OSU's orientation program acts as guide into new culture

Close to 4,300 international students have left the comforts of their home countries to study in the United States at Ohio State.

The job of the Office of International Education is to use its orientation program to keep exchange students from being lost in the sea of new faces and places they will find themselves in.

"We are currently evaluating our orientation and hope to redesign orientation, though the changes most likely will not be implemented yet in this coming autumn quarter," said Marlene Perrine, an international student adviser at OIE.

OSU was ranked 10th in the country for the number of international students during the 2002-03 school year, according to the "Open Doors" report published by the Institute of International Education

"We are currently benchmarking other universities students - a list of tasks interimprove our orientation for international students," Perrine said. "We're working on both short-term and long-term students, OIE staff and other a French exchange student.

Big events bring little visitors to campus

Beginning Friday, children of all ages will flock to Columbus for Ohio State's ninth-annual Sibs Weekend.

With careful coordination by the Sibs Weekend Committee, the event is expected to maintain its previous success while incorporating several improvements, said Jackie Lipscomb, chair of the Sibs Weekend Committee and program director of the OSU Parent Association.

"Over the past several years, Sibs Weekend has seen improvements in several areas," Lipscomb said.

Residence halls, athletics, university offices and other student organization involvement on the Sibs Weekend Committee have increased the number and diversity of events offered during the weekend, she said.

"These improvements in promoting Sibs Weekend have influenced our participation rate so much that the number of registered sibs has increased from approximately 400 sibs in the first couple of years to as many as 1,200 sibs in recent years," she said.

The committee expects about the same number of participants this year.

Although campus will be swarming with siblings this weekend, there will be more than enough events to keep

Travelers undeterred by violence

By Lowell Weiss Lantern staff writer

Almost every night, national television reports on violence in the Middle East. Viewers are repeatedly exposed to images of bombing, shooting and riots. Given the world climate, many students are being forced to rethink their plans for trips to Israel

For years, David Jaffe, a freshman in hospitality management, said he has looked forward to traveling to Israel after his freshman vear. As violence in Israel increased, he said he became wary of taking such a trip.

"I am looking forward to going to Israel," Jaffe said. "That being said, I'd be lying if I said I wasn't concerned.'

Jaffe is just one of many Ohio State students who are planning trips to the Israel for the summer. Another student, Laura Weinblatt, a freshman in Jewish studies, plans on making her second trip to Israel this summer.

'I don't really have any (safety concerns). I realize that it's a risk to go there because of all that's going on, but it's a risk I'm willing to take," Weinblatt said.

Schlam, program manager for the Melton Center for Jewish studies.

'As a state university, we need to follow the State Department" she said.

Schlam said travel warnings have not kept students from pursuing other options. Many students study in Israel at Hebrew University, Tel-Aviv University or other centers of learning, she said. Students who study in Israel must contact the universities directly for study programs rather than through a U.S. university.

One of the largest programs sending students to Israel is called Birthright Israel. Birthright Israel is a program for Jewish students who have never been to Israel on a peer trip. The trip consists of 10 days in ed States Israel at no cost to students.

Jennifer Marinello, a senior admission counselor in the Office of Admissions, spoke of two Chinese students who were unable to obtain visa because of their majors.

"They have been waiting for their security clearance since August of 2003, and they want me to check on the case. I called the State Department, and they said that the case is still pending," she said.

This visa problem discourages international students from studying in America.

"I was really sick and tired set a year limitation for waiting time. If I could not get a visa within a year, I definitely would go to somewhere else such as the United Kingdom or Canada," Tan said.

This problem leads to a decrease in the number of applications from international students, Marinello said.

"The number of applications for international graduate students is down approximately 5,700 for this year," she said.

But Tan said he is happy to return here, and the benefits of studying in the United States are much greater than the problem of being treated unfairly because of international affairs.

them busy, Lipscomb said. Activities will include Late Night at Larkins, West Campus Luau, North Campus Carnival and an OSU baseball game versus Penn State University.

In addition, there are several opportunities to play sports, take campus tours, participate in arts and crafts, watch movies and meet Brutus the Buckeye.

These are traditions students truly enjoy sharing with their siblings, said Anthony Cardenas, a sophomore in biology, whose sister visited last year.

"She loved OSU and was happy to see all the diversity," he said. "She was also interested in all the different events that were available for her entertainment."

In order to put the plans for these events into action, the preparation of Sibs Weekend requires hard work and dedication from an extremely committed group of people, Lipscomb said.

"We begin making plans for Sibs Weekend sometime early winter quarter each year. Activities are funded and sponsored separately by various student organizations, residence hall councils and other university offices," she said.

Over time, Sibs Weekend has greatly expanded the number of activities offered, but the initial goal of Sibs Weekend remains the same.

"It was initiated as a way of exposing younger Buckeyes - particularly those who may have an interest in attending Ohio State at some time in the future - to the Ohio State campus and college life in general, as well as provide an opportunity for Ohio State students to spend quality time with their little (relatives or friends)," Lipscomb said.

Class charts Ohio State history

By Tasia Andrews Lantern staff writer

One of the most inconspicuous history classes an Ohio State student can take is not about the American Revolution, the Civil War or even the Spanish-American War — it is about the history of Ohio State.

It introduces students to the very place where they're taking course work and to a way in which subject matter grew up and exists on a university campus," said Christian Zacher, the course coordinator.

Zacher, along with six other professors from different departments, came up with the concept of the class, which is listed as Arts and Sciences 500 in the university's registrar. The class consists of about 25 students, which creates a more hands-on teaching experience.

'Each of us had a different take so we all got together over lunch, and within a course of several would work," Zacher said.

Instead of having a two-hour lecture by one of the professors every class, the instructors opt to have guest speakers from around the university, including the provost, athletic director and the teach the class.

"My favorite part was just going to class every day because there was always something different, and with all the guest on how to put the class together, speakers, we always learned den, a senior in political science months, we decided how the class and mathematics. "The issue of teaching versus research, as well as parking, and about the buildings and why "We're thinking about rotating they get built or torn down is something students always have good discussions about."

In addition, the class is not held in the same room every time. The majority of the classes are held in Kuhn Honors House, but some classes have been held in the William Oxley Thompson Main Library, Medical Heritage Center, alumni association president, to Faculty Club, the Archives Museum, Longaberger Alumni House and Ohio Stadium.

"We actually visited buildings we learned about and got to meet people we read about. That's what distinguishes this class from the something new," said Adam Bur- others," said Tiffany Bullard, a graduate student and past student of the class.

The course not only discusses topic," Zacher said.

Six of the seven professors are has an interest in the university; OSU and its history, but it also gives an overview of how higher education in the United States began.

"I like to teach the history of the universities and how they came about — up until we get to Ohio State," Zacher said.

Zacher said he has learned some things about the university that he did not know before.

"I've learned an awful lot about the physical campus, a lot about the buildings," Zacher said. "I've also learned a lot about the land-grant universities that we take for granted every day.

As students progress through the class they begin to have more appreciation for the school, he said.

Each student must write a 10to 12-page paper by the end of the quarter about any topic related to the university. The course is offered to those of junior status or higher, and it is offered for one quarter each year.

"They're simply impressed by the university, and you can tell it in the papers they write because they delve into the

Study shows women recall more

By Nicole Adams Lantern staff writer

Women are able to remember appearances of people better than men, according to new Ohio State research.

"We have been working on this study for about a year now and have found some interesting observations," said Terrence Horgan, postdoctoral research fellow for the department of psychology and lead author of the study.

Horgan participated in this research with Marianne Schmid Mast and Judith Hall from Northeastern University, and Jason Carter from the State University of New York at New Paltz.

We all had common interests," Hall said. "In all of our studies that we had been doing, there was an underlying observation being made about the appearance advantage."

Horgan and his colleagues conducted five separate studies, testing the memory of both men and women on appearances.

The participants in the first two studies, who consisted of a total of 188 college undergraduates in introductory psychology classes at Northeastern University in Boston, Mass., were told they were being tested for the results of their memory on appearances of people.

clips and slides of men and women. Then they to try to explain it. were questioned on items, such as what the people in the slides were wearing and what comes to remembering things like physical feaemotional state they were in.

The other three studies consisted of over 100 students who participated without knowing what they were being tested for.

The students were asked to interact with one another by conducting a role-play. After the role-play, they were asked questions about the other person. Such questions included "describe your partner's hair," and "describe the kind of shoes your partner wore."

The study indicates on average both men and women remembered the appearances of women more than men, Horgan said.

Specifically, after a one-on-one interaction, there was a clear trend showing that women more accurately recalled what their interaction partners looked like than did men and a trend showing that participants had a more accurate memory for the appearance of female targets," he said in his study

This may be because women tend to wear more jewelry, which stands out, and clothing with many different styles, he said.

"There could be many reasons for this difference in men and women," Horgan said. "Now They were required to watch various video that we have uncovered this research, we need Others.

"Women may have an advantage when it tures, what a person is wearing and body language of other people," Horgan said. "This advantage might be due to women being slightly more people-oriented than men are.'

He said basically he and his partners for the research have described a situation but that they still do not know exactly why there is a difference.

The fact that women did not have a greater advantage over men than they did was surprising, Horgan said. Men did well at remembering appearances but that on average, women did slightly better, he said.

When scientists start out with a goal, they often end up with something completely different, which is what sparked this specific research, Hall said.

Horgan, Mast, Hall and Carter all received grants from the National Institute of Mental Health, the National Science Foundation, the Swiss National Science Foundation and the Zurcher Hochschulverein.

Their study was published in the Personality and Social Psychology Bulletin, titled "Gender Differences in Memory for the Appearance of

OHIO BRIEFS Court keeps boy on life support

AKRON — A court has ruled that a comatose 6-month-old boy will remain on life support until an appeal by his parents is heard May

Matthew Stein and Arica Heimlich, the 21-year-old parents of Aiden Stein of Mansfield, have asked the 9th Ohio District Court of Appeals to overturn last week's ruling by Summit County Probate Judge Bill Spicer.

The appeals court ruled 2-1 Tuesday that no action to remove Aiden from life support may be taken pending arguments before the court.

Edward Markovich, the lawyer for the parents, said the parents were denied their rights to make decisions for their child.

Families claim remains of dead

TOLEDO — Nearly half of the cremated remains of 33 people found at a funeral home have been claimed by family members within the last week.

The remains had been left at the Sherrill-Harden Funeral Home, which was closed last summer after eight decomposing bodies were found there.

The Funeral Directors Association of Northwest Ohio took over responsibility of the remains left at the home after it was shut down last year.

The funeral home closed after bodies were found on June 20.

Some bodies had been left for months; one was left since 1996

Police investigators search the area behind a police station in Athens targeted when three bombs exploded in a series of timed blasts early yesterday. The bombs damaged cars and property but caused no injuries.

Bombing raises Olympics concerns

By Brian Murphy Associated Press

ATHENS, Greece — Three bombs exploded outside a police station yesterday in a series of timed blasts, causing serious damage and rattling security forces just 100 days before the Olympic Games. No injuries were reported.

The pre-dawn explosions, which occurred within a half hour, came before events to mark the final stretch to the Aug. 13-29 Olympics. An anonymous warned of the attacks about 10 minutes in advance, but gave no motive or claim of responsibility.

The bombs — each made from three sticks of dynamite triggered by alarm clocks — appeared timed to cause casualties despite the tip to the newspaper, police said. Parts of the building, which includes several police agencies, were damaged and windows were shattered in nearby apartment blocks in the densely populated Kalithea suburb.

The Olympics carry a record security price tag of at least $1.2 billion that includes a planned citywide network of surveillance cameras and aerial patrols. The camera system is not yet in full operation.

A Greek delegation, led by the public order minister and the head of the Greek police, is in Washington for talks on efforts to safeguard the games — the first summer Olympics since the Sept. 11 attacks.

Some U.S. officials have expressed concern construction delays at Olympic venues could undercut efforts for advance security testing and other measures.

Tower construction set for Fourth of July

NEW YORK (AP) - Developers of the Freedom Tower will break ground on the 1,776foot skyscraper at the World Trade Center site on July 4, Gov. George Pataki said yesterday.

"On July 4, as we commemorate the founding of our nation, we lay the foundation for our resurgence," Pataki said. "On July 4, as fireworks burst in the sky, ephemeral reminders of our liberty, we will begin to reclaim our skyline with a permanent symbol of our freedom.

The July 4 date is well ahead of Pataki's stated goal of breaking ground by late summer.

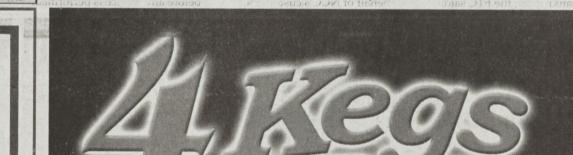

America and the world will witness as our plans go from paper to steel," he said.

Freedom Tower is expected to be finished in 2009, and the full trade center site by 2013.

Organizers say the tower will be the world's tallest building, with its height including a spire meant to evoke images of the Statue of Liberty. It will be built on the northwest part of the trade center site, not the footprints of the vanished twin towers.

The plan calls for a cable suspension structure that creates an open area above the building's 70 floors of office space, and houses windmills to generate energy.

Pataki announced several other dates in the redevelopment timetable, including a complete design of the Sept. 11 victims memorial, "Reflecting Absence," which will be finished by the end of the year and construction starting in 2006.

CVS wants lift on imported drugs

By Mark Sherman Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Breaking with others in his industry, the chief executive of CVS Pharmacy called yesterday for legalizing imports of prescription drugs. The statement by the nation's largest wholesale purchaser of prescription medicines came a day after the Bush-administration's health secretary said legalizing imports appears inevitable.

Support is also growing in Congress, even among Republicans who previously opposed importation but now say constituents are clamoring for relief from soaring prescription prices.

'While many in our industry believe that the importation issue is a fundamentally flawed concept and oppose it without exception, I come with a slightly different view," Thomas Ryan, CVS chairman and chief executive officer, told a government idential campaign. task force on drug importation.

Ryan is the first executive of a large drug store chain to support importing drugs from countries where prices are controlled by governments so that people can fill prescriptions more cheaply than they can at U.S. pharmacies. Ryan said such a move would be a recognition of reality — a growing, somewhat shadowy business enterprise that he said is valued at $2.5 billion to $3 billion a year, far more than other estimates of the cross-border drug trade.

'Millions of Americans have already opted to import drugs because they can't afford not to. We owe it to them to face this issue head on and not look the other way," he said.

The government panel is considering whether and how drugs could be safely imported from Canada and elsewhere.

The Bush administration and Republican leaders in Congress, as well as the pharmaceutical industry, have opposed legalizing drug imports, citing safety concerns.

Among rank-and-file lawmakers, however, momentum for import legislation apparently is growing. Lawmakers who are talking up the new Medicare drug discount card are encoun-

I just sense the buzz," Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., said. A lot of members are in their districts talking about this drug discount card. ... I have no doubt that many seniors are bringing this issue to their attention."

Boehlert voted against importation last year, but now supports drug imports from Canada.

On Tuesday, Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson said he believes Congress will pass a bill this year and he would advise President Bush not to stand in its way.

Ira Loss, a health care expert at Washington Analysis, a financial research company, said Thompson's comments send a signal that the "White House is prepared to bail on importation for political purposes if they need it near the end" of the pres-

Some activists have accused the police of spying and employing McCarthy-era intimidation tactics against groups that are no threat to them.

Police say that given the violent demonstrations that upset the 1999 World Trade Organization talks in Seattle, they cannot afford to overlook any G-8 protest groups, no matter how peaceful they appear.

Katherine Grandey: "Through using pressed glass objects from the thrift store, ribbons from plastic grocery bags, found furniture, self-portraits, porcelain trays and pink, plastic knitted cozies and doilies, I tell absurd stories of the inbetween; they are a hybrid between Victorian and post WWII domestic interiors, design and craft, permanence and disposability, use and display. This work negotiates between the minimalist and the decorative, part installation, part domestic interior; absurd and beautiful, uncomfortable, stark, inviting and quiet."

Liam O'Brien: "My side of "Happiness," is an installation composed of 5'-by- 6' dry pastel drawings of rubber ducks. These drawings envelope the space. Each rubber duck is staring blankly out at the viewer. I've used an object that I feel exemplifies my environment, and have magnified it to such a degree as to give the object monumentality and strength."

BRIAN DUFF Good riddance to bad 'Friends'

Tonight marks the end of the long run of generic sitcomturned-soap opera "Friends."

After 10 years of prime-time dominance, the show - an absurdist fantasy of six white twentysomethings — has exhausted every potential storyline in its limited capacity. Writers have gotten lazy, and actors have gotten anxious that they are retarding future film roles by remaining on the show so long. Ross, Chandler and Rachel have all tried their hand at leading roles, and all the actors have dabbled in movies.

As if in response to the end of the fictional drama, late last month a Los Angeles judge reinstated a racial and sexual discrimination charge against three writers on the show, and the entire environment surrounding the "Friends" circus is approaching its end.

While primetime specials and clip-shows run on virtually every major cable entertainment network, it is time to step back from the circus and look at what really is ending.

The painfully slow death of "Friends" is part of a universal trend in television: The end of the sitcom, which is part of bigger trend: The end of universality of entertainment media.

Of the popular shows recently finished or preparing to go off the air, "Friends" is just a side note to "The Simpsons," "Seinfeld," or even "Frasier." All these shows are or were tremendously successful, drawing audiences in staggering numbers to major networks.

As repugnant as tonight's episode will surely be - for a variety of reasons - the event sorrounding it is a dying breed: A large subset of the population will congregate a singular cultural event. The advertising costs are rivaling those of the Super Bowl, and countless movie theatres are hosting "last episode" events. Come tomorrow morning, people will know what happened.

Soon, network television will find itself in a very difficult situation. Without strong primetime entertainment, which will mostly consist of crime shows, the networks will scrape by on big sports and local news - not exactly cash cows. Diversification of media has sapped networks of their relevance and thier potence. Both drama and comedy are done better and edgier on cable — see "The Sopranos," "Sex in the City" and "Six Feet Under" on HBO and "Chapelle's Show" and "South Park" on Com-edy Central, just to name a few. Unlike the past, when networks could dictate public perception through programming, today's television consumer is not necessarily tied to "what is on." This is a necessary evolution, especially considering the remarkably obtuse censorship campaigns recently. In November of last year CBS pulled "The Reagans" a miniseries which reportadly disclosed Nancy's drug habits and Ronald's homophobia, among other things. The series was axed under intense political pressure. Myriad forces prevented its showing. Another five years, and this would be unlikely to happen because the miniseries would have been pitched at a cable network that wouldn't hesitate to show it. More troubling is a New York Times report that Disney has blocked subdivision Miramax's attempts to distribute Michael Moore's new film, "Farenheit 911" — a biopic which shows monetary links between the Bush family and prominent Saudi businessmen, including a supposed three-generation link with Osama bin Laden's family. Political censorship is an enemy of a democracy, and these two examples clearly illustrate this evil. Diversification of media can remedy this. While we will be losing on the cultural literacy that comes from large viewerships, I hope by fracturing entertainment media we can avoid episodes like "The Reagans" and "Farenheit 911.'

Discussing today's lecture at Mershon Auditorium, he said he would talk about minimalist gardens.

"I will show early work of the firm and some of the most recent, including the World Trade Center," he said.

Speaking in the voice of an instructor — a holdover from his teaching years — he alluded to historical visions of Frederick Law Olmstead's design for Central Park.

'In landscape architecture today, the idea of changing of leaves. The accepting nature with a naturalistic style seems most appropriate. Landscape is actually cultural, not natural," he said. 'I try to do something unique to the situation do something different," he said. "As to what I've seen, I use a lot of painting and sculpture — they're the people who are avant garde, trying to be ahead."

Walker peered around the room, surveying two paintings that hung quietly on the wall. One depicted people walking in the park on an autumn day and the other was of a riverscape in unnatural colors of dark violet and blue hues.

Bombay exports throwback cinema

By Jon Witmer For The Lantern

India produces more films than other country in the world — somewhere in the vicinity of 800 annually and draw a bigger audience than any other national cinema. However, the overall global dominance of Indian cinema remains largely unrecognized in the United States, where Hollywood rules.

Don't be fooled by talk of "American independent cinema" — if you're seeing it in a theater, it's somehow connected to Hollywood. Thankfully, Columbus and eight other cities, put at least some ignorance of Indian cinema to rest via "Cinema India!"

"Cinema India!" presents six contemporary Indian films in a nine-city traveling show that gives a broad overview of the nation's cinematic styles, ranging from Bollywood spectacle to slower-paced "arthouse fare" to documentary.

Bollywood is the name given to the Bombay film industry which thrives, according to film critic Anupama Chopra, on characters destined to fall in love and break into song, regardless of the genre.

The series kicks off tonight at the Wexner Center for the Arts with Rajiv Menon's 2000 film "I Have Found It" and

Buckeye baseball stays hot in romp over Detroit

By Chris Galoski Lantern sports writer

The red-hot Buckeye baseball team extended its season-high winning streak to six games last night by shipping the Detroit Titans back to the Motor City with a 9-4 loss

Golfers on par to chip away at Big Ten Swimmers keep

The phrase "going for 23" is a bit of a mouthful, but that's exactly what is on the mind of the Ohio State men's golf team as it prepares for the Big Ten Championships Saturday in Ann Arbor. A win this year would be the program's 23rd since the tournament began in 1920

OSU pulled off a seventhplace performance this past weekend in the Bruce Fossum Invitational in East Lansing, Mich. Junior Scott Anderson was the best of the Buckeyes, firing a three-round total of 224 and ending tied for 15th.

"In the final round we were handicapped, as Colin Biles had to withdraw. He was battling strep throat and possible mono, so we just played with four guys and we had second or third low," OSU assistant coach Josh Hellmann said. "We are proud of playing well in those tough conditions.

Brown said Biles, an Upper Arlington native, is unlikely to play this weekend. Regardless of Biles' status, the Buckeyes are keeping their goals who play better under preshigh.

The Buckeyes are led by Anderson, who set a careerbest this season when he finished fourth at his debut at the Xavier Intercollegiate.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern will not publish illegal advertising or the advertising of illegal products or services. The Lantern reserves the right to reject advertising that denigrates individuals, groups or organizations based on race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, religion, mental or physical capacity, veteran's status, age or sexual orientation. The Lantern Business Manager will refer questionable advertising to the Publications Committee of the School of Journalism and Communication. The committee will recommend a decision on whether to publish the advertising to the Director of the school.

- 1. Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.
- Copy must be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for special publications whose 2. deadlines will be announced
- An advertisement is required to occupy at least as many inches in height as columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered a "full column" (21 inches) advertisement and charged accordingly.
- Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the adver tisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
- Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.
- A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline. 6.
- No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than 7. seven column inches.
- If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee.
- The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check of money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- 10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- 11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication.
- 12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise-
- 13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.
- 14. A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication.
- 15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication

Some people choose to make pottery, while others may choose to work out. However, everyone needs a little play time.

The workshop students at the Quilt Surface Design Symposium have found that creating quilts and surface textiles gives them an enlightening hobby and creates a real art sense to their work. Their finalized products will be displayed today for the first time at the 15th annual exhibit of "The Quilted Surface II: International Contemporary Art Quilts by Quilt Surface Design Symposium Participants."

The exhibit opens today at the Ohio Arts Council's Riffe Gallery, 77 South High St. and will be presenting an opening reception from 5 to 7 p.m.

The symposium is well known for its workshop opportunities and outstanding artistic exhibitions.

"We continue to hold this event to reach out to not only those that are interested in art, but also students and people who find it interesting," said Tracy Stitzlein, co-director and owner of the symposium.

Instructors are chosen from all over the country for their talent and expertise in the art world. This allows them to display their knowlege and artistic abilities. As they lead these workshops, they also guide the students in exploring various types of art and possibilities.

'There is a work you will see at the exhibit by a woman named Ells Van Vaarle, who has extreme talent with batik and the use of a wax as a resistant," said Linda Fowler, also co-director of the symposium. "This is just one of the many diverse and talented people you will see that come from various parts of the world such as Israel, Northern Ireland, England and Canada.'

Well-known artists, young beginners interested in the art field and other working individuals who seek leisure activities in art from all across the world can be found participating in the symposium.

We have to plan years in advance for these events and workshops because of the high demands in booking such talented artists and instructors," Stitzlein said. "Their work is what people want to do and are looking to see at the symposium."

The two-week workshop includes lessons, hands on observation and the opportunity to individually create art.

'The surface techniques being shown give a wide range of design in dyes, embroidery, applique and fusible bonding." Fowler sa

Jane Austen's "Sense and Sensibility" adapted via the Bollywood treatment.

Overall, it's not a bad taste of what Bollywood has to offer, and it's certainly interesting for its self-reflection on filmmaking itself. The love of cinema seems to run fairly consistently through the films of this series, even if it isn't always as blatant as in this case. Although at two and a half hours, the film more than drags at points — it's not uncommon to go a half hour or more without seeing one of the film's main characters.

Another 150-minute film with a storyline that concerns the filmmaking process is "The Lady of the House" (1999, directed by Rituparno Ghosh), which screens tomorrow night.

Where "I Have Found It" would have benefited from having about 60 minutes shaved off, this film is perfectly and beautifully paced at the length it is, and the unobtrusive camerawork and naturalistic lighting goes a long way toward distinguishing the "reality" of the story from the "fiction" of the movie being made within the film.

Aditya Chopra's "The Braveheart Will Take the Bride," screens May 20. The film has been playing in theaters in India since its opening in 1995, and its widespread audience appeal stems largely from its perfect blend of essential Bollywood ingredients, old-style Hollywood of Sergio Leone. Its ultimate sup- and senior citizens.

port of patriarchal order might leave a sour aftertaste, but the sheer spectacle of the film and the director's superb storytelling makes it a perfect introduction to Indian cinema.

One of the things they needed once they decided to include music was a venue that could accommodate their ever-increasing crowd. have a festival, especially for our size. It's super-cool," Wilson said. "Where the racetrack was is all grass, so we put a stage up with a tent (at one end), and everyone can just gather in the infield."

The owners have been more than accommodating.

run and own the place. They're the salt of the earth and real cool to work with. They love us, they love Tabfest, they love the whole cause and idea of it, so they've been real great," Wilson said.

It seems everyone who helps out is more than eager to do so and most have been helping at Tabfest since the first one. The foundation has since benefitted one of their own volunteers, who met with the misfortune of having a child who needed special care. The family wound up staying at the Miami Valley facility, the very house that receives the Tabfest donations.

This organization helped them stay there as a family and helped them get their baby well, and it was really neat for me to hear about the charity that we support helping one of our own," Switzer said.

That Tabfest is a not-for-profit event is Skeleton Crew. Admission is $5.

"I hope people can realize that none of the we need," said Mike Switzer, Grasshopper money's going into our pockets even though we're putting hundreds of hours of work into it," Switzer said. The Ronald McDonald House has taken to visiting Tabfest.

'Usually, whoever's heading those efforts from RMH Miami Valley will come up with their family and wander around, check everything out and give a speech," Wilson said. "We were honored to receive the RMH Charities of the Miami Valley "Heart of the I can't think of a more ideal place to House" award last year. They're great people there; they're fired up for Tabfest.

It's no wonder their charity of choice is enthusiastic about the event. In the last three years they've received over $12,000 and 1,000 bounds. of tabs from Harmony for Ohio, collecting 415 pounds. of tabs last year alone.

"I can't say enough about the people that "Four hundred fifteen pounds of tabs, you wouldn't think how much that is until you see it. One tab is just so light; so 415 pounds, that's just inspiring right there," Albers said.

Switzer is convinced that things have gone smoothly for the foundation in the past because of their good deeds.

The whole thing has just sort of snowballed," Switzer said. "It blows my mind that it works so well, and a byproduct of that is helping people.'

This year's musical selections incorporate traditional Tabfest groups The One-Eyed Show and Grasshopper Pie with Dickey Betts and Great Southern, the Shantee, Guest, JiMiller Band, Skeleton Crew, Four Ohms and more.

Additional information and advance tickets are available at www.tabfest.com.

There will be a pre-Tabfest fund-raiser 8 p.m. Saturday at Little Brothers with Grasshopper Pie, The One-Eyed Show and Thirty-six works will be on display, giving an insight on the varying talents of the students.

'I have learned to look at pieces of things instead of them as a whole and I incorporated this into my work called Bits and Pieces," said Georgie Cline, an artist in the exhibit and computer assistant for QSDS. "This began as leisure for me 12 years ago when I began, but it is now a passion. I'm excited to see what the other final designs will look like."

Admission to The Quilted Surface II is free. The exhibit will run today through July 18..

Bringing sports to the city

Columbus club sets kids' activities to background of downtown skyscrapers

By Marcus Hartman Lantern sports writer

On the West side of Columbus, just a few blocks away from Broad St., the Westside Boys and Girls Club of Columbus plays baseball.

The field, which was cut out of a strip of houses three years ago, sits adjacent to a fenced car lot, not far from the shadow of downtown's tallest buildings.

The scene and the brand of baseball are reminiscent of a time when both life in the city and the game of baseball were idealized parts of America, a fact not lost on Rich Cunningham, unit director for the club.

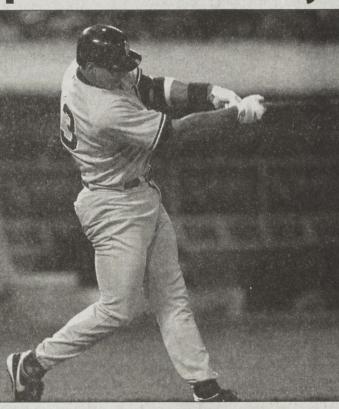

"It's really a throwback," Cunningham said. "A kid in center field can look up and see the city buildings in the background, and baseball, because of where it is played, brings the residents from the surrounding area around to watch.

He said he feels it is important for kids in the city to have nutrition." opportunities to play organized sports, with nice uniforms and equipment, which may be more available to their suburban counterparts.

The club, which began in 1949, offers activities of all interests for boys and girls age 6-18. Membership is $5 a year, and kids who have trouble affording the fee can do volunteer service to cover the cost.

Though they offer a large variety of after-school activities, including art, reading, a game room, billiards and ping pong, Cunningham said the most popular programs are in sports.

"We have something for every kid," Cunningham said. "Some on a competitive level with other organizations and some just intramural-wise so kids can just play and experience these different sports and stay active.
