Council Delays Rooming House Consideration

City to Cooperate in Senate Sign Program

Members of the Columbus Rooming House Association, gathered at the weekly meeting of Columbus City Council Monday night to oppose at least three provisions of a city ordinance to license, inspect and improve rooming houses, heard council vote 7-0 to postpone consideration of the ordinance until June.

Action was deferred because Council members felt that they had not had sufficient time to study the ordi-

Council also agreed to consult with the Student Senate in its attempt to supervise erection of signs at Fifteenth Avenue and High Street.

Senate Petition

The Senate had petitioned Council for a grant of power to regulate erection of signs, making certain they meet the approval of the city and contain only information of interest to students.

H. E. Stinson, president of the Association, said that the ordinance had been brought to the attention of the Council two weeks ago. Several members of Council had failed to receive copies of the ordinance from the clerk, they said.

The ordinance, a composite of all housing regulations in effect since 1912, was written by George W. Matson, city building inspector, in an effort to bring the antiquated regulations up to date.

Object of Controversy

Chief object of controversy in Mr. Matson's draft is section six which reads: "There shall be at least two stairways leading from the second floor, one of which shall be enclosed with fireproof materials. The other may be an outside stairway leading to the ground.

Such an outside stairway shall be accessible through a door, unlocked from within, located either in a hallway or in a room directly

Beauty and the Beast

Apparently heretical tendencies are increasingly visible in the Student Senate these past weeks. Last Thursday night another sacred institution of college life was threatened as the Senators heard a recommendation by the Panhellenic Senator to abolish all queens except those for Homecoming, the Makio and the Freshman Prom.

Panhellenic merits applause for sticking to its guns, because it was a Panhellenic investigating committee's recommendation last fall which paved the way for the present proposal. What is hard to understand, though, is the manner in which a fine line has been drawn that permits a queen on one side, but not on the other.

This is puzzling and annoying, but not nearly so much as trying to figure out just why queens are chosen. Who wants queens? Why, the queens want queens, and the queens' organizations want queens, and the queens' friends want queens. But what value queens are is another question that nobody has answered yet.

The fact that there are queens, of course, does give fine-featured female freshmen something to anticipate in the way of glory on earth, questionable prestige and plenty of publicity.

What is worse is the way queens are increasing in number, and with the present system of Senate representation there is no reason why they shouldn't organize a union with a double purpose: to demand a seat on the Senate and to lobby against the anticorsage ruling. There is as much justification for a Senate seat for queens as for some groups now represented and besides, what is a queen without a corsage?

It must be admitted that many queens of the genus red-blooded American college girl far outrank their blue-blooded royal sisters on other continents in appearance. But everything considered, the Panhellenic suggestion ought to be carried out as far and as fairly as possible before the boys start to name kings at every stag party, before any more queens are chosen, and before the students name a king of kings and a queen of queens.

This would be the end, and before it happens, it might be well to "liquidate" all of them and leave such meaningless titles to a vanishing blue-blooded royalty.

Sleepy Seniors

Again, last fall, soul-tearing promises were made by class officer candidates and hopes of a mildly amused but indifferent student body foolishly rose. Foolishly, because since then nothing has happened to support the campaign ballyhoo of the victors.

It is too easy to rationalize one's way out of this disgustingly recurrent situation with Woodrow Wilson's statement that "a platform is not a policy." This may be so, but seniors should be old enough to take some things seriously. The '39 class' contribution to the University is one of these and at present the date for the senior class meeting has been set five times and the seniors still haven't met.

The question now is not whether the seniors shall contribute sturdy, silent marble arches and keystones for the enjoyment of posterity, or whether they shall create scholarships for the education of deserving class-

I'resent indications are that the fund would be too small to guarantee suitable scholarships and that the proposed arch would be an undesirable frozen asset. The seniors will have neither these nor any other contributions unless action is taken imme-

Richard T. Baker, senior class president, is a great guy and undoubtedly has made some contribution to the University with his deluxe basketball playing. But presidents are supposed to lead. Baker has betrayed the trust of the seniors and his duty to the University. As things are now, they may still be trying to meet as alumni, not seniors.

If Baker can't lead the seniors, they should get someone in there who will.

No Axes to Grind By ROBERT W. FERGUSON

Favorite target for a number of years of us on the LANTERN staff has been the Student Senate. Not invulnerable, because it sometimes leads with its left, the Senate has been the recipient of much hybrid journalism scorn, and has not yet been able to retaliate with documented punches. Since we are so inclined to criticize the Senate on the slightest provocation then it seems in order that we should occasionally make mention of some commendable work.

Typical journalism picture of the average Student Senator is a whirling dervish sort of stuffed shirt campus politician who does nothing but make deals which put little girls in such highly important positions as "Eggplant Queen" or "Belle of Tenth Avenue." Nobody knows who wished the administration of such functions on the campus governing body but you can take it from the boys in the Senate office that they would rather work on 200 student needs questionnaires than one questionable queen

Since it is our solemn purpose to ferret out injustices in campus extra-curricular life we sometimes can see no farther than the end of our face because our nose for news has become so long. So absorbed are we in our ponderous disclosures that objectivity has become only an academic approach. The good we might do and the ends we might accomplish have been forgotten because of the means.

Unusual, and not often mentioned, is the fact that this Student Senate is one of the three best governing bodies of those in American universities. The information was compiled by a faculty committee of the University of Minnesota who rated every campus council on the basis of a detailed

Most frequent charge hurled against the Senate is that it is non-representative and undemocratic because of activity representation but since the Senate regulates activities doesn't it seem logical that they should be represented on a body which lays down laws and rules for them to follow. Here on these pages we encourage valid student affairs and then in the next column discourage their right to have representation in a central governing body.

Of course, not all activities are represented but it would be easy to group them into smaller councils responsible to the Senate. We have become so editorially anxious to cut seats on the Senate that we have forgotten we are lopping off more forms of

It is easily granted that some of the Senate's actions have not been perfect. Not so easy to admit is the fact that now and then our own actions have been questionable. More might be accomplished if both sides would get together, let down their hair, and see if a mutually acceptable program could be adopted. Such an idea would have to be droppedf we did that how could we have our fun?

Backstage Chatter

... by Paul E. Jacobs

Looking over the past theatrical season one of the most enjoyable experiences in the theater has been seeing the Lunt-Fontanne production of "Am-

It was a highly amusing comedy in the good, bawdy style of Aristophanes' "Lysistrata." Free and easy style embodied in smooth flowing dialogue constantly building up to a sprightly climax makes the play what it is. On the whole, "Amphytrion" is the cleanest bit of dirt we have seen in a long time.

All this does not go to say that there is no message or theme to be taken away from the show after seeing it. Quite the contrary. Whereas "Lysistrata" may be called an anti-war play, "Amphytrion" may be termed a commentary and philosophy of life.

Here we find a fair Greek woman happily married who refuses the immortality that is offered to her by the great god Jupiter. She prefers to maintain her fidelity to her husband than to attain fame and renown as the earthly mother of a heavenly

Perhaps her comments and reasons for refusal may bear some light on the lives of all of us. She welcomes and looks forward to death, first because it is an adventure which we should look forward to for the mystery of its meaning, but beyond that, it is death which to her gives meaning and a sense of vitality to life.

What, she asks, is the point of living if one hasn't anything to look ahead to? Death gives direction to living. If one had nought to do but live on constantly and unto eternity, the very living would drive one to distraction and madness. The drive that carries one through life because of its very briefness is the motive that makes life worth living. If one has all eternity to live and accomplish something there would result a dearth of accomplishment. So she argues with Jupiter and in convincing him is granted life and death.

Alfred Lunt made a spectacular Jupiter and Lynne Fontanne was a beautiful picture of the devoted wife who had the conviction of her principles. A brilliant actor who surprised us with his litheness was Richard Whorf as Mercury. That irrepressible knave, Sidney Greenstreet, was like Falstaff playing a kind of cherubic Puck.

The French film version of "Amphytrion" will be shown in the Chapel today and it will be interesting to see what is done to the play by the cinema. The play bears all the earmarks of a French product and we prematurely feel that the film version will be just as lively a creation as was the superb production of the Lunts.

There is a liveliness and brilliancy that is hard to find in America. It is something that is distinctly French. Not the theme nor the philosophy, but the means of plotting the theme and the characters that are employed to do the trick. The only thing that seems similar is Thorne Smith's "The Night Life of the Gods."

We are looking forward to as enjoyable an afternoon as we had an evening not so long ago. "Amphytrion" is a play that will live in our memory for some time to come.

'So Much Good In the Worst of Us"

It is a most unfortunate thing that about three fourths of the time, what we call news consists of a reporting of the worst in men and nations, and that indeed one might turn the statement around and say that for the most part, only the worst in people constitutes news in the journalistic sense. What a different notion we should get of human affairs if we could be sufficiently interested in the good that men do, not in the evil. Of course one understands that what we call drama arises out of the violations of law, convention, good taste, and so on, and not in the adherences to them; but the constant presentation to millions of readers of the weaknesses, the crimes, the degeneracies of men and nations discourages us from believing that there is any decency at all in the world, and that is of course wholly untrue. We grow to hate other people because we hear so much of their defects, not of their merits. We form hostile opinions of Begin Wednesday nations because we are told always of their mistakes, their follies, their brutalities, and little or nothing of their wiser acts, their idealisms, their generosities, their desire to schieve good for their populations. The result of this constant reporting, usually biased, of what is bad in humanity is to distort our vision and pervert our normal beliefs How much better off we should be.

for instance, if we could regard reports of the commendable achievements of our own nation and of other nations as interesting news, worth printing. When a friend of mine in Hamburg, Germany, said to me, You hear nothing but the worst of is,-isn't that true?" I had to admit on, "let me tell you something of and honorable activities, are deceived as to the real character and finished his work for his degree, motive of great persons, and are led in wrong directions in their judgments of whole masses of men.

I do not, of course, mean to say that our papers report crimes and evil generally to the entire exclusion aging as to the American character of a different sort of news; and it ne right sort of picture papers is larger in number, whose sole purpose seems to be to picture the silly, the ugly, the degenerate aspects of humanity.

Rocket

Three or four short years ago Ohio State claimed a track athlete whose name and fame were to go round the world. His speed and skill carried him to victory in contests everywhere,-I saw his picture, I remember, in 1935, in an Amsterdam paper, with an article about his triumphs; the schoolboys as well as the sports writers in every country in Europe talked and wrote of him; and when he returned from his Olympic victories, his name was on the front page of every newspaper in America. Like many another such man, he decided to forego the completion of his education, and make money while the sun of his fame was still shining. No sun goes down quicker than the sun that shines on athletic renown. Today I read in a dispatch from his home city that while in 1936 his income was at least $20,000, he is now filing a claim in bankruptcy, all his money gone, and he about $8000 in

The person who trusts to public interest in his affairs, no matter how important they may seem to be temporarily, is simply foolish. Newspapers haven't an iota of interest in anybody upon whom the limelight has ceased, even briefly, to shine. They make reputations easily, they break them as easily through neglect and failure to keep a name before the public. And as for the public itself, only the newest name means a thing. Heroes of the track and gridiron and baseball field bask in glory just so long as the papers write about them; and then they disappear completely. I have not heard the name of our former athlete mentioned once in the past two years. themselves. Nobody has seemed to know where he has been, or what he has been

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, LANTERN:

First they put up lights at Mirror Lake. Now they tell us we can't cuddle. What's this world coming to? Sinclair Lewis was dead wrong when he said "It Can't Happen Here." This rule on cuddling smells of dictatorship. (But don't you dare accuse us of being reds.)

We, the undersigned, would like to know who authorized the ban and the reasons for it. If there is to be no relaxation at Mirror Lake maybe the senior class could bring about a 'vote of confidence" for the University officials and could help to remove the stone benches, which, in the minds of 13,000 students, are for cuddling anyway. Phooey on this concentration camp stuff, say we.

"There is no question of whether or not we should become entangled with other countries. We are entangled," Dr. E. Allen Helms, department of political science, told the Columbus Town Meeting audience Monday night.

Dr. Helms presented a picture of the economic and political dependence of the United States on other countries to substantiate his point.

Assuming that isolation is impossible, he said, "Another major world war is not inevitable. Instead of thinking that the second world war has already begun, the United States should take steps to avert such a conflict."

He outlined a three-point program which he feels the United States should follow in an effort to preserve world peace. He suggests: The use of moral, political and economic influence against military aggression; positive support of the ideals of democracy as basic to world peace; and the assumption of leadership in the solution of those problems which give rise to military aggression.

Dr. H. Gordon Hayes, department of economics, presided. Other speakers were: Samuel S. Wyer, consulting engineer; Bishop Paul Jones. Antioch College, and Mrs. F. Schuylet Foster, Jr., of the Franklin County League of Women Voters.

Among Those Impressed by the Showing Of Buckeye Gridders in Final Spring Training Contest Saturday at Stadium

Lantern Sports Editor

In the spring time, it has been the custom for all to build Ohio State's football fortunes to the skies so far back as we can remember. This year bids to be no exception as the result of the intra-squad battle between two picked teams at the Sta-

Several newcomers flashed their talents to the critical throng that saw the game Saturday, and most of the spectators seemed to be well satisfied.

At least we were!

Last fall, the Bucks were supposed to be better fortified at the tackle positions than any other school in the Big Ten. whether they actually were or not is a matter to be debated. However, when three veteran tackles graduated and left Schmidtty with a huge gap to fill at these spots, the downtown and uptown coaches howled that the 1939 edition of the Buck grid follies would suffer from lack of material at these spots.

If the play of the men who were in these tackle spots Saturday means anything, then Schmidt's "only" worry is solved. In Charlie Maag, converted from center, Jim Daniell, frosh star, and Harvey Bolser, reserve from the 1938 team, the Bucks will have three first rate tackles. Daniell, especially, proved that he has everything to be desired for a Big Ten star. Big, fast and tough, this brother to one of Pittsburgh's greatest all-American stars, Avery, should step into a first string berth very nicely. Ends Good . . .

Freshman Chuck Anderson, big and rugged colored boy, into the records and incidentally to should be another welcome addition to the line. Playing on the White team, Anderson made the Red backs miserable all afternoon Saturday with his fast-charging tactics. Time after time he set them back for big losses.

Veteran Esco Sarkkinen, slated to hold down the other wing spot next fall, also left nothing to be desired with his play. His pass receiving was brilliant.

Several new backs made impressive showings to bolster hopes for a successful team. Unheralded John Halibrun, freshman fullback, staged a one-man drive that seriously threatened to score for the Whites. With the veteran Jimmy Langhurst slated to hold down the regular spot, Halibrun should make him step to hold down his regular spot.

Dick Fisher, frosh quarterback, also looked good and should push Don Scott and Jim Sexton to great heights next Scott Sensational . . .

Getting to Scott, his performance was close to being sensational. However, we can't count upon him until he delivers against real competition offered by Big Ten foes. Don was the sensation of the training season a year ago, but he did not come through as expected last fall.

However, he should blossom out into a real star next fall. His passing, kicking and signal calling leaves nothing to be desired. Right now, he looms as the number one man for the quarterback spot vacated by Mike Kabealo. His passing was a standout of the game Saturday, one of his completed passes being 50 yards on the run.

And the old familiar Howard Wedebrook was a welcome sight for sore eyes. Weedie booted a few of his long punts in Hollywood. the game, and seems none the worse for his one-year layoff.

There were many more stars in the game, but we can't take time to mention them now. With a new revival of spirit among the players and some real material to work with, Schmidt should come back with a team that will surprise the Mountain Landis, high commissioner Big Ten Conference.

high hopes of finishing the season with no more defeats.

The Ohio team will probably not have too much trouble topping Pittsburgh, as the Panther squad is not much improved over the outfit which lost to the Buckeyes last season.

Wirthwein took only six men on the trip. They are Captain George Mechir, Charley Steinman, Irv Drooyan, Jerry Rosenthal, Phil Harbrecht and Johnny Lewis.

The Buck netters have not been rounding into shape as quickly as Wirthwein had hoped. This year, with a veteran squad returning, Wirthwein had hopes of placing high in the Conference. However, with the season already well under way, it is possible that the boys will find their stride and play the tennis of which they are capable.

Captain George Mechir is the only member of the squad who has lived up to expectations. After a mediocre season last year, George has put some competitive tennis under his belt and is considered to be the dark horse of the Conference.

Sophomore Jerry Rosenthal has also showed streaks of top-notch tennis. Jerry, a ranking player in Cleveland, has dropped only two matches this season, one of them being to Northwestern's Frank Froehling in three grueling sets.

Hillel never relinquished the lead after that. Frenzied Zephyr batters strove valiantly to save the game in the late innings, but after faltering momentarily in the sixth, Hersch regained control and with Milt Dunn, Al Halpert and Berger roaming the outfield in rather sensational style, the Zephyr uprising was quelled.

The Miami University-Ohio State University baseball game scheduled here today was called off because of wet grounds. It will be played Wednesday, however, athletic department officials said today.

Weather permitting, Ohio State's baseball team will have a chance to come out of its losing streak, which has now reached four straight, when it entertains Miami University at 4 this afternoon on the Varsity diamond.

In reviewing the Northwestern games of the past week end the Bucks found a little more hitting power, having 17 blows to their opponents 16. But they didn't take advantage of the opportunities that presented themselves as effectively

Beryl Hensel, sophomore who took over third base after trying to oust Ralph Waldo from shortstop, got two hits in each game and seems to have cinched the hot corner assignment for the present. Bobby Lynch moved over to shortstop, thus putting Waldo on the bench.

Another addition to the starting lineup but not a startling one is that of Jimmy Sexton in right field. He takes Tony Jesko's place.
