Scan ticket unique to Ohio State in Big Ten

Single student football tickets used elsewhere

While Ohio State has abandoned the traditional punch-style tickets for the new scanready season tickets, other Big Ten schools such as University of Michigan and Penn State University continue to use individual game

When OSU first implemented the new student season football tickets, its purpose was to help prevent ticket fraud and track students for marketing purposes. However, so far it has resulted in long lines at Ohio Stadium's gates.

Although no other team in the Big Ten has yet to install the bar code-style student tickets for football games, ticket office officials at Michigan, Michigan State and Iowa have all had experiences with ticket fraud.

At Michigan, a replacement ticket may be purchased with the student's ID for $5 if a student loses their student ticket or if it is stolen. However, the ticket office reserves the right to charge full price for a public or student replacement ticket for more important games.

"Our policy gives us the opportunity to replace a lost ticket for a $5 charge, but we do charge the full price of the ticket for bigger games, whether it's Notre Dame, Michigan State or Ohio State," said Marty Bodnar, director of ticket services at Michigan. "We feel like doing this helps to prevent any problems we may run into. We want to be consistent with the students and the public, and more customer friendly.

Michigan also has a policy of student ticket validation to help prevent student ticket fraud. If a student wishes to give a ticket to someone who is not a student, the student may have the ticket validated for $25 so the ticket may be used without a student ID. The ticket remains the same, but has a hologram sticker placed upon it to prove validation.

Penn State uses a similar policy as Michigan, giving students the option to upgrade from a student ticket to a public ticket

"If a student fails to provide their ID, they have the option to upgrade their ticket for a $20 charge. This gives the student the opportunity

Streaker shocks OSU yet again

Naked photographer flashes women, then flees

> By Matthew Engelhaupt Lantern staff writer

The man who has been tabbed the "naked photographer" is lurking near campus and in surrounding areas.

During the past few years, reports have been filed regarding a man wearing only shoes and a hat who approaches women and photographs them. The latest report was filed on

"We have had about 28 cases that we have accredited to him over the last two years," said Sherry Mercurio, spokeswoman for the Columbus Division of Police. "A majority of those have not involved any physical contact whatsoever. It is a shock value more than anything. He takes the picture, whether or not he is actually taking a photo, or it is just a light that goes off, then runs. Police have noticed a trend that has some in the area uneasy about the future actions of the photographer. The suspect started with just taking the pictures, but more recent reports have established him making physical contact with some of his victims. "He has progressed over the course of two years to this point," Mercurio said. "But it is not a point where he has progressed to attacking. There has been contact, but he is not attacking.'

While police do not believe he is an extreme danger to society, they are still working hard at getting him off the streets.

Last Friday a composite of the "naked photographer" was released. Police have no reason to believe there is more than one culprit.

"There is enough of a similar characteristic," Mercurio said. "The actual way in which he carries out these incidents has been identical. They are very, very confident it is the same person."

Members of the Buckeye NutHouse are ready to crack out of their shells and show their allegiance to the Ohio State Men's basketball team this season.

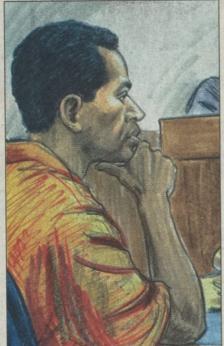

Three years ago, the NutHouse was formed as a subdivision of the 1,600 students in the Schottenstein Center's Block "O." Jarrod Weiss, the undergraduate president of Block "O," is pleased with the growing popularity of the NutHouse, and anticipates another season fueled with Buckeye pride.

"We're a big part of Block 'O' and represent the crazy, energized fans that always invade the Schott every home game. We do whatever we can to help get the 'W' for the team. It is our job and inalienable right,"

Those who desire to join the NutHouse must initially be members of Block "O," and agree to a $10 initiation fee. The fee enables members to attend all OSU home sporting events, except football games, and receive a T-shirt, to be worn as the mandatory Nut-House uniform.

David Brown, an assistant athletics director and Block "O" adviser, said he is impressed by the NutHouse energy and their devotion to pre-game events. Prior to each game, members of the NutHouse arrive an hour early to the Schottenstein

Suspect in sniper case pleads innocent

By Matthew Barakat Associated Press

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — John Allen Muhammad entered innocent pleas yesterday as the death-penalty trial of the sniper suspect got under way a year after a series of deadly shootings terrified the Washington area.

Muhammad, 42, pleaded innocent to capital murder and firearms charges. He initially remained silent when asked a routine question by Circuit Judge LeRoy F. Millette Jr., but later answered after whispering with an attorney.

Muhammad told Millette he understood the charges and that he was ready

"I'm prepared for it, yes," he said.

The case, which is expected to last up to six weeks, was moved some 200 miles out of metropolitan Washington to this southeastern Virginia city after defense lawyers argued that every northern Vir-

Some 120 potential jurors were being brought to the courtroom in groups of around 40 to fill out a lengthy questionnaire. Muhammad stood and said nothing to the first group while the defense and prosecutors said, "Good morning." By early afternoon, 80 jurors had been brought into the courtroom.

The judge excused 30 potential jurors. Two were excused because they said they had heard so much about the case they couldn't render a verdict based

Some Ohio cider sales may end soon

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — A federal law to prevent orchard owners from selling cider away from the property where it is pressed may end a decades-old busi-

The law, which goes into effect in January, was put in place to guarantee bacteria-free cider after a few deaths caused by E. coli bacteria were linked to cider eight years ago.

Cider producers have known since then that standardized rules were coming. The Food and Drug Administration put them on hold several times before it began phasing them in in 2001.

The change will not affect cider makers who pasteurize their product and sell it at grocery stores.

But the law may force Madison Broadwater, 81, to stop selling his cider from his pickup truck at a busy intersection near his orchard as he has for many years. He and his father have made cider at Mapleton Cider Press in Mapleton since 1946.

But the cost of equipment and redoing his northeast Ohio facility to meet federal safety standards is beyond his financial reach. And at his age, it's easier to just quit.

"It's just too expensive," said his son, Paul Broadwater. "It's probably going to be a last-minute decision every year. If

Knowlton Hall to build links among architecture body

By Dallas Scrip Lantern staff writer

When Austin E. Knowlton made one of the single biggest donations in Ohio State's history, the decision was made to build a new architecture building named for its Ives Hall, the former architecture building was old and worn out. It had poor heating and didn't have the appropriate facilities for the school of architecture, said Rob Livesey, director of the School of Architecture.

Since Ives Hall was demolished the students, faculty and staff have had to trek across campus to their studios in Vivian Hall on West Campus.

Everyone involved has been counting down the days until the new facility, the Knowlton School of Architecture, is completed. In an effort to make the commute easier, the school has offered a program where members can rent bicycles for the quarter, said Jane Carroll Hughef, alumni and communication coordinator for the School of Architecture.

The construction started a little over a year ago with four different construction companies working on the project, said Scott Conlon, project manager for the School of Architecture.

The new architecture building should be completed during the spring of 2004, with the first classes starting next fall.

"Going very well so far," Conlon said. "Plans are to finish exactly on time.

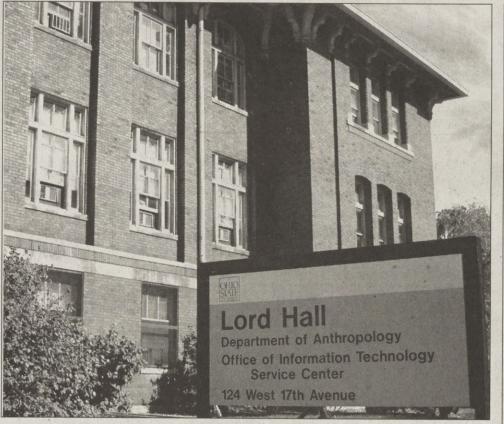

With the completion of Knowlton Hall, the architecture, landscape architecture and city and regional planning will all be under one roof for the first time since 1950, Livesey said.

Another feature included in the new architecture building is the MI Homes materials and fabrication laboratory. This laboratory will enable students to experiment with construction materials, Livesey said.

There is going to be a lot of space where students can see their designs take life; outdoor classrooms, studios, a garden, two students for every one computer and a huge library, Livesey said.

"The whole thing is going to be amazing," Hughef said.

Knowlton Hall will also have a flexible auditorium that will retract to hold between 200 and 350 people. It will host Ohio State's architecture lecture series. The lecture series brings in speakers to talk to students, faculty and the community. The school hopes for a big draw within the architecture community, Hughef said.

Lord's destiny: Demolition

By Joshua Keeran Lantern staff writer

People passing through campus will not have to look at the decaying building on East 17th Ave., better known as Lord Hall, much

The building is one of the oldest on the Ohio State campus, and soon will be demolished.

The building is now in quite poor condition, so much so that the leaks in the roof and other issues are rapidly moving it from the uncomfortable to the unusable," said Clark Larsen, chairman of the department of anthropology.

Earlier this year, the Board of Trustees figured $500,000 into the 2005-2006 budget for the demolition of Lord Hall. The money for this project will come from the basic renova-

Despite its poor condition, Lord Hall has survived two fires, one in 1959 and another in

The fire in 1970 was started by protesters upset with the university's involvement in the Vietnam War.

A fire resulted when a firebomb was thrown into Lord Hall, damaging photocopy equipment," Lee said. "The building apparently housed the equivalent of the university printing services at the time."

Lord Hall still houses several university divisions including the department of anthropology, the Office of Information Technology, several music labs and a shop for physical

There have been several ideas passed along as to what will eventually replace Lord Hall, but nothing is finalized yet, Shinn said.

Despite the appearance and condition of the building, many still appreciate the architecture and history.

'In many ways, Lord Hall is a wonderful, charming old building with quite a lot of interesting history since its completion in 1905,"

Library makeover to remove decay, restore eloquence

By Adam Behne L'antern staff writer

In just a few years, students, faculty and staff may not be able to recognize the Main Library, as the building is set for a complete overhaul

The final plans for the renovations of William Oxley Thompson Memorial Library will be released by this spring. Reconstruction is scheduled to begin in the summer of 2005. The project is scheduled to be completed by September 2008 and is estimated to cost $99 million.

The process of renovating the library started in September 1997 when William Struder, the director of libraries, requested a task force be formed to study how the libraries could be run more effectively. Once formed, the task force recommended a complete revision of the Main Library. Three years of open meetings, focus groups and research followed. The design phase then began this past sum-

The need for renovations of the Main Library is obvious to library employees.

"The library has 2.5 million volumes, and it was built to hold about 1 million," said James Bracken, assistant director for the Main Library

The library was originally designed to just be stacks. Students would come in, ask for a book and the employees would go find it for them. In the 1970s, Ohio State made the library open access.

"The library is in a great location, but the building is a pit," Bracken said.

Many of the floors have only a few windows. Others lack windows altogether.

"I wouldn't want to study up here, it's like a jail," Bracken

The ceilings are another problem. Many are too low and can pose a huge problem to sible and all services will be taller students. The fifth floor is available," Branin said.

actually supported by the racks on the fourth floor. If those racks were removed the whole fifth floor would collapse. The stacks themselves are another problem. Many people have taken advantage of the lack of security in the library. "That's human fluid," said Bracken pointing toward a spot on the shelves.

Security cameras have been installed, and more than 40 security personnel now patrol the area in an attempt to curb some of the misbehavior.

Asbestos also can be found in the walls, floors, pipes, and almost everywere else in the 'We can't even pull up the tile on the seventh floor, because of the asbestos," Brack-

The age of the building is not the only factor causing problems. The technology also needs to be updated. Throughout the building there is open wiring for everything from electricity to phone lines to Internet lines. All the wiring has to be done in the open, because of the marble floors and columns.

Some of the main aspects of the renovations will be restoring the front of the building, expanding the book tower and creating a new entrance on the west side of the building. The interior of the building will also be completely overhauled.

"The main point of the project is to restore and return the library to its former grandeur," said Joseph Branin, director of the Main Library.

Once the construction begins, students and faculty may find the renovations disruptive. The facility will be completely cleared out for up to three years. The university will try to make this transition as easy as possible by moving the collections to other facilities.

'All collections will be acces-to sit in a reserved seat without having an ID card. It is a system that has worked well for us so far," said Josie Koll, ticket manager at

Students who lose their ticket at Michigan State or Iowa they would be out of luck. Michigan State's policy is clearly stated on its Web site: The athletic ticket office does not replace lost, stolen or destroyed vouchers. At Iowa, public and alumni season tickets may be replaced for the icket's full price if lost or stolen. However, if a student season ticket were lost, it cannot be replaced.

While students at OSU have assigned seats and specific gates to enter for each home game, student seats at Penn State, Michigan State and Iowa are all general admission.

As long as a student arrives at the game with their ticket voucher and student ID, he or she is permitted to sit anywhere in the general admission section. However, those students may only enter through a specific number of gates.

Penn State has found this to be most efficient, giving students the opportunity to sit in different seats in the section each week.

"We don't have a system where you purchase your tickets with the group of people you State, Michigan and Iowa have electronically putting the tickets want to sit with before the season starts because you may not have the same friends at the beginning ticket

More gates and more scanners are the solution the athletic department has come up with to battle the long lines, which kept many Ohio State students from seeing most of the first quarter of the Northwestern game.

The back-ups were caused in part because few of the gates were open with a new system, but it was mostly caused by the onslaught of students only a few minutes before kickoff, said Richelle Simonson, associate athletic director at OSU.

There were some students stuck outside because they arrived right before kickoff," she said. "If they come ten minutes before kickoff there is a strong

The best way to assure being at the game for kick off is to arrive a few minutes earlier than

"They're doubling the scanners and having more people open," said Brian Krichbaum, the Off-Campus senator for UndergraduateStudentGovernment.

The number of gates that have the scanners is increasing for this weekend's homecoming game against Iowa, but not just ecause of last month's lines.

'We're introducing it gradually," Simonson said.

For every home game there will be a few more scanners until eventually, by the start of next season, every gate will be using them.

The slow implementation process was used instead of an immediate one because of the huge expense of universally changing the system. "It was a financial issue," said

Simonson. "It was not in our best chance they won't get in before, interest to implement it all at It takes time and money to purchase and train workers to use the scanners, she said.

Several reasons were behind the switch, Simonson said.

One reason is to better track directing students to gates that are and market to the fans that purchase tickets. The goal is to use the information that can be provided by the scanners to better serve OSU fans, Simonson said.

Another reason for the scanners is to cut into ticket fraud and theft at the games.

'It actually allows us to authenticate tickets in real time," Simonson said.

When a ticket is reported stolen, the bar codes are canceled so when the ticket is scanned it will come up as reported stolen.

When tickets are reproduced or counterfeited the codes will usually come up as invalid, said University Police Chief Ron Michalec.

"One may get in but the rest won't," he said.

Michalec said because the police have only handled one game since the beginning of autmun quarter, there have been no instances that have required police attention.

Police violated a court order prohibiting them from discussing evidence with reporters "because they feel like nobody is going to complain that Mr. Muhammad's rights were violated," Greenspunsaid.

Shapiro also says the defense has suffered under Virginia rules that severely limit what prosecutors are required to disclose

We're as prepared as the law in Virginia has allowed us. There is a wall, behind which there is a ton of information we just don't know," Shapiro said.

Outside the courthouse yesterday, the two defense lawyers took no questions from reporters but Greenspun thanked Virginia County.

Paul Ebert, a prosecutor from Prince William County where the case originated, dismissed the idea that leaks have rendered the defense unprepared.

Cider producers dealt with another change in 2002 when those who sold their product wholesale to stores or farm markets had to pasteurize, oxygenate or subject the cider to UV rays to kill bacteria. Producers who sold only retail were exempted, but had to put a health warning on the label.

Paul Broadwater blamed the regulations on grocery store owners and the new law on bigger cider-producing companies.

Inmate caught after escaping jail

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. murder suspect who escaped from jail by climbing down a 60-foot line of knotted bedsheets surrendered to state police at his rural home.

County Correctional Facility, was taken into custody Monday night at his home in Kingston Township, said state police Trooper Tom Kelly.

Police had gone there earlier in the evening but were refused entry by Selenski's girlfriend, Christina Strom, Kelly said. About 45 minutes after they left, Selenski's lawyer called to arrange the surrender, he said. Strom has not been charged with helping Selenski hide.

"He is in custody, we are happy and it ended apparently without anyone being hurt," Kelly said.

Strom told The Associated Press yesterday that Selenski was not home when police arrived, and she first wanted to get her lawyer's approval before she allowed them inside.

She said Selenski arrived and surrendered only after she left to go to a restaurant, and the only contact he made was a note he make money by kidnapping and skeptical of his claims.

OSU must back Underground

On Thursday, the Underground, Ohio State's student-run radio station, received word from OSU Assistant Director of Athletics Steve Snapp that the station had to cease its play-byplay coverage of football and men's basketball, beginning with the football game against Wisconsin. By webcasting live feeds of the game over the Internet, the Underground was in violation of the university's contract with WBNS - an exclusive-rights deal making WBNS the only radio corporation allowed to broadcast football and men's basketball.

After some intervention from Director of Athletics Andy Geiger, the Underground was allowed to continue its broadcasts online, but it came at a cost. Per Geiger's agreement with WBNS, the Underground was forced to give back the advertising money it had secured for the year. The station will now get its funding straight from the OSU athletic department, ensuring the Underground a firm financial footing for the first time in years.

The Underground's financial stability will come at a cost. With money coming from the athletic department, the station will be leery of directly and openly criticizing any arm of OSU athletics. The only way this agreement won't be a total loss for the Underground is if it can keep its editorial freedom.

But the bigger concern is why this was ever an issue in the first place. WBNS may have the exclusive rights contract, but the Underground should never have been viewed as a direct threat to WBNS. As a station with no frequency, the Underground relies solely on the Internet for its listenership. While Internet broadcasting has gained popularity recently, the Underground was by no means taking customers away from WBNS — averaging just about 200 listeners.

The Underground also couldn't be viewed as a direct threat to WBNS's advertising — the Underground secured only about $200 from advertisers.

The blame doesn't lie with WBNS completely; the university and athletic department were by no means innocent bystanders. Instead of standing up for a student organization which has had a hard enough time staying afloat, the athletic department quickly sided with WBNS and the large check it cuts. Geiger may have saved the Underground's broadcasts, but it came at the cost of station's independence.

And where was the academic side of the university on this issue? Like in most issues not directly relating to research, President Karen A. Holbrook was silent, choosing not to support a student organization whose sole purpose to give students a chance at gaining real-life experience.

College is all about preparing students for the business world; instead, Underground staffers now know keeping financial contributors happy may be more important than

Strong 25 years

Pope has had impressive run

Pope John Paul II celebrates his 25th year anniversary tomorrow as the leader of the Roman Catholic Church, combating Parkinson's disease, but still working hard for the Vatican mission in which he believes.

The 83-year-old Pope may not be able to communicate in public, but his presence is still felt across the world. His reign speaks for itself, filled with more than 170 visits to 115 countries, the canonization of 469 saints, and a ministry to more than 16 million pilgrims. He has experienced praise and criticism from Catholics and non-Catholics alike for attempting to preserve the church's traditions in a modernized world.

Originally from Poland, Karol Wojtyla — later Pope John Paul II — grew up in a small city just outside of Kracow. At first he thought his calling was theater, but after World War II he found a higher purpose in seminary school. For 30 years he served as a priest in Poland — promoted through the years to papacy.

When first inheriting the church, he was on a mission to restore a crumbled faith after reforms by the Vatican Council II caused a third of the world's priests to leave the faith. His conservative visions reject contraception, abortion, euthanasia and preemptive war. He stands as a moral figure in a secular world often corrupted by rationalization and

As the first non-Italian Pope, he led Eastern Europe from the grips of communism and closer to modernization after the fall of the Soviet Union. He warned the United States against the dangers of materialism, selfishness and secularism, showing no favoritism to any part of the world.

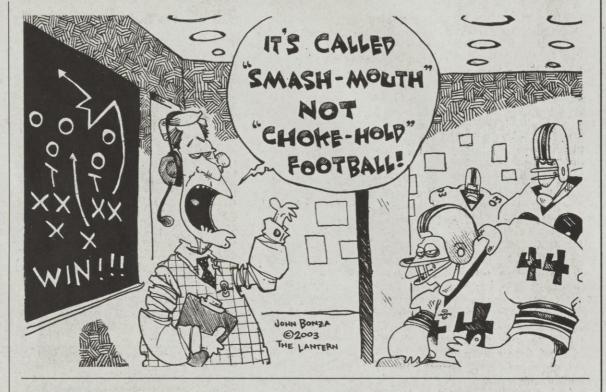

In some cases, his messages didn't fair well and don't still. He has been challenged for being closed minded and pushing catholic ideals that don't make sense in a 21st

In a recent statement, a top Vatican official contended condoms don't provide adequate protection against AIDS, claiming abstinence is the surest prevention method. The World Health Organization reacted, calling the statement, "totally false." Although his intention is good, the Catholic way is not the only way.

He saw the church stumble, while priests were charged with sexual abuse. He remained a pure figure, attempting to collect those who had not fallen to a tempestuous life. But he remains unmoved to change, when change may be what the church needs.

Although his health is deteriorating, John Paul remains an image of integrity and goodwill, deeply admired by many. 'At any given appearance he draws millions of people, looking for their daily bread in the presence of a Godly man.

Religious fear to extreme

ast week, Nashala "Tallah" Hern, a Muslim girl in Oklahoma City, was suspended from school for wearing a hijab — a traditional head scarf worn by Muslim women.

The school's dress code policy says the scarf is the equivalent of wearing gang colors, which is, of course, completely

I understand a lot of folks in this country don't want religion in the public sphere; I'm one of them. I'm as secular as they come. I don't want anybody, be it a wacky judge in Alabama or a high school principal, forcing religion on me

But listen to me when I say this: Everything is going to be fine, just relax. This girl wearing a traditional scarf is not the end of the world. She isn't running around as a member of some female Muslim youth gang. She isn't trying to subvert the Constitution and she isn't a public nuisance. More important, she is not trying to force her Muslim faith on

At what point did we become so offended by this stuff? It's a friggin' scarf,

À distinct difference exists between wearing a traditional piece of clothing and posing a threat to the Constitution. When we were all in high school, the cheerleaders would wear their little getups on Friday for the football game. They didn't do this because they were trying to push some sort of pro-school spirit agenda on the population but because it was tradition and their way of showing support. Tallah wears her scarf for some similar reasons.

Wearing the scarf was not an effort to impose religion on other students. It was her personal way of following her faith.

Since the Sept. 11 attacks, major hysteria has developed in this country over the Muslim population. I have a strong feeling this would not have happened to a Jewish student wearing a

This society needs to stop demonizing religion. I am not a religious person, yet understand religions role as a valuable social institution.

Religion does a lot of good for a lot of people. Religion helps people. It guides them and inspires them to do good things.

If Tallah's scarf reminds her of all the good that can be done through her Muslim faith, then what's the damage?

The last thing we need in this country is imposition of a certain religion. The purpose of the First Amendment is to ensure that there never is a mandated religion.

I don't like it when people try to ram religion down my throat. Each of us has our own value system that we have developed through our experiences, and we don't need some preacher shouting us down for not agreeing with him.

But Tallah was not ramming her religion down peoples' throats. If she wants to wear a scarf as a reminder of that which she believes in, I say let her. She wasn't running around the halls trying to convert people; she was simply adhering to the rules of her religion. Nothing she did violated her, or any other students,' Constitutional rights.

And for the school to make its claim that this is somehow tantamount to gang-related activity is a farce. There is no doubt in my mind they have singled this girl out because she is a Muslim.

A lot of people in college have this impression that religion is a bunch of archaic traditions that have no real meaning; whether that's true or not is irrelevant. For many people, religion is the driving force of their life. To take that right away from a student for wearing a scarf is treasonous.

We have an obligation in this country to protect the rights of those in the minority. Let her come back to school, let her wear the scarf and stop worrying about it. The Bill of Rights is not going to spontaneously burst into flames because we allow students to wear traditional religious clothing.

I would just like to voice my opinion about Maurice Clarett. As students last year, we got to hear about the wonderful job he did with our team and how without him we would have never been champions.

Then we get to hear the other side of this young man. Since he has been with OSU he has caused nothing but problems. We have seen many controversial actions, from fussing over not being able to go to his friend's funeral, which could be understandable, to burning an OSU jersey in the ESPN magazine.

As a student, I would not really care if he just chose to keep all of this to himself and voice his opinion to the people who really matter—Mr. Geiger and Mr. Tressel. I believe that this young man has gotten more attention for the bad things he has done, and it has perhaps overshadowed the good things he has done.

After last season we wished he would come back and show us that last season was no fluke, but that has not been the case.

I pick up a paper and see that he has sued yet another institution and tried to prove his point with someone else. My advice to him is "don't bite the hand that feeds you." OSU has given this young man a chance of a lifetime, and he has in return lied and made this school look like they are wrong. If he would not have lied in the first place this season could have taken on a whole new look.

Retail criticism unfair

Tal-Mart has fallen victim to its own success. During its ascent as one of the largest companies in the world, the company has been faced with higher expectations every year. While it's naïve to think Wal-Mart wouldn't face some criticism, the company has been burdened with unfair harshness and unreasonable expectations.

Whether it's the low wages or noncompetitive compensation packages, Americans have accused the retail giant for not providing enough for it's employees. People have also been disheartened to see Mom & Pop stores close up around the country since they can't compete with Wal-Mart's pricing.

It seems people expect Wal-Mart to be the country's role model for how companies should treat employees. People expect a company to make its employees the No. 1 priority, and to make sure that everyone wins. Well, I hate to break it to you, but Wal-Mart has no reason to be obligated to higher standards than everyone else. There are plenty of studies that show a person working at Wal-Mart as a full-time cashier will not be able to support a family of three without treading the poverty line. These sorts of reports are supposed to shock us and apparently fuel our anger toward the conglomerate.

However, why should anyone be upset with these stats? Why are workers suddenly outraged when they don't receive amazing benefits and insurance packages? Americans shouldn't expect that stocking inventory or working as a cashier will lead them to a satisfactory middle-class life in the suburbs.

People have become greedy, and it seems like they have misinterpreted Wal-Mart as a social service provider, not a retailer. The competition in the retail industry is competitive, and the company can't hand out money because workers aren't getting "enough".

The company is essentially a hiring center for temporary workers; this year alone, more than one-third of employees will quit. With a massive turnover rate, can you blame Wal-Mart for not being competitive when it comes to benefits and wages? With our nation's economy still in the dump, Wal-Mart should be able to dictate terms of employment.

We should appreciate Wal-Mart for what it does; while many companies are hemorrhaging jobs, Wal-Mart has held onto their 1.4 million employees. As the nation's largest private sector employer, the U.S. economy would falter if Wal-Mart initiated massive job layoffs.

Aside from pushing the technological envelope and helping our country's bottom line, Wal-Mart is forcing us to become a more advanced work force.

While their own workers may not be the most competent, the company creates more skilled jobs when its competitors are driven out of business. These laid-off workers are forced to train themselves with more advanced skills.

Once they learn something more competitive like computer programming, they can go out in the field and make our country more productive.

Local small town stores were never known for providing great benefit packages or being a great place to start careers for its workers. However, people expect Wal-Mart to be an ideal workplace. In the highly competitive world we live in, Wal-Mart can't afford to make many

While people can argue that the company is turning Americans into shopping zombies who can't understand moral implications, we have to realize what Wal-Mart does for us. The stores offer consumers unparalleled convenience and low prices, enabling us to get more bang for our buck.

This letter is in response to the Oct. 3 column by Nick Benson in which he urged students to become more politically active on campus. The Coalition for Equal Opportunity in Education echoes this call and would like to extend an invitation for Ohio State students to become involved with our organization.

The coalition is a student organization at The Ohio State University that was formed in 2001 to protect affirmative action and fight for funding reforms. The organization has sponsored trips to Cincinnati and recently to Washington D.C. to protest the attack on affirmative action.

We have also organized numerous events on campus to raise awareness about the current state of diversity at Ohio State and how it would be adversely affected by a ruling that bans affirmative action. Explore our website at http://www.savediversity.com/>.

Suicide bomber targets Turkish Embassy in Iraq

By Charles J. Hanley Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Suicide car bombers struck in Baghdad for the third time in a week vesterday. The attack outside the Turkish Embassy is yet another blow against those who would help the U.S. occupation. Witnesses said the driver and a bystander were killed, and hospitals said at least 13 were wounded.

"This is the act of those who want to turn Iraq into a terror paradise," said Turkish Ambassador Osman Paksut, whose government has offered peacekeeping troops to reinforce the U.S. military presence here, a move strongly opposed by Iraqis.

Just who is behind the bombings remained a mystery, although Iraqis converging on the scene yesterday began chanting pro-Saddam Hussein slogans.

Much of the blast was absorbed by concrete barriers outside the embassy, U.S. officials said. The bomber might have caught U.S. troops if he had struck last weekend, when they were deployed outside the mission in northwest Baghdad, apparently because of a threat.

Wisconsin loss, choke in the past

By Melanie Watkins Lantern sports editor

Robert Reynolds did not want to hide behind a curtain after Saturday's choking

Instead, the Ohio State linebacker asked coach Jim Tressel if he could be a part of the weekly football press conference yesterday.

"I want people to see me because I've been hearing stuff on the news that I'm a bad person," Reynolds said. "I wouldn't say that I'm a bad person. I just got carried away out there during the game. You play with your emotions, and I lost control of them for a

Reynolds had issued an apology to Wisconsin's quarterback Jim Sorgi regarding the action and was handed a one-game suspension by Tressel. Reynolds said he did not know what came over him in the tackling pile.

"Besides that one instance, I feel like I played with confidence and was under control out there," Reynolds said. "It just happened so fast; it was somewhat of an instinct but it wasn't. I'm positive that this will never happen again and is definitely not in my character to do this."

Tressel echoed Reynolds attitude.

"It is also in my opinion that it was not something that is a part of who Rob is," Tressel said. "While it is something that was something unacceptable, it's also something that's tough to handle. I think Reynolds will do a good job of handling it well."

With violence being a part of football, squabbling tends to go on in the midst of the pile. Buckeye cornerback Dustin Fox said he has experienced extra hits in high school and

"It just goes without saying that those types of things are going to happen," Fox said. "You just have to keep your poise about it and deal with it and not react in a violent manner because it's always the second guy that gets caught in a situation like that.'

Dan Luk, a junior in aeronautical engineering, is one student training for the relay portion of the race. He runs six days a week, usually with the running club, and runs anywhere from six to 10 miles a day.

"Running is all I do to train," Luk said. "I do it to get the heart rate up."

Paul Branscum, a senior in dietetics, is one of Luk's relay partners for the race. His training is similar to Luk's, but he has noticed one major problem.

"It's hard to train on this campus because we're right next to the city," Branscum said. "High Street is not fun to run on because there are so many people. To get a long run in, you have to span of 10 weeks. "A lot of people think it's crazy that I run that much, but I would think I'm crazy if I didn't. It's addicting," Luehrs said.

The marathon starts at 7 a.m. for those who are expected to take longer than eight hours, while the rest of the field begins at 8 a.m. It starts on Broad Street, winds its way downtown to High Street and then continues past campus to the north. The course then comes back around to West and central campus.

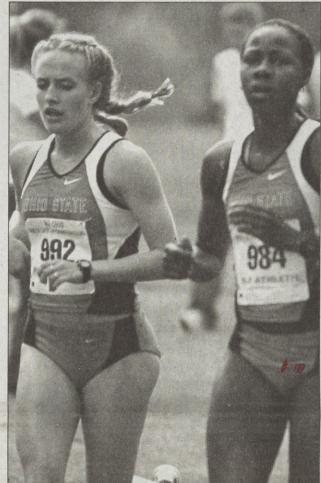

Branscum said he looks forward to running his first marathon.

By Josh DeSonne Lantern sports writer

A warm autumn day was the perfect setting for college students from all across the state to descend upon Delaware, Ohio for the 49th All-Ohio Cross Country Championship Saturday.

The event was hosted by Ohio Wesleyan University for the 18th consecutive year. Students from 42 different colleges and universities from across Ohio came to see how they stacked up. The Ohio State men's and women's cross country teams were among the runners.

2 p.m. In a close race, OSU's Lyndsi Gay took third place with a time of 18 minutes, 21.6 seconds. She was barely beaten by two runners from Miami University. Red-hawk senior Andrea Kremer came in first with a time of 17:46.4 and was quickly followed by teammate Kristin Wrede with a time of 18:07.5. Robyn Detty, Gay's teammate, joined Gay in the top ten with a time of 18:29.3.

When all of the individual points were added up, OSU took home second place overall with 65 points. It was beaten by Miami, who managed to lower its score to 58 points. The University of Akron rounded out the top three with a score of 99 points.

It was not an easy run for the Buckeyes, but they stuck together.

"It was good competition; The women raced first at it was a pretty hard course,' freshman Melanie Price said. Detty said the team was Castillo lifted a fly down the leftfield line and Alou ran toward the brick wall, ready to do anything it took to make the catch. Instead, the man reached up for the ball - not over the wall, though — and deflected the ball away.

Left-field umpire Mike Everitt correctly ruled no interference unlike 12-year-old Jeffrey Maier in the 1996 ALCS at Yankee Stadium, this fan did not reach over a wall.

"I thought we had fan interference, but you can't have fan interference if the ball isn't in the field of play," Alou slammed his glove in anger, and many fans in the crowd of 39,577 Chicago Cubs left fielder Moises booed and began to pelt the man with Alou reaches into the stands unsuccessfully for a foul ball.

Buckeyes 'O' needs face lift after loss

It was inevitable —the honeymoon had to end sometime. It would have been nice to watch the Ohio State football team win every game again this year, but in this era it's almost impossible.

I am one of the biggest OSU football fans, but to be honest I think there are some serious problems this year. For starters, the offense needs to wake up. Where is the running game? Neither Maurice Hall nor Lydell Ross have been able to consistently run for yards in any game. This leads to a few possible conclusions— the line is not doing its job, the play calling has not been the best or the backs just are not playing well.

Personally, I think it's a little bit of all three. Granted, the offensive line has been a little banged up, but it was touted as one of the best units in the country at the beginning of this year. As for the play calling, it has been less than stellar. In the Wisconsin game, the only creative play was the shovel pass to Ben Hartsock. Even though the weather was bad, the only way the Buckeyes moved the ball was through the air.

Let's face it, Hall and Ross are not Clarett. Both show glimpses of hope, but neither has done anything spectacular. Here's an idea, too: Why not try to sweep or use the screen pass, instead of trying to send these guys up the middle. Another possibility may be giving Ira Guilford a chance, even if just for a series or two.

It's frustrating to see other teams move the ball with ease, while it seems more of a chore for OSU.

I'm a Woody advocate in believing the "three yards and a cloud of dust" adage, but I don't think that ideology is right for this Buckeye team.

Even though Craig Krenzel had a mediocre game in Wisconsin, the guy knows how to win. Let him air it out a little bit. There is speed on the outside, so why not throw a little more with the four and five wide-out sets. Michael Jenkins has been the goto-guy, and with good reason. Jenkins can flat out play, but OSU needs to mix it up and throw to some of the other speedsters. Drew Carter, Bam Childress and Santonio Holmes can all move, so let's give them the ball and see if they can make some plays.

And where is Chris Gamble? Take him off the punt return, and get him back out on the offense. Gamble adds a legitimate outside threat, which requires extra coverage. If the defense double covers Gamble or some of the other receivers, this would open up the middle and give Krenzel and the running backs some room to work. Coach Jim Tressel eluded to opening up the offense more at the luncheon yesterday.

The defense, other than a few plays, looks great. Yes, the D has given up some points, and Gamble did get beat on a big play, but overall, it keeps the team in the game. Gamble shouldn't take all the heat either; Will Allen appeared to have his deep help.

Then there is the Robert Reynolds situation. Reynolds is a good guy, he made a mistake and he will suffer the consequences.

The Big Ten has long been a conference of running the football, but if one looks, in the last few years that philosophy has changed. Purdue used Drew Brees to air it out, Illinois with Kurt Kittner, maybe Tressel can use his weapons and heave the pigskin down field.

Maybe it is time to change the team a little bit. I'm not saying put in a full-blown west-coast offense, just mix it up, be more creative and score some frickin'

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern will not publish illegal advertising or the advertising of illegal products or services. The Lantern reserves the right to reject advertising that denigrates individuals, groups or organizations based on race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, religion, mental or physical capacity, veteran's status, age or sexual orientation. The Lantern Business Manager will refer questionable advertising to the Publications Committee of the School of Journalism and Communication. The committee will recommend a decision on whether to publish the advertising to the Director of the school.

Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.

2. Copy must be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for special publications whose

An advertisement is required to occupy at least as many inches in height as columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered a "full column" (21 inches) adver-

Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.

Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.

A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.

7. No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than seven column inches.

If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee.

The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check of money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.

10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.

11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication. 12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise

13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.

14. A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication. 15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.
