By David L. Miller Lantern staff writer Lantern copyright 1983

Three complaints have been filed with the Ohio State Board of Op-tometry by OSU students against Eyeland Vision Center, Inc. One of the three also named the proprietor, Joseph S. Serian, and another optometrist, E. J. Hopkins.

Each complaint represents different circumstances, but the complaints as a whole include three major allegations:

• the contact lenses purchased blurred the consumer's vision.

· the eye examinations given were incomplete and improper.

• two optometrists at Eyeland have physically and verbally abused Eyeland customers.

Connie Imes, a freshman from Carlisle, filed a complaint April 15 questioning her eye examination and prescription.

According to Imes' complaint: "I feel it was an improper examination resulting in a wrong prescription."

Serian prescribed extended wear contacts knowing she had astigmatism in both eyes, the complaint said. According to the OSU Optometry clinic, which Imes contacted, people with astigmatism need to wear hard lenses in most cases, her complaint read.

When contacted by the Lantern, Robert M. Hill, optometrist and associate dean of OSU College of Optometry, said some kinds of soft lenses can be worn by people with astigmatism.

Health a question

Imes went to the campus Eyeland Jan. 24 to receive an eye examination and contact lenses, according to her complaint.

tumor at the time she filled out her health questionnaire with Eyeland, she said. Serian said he was aware of the brain tumor and suggested Imes hold off in buying contacts.

"Maybe we better forget contacts for about 90 days until we find out for sure (whether you have a brain tumor)," Serian said he told Imes. Serian, however, eventually prescribed contacts for Imes.

Serian also suggested Imes bring in medical statements from the physician that diagnosed the tumor, he

Serian said he gave Imes a prescription after Imes said her doctor gave her permission to wear con-

Imes also believed her examination was incomplete. According to the complaint she never received a glaucoma test from Eyeland.

"I've gotten eye exams in the past and have received a glaucoma test in every one," Imes said. "That's why I thought I should have gotten one."

Prior to receiving an eye exam, all patients must complete a health questionnaire. The questionnaire is used by the optometrist to determine what tests to perform on the patient, Hill physical examination on a patient." In any exam there are many complaints and many diagnoses, so dif-ferent tests must be used, Hill said.

Imes also said Serian never informed her of an astigmatism she had, the

When Imes received her contacts March 12, they were very blurry, according to the complaint. During a reexamination March 14, Hopkins told her "some people wear them that way. You can read and drive with them so wear them a week and decide if you want them. If not, we can order another kind," Imes wrote in her complaint.

Depending on the situation, Hill said, any patient may have to return to his optometrist for additional examinations to perfect the prescrip-

junior from Hudson, filed a complaint

"While trying to clarify the meaning of his (Serian's) coupon and obtain the results of the so-called free eye examination, Dr. Serian physically assaulted me and used profane language. . .directed at me," Jones wrote in his complaint.

Coupon causes problems

Serian said Jones never had a coupon, but Eyeland was willing to give Jones a free eye exam without the coupon.

The complaint stated Jones had a coupon that said the eye examination was free. After what Jones considered a very quick eye exam, he asked for the prescription to get a second opinion, and Serian became very mad, the complaint said.

Serian said he refused to give Jones a prescription for contacts until he had seen him two or three times.

Jones said in his complaint that after he questioned the price of the eye examination, Serian told him 'that he gave me two examinations, one for glasses and one for contact lens. Glasses were never the question, and I told him that at the beginning of the examination."

said Jones did not understand Eyeland's policy for free eye exams and became "red in the face" because he did not agree with Serian's inter-pretation of the coupon.

Most of the student's complaint dealt with a coupon he used that offered a free eye examination.

The coupon did not stipulate that the customer had to buy glasses or contact lenses from Eyeland to receive a free eye examination. A copy of the coupon was filed with the complaint.

The coupon gave the price of an eye examination, $25, but said the examination was "free only with this coupon.'

These two patients have astigmatisms, which, according to Serian, puts them in a high risk category. Being in a high risk category means there is a high probability that they will not be able to wear contact lenses.

The Ohio State Board of Optometry has scheduled a hearing for Wednes-day that will hear complaints involving Serian from January 1981 to May 1982. The complaints filed by the OSU students have yet to be investigated.

Ohio State students who pay fees with a bad check or credit card will have their registration canceled, according to a recent University Senate ruling.

The senate recently amended the faculty rule dealing with payment of fees with a bad check to include penalties for payment of fees with a credit card that is not honored by the bank.

The old rule imposed penalties only for students who paid fees with a bad check.

About 40,000 students pay fees by check or credit cards each quarter, said Alvin C. Rodack, administrative associate in the Office of the Treasurer. About 400 checks and 50 credit card payments are returned by the bank un-

Somebody will have a credit limit of $500 and they might have charges on their account already of $300," said Connie Maxey, manager of the Office of Fees and Deposits. "Then they'll try and use $486 to pay their fees, and it's returned to us just like a returned check because funds are not available," Maxey said.

If the student pays the fees by the 14th day of the quarter, he must pay the late fee and a $10 returned to petition to pay fees through the residency office,"

If a student's registration is canceled, there is an established procedure for re—registration through the Office of Residency, 1010 Lincoln Tower.

"We require that the individual petition to pay fees and, if the student is granted permission to pay fees, then there is also an $85 penalty charge in addition to the $10 bad check charge," said Edward E. Rhine, administrative associate for the Office of Residency.

About half the students who pay fees with a bad check or credit card register again, Rhine said. The others decide not to attend for various reasons, he said.

"The Board of Regents determines the amount of OSU's subsidy each quarter by the number of students who have paid their fees by the 14th calendar day of the quarter," Rhine said.

"We generally will approve a student to pay fees if it is the first time a student has ever been late," Rhine said. "Then we have a sheet here called 'The Importance of Paying Fees On Time,' that we ask students to read and sign. It tells them about the state subsidy and the reason that we have to get the fees collected by the 14th day," he

Rhine said after a student has paid fees late once, he won't be permitted to pay fees late again.

Jann Cutcher, adviser to the committee, said, "Their goal won't fund the entire atrium, but will be a good beginning." She said the union will possibly sponsor activities to come up with the difference. "It's a super idea. Since the union is cramped for space, this would be something meaningful," Cutcher said.

The original student union was built in 1909. The present Ohio Union was built in 1946, when almost 14,000 students petitioned the Board of Trustees for a $5 quarterly fee increase to build a new facility. By the time it was opened in 1951, over $3 million was raised by students.

Students to help give Urbana a facelift

By Edinam E. Oton Lantern staff writer

A group of OSU architecture students are involved in a study which will result in a downtown redevelopment action plan for Urbana.

Twenty-six seniors, majoring in urban design, are involved in the project. The study is designed to give the students a chance to apply what they have learned in class.

It will revolve around four town meetings with the Urbana public, aimed at get-ting the community's input into the study.

The first meeting was held April 13. Urbana residents met with the students, and discussed how the study would be conducted. The students presented ideas and solicited input from the public.

Bean, graduate Morey assistant in charge of the study, said the Ohio State Department of Development suggested Urbana as a starting point for the project.

"Downtowns are still the heart of most com-munities." Bean said, "But people have let them run

The city of Urbana is paying OSU's School of Architecture $2,000 plus expenses to undertake the study. It would probably cost over $20,000 in consultation fees if an architectural firm was involved. Bean said the study will probably cost Urbana $3,000.

Mark Yates. development coordinator for Urbana, said, "We are aware this is a learning experience for them, but we expect a report that can be implemented.

The students will be working with the Dayton chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

The students think the purpose of the study is to provide a planned project that attract people back to Urbana's downtown area. Since there were no recreational facilities downtown and since all the shopping malls were located in the suburbs, the downtown area was neglected.

Mark Wikel, a senior from Milan, said no city planning had been involved in the erecting or tearing down of buildings. "They put up they wanted whatever wherever they wanted," he said. "They tear down old buildings just in the name of

Third in a series

An OSU student has filed a complaint with the Ohio State Board of Optometry against Joseph S. Serain, proprietor of Eyeland Vision Centers, Inc, E. J. Hopkins, an employee at Eyeland, and Eyeland Vision Centers,

The complaint charges Hopkins with provoking a fight and Eyeland with distributing lenses which blurred his eyes.

Joe Bechtold, a senior from Cleveland, filed his complaint March Bechtold was examined by E. J. Hopkins, an Eyeland optometrist, for Hydrocurve II extended wear contacts on Dec. 10, 1982. When he tried to wear them his vision became blurred, according to Bechtold's complaint.

Bechtold returned the contacts and was re-examined by Serian for gas permeable contact lenses

According to Bechtold, Serian said

previous pair.

It took the gas permeable lenses about six weeks to arrive, Bechtold said in his complaint.
"When we ordered that special design we told him (Bechtold) unlike would take two weeks these would take three to four weeks. These may have taken six weeks," Serian said.

'But it's like comparing McDonalds to a gourmet dinner. This one was very customized and was not off the assembly line. These could not be made in seven or eight days, Thus, Bechtold received two eye examinations and two pairs of contacts, the complaint said.

On March 25, Bechtold returned to Eyeland to have his second pair of contacts examined. After waiting about an hour, he talked to the receptionist about the examination fee, according to the complaint.

"I was dissatisfied with the lenses and wanted a refund," Bechtold said.

The receptionist explained to Bechtold that Eyeland would refund $75 of the original $125 he had paid for his contacts. Fifty dollars was to be kept for professional fees, according to the complaint.

The $50 fee is in accordance with Eveland's contract for purchasing

Eyeland Vision Center policy clearly states there are three costs involved in buying contact lenses:

 a $25 professional fee, of which Eyeland pays $12.50, for an eye examination, where the doctor prescribes the optical lense power. The fee is free, however, if the customer chooses to buy contacts from Eyeland.

a $50 professional fee for "fitting" and six months of follow-up visits. The fitting is the corneal measurement, a measurement taken to fit the contact to the eye. This fee is non-refundable.

• the cost of the contact lenses themselves, which in Bechtold's case cost $75.

Bechtold said according to what he read the eye examination was $25 and if you could not wear glasses or contact lenses then it would only be $12.50.

According to the complaint, as Bechtold and the receptionist were talking, Hopkins came out and interrupted them.

'He was't really aware of what our discussion was based on, he mentioned something about checking with the corporate office and it wasn't their (Hopkins and the receptionist's) responsibility," the complaint said. Hopkins' side of the story roughly parallels Bechtold's.

"I came out of the back room and Joe (Bechtold) was arguing with the receptionist. It wasn't just in a loud tone, he was arguing with her," Hopkins said.

'I told him he would have to go to the president of the company to get a refund and he kept yelling," Hopkins

Bechtold's complaint said, "(Hopkins) leaned over the counter separating us and began to verbally insult me, calling me an asshole, boy, shoved his finger in my face, was provoking a fight by insinuating such things as let's take it outside and how tough are you."

"I might have said some of those things," Hopkins said, "but I never tried to get him to go outside and fight or anything like that. He was pretty Hopkins then came from behind the counter and pushed Bechtold with his took Hopkins to the ground. A few tables were overturned but neither Bechtold nor Hopkins was hurt, the complaint said. According to Hopkins: "He would not leave so I walked around the counter to escort him out. That is when the bumping occured and the scuffle ensued.' The receptionist contacted Serian during the scuffle.

"I really don't know what happened between the two of them. It was a very unfortunate incident that broke out on my premises and I'm not hap-" Serian said. "But nonetheless, Hopkins is a licensed optometrist and after eight years of college he should have known better.

"I get the feeling if Hopkins and Bechtold were buying their tickets together out in front of University Flicks, these two guys could be like any two guys whose chemistry does not mix and they might argue over who was first in line," Serian said.

The state optometry board will not comment on any investigation it might be conducting.

Supreme Court decision a victory for free speech

It's official. Should the need arise, you may swear at police officers. The Supreme Court has given you permission.

The court upheld a ruling that said yelling obscenities at a police officer may be free speech and protected by the First Amendment.

The ruling overturned the conviction of Robert Diehl. Diehl was arrested in 1980 on charges of disorderly conduct after he allegedly swore at an officer and refused to get back in his car on the orders of Hancock, Md., Police Chief Vincent Gavin, who had stopped Diehl for a traffic violation.

Harassment of Walesa is unnecessary tactic

Although few Polish citizens have any appreciable rights, Solidarity labor union leader Lech Walesa and his wife, Danuta, appear to have fewer rights than most.

The Polish government has been harassing the two for several weeks, and, as can be expected from a communist government, gives no reason for the numerous detentions the two have faced. Obviously, Walesa has been questioned about talks he has had with fugitive leaders of Solidarity. There also are reports that the government is worried about Walesa taking a more radical stance, along with rumors about a laborers' protest on May 1, a traditional labor holiday in communist countries.

Fortunately, Walesa refuses to give in to these harassments, predicting an ultimate victory for his Solidarity union in winning more reforms from the government.

Detaining Walesa proves how scared the government is of the Solidarity movement. However, harassing him and his family will not quell the movement. If the government wants the protests to stop, it should begin treating the Polish people as human beings, which would be a great improvement over their

When my social life slows down, I periodically get to thinking about school and studying and the less exciting elements in my existence here

Just this past weekend, as I was recuperating from my latest hangover, the weirdest thought hit

Have I ever had a good class at Ohio

It took me awhile to sort through the spinning memory banks of my fermented brain, but I eventually settled on three classes that really had interested me and proved to be an educational experience.

And then I remembered something that really gave my head a nauseating rush. In all three of the classes I picked as my favorites, this less-than-studious guy had got an A.

Wow, I thought to myself, what was the psychological explanation for that? Quickly, and surely without much thought, I picked up the phone and called my dear buddy Spike, that better known as BERs.

Spike's high-pitched voice rambled quickly as he gave me the rundown, so I might have missed a few things. I hope what follows is an accurate summary of PSA's findings.

Topping the list of easy A courses was Theater 100. Commenting on their decision, delegates said this class is a breeze as long as students attend a few plays and write a couple of third-grade papers. Finding an easier class than this is a hard act to follow, PSA said.

Several other classes were in stiff competition, however. Physics 100.01 and 100.02, teammates on the famed Football Physics squad, garnered the most votes for a physical science series. PSA said the two classes are "easy on the brain, ridiculous to a 'real' student and difficult for anyone to imagine why the Department of

In addition, most of the delegates agreed that the soft womanly voice on the bio-learning tapes was only thing that kept them interested in the course. Too bad it's a man's voice.

In the category of "Easiest class since high school," Political Science 101 was the unanimous choice. PSA members said this class probably would win in the category of "Easiest class, including elementary, junior high and high school."

PSA researchers also learned that 99 percent of all Undergraduate Student Government officers have failed this class. I guess nothing comes easy for some people.

The winner for the department with the easiest classes was the Department of English. Although many students, including myself, might argue with this vote, PSA supported its decision by saying, "Even if ya kant rede or right, you cans still buy yerself a real nice paper from one of them dealers."

For most ridiculous course, the entire philosophy program was chosen as the winner. Delegates were not sure which class was the most ridiculous, 150 or 101, but when asked why someone should take the class, they answered, "Why not?"

In the category of most ridiculous requirement, the ASC 20-hour foreign language requirement was numero uno. PSA's foreign language specialist believes the requirement should be cut down to 10 hours and added, "El requiremento no hasn't been very bueno to me.'

Well, I could go on forever with PSA's selections, and Spike seemed like he was going to talk all day, but I still didn't have the answer to my

So I hung up on Spike and dialed the professor who last gave me an A. I asked him if he thought the reason for my liking his class was because I got an A, or was it that I liked his class so much that I worked hard and got the grade I deserved?

Unlike Spike, the professor quickly answered my question. It was really quite simple, he said. I got an A because he gave everyone in the class Imagine what that did to my

Rape, Schlichter cartoons rile readers

For one thing, the cartoon does not take long to digest. You likely will not have to consult the dictionary or The Encyclopaedia Britannica to comprehend it. The speed with which the cartoon can be assimilated creates instant impact.

The distortions the deft cartoonist can create with his pen strike many of us in the area where we are most sensitive - our physical appearance.

Recently, two editorial cartoons have stimulated as much response much of it furious - as anything the Reader Representative

A Friday, April 8, cartoon by Jim Kammerud presented some very unflattering caricatures of three women branding the word "rapist" on several bedraggled males. The cartoon was a pointed reference to the protesters to the alleged gang rape in Steeb Hall.

The telephone lines to the Lantern were busy a good part of the afternoon

The following Monday, April 11, the Lantern ran a John Backderf cartoon that created an even greater stir.

Backderf drew several frames representing the exploits of former OSU quarterback Art Schlichter, now caught up in a gambling scandal that may ruin his professional career.

The last frame pictured a tombstone, and the words "This is Art." The frame was a reference to the danger Schlichter may face after helping FBI agents arrest some of the gamblers he was involved with.

The calls started early that morning. A week after the cartoon ran, callers and letter writers were still toonist, therefore it is a more personalized expression than the editorial. Editorials are not signed because they represent the collective opinion of the editors of the paper. Incidentally, editorials and editorial cartoons do not represent the opinion of the reader representative or the faculty adviser, who may make suggestions to editors, but not demands.

Traditionally, though, newspapers have hired cartoonists whose opinions mirror the opinions of the editorial like "liberal" "conservative" have been used and misused so much that they have lost most of their meaning. Suffice to say, the views Kammerud and Backderf express in their cartoons are generally close to those of the Lantern editorial staff.

Now back to the two cartoons in question. Many readers objected to Kammerud's depiction of the three women: one as a temptress, one as a muscle-bound brute and one as a dour matron.

One reader wrote: "The cartoon . showed a frightful lack of sensitivity, or even rational thought. I hope that those responsible for the poor taste and worse judgment demonstrated will be among the first to enroll in the University's Rape Education and Prevention Program."

The letter writer was OSU President Edward H. Jennings.

Kammerud said he was jabbing at the excesses of the anti-rape activists. not condemning their cause.

'The single constructive thing I can do as a cartoonist is to point out when they're being extremists - even people I normally agree with," he said.

"When I look at my cartoons, I see the whole of my work. And usually, I share the feminists' viewpoint."

Editorial page editor Tracy Koontz also defended the cartoon.

"We decided to run it because it made a good point," Koontz said. "Of course it was an exaggeration of that point, but many cartoons are exaggerations. Some of the protesters were out of line."

Most of the letter writers and callers who complained about Backderf's cartoon thought that it was a cheapshot.

One caller said: "You cheer for him for four years and then the moment he has a problem, you stab him in the back with a sick cartoon like that."

Cartoonist Backderf maintained the Schlichter piece represented fair comment, however.

"I don't think that cartoon would have raised as much controversy anywhere but here, where he's idolized," Backderf said. "The first three days it (the response) was all negative. After that it's been pretty much all positive."

Lantern editorial editor Bob Keim explained the reason he published the Schlichter cartoon.

"The one thing I can say is that Schlichter can do wrong. And it's okay to criticize him when he does." Keim said. "Nobody wants Schlichter to die, least of all Backderf.'

And what of the editorial cartoonists?

"They can do anything they want as long as it's in good taste," Keim said. And these were two cases in which the tastes of the cartoonists and editorial editors differed from those of many readers.

Pornographic E.T. should be banned

Some people would like to ban pornographic films.

The problem with this is that no one really knows what pornography is. Almost everyone thinks he knows, but there is no agreed upon definition. Some think brief nudity is obscene: some would not ban any movies at all. Some would even ban films using other criteria, for instance "foul language or "immorality." How would we go about deciding which movies are safe to watch and which ones will give us erotic nightmares and make us do bad Let's suppose some one set up a committee to ban films. Let's call it the Board for Abolition of Nude Frolicking In Lewd Films (BAN-A meeting would go something like this:

The Reverend I.M. Moral calls the group to order. "All right, what wicked, sinful and depraved film are we going to banish today?"

"E.T.," says Ida Never, president of her hometown PTA and chairwoman of the committee to burn books and rock albums with sexual or demon-worship themes "What's wrong with E.T.?" asks Brute Rockhead, who was placed on the board to represent the pro-porn

Ida speaks up. "It encourages immoral behavior. The little boy, Elliot, skipped school and kept a pet without telling his mother. The little space creature drank beer and was a fugitive from the law. Elliot kissed a girl in public after disrupting a classroom. The space creature ran around naked, and when he did wear clothes they were women's clothes "Finally, the language was filthy. Elliot named a part of the male anatomy, and his brother used the name of a bodily function in vain. Brute speaks up. "All that was good, clean fun. E.T. is as wholesome as wheat bread. And I wasn't offended at all when Elliot called his brother 'penis breath.' "

Ida is getting furious. "But you're ignoring the film's sexual content. Elliot kissed a girl in public against her will. That is a blatant example of using women as sexual playthings.

"I thought that was a tender, romantic scene," says Brute.

Ida starts seething. "But what about the phallic symbols!"

"The what?" "The phallic symbols, the phallic symbols! Don't tell me you failed to see the lewd imagery in that disgusting naked creature's long, skinny constantly pointing fingers?

'I must have missed that part," Brute says.
"It was all through the film, phallic, phallic, phallic!'

Finally, a till now silent voice speaks out. G.I. Thinkstrate says, This debate is useless. If we ban 'E.T.,' we open the door for blackorganized crime just to get a movie off the screen? People are going to see it anyway, and they may as well pay Hollywood rather than the Mob.'

The Reverend says, "If we can make it illegal to show these films in theaters, we can make it illegal to watch them at home."

"And how do you expect to enforce that?" G.I. asks.
Brute says, "You'd better not try to enforce it. No one's gonna tell me what to watch in my own home." "Maybe we should turn our attention to films that are more clearly obscene," the Reverend says, obscene," the Reverend says, "something with graphic sex."

tinue this. We obviously are never going to agree on what is obscene and what is not. What offends Ida pleases Brute. Some studies show that films with violence and sex lead to hostile behavior in viewers. Other research shows no connection. Churches want to get rid of immorality in films; some people define immorality differently and want to let individuals decide for themselves rather than have the government do it. I say we'll never agree on what to do. Let's just give up and let people watch what they want."

Fudgy fantasies now in vogue

Chocolate obtains elite status

By Stephanie Montgomery Lantern staff writer

Chocolate - even just the word sounds delicious.

Milk chocolate, dark chocolate and chocolate-covered goodies are now beginning to enter the era of chocolate snobbery.

With Easter past, people have probably had their fill of the ordinary chocolate mess. Indulging in M&M's, Snickers and Reese's cups have done nothing but cause sticky fingers.

So if indulging, one might try the exquisite Kron chocolates or finish a meal with Godiva's chocolates and their exotic flavor.

Among the favorites across the country are some selling from $20 a pound and up. Godiva's chocolates, made in Pennsylvania and wrapped in elegant gold-foil boxes to match the originals in Belgium, are just one example of this elite candy.

In San Francisco, Confetti, strictly a chocolate store, sells chocolate medallions with their store's logo on them in a mixture of white chocolate and powdered 24karat gold, according to a recent story published in Newsweek.

Butter creams, chocolatecovered truffles, nuts and cherries are the people's favorites across the country, the article said.

In Columbus, chocolate peddlers at Gordon's Candies and Ice Cream Parlor, 2197 N. High St. and Anthony-Thomas' stores find that strawberry cordials, milk chocolate, cream peanut clusters, candy turtles and orange peels dipped in chocolate are the favorites.

Why the sudden interest in chocolate beyond the drug store counter?

chocolate merchants said quality and taste are the major reasons for the surge in "over the counter chocolates."

An increase in chocolate sales from last year may be due to recent studies that show chocolate does not cause acne and helps to prevent tooth decay. Joe Zanetos, vice president of Anthony-Thomas Candies, Zanetos added that school programs have started put-ting chocolate back into their menus, alternating between different types of chocolate products.

Milk chocolate is his personal favorite and also the company's best seller, he said. Butter creams and pecan dainties, like turtles, are also among his most popular.

Gordon's is trying to do novel things with chocolates for the university area, said Jerry Gordon, co-owner.

Gordon's has the only mold to create a replica of Ohio Stadium, he said. The stadium is made of milk chocolate, is about three inches long and stands about one inch high.

"We also make buckeyes, which are peanut butter dip-ped in chocolate, and they are big sellers, too," he said.

He also said he has "perfected the dipping of fresh strawberry cordials, and it is not just a chocolatedipped strawberry."

"Strawberry cordials are like a cherry, only they have a whole, fresh strawberry in them," he said.

The strawberries used for the cordials are handselected every day by Gordon, who says he goes to a store where they allow him to choose only the finest Chocolates are given as gifts more now than in the last few years, Gordon said. Even though prices have gone up, people still buy the chocolates because of "fine quality," he added.

"When we started out 35 years ago, chocolate was selling at 90 cents a pound," he said. "Now it is $5.50 a pound, which is still a bargain."

Chocolates in Gordon's store range from 20 cents a piece up to $16 for a threebox of assorted chocolates.

Although some people might laugh at the amount of money spent on chocolates, Gordon says, "I love chocolates; I really do. And what is wrong with having a good feeling when you eat something you like?

Cocoa in chocolate may hinder tooth decay; chemical wards off bacteria, professor says

By Stephanie A. Montgomery Lantern staff writer

Believe it or not, chocolate may be better to eat than other foods that have the same amount of sugar and have no cocoa in them, said an OSU

Samuel Rosen, professor of oral biology, said there is an element in cocoa itself that appears to stop or slow down the growth of a glueysubstance that leads to tooth decay.

Chemically, the gluey-substance is a glucose, known as a glucan, which sticks to the teeth and traps bacteria adhering to the tooth's surface, Rosen it can slow down tooth decay as long as other decay ingredients, such as excess sugar, are not present.

"But cocoa is only one ingredient in chocolate. Once you add sugar to cocoa, to make chocolate, then you've introduced a very powerful caries (tooth decay) stimulated substance," Rosen explained.

Bacteria acts on sugar, forming an acid that will break down the calcium of the tooth, Rosen said.

Rosen has been conducting studies with rats for about five years to see what effects chocolate and other foods have on teeth. Four years ago, the American Dental Association became Although one of his studies show that potato chips ranked higher in causing tooth decay than chocolate, Rosen said, in another study chocolate was higher.

Milk chocolate's effect on tooth decay ranked in the same class with raisins, white bread and jelly, Rosen said. Foods with neither sugar nor artificial sweeteners are better to eat than natural foods that have sugar. Foods that are better to eat are cheese, milk and peanuts, he added.

temperatures and gusty winds, the OSU men's tennis team shut out Bowling Green University 9-0 Tues-

But the victory took some effort because cold weather makes playing tennis very difficult, according to team

Sophomore Jeff Sparr, who defeated Bowling Green's Warren Kramer in a three-set battle 3-6, 6-0, 6-2. said that cold weather makes it harder to get loosened up for the match.

'That's what happened to me in the first set — I just couldn't get loose," Sparr said. "It's tough to be out here anyway, but you just have to block the weather out of your mind and get out there and win the match.'

Ronnie Sophomore McDaniel, who was victorious in the No. 4 singles slot with a score of 6-4, 6-3, also finds that the cold weather hinders his court *performance.

"Cold weather restrains your strokes. You can't play loose because you're always afraid you're going to pull a muscle," McDaniel said. 'Just when you start to loosen up, you switch sides or sit down for a second and then you get really cold. If you come right back and try to hit the ball hard, you could pull something very easily. If it would have been 60 degrees or above, I and it just doesn't go could've won 6-0, 6-0."

For sophomore Mark Redding, playing a match in below-normal temperatures is just as much of a mental strain as it is a physical one.

"You have to concentrate a lot harder in this kind of weather. The ball moves around a lot in the wind and so you really have to watch it bounce and watch it come up," Redding said. "You also have to play a lot more conservative under these conditions."

McDaniel agreed. "This weather just shatters your confidence," he said.

No. 1 singles player, freshman Mike Massie often gets frustrated with the way cold weather affects his court performance.

"The ball gets really hard. I hit the ball as hard as I can anywhere," Massie said. "And in this weather I can't get to the ball as fast because my whole body is tight and I don't feel like running." player has to learn that he can play no matter what the weather problems Coach John Daly said.

"We're going to play in bad weather - maybe for the Big Ten Championships or maybe for the NCAA Championships. You just have to remember that it's going to affect the other guy too," Daly said.

This victory marked the 199th victory for Daly. He will be trying for his 200th when the Thursday Buckeyes host Capital University at Wirthwein

Buckeyes waste chances, lose 6-4 to Otterbein

By Dan Gallagher

Three pitching mistakes and plenty of wasted opportunities added up to a 6-4 loss for Ohio State Tuesday at Otterbein College.

The Buckeyes had 13 hits in the game compared to seven for the Cardinals, but they left 13 base runners stranded. Otterbein blasted three home runs off OSU pitching and left three runners OSU coach Dick Finn was

Sellers will remain in Big Ten

By Eric D. Wygle Lantern staff writer

Wisconsin basketball star Brad Sellers has decided to transfer to either Ohio State. Minnesota, or Michigan, he revealed in a telephone interview Tuesday.
Sellers said he will not announce his decision until the paperwork is finished, probably sometime Monday.

"I'm considering Ohio State because it is close to home, they have a good team, and it's in the Big Ten,'' Sellers said.

He said that part of the reason he is leaving Wisconsin is because he was forced to play center and he is a forward. He also said that the criticism from his coach. Steve Yoder, was a contributing factor, but not as large a reason as it might seem.

The Badger star said he chose to attend Wisconsin two years ago because he felt he could be more of an immediate factor there than at another Big Ten school.

Sellers' coach at Warrensville Heights High School, Ron Ruzicka, felt another factor in the decision was that former Badger coach, Bill Cofield, who was fired last year, told Sellers he would play forward and not

Lady golfers win third straight despite bad weather conditions

By Nan Halley

Monday marked the third consecutive win for the OSU women's golf team and for senior Cathy Kratzert.

The Buckeyes finished with a 36-hole score of 609, 26 shots ahead of second place Penn State in the Lady Boilermaker Invitational at Purdue University.

The team had to brave extremely cold temperatures both days of the 36-hole tour-nament. When they teed-off on Monday the wind chill factor was 15 degrees.

"The score we shot Monday (303) was outstanding considering the weather conditions," said Coach

Steve Groves.
Groves said that the team could have easily shot under 300 but some of the players had bogies on the final holes. All five of Ohio State's players finished in the top seven places. Kratzert captured the medalist title after winning a three-hole play-off against play-off and then parred the second hole. Kratzert won when she parred the third hole and Abood made another bogie.

"Cathy's 71 on Monday was an unbelievable score, said Groves.

"The girl from Penn State shot 72 and that was equally outstanding. They were playing together and I think that helped them," he add-

Jane Abood of Penn State.

Kratzert and Abood both bogied the first hole of the agine anybody playing any better anywhere in the country right now

'She hasn't made a double bogie in the last three tournaments. To do that under the weather condi-tions we have played in is pretty outstanding."

Meg Mallon, a sophomore who tied for fifth place with sophomore Molly Baney, said that the Buckeyes' two rounds of golf were two of the best rounds they have played this year.

The weather made it kind of a survival test for everybody," Mallon said.

The team will travel to the University of Iowa where they will compete in the 54hole Lady Hawkeye Invitational Friday and Saturday.

Denny ends drought with 8-2 win

United Press International

John Denny won his first game since last July 9, seven months and seven starts after the Philadelphia Phillies acquired him. And he did it without his best stuff.

Denny, acquired by the Phillies from Cleveland, scattered eight hits while Gary Matthews and Mike Schmidt sparked a three-run third inning with home runs Monday night, lifting Philadelphia to an 8-2 vic-

"It was cold (44 degrees) and I couldn't get real loose," said Denny, 1-0. "But sometimes you don't need your best stuff to win, especially when you get runs like that.'

Denny was 0-2 in four starts for the Phillies in the last three weeks of the 1982

"It can have a psychological effect if you allow it to," Denny said of the drought. "It's just like anything else. But the pressure is what you make of it. I felt good all during spring training and I knew it would be a matter of time before I put a good game together. Now I hope I can continue.'

Denny allowed both Chicago runs in the first but settled down and held the Cubs to just two hits in the final five innings as he recorded the Phillies' first complete game of the year.

Elsewhere in the NL, San Diego bombarded Atlanta, 10-3, and Los Angeles nipped San Francisco, 4-3.

In the American League, it was Milwaukee 14, Boston 0; Baltimore 4, Cleveland 1; New York 3, Toronto 0; Minnesota 8, Seattle 5; and Oakland 5, California 3. Padres 10, Braves 3

At San Diego, Gene Richards' two-run single highlighted a four-run second inning and Steve Garvey added a solo home run to power a 15-hit attack and pace the Padres. dgers 4, Giants 3

At San Francisco, Ken Landreaux' bases-loaded, oneout grounder to second base in the ninth inning scored Derrell Thomas to snap a 3-3 and and lift the Dodgers. Tom Niedenfuer got the victory in his first decision and Dave Stewart the fifth Los Angeles pitcher, earned his third save.

WATER WORKS!

Want to enjoy some water fun this quarter? Well, why not compete in the Men's Swimming and Diving Meet, Tuesday, May 10th from 7:00 pm to 9:00 pm at the Larkins Hall Varsity Pool and Diving Well. Just get a group of friends together and come to the pool on May 10th. Registration takes place prior to each event. There will be two team divisions, Fraternities and Opens. Individuals are welcome to participate and will have a chance to get together with other independents at the meet. Each individual may only participate in three events, including the relays. Now's the time to get your team together and start practicing for this mid-quarter event. Need more facts? Stop by Larkins Hall Room 106 and pick up a flier or call Bruce Maurer or Kim Wrightsel at 422-7671.

SPRING WEEKEND EVENTS

Heavy hitters, break out your bats! Show off your skill at the Intramural Softball Homerun Derby! The event takes place Saturday May 7 between 1:00 and 5:00 pm. It will be held at the softball field on Coffey Road. Be sure to sign up by Friday May 6.

For those of you who thought you could only play hockey on ice, think again. Floor hockey is fast becoming a popular sport. The game is similar to ice hockey, except there are no skates, and a ball about the size of a baseball is used. Players use sticks to move the ball across the floor to score goals.

A floor hockey tournament is scheduled to begin Saturday April 30 at 1:00 pm. It will be in the yellow gym, and there will be a limit of eight teams. Players should provide their own equipment.

Need more info? Call Ken Kaiser at 422-7671.

TAKE THE TRIVIA CHALLENGE!

Attention all super sports fans and monday morning quarterbacks! Now is your chance to show off your knowledge of the world of sports! Sign up your team today for the Intramural sports Trivia tournament.

Teams should consist of four members. The tournament will have a limit of 16 teams. It will be a single elimination tournament. Each match will consist of two 10 minute halves, utilizing toss up and bonus questions. Teams will be signed up in an instant scheduler.

The tournament begins on Saturday April 23 in Larkins Hall room 120 at 11:00. Questions? Call Ken Kaiser or Elaine Todaro at 422-7671.

A CLUB TO MEET THIS WEEK!!

If it's action you're looking for, look no further than the OSU Squash Club. A relatively new organization, this club offers the chance for students, faculty and staff to play and practice squash. The OSU Squash Club is designed to teach novice players the techniques behind the game, and to help more experienced players strengthen their skills. The club competes with other colleges in this area as well as some local sports clubs. As a member of the club, you'll be able to compete on the intra-club ladder, travel in team competition, and play squash with someone of your own abilities. You'll also get the chance to practice with team on Friday evenings and Saturday at noon on the Larkins Hall squash courts. Come on and give it a try . . . you might find that you enjoy squash more than racquetball! For more information call Neil Golding 294-9004 or Steve Koehl at 422-6833.

TOTAL FITNESS, series four

Stretching is an important part of your Total Fitness activities. It helps to reduce muscle tension and help the body feel more relaxed, improve coordination through easier movement, prevent injuries like muscle strain, and increase range of motion. Daily stretching should not be a personal contest to see how far you can stretch. It's important to learn to stretch within your limits!! There are two basic stretch practices you can use to reduce muscle tension, the easy stretch followed by the developmental stretch. When you begin a stretch, spend 10-30 seconds in it, and Don't Bounce At All! Go to a mild tension and relax. If the tension doesn't subside, ease off to a lesser degree of tension! Next move further into your stretch for the developmental stretch. Find a mild tension and hold for 10-30 seconds. Again, Don't Bounce! Make sure you stay in control while maintaining your position. If the tension doesn't diminish, ease off again! Develop a stretching routine that best fits your particular muscle structure and you'll be suprised how much flexibility and relaxation you'll feel. For more information on stretching, stop by 106 Larkins Hall or the rack outside the Nautilus Room and pick up the pamphlet titled Total Fitness, series four.

RAINED OUT MEN'S SOFTBALL GAMES

Any teams that have been rained out the past two Thursdays (April 7 and April 14) who wish to reschedule games must contact the opposing team and make arrangements to play on Friday's at 5:15, 6:15, 7:15 or 8:15

OSU honor groups initiate freshmen, stress academics

By Loren Santiago Lantern staff writer

"You are the best on this campus. Academically, you are at the top," said James A. Knight Jr., associate professor of agricultural education, in his speech to about 400 freshman honor society initiates Sunday.

These students became members of Alpha Lambda Delta or Phi Eta Sigma, or both, in a ceremony in the Ohio

Any freshman with at least a 3.5 grade point average after completing 14, 28 or 42 credit hours may join either society. The societies are separate but similar organizations, and work together on many service projects.

The purpose of both honoraries is to encourage students to seek academic excellence during their first year of college.

There are currently 261,181 active members in the national societies. There are 1,112 active members at Ohio

Knight urged the students to become involved with organizations other than the honor societies and added, "If you leave OSU with this acknowledgement (of being a society member) but have done nothing else, you leave with only half of your education."

Last year, members of both organizations started doing volunteer work for the Office of Disability Services. Some students have recorded books for the blind. During winter quarter 1982, the groups sponsored a career workshop in the Ohio Union. Representatives from different colleges talked to students about internship opportunities.

The societies' adviser Betty Jo Hudson, assistant dean of University College, said about 60 percent of eligible students join these honor societies. She said this percentage might be due to the invitations being sent to the students' home addresses, so the parents can also see

She said parents see more importance in joining the societies and urge the students to do so.

Jean R. Geisman, professor of horticulture, spoke to the initiates. "The discovery of knowledge is like the first flower in spring. It is beautiful and an indication of what is to come," he said.
Russell Cunningham, a freshman from Columbus majoring in finance, said the initiation was a privilege and an honor. "It gives me a challenge to do better in the future," he said.

Chris Hill, who graduated Summa Cum Laude winter quarter with a 3.98 GPA, was given the annual Alpha Lambda Delta Book Award. The award goes to each year's top graduate at OSU. Hill received the book ''Markings'' by Das Hammarskjold.

The Ohio State chapter of Phi Eta Sigma was formed May 5, 1928. Alpha Lambda Delta came to OSU May 19,

Black business awards dinner to honor outstanding community contributions

By David Ross

Members of the Columbus black community who have made outstanding contributions in business and the community will be honored April 30 at the Black Business Awards Banquet. The banquet is sponsored by the Council of Black Students in Administra-

Warren W. Tyler, director for the Ohio Department of Commerce, will be the keynote speaker at the seventh annual event, which is being held at 5:30 p.m. in the Holiday Inn on the Lane, 328 W. Lane Ave.

Tyler, former vice president for the State Savings & Loan Association, one of the nation's largest savings and loan associations, will speak on "Networking: Communications in Black Business.

Seven awards will be presented at the banquet: Jon Moorehead, for community service; Ralph Frasier, for individual achievement; Jeanette Bradley, for professional pursuit; James A. Jacobs, for small black business; Will Pace, for business; Center Stage Theatre, for new ven-ture; and Elijah Pierce, for the special award. CBSA was organized in 1972 by a group of black undergraduate and graduate students in the College of Administrative Sciences, said Tina Allison, CBSA president. Students felt that there was a need for unity among the students in the college, she said.

The objects of CBSA were to share 'relevant informaton about the college, and to develop channels of communicaton between the community and the organization," Allison said.

CBSA established a speakers bureau, opened a way of com-municating with the deans of Administrative Sciences, interacted with other black campus organizations and became involved with community projects as a way of meeting

CBSA gives the black student in-terested in business administration the opportunity to discover more about operating business by talking with business executives. Allison stated that by having the chance to talk with professionals, students gain valuable information that will help them as they continue their education.

Seven years ago, CBSA started their Black Business Awards ban-quet. Six award categories are con-sidered: business, small black business, new venture, professional, individual, community service. A special award is presented to a person who has made a special contribution helping the black community.

Honorees are chosen by a committee of judges who are knowlegeable in the fields of business, educaton, and community affairs. Allison said nomination forms are sent out to organizations, churches, and individuals for their recommendations.

Judges look for "length of service, the impact the service has on the community and the popularity of the person or organization," Allison said.

Banquet tickets are $10 for students and $20 general admission.

The sign above the door on the east side of Ohio Stadium reads "Behavioral Sciences Lab." Two flights up the drafty stadium steps, several turns through a maze of halls and cubicles to where the ceiling slopes beneath the bleachers outside, and behind the nondescript door of Room 108L, one would find what may be the best laboratory of its kind in the world.

Inside, three well-used cockpit mock-ups sit on pedestals with panels removed to reveal circuit boards, servo-motors and dangling wires which straggle off across the floor to unseen inputs in another room. A computer terminal sits in one corner, two projection televisions and videocassette decks take up most of the remaining space.

'My specialty is self-motion perception,' said Associate Professor Dean H. Owen, who uses these tools to simulate the visual cues pilots experience in flight and to measure the pilots' responses.

Computer-generated scenes of terrain, runways, buildings and aircraft are projected onto the large screens in front of the mock-ups, while professional pilots, serving as subjects, go through the motions of flying a plane. In response to pilots' actions, animated scenes shift to simulate actual views from an aircraft cockpit.

Ohio States' behavior lab is the only university facility Owen knows of doing self-motion perception research on

"Imagine the difference between what a semi truck driver sees as he drives down the highway perched up in his cab, and what you see driving a car," Owen said. "Both can be going at the same speed, but the sensation of speed will be different. The higher you are, the slower you seem to be going."

But there are individual differences in the ability to Society does not always see teaching as a worthwhile career, Bryant said. "How a child learns and develops will never make headlines," she added. More careers are now available to women. Therefore, many do not choose to teach, Bryant said.

"We are in a new era of choice," she said Bryant and Spillman agree quality teachers are needed to motivate students to learn.

According to Allemang, teachers play an important role in everyone's life. "Everybody who gets the high-paying jobs got there because of teachers," she said.
Allemang chose education because she said it will fit into the lifestyle she wants. "Some day I want to be a mother," Allemang said. By teaching, she could maintain the same schedule as her children. "That makes up for the low pay," she said.

Math, chemistry, physics, industrial technology and special education, from kindergarten through twelfth grade, has the greatest shortage of teachers, Bryant said. Although math and science teachers may be paid more. Allemang said she would not enjoy teaching those sub-

Ballet Met prepares full-length dance

A bevy of dancers readied graceful turns and bows. A fairy stood by a window, smoking a cigarette. Scotsmen in plaid kilts drank Coke and chatted. And through it all ran a wiry terrier named Timmy.

"It" was a break in the Ballet Metropolitan rehearsal for "La Sylphide," to be performed Friday and Saturday nights in Mershon Auditorium, and the break was a much-needed one.

Holli DeCenzo, the production manager for the 19th century ballet, said that this is only the second extended full-length ballet the company has done. The other, "The Nutcracker," is done annually, so it is easier to put together.
She said that other full-length ballets, except for "The Nutcracker," are common in the company's repertoire, but that those only last about 20 minutes. This ballet is about 90 minutes long and has never been done by the company before, so it is more of a DeCenzo said that the company has been working on the ballet for a couple of months. She said the scenery has been rented from the Richmond Ballet, in Richmond, Va., and was originally owned by the American Ballet Theatre.

Darvl Kamer, assistant to artistic director and director of education at Ballet Metropolitan, plays Anna, the mother of James, who is the hero in the production.

Thirteen-year-old Susan Joos, who saw ballet dancers when she was nine and decided to be one, has a role in Ballet Metropolitan's production of "La Sylphide," which will be performed Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. at Mershon Auditorium.

Kamer said her interest in dance lessons," Kamer ballet started when she was about 9 years old.

"I went to dance class because my mother said it would be good for me to take never again left dance. Kamer said that "La Sylphide" is a significant significant Romantic usher in the Movement in ballet. That movement led to super-natural and tragic themes in Kamer said that a lot of

"I just saw dancers on TV and I thought they were pretty and I wanted to dance," she simply said.

The diminutive seventhgrader, who commutes to Ballet Metropolitan to take classes and attend rehearsals, said she auditioned for a "place trainee" last August and was accepted into the company.

She said she practices her dancing for three hours daily.

"It's a lot of work, but it's not really difficult," Joos

"Just one day I said I want to dance. I don't know why,'' she said.

She said she hopes to go to New York and make dancing her career.

Poul Gnatt, the stager for the production, began his dance training when he was six in the Royal Danish Ballet School. This ballet, he said, is the second version, the version done by August Bournonville, who danced the role of James, the hero, in Paris with Marie Taglioni.

Gnatt himself has danced the role of James. "If I had a favorite role, that would be Gnatt said that when Bournonville restaged the ballet in 1836, he had new music composed and new elements added. Since then, the ballet has changed very little, if at all, being passed down in a direct line through the Danish school from generation to generation.

"I will eat my own hat if there is anything changed at all in the performance since

Gnatt said that one must be careful not to confuse "La Sylphide," the full-length ballet by Taglioni and revised by Bournonville, with "Les Sylphedes," by

"Les Sylphedes," he said, is only a 23-minute ballet and "every company does that." "La Sylphide" is 90 minutes long and more complicated.

Gnatt watched the Saturday dress rehearsal carefully, watching as the sylphs, airy creatures much like fairies, flitted about. He gave advice to the dancers as they moved, helping them with movement, ex-pression and emotion, for this ballet is not just dance this is acting, as well.

As the tragic ballet came to a conclusion, a hush fell over the stage area as Gnatt

"Splendid. Thank you."

Two former Lantern journalists named as Pulitzer Prize winners

By Lisa Gavin Lantern staff write

The kind of thing every serious journalist dreams about came true for former OSU Lantern editor, Louis Heldman.

Heldman, managing editor of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, said the paper was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for its six-day coverage of the Fort Wayne flood in March 1982. He engineered the coverage.

"When the $1,000 award came over the wire, the room exploded with cheers, tears, and people hugging each other," Heldman Heldman was the Lantern editor in Spring 1971. "The Lantern was the best possible preparation for being a reporter and

After Heldman graduated from OSU, he became a general assignment and county building reporter for the Detroit Free Press Later, he was in the newspaper's capital bureau in Lansing before becoming business

William Hall, professor of journalism, said, "Louis Heldman was one of the finest news editorial majors in the history of the School of Journalism."

He said Heldman covered almost every beat possible at a newspaper.

Cliff Treyens, a 1977 OSU graduate, was also one of four reporters at the Clarion-Ledger (Jackson, Miss.) who won the Pulitzer for distinguished public service.
He covered a 24-day series on state school

"Heldman and Treyens were of a genera-tion that was newspaper oriented," Hall said. "Two journalists who played major roles in winning Pulitzer Prizes reflect favorably OSU and the Lantern."

'Thin Air' speculates whereabouts Book recounts search for Brach heiress

By Lisa Puskarich

Lantern staff reviewe

Could she have been ground up in a meat grinder and fed to her dogs?

This is only one speculation of what happened to Helen Brach, heiress of an estimated $21 million of the Brach candy fortune. She vanished on February 1, 1977 and was never seen

Now investigative reporter Pat Colander has written "Thin Air," a book on the life and disappearance of the 65-year-old widow of

It is hard to believe the facts in this true story do not belong in some pulpy detective novel.

Helen Brach's life resembled a fairy tale. It began on a farm in southeastern Ohio near Tappan Lake. She went from being a hatcheck girl to heiress of a multi-million dollar fortune.

Colander begins with a brief outline of the disappearance, leaving holes in the story. The rest of the book fills in the holes. She uses the facts of the case to propose an explanation of what could have happened.

Colander covers the fine points of the investigation from every imaginable aspect. Her research into the suspects and circumstances surrounding the case is thorough. She includes the exact times and places that phone calls were made around the days Brach disap-

According to Brach's phone bills, calls were made from her Chicago home the weekend she was first discovered missing. But close friends of Brach say she would have called them if she were home. This discrepancy led to the theory that Jack Matlick, the caretaker of Brach's Chicago estate, made the phone calls and that Brach never made it home from her stay at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

Matlick was known to be eccentric, and his relationship with Brach was unclear. When questioned by police and investigators, his stories were inconsistent.

Colander tells of other peculiar suspects and bizarre circumstances. An "escort" who was a horse trader, her only surviving relative (her brother) and the head of an animal protection society are all implicated. The theories go on, yet Colander's superb account of this mystery does not allow you to become bored. The book Colander also recounts the strange behaviors of Matlick and Brach's brother, Charles Vorhees of Hopedale, Ohio. Upon learning his sister was missing, Vorhees assisted Matlick in burning old diaries and writings Brach made while in a psychic trance.

Investigators wonder what inspired the two men to burn these writings. Brach regularly consulted psychics, who were called in to help in the search for her. Investigators believe the writings may have been helpful in finding Helen Brach — dead or alive.

On February 21, 1984, Helen Brach can be declared legally dead. Until then, Brach's accountant is keeping up her estate just as it had been. If Helen Brach returned tomorrow, she would find everything in order.

Colander brings this odd disappearance to light in an attention-grabbing manner. She uses concise words, short paragraphs and only

If you do not have time to read a lengthy novel, but would enjoy reading something a hundred times more exciting than your textbooks, then grab "Thin Air."
