THE STUDENT VOICE OF OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

Dormitories bulk up staff for weekend

Ohio State and the Office of Residence Life will intensify their efforts by offering on-campus residents additional programs in the residence halls — an attempt to curb offcampus disturbances during the next three

Residence Life, the university office that selects, governs and generally oversees the activities of residence hall directors and resident advisors, has stepped up their efforts because the following weekends are considered "high-risk weekends."

In the upcoming three weeks, the university will host major events that attract large crowds of both OSU students and community members, such as the OSU spring football game on April 24 and the African American Heritage Festival from April 25 to May 1. This weekend, April 17 to 18, has a history of riotous activity, but no specific event is planned to draw large crowds to the campus

Residence Life has ordered all residence halls to remain at least half-staffed and to host programs on each of these weekends.

"We always try to provide exceptional programs for students to attend every weekend," said Jenny Klein, director of Residence Life. "We are just adding programs to try and keep students safe and offer them an

"These are considered high-risk weekends because of previous disturbances," Klein said, referring to last year's off-campus riots following OSU's victory over Michigan. "We anticipate problems, so we can be prepared."

But the intensification might come at a cost for some RAs who will have to put in extra hours not originally defined in their

In the Resident Advisor Conditions of Appointment contract's time commitment section, it states, "In emergency situations that threaten the health and safety of residents, I understand that as part of my Resident Advisor responsibilities I may be required to perform duties that fall outside the scope of my position description."

When approached for comment about the extra work, many RAs declined, citing they had orders from their respective hall directors not to talk to The Lantern.

One RA speaking under a veil of anonymity, did offer a little insight.

"It's more of an expectation than a requirement," said the anonymous south campus RA. "I know a lot of RAs that are a little mad, but what can we do?"

LETTER TO THE READERS

Dear Lantern readers,

It has come to The Lantern's attention that Patrick Cain, Lantern campus editor, has been involved with Undergraduate Student Government campaigning. Cain is listed as a member of a presidential/vice presidential team candidate campaign team.

The Lantern apologizes for any bias that may have come out in its reports because of this involvement.

The newspaper follows the Society of Professional Journalist Code of Ethics. In this it states, "Journalists should be free of obligation to any interest other than the public's right to know. Journalists should avoid conflict of interest, real or perceived ... (and) remain free of associations and activities that may compromise integrity or damage credibility." Because of this, The Lantern asks all editors, reporters and photographers to disassociate themselves from any USG campaign. As of March 29, however, Cain was still listed as a campaign member. .

The Lantern has taken steps to limit Cain's access to USG reports in order to keep them unbiased. At this time, Cain has been placed on a five-day suspension, during which time his position is being re-evaluated. All USG candidates have also received a written explanation from The Lantern.

The Lantern attempts to be accurate and unbiased in all of its reporting. Any errors or comments can be reported to lantern@osu.edu.

Kerry: Students need to be political force

Democratic candidate puts focus on rising tuition costs

By Patrick Cain Lantern campus editor

Certain demographics have determined various presidential elections — farmers during the populous movement and minorities during the Clinton clear with the announcement of his College Tour that the upcoming presidential election will be greatly impacted by young people.

"I think young people need to re-emerge as a political force in America," Kerry said. From many levels of government, students need to make their voices heard, said Ohio State Undergraduate Student Government president Mike Goodman.

'We are a critical element; we can make or break an election," Goodman said. "Once we start increase in financial aid because to vote, legislators will begin to

To attract younger voters, Kerry introduced policies that would directly influence college

"College tuition has increased 28 percent even after you take inflation into account," Kerry said. There are 220,000 people who would have gone to a four-year public university this year but could not afford it because of the tuition hike, Kerry said.

The plans Kerry released in yesterday's conference call were specific and promise-filled. Included in those was a $25-billion, one-year aid for state education programs and a $4,000per-student tax credit.

President George Bush has supported tax-relief programs, Heather Layman, spokeswoman for the Republican National Committee. The 2001 tax-relief bill, Hope Tax era. Sen. John Kerry is making it credit and Lifetime Learning credit have aided undergraduate and graduate students with the cost of tuition, she said.

The Hope Tax credit and Lifetime Learning credit had a combined funding of $5.9 billion. With these in place, Kerry still argues that the burden of college tuition is too great for Americans today.

The feeling has been especially felt at OSU, Goodman said. "The increase of higher education is getting a little ridiculous," he said.

USG has fought for an of tuition increases — 40 cents of every dollar in last year's tuition increase went toward financial aid, Goodman said

In addition to his proposals, Kerry scolded Bush for many of the cutbacks his administration has made.

"There is a direct choice in this race between common sense and job loss," Kerry said.

The Bush administration has made the choice to cut student loans, Pell Grants and Perkins Grants — in effect, Bush tax cuts are why tuition has continually increased, Kerry said.

"This is why I'm doing a campus tour," Kerry said.
"Young people have this enormous power.

The young people need to embrace their power and use it. During the 1960s and the 1970s, it was primarily the young people driving the movements, Kerry said.

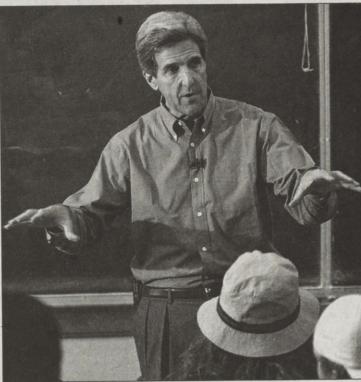

The student movements in the 1970s are of personal relevance to Kerry. After the Vietnam War, where Kerry was a decorated naval officer, he spoke out against the war. A political movement with strong roots to the student actions of the 1960s and 1970s that Kerry has also been active in is toward the environment.

Kerry plans to push the technology curve for the discovery of alternative energy sources, Kerry said. Programs like these will find quality, high-paying jobs, Kerry said. Along with jobs, Kerry touched on the Iraq war, which has become a common tune in his political repetoir. With the increase of Ameri-

"I would rather not do relamping because it costs quite a bit and requires crews that we don't have available right now," Scothorn said. Many crews have been working to improve wiring of the Broad Street bridge and inspecting the wiring of other similar bridges, Scothorn said.

Brinkman said the city could also use a different variety of more efficient bulbs or styles of lights are less easily blocked by trees. Making sure that the lights are monitored is also a priority, he said.

They agreed that the number of faulty lights is staggering; that something needs to be done," Brinkman said.

The division of electricity plans to evaluate costs of replacing lights and trimming trees and will meet with the USG again in about one month.

"The meeting was very productive, and I'm pleased that the USG has undertaken this survey," said Steve Sterrett, spokesman for Campus Partners. "I think it is a very positive outcome.'

Estimated completion of the entire lighting improvement project is expected by autumn quarter.

faculty, staff and students are once again facing cuts to two important programs. The OSU Agriculture Research and Development Center have reappeared on the state's chopping block.

Since Ohio is in dire need of a balanced budget in order to end the 2004 fiscal year and to begin the 2005 fiscal year, Gov. Bob Taft has chosen to reduce government assistance to both programs. The programs are facing cuts of 4 percent for the remaining 2004 fiscal year and 6 percent for 2005.

Country to be ephedra-free

By Wayne Parry Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — Barbara J. Michal's son died in 1997, one of dozens of people whose deaths are linked to the once-popular diet drug ephedra.

So she praised a federal judge's decision Monday to allow a nationwide ban on dietary suppleeffect. The ruling turned aside a plea from two manufacturers.

"It's got to stop," said Michal, of Riverside, Calif. "This is not about public health and science. It's about politics and money."

U.S. District Judge Joel Pisano refused to grant a temporary restraining order that would have prevented the Food and Drug Administration from banning the products.

Ephedra, once hugely popular for weight loss and bodybuilding, has been linked to 155 deaths, including that of Baltimore Orioles pitcher Steve Bechler a vear ago.

After years of fighting manufacturers over the risks, the FDA announced in December that it was banning the sale of the amphetamine-like herb — the first such ban of a dietary supplement.

These products pose unacceptable health risks, and any consumers who are still using them should stop immediately, ments containing ephedra to take Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy G. Thompson said.

NVE Pharmaceuticals of Newton, manufacturer of the diet supplement Stacker 2, had hoped to head off the ban, arguing its product is safe if used as directed. It was joined by a second company, the National Institute for Clinical Weight Loss, manufacturer of a product called Thermalean.

The judge said the manufacturers did not meet several legal requirements, including proving that they are likely to win the case and that they would suffer irreparable harm if the ban took effect.

Pisano's ruling means the ban substance."

NVE's lawsuit can be heard. No trial date has been set.

The ban does not affect decongestants and other medicines containing ephedrine, a synthetic version of ephedra. Drugs containing ephedrine and a chemical cousin called pseudoephedrine are regulated and approved by the FDA and are safe, said agency spokesman Lawrence Bachorik.

Ephedra sales already had plummeted because of publicity about the risks, especially after Bechler's death a year ago. Three states - New York, Illinois and California - prohibited the stimulant on their own.

"Ephedra has killed more than 100 individuals and injured thousands of others," said Bruce Silverglade, legal director of the Washington-based Center for Science in the Public Interest. "The only problem is, it took the FDA almost 10 years to ban the PARIS — A New Jersey man who fled to France after allegedly killing his lover in the United States committed suicide by hanging himself with a bedsheet from a drainage pipe in his French jail cell, his lawyer said yesterday.

Paul Eduardovich Goldman, 39, a naturalized U.S. citizen, killed himself Sunday afternoon in a prison in the suburbs of Grenoble, in the French Alps, even though he was under suicide watch, attorney Arnold Levy-Soussan said.

"He hanged himself with a sheet in his cell," the lawyer told The Associated Press. "He already tried to commit suicide at the start of his incarceration in January. So he was classed among detainees under special surveillance. I don't understand because he was not meant to be left alone and to be under constant surveillance," Levy-Soussan said. "But that wasn't the case. I think French authorities made a big mistake. That is clear.

He also faced U.S. federal charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

A postcard found at Goldman's Mount Laurel, N.J., town house ultimately led investigators to a residence in Grenoble, where he was caught.

His lawyer said Goldman learned just last week of the deaths of his parents.

Edward Goldman, 66, and his wife, Inessa Lemashova, 63, committed suicide in January by slitting their wrists. The couple left a note saying they were disgraced by their son's conduct and didn't want to live.

'When he was told, I contacted the prison director to say, 'Be careful. Mr. Goldman must be watched because he's not doing well and, on top of that, this type of news is not likely to make him feel better," Levy-Soussan said in a telephone interview.

"I was told that measures Irina Sapiro.

measures were insufficient," he added. "I don't understand that he was left alone like that with a

Officials from France's prison service were not immediately available for comment.

The person with whom Goldman shared a cell in the Varces prison was out exercising when Goldman hanged himself from a drainage pipe

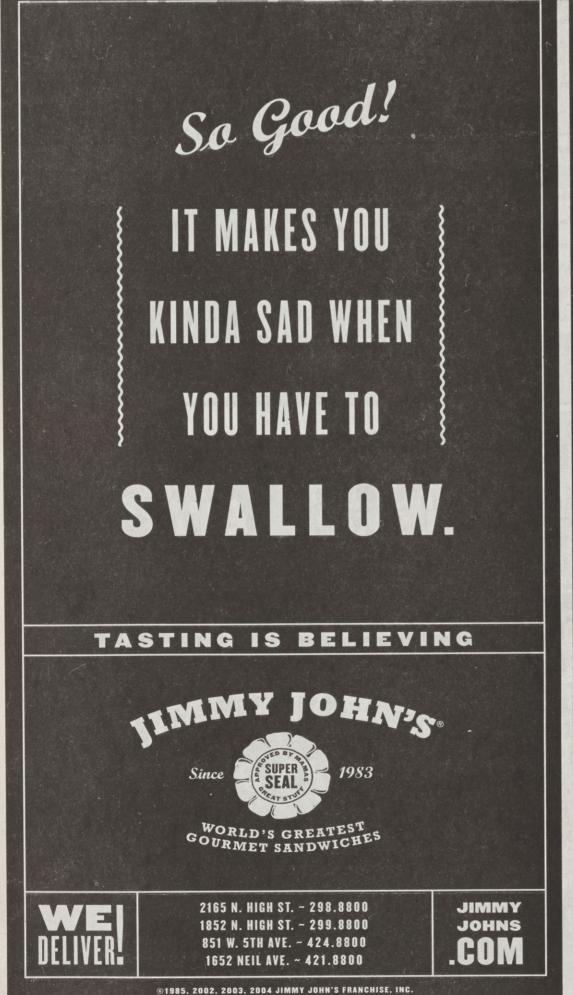

"He must have been alone for approximately half an hour, Levy-Soussan said.

He added that Goldman denied the murder charge, but feared he would be sentenced to prison back in the United States.

'Perhaps he didn't have the courage to fight," Levy-Soussan

French authorities opened an investigation into the death and Goldman's body was expected to be autopsied yesterday or today, he said.

Diane Gibbons, a district attorney in suburban Philadelphia's Bucks County, said Goldman's suicide would not change plans to prosecute his wife,

OUR VIEWS

Our endorsement Jolley/Silverman best for USG

If there is one word that can describe the entire student population at Ohio State, that word is diverse. The university prides itself on having people with different backgrounds and experiences. In order to fairly represent this in the Undergraduate Student Government, students need a president and vice president with a wide range of knowledge and experiences

The time of year has come for every OSU student to voice his or her opinion on who next year's USG leaders should be. Voting starts today and runs through Friday. There is one candidate team that rises above the rest in diverse knowledge and experiences. Ryan Jolley and Kara Silverman have been involved with a number of university and non-university activities. This has put them in contact with different types of students and has presented them with a number of issues. By putting their experiences together, Jolley and Silverman have had substantial outreach with off-campus students and dormitory residents, OSU alumni, honor students and the Jewish community.

The Jarrod Weiss/James Conway team and the Aftab Pureval/Deb Mason team both have substantial experience in OSU activities. Combined, they have tallied multiple involvements in the university, but fail to go beyond OSU. Being the youngest candidate team, Elizabeth Ghandakly and Geoffrey Moes lack experience both within OSU and outside of it.

With his experience as a school board member and part of a statehouse representative's staff, Jolley provides insight of the Ohio government and its effects on OSU, as well as the knowledge of planning out a school budget. Silverman has worked as part of USG's Governmental Relations committee, which has met and lobbied with Congressional leaders.

One of the issues on most high school and college students' minds is the increasing costs of tuition. There is little USG can do to alleviate this concern unless it is willing to go outside of university authorities. Many of the presidential team candidates have offered to lower or stabilize tuition costs, but they do not address the way to go about doing so. In addition, most of the candidates do not have the connections to effectively deal with the Ohio government. By gaining experience with government officials, Jolley and Silverman have the edge over the other candidates in alleviating the tuition problem. They have made it clear that this issue is at the forefront of their minds. Unlike other platforms, the Jolley/Silverman platform emphasizes not only that tuition should not continue to increase, but that the money students are spending should be put in the right place.

In the past, USG has failed to communicate with and represent the entire undergraduate population. Many students are unsure of what USG is and what it does. Jolley and Silverman recognize this as being the biggest problem with the current USG structure. By accepting this flaw, Jolley and Silverman can move toward allieviating the problem. They want the entire undergraduate student body to feel it has a voice in its government. When students do not know what USG is or what it is doing, though, it is tough to have an impact on the government. The Jolley/Silverman platform intends to open up channels of communication with OSU students.

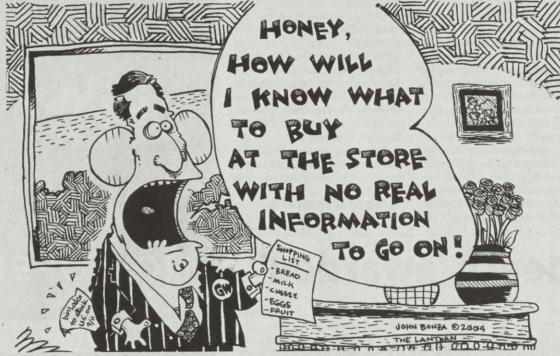

Other candidate teams expressed a lack of communication as a problem as well. The Weiss/Conway team did not present a way to fix the problem while the Pureval/Mason team wanted to hold "town meetings." Jolley and Silverman want to attend freshman survey courses to get students involved from the start. They also said if they can meet 1,000 constituents a day while campaigning, there is no reason they cannot continue to go out and meet more after being elected. By attending the survey courses, Jolley and Silverman will address more students than by simply holding "town meetings." Students often feel a higher obligation to attend class than voluntary meetings.

It is Jolley and Silverman's focus and realistic goals that will allow them to steer USG in the right direction. The Weiss/ Conway team lacks focus — it has plenty of ideas but is not concentrated on finding a way to make them work. Weiss and Conway have not presented an order of importance in issues, thus making providing better food in the commons and parking as important as increasing tuition and safety.

The team of Jolley and Silverman has a vision and sees the way to create that vision. This is where Ghandakly and Moes fall in the race. Having not been around OSU as long as the other candidate teams, Ghandakly and Moes are not clear on the direction USG needs to take to create a better atmosphere for the undergraduate student population as a whole. Experience with a number of student and non-student groups has allowed Jolley and Silverman to see the problems students and surrounding community members have with OSU. This has allowed them to put forth a direct plan with a detailed route.

Jolley and Silverman have labeled specific ways to work out the problems they have presented. The Pureval/Mason team slips below the Jolley/Silverman team in this respect. While Pureval and Mason have envisioned a place for their efforts and focus, they have failed to map out a path to get there. By creating a path, Jolley and Silverman will be able to get more done in their tenures as USG president and vice president.

Get over Hung already have to admit that I was briefly amused when I first watched William Hung shake his bon-bon and sing his heart out in hopes of being the next American Idol only to be met with a cold, horrified and stony silence from Paula, Simon and Randy. It was then that I started to feel a small, miniscule twinge of guilt for laughing.

Obviously, I was not laughing with him. But, hey, he had been rejected and the season was still young. Eventually, the guilt disappeared. Hung went home, and the show went on. And that, my fellow readers, is where it should have ended.

Yet somehow, it did not. What promptly ensued instead was a rash of fan sites, record deals, talk show appearances, campus performances, merchandise and even an online petition of over 100,000 signatures to send Hung to Hollywood. Why the mania?

The most obvious common thread and underlying motivation behind those who most publicly perpetuate the Hung phenomenon is obvious - money. Let us remind ourselves that we not only live in an extremely money-driven economy, but also in an entertainment climate people will do anything, no matter how soulless, to make a buck. For today, let us focus and consider the deeper, more disturbing and often overlooked motivations that are dogging on this bewildering mania.

Let us first examine the image of William Hung. Obviously, he is an Asian American. Oh, and he can't sing. So far, he's not very profitable, now is he? Now throw in the fact that he has a Chinese accent, buckteeth, dorky fashion sense, a non-existent sex life, a future career as an engineer and an overall awkwardness. The end result? The stereotypical Asian male. If Hung spoke perfect English and looked like the Asian Brad Pitt, would he have gained such popularity? No.

The difference is that Hung falls into the negative stereotype of the Asian male during a time when it is apparently still okay to laugh hysterically and poke fun at the accented Asian foreigner. If Hung were

him. After all, Hung appears to be having a good time, is profiting and has also publicly stated that he hopes he can use the current momentum to help develop his future career as a musical artist. Now tell me, what exactly is so funny about the former that would have millions of people laughing with him? Do people laugh with Britney as she has a good time, profits and works on future albums? I don't think so. Let's face it, America —

William Hung is being laughed at.

Furthermore, as an Asian American myself, it horrifies me that William Hung is possibly the most public representative of Asian American people for the vast majority of the American population. It probably wouldn't be so bad if there were more positive images of Asians in the media. But aside from the high SATscoring Asian nerd in the high school movie or the Kung-Fu master/martial arts god, this segment of our society is pretty much invisible.

The girl who cried 'wolf'

There are some things that should

Murder for one; real cold-blooded butchery. Faking your own kidnapping for another.

It used to be people who wanted to disappear did so because they were running from something: Debt, a mistress or a life they couldn't bear to steer on track anymore. But most people who disappeared stayed gone. They didn't do it for a little bit

On April 2, the University of Wisconsin revealed that sophomore Audrey Seiler, 20, faked her own disappearance after being found cold and dehydrated March 31 after a four-day absence, admitting to police that she "just wanted to be alone."

According to Seiler's original report, an unidentified man abducted her at knifepoint outside her apartment on March 27, drugging her with cold medicine and restraining her with duct tape and rope.

However, after a thorough medical examination, it was revealed that Seiler had suffered no physical or sexual trauma, prompting police officials to question her original claims

Suspicions were raised further when Madison, Wis., police viewed a videotape that showed Seiler purchasing a knife, duct tape, rope and cold medicine before she disap-

In addition, a comprehensive search of her computer provided further evidence such as maps of Madison and local weather reports, according to Acting Police Chief Noble Wray.

Seiler's attorney Randy Hopper said that at this time there is no indication from officials in the Madison Police Department or the district attorney's office whether formal charges will be filed. "We don't even know if a crime was committed," Hopper said. "We're still assessing the facts.'

The facts, Mr. Hopper? The facts are that your client, who I'm sure is taking great pains at your insistence to portray herself as a "disturbed and confused young woman," faked her own disappearance and threw the entire community, as well as the country, into an unwarranted state of panic just because she wanted attention. Her headline-grabbing hoax cost the Madison Police Department in excess of $100,000, officials say.

Hundreds of people are kid-napped, tortured and sometimes killed in this country every year, and yet only a select few receive national media attention, usually those who are young and pretty like Seiler.

But while Seiler was off painting her nails, or whatever else it is she did to entertain herself during her fraudulent sabbatical, the FBI received more than 2,000 abduction claims each day

That's 8,000 claims of missing men, women and children who disappeared while Seiler was off reconciling her spoiled ego.

Meanwhile, the armchair psychologists and talking heads have made impassioned pleas on television claiming that Seiler needs help. They'll make her out to be a poor, troubled little girl, and since she's "emotionally disturbed" she'll avoid the rightful prosecution she deserves.

Seiler will be offered a book deal with a preposterous Lifetime movie to follow. In the meantime, Pastor Greg Fairow, who assisted the Seiler family during Audrey Seiler's disappearance is preaching forgiveness, claiming that "just as [Keith Seiler] and the family were focused on finding Audrey, at this point, they're rallying around her to provide her love and forgiveness and the protection she needs from those closest to her."

Poor, little, spoiled, rich girl, it must be terrible to have your family, lawyers and pastor absolve you of any responsibility for your stupid, selfish and deceitful actions.

But that's OK, since you're young, pretty and just want everyone to love

Regardless of what many whiny, touchy-feely defenders of Seiler insist, she should be prosecuted to the fullest extent of federal law, with the maximum penalty available levied against her.

Additionally, her family should reimburse the Madison Police Department the $100,000 their daughter squandered. And, a heartfelt display of contrition on national television would be nice as well.

Seiler should have a punitive example made of her, not only because of her reprehensible actions, but also because they serve as a sharp backhand in the face toward the families of those who may very well never see their missing loved ones again.

She more than deserves to be thrown to the wolves.

Bush: a great example

eaders have constantly criticized me for being pessimistic and cyni cal, so I've decided to change my ways. Optimism is my new thing and I will now be more upbeat. I'll admit that I haven't been the friendliest person; the old Vijay would constantly criticize the President. I want to challenge my new sense of optimism and what better way to test it than writing a thank you letter to President Bush?

Thank you Mr. President for proving that an MBA is a waste of my time. My parents have been pushing me to look into an MBA; however, I've used you as an example.

The entire notion that it's possible to lower the deficit while cutting taxes and increasing spending at the same time appears to be something a high school student could tell you is impossible. However, if an MBA from — Harvard, one of the best business schools in the world — can't teach you basic concepts like that, why bother going to business school at all?

Thank you Mr. President for showing me that being an inept "C" student in college will not prevent me from obtaining the most powerful position in the world. I've learned that all I have to do is find myself a vicious attack dog who will coordinate unethical attacks on others so people will be distracted from my own flaws. I can only imagine the possibilities if I can combine my A- average with Karl Rove.

Thank you President Bush for showing me how crucial it is to have a good public relations department. Although you've constantly flip-flopped on issues throughout your presidency, you've essentially portrayed John Kerry's flip-flops as crimes against humanity despite your inconsistencies on crucial legislation.

I've learned from you that perception, not fact is all that matters to the American people. Most people feel that you're very determined on many issues, almost to the point of stubbornness. However, your record shows otherwise. You were against the formation of the Department of Homeland Security and the formation of the Sept. 11 commission.

What's truly amazing is that a majority of Americans still think you're tough on defense, even though it was the Democrats who came up with the concept of Homeland Security. After changing your mind, you made it seem like the entire concept was your idea. Genius, President Bush, sheer genius.

Let's not forget that you constantly scold corporate America for not being responsible in the aftermath of accounting scandals. You were, however, hesitant to sign the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, a massive accounting reform standard.

Thank you President Bush for showing me that lying is always bad and people who get caught look like fools. As if former President Clinton's gaffe,

"I did not have sexual relations with that woman," and the ensuing impeachment trial wasn't enough, you've been gracious enough to provide more examples of what Among the plethora of examples, one of my favorite lies is your response to a reporter's question about Kenneth Lay, your buddy at Enron. "Ken who?"

Brilliant. What better way to show kids not to lie than blatantly lying about not knowing a man who you talked to on a regular basis and even had a nickname for?

Thank you President Bush for reigniting American's interest in politics. This election is already drawing more public attention than any other election at this stage and voter turnout will be staggering. America is eager to see how you'll defend yourself and how much more you'll stretch the truth.

Thank you President Bush for giving our country so much insight on what we don't want in our next President, Slick Willy gave us a lot of insight; however it pales in comparison to everything you have shown us in the last few years. We are grateful that you're willing to show the country your foolhardy ways and risking your re-election campaign all for the sake of waking the American people so we can prevent travesties like your presidency from ever happening again.

Coke blamed for killings in Colombia

f you were at the Kimmel Center two Wednesdays ago or have seen the fliers all around campus, you may have heard that Coke is killing people. In response to the death of eight union leaders in Colombia over the past eight years, the Campaign to Stop Killer Coke, a group of anti-corporate, activist-lefties are calling for an investigation of Coca-Cola by the Worker Rights Consortium and a university-wide boycott of all Coke products.

The real situation, however, is much more complex. It was not Coke that did the alleged killing, but rather its Colombian bottling affiliates, which are accused of hiring rightwing paramilitaries from the deceptively named United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia — known by the Spanish acronym AUC. Coca-Cola is unsurprisingly denying both knowledge of and responsibility for the deaths.

The members of the anti-Coke campaign have remarkable moral clarity, honing in on Coca-Cola as the evil overlord behind the deaths of South American union leaders. This conclusion, however, is utterly ridiculous. The political situation in Colombia is far more complicated than the anti-Coke campaign lets on and blaming Coca-Cola for the chaos in Colombia is totally simplistic.

Colombia is no stranger to violence. It is the murder capital of the world; a region riven by internal strife and vicious warfare between paramilitary groups, drug cartels and government troops. The Colombian government controls little territory outside the boundaries of the country's three major cities, and other, non-governmental groups have taken control of large portions of the nation's

The three main paramilitary groups fighting in Colombia are the National Liberation Army or ELN, the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia or the FARC and the AUC, the group implicated in Coke's abuses cated in Coke's abuses.

All three groups are on the State Department's terrorist list. The ELN and the FARC are left-wing militant groups, claiming to represent the poor and downtrodden Colombian masses. They are pushing against American and corporate influence and for a Cubanstyle Marxist revolution. Although they purport to have similar goals, they are rival organizations that fight each other for control of the region's natural resources - gold, emeralds and oil - and shares in the trade of opium and cocaine. The AUC is a rightwing militant group, formed to combat the ELN and the FARC with the support of rich landowners and drug cartels

Although each of these three groups claims to have ideals they are fighting for, all of them are little more than criminal gangs, each competing for their own slice of Colombia's national wealth and drug trade.

The violence going on in Colombia is tragic. Its people have been subjected to decades of civil war and are constantly terrorized by paramilitaries of every political stripe, with no end in sight. The U.S. drug war has only worsened their situation, by driving up prices of illicit narcotics and creating a market for illegal weaponry, thus funding and arming every violent group in Colombia while further taxing the Colombian government's resources to deal with its problems.

Coca-Cola's bottling affiliates are thrown into this volatile mix. Although they are accused of hiring AUC thugs to murder and intimidate union members in Colombia, it's impossible to say to what extent they were involved. The AUC, rabidly anti-Marxist, is prone to massacre anyone with left-wing leanings, including the trade unionists that Coca-Cola is accused of murdering.

The complex political situation in Colombia has been boiled down to one simple idea for public consumption: Coke is the bad guy. It is politically convenient for protesters to ignore the war zone that Colombia has become and focus your attention on the accusations against Coca-Cola. Why? Because Coca-Cola is a corporation, part of the engine of capitalism. And capitalism and corporations are bad.

Just look at the groups supporting and promoting the anti-Coke campaign: IndyMedia, the Workers World Party, Corporate-Watch, the AFL-CIO and a host of other rabidly prounion, rabidly anti-corporate organizations and news services. The anti-Coke campaign looks at the terror, murder and strife in Colombia and sees only a way to take a shot at an American corporation and score some political points for unions and its supporters.

A boycott against Coca-Cola would solve absolutely nothing for the workers of Colombia. The corporation cannot be expected to stop the AUC from murdering union leaders. Even if its bottling affiliates were at all involved in the murders, there is no way Coke can be held accountable for stopping all AUC violence, a task to which the combined efforts of the U.S. and Colombian governments have proven unequal. And if Coca-Cola were to pull out of Colombia entirely, not only would the murders continue, but thousands of Colombians would be jobless.

Do not be fooled by the Campaign to Stop Killer Coke's shameless political positioning. To try to pin Colombia's problems on Coca-Cola trivializes the suffering of the Colombian people and the enormity of the problems in that region.

Pig manure may produce oil

By Jim Paul Associated Press

URBANA, Ill. — A University of Illinois research team is working on turning pig manure into a form of crude oil that could be refined to heat homes or generate electricity.

Years of research and finetuning are ahead before the idea could be commercially viable, but results so far indicate there might be big benefits for farmers and consumers, lead researcher Yanhui Zhang said.

This is making more sense in terms of alternative energy or renewable energy and strategically for reducing our dependency on foreign oil," said Zhang, an associate professor of agricultural and biological engineering. "Definitely, there is potential in the long term."

The thermochemical conversion process uses intense heat and pressure to break down the molecular structure of manure into oil. It is much like organic matter into oil over ture with Changing World Tech-centuries, but in the laboratory nologies of Long Island, N.Y. centuries, but in the laboratory the process can take as little as a half-hour.

"If this ultimately becomes one of the silver bullets to help the industry, I'm absolutely in favor of it," said Jim Kaitschuk, executive director of the Illinois Pork Producers Association.

Zhang and his research team have found that converting manure into crude oil is possible in small batches, but much more research is needed to develop a continuously operating reaction chamber that could handle large amounts of manure. That is key to making the process practicable and economically viable.

Zhang predicted that one day a reactor the size of a home fur-nace could process the manure generated by 2,000 hogs at a cost of about $10 per barrel.

Big oil refineries are unlikely to purchase crude oil made from converted manure, Zhang said, because they are not set up to used to fuel smaller electric or heating plants, or to make plastics, ink or asphalt, he said.

'Crude oil is our first raw material," he said. "If we can make it value-added, suddenly Cheney praises China, promises to aid Japan with hostage rescue.

BEIJING (AP) — Vice President Dick Cheney praised China for its efforts to prod North Korea to give up its nuclear ambitions and promised yesterday to "do good work together" on a range of issues.

U.S. officials cautioned against expecting break-throughs on the stalled North Korea nuclear talks. Tensions also remained over Taiwan and Hong Kong.

China's vice president asked Cheney during a one-on-one meeting for Washington to stop selling defensive weapons to Taiwan, Chinese state media reported. Zeng Qinghong's appeal to Cheney shortly after his arrival in Beijing reflected the intensity of China's frustration with U.S. support for selfruled Taiwan, which the communist mainland claims as part of its territory.

"There is only one China and Taiwan is part of China," an announcer, citing Zeng, said on the state television evening news. "We hope the United States can carry out its Beijing's anxiety over U.S. ties with Taiwan is expected to be a key issue during Cheney's three-day visit.

Iraq was also high on the agenda in China, as it was in Japan — Cheney's first stop on his weeklong trip to Asia. Before arriving here from Tokyo, Bush promised Japanese leaders unspecified U.S. help in trying to return to safety three Japanese citizens taken hostage in Iraq. He praised Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi for not bowing to demands from Iraqi militants that he withdraw Japanese forces from Iraq.

'It's important that our governments not be intimidated by threat of violence, that we not allow terrorists to change or influence the policies of our governments," Cheney told a foreign-policy forum in Tokyo before flying to Beijing.

Iraq and East Timor to Cyprus, Haiti and more than a halfdozen African countries, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan has his hands full these days.

Just over a year after President Bush warned that the United Nations would "fade into history as an ineffective, irrelevant, debating society" if it didn't help him confront Saddam Hussein, the world body is involved in major missions across the globe with Washington's blessing.

At the same time, the United Nations' credibility has been called into question over allegations of corruption in the U.N. oil-for-food program which helped feed Iraqis for seven years. Annan also faces criticism over the Aug. 19 bombing of U.N. headquarters in Baghdad that killed 22 people. U.N. staff are still angry that senior officials have not been held accountable for the security lapses.

It's a lot to juggle, even for a career diplomat who's been in the global hot seat for more than by one of the five permanent seven years, dealing with Ameri- members of the decision-makca the lone superpower and with the often conflicting demands of 190 other U.N. member states.

The Bush administration United Nations, but now that it has its hands full with Iraq and Afghanistan, it doesn't mind a larger U.N. role in operations in crises it regards as being of "second-order priority," said Lee Feinstein, a Clinton administration official now on the Council on Foreign Relations.

"At the moment, that is everything but Iraq and Afghanistan," he said.

That still leaves plenty on Annan's plate, including Iraq and Afghanistan, even if no U.N. forces are there.

His top aide, Lakhdar Brahimi, is in Baghdad despite the upsurge in fighting, trying to help politi-cal, religious and civic groups agree on an interim government to take power from the U.S.-led coalition on June 30. He did much the same in Afghanistan.

Another U.N. envoy, Alvaro de Soto, is in Cyprus pushing voters to approve a U.N. plan to mediator, and he believes a bigreunify the divided island in plebiscites on April 24.

In Congo, U.N. forces are struggling to protect a fragile peace, with recently toughened orders to shoot back when UNITED NATIONS — From attacked. And Annan is looking for troops to ensure security and disarm fighters in Ivory Coast, Burundi and Haiti. Sudan, Africa's largest country, is expected to get a U.N. force after a peace agreement takes effect to end two decades of civil war.

U.N. peacekeeping reached a high of nearly 80,000 troops during the Bosnian war in 1993-94, then gradually fell below 15,000. But new conflicts, especially in Africa, increased the number to about 50,000 today - and with new missions expected in Burundi, Sudan and Haiti, it's likely to rise to near 70,000.

Meanwhile, at his Manhattan headquarters overlooking the East River, Annan is expected to name an independent panel this week to investigate the oil-for-food program. He is also overseeing a sweeping overhaul of U.N. security.

The 66-year-old Ghanaian is the first career U.N. diplomat to hold the top job, but like his predecessors, he can only influence. Any action can be vetoed ing Security Council — the United States, Britain, France,

Countries turn to the United Nations only with problems they can't solve themselves, offer halfhearted support, he said, "and this helps explain why the U.N. experiences as many diplomatic and peacekeeping failures as it does."

Clippers to hit the road

By Marcus Hartman Lantern sports writer

With two-consecutive games washed out by rain, the Columbus Clippers set out for a six-day road trip to battle the Charlotte Knights and the Durham Bulls. With a well-stocked bullpen for its backbone, the Clippers are a team with warming bats and struggling starting pitchers.

After four games, two with Charlotte and a pair with Durham, Columbus owns just one win: An extra-inning, comefrom-behind 6-5 victory over the Bulls in the first game of a doubleheader Saturday.

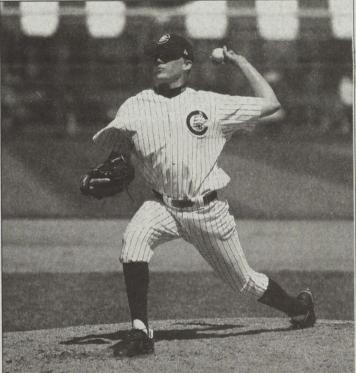

The hero of that win, catcher Steve Torrealba, whose pinch-hit single in the 10th inning broke a 5-5 tie, put a positive spin on the day following his team's game two loss.

"We played .500 ball today," Torrealba said. "If we play .500 the whole year, we'll be happy because we'll be in the playoffs."

To fulfill Torrealba's prophecy, Columbus' starting pitchers, Alex Graman, Nerio Rodriguez, Brad Halsey and Ramon Ramirez will likely have to improve on their double-A Trenton, while Halsey, Sam Marsonek and Scott Proctor. combined ERA. It currently stands at a hefty 6.63 after four games.

Graman's start on Opening Day was the longest and most productive. The lefty struck out six, and in five innings allowed only two runs, both unearned. In their three subsequent starts, Columbus pitchers allowed a total of 14 earned runs in 14 innings.

Clippers' manager Bucky Dent attributed some of his pitchers' struggles to their inexperience. Grawho spent all of last season with just two appearances for Columbus in 2003 after being called-up from ball pitched by relievers Jim Mann, against the Bulls.

Buckeyes stuck in Big Ten tie

Cleveland's Hafner: post-Thome power hitter

In his first eight games, he also has nine RBIs, is batting .400 and leads the league in total bases (25) and slugging land via a trade with Texas in December of 2002,

More importantly, though, Hafner has shown signs of becoming the type of power hitter the Indians have desperately needed since Jim Thome's departure.

Hafner has even surprised himself with his quick

"I've always been a real slow starter," he said. "So this is a nice change. At 6-foot-3 and 240 pounds, Hafner could pass as an NFL middle linebacker or pro wrestler. That would be just fine with the 26-year-old pro wrestling aficionado, who seems to enjoy recalling Hulk Hogan's best moves in the ring more than discussing Hafner is on an early-season tear, and the Indians what pitch he hit over the wall in Jacobs Field.

Oh, and the Pronk moniker? It stands for "part project, part donkey," Hafner says with a laugh. "A lot of people ask me about that now."

Almost since the moment he arrived in Cleve-

Hafner has been compared to Thome, the popular first baseman who broke the hearts of Indians fans by signing with Philadelphia as a free agent following the '02 season.

There are similarities between Hafner and Thome. Both are big men. Both have big swings. Both play first base. And both are patient hitters with a knack for driving the ball to left field.

But until Hafner hits 40 homers — he had 14 in 91 games a year ago— that's where the comparisons to Hafner deftly avoids the Thome talk as if he's laying off a tempting outside fastball. The resident of tiny Sykeston, S.D., (pop. 153) knows he can't carry the Indians.

Eat your heart out, D.C.

I refuse to feel bad for the citizens of Washington, D.C., and their lack of a baseball team. I can top their sorrow.

I am uniquely qualified to say this because I know what it feels like to suffer heartbreak related to a sports team or teams. I am that rare breed of sports fan who knows the true meaning of futility.

I cringe when someone mentions "Red Right 88." I vote to keep John Elway out of the hall of fame. The Florida Marlins did not deserve a World Series title in 1997. And don't get me started on Art Modell.

That's right, I'm a Cleveland fan, and proud of it.

The more time I spend with sports-related people in my job, the more I have noticed that Cleveland fans are regarded as a bunch of whiny crybabies who have no reason to act in such a way. I attribute this to ignorance.

Let's look at the Browns, for starters. Other teams are important, but the city lives and dies with its Browns. When Art Modell announced that he was relocating our beloved team to Baltimore, we refused to roll over and take it lightly:

Instead, we put up a fight the likes of which had never been seen before. We succeeded in keeping the Browns' history with us, while our greedy former owner left town. That is pure devotion.

Was this the case for the Senators, who packed bags and became the Texas Rangers in 1972? Negative. I searched online, and could not find anything alluding to the fact that this move was viewed as anything more than a minor act by the citizens of our nation's capital. So now, over 30 years after the fact, I'm supposed to feel sorry for some fans who have never lived to see a baseball team in D.C.? I'm sorry, but I just can't do that.

I can tell you what true sorrow is. Let's get back to the Browns, because they're the best example I can think of. Growing up, fall Sundays were time for football in my family. I grew up watching the careers of Brian Brennan, Kevin Mack and my hero, Bernie Kosar. These players were poised to lead the Browns to their first Super Bowl. Unfortunately, our prevent defense allowed "The Drive." Not long after, Earnest Byner fumbled on the goal line, handing another AFC Championship to the hated Denver Broncos. There we were on the cusp of victory, only to see it fall on our faces. This in itself is sad, but it gets worse. Citing monetary concerns, our owner decides to move the team. After a tough fight we keep the team, but will not have a tangible team to field for a few years. So we are forced to sit on Sundays and pray for the Ravens to lose. What do they end up doing? Winning a Super Bowl with our defense. The players that we had drafted and groomed had finally blossomed, but they were all wearing different uniforms. If that is not a legitimate reason to complain, then one does not exist. And this is just football. Other sports in Cleveland have had somewhat similar experiences.

Our Cavaliers were defeated numerous times by that jerk, Michael Jordan, and his famous shot over Craig Ehlo.

The 1997 Indians (or Team of Destiny as I used to call them) headed into the ninth inning of game 7 of the World Series with a one-run lead, only to evaporate. The name Jose Mesa still makes me cringe.

The Florida Marlins, a team that was immediately dismantled shortly after the champagne was uncorked, won in the 11th inning.

These are only a fraction of the reasons that Cleveland

MUSIC REVIEW 'Kill Bill' eclectic, excellent

Kill Bill Vol. 2 Movie Soundtrack

As a rule, Quentin Tarantino's films feature excellent and sometimes incredible soundtracks. Pulp Fiction is one of the best stand-alone movie soundtracks ever made and all of his previous films have their moments. "Kill Bill Vol. 2" is no exception.

An unholy and wholly disconnected mess of an album, "Kill Bill" is over-packed with producers: Rick Rubin, Luis Enrique Bacalov, Ennio Morricone and The Rza (in a nebulous, unclear role) just to name a few.

Morricone's hand is most evident through his own orchestra creations, of which there are three spaghettiwestern-ish songs, while Rubin brings his famous collaborator Johnny Cash to the table. Cash's lesserknown "A Satisfied Mind" is a lithe and perfect song that fits well into the collection as a whole and neither overshadows nor disappoints.

The real stars of the album are two vastly different but remarkable songs: Malcom McLaren's (early manager of the Sex Pistols) rich and gorgeous trip-hop piece "About Her" itself a remake of The Zombies' "She's Not There" — is absolutely captivating, and Shivaree's "Goodnight Moon" has the sexy lounge-mood of some yesteryear saloon.

The rest of the album moves nicely, and while it is a little heavy on real movie music and light on pop music, this is forgivable given the quality of music that appears here.

As usual, the movie-dialogue sound-clips are poorly integrated and interruptive. But given the release date of the soundtrack — just three days before the movie's Columbus opening — the dialogue may satisfy impatient cinephiles dying for the next installment.

The album is a must-have for any fan of the movies and - typical of Tarantino's soundtracks any fan of esoteric and excellent pop music.

Ben Jelen Give It All Away

Jelen's melodic and truly beautiful voice cannot circumvent the sometimes weak arrangements

However this album contains the potential - like Howie Day, Michelle Branch and Vanessa Charlton — to be a chart-busting big seller that reintroduces simple guitar or piano pieces into the hiphopped world of popular music.

Semisextile

Below the Surface

Local rock-star four-piece Semisextile has put together a new album that while borrowing heavily from modern rock staples, is totally devoid of contrivance.

The sheer earnestness of the offering requires further listening. However, Bernie's or Andyman's may suit the band better than any boom box or radio signal.

"In 'Sarajevo,' we decided to wear pedestrian attire to accentuate the mood and reality of the piece," Daughtridge said. "This specific piece has a lot of emotion in it, and we want to get that across to the audience.

Both graduate students, Hove and Daughtridge, have contributed to the concert as their project. They display their abilities as choreographers and performers and incorporate their individual ideas.

Each work that I created gave me the opportunity to add to it, yet keep some originality," Daughtridge said. "Each one is entirely different from the others in developing its own identity The concert will also include guest and ideas relating to some form of part of a team where everybody contributes." But wouldn't it be nice to hit 40 homers? "I'm not really thinking about that stuff,"

The Indians, though, can't help but think about what effect Hafner could have on their light-hitting lineup. They're desperate for a fearsome presence in the middle of the order; someone who can drive in runs and hit the occasional long ball.

On Monday, Hafner flexed his muscles with a homer that, for 42,424 fans, was vintage Thome.

Hafner turned on a 1-0 pitch from Twins starter Kyle Lohse, driving it through the stiff wind and over the right-field wall to give the Indians a 4-0 lead.

After he returned to the dugout, the crowd called him out for a curtain call — another career first for him.

"It's one of those kind of moments you Cleveland Indians' Travis Hafner watches his grand dream of as a kid," Hafner said.

fans are allowed to be bitter. We've seen it all. We've been there.

Just listen on Sportscenter for the next time you hear the phrase: "This could only happen to Cleveland!" Remember Dwayne Rudd?

Eat your heart out, D.C.: Your city has moved on, and your cries will fall on deaf ears.

In the meantime, I'll be wearing my Kosar jersey, holding a picture of Mark Price and watching my 1997 World Series highlight video until game seven starts — crying.

a score of 5-4 despite solo home runs by catcher Adam Schneider, the first of his career, and junior Paul Farinacci, his first of the season. Freshman southpaw Jeffrey Carroll (0-2, 5.79 ERA) took the loss in the bottom of the 7th inning after Stephen's two-out RBI single tied the game in the top of the inning and junior left fielder Steve Caravati nailed Pur-Hilligoss at the plate to keep the Buckeyes alive.

the ball well," Stephen said about his hit.

OSU came out with a vengeance in game three as they pounded out 12 hits in a 9-5 victory. Freshman right fielder Jacob Stadium, weather permitting.

Howell, senior shortstop Brett Garrard and Stephen all went 2for-3. Garrard's game-high three RBIs came when he blasted a three-run homer in the fifth inning, putting the Buckeyes on top for good at 7-4. Dan DeLucia (1-1, 8.68 ERA) recorded his first victory of the season and Trent Luyster (1-3, 2.95 ERA) notched his third save.

Howell led the offensive attack by going 9-for-19 (.474) in due second baseman Mitch the series and raising his season average to .304.

"We're all going out there and "Overall, I'm starting to see trying to hit the ball where it's pitched and put it into play," Howell said. "Good things happen."
