wood's fishing buddy, good friend and inspiration.

"Emerson was a full-fledged artist," Wood said. "He was a great person, a great painter and I liked him a lot.'

Following Emerson's 1969 death, Wood suffered heart problems, forcing him to undergo major heart surgury. The combination of these two events led to Wood experimenting with his own paintings.

"After the surgery, I could no longer work. That is when I first started to pursue painting," Wood said. "I remember trying to replicate Emerson's style.

Wood soon had produced enough artwork to create a private gallery in his home.

"My work makes my home colorful, enjoyable and adds quality of my life," Wood said.

Larry Williamson Jr, the director of the Hale Black Culture Center, said Wood is greatly influenced by Emerson, but he uses his own style which is both calming and aesthetically pleasing to the eye.

"Mr. Wood seems to concentrate on landscape and scenery paintings," Williamson said. "He paints his life experiences. He paints life."

While visiting Wood's apartment, Williamson said he saw Wood's life expression in his artwork. "I was impressed and touched by his devotion," look to the future.

"He is always ahead of the curve on things," Rice said. "He is very good at seeing how products will fit into what we do."

Progressive Audio has only one location on North High Street, but they are in the process of opening a new office in Cleveland, Ranney said.

Ranney said his plan for Progressive Audio in the future "evolves

Williamson said. Wood said a local artist named Smoky Brown introduced the opportunity of getting recognition from OSU.

"Smoky knew a couple of people who could get my work displayed at OSU," Wood said." "He contributed to that, which is why OSU students can see my work on campus."

Andre Thomas, a senior in dental hygiene, said Wood's work is not only appealing for students majoring in art.

"Although I am not an artist, I love to view various artwork and styles," Thomas said. "I enjoy seeing the paintings around the Black Culture Center. Edward Wood's work had a unique style about it. It was very different, interesting and enjoyable.

When Wood is not painting, he also enjoys reading and writing.

"I love to read the newspaper," he said. "It is the greatest history book ever written."

Wood, who is also a poet, said his poetry and artwork relate to one another.

'A poem paints a picture, and that picture tells a story." he said. "I don't know if many art people will agree or disagree, but that is my personal theory.

technology.

Scott Ranney said he built his first pair of speakers in his dorm room after his roommate moved out with the stereo and speakers during his freshman year at OSU. He said soon after, other students began to ask him to build them speakers. In those years, his business was known as the Underground Speaker Company. This was the first step of the business that later became Progressive Audio. Ranney said after graduating

In 1980, Ranney bought his partner out and changed the name of the business to Progressive Audio. Ranney said the store moved to its current location on N.orth High Street in 1982. Ranney said the store has changed a lot since its conception.

"There has been a complete industry change," Ranney said. "We have gone from selling speaker kits to high-end audio to video to both, and now control systems."

Ranney said his business is "a lit-

We currently have a display on the second floor where we incorporate these ideas onto a touch panel on a plasma television," said Michael Rice, an audio-video specialist at Progressive Audio. "It is called the Progressive Home."

Ranney said this is just one of the many different displays in the store that occupies their three-floor, 10,000 square-foot building.

"This is a vintage luxury apartment," he said

Tom Hoffman

The success of Progressive Audio has not changed or corrupted the character of Scott Ranney, said friend and longtime customer, Dr. Tom Hoffman .

"He is very unpretentious," Hoffman said "He wears blue-jeans and snow skiing, sail-boating and racing Porsches. Ranney said he loves racing, and has raced his car at the Mid-Ohio racetrack. He is also a high-performance driving instructor.

"There are points in your life that are demanding time-wise. You just have to be able to balance them with the other parts of your life," Ranney said.

Terry Ranney said the key to her husband's success is his ability to around Signature Media Group."

Signature Media Group is merging with Progressive Audio and companies in Massachusetts, Wash-ington D.C., Florida and Illinois.

He said he would like this group to expand to all 25 of the major metropolitan markets.

Ranney had some advice for graduating students: "Just keep looking for opportunities. The hard one will probably be the right one."

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern will not publish illegal advertising or the advertising of illegal products or services. The Lantern reserves the right to reject advertising that denigrates individuals, groups or organizations based on race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, religion, mental or physical capacity, veteran's status, age or sexual orientation. The Lantern Business Manager will refer questionable advertising to the Publications Committee of the School of Journalism and Communication. The committee will recommend a decision on whether to publish the advertising to the Director of the school.

- 1. Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.
- Copy must be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for special publications whose 2. deadlines will be announced.
- 3. An advertisement is required to occupy at least as many inches in height as columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered a "full column" (21 inches) advertisement and charged accordingly.
- Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager with in 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
- Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion. 5.
- A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline 6.
- No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than 7. seven column inches.
- If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the adver 8. tising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee.
- The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the 9. advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- 10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- 11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication.
- 12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise-
- 13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.
- 14. A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication.
- 15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.
