LL BECAUSE OF A GAME

Saturday night started off relatively quiet. At 11 o'clock, the Columbus Division of Police had made less than a dozen arrests, issued a number of citations and had engaged in no major conflicts with students. Firefighters had contained about 60 fires since Friday night.

"Essentially we had fires starting Friday, but there was nothing horrendous. As soon as the game was over, things started up. There were miscellaneous arrests like felony drug abuse, receiving stolen property, resisting arrests and illegal alcohol consumption," said Earl Smith, spokesman for the Columbus Police.

Overall, it looked like a surprisingly calm post-Ohio State-Michigan game weekend. The game had ended in mid-afternoon with the Buckeyes losing to the Wolverines, 26-38. Smith credited the cold weather and mounted police units with helping deter students from becoming overly aggressive during the night. to

According

Smith, several hundred officers were to be rotated on and off throughout the night, including cruisers, mounted-police, bike police, foot patrollers and riot-equipped officers.

One of the police department's helicopters was in the air relaying infra-red video to the main police command van. Cmdr. Jay Evans and Smith were among half a dozen officers monitoring the situation from the heated confines of the state-of-the-art command center. Columbus police helicopters are equipped with forward-looking infra-red (FLIR) cameras, designed to detect heat emissions. Human bodies are displayed vividly as bright white figures against the cold background. An antenna attached to the helicopter transmits a continuous picture to the command van which displays the picture on a television at the front of the van.

At 12:30 a.m., the video from the helicopter showed nothing unusual. The fires had been contained, and the largest gathering appeared to be fewer than 100 people at a house on Norwich Avenue. The general consensus inside the command van was that aside from the fires earlier in the night, things had been uncharacteristically quiet.

Smith was going on his 14th hour

contact with his bed sometime that night. The helicopter circled repeatedly over the campus area, returning to High Street to find heavy pedestrian traffic but little else

At about 1:20 a.m., Evans decided there was no reason for such a heavy buildup of officers to remain on the scene with so little criminal activity. The officers in the van began to pack up and prepare to leave, assuming that the situation was under control.

"Around 1:30 a.m we were considering going home, but at 2 o'clock Smith.

A group of people attempt to overturn a parked car at approximately 2:15 a.m. Sunday on E. 13th Avenue between Indianola Avenue and N. High Street as a post-game party spilled into the streets.

A Columbus police officer said it had been relatively calm until about 2 a.m. "I have been here since 4 o'clock and the main thing we've had to deal with is Dumpster and furniture fires. It started north. I don't know what the fascination is with burning stuff," said the unidentified

Smith blamed the disturbances on irresponsible alcohol consumption and ignorance.

"What is it going to take for people to get their heads out of their asses? This is the biggest bunch of crap. I had lots of other things to do besides baby-sit a bunch of irresponsible people. Of course, when jackasses start drinking at 7 a.m., there will be problems. I was an OSU student, and I never would have done this crap,'

He was concerned about the amount of money that the city has gan weekend, citing that Columbus spent $80,000 last year even though the game was in Ann Arbor, Mich. He suspects that this year's amount could be considerably more.

A total of 129 trash fires were reported and numerous vehicles were damaged, according to Columbus police. About 25 people were arrested, but it is unclear how many of them were OSU students.

"It will take days before we get the report on who was arrested, and if officers were hurt," Smith said.

By 3 a.m., the 13th Avenue situation seemed contained, and some officers left the area. But about an hour later, a bus of about 60 officers in riot gear arrived on Chittenden Avenue responding to a series of phone calls reporting property damage in the area, according to Smith.

However, students on Chittenden Avenue said they had not seen any disturbances. The police from the bus began speaking into a megaphone, declaring that there was to be no more destruction of property and that all students were to go inside their houses immediately. Students who did not comply immediately were maced, and some were arrested, according to reports from witnesses.

A student at the Columbus College of Art and Design was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct when she refused to comply with the

"I was told to go inside and I was asking, 'Why can't I stand on my porch?' Before I could finish what I was saying, I was maced in the eye, taken off the porch and placed in plastic handcuffs. They put me in a parking lot behind Night Owl's for about 45 minutes. Then I was taken to a building for fingerprinting, and then I was taken to jail. I was padded down and searched, and then I was taken to a room and told to get completely naked in front of a female officer and put on a jail suit," said the student, who wished to remain anonymous.

She added that she was kept in custody for about three hours and will meet with her attorney today to discuss her case. Following the Chittenden Avenue incident, events quieted down again. However, sirens were still raging well past 5 a.m.

After he was briefed about the early morning confrontations, OSU President William "Brit" Kirwan said in a statement that he was in complete support of the police actions and was outraged by the actions of the students. He plans to react swiftly and immediately to make sure that if any OSU students were involved with the rioting, they will face appropriate penalties.

Brian McGrew, an Ohio State student, will be spending the week at the Ohio State University Medical Center, following his stabbing at 88 E. 13th Ave. at about 2:15 a.m. yesterday, according to a report from the Columbus Division of Police.

McGrew, a junior in business management, is listed in stable condition. He was stabbed with a knife in the abdominal area, according to Mary Van Fleat, hospital administrator manager at OSU Medical Center.

McGrew's father, Steve McGrew, said Brian, had a party Saturday night and was trying to tell people to leave his property when he was stabbed.

"His stabbing was unprovoked. He and a couple of friends told some guys that they better leave because the cops were coming. They didn't want to leave, and one of them stabbed Brian. Three people saw this guy, and he's highly identifiable. It's just a matter of time before they are caught," said Mr. McGrew.

He added that the party was winding down by 2 a.m. and that there were only about 25 people left by the time McGrew started asking people to leave. He said officers from the Columbus Division of Police chased the assailant, but he got away. Mr. McGrew said he only faults the assailant for Brian's attack and does not hold the university or police department responsible for what happened to his son.

Diana Cely, an OSU student who lives on East 13th Avenue, said the Columbus police were too slow in helping McGrew after he was stabbed.

"When I saw that Brian was stabbed I called 911. I asked two cops if they could get 911 here faster. They said they were working on it, but they didn't move. I was really frustrated, and I was crying, screaming and asking them to do something. I probably told (the police) they were useless and as I got closer to them they threatened to mace me. I think there were 15 to 20 cops in riot gear in my front yard, and they were just standing there while Brian was laying on a car for support," said Cely, a senior in Eng-

Velliquette said though McGrew had more than the legal limit of beer kegs, it did not contribute to his stab-

"I don't think that the number of kegs had anything to do with the stabbing because most houses on that street had kegs. Regardless of how many kegs there were, there were just too many people to control." # tivist asks OSU to sign on to global policies

Lantern staff writer

A world-renowned human rights activist met with a group of faculty and student representatives on Friday with hopes of solving the sweatshop issue that is currently affecting Ohio State with his new code of conduct.

The Rev. Leon Sullivan, who has been a leader in the civil rights movement for more than 60 years, has proposed that Ohio State endorse what he is calling the Global Sullivan Principles.

The principles, similar to the ones he used to help bring down apartheid in South Africa, are a code of conduct that he hopes corporations will endorse and expect their licensees to follow as well.

The City Council of Columbus adopted the principles on Thursday. Although color, race, gender, age, ethnicity or relino other universities have signed on yet, more than 75 corporations such as Texaco, Sunoco, Inc. and General Motors have. Sullivan wants OSU to be the first university to adopt his principles.

"I get six to eight requests to accept degrees each year," Sullivan said. "I turned them all down. I turned down a Harvard award, which no one had ever done before. I accepted a degree from Ohio State two years ago because they were one of the first schools to accept blacks. That's why I chose OSU to have the first meeting.'

Some of the principles Sullivan is asking companies, cities and universities to endorse include:

· Promoting equal opportunity for employees with respect to issues such as gious beliefs;

· Operating without unacceptable worker treatment such as the exploitation of children, physical punishment, female abuse, involuntary servitude, or other forms of abuse;

· Providing a safe and healthy work-

· Respecting employees' voluntary freedom of association;

• Compensating employees to enable them to meet at least their basic needs. The participants in the meeting had diverse backgrounds, and included faculty from OSU's textiles and apparel program, members of USG, representatives for graduate students and members of United Students Against Sweat-

Student reactions to Sullivan's plan were mixed.

USG President Robert "B.J." Schuerger is completely in favor of the

"I am going to send an e-mail to all Big Ten USG presidents endorsing this," Scheurger said.

Rachel Smith, a senior in drawing and painting and art education and a member of USAS, feels the Sullivan Principles are somewhat problematic because they do not have any type of monitoring associated with them. Sullivan acknowledged that monitoring is still a problem that will hopefully be curbed within the next year. He is planning a summit of 40 university presidents on March 6 and hopes that monitoring systems will be in place by then.

"In the meantime, we should be focusing on a plan of action that is ready to be implemented," Smith said.

Geordie Hamilton, a fifth-year student in aviation and English and also a member of USAS, feels that joining the Worker Rights Consortium would be a more beneficial plan of action. While the WRC is a new group, Smith said he feels it is a good course of action because it has student representation, which an older organization, the Fair Labor Association, does not.

Whichever group OSU might consider joining, Smith feels that time is of the "People are being abused and just because it isn't us doesn't give us the right to take too long to resolve the problem," Smith said.

late crimes targeted toward Asian-Americans

By Allison Leigh Bourg Lantern staff writer

Hate crimes against Asian-Americans are becoming more frequent, with the number of violent crimes against them increasing from 355 in 1995 to 486 last year, according to a recent report by a coalition of Asian-American civil rights groups.

Groups including the Asian-American Legal Defense and Education Foundation, the Asian-American Institute and the Asian Pacific American Legal Consortium, cited several recent cases of hate crimes against citizens of Asian descent, some of which took place at colleges and universities misconception that people of Asian across the nation. At Cornell University, for instance, there have been three reports of racially motivated assaults against Asian-American women in the last month and a half, according to studies done by the Defense and Education Foundation. Resentment and distrust, which in turn give way to prejudices and biases against Asian-American students and faculty, are disturbing realities at Ohio State as well, said Chikako Cox, associate professor of education and psychologist with OSU Consultation Services.

descent are often "economically successful, rich and gifted," in everything from music to math, and this can lead to jealousy and hate.

She recalled the automobile crisis from the mid-1980s, when Japanese-made vehicles began to replace automobiles manufactured in America. Many General Motors workers in Akron and Detroit lost their jobs as a result. Because OSU is relatively close to both cities, anger and resentment directed towards Asian-Americans became very prevalent on campus, Cox said.

Offensive graffiti was every-Cox noted there is a common where, she added, and she often from whites who blamed Asian-Americans for "taking their uncles' jobs.

"To them, it didn't matter that some of us had been in America for five or six generations, that we were just as American as they were," Cox said. "It didn't matter that we were Asian-Americans, not international Asians. They couldn't tell the difference."

Cox added that because of this confusion, it is still very hard to tell today which hate crimes are targeted at Asian-Americans and which are targeted at students and faculty with Asian citizenship. While she noted that prejudice against Asians is not nearly as prominent at OSU as it was 15 years ago, prejudices still linger.

"There's still residue from the automobile crisis," Cox said.

Hate crimes aimed at Asian-Americans do not receive as much publicity as hate crimes against African-Americans or homosexuals, however. Sirin Holst, interim coordinator for the Office of African-American Student Services, pointed out that Asian-Americans are often excluded from discussions on discrimination and hate crimes.

'We often don't think outside the lines of black and white,' Holst said.

She speculated that prejudice against African-Americans may be overlooked simply because owed by more prominent instances of bias. For example, events in American history, such as slavery, focus mainly on African-Americans. This may be why the bigotry faced by Asian-Americans doesn't receive as much attention.

Another problem, Cox said, is that instances of hate crimes against Asian-Americans are vastly underreported because their victims are ashamed, particularly if they are the victims of sex crimes. In fact, according to the most recent statistics compiled by University Police, no hate crimes against any minority group were reported in 1997 and

"The statistics aren't telling the real story," Cox said.

Kim Pachell, assistant director of the Student Advocacy Center, noted that it can be difficult to distinguish between racially motivated crimes and simple cultural clashes.

"Some people might hear words differently as a result of semantics," Pachell said.

She also cited examples of language barriers between American students and their foreign instructors.

"We get a lot of complaints about that, particularly from math and science students with foreign teaching assistants," Pachell said. "But is that really heard racial slurs and taunts such racism is often overshad- racism? Probably not, although it can be hard to differentiate.

She added that when the advocates at the center do sense that students are experiencing fear and anxiety because of their ethnicity and race, "we pull together all the resources that we can, which includes recommendation of support groups and counseling for ethnic students."

Rebecca Nelson, program manager for community development at the OSU Medical Center and board member of the Organization of Chinese Americans, hopes to increase awareness by organizing a campus visit with Bill Lann Lee, assistant attorney general for civil rights, later this year. According to Nelson, Lann Lee is the government's highest ranking Asian-American official.

"There's not just one group of offenders," Cox said. "We must be proactive, not reactive, and connect all groups, so that they can begin to understand each other."

Pachell suggests that the foundation of an Asian-American cultural center, similar to the Hale Black Cultural Center, might help to raise levels of tolerance.

Cox hopes the recently released Diversity Action Plan, as well as the Academic Plan, will continue to support initiatives to implement bridging programs to help Caucasians as well as all other ethnic groups to connect with Asian students and faculty.

If you are eligible to participate, you could be paid $1800 - $2200

This study will investigate a narcotic (like morphine but not as addictive) in the form of an arm patch. The drug is approved for use in the U.S. in the form of an injection but not as a patch. You will stay in the Clinical Pharmacology Unit for 4 nights and 2 days (2 nights and 1 day on two separate visits) and have several outpatient visits during the study, which will last from 19 to 47 days. Volunteers must be ages 18-45.

This study requires that you receive 2 doses of the drug (you will wear two 1-week patches), and you will take an oral medication twice daily to prevent side effects from the patch. You will have your blood drawn and laboratory work to monitor your health. The diagnostic tests will not be charged to you.

Students question police riot tactics

Lantern staff writer

Students and onlookers who were present during the disturbances yesterday morning on East 13th and Chittenden avenues were concerned with some of the police actions toward

Jen Journy, a senior in journalism, and her roommate, Diana Cely were present when their friend Brian McGrew was stabbed at about 2:15 a.m. at his home, 99 E. 13th Ave.

"I was trying to calm my roommate down because she was upset about Brian getting stabbed, so she was screaming at the offi-cers," Journy said. "I kept apologizing to the officers for Diana, and I accidentally bumped into an officer because there was tight space. I said I was sorry and he said 'If you ever touch me again, I'll shove your teeth down your Journy also said the officers velled several obscenities at her and her roommates.

The riot broke out after students at a large party on East 13th Avenue refused to disperse despite several requests by police. Some students then threw rocks and bottles at officers, according to Sgt. Dave Davidson of the Columbus Division of Police. Some students then flipped over two vehicles and did serious damage to others, witnesses said. As the riot continued, students were running and hiding in alleys.

"Basically by the end of it, they were shooting at anyone outside, said Mike Sather, a junior in used were 1.5 inches in diameter Nick Bain, an undecided junior, was extremely disturbed by the bullets. "I had to be into work at 8 a.m., so I tried to go to sleep at like 1:15. I was woken up at about 2:30 or 2:45 a.m. because of the gunshots," said Bain, a resident of 50 E. 13th Ave. "People were ducking in the alleyway right beside our house. One kid got hit in the stomach with a wooden bullet, and there was the gunshot smell in our house... It looked like Bosnia.

Bain's apartment is located directly next to the site of yesterday's riot. He described the site as a very popular party place. According to Bain, the apartment hosted parties "almost every weekend.

Kurt Fortman, a sophomore in wild life management, was also hit with the wooden bullets.

"I was standing in my front yard watching what was going on. The police were walking from Indianola towards High with an armed following behind them," Fortman said. "The police started shooting these canisters filled with something. The canister exploded up from the ground. It exploded and hit both of my calves. It was a real sharp pain. It didn't rip through my jeans, but I came in and put on shorts, and I noticed scrapes and blood."

• Do not fire directly at person(s), as serious injury or death could occur.

· Do not use in any manner if this device has been subjected to poor storage conditions or stored for longer than four years from the date of manufacture.

The manufacturing date on the canister was 1995.

Columbus Division of Police spokesman Earl Smith said that the wooden bullets are specifically designed to be shot below the waist; however, the trajectory can change because of the bounce from the surface that the bullets hit. He was unsure about the speed at which the bullets are

Police later arrived at Chittenden Avenue at about 4 a.m. because of some reports of destruction of property, Smith

A resident of Chittenden Avenue, Megan Crosby, told reporters that she was unsure what had provoked the police to respond. She said that there had not been any destruction of property that she had witnessed and the response that ensued seemed a little extreme. The street appeared relatively calm and there was one police cruiser and one fire truck on Chittenden Avenue when reporters began speaking with Crosby, who is a junior in graphic design. About 10 minutes later, a bus arrived with

The officers moved up the street from High Street toward Indianola Avenue, telling stu-dents on a megaphone to get into their houses. When the officers arrived at Crosby's house and she and her roommates were still standing on the porch, they were sprayed with mace. When Crosby's friend, a student at the Columbus College of Art and Design, asked the officers why they were not allowed to stand on the porch, she was arrested. Crosby told reporters later that her friend had been charged with disorderly conduct and that the citation read that she was "excessively intoxicated," even though she had not been given a breathalyzer test.

Crosby felt the situation was unacceptable. "Nothing was going on, on Chittenden. Why is it (the police's) right to mace us for standing on our own porch?" she Crosby's friend, Chris Bradey, who was visiting Columbus from Seattle, compared the riots to the World Trade Organization riots that occurred there in 1999. He said that he felt the atmosphere created on Chittenden Avenue yesterday morning was worse than the riots he saw in Seattle.

"We weren't even antagonizing them," Bradley said. "I think this was pretty stupid. It's an unnecessary show of force."

Smith does not agree. He feels that the force that was used was completely warranted. "When you've done this for 20 years, it gets old," Smith said.

Administration launches swift investigation

Kirwan to take disclipinary action on students arrested over the weekend

By Chris Newmarker Lantern editor-in chief

There was little reason for the Ohio State administration to think trouble would erupt Saturday night. The football team had lost to Michigan, the weather was cold, and at 11 p.m., campus was serenely quiet.

"I was planning to wake up early the next morning, drink a cup of coffee and transport a horse today," said Bill Hall, interim vice president for Student Affairs.

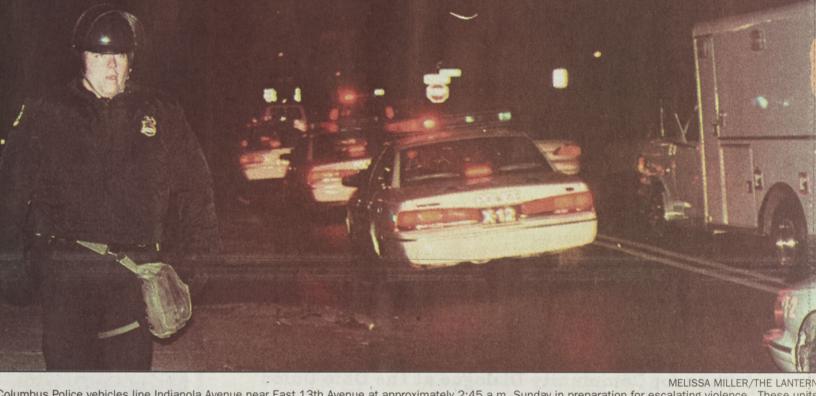

Instead, Hall found himself receiving notice yesterday morning that all hell had broken loose. Late yesterday afternoon, he would be in Bricker Hall as Presi-dent William "Brit" Kirwan announced an action that has not been taken by an OSU president since the Notre Dame game riots

"I am directing the interim vice president for student affairs to conduct a swift investigation of the actions of any students arrested, and other students who might be implicated, and to make recommendations to me as to disciplinary action - including the possibility of expulsion," Kirwan said.

"I will do this under the broad authority afforded me under existing university rules."

The University Rules state that the president is ultimately responsible for the discipline of all students at the university. According to Section 3335-29-05 of the Student Code of Conduct, a student may be immediately suspended if a "student's presence on campus constitutes a clear danger to the university community or creates a substantial risk of injury to any person on university premises.

Ohio's Campus Disruption Act, passed in the early 1970s and never used on OSU campus, would give an official appointed by the Columbus Police vehicles line Indianola Avenue near East 13th Avenue at approximately 2:45 a.m. Sunday in preparation for escalating violence. These units arrived at the scene as riot police were dispersing a rowdy crowd that had gathered on East 13th Avenue between Indianola Avenue and North High Street.

Board of Regents the power to hold hearings to suspend students arrested in the riots. Such an action would have to come in the next five days.

In normal circumstances, the student code does not apply to the actions of students off campus, but a revised code, recently reported out of the Council of Student Affairs after six years of deliberation, would expand university jurisdiction to cover cases of extreme rioting or arson off campus. Kirwan urged the University Senate to pass the new code quickly.

Kirwan announced three other actions yesterday:

• Terry Foegler, Campus Partners president, has been asked to "meet with the landlords and to develop an appropriate action plan that could include expedited

· A letter will be sent to the parents of students assuring them that the university will take effective - and public - action "to penalize those who endanger the safety of our community;'

• A letter will be sent to all students promising them that the administration will continue to look out for their safety.

"This is a very complex issue,"

Hall said after the meeting.

"There is no easy answer to it."
Hall seemed frustrated that the irresponsibility of students was forcing him to take such harsh actions on behalf of the university. The time has come, he said, for the community to come together.

"We've got to stop pointing fingers," Hall said. "We've all got to be held accountable."

he stupidity of

t 2 a.m. Sunday, the last thing we wanted to do was go out into the cold and look for trouble, particularly after early patrols had shown that the campus area was unusually quiet. Perhaps it was the quiet before the storm. We thought we would do a quick drive around campus and then head home.

But that notion was dashed as we were driving down Chittenden Avenue and were prevented from turning onto Indianola Avenue by a riot police officer. We tried to get the officer to let us through by telling him we lived in the area, but his reply to our pleas was "Go to White Castle and wait it out unless you want to be tear gassed.

That was our first introduction to the night Hell opened up and swallowed Ohio State. *

Throughout the evening, we witnessed fear and stupidity on the sides of both students and Columbus police. The question has been raised as to why Ohio State students riot. Is it because of rampant alcoholism? Is it because some football fans don't know how to keep things in perspective? Well, countless other schools are filled with alcoholic sports fans, but they don't feel the need to set everything on fire, tip cars and taunt police enough to make them paranoid toward every student.

Perhaps it is because students are just living up to the expectations set by police and OSU administration. When the police arrive in buses ready to rumble and the news media is waiting with television cameras, it turns on the crazy switch in students' heads; all they want to do is perform.

While both the police and administration have taken measures that were designed to decrease student riots, those measures may actually contribute to the rioting.

To all you rioting students out there, don't think that it's the police or administration's fault that you're pyromaniacs and vandals. What we are saying is that perhaps authorities saying "no" is what makes students say "yes." It's like when a parent tells a child not to touch the stove. That child is dying to touch it, and they won't learn until they get burned. The difference is, when students get burned it will result in more than a blister. Instead it will result in injuries and possibly death. How far are we going to take this craziness before tragedy happens? We came close this weekend when a student was stabbed.

However, Columbus police officers weren't saints either. While talking to students on the streets, we heard of behavior unbecoming of police officers. We were told that officers were yelling obscenities, ignoring injured students and neglecting civil rights. We can't control what the police do, but we can control what we do. The police have their own issues to handle. As students, we need to take responsibility for our actions and act like adults.

This problem will not be solved overnight, but the next time you're considering inciting a riot, think about the blister it leaves on the university and the permanent scar it will leave behind.

Plans to expand, beautify the Oval scheduled in 2002

By Andy Hockman Lantern staff writer

The University Architects office and Physical Facilities are making plans for a historic restoration of the Oval, linking it to Mirror Lake Hollow and a redesigning of the River of Trees Walkway. The first of three phases is scheduled to begin in the spring of 2002.

OSU is incorporating the help of Michael Van Valkenburgh Associates, which was the key designer in the restoration of Harvard Yard at Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass.

The company was hired to develop the principles that will help make the Oval resemble an expansive park filled with beauty and serenity, according to Jill Morelli, assistant vice president and university architect.

"The developed principles were shown to University President William "Brit" Kirwan, the Development Office, Office of Finance and residents of the area to make sure they are comfortable with the idea."

The Board of Trustees gave approval to the university to proceed with the first phase, which will cost more than $2 million. Each of the three phases have multiple stages of design. The first phase for the Oval consists of installation of an irrigation system, new pavements, turf restoration and landscaping.

The $2 million came from state funding out of the capital bill and from Physical Facilities.

Morelli said additional money for the project is hoped to be raised from donors as well as fund raisers and has been considered in the University Architects master plan.

An actual design of what the Oval will look like has not yet been established, Morelli said.

Morelli, members of Physical Facilities and Kirwan agreed that the Oval should be first in the three phases to be completed because it is a vital part of campus most visited by incoming students, faculty and administrators.

"Surveys have shown incoming students will list the physical plan of a university or college as an important part of their decision making," Morelli said.

"Everyone who visits the Oval feels some sort of ownership as well as a form of kinship," said Janet Ashe, vice president for Business and Finance.

By connecting the Oval with Mirror Lake Hollow, the parking area in front of Orton Hall and the Faculty Club will be removed to complete the process.

"Î think (parking) will be a struggle, and there isn't an easy solution to this process," Morelli said.

Dan Heinlen, president of the Faculty Club, agrees with Morelli that parking will be a key issue.

"With the Faculty Club located right on the academic center of campus, it is the only facility that is self-supporting and the success depends on its parking," Heinlen said.

"If they can replace the parking 100 percent and close by, that would be wonderful. Without parking, you're dead in the water," he said.

Even Ashe has posed the question of whether the change in parking will make the Faculty Club more or less accessible.

"With the change in front of the club, the new look could make it more desirable, and during this phase of the project, I don't think we will totally lose the current 88 spaces," Ashe said.

Morelli is working on plans to replace the parking spots that will be affected in the restoration, but is not sure how close they will be to Orton Hall, the Faculty Club and the Main Library.

Plans for Mirror Lake Hollow and its formal natural soft edges will be restored by using contemporary modes of bio-engineering.

The River of Trees Walkway is located just off West 12th Avenue behind the Medical Research Facility and the Biological Sciences Building. The walkway, which looks like a levee, actually houses a sewer pipe that takes water from Mirror Lake to the Olentangy River

"The River of Trees is only a concept and there aren't any plans for its redesign just yet," Morelli said.

Internship teaches cost reduction

By Anthony Blevins Lantern staff writer

In a typical internship, the business gets cheap help and a look at a possible recruit, while the student gets practical experience and something to put on a resume. For seven MBA students in Ohio State's Fisher College of Business, their summer internships not only gave them good experience, but possibly saved their companies over $500,000 by reducing costs.

The Fisher College of Business' "lean" internship program is in its first year. The students worked at suppliers for the Ford Motor Co., who helped finance the program and provide instruction in lean techniques.

According to Matt Woolstenhulme, a participant in the program, "lean" refers to removing over-production and inventory. A company doesn't produce a product until a customer places an order. This prevents companies from having an excess of a certain product and looking for a buyer to purchase it.

Woolstenhulme is an MBA student who worked at Arvin-Kayaba in Franklin, Ind., a supplier of struts for the automobile industry.

He helped to analyze the operation of the manufacturing process for Arvin-Kayaba, making recommendations where he thought they could improve

"I can claim about $200,000 in savings," he said. He said that most of the savings was through re-deploying labor. The company was over staffed on some production lines and people were moved to other positions. He also added that nobody was fixed

The re-deploying of labor also led to big potential savings for TI Automotive Group, the site of Genevieve Bautista's internship. TI, located in Greenville, Tenn., manufactures fuel and brake lines for the auto makers. Their potential savings was $330,000.

Bautista said they redesigned the production process and layout and were able to re-deploy the employees. The company was adding a new platform and employees were moved to the new operation from areas where the company was overstaffed.

She said, if they didn't do this, the company would have had to hire from outside the company.
"Because we re-deployed 11, we didn't have to hire 11," she said.

Bautista is pursuing a dual master's degree in operations and logistics and health administration.

She said she hopes to apply the techniques she learned to the health care industry where there is a push to drive down costs and improve efficiency.

Westernhalms said those "lear" techniques

Woolstenhulme said, these "lean" techniques have never been taught before in an academic environment. Both he and Bautista considered the program a success, as did the Ford Motor Co.

"We know we have tomorrow's lean leaders right here," said Peter Tassi in a press statement. Tassi is the manager of the Ford Lean Resource Center in Dearborn, Mich.

Young Scholars celebrate 12th anniversary

By N.N. Harper Lantern staff writer

Ohio State Young Scholars Program of Toledo celebrated 12 years of young scholars by recognizing students and past Toledo Public Schools' superintendents at an awards banquet Friday night.

Scholars not only received awards but they also performed musical selections and presented awards to educators instrumental in implementing the Young Scholars Program.

The banquet honored former Toledo Public Schools' superintendents Crystal Ellis and Emory Leverette who died in 1996. Both men were important to the development of the Young Scholars Program.

One highlight of the evening was a candle lighting ceremony in honor of Ellis. All the scholars who attended the event helped light the candles. Lorraine Foster, a parent of a Young Scholar, led the candle-lighting ceremony mony.

"Young Scholars has done a lot to keep my son focused on his future,"

Foster said.

Although Ellis was honored at the banquet, he said, "This is not my evening. This evening belongs to the Young Scholars." He gave full support to the program in 1997 when he was told by Dr. Bishop, former Young Scholars director, that they were going to treat the students so well that the students wouldn't want to go to any other college but OSU, Ellis said.

Throughout the night, speakers talked about the deep-rooted history of the program as well as the accomplishments of the students in the program.

Stanley Calhoun, interim program manager of OSU's Toleedo-based Young Scholars program, said, "We wanted to honor the scholars and the men who brought the program here."

The host and hostess, Wakaso Peterson and Tanesha Smith Peterson, are past scholars who married after graduating from OSU. The couple also received an award at the banquet

"I am honored to be host and blessed that I was chosen to be a Young Scholar, from that I got to meet my wife," Peterson said. In the spirit of the celebratory atmosphere of the banquet Paula H. Smith, Young Scholars Program interim director, spoke about the success of the Young Scholars Program.

"Yes, the program is working. We are working with urban young people and getting them through the system at the same rate as students who came form suburban high schools," Smith

Smith stated that $3 million is spent on the program annually and 2,800 students have come through the Young Scholars Program.

While OSU is leaning towards selective admissions, they should provide elite students from urban schools with resources such as tutorial programs, Smith said.

Along with celebrating, Calhoun said the Young Scholars Program is going to keep in line with its mission to attract students to OSU.

An annual awards event is held in Columbus, and this was the first banquet done by a local Young Scholars Program office. Smith said his office is planning for other local programs to arrange banquets.

Biafra discusses politics, freedom of expression

ed. Jello Biafra's opening statement revealed the theme for his "Nonviolent Extermination of the Rich" spoken word performance Friday evening at Independence BIAFRA Hall.

Biafra ranted about an American society that is becoming increasingly repressive toward creative freedom, the hypocrisy of our political system and the effects of corporations on our media and popular culture.

Biafra was brought to campus by the OSU Green Party. In addition to being the leader of the seminal punk band Dead Kennedys, Biafra has been a presidential candidate on the Green Party ticket.

The crowd of about 450 included both new and old school punks, Greens, hipsters, activists, students and at least one infant. Chris and Erica Price of Columbus brought their son Ethan Jello in hopes of getting a picture with

The show, which lasted four and a half hours, started about 30 minutes late because of problems with the wireless microphone, something that would hamper the performance throughout the evening.

The most popular piece of the night centered on what Biafra called Hell-burbia and the fallout from the Columbine shootings. Biafra grew up in Boulder, Colo., and said that he knew the Columbine community quite well. The problems with "those kids" are not music and video games, he said, but parents and the community.

"Lieberman is saying that the very music that made some troubled kid happy is what led them to kill themselves. It makes no sense," Biafra said.

People are finally realizing that high school does suck, he said, and that it could have been him, and in fact was him. As a result of the shootings, communities have clamped down on students' freedom, pressuring them to fit in.

"It's open season on those kids,"

Biafra said he does spoken word and social commentary for a younger generation that grew up during the Reagan, Bush and Clinton eras, and as a result, do not know anything else but corporate influence over their lives, especially with the conglomeration of media.

"Four out of five Americans haven't seen jack (expletive) of this economic boom," Biafra noted.

He also made clear his views of the media's portrayal of popular

"The Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous' can kiss our funky booty holes. We don't care who wins on 'Survivor,' we care about surviving... Don't hate the media become the media," he said.

When it came to politics and the president, Biafra referred to the infamous CNN town meeting at St. John Arena. He said that politicians no longer meet directly with the people of America, because they are afraid another situation like that of the OSU townhall meeting might happen.

He also thanked those in attendance who were at the town meeting because their questions that day saved innocent lives.

The town meeting wasn't the only OSU item on his agenda. Being in Columbus on the eve of the biggest football game of the year, Biafra, still the punk, asked, "Anyone want to dig up Woody Hayes'

Biafra's mixture of humor and social commentary made the rants enjoyable. Though the program was long, the crowd remained attentive, often stopping him with loud applause and laughter. Biafra was speaking to his people. They already know the issues, but it is the presentation and style of Biafra that made the performance worth-

With the emphasis on freedom of expression, the night took a strange twist at intermission. A small group of students in the front row were exceptionally rowdy throughout the spoken word pieces, often finishing Biafra's sentences before he did (most of the pieces are available on compact disc). As organizers approached them at intermission, others in the audience began to yell either "let them stay" or "kick them

Heather Miller, a Green Party representative, said rowdy students were disruptive, smoking, and drinking and that Biafra asked organizers to make the students

Miller said that University Police were called, and after some haggling over having their $10 ticket refunded, the students left. Outside of Independence Hall, the students were briefly questioned by police and then allowed to leave.

FATBOY SLIM

Halfway Between the Gutter and the Stars, Astrelwerks/Skint by Steve Lichtenstein

While not as sonically engaging as his million-selling predecessor, You've Come A Long Way, Baby, largely due to lack of the surprise factor and freshness, Fatboy Slim's latest still packs a punch bouncy enough to be more than used CD bin fodder. Despite some missteps, like the spacey Jim Morrison vocal track "Sunset (Bird of Prey)," Halfway manages to keep the party going with standard-feeling Fatboy fare like "Star 69" and "Mad Flava." But what carries the album are the guest vocals, especially Macy Gray's two gravelly dynamos, the gospel tinged, "Praise You"esque "Demons," and the funkafied "Love Life." All in all, Halfway is a solid party effort that leaves you wanting to see Slim get all the way there next time. GPA: 3.1

Take time to "Praise": "Demons," "Talkin' Bout My Baby," ""Love Life"

GARAGELAND

Do What You Want, Foodchain Records by Steve Lichtenstein

The New Zealand band's second album, Do What You Want, owes as much to the harmonious dissonance championed by the likes of Pavement and Frank Black, as to the simply melodious leaning of pop kings like the Beatles or the Beach Boys. The influences here are apparent and unabashed, so nothing sounds too original - which doesn't obscure the fact that the material here is mostly excellent. The craftsmanship on warm ballads like "Get Even" and "Middle of the Evening," and rockers like "Burning Bridges" and "Jean" is hard to ignore. Good stuff. GPA: 3.4

Student finds comfort in Islam

OSU Nation of Islam founder hopes to spread words of peace and hope

By Ikenna D. Ofobike Lantern staff writer

Kevin-Jamal Muhammad is not your traditional college student. He does not spend his weekends searching out the next big party or sitting on the couch avoiding his homework. Muhammad does not chase women, drink alcohol, smoke or bother with drugs.

He does attend class and listens to lectures, but after hearing him speak, it becomes evident that the criminology major takes home a slightly different lesson than the other students in his classes.

Muhammad is the president and recent founder of the Ohio State Nation of Islam Students Association. The 27-year-old Columbus native is married with a 3-year-old daughter, a head full of ideas and a heart full of passion and determination. Muhammad has seen war firsthand during his time in the Persian Gulf, and is now seeking peace for himself and his communi-

Muhammad stands almost exactly 6 feet tall. He talks quickly, with a perceptible Southern drawl which is a result of the nine years he spent growing up with his greatgrandparents in Arkansas.

He dresses in suits and bowties and wears a large silver pin on his left lapel commemorating the Million Family March, which was sponsored by the Nation of Islam.

Muhammad's hands and speech patterns often display a sense of urgency, which can be easily confused with restlessness. He has much to say on almost any given subject and hops fluidly from one thought to the next. There is no denying the passion that fuels Muhammad, or his enthusiasm for his life's work.

"What drives me is the fact of everything my ancestors have done so I can have it better than they had it. Someone died for me to have this, so I must die for the next generation if I have to," he said.

"The goal of the Nation of Islam Student Association is to bring the teachings of the Honorable Elijah Muhammad to all people on campus, but particularly to African-American people and people of color in the western hemisphere who suffer under white supremacy," Muhammad explained.

Muhammad, born Kevin-Jamal Brown, was married at the age of 19. Less than a year later, he joined the Army and soon switched to the Marine Corps, serving in the Persian Gulf War. Muhammad left the Marines with the rank of corporal and returned to the United States troubled and confused from his wartime experiences.

"You saw a lot in the war. I was just a confused brother coming back from the military. I heard Minister Louis Farrakhan in 1991 in St. Louis and learned the teachings of the Honorable Elijah Muhammad through him. I sought to make a change at that point," Muhammad said.

Muhammad returned to Columbus, became more directly involved in the Nation of Islam and returned to school. Eventually, he found himself at OSU and realized that he could make a difference here. Muhammad soon became vice president of the Minority Sociology and Criminology Club and began work-ing to introduce the Nation of Islam Student Association to campus.

In its first year as a registered organization, the Nation of Islam Student Association is struggling to get its name known, generate more members and make an impact on the campus. But before any of that, the group had to struggle for its right to exist. Muhammad believes the Office of Student Affairs deliberately withheld funds from the organization to discourage them from registering. "We submitted all our paperwork in a timely manner, but it took us about a month to get our money. I had to go two or three times to request it. I never got an apology or a written letter explaining why it was on hold," Muhammad said.

The beliefs of the Nation of Islam are often in direct conflict with the ideals of capitalist America and the American minority system.

Led by Minister Louis Far-rakhan, the organization has often been the subject of criticism. Farrakhan himself has been branded a racist and an anti-Semite on more than a few occasions. Despite the negative public perception of the group, Muhammad and his followers on campus appear unfazed.

People who compare us to the Ku Klux Klan haven't done their history. Minister Farrakhan has never taught us to pick up so much as a penknife," said Muhammad, who freely admits that the Nation of Islam is not a "passive" Are we fixing the reality? A lot of us

When Muhammad met with two of the group's original four members, the beliefs of the group quick-ly became evident. Not surprisingly, their main concerns parallel those of other black organizations: Education, communication, unity and equality.

"College is set up to teach you certain things, so the people who are testing you know exactly what you're going to know." said Tamika Gustus, a sophomore in nursing. You have to be smarter, to check out their boundaries and get that other information."

"Knowledge is everything. The Nation of Islam teaches you true knowledge of self," said Kevin Muhammad, an architecture transfer student (no relation to Kevin-Jamal Muhammad). "Once you have that, there isn't anything anybody can do against you. If you know a person's plan, you know how to counterattack it.

While the two members are speaking, the elder Muhammad remains silent, nodding encouragingly. He begins speaking only after they are clearly finished expressing their thoughts.

"We go to colleges and come out with all our degrees, but what is the reality in our neighborhoods?

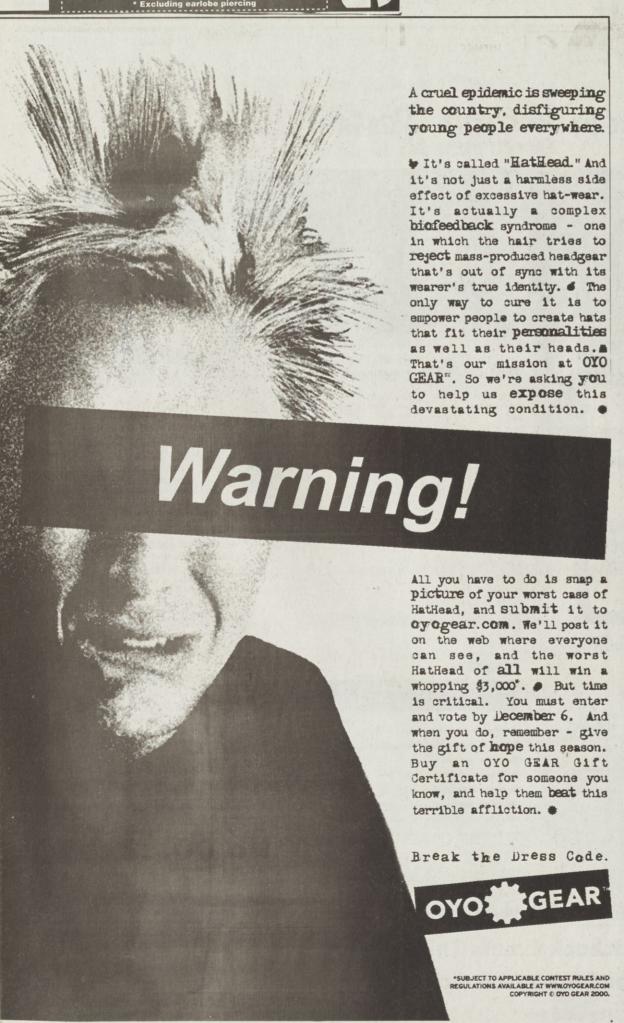

are not. We get caught up in the capitalist society. We get our degrees and we get comfortable. Really, having a doctorate degree or a master's degree means nothing. Even Europeans are saying it's not what you've got, it's who you know. And since we know Allah, we're going to be OK."

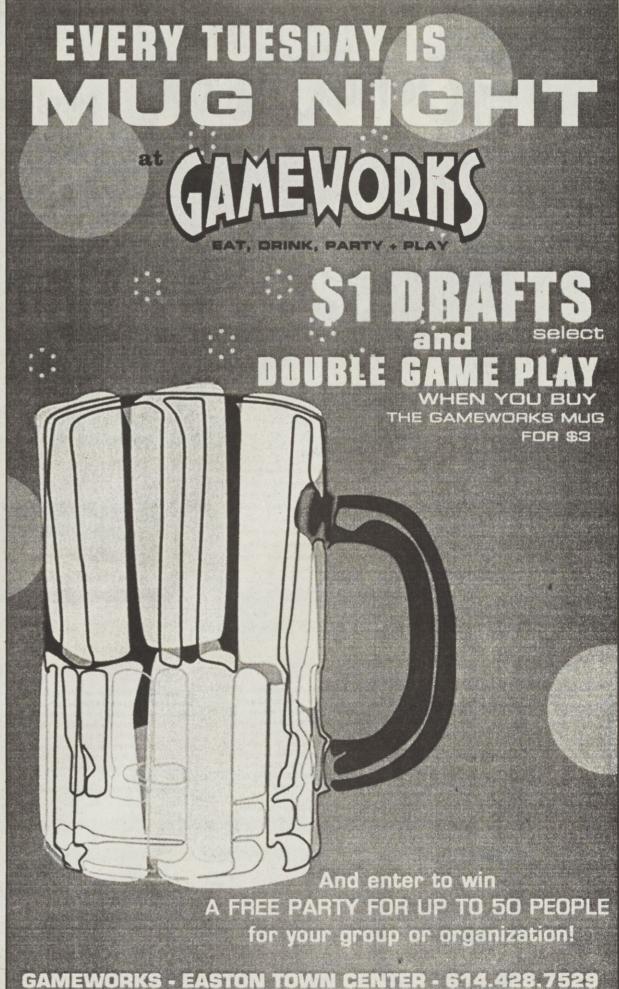

Gustus is devoted to improving the role of women and speaks at length about the negative depiction and treatment of black women in

"Women are the key. Everything happens from woman," she said. "Everything I know is going to be passed into the womb to my child and my child will be strong because of that. Our women need to become

As the conversation continues, every conceivable topic is dis-cussed, from the election and the conflict in the Middle East to drugs and pre-marital sex. Most of the opinions of the Nation of Islam Student Association come directly from the teachings of the Koran, the

Boston vigil urges peace in Mideast

By Lindsay Crudele The Daily Free Press (Boston U.)

(U-WIRE) BOSTON - While the wind-whipped papers were held in mittened hands and noses grew red under the warm glow of Marsh Chapel, a group of almost 30 people came together Thursday night for a candlelight vigil in hopes for peace in the Middle East.

The Boston University Women's Interfaith Action Group organized the event, which started three years ago as an opportunity for members of different faiths to gather together in open lines of dialogue. Thursday night's vigil was time for members of the community to voice frustration over the inability to tackle the issues surrounding the ongoing violence in the Middle East.

"The whole conflict in the Middle East has been in the news lately ... I think it's horrible that all this killing has to take place. It's sad that the leaders are negotiating and still people are getting hurt. Over the past 100 years, there have been resolutions and each time it's not enough," said College of Arts and Sciences senior and WIAG Treasurer Christina Avvento. "I hope that it raises awareness for everyone to see many other people out there with hopes for peace. Just through being together, there will be strength.

Speakers stood in the November chill to read selections representing many faiths, all with a common message of peace and hope.

"We just hope that we can offer the page in all our perspective for peace in all regions of the world. Peace is an issue near to us because we are founded as a religion based on nonviolence," said Deeptej Singh, a freshman in CAS and member of the Boston University Sikh Association, a religious discussion group. "We hope people in all areas of the world can find unity and recognize that we are all children of one cre-

Strike could postpone graduation for some Washington students

The Daily (U. Washington)

(U-WIRE) SEATTLE - Almost 900 University of Washington seniors who are graduating this quarter may be delayed from receiving their degrees if teaching assistants decide to strike next month.

The Office of Admissions is basing that estimate on the number of students who graduated last December, said Tim Washburn, executive director of admissions

TAs do much of the grading in courses from various departments, and in some cases teach their own classes.

Hopefully, most of the students are taking upper division classes, and those are mostly taught by professors," Washburn said. "However, for those seniors that are still fulfilling general education requirements like a last quarter of foreign language, those [students] would be the most likely to be affected (by strike)."

"Without all the grades in, a strike would postpone a degree," Washburn said.

Many seniors are also applying for graduate school, with deadlines approaching for final undergraduate transcripts. Washburn said that the University will send written explanations for delayed transcripts to graduate school or job applications.

"Once students put in a transcript request, if they do that, (the university) will hold their transcript order," Washburn said. "If a student has a missing grade or no grades at all, that will obviously delay sending that

"Once the transcript is complete, we will put a message in with the transcript that because of a strike, grades were not available," Washburn said.

Last month, about 80 percent of campus TAs voted to strike as a means of pushing the administration to recognize their union, the Graduate Student Employee Action Coalition (GSEAC).

Amtrak expansion at standstill

TOLEDO (AP) - Plans for expansion of passenger rail service through the city remain on hold eight months after they were announced.

Amtrak said on Feb. 29 that it hoped to add a pair of east-west trains through Toledo by Oct. 1, but that date has passed without any action.

"We are still working on our National Growth Strategy initiatives, and we'll announce details once they've been finalized," Amtrak spokesman Kevin Johnson said in Chicago last week.

Added service elsewhere in the Midwest also has been delayed.

Slow negotiations with the freight railroads over whose tracks Amtrak operates long-distance rains are blamed for the delays. Arrangements need to be made concerning train schedules and fees Amtrak pays for track use.

Johnson declined to discuss the status of negotiations.

"There are ongoing discussions, none of which seems to be coming to a conclusion," said Rudy Husband, a spokesman for Norfolk Southern Corp., which runs the nain line Amtrak uses through Toledo and a connecting line to Detroit.

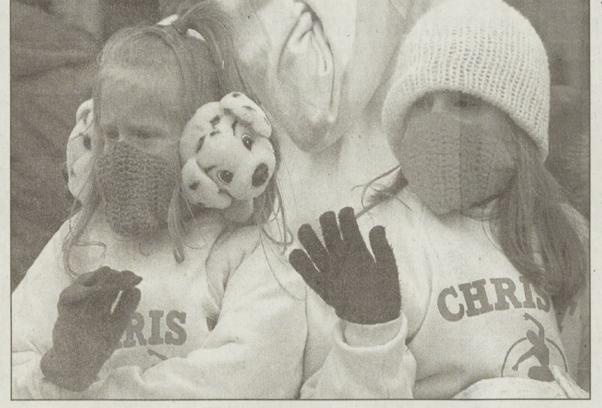

He said Norfolk Southern and Amtrak are discussing the new rains and "some existing schediles that seem to be underperform-

Sales tax revenue less than expected; Ohio wants more money for schools

COLUMBUS (AP) — A slowdown in sales tax revenue and a $647 million Medicaid shortfall have state officials sounding a cautionary note as they prepare the next budget.

"It could be a constraint on our ability to address all of the budget challenges that we face," Gov. Bob Taft said last week.

Sales tax revenue on everything but automobiles has fallen below estimates four months running.

In October, budget officials estimated the state would bring in $438.3 million in sales tax revenue, but collected only $423.8 million. From July through October, revenue was $80.1 million below estimates.

Meanwhile, a higher-thanexpected Medicaid caseload this year has created a $647 million Medicaid shortfall.

Ohio lawmakers have put legislation to plug this hole on a fast-track. That proposal calls for about director, said the biggest challenge $249 million in state budget cuts and general fund money to match the remaining $400 million coming from the federal government.

To top it off, lawmakers from Senate President Richard Finan on down are pledging to make education their top priority in the 2002-2003 state budget. Funding for schools will come at the expense of other departments.

"Education will require the commitment of a substantial portion of expected available resources, thereby reducing resources available for other purposes," Thomas Johnson, Taft's budget director, told lawmakers last week.

Johnson said the state should still end the 2001 fiscal year with $105 million in surplus revenue and will maintain its $1 billion rainy day fund.

Cooper is Blue again; UM wins 38-26

By Paul S. Roynak Lantern sports writer

The Ohio State and Michigan football game was anything but typical for John Cooper-except for the outcome.

The Wolverines beat the Buckeyes, 38-26 on Saturday in a game filled with trick plays. The loss pushed Cooper's record against Michigan to 2-10-1. Cooper's two wins, both in Ohio Stadium, came in 1994 and 1998. Ohio State and Michigan tied 13-13 in 1992.

speaks for itself," Cooper said. "Obviously, it's awful. To play here at home and have a chance to beat Michigan one time, obviously I'm disappointed."

For a few minutes It looked like Cooper and the Bucks were going to write a different piece of history in the 2000 game.

the opening kickoff, faked a reverse to Darnell Sanders, then raced 80 yards along OSU's sideline before he stepped out of bounds. Four plays later, junior tailback Jonathan Wells muscled out 11 yards, scoring OSU's first touchdown. Dan Stultz missed the extra point, but OSU led 6-0.

On Michigan's third play of the game, junior quarterback Drew Henson's pass ricocheted off David Terrell's helmet and landed in defensive back David Mitchell's arms. Mitchell returned the ball 21 yards before fumbling. Donnie Nickey fell on the ball and the Bucks were in business again-sort of.

The ensuing drive featured a shrunk OSU's lead to two. fumble by tailback Derek Combs, which he recovered. At the end of three downs the Bucks gained minus-five yards and settled for a 37-yard field goal from Despite having only 15 total yards of offense, OSU led 9-0.

It looked like the monkey was getting ready to leave Cooper's back, but Michigan, led by Henson, knows that the only score that matters is the final.

"There was a level of confidence, even when we were down "My record against Michigan 9-0," Henson said. "Each year, no matter what happens early on, this game essentially comes down to the last few minutes, and even the last play. So when we were down nine, there was no panic. We hadn't really had a chance to get out and get a good possession."

Junior Nate Clements fielded of the game was a good posses-

On the third play from scrimmage Henson, 14-of-25 for 303 yards and three touchdowns, hooked up with running back Anthony Thomas on a short screen pass. Thomas did the rest as he weaved 70 yards around potential tacklers for a Wolverine touchdown.

"The screen pass was a good call on that particular situation," Cooper said. "That's a play that they hurt us with because we blitz so much. He's a good runner once he gets the ball in the open

Thomas' touchdown silenced a

The Wolverine defense held Bellisari and the Bucks on the next possession forcing OSU to punt. Adding to the craziness of the game, B.J. Sander's punt was blocked, but linebacker Joe Cooper scooped up the loose ball and rumbled 18 yards for an Ohio State first down.

On the very next play, Bellisari, 21-of-47 for 251 yards and one touchdown, threw the first of his three interceptions. The turnover gave Michigan excellent field position.

Henson and Terrell went to work. The two teamed up for gains of 24 yards and 21 yards, the latter resulted in a touchdown. The Wolverines had run only nine plays in the game and were leading 14-9.

The second quarter featured little scoring, but lots of trickery. Michigan's second possession The Bucks tried a fake punt, only to have a wide-open Donnie Nickey drop the pass from Sander. Michigan faked a fieldgoal, but holder and backup quarterback John Navarre was tackled by Mike Doss one yard short of a first down.

The half ended with the Bucks driving to the Michigan two, but Bellisari was sacked for a loss of seven on an attempted naked bootleg.

Bellisari said the bootleg was not the original play. A pass was originally called, but the OSU coaching staff changed the call.

"That was the play coach Stobart called," said the junior. "Once I knew they were blitzing record crowd of 98,568 and from the field and they were

Curry makes spicy play

By Paul S. Rovnak Lantern sports writer

The Ohio State and Michigan game on Saturday boiled down to one play, just like it has so many times before.

In 1996 Shawn Springs slipped, and Michigan receiver Tai Streets jetted to the end zone for the winning score. The 1997 game featured OSU quarterback Stanley Jackson throwing an interception that was returned for a touchdown that eventually led to a Wolverine

In 1999 tailback Jonathan Wells broke for the center of the end zone, instead of angling his long run toward the corner pylon. He was caught from behind, and OSU was left out in the cold. The Bucks were inside the red zone, but the offense sputtered. Bellisari was sacked, and Dan Stultz missed a 30yard field goal. The score remained 17-14, but the Wolverines stormed back in the final stanza to win 24-17.

The 2000 game was no different. One play highlighted the day and sent Michigan back to Ann Arbor victorious. Late in the game, with Michigan up 24-12, Steve Bellisari was trying to throw to receiver Ken-Yon Rambo, but was intercepted by Julius Curry.

"They were cheating (on the play)," Bellisari said. "They got away with one. Ken-Yon was open, but he (Curry) did a good job of making a play."

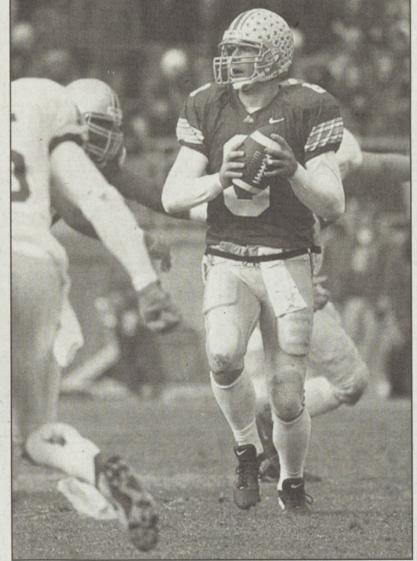

The play ended with Curry racing 50 yards untouched into the end zone putting the Wolverines ahead 31-12. The touchdown essentially iced the Wolverine win.

Curry said he knew exactly where Bellisari was throwing. "I thought he was going to Rambo the whole time," Curry said. "I didn't think he did a good job looking off."

that broke the camel's back. "I think he (Curry) probably made a pretty good play on that," Stobart said. "I thought maybe he (Bellisari) looked at it too long before he threw it. That was definitely a dagger in the heart at that time."

Ohio State staged a late rally, but the 19-point deficit was too great. For the tenth time in 13 tries, the Buckeyes

Perfect 10: Time to fire Cooper

he job of Ohio State's football coach is three-fold. First, he needs to graduate a high percentage of his players. Second, he needs to win the Big Ten and go to the Rose Bowl. Third, he needs to beat Michigan.

John Cooper, 13 years into his coach, has managed to accomplish none of these things on a regular basis.

About 43 percent of OSU football players earn their degrees. That figure places OSU at the bottom of the Big Ten. Cooper has taken the Buckeyes to ZERO outright conference championships and only one Rose Bowl in his 13 seasons. And, of course, Cooper's appalingly pathetic 2-10-1 record against the Wolverines is a nationally known figure. For this parade of spectacular failures, Cooper is paid the princely sum of more than $1 million per year. A million bucks hasn't been wasted on such a grand scale since the construction of the Spruce Goose. By almost any objective measure, the 13 years of the Buckeye program under Cooper have been worse than the 13 years prior to Coop's arrival. The 1975-1987 Buckeyes compiled a better record, more wins over Michigan, more outright and shared Big Ten titles, more Rose Bowl trips and graduated more players, too. How is it possible that his job is completely safe? Does he have compromising photos of someone or something?

It has become painfully clear that Cooper's teams repeat a simple recipe every season.

The year starts fast: Cooper's teams are 39-5 in the months of August and September. The team keeps looking good in October, where Cooper's record is 40-16-2. Some seasons feature a couple losses before Halloween, but mostly, the S.S. Buckeye looks strong heading into November.

Then the season goes down the drain. Cooper's record in November is 28-15-3. That represents a drop of more than .200 from his September and October winning percentages.

The lifeless Buckeyes then collapse in the bowl game. Cooper's record in December and January is a stunningly poor 3-7.

If this recipe sounds familiar, that's because it has happened a lot. The 1989, '90, '91, '92, '95, '97 and '99 seasons all followed this pattern closely, and the 2000 season seems to be doing so as well. There's no reason to believe that this will change under

It's time for a change in Columbus. John Cooper has had 13 years to figure out a recipe for beating Michigan and these efforts have resulted in nothing short of failure.

Saturday's loss was just another example of Cooper's inadequacies in the big game. With nine seconds left in the first half, Steve Bellisari was sacked. Three OSU offensive linemen stood around, watching Bellisari for four seconds before someone called timeout.

Had a timeout been called immediately, the Buckeyes would have enjoyed another shot at the end zone before settling for a field goal. Instead, the four seconds were wasted, and with it, a golden opportunity to re-take the lead.

The Bucks had to settle for a field goal try and a 14-12 halftime deficit.

It seems that well-coached players would have recognized the situation, realized that time was at a premium and that their team had a timeout, and used it.

Another example of Cooper's gameday shortcomings came after Jonathan Wells scored a touchdown to cut Michigan's lead to 31-18. With an incredibly obvious two-point conversion attempt staring him in the face, Coop elected to kick the extra point. After the game, Cooper defended his choice, saying, "We have a chart up in the press box that tells us what to go for, go for one or go for two, and the chart said in that particular situation 'go for one'. The situation, just to clarify matters, was that the Buckeyes trailed the Wolverines by exactly one touchdown, one field goal, and two two-point conversions. Had the Buckeyes successfully executed a two-point conversion, they would have been left just a touchdown, two-point conversion and field goal from a tie game.

Instead, Cooper opted to kick the point, leaving the Buckeyes 12 points behind Michigan. Two touchdowns would have won it. Had the Buckeyes tried for two and failed, they would have been left 13 points back. Two touchdowns would have won it.

OSU needs a coach with a better chart or basic math skills. Enough is enough.

Coop, do yourself a favor and resign before you have to put yourself (and all OSU fans) through yet another debacle in Ann Arbor.

Thomas Orr is a senior in journalism who, along with 250 million other people in America, have not lost 10 games

Booters drop heartbreaker to Creighton in first round of NCAAs

By Tim Cape Lantern sports writer

In a forgettable weekend for Buckeye fans, there was still a chance on Sunday afternoon for an OSU team to give their fans something to cheer about.

Unfortunately, when it rains in Columbus, it usually pours. The No. 12 men's soccer squad lost in their first-ever NCAA tournament appearance 1-0, to the No. 8 Creighton Blue Jays.

"I was very proud of the way that our team played today," said OSU head coach John Bluem. "They gave a great effort, and in the end, I believe that injuries caught up with us, and a little bit had in the second half."

The game winner was put in by Creighton's sophomore forward and leading scorer, Mike Tranchilla, from one yard out, off a wonderful cross from forward Ishmael Mintah, in the 27th minute of the first half.

"Creighton has a very good team," Bluem said. "We knew about Tranchilla and Mullen coming in, and the concern was that if we presented an opportunity to one of those players, they probably were going to finish it, and that was the story."

Defenseman Daryl Brazeau had a good shot in the 71st minute of the game, but it sailed wide right at the last moment. OSU's final opportunity came in the closing minutes of the game, when Big Ten Championship hero, Jake Traeger, chipped the ball from the 18-yard line over the Creighton goalie and into the crossbar.

"Today's game was what we expected," said Creighton head coach Bret Simon. "It was a battle every time they touched the ball. We feel very fortunate to come away with a win. There were some very good chances by of misfortune that we couldn't second half, they were unable to Ohio State in each half that, with a little better roll or a few inches here or there, might have changed the outcome of the OSU ends their season at 12-5-4 overall with a Big Ten Championship on their resume, and boasts a team of very talented and experienced returning underclassmen for next season.

"The experience here is going to be very beneficial to us in the future," Bluem said. "We've got a taste of what it's like to be there. This was not a lucky season for us. We earned what we got. We played well and proved that we are a very good Division I soccer

Bucks split two games with Falcons

By Stephanie Still Lantern sports writer

The Ohio State men's hockey team split two games with their rival team up north.

The Buckeyes won an overtime thriller, 5-4, on Sunday against Bowling Green State University, after having a two-goal lead in the third Sophomore Pete Broccoli scored the gamewinning goal. Broccoli's goal, the first official goal of his college career, was assisted by R.J.

The Buckeyes controlled the ice both evenings, but still had trouble sealing the wins, due to penalties and great saves from the Falcons' goalie, Tyler Masters.

"We had momentum and we lost it," said OSU coach John Markell, "We played about 13 minutes of the last 25 short-handed. I think the outcome was good. We had the game in hand and all the sudden the penalties started flying around. We started rotating basically six guys through and it's hard to play that way.

OSU dented the scoreboard first with a power play goal at 7:53 in the first period. Cocaptian and CCHA offensive player of the week, Jean-Francois Dufour scored with an assist from Mike McCormick.

The Falcons tied the score with an unassisted goal at 12:04 by Marc Barlow.

During the second period, Greg Day scored a power play goal at 7:13, but OSU aswered directly back just 51 seconds later. R.J. Umberger scored his fourth goal of the season, assisted by Andre Signoretti.

Betz made an outstanding save with 6:30 left in the second period. He jumped to the right onto the ice to stop the puck from going into the net. Betz seemed to play sharper after this save.

Dufour scored his second goal of the game and sixth of the season at 3:08 in the third period, when he took an assist by Paul Caponigri and crossed the puck right across the goal to give the Buckeyes a 3-2 lead.

Sophomore Miguel Lafleche tallied his first goal of the season at 11:17 in the third. Lafleche converted on a breakaway, beating the Falcon goaltender on the left side. The Buckeyes seemed to be in control with less than nine minutes on the clock and a two-goal lead.

On a power play surge, Ryan Murphy of Bowling Green put the puck past Betz at 16:22. Then, as a swarm of Falcons surrounded the OSU goal, Bowling Green took a close shot on the right side of the goal, which was blocked by Betz. Immediately, Ryan Fultz steered the puck around the back of the goal to slide the puck into far left corner of the goal, sending the game

Bowling Green won Saturday's match-up 5-2. Buckeye goals were scored by Dave Steckel and

Connolly scores 16, cagers blow out Yale

By Andy Fledderjohann Lantern sports writer

It surely was no masterpiece, but Ohio State will take it.

Playing its first game in the post-Scoonie Penn, Michael Redd and George Reese era, the Buckeye men's basketball team struggled its way to a 65-45 victory over Yale, Friday night at the Schottenstein Center.

Sophomore Sean Connolly, in his first game as a Buckeye after transferring from Providence, stepped into the starring role, scoring a game-high 18 points. He drilled 7-of-11 from the field, including 4-of-7 from three-point range. He tallied eight points in the Buckeyes' 19-7 run to start the second half, as OSU broke open a 10-point halftime lead.

"I got in a little bit of a flow in the second half," Connolly said. "I felt more comfortable and tried to be more aggressive shooting the ball. The guys got me open a lot on screens on the baseline and I hit my open threes. I just thank the guys for getting me open, especially the four-men like Tim (Martin) and Zach (Williams)."

The Buckeye offense struggled through the first half, racking up more turnovers (13) than field goals (10) as OSU trudged to an ugly 28-18 lead at the break.

"We were a little sluggish," junior Brian Brown said. "We didn't execute our plays very well. Coach was a little upset that we weren't getting after it on defense. But we won, so we're always glad to get a 'W' in our building." Connolly began his offensive onslaught by drilling a trey after a Martin screen, pushing the Buckeye lead to 34-20 early in the second half. After Yale responded with a three-pointer of its own, Boban Savovic hit from behind the arc after a Martin assist, giving OSU a 37-23 advantage.

Yale countered with a long field goal to cut the lead to 37-25, but the Buckeyes came back with 10 straight points, with Connolly contributing a three-pointer and a 10-foot leaner to push the Buckeyes to a commanding 22-point lead, 47-25.

"Guys like me and Brent Darby like to penetrate and kick out and it's good to have someone to kick out to," Brown said of Connolly. "Sean's one of those lights-out shooters. He had a lot of open jump shots today and we had to get him the ball."

Connolly's success was one of the few bright spots for the sputtering Buckeye offense. He and Brown, who scored 16 points, were the lone Buckeyes to crack double figures. Ken Johnson, considered the Buckeyes' go-to player this season, scored just seven points, but grabbed five rebounds and blocked five shots as he moved to within four blocks of Herb Williams' school record of 328. Johnson faced a double-team from the Bulldog defense for the entire

"It was double team after dou-ble team," Johnson said. "It was really, really frustrating. I've got to work on finding the open man and playing a little bit smarter." The competition gets no easier this week, as the Buckeyes travel to the Great Alaska Shootout. OSU opens play on Thanksgiving night against Florida State, and then will play either Syracuse or No. 22 DePaul in the second round on Friday.

"The bottom line is we needed to win this game, and we did that," OSU head coach Jim O'Brien said. "We won a good game and we needed to win the first game, but we still need a lot of work. We're happy with the win, but it's been no secret that we have a long way to go and a lot of things we need to improve."

Aries (March 21-April 19). The workload is heavy on Monday, but the party flag is flying by Tuesday. Your luck has just changed for the better, which should be obvious on Wednesday. Don't get too rowdy that night, however. The headache you'd have on Thursday morning would be just awful. Watch for bargains and profitable opportunities late Thursday and Friday. Travel is forecast for this weekend. The only problem on Saturday is that you can't take everybody with you. Your reaction to an unexpected event on Sunday lets you know works on the individual. know you're on the right path.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Get your lovin' in early on Monday. The work pace picks up, and on Tuesday you'll be racing at full speed with all the other rats. Avoid an attractive distraction on Wednesday. If you don't watch where you're going, you could run into something. Avoid a person who's all talk and no action on Thursday, to save valuable time. Be flexible on Friday; it's likely there'll be a change in your plans. The urge to splurge will be hard to fight this weekend. Get a high-quality item after which you've long lusted, and your buyer's remorse should be minimal.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You could be faced with a load of overdue chores on Monday. Don't panic, just take them one at a time. Put them in order of importance. Your energy level's high through Tuesday and Wednesday, and you're getting smarter. You'll find that a task that was daunting before is starting to become almost easy. Don't get cocky, though. Thursday and Friday are fraught with peril. You may even be too tired to go out on Friday night. Schedule your romantic interlude for Saturday instead. Choose a date who's stimulating intellectually as well as otherwise, and you'll have a weekend to write home about.

by then.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Don't snap back at a critical older person on Monday. If you simply say, "Yes, SIR!" or ma'am, whichever the case may be, you'll increase your profits instead of losing your job. Tell the whole story to your friends on Tuesday, and they'll give you lots of sympathy. Don't let them solve your problem for you on Wednesday, though. That would be too expensive. Let them inspire you, and maybe teach you how to do it yourself on Thursday. Keep a low profile on Friday. Listen instead of telling what you know, and you'll discover an error before you make it. The ball's in your court over the weekend. Partying with neighbors and siblings would be perfect. Don't spread gossip you've recently heard, however. Check it out carefully by asking a friend who would know on Sunday.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Looks like the coast is clear on Monday if you want to try something slightly dangerous. Your friends will be glad to help, so you won't be alone. If you've been keeping a secret, be ready to confess it on Tuesday or Wednesday. It'll come out around then anyway, so if you mention it first, you'll look better. Don't bother to ask for a raise on Thursday or Friday. You're more likely to get a cut in your pay, or lose a client. Some of the things you learn over the weekend could help you improve your income, though, so don't worry about it.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb 18). If you have all the facts and figures, you could benefit quite nicely on Monday. Don't Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb 18). If you have all the facts and figures, you could benefit quite nicely on Monday. Don't leave anything to chance. Travel's appealing on Tuesday and Wednesday, but not a good idea. Take care of obligations instead. You're likely to clash with an older person Wednesday night or Thursday. This person is saying your dreams are unrealistic. Don't let that stop you. Dreams don't have to be realistic anyway. Don't hurt yourself by trying to push a square peg into a round hole on Friday. You'd be wise to play with a team, or beton one, over the weekend.

If You're Having a Birthday This Week ... Nov. 20: Priorities are changing. You're growing from playing in the present to planning for the future. Nov. 21: Join friends in spiritual inquiry and find the balance you're sought. You'll become more outspoken in the process. Nov. 22: Choose your friends carefully this year. They could lead you to great knowledge or into debt! Nov. 23: Old beliefs are challenged this year. Your studies lead to a deeper understanding and a stronger faith. Nov. 24: Can your dreams become reality? How about your fears? Through self-discipline, you'll be the architect. Nov. 25: You're awesome this year, but don't get cocky. Play by the rules, and the world will benefit from your wisdom. Nov. 26: You're growing so fast your friends hardly recognize you. You were already cheerful and lucky. Now you're becoming practical, too.

to splurge will be hard to fight this weekend. Get a high-quality item after which you've long lusted, and your buyer's remorse should be minimal.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Detailed work flows on Monday, so push yourself to get it all done. There's a mess-up regarding a romantic appointment mid-Tuesday, but you're in for a pleasant surprise later that evening. That would also be a good time for you to pop the question, if you have one to ask. Circumstances beyond your control could interfere with your love life on Wednesday. Just save up your money, and you'll get a chance to spend it on Thursday. Collaborate closely with a co-worker Friday, and a difficult assignment will be fun. Do what your partner suggests. on Saturday. That's the partner you can trust completely, of course. Visiting friends together on Sunday should prove interesting. You might even want to take notes.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Remember to do the errands you promised on Monday, and you'll be nicely rewarded. You'd like to sleep in on Tuesday, but your partner and/or your boss have other plans. Something needs to be done at home on Tuesday and Wednesday. If you don't already know what it is, your roommate will be glad to tell you. By Thursday you're ready for an outing, but it may be late before you can get away. It'll be easier to get your chores done Friday, and then you can make a break for it. On Saturday the other person has the first serve, so take care. The more you aim to please on Sunday, the more likely you'll win the game.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Shop for bargains on household items as much as you can on Monday. You might find the perfect thing at a great price on your lunch hour. If quality and style are more important to you than price, you can wait until Tuesday. If you and your mate can't agree on Wednesday, stall. Odds are good you'll find an alternative on Thursday that neither of you had considered. Don't get depressed if a scheme you try Friday simply doesn't work. It's more complicated than that, so do more research and Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). A friend can help you make an important connection on Monday. Go ahead and ask for the favor. Knowing which button to push helps you find the resources you need on Tuesday and Wednesday. Pushing them takes tact, and perfect timing, both of which you have in abundance. A mess at home could throw you off stride on Thursday — temporarily. Stay alert; you'll get another opportunity to score. Things are not as they appear to be on Friday. Don't say much, you could find out later that you were talking to the wrong person. Saturday's good for losing a wager, or spending too much at the stores. Ixnay on gambling, too. Sunday's better for fixing up your place, but don't stay up late. You'll need your beauty sleep by then.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Your partner's got all the angles figured out on Monday, so just go along with the program. A long-distance contact on Tuesday could lead to a better job if you're interested. If money's tight on Tuesday, maybe it's time to go looking. Don't tell any work-related secrets on Wednesday, especially about the boss. He or she is apt to find out on Thursday or Friday, and would not be amused. Your priorities are constantly shifting this weekend, so stay flexible. An older person wants to take control, but may not have the route figured out quite yet. Give helpful hints.

Election recount enters third week

By The Associated Press

George W. Bush and Al Gore marshaled their legal forces yesterday for a climactic state Supreme Court showdown, with GOP lawyers saying it would be unjust "to keep the state and the nation on hold" during interminable recounts. Democrats said the truth can't be rushed, as jangled nerves and protests punctuated another painstaking day of south Florida vote-counting.

With the long-count election stretching into a third agonizing week, the court strategy of both camps reached critical mass: Republicans hope to stop manual recounts that threaten Bush's 930vote lead out of 6 million cast; Gore wants the work to grind away, under rules most favorable to Democrats.

The candidates kept a low profile as their lawyers prepared for a momentous two-hour court hearing Monday. Each went for a jog and to church.

Calling these "extraordinary times," Bush's lawyers argued in court papers that Republican Secretary of State Katherine Harris has the authority to certify election results without accepting hand counts. They also said allowing the recounts to continue in selected Democratic-leaning counties would violate the constitutional rights of voters elsewhere.

"The selective manual recounts authorize county boards to engage in arbitrary and unequal counting of votes, and result in the dis-

Clinton visits Vietnam, says there is goodwill toward U.S.

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — Returning from a historic trip to Vietnam, President Clinton said yesterday that "a big welcome" awaits Americans in this struggling communist nation as it looks with hope to the future without bitterness about the wartime past.

"The years of animosity are past," Clinton said, a quarter century after the Vietnam War ended with a communist takeover of U.S.backed South Vietnam. "Today we have a shared interest in your wellbeing and your prosperity."

Clinton urged Vietnam to open its economy and allow greater individual freedoms. Despite Clinton's optimism, Vietnam's powerful Communist Party chief, Le Kha Phieu, expressed wariness about economic reforms and America's involvement in Vietnam.

Phieu emphatically stated that while the former Soviet Union has crumbled, the socialist system in Vietnam still stands, Clinton's economic adviser Gene Sperling said, recounting the talks Saturday in "What was the cause of our resistance against foreign aggression," the Communist Party newspaper Nhan Dan quoted Phieu as telling Clinton. "The root cause was because imperialism colonized In an interview with CNN, Clinton said he had "a nice little debate" with Phieu about the United States and "stoutly disputed that we were an imperialist country. We had never had any imperialist designs

Clinton said the trend toward freedom in Vietnam "is virtually irreversible ... And as you can see in the streets, there is a lot of goodwill toward America here."

The president flew back to a nation still uncertain whether it will be George W. Bush or Al Gore who takes Clinton's place on Jan.

"I don't think we should have all this hand-wringing, dire predictions," Clinton said in the CNN interview broadcast on Sunday. "We've got a system that's under way and you know ... these guys, the advocates for either side, are under enormous pressure and, of course, they are being pretty snippy with each other from time to time."

Departing Ho Chi Minh City on Sunday, Air Force One was loaded with silks, purses, paintings, lac-quer ware and other gifts purchased by the presidential entourage on a 22,192 mile, weeklong trip to an Asian summit in Brunei and the groundbreaking stop in Vietnam. Clinton's plane was stopping in Alaska to refuel, other religious leaders.

with a scheduled arrival in Washington before dawn Monday.

"I am going home determined to continue the partnership we have for a better future for the people of Vietnam, the people of the United States and all those whom we can reach together," Clinton told a group of business leaders just before his departure.

Clinton was the first president to visit this country since 1969 and the first ever to stop in Hanoi. While he spoke hopefully of the future, there were reminders of the painful past.

During his stay he visited an excavation site near Hanoi, where searchers probed the mud for the remains of a U.S. pilot shot down 33 years ago. He met with children disfigured by forgotten land mines. And he watched silently as the remains of three MIAs began the journey home.

In a gesture for religious freedom, Clinton met Sunday with Jean-Baptiste Pham Minh Man, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Ho Chi Minh City. White House officials said they spoke of problems the archbishop faces in a country where international human rights groups and the State Department cite a pattern of harassment and imprisonment of Buddhist and

But overall, violence has ebbed. In the past few days, most casualties have come from brief outbursts of shooting, rather than the large-scale, sustained clashes that characterized much of the conflict that has claimed more than 230 lives, most of them Palestinian.

Previous lulls have lasted only briefly, followed by renewed spasms of unrest. Still, both sides said yesterday could be restored.

Israeli army chief Lt. Gen. Shaul Mofaz said the Palestinians have not issued a cease-fire order, but the Palestinian leadership was "on the road to reducing its (hostile) activities.'

The Palestinians said yesterday that their security forces were acting on Arafat's call for restraint, issued Friday. The Palestinian leader ordered there were hopeful signs that calm an end to shooting from Palestiniancontrolled territory, though he did not refer to land under Israeli security.

The order means that there will not be shooting from all the areas that we control," Hisham Abdel Razek, the Palestinian minister for prisoner affairs, told Israel radio. But the "popular intefadeh," or uprising, will continue until Israel ends its occupation of Palestinian lands, he said.

Peruvian president to quit amid corruption rumors

LIMA, Peru (AP) — President work with the Organization of Alberto Fujimori, whose 10-year American States to insure a smooth authoritarian rule has crumbled in recent months over corruption scandals, said in Tokyo early today that he would resign within 48 hours.

Fujimori issued a brief written statement confirming announcements made hours earlier in Peru by his prime minister and his second vice president.

Second Vice President Ricardo Marquez said Fujimori, who has been in his ancestral homeland Japan since Friday, had asked him to step in as president until special elections are held in April and a new leader takes office in July.

The statement issued by Fujimori did not explain why he was stepping down. Prime Minister Federico Salas said the president would give his reasons when he presents his resignation to Congress today or Tuesday.

"What I know is that he does not want to be an obstacle to the process of democratization so that the next elections can be elections absolutely transparent for the Peruvian people," Salas told radio station Radioprogramas.

Fujimori refused to meet with a crowd of reporters who had gathered at his Tokyo hotel. A Peruvian embassy official, who refused to give his name, handed out a brief statement in Spanish confirming that the president would resign.

"President Alberto Fujimori confirmed ... that he is resigning as president," the statement said. "In the course of 48 hours, he is going to formalize the decision with the newly elected president of the Con-

It was not immediately clear if Fujimori intended to go back to Peru to hand in his resignation.

Fujimori's ministers said they had decided to resign but would continue on until it was clear who was taking over the government. In a written statement, the ministers expressed their "indignation" that Fujimori's announcement was "made outside the country in the context of a grave crisis and uncertainty about his return."

In Washington, White House spokeswoman Mary Ellen Countryman said the United States would democratic credentials in Con-transition.

What's important for Peru is that the transition to the April 8 elections proceeds smoothly and peacefully. And we will continue to work with the OAS on that process.'

Fujimori's announcement came amid a growing corruption scandal around the president's fugitive exintelligence chief, Vladimiro Montesinos. The scandal forced the 62year-old Fujimori to announce in September that he would step down in July after new elections — ending a decade of iron-fisted rule.

Normally under the constitution, First Vice President Francisco Tudela would assume the presidency. But Tudela presented his resignation hours after Montesinos returned to Peru on Oct. 23 after a failed asylum bid in Panama. Tudela complained that Fujimori was not in control of Montesinos and his allies.

Marquez, the second vice president, had said that he, too, would resign if Congress — which last week came under opposition control for the first time since 1992 - took measures to remove Fujimori. But he said Sunday that Fujimori asked him not to quit.

"I've just spoken with him and he has said he would like me to assume the position and I told the president that ... I am going to take the post," Marquez told radio station CPN.

But there were signs that a power struggle may develop.

Former presidential candidate Alejandro Toledo — who boycotted a May runoff against Fujimori, alleging fraud — said in a radio interview from France that Marquez's association with Fujimori's "illegitimate" government should rule him out as a transition leader.

Peru's human rights ombudsman Jorge Santistevan said Tudela, the first vice president, had the right to the post because Congress had not yet accepted his resigna-

"I am sure Tudela is up to the circumstances of administering the executive branch until the end and guaranteeing that Paniagua plays the role that corresponds to his

Next in line for succession after the second vice president is the Congress president, Valentin Paniagua, a political moderate who was installed last week by opposition legislators.

Fujimori's trip abroad prompted a wave of rumors that he would step down and seek asylum. He was criticized for leaving Peru to attend the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum summit in Brunei on Wednesday and Thursday.

On Friday, he made an unannounced detour to Japan, canceling a planned trip to Panama this weekend where Spanish-speaking and Portuguese-speaking leaders held an Ibero-American summit. At first Japanese officials had said he was in the country only for a layover to change planes, then Japan's Foreign Ministry said Fujimori would stay longer than planned because he had a cold. But later Saturday, the Peruvian government announced that Fujimori planned to remain in Tokyo until Wednesday to negotiate loans to ease Peru's financial problems.
