New election might be the only way to save Ukraine

By Natasha Lisova Associated Press

KIEV, Ukraine - Facing a relentless tide of opposition protests, embattled President Leonid Kuchma said yesterday that a new election might be the only way out of a spiraling crisis that threatens to break up this former Soviet republic between the pro-Russia east and the Westernleaning rest of Ukraine

Kuchma warned that "we cannot in any instance allow the disintegration or division of Ukraine," and Secretary of State Colin Powell said he had telephoned the Ukrainian president to express concern about reports of a possible splintering of the Kuchma — who along with the Kremlin has staunchly supported the official winner of the disputed Nov. 21 runoff, his Prime Minister Viktor Yanukovych — has called for compromise throughout the standoff but had not previously endorsed another vote.

"If we really want to preserve peace and harmony, if we really want to build a democratic state ... let's hold new elections," said Kuchma, who did not seek another term. He said Ukraine needs a "legitimate president" and added that the crisis could be resolved through a "constitutional agreement" endorsed by parliament, suggesting existing law might not be flexible enough to accommodate a settlement.

While it fell short of meeting protesters' hopes that opposition leader Viktor Yushchenko would be named president, Kuchma's statement appeared to be at least a tacit admission that the election was tainted.

Yanukovych, who was declared the winner of the runoff by a margin of 871,402 votes, said he would support another vote if allegations of fraud in the election are proven — but that he had yet to see such proof.

Yushchenko has pushed for a new vote to settle the runoff, but Kuchma's remarks suggested the government may want to start the whole election process over. Kuchma's statement could also indicate a desire to win a respite from the relentless opposition blockade of official buildings.

Kasich talks to students from the heart

By Kendric C. Winters Lantern staff writer

John Kasich's hair was tousled. He wore a buttoned-down Polo shirt, brown corduroy pants and showed up 20 minutes late. He could have been a student at Ohio State — and a little over 30 years ago, he was.

The former Republican congressman from Ohio and host of Fox News Channel's "From the Heartland" spoke to a class of political communication students at Derby Hall yesterday morning.

Kasich, a 1974 Ohio State has had a 26-year career in politics, including a run at the U.S. presidency in 2000.

When he asked the students about their career plans, one graduating senior said he had an interview with John Kerry's office that afternoon.

"Are you bragging or complaining?" Kasich said.

The Westerville resident's own resume continues to grow. In addition to his job at Fox News, Kasich is a managing director at Lehmann Brothers' investment banking division and a guest lecturer at the Fisher College of Business.

On his brief presidential campaign, Kasich said he simply could not raise the kind of money it takes to win an elec-

Kasich also pointed to the Swift Boat Vetrerans for Truth ads, which Kasich said unfairly questioned the validity of Kerry's Vietnam War decorations.

'He should have ripped their faces off," he said.

Passports get long-faced; no smiles allowed

PITTSBURGH (AP) -Imagine being denied a passport for, of all things, your teeth. It could happen, but not because they are crooked. Under new rules for visa photographs that began this summer, the State Department does not want to see them at all, according to a story published in Sunday's Pittsburgh-Post Gazette.

The new guidelines permit people to smile for passport and visa pictures but frown on toothy smiles, which apparently are classified as unusual or unnatural expressions

"The subject's expression should be neutral (non-smiling) with both eyes open, and mouth closed. A smile with a closed jaw is allowed but is not preferred," according to the guidelines.

Supreme Court ponders medical marijuana laws

By Gina Holland Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court appeared hesitant yesterday to endorse medical marijuana for patients who have a doctor's recommendation.

Justices are considering whether sick people in 11 states with medical marijuana laws can get around a federal ban on pot.

Paul Clement, the Bush administration's top court lawyer, noted that California allows people with chronic physical and mental health problems to smoke pot and said that potentially many people are subjecting themselves to health dangers.

"Smoked marijuana really doesn't have any future in medicine," he said.

Justice Stephen Breyer said supporters of marijuana for the ill should take their fight to federal drug regulators.

Dozens of people camped outside the high court to hear justices debate the issue. Groups such as the Drug Free America Foundation fear a government loss will undermine campaigns against addictive drugs.

The high court heard arguments in the case of Angel Raich, who tried dozens of prescription medicines to ease the pain of a brain tumor and other illnesses before she turned to pot.

Supporters of Raich and another ill woman who filed a lawsuit after her California home was raided by federal agents argue that people with the AIDS virus, cancer and other diseases should be able to grow and use marijuana.

Their attorney, Randy Barnett of Boston, told justices that his clients are law-abiding citizens who need marijuana to survive. Marijuana may have some side effects, he said, but seriously ill people are willing to take the chance.

Besides California, nine other states allow people to use marijua-na if their doctors agree: Alaska, Colorado, Hawaii, Maine, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Vermont and Washington. Arizona also has a law permitting marijuana prescriptions, but no active program.

Photos show Veterans Day for soldiers

By Jon Berliner Lantern arts writer

Veterans Day came and went for many Ohio State students enjoying Thursday and Friday off. But for some, including two OSU students serving their country in Iraq, the meaning of the day was complex and emotional.

Nov. 10, the day before Veterans Day, an OSU photography exhibit showcased American soldiers and the impact their duty has on friends and family. The show was put together by James Pil eam, photography manager in the department of art and a Navy veteran.

The aim of the exhibit was to help the public appreciate soldiers and their service to the country, Pilbeam said.

Pilbeam used photographs taken by Andi Motley, an OSU photography student serving for the National Guard in Iraq. "These aren't pictures you'll see in the news," Pilbeam said personal collection. The shots included blackand-white images of a group of Iraqi children playing on the back of a flatbed truck, scenery from around the country, and members of Motley's National Guard group.

No captions accompanied Motley's pictures, so Pilbeam included letters, stories and memories of current and past soldiers in the show.

We've all seen those shirts that say "world's greatest father" or "world's greatest mother." These shirts are flown in from around the world with the blood still drying on them from Indonesian children who stitched them. They are tacky. They are ugly They are usually some type of pastel.

I have never bought one of these shirts for my parents, I have littered both my father's and my mother's desks with poorly crafted ceramic blobs that end up being ash trays, but I have yet to find a store that can adequately describe why my parents (and not anyone else's) are the world's greatest.

Parents can have fun too

By David J. Cross

Lantern arts editor

So in a campaign for the affection of my parents and to flaunt their greatness to my readers, I will describe one simple moment that changed my perception of my parents from being old baby boomer cranksters to modern new-aged swingers — well, maybe not the swingers part, but definitely everything else.

This weekend, as everyone else was recovering from what has become the death march of fall quarter, I decided catching up on my sleep was not as important as attempting to break every conceivable barhopping experience by avoiding the high school friends everyone runs into and wishes they hadn't and by meandering to each bar I have yet to go to in Cincinnati. I failed at this goal. I made it to one bar. I didn't run into any of the people I didn't want to and it was great.

The reason for this is as I sat at the swankiest martini bar in Cincinnati, trying desperately to impress the hottest of the hot girls Î've ever known, my parents came stumbling into the bar as bewildered as deer in headlights. They sat down next to me and began buying round after round or martinis because they wre bored.

Does this sound like a typical Saturday night? No. Parents aren't supposed to be buying their 21-year-old son and his friends martini's — in fact I probably shouldn't have even been in the bar, I should have been drinking stale Natti' Light at a keg party somewhere shadowed with beer -pong champions and corn-hole killers.

But never the less, there I was drinking with my parents and a girl they didn't really know, trying desperately not to be outstaged by two early 50s adults with a pension for vodka tonics and white Rus-

At that moment I realized that most sane 20-somethings would consider this an ultimate roaster block, along the lines of having a roommate walk in on a romantic moment. To this extent, they are right. However, with my parents this isn't the case — if anything they are funnier than I am and can drink more. With them there it was like having two well coached wingmen gunning down the kamikaze-type humor I have used in the past, now known to cause grandparents wigs to miraculously catch

In short, my parents rock. Instead of setting me up with a "Sara plain and tall" down the street they tripled my meager editor pay so the martini's I bought before they arrived didn't land me with another year of debt under my belt.

So now, to say thank you, I have decided to buy them both "Worlds Greatest Parents" shirts, which leads me back to what I began to speak about. I have never bought one of these. Where do I find some that don't make people want to throw up? With the number of college students on this campus, at least one person can help me.

New choir director filled with glee over position

By CJ Weldy Lantern arts writer

The Ohio State men's glee club and symphonic choir have a new director who is excited about taking on new challenges and implementing his experiences with an already well-respected choral department.

Robert Ward began his tenure as the director of the men's glee club and symphonic choir this quarter. He came to OSU after spending the last 16 years teaching and directing at Oklahoma State University. He said he is the right guy, at the right place, at the right time.

About two-and-a-half years ago, one little domino fell into place and all these things started happening," he said. "Everything came together and I ended up here.'

Ward has experience and is well educated in music. He grew up in western Massachusetts, went to college in New Hampshire, taught in Connecticut for three years, and received his masters and doctoral degrees from Michigan State University. He said his experience at Oklahoma State will aid him in mixing his style of teaching into the men's glee club and symphonic choir.

"The choirs sing well and they have been very willing to try on and embrace my ideas, goals, philosophies, and techniques," he said.

Hilary Apfelstadt, professor of choral studies and conductor of the chorale and the women's glee club at OSU, said Ward has a lot to offer to the glee club and symphonic choir through his experience and expertise.

'He has a lot of experience and he is a real teacher," she said. "He has a great personality for the guys (in the glee club) and he's really interested in a lot of things going on at the university."

Ward replaces James Gallagher as the director of the glee club and symphonic choir. Gallagher was an accomplished director while at OSU and Ward said he was excited about the opportunity to meet and work with him when he arrived on campus.

It's a rare thing to have a conductor who is secure enough with himself to invite a former director to listen, critique, and assist," he said. "Also, to have a former director who is secure and confident enough in what he contributed, that he would be willing to help out and nurture the new guy who is trying to learn his system. The men's glee club is a pretty visible component on campus and for a new guy coming in, the learning curve is pretty steep. That's been one of the real joys of the gig. I came to do a high quality, artist level music making, but I didn't expect to find a new friend.

The men's glee club currently consists of 87 members, while the symphonic choir is made up of 56 members. Ward said the largest amount of the symphonic choir is music majors and that the largest percentage in the glee club is non-music majors.

"You go at the two groups differently, but they both want and desire to have someone affirm what they know and who can gently and compassionately teach them what they do not know," he said. "Auditions usually take place at the beginning of each quarter, with the largest amount coming in at the beginning of the autumn quarter. When people come to audition, I will test their musical literacy skills, check how well they read pitches and rhythms, and I will talk to them about why they want to sing."

Ward said that a student must display some sort of serious interest in being a member of either the glee club or the choir. He does not want to accept a student who is taking the course just to fulfill a credit.

'If someone shows up at my office and really doesn't care about either choir and just wants to fill a credit, I'm not really interested in that person," he said. "Those two ensembles are too special, in terms of who is in the mix of people, and if people do not fit into the community, then I'm not too sure it's a

OSU is known for its prominence in both instrumental and choral music. Ward said he is willing and able to maintain that reputation.

'I have spent the last 19 years of my life in college teaching and honing my artistic and conducting skills, and refining my pedagogical skills, to make me ready for this position," he said. "All the stars lined up to bring me here right when I had enough personal, musical, and pedagogical maturity to take this program where it is and maintain the national level of prominence that it has. The men's glee club does not have to take a backseat to anyone and the symphonic choir sings as well as any other institution. For them, it is not how good they are, but how good they can be.'

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas moved agonizingly and title game. tantalizingly close to securing a bid in the Bowl Championship Series on Monday when the new standings left the Longhorns a mere .0013 points behind No. 4 California

The combination of human polls and computer standings gave California an average ranking of .8431. Texas is a whisker behind at .8418. Both teams are jockeying for the remaining BCS at-large berth.

While the standings didn't change, Texas closed the gap on the Golden Bears.

"This to me is good news," said Texas coach Mack Brown, who pleaded to get his team into the BCS after last week's 26-13 win over Texas A&M. "We're just in a waiting game right now.

Specifically, the Longhorns (10-1) await the outgo study. come of California's final game at Southern Mississippi on Saturday. A Cal loss should send Texas to its first BCS game.

If the Golden Bears pull out a close win Saturday, Texas hopes voters in The Associated Press media poll and the USA Today-ESPN coaches poll would move the Longhorns ahead of California.

If the Longhorns don't bump Cal, Texas likely goes to the Cotton Bowl.

After beating A&M, Brown used his post-game news conference to plead his team's case, saying the Longhorns deserved a BCS game more than some other schools that could get in.

On Monday, Brown said his comments were more critical of the system overall and not directed at California (9-1), whose only loss came against No. 1 Southern California. Texas' only loss was to Brown said California also deserves to be in one of the big-money bowl games.

"Cal also has a really good football team," he said. "I'm not pleading against Cal. At all." But he did note that while Texas might not make it, the BCS will include a team with at least three losses. The Big East, which is guaranteed a berth for its league champion, currently has a four-way tie for first, and all four teams have three or more losses. "We probably should look at the system," Brown said.

No team has been more bedeviled by the BCS than the Longhorns.

In 2001, third-ranked Texas lost a chance to play in the national title game when the Longhorns lost 39-37 to Colorado in the Big 12 California quarterback Aaron Rodgers (8) smiles

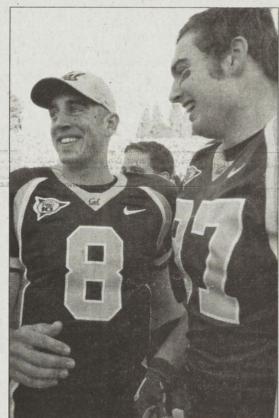

Both times, Texas tumbled all the way from the BCS to the Holiday Bowl.

"Our team has been left out of BCS more than anybody in America with a really good football team," he said. "That's the roller coaster we've been on. Anybody who's surprised that I've got strong feelings probably hasn't been following college football.

Because of scenarios yet to unfold, Brown said he'll wait to see what happens before getting too excited or disappointed about his team's current status

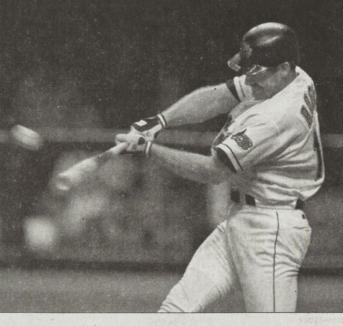

Brown, who hit the recruiting trail Monday, said he'll tell his players they're guaranteed a January bowl game regardless of what happens.

The Ohio State women's volleyball team was selected for the 2004 NCAA Tournament Sunday and will host Dayton at St. John Arena in the first round Friday night.

The Buckeyes (27-3) are in the tournament for the 13th time in program history with their last appearance in 2002.

The fifth-seeded Buckeyes' only losses this season came on the road at then-No.24 Illinois, then-No. 5 Minnesota and two weeks ago against No. 4 Penn State in Columbus.

The Buckeyes finished the regular season in second behind the Nittany Lions. There is no Big Ten Tournament.

If OSU advances past the Flyers (23-8) they will face the winner of the match between Pittsburgh and Ohio University, also Friday at St. John Arena. The second-round match will be played Saturday at 7 p.m. The winner of that match advances to the regional in Minneapolis Dec. 10-11.

The Big Ten sent seven teams to the tournament, more than any other conference in the nation. Purdue and Michigan qualified despite going 9-11 in Big Ten play.

The Buckeyes are on a

Promowest touched by Muse; band entrances sold-out crowd

Tickets for the CD101 "low-dough show" sold out several weeks before the concert, and the venue was moved from the Newport Music Hall to Promowest in order to accommodate a larger crowd.

Cheers, Columbus," Bellamy said to the crowd between wide smile.

Guitarist Ben Brewer and bassist Jeff Darosa traded vocals, but failed to elicit any sort of positive response from the crowd. Audience members actually sat down during the band's set, and the largest applause the Exit received was for announcing "This is our last was largely forgettable.

OSU student plans to reside over a Digital Empire

By Lindsey Pond Lantern arts writer

Local Ohio State student and musician Zachery Allen Starkey describes his band, Digital Empire, as dark, moody and atmospheric.

Skully's bar — located in the Short North — Nov. 17 to see the band play, he said.

'I would say that show was probably our biggest," he said. 'Lots of people got up on stage and danced while we were playing, and were banging on keyboards. It was chaotic and wonderful at the same time.

The band will be releasing two singles in January and February, called "Solitare" and "Nuclear tronic band and the music is they understand my vision for catchy, and great to dance to, emotionally the songs are intense and the lyrics are very heavy," he said. "I have a very unconventional singing voice. My voice has been described as a cross between a twisted Frank Sinatra, Marvin the Martian and Johnny Rotten."

Starkey writes all of the lyrics and chord structures for the

'I'm a self-taught musician so I like to work with people who "Even though we are an elec- are trained musicians because what the song should be," he said.

These "trained musicians" include his two band members, Bo Kim, 19, and Crow, in his 30s.

Both members play keyboards.

Zachery told me he needed a said. keyboard player, so I just joined," Kim said.

Kim moved from South Korea five years ago and attended the Columbus College of Art and Design last year to study photography. However, she said music was her true passion.

'I've been working on my Other inspirations have been music a lot lately," she said. "I plan on doing music for a respectable amount of time.' Kim does a lot of programming as well, Starkey said. I can program drums, bass Starkey, who is also influenced and symbols, which is how we get all of our sounds affects for our band," Kim said. "But it's important not to make it sound like a karaoke machine."

Kim has been in the band for about a month, and Crow just started, Starkey said.

"Bo is totally my main collaborator now, and her creative input has really been helpful with brushing out the songs and making them better," Starkey

Though Crow has not been a part of Digital Empire for very long or has yet to perform live with Starkey and Kim, his talent does not go unnoticed.

'Crow is very, very talented. When Crow and I play together it sounds really good," Kim said. "I'm excited for when we play next because we're going to (be) better than we ever have before.

The band plays at Skully's on a regular basis, and has also played at Bernie's Distillery in the pasta bar located on High Street across from the Wexner Center.

"I don't like to perform at a certain place more than two or three times a month because people will get sick of you," Starkey said. "But generally when we play ve get a pretty good crowd."

Digital Empire started in 2002 after Starkey had been playing under his own name, Zachery Allan Starkey.

"I would sing and play keyboards, and then the drum and bass would be on a backing track, but you can't do very much when it's just you singing and playing," Starkey said. "It just got very frustrating for me to do.

Eventually, Starkey decided to get other members to join in, included player. Andrew Harding and keyboard players Ryan Stolte-Sawa, Sarah E. and Trinity Shi.

Starkey thought it would only be fair to change the name of the band from (Zachery Allan Starkey) to Digital Empire after getting band members, he said.

Originally the band was called "Digital," influenced by a song title from the band, Joy Division, Starkey said.

"I like names that are kind of short and brief," he said. "But that name only lasted about a week because when I got on the Internet I found out there were about 800

Wanting to keep the word "Digital" in the band's name, Starkey decided to add "Empire" after it, because he was learning about the Roman Empire in an art history class at the time.

However, Harding and Trinity left the band after a year and a half, and Stolte-Sawa and Shi left after a month.

'After Andrew left, I decided I didn't want guitar players any-more, so I just use all keyboard players now," he said.

Digital Empire has 10 songs that are played live all the time, which is enough material for the group to record an album that is due out this spring, he said.

"Obviously, it would be wonderful if we could become the new Cure or the new New Order, and become really well-known and get our songs played at clubs, but I'm realistic," he said. "If we could just get a deal with a small record label and be able to tour and play other bands that had the same shows outside of Columbus, that would be really great."
